COUNTY MUST HELP MORE IN WPA PROJECTS

Members of the county commissioners court, in compliance with notification from the Works Projects Administration, are figuring ways and means of increasing the county's percentage of contribution in the sponsorship of projects. The county has been furnishing a contribution of 15 per cent in sponsoring WPA projects but under an act of Congress, like other sponsors, must hereafter contribute 25 per cent of the cost of projects. The WPA furnishes the remaining percentage of cost. The county contribution consists mainly of material and machinery.

Lucas and Wellman Agree To Offer Again for City Commission Posts

CHARLES LUCAS C. B. WELLMAN

The citizens of Eastland are very happy to know that both Mr. Wellman and Mr. Lucas have agreed to permit their names to be placed upon the ballot of the election to be held Tuesday, April 2, 1940, at which time their present term of office expires. Mr. Lucas has been engaged in the filling and service station business on East Main street for the past 12 years and has enjoyed the confidence of his hundreds of customers whom he has served. In spite of the job of keeping him busy several hours of the day in his own business he has found time to devote his time to the welfare of his fellow citizens as a City Commissioner and has done a most excellent job. Mr. Wellman, has devoted the past 20 years in Eastland to his regular business of Oil Operator, but has never been found wanting when it came to serving his community for its very best interests. He has made an efficient and capable City Commissioner and during his tenure of office has been diligent in attendance at the regular meeting of the Commissioners and to all duties entrusted to him on the special committee to which he has been appointed. It is only fitting that these two men should be returned to office without opposition and that they should continue to enjoy the full confidence of the people of this entire community.

U-BOAT SUNK IN A BATTLE WITH TRAWLER

LONDON, March 15.—The British Admiralty reported today that a British trawler had sunk a German submarine after a 17-hour running battle, in which depth charges and many shells were fired. After the submarine was sunk the officers and crew were rescued and the trawler limped into port, partly damaged from the fight. The reports stated that the crew, listening through the ship's "ears" by which undersea craft are located, heard the submarine and began dropping depth charges. The u-boat was damaged and came to the surface. The running battle then started. The submarine, with a speed of 16 knots an hour, was outdistancing the trawler, which had a speed of only 14 knots. The trawler's captain tied down the safety valve, put on full speed and attained a speed of 18 knots, overtaking and sinking the submarine with shellfire. Upon arrival in port it was found that the trawler had been damaged, either by the depth charges, the shells or from the severe shaking it received while attacking under increased steam pressure and at speeds for which it was not built. The admiralty also reported that another German freighter, the 35th, was scuttled by its crew and 10 officers and 50 seamen were rescued and landed in an unnamed British port.

Oil Company Head Tells of "Bribery" Of State Employee

HOUSTON, Tex., Mar. 15.—Clifford Mooers, president of Shasta Oil Company, said today that $5,000 in marked bank notes was paid to a Texas Railroad Commission supervisor in Midland under threat of cutting the firm's production 400 barrels a day. Mooers made his statement in connection with a bribery charge filed against Gordon Bigham, a commission deputy supervisor stationed at Midland. "Now that Attorney General Gerald C. Mann has released a statement to the press, I feel at liberty to say something in behalf of our company," Mooers said, "and correct a wrong impression that might be inferred from carrier newspaper accounts of the incident." Mooers said that a man, not officially connected with the commission, had approached R. J. Kelly, vice president of Shasta, at Midland and made a statement in the presence of two company officials. "I have just been to Austin," Mooers quoted the man, "and someone with the Railroad Commission, whose name I cannot divulge, asked me to deliver you a message." "They said to tell you that your allowable in West Texas would be cut 400 barrels per day unless you would sweeten the pot with a payment of $5,000 in cash." The man refused to reveal the name of the commission employee in Austin unless Shasta agreed to pay the money, Mooers said, and Kelly told him he would give him an answer later. Kelly then informed Mooers. "I immediately telephoned Attorney General Gerald C. Mann, who instructed me to report any further developments to him," Mooers said. The messenger conferred later with Kelly and Paul Oles, company official, and stated that the "man in Austin" had decided to send a commission employee to contact Shasta officials. Finally the commission employee summoned Kelly to his office, Mooers said, "and then demanded that our company pay over to him the sum of $5,000 in currency in denominations of not over $20 and that we agree to pay an additional $200 per month thereafter." "He further stated," Mooers continued, "that he would give us until the next afternoon to comply with the demand and stated that if we failed to meet the demand, our oil production allowances would be cut." The man told Kelly that the money was to be split six ways and that he would receive no part of the $200 a month, Mooers said. "We were, of course, keeping the attorney general fully advised at all times and at no time did we offer encouragement." Kelly finally paid the $5,000 to the commission employee who was arrested by two Texas Rangers as he stepped out of the company office. "Naturally we were, and still are, astounded by the boldness of the whole proceeding," Mooers said. "I wish to highly compliment Attorney General Mann for the efficient and prompt cooperation which he and his assistant, Ben Woodall, gave us and Colonel Garrison, the director of the Department of Public Safety, and District Attorney Bartlett McDonald and State Rangers Naylor and Spain. "I am sure the happening was a very severe shock to the three Railroad Commissioners and I am informed that they are planning a thorough investigation."

BLANTON'S SON TESTIFIES IN GARRETT SUIT

Bill Blanton, son of Thomas L. Blanton, plaintiff in a $40,000 libel action against Congressman Clyde L. Garrett and Garrett's secretary, J. W. Cockrill, was on the witness stand Friday morning in district court. He was examined by both the plaintiff and defense. Direct examination of the witness was conducted by the plaintiff, his father, and cross examination by Carl Springer of the defense counsel. The witness testified to questioning of his father that his father had only published one circular during the campaign, one in which was printed text letters from congressmen telling of Blanton's service in congress. During cross examination, he could not identify a circular offered by the defense as an exhibit which allegedly contained references to Garrett's "tax record." Young Blanton said he had never seen the circular or ones like it before. The defense was allowed to read some questions and answers of depositions taken from other congressmen by Blanton. One deposition, taken by Blanton with Congressman Wilburn Cartwright giving the answers, stated Blanton had a creditable record and denied that Garrett had anything to do with a road bill passage in congress. Blanton said he wanted to read the depositions to refute allegations his record in congress was not creditable. At noon Friday other depositions were being read. At one phase of the case Friday morning Blanton referred to matters in the case as the jury was filing out after court had been recessed by Judge B. W. Patterson.

SOVIET BEGINS OCCUPATION OF SEIZED SECTOR

Russian troops began, at noon today, to occupy the Karelian Isthmus, the city of Viipuri and the territory given to the Soviet Union under terms of the peace agreement with Finland. From Moscow reports stated that the populace lined the streets, cheering their Russian "liberators," and said that the city was only slightly damaged. Finnish reports, however, stated that the city was only about one per cent intact. More than 450,000 refugees from the evacuated area today marched into Finland, seeking new homes and places where they could live. Whole families, in many instances, whole neighborhoods were attempting to stay together in order that they might start their new life together somewhere within Finland's reduced borders. Stockholm newspapers, meantime, severely criticized Germany for the way the country was rejoicing over the defeat and humiliation of the Finns, and at Oslo the foreign minister of Norway stated that Germany had intervened to prevent Allied troops from going to the aid of Finland. Diplomacy moved southeast in Europe at the conclusion of the Russo-Finnish peace conferences, with reports from London hinting at possible pacts between Russia and Italy, between Russia and Rumania and a Turkish-Russian pact. In Spain Generalissimo Francisco Franco proposed to Italy an alliance which would prevent Russian domination from spreading into the Balkans, and possibly into Southwestern Europe as well. London newspapers today coined a new word, "blitzpeace," which they said Germany and Russia would now try to instigate, but that there was not one chance in 1,000 for its acceptance by either Britain or France. In Washington it was reported that the Export-Import Bank was making loans to Finland and that two shipments of Red Cross supplies had already been sent from the United States to relieve suffering in Finland, where blizzards are hampering rehabilitation and movement of evacuated families.

President Raps A Republican Senator

WASHINGTON, Mar. 15.—President Roosevelt today indirectly criticized Sen. Charles W. Tobey, republican, New Hampshire, for advising American citizens to disregard and violate the law. President Roosevelt, through his secretary, Stephen Early, did not mention Sen. Tobey by name, but criticized senators who have been urging Americans to refuse to answer questions in the 1940 federal census. Sen. Tobey has been leader of a fight in the senate to eliminate questions on personal income. Early stated that the information obtained ought to be kept secret, but that it was vitally important as a means of determining purchasing power in the lower income brackets and to furnish information upon which federal agencies could base their future policies and activities.

Germany Turning To Balkans Now

Germany turned from the Baltic to the Balkans today in a diplomatic attack against the Allied blockade and promised a "surprise" for the Allies within the next 10 days. The Nazis also hinted, in Berlin, that there was possibility of early military action. Nazi officials declared that an economic pact, binding Italy, Russia and Germany with the Balkans may soon develop, although reports from outside Germany were that other observers were skeptical. The Allies considered the German reports as a part of the "peace offensive" to end the European War.

The electrical device was designed to match inks, dyes, textiles and paints and to compare color uniformity where it is most necessary, such as in stamps and currency. YESTERDAY: Ann goes to the party with Paul... Steve and Irene Temple, Steve dances with Ann... Steve threatens to kiss her...

CHAPTER XX

ANN said, "If you're smart you won't kiss me." Steve blundered into another dancing couple and almost lost his balance...

"I'll slap your face." He shouted with glee. "It'd be worth it—help me—it'd be worth it." "For your own information—it would be worth less than nothing to me."

He held her at arm's length, endeavoring unsuccessfully to focus his eyes on her tempting mouth. "I don't see how anyone so beautiful can be so mean," he said.

"It's a gift," she answered. Steve took a step and tripped. Ann looked imploringly at the stag line. Immediately four gentlemen stepped forward...

"Nothing doing," Steve yelled. "Get out of my way." Ann nodded to the boy and he tried again. "You're wanted at the bar, Steve," he said.

"Don't want a drink. Ann intoxicates—can't say intoxicates—me plenty." The stranger kept pace with them, tugging at Steve's shoulder...

Ann saw Paul with Irene Temple. He was scowling darkly, watching Steve, not responding at all to Irene's coquetry. "If she's so good let me dance with her," the boy insisted.

Steve crushed Ann to him. "You get out of here, Ann's my girl. I saw her first." Suddenly he was angry. Loosening his hold on Ann, he whirled on the accommodating stranger...

Instantly there was a rush of stages and Steve was bundled, protesting loudly, from the floor. Ann found herself dancing with her rescuer...

He was very young and fair haired. "My name is Ray—Stan Ray." "How do you do, I'm Ann Brown."

"Yes, I know. The Evanston Browns?" "No." She was ashamed of what had happened. For a moment it dampened her joy...

"Will he be back?" she asked. "Steve? No, he's finished for tonight. The Claybourne butler and the taxi driver will carry him in."

"Isn't it a pity?" "Yeah—Steve's a swell guy." He changed the subject. "Look, Miss Brown—are you dated for the week-end?"

"I'm afraid so." Cinderella must not step out of her glass slippers. "Too bad. A crowd of us are going to my dad's fishing lodge on Lake Michigan. Like to have you come along."

"It would be lovely. Another time, perhaps." "Right. I'll give you a ring." PAUL finally freed himself from Irene Temple and cut in. He took Ann to the supper room...

She sat down while he filled her plate from the immense buffet table. It was good to sit down, she hadn't realized that the little gold slippers were tired.

The plate of food was to be one of her memories. Tiny open-faced sandwiches like flowers, a fluted cup of chicken salad, huge black olives, a little boxed ice, salted almonds.

"I'm dreaming, Paul," she said. "In a minute I'll wake up and it will be creamed dried beef." He laughed. "As a casual friend, I'm going to tell you something, Ann. You're the loveliest girl here."

"Thank you, Paul." "And Steve Claybourne is a bum. If Miss Temple hadn't occupied me so thoroughly his face would now be jelly." She put her pretty head on one side, regarding him seriously...

"I didn't like it, Paul. I hated it." A waiter took their plates and Paul pulled a box from his pocket. "It's your favor," he said. "They had different things, but I thought you'd like this best."

She opened the box reverently. "A present—oh, I love presents." Ann's favor was a silver link bracelet. It fastened with an infinitesimal padlock. There was a tiny key. She was quite breathless while Paul put it on her arm.

"I'll keep the key," he said. "If you ever want to take it off you'll have to send for me." "Who's flirting now?" she asked with a side glance.

He sighed and put the key in the box. IT WAS 2:30 when they left the hotel. Ann had never been so tired, nor so completely happy. Many things had happened, things which she had tucked away in her memory to take out later and savor to the full.

In the taxi, she said, "Tell him to drive slowly, Paul. I don't want it to be a memory quite yet." "Take your time, fella," he called through the glass. As the taxi left the quiet city, he said, "I'd like to do the craziest thing."

"What?" "I'd like to walk in the park." "Let's."

They left the cab at the corner of Garfield park. The drive stared after them as they went into a shrubbery lined path. He shrugged. It was no concern of his if a couple went completely whacky. He drove away.

Ann and Paul found their bench near the lagoon and sat down. The night was warm and hushed. The city slept, even the park seemed to drooze.

"It's lovely, Paul," Ann said dreamily. "You think of the nice things." They did not talk. Contentment closed around them like a warm wrap. Ann leaned closer to Paul's arm. Her golden head nodded. Finally it rested on his shoulder.

Paul put his arm around her and she sighed childishly, cuddling her head against his collar. He muttered, "Just this once—just this once."

AFTER a long time in which he did not sleep, he removed his arm. "The sun is about to put in an appearance, Ann," he said in a matter-of-fact tone.

She sat up, blinking her sleep-filled eyes. "Oh," she wailed, "I've missed all the beautiful time." Paul could not be truthful in saying that the time had been wasted for him. He had allowed his lips to touch her hair and her forehead and the sweetness lingered.

They walked to Murray street through the sun-flecked mist of morning. Ann lifted her skirts, the jeweled heels twinkled with every step. At Mrs. Follet's door she held out her hand.

"Why, it's Paul Hayden," she said, pretending surprise. "And Ann Brown," he returned soberly. It was as if they deliberately stripped the morning of any bits of glamour which might have clung to it, as if they stepped back into their rightful, workaday lives.

They did not speak of the evening. It had already become a memory. It was after 6 when Ann slid out of her finery. She examined the alarm clock, found that it was set for 7, and lay down beside Clara. She did not sleep, nor did she feel the need of sleep.

Oddly enough, she did not dwell on her small triumphs at the Athens Club ball. She thought of Paul, his innate fitness, the rapture of his nearness when they danced. She lay with her lips pressed to the tiny silver padlock. (To Be Continued)

Technical Men Best Adapted to Industrial Plan

AUSTIN, Texas —Investment-minded bankers contemplating new industries for Texas during the next fifty years must turn to the advice of technical men—and it's up to the Texas schools to provide these men.

This theory was advanced as a foundation for a State industrial program by Dr. E. P. Schoch, veteran University of Texas chemist, speaking here recently before a state-wide radio audience. Dr. Schoch emphasized the need for graduate instruction to train young men to a degree of technical skill second to none. "We want Texans as well as Texans industrialized," he explained, "If Texas is industrialized by anybody except Texans, then the people of the State have gained nothing. To do this we must train Texans to be able to do the job."

Dr. Schoch's address was one in the current University industrial broadcasts, "Frontiers of Progress."

Before the State can adjust itself to the "Chemical Age," Dr. Schoch called for proper handling of Texas' three great resources: (1) minerals in the earth; (2) biological resources on the farms and ranches; and (3) human resources in the minds and hands of Texas people.

"It is foolish to start an effort to grow more or produce more of a particular product without first studying the markets, then research to develop new uses for new crops—or for new products."

Dr. Schoch pointed out that young men who are large sums set up laboratories such as necessary requisite for progress in this age of chemistry.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS, BE DANGER OF Tired Kidney

If backache and leg pain are miserable, don't just complain about them. Nature may be warning your kidneys need attention. The kidneys are Nature's chief excretory organs and poisonous waste blood. They help most people pass a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes don't work well, poisonous waste is in the blood. These poisons may be backache, rheumatic pains, leg pain and energy, getting up next morning under the eyes, headlaches, nose, frequent or scanty passing and burning sometimes shows the thing wrong with your kidneys. BY LOUISE HOLMES

YESTERDAY: Steve makes a scene at the dance but a pleasant stranger saves Ann from embarrassment. Paul gives Ann a favor, a tiny silver bracelet. After the dance they walk in the park. While Ann sleeps Paul kisses her lightly. With dawn they hurry home. Ann remembers not the dance and its glamor, but Paul.

CHAPTER XXI

ANN received orchids at the shop the following day. The satin box was tied with a wide ribbon. There was a note enclosed. "I'm a little hazy about last night but, if my memory serves me at all, I again owe you an apology. Forgive me for behaving like a clown. Let the posies tell you that I mean it." The card was signed, "Steve."

He called at 5 o'clock, blithe as a spring breeze, cockily sure of himself. He invited Ann to go to the theater with him and, while she could see no harm in accepting, she hesitated. It would be fun to see a good play, but not so much fun to see it with Steve. Now if it were Paul— With the thought of Paul, she made up her mind. She declined and hurried on before he could argue.

He was not accustomed to feminine rebuffs. "Say—what's the matter with me? Am I poison or something?" Ann could scarcely tell him that she was merely a new adventure to the bored Steve Claybourne, she could not explain that he only persisted in his attentions because she did not respond in kind, that he would not think of introducing her to his mother, that their paths were so widely separated that they could never meet. So she said the obvious thing.

"I don't go out with anyone but Paul." That did it. He said, "Oh, I see." She said, "Goodbye, Steve," and hung up the receiver.

THE weeks rolled on and Ann did not see Steve Claybourne again. She almost never thought of him. Her life with Paul worked itself into a pattern. Each Saturday night they dined together at an inexpensive restaurant and went to a moving picture show. They were utterly companionable. The slightest show of sentimentality was studiously avoided.

Summer came with sizzling heat. Mrs. Follet's third floor was like a fiery furnace, the hat shop was a little better. Ann grew thin, the roses left her cheeks. She and Paul sat on the bench in the park, occasionally they traveled across the city to the lake's.

A burnished, hazy fall was banished by an early blizzard and winter was upon the city. Acid smoke hung in the heavy atmosphere, the gutters were slimed with dirty slush. Then Christmas lights turned the city into a neon fairland.

Paul gave Ann a silver bangle for her bracelet as a Christmas gift. It was a quaint little bell and tinkled when she moved her hand.

With the coming of the New Year Ann fretted over the static, changeless quality of her life. With the exception of an occasional marriage among the girls whom she had come to know, there was not the slightest difference in her surroundings. Nedy and Teddy still chattered and danced their way through the days and nights. Florabelle appeared in stunning new outfits, was forever "going on a party."

Clara could talk of nothing but a certain expressman who delivered goods to the store.

Ann's static mode of living might have gone on indefinitely except for two things. In the first place, she realized that another change in rooming houses was imminent. Clara's expressman friend, Roy Swenson, was practically living in the apartment which the girls shared. He sprawled in one of the big chairs night after night, paying court to a most willing Clara. Ann knew that it was but a question of time until he would move in entirely, in which case, she must get out.

Secondly, spring rolled around again and Paul kissed Ann. That kiss, in the heady sweetness of spring, had a most unforeseen aftermath. Not yet had Ann admitted, even to herself, that her love for Paul had become a monstrous thing, too monstrous for any sort of peace of mind. She lay her unrest to the utter lack of progress in her ambitions.

ONE night she and Paul were sitting in the park. It was one of those humid evenings which sometimes come early in May. They were eating popcorn, each silently intent.

The bag was finally empty. Paul gave Ann his handkerchief and she wiped her hands. "Paul," she said, "it's another year. We've been sitting on this bench and in the movies for a year."

"Yeah—I know. Last year I was making $18. Now I've shot up to $25. Soon I'll be hiring an investment broker to take charge of my surplus." He spoke bitterly.

"At least you've moved up a little," she said. "I'm just exactly where I was a year ago. Oh, Paul—I thought if a girl had ambition and was willing to work she could find a way." He sighed. They were both in low spirits that night. Paul had come to realize that life without Ann would be as blank as a freshly plastered wall. He loved her, he wanted her, more than anything else he wanted to give her the beauty she craved. And there he was, helpless, shackled to a $25 job.

Of course, there was a future, to his job—buyer, department head, manager of a store—but when—when? His soul cried out at the waiting. While he waited she would be lost to him.

"It's a rotten shame, Ann," he said, keeping his voice at a casual level. "Have you tried to get a better job?"

"Oh, yes." But her tone betrayed her discouragement. "I've tried everywhere. Fifteen a week is the best I can do. Fifteen a week," she cried furiously. "I hate the sound of it. A living wage, barely enough to keep soul and body together, no hope, nothing ahead—"

"Her voice broke and she stopped. "Let me have your handkerchief again, Paul. I must have a little cold."

At last Ann said, "We'd better be going back. Another day is creeping up from China."

"Yes, another day and another month and another year. We'll be old, Ann, still fighting—" Paul spoke savagely.

ANN slipped her hand into his. The two of them—hopeless. Suddenly she wanted Paul to take her in his arms. Suddenly she had an aching need of the comfort of his arms. His hand tightened on hers, he drew nearer on the bench.

"Ann," he said huskily, "I want to kiss you, but it's dangerous. We promised to be friends and if I kiss you—I won't be your friend any more." He leaned toward her. She felt the muscle of his arm tighten.

"I don't care," she whispered. "Oh, darling—" He put his arms around her and bent his lip to hers. The first kiss was tender, the second not so tender. I bruised her lips.

The big policeman, approaching along the path, turned quickly back. "That's better," he muttered. "That's more like it." Ann did not see Paul for week. During that week she lived in a rosy haze, not looking ahead nor back. She knew now why little $15 girls married their men. She knew that if Paul asked her—she would be the catch—if Paul asked her— (To Be Continued)

Falsehoods Gather Weight

No one knows just how these things happen, but every once in a while the most innocent set of facts gets jumbled up and emerges as a national legend without a grain of truth.

Take the case of the Memphis, Tenn., dog pound, for example. When the building was first erected in 1936, with the aid of WPA, the story got around that the place was so luxurious that Memphis' canine population was openly inviting apprehension by the dog-catcher just to share the penthouse comfort of the new pound and to enjoy the shower baths which were supposed to be part of the project.

Memphis tried hard to stop that. But the story, with embellishments, kept popping up. Just the other day, it reached the halls of Congress when a representative referred to southern ladies bringing their poodles in for shower baths at the $50,000 pound.

The facts? First of all the place cost only $19,000 with WPA putting up $13,000 and the city $6000. And there are no shower baths, except the garden hose used on badly soiled inmates. Since the dog shelter was opened, there has been not a single death from rabies; although, during the three years prior to the opening, six deaths were recorded. The number of Pasteur treatments for rabies, costing $7 each, has declined from 280 in 1935 to 64 last year.

The classical example of a falsehood that received wide and official recognition was H. L. Mencken's wartime story of the origin of the bathtub in America. The tale was conjured up in the famous author's mind on a dull day. Scientists did research on the basis of it, wrote scholarly treatises. Plumbers used the story in advertising and speakers accepted it as gospel.

It was not until about three years ago that Mencken chuckled a little and admitted the whole thing was a hoax. The story, however, will probably live on for years.

If you're thinking of starting a fable you'd better consider well before you start whispering.

Louisiana legislators defied the defeated governor and refused to respond to a call for a Long duck session.

Germany has agreed to be courteous to American vessels. Nazi captains will probably doff their hats before firing a torpedo.

We can at least look forward to the pleasant prospect that a year from now the third term issue will be as out of date as the Lambeth Walk.

If nothing else, Sumner Welles may learn that it's a good idea to See America First.

Russia resents implications that she's losing battles in Finland. Those dead Soviet soldiers were probably just "purged."

Omar Burkett Is Seeking Post He Now Is Occupying

This issue of the paper authorizes the announcement of Omar Burkett for re-election to the office of State Representative from the Floterial District No. 107.

His record as a state legislator maintains a standard of the kind of representative that this community needs in the State Legislature. His record is referred to as reflecting his position on matters affecting state affairs in this year's campaign.

He was either a co-author or staunch supporter of the following legislation, whether it became a law or was introduced in the 46th legislature. They are:

- Liberalization of the Old Age Assistance Law and aid for other social security requirements. This became a law.
- School aid and supplemental teacher salary payments. Now a law.
- Anti-Nepotism law.
- Delinquent Tax Adjustment Law for Commissioners Courts to adjust state as well as county and local taxes. Now a law.
- State Land Board. Passed both houses.
- Soil Conservation Law. Now on statutes.
- Road Bond District Law, setting aside money for county road bond assumption. Now a law.
- Insurance Law. Now on statutes.

Burkett supported every economy move, cutting several million dollars from previous biennium appropriation.

He has aided county officials in taking care of afflicted patients, insane persons remaining in jails but a very short time before transfer to State Institutions.

He advocates stand on principles as discussed with voters two years ago when asking for election, giving himself and requiring a days work for a days pay of every person on the state payroll. Burkett was diligent and consistent in attendance at the regular sessions of the legislature. The district: To the Voters of Eastland and Callahan Counties: In submitting my candidacy for re-election to the office of Floterial Representative of Eastland and Callahan Counties of the 107th district, I do so with a continued pledge to devote my time and service to the best interests of every person to the best of my ability. I feel that I am now even better qualified to serve you as your state representative as I have devoted all my time to problems that are facing us today from every angle. I sincerely ask your continued confidence in my ability and solicit your vote and influence in the coming July primaries.

Sincerely yours,
OMAR BURKETT.

Fish Military Band Adds First Spark of Gaiety To the Sombre Life In Paris

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, March 13.—One day last week a band from the British Royal Air Force marched down the broad Champs Elysees blaring a military tune.

A great crowd rushed out to cheer. It was almost the first military band Paris had heard in the streets since the war started and the popular response illustrated the drabness of war-time for the common people.

There still is a whirl of gay night life in Paris if you look—and pay—for it, but for the mass of people this war is swiftly becoming a tremendous effort to put all phases of everyday life on an emergency basis. The French see no chance of an early peace; they are doggedly determined to get rid of Adolf Hitler as a neighbor and they expect intense fighting—although not necessarily a big offensive—on the Western Front this spring.

Henceforth three meatless days a week will be observed. Frenchmen will hand over 15 per cent of their earnings as a war tax in addition to regular direct and indirect taxes. Food and gasoline is rationed to a limited extent. The luxury trades are suffering big losses. Unemployment has been eliminated.

But—as demonstrated by the Royal Air Force Band—there is no music and no holiday atmosphere in this war.

There was an attempt recently to "put over" a French war song, such as "Mademoiselle from Armentiers" or "Tipperary" in the last war. Maurice Chevalier tried to get the people interested in "A Daughter of Mademoiselle from Armentiers." But not even the famous music hall star could make it click.

There are fewer orchestras in the cafes where Paris families used to go for an evening of entertainment, but five new night clubs have opened in downtown Paris since Christmas. More are opening each week and business is good.

There is usually a heavy sprinkling of army uniforms in the night clubs. The women of Paris are as smartly dressed as ever and show no signs if ever consenting to wear "ersatz" or substitute hosiery.

But there is another side to war-time France and it is the side seen by most of the people. The women of France are working in almost every industry in order to fill the places left vacant by men who are in the army. They are doing all of the light work and in the big industrial plants some women operate small lathes and automatic machines.

The ladies of the Paris boulevards have almost disappeared because of the blackout and officials claim that the capital is now virtually a "crimeless city." All of little racketeers will quit the crime business voluntarily. Less than equal justice is not justice. All I ask is a fair trial in the court of public opinion. I shall not try to pull wires through church, lodge or society. I shall not sponsor or tolerate any whispering campaign, or any other way to try to unjustly control a black vote. My only desire is to keep everything on the barrel-head, open and above board. Let each voter use his own poll-tax unimposed and I shall be glad to abide by the results.

After you have placed this responsibility on me, I realize fully it is still your office and I will be only your hired hand. I want every citizen to keep your eye on the office and cooperate with me. I promise only to work hard and give you two years of the best service of which I am capable. It's your business. I shall abide by your choice—neither boastful nor complaining.

Sincerely,
W. A. (WALTER) EVANS.

Receipts Required From Employers For Federal Taxes

ABILENE, Tex.—Employers covered by the old-age and survivors insurance law are now required by law to give their employees receipts for the money taken out of their wages for old-age and survivors insurance taxes, according to W. O. King, manager of the Social Security Board field office at Abilene. This new requirement of the Social Security Act, he explained, went into effect January 1, 1940.

King pointed out that formerly the employer was only required to furnish the employee with a notation which would permit him to check the accuracy of the tax deduction. "This," he said, "could even be included on a pay check which would, of course, eventually be returned to the employer. But now the law specifically stipulates that the employer must furnish a statement 'suitable for retention the known gigolos, small time criminals and gyps have been taken by police to the Parc de Prince—once famous as a dueling ground—and then herded into a concentration camp in Central France. Among these police found many who had evaded military service and they were sent to Morocco to build roads.

All courts were transformed into war-time tribunals where the judges rarely show leniency. As a result, police said, crime has dropped off about 90 per cent.

For the most part, the French people merely are making a patriotic gesture in going on furloughs.

The country has huge food reserves and is continually increasing them and the French culinary ingenuity can still make the most of the loopholes in the restrictions on food. The French can still dine royally compared to the Germans.

A typical example was a dinner this week at Ciro's. It was a meatless day and the waiter was profusely apologetic because he was unable to serve any pork, beef, veal or lamb. All he could offer were 14 kinds of oysters, fish, duck, chicken, turkey, quab, liver and kidneys.

Chesterfield Is America's Busiest Says Campaign

"The Busiest Cigaret in America is Chesterfield," says the new campaign released to newspapers nationally this week by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company. The new message is made by famous figures of the theatre, sports and other fields.

Action a-plenty distinguishes the illustrations for the new Chesterfield series. Among the featured stars are the Hill Sisters of basketball fame; Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees; Bette Davis, America's leading motion picture actress; Paul Douglas and Patsy Garrett of Fred Waring's Chesterfield—Pleasure Time program; the Crane Twins of the New York "Hellzapoppin" cast, and other notables.

The new campaign will be supported by point-of-sale cut-outs and by billboard and magazine advertising, as well as by Chesterfield's Fred Waring and Glenn Miller radio programs.

Certain specified information must be included on the receipt but the wording is left to the employer. In addition to the amount of tax deducted, the receipt must show the name of the employe, the period of time covered by the receipt, and the total amount of wages paid to the employe during this period.

Employers are required to furnish such receipts at least once a year and may furnish them oftener—every quarter, or every month or every pay-day, as they see fit. The receipt must be given to the employe within two months after the end of the period which it covers, and, in any case, when the employe leaves the job.

France Tests Army Defense In Orient

By United Press
CAIGON, French Indo-China.—France's colonial army in Indo-China, representing the strongest military force of any of the Western powers in the Far East, has tested its strength, repulsing in maneuvers an "invasion" of "enemy" forces in the jungle area between Cambodia and Cochinchina.

The invasion constituted this year's war game, during which about 12,000 men, 800 horses and quantities of the latest type of equipment were put to a test.

Although the French army in Indo-China is said to number more than 50,000 men at present, only a comparatively small part of this force took part in the exercises, staged in the area bounding the Gulf of Siam.

As many of the troops participating in the maneuvers were reservists called to the colors since the outbreak of war in Europe, special importance was attached to the test by the French general staff.

Safety Campaign Of Club Launched

A city-wide safety campaign was launched today by the Business and Professional Women's Club designed to make Eastland safety conscious according to an announcement by Mrs. Marie Gustafson, club president. The campaign will last throughout the balance of the week.

Chief features of the drive for more safety measures will be the sale of safety stickers in a number of different colors. The stickers will be attached to letters, letterheads, packages, or put in any conspicuous place. The stickers will illustrate many different ways in which people may be injured in avoidable accidents with different slogans on each sticker.

"The purpose of this form of safety education is to carry out over a period of months, what the state and other governmental units are trying to put over with the public," Mrs. Gustafson said. "The campaign fits in well with universal public safety education programs by placing safety maxims and slogans continually in the public eye," she declared. A group of Eastland boys will assist the B & P W members with the campaign.

Report Interest In Revival Grows

The revival of the Baptist church is being conducted by Rev. C. Y. Dorsey of Dallas and the interest is growing from service to service it is reported. Services are being held twice daily, at 10:00 in the morning and 7:30 in the evening.

Next week the evening service will begin at 7:45, rather than 7:30. The time is because of a plan to have Sunday school each night beginning at 7:15. Sunday school will be conducted as it is on Sunday morning except for the teaching of the lesson.

Sunday morning an attendance goal of 500 in the Sunday school has been set. In the training service Sunday evening which is held at 6:15 the goal is 175.
