Humble Edict Being Awaited By Field Here

70 And 75 Cents Paid In Western Sector By Two Companies

With postings of 70 and 75 cents for West Texas crude oil by The Texas Company and the Magnolia Petroleum company Howard-Glasscock producers Friday afternoon anxiously awaited word from Humble Oil and Refining company, which sets the price in the local field.

The Texas Company posted 75 cents per barrel in Winkler county and 70 cents in the Crane-Upton pools, each price an increase of 10 cents.

Magnolia posted 70 cents for West Texas.

Neither company buys production in this field other than its own.

Humble's action, whether it be an increase to 70 and 5 cents, or whether it be a repetition of several instances of the past year when Humble refused to follow Texas or Magnolia hikes, will determine the price for the local field, it is presumed.

Three Backs Shine For El Paso Panther Eleven.

Cats Ready For Steers

Fast Experienced Backs Slated For Duty Saturday

Coach Pat Murphy of Austin high will build his running and passing attack around three players. Instead of two, for the Panthers' Saturday night game against the Big Spring Steers.

Before Austin's premier showing of the season, Raymond Salome, little dodging and twisting quarter, and "Doggie" Baird, hefty fullback, stood out in the Panther backfield. Now a third back, T. G. Bailey, promises to get his share of the line.

Bailey, a sophomore player with two more years of eligibility left, will start at a half back position Saturday. He will do a lot of the ball carrying and passing. His left handed tosses may be a deceptive measure that will take the visitors by surprise. Austin followers expect him to develop into a back as good as Ed Strout, Panther 1932 captain.

Coach Pat Murphy indicated in practice the past few days that he was still dissatisfied with the Austin line. He had Walter Francis running at right guard in place of Ben Carson, who started against Tuleta last week, and Richard Wright was installed at left tackle in the berth formerly occupied by J. R. Wilson.

A hard scrimmage will bring other revelations to Coach Murphy, he believes, as to starters against the locals.

Brawny Bill Terry Hits Baseball Heights As The Super-Salesman

By JACK CUDDY

United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK (UP)—They've called Bill Terry almost everything—miracle man and dunce—but he's really one of baseball's super-salesmen.

This brawny young fellow from Memphis stepped into the shoes of the mighty John McGraw, and in his first full season as manager sold the club the pennant and sold the fans the club.

Terry the salesman is a pleasant featured fellow in a rough sort of way. Your first impression is one of smouldering belligerence. Meet him a hundred times and the impression lasts. He's a fighter.

The club was in last place when Terry took it, and the Giants finished the season in a sixth-place tie with St. Louis. Then Terry went to work. During the winter he hired and fired right and left; the greatest upheaval in the Giants' history.

When the 1933 outfit showed up at training camp, the writers thought it hopeless. It was a nondescript aggregation that had no chance. Everyone figured the Giants for second division except Terry. He knew he had a team that would fight.

"That's all I want," he told the players. "All I want you to do is fight, hustle. Just get out there and win today's ball game. There's nothing much to this business. All I want is to win."

Athletics Cinch Third Position

PHILADELPHIA—The Philadelphia Athletics clinched third place in the American league Wednesday when they divided a doubleheader with the New York Yankees, losing the first 7 to 0 and winning the nightcap, called in the seventh on account of darkness, 10 to 1.

Lefty Gomez was largely responsible for the Yankees' victory. He held the A's to seven scattered hits while his mates were getting to Bob Grove for thirteen, one of them Lou Gehrig's 32nd home run of the season.

With Johnny Marcum, American Association recruit, hurling four-hit ball for his third major league victory and Jimmy Foxx driving in five runs with his 46th homer and two singles, the Athletics had little trouble taking the abbreviated nightcap.

Biondy Cross announces that Sweetwater has "conceded" the district 3 football championship to San Angelo. That is, Sweetwater coaches, scribes and some of the fans have announced by word or mouth that Harry Taylor's ambitious Conehans have the inside dope to the flag.

In spite of the gloomy remarks from the Nolan county camp, fans and officials really have big hopes for the Pony club. Overconfidence is a bad thing for any team, but if Sweetwater keeps its present attitude there will be no danger from the Nolan county team on paper, but watch that Hennig machine on the grid.

Geo. White, isn't this a tough old world. Saturday will be a jittery day for M. K. House of the Herald force. Coach Pat Murphy of Austin High, El Paso and House are old cronies. Wouldn't you hate to be in his place?

Ben Daniels sends his fiery Devil club against the second string

Steers this afternoon for a practice tilt. A full calendar of games will be carded for the boys.

The Bovins pilots gave the club a stiff scrimmage work-out until dark yesterday. Several new plays have lifted from Bristol's dome, including some new pass wrinkles. The coach hasn't cut the team any yet.

While looking over the minutes of the recent district palaver, we notice where McCamey was given a good cause for grief when the dais ruled Leonard Cain ineligible for further participation with the Badgers.

The McCamey superintendent, A. H. Blackman, brought up the question of the boy's eligibility because he passed only one subject last semester.

The committee also decided to allow 18 Junior High graders in at each conference contest.

John Barry Hubbard, sports writer for the Sweetwater Reporter, pays George Hudspeth Gentry the following compliment: "Principal George Gentry, of the Big Spring high school was elected chairman of the district committee to succeed Supt. E. H. McLain of this city. Professor Gentry has been a member of the committee for several years and is considered one of the most prominent young school men of this section. His reputation for fair dealing and good sportsmanship is not to be questioned and the committee is to be congratulated on having such a man as its chairman.

"Some of the sports followers of Sweetwater may remember Gentry as the man who entered the first protest in the memorable Sheridan eligibility case of last year but we should also remember that we people of Sweetwater were in position to know the facts involved in the case that people elsewhere couldn't know, and for that reason we should look on Mr. Gentry's attitude of last year as one of those little mistakes from which no person's life is free."

Hubbard was quite high in his praise of Gentry other than reference made to "that little mistake." Gentry made no mistake, Sheridan was ineligible, but the committee, frightened by the stir made over the case, changed their tactics and declared the flaming-haired star eligible.

Football Season To Swing Open Saturday

NEW YORK (UP)—Off to a start in low gear Saturday football competition will swing into second this coming Saturday when such top-notch eleven as Army, Navy, Fordham, Pittsburgh, Georgia and Tulane making their 1933 debuts.

Not until the following Saturday will things be gliding along in high. On that date the remaining leading eleven—Notre Dame, Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Columbia, to mention a few—will be in the thick of the fighting.

In the far west and south big time football shapes up as offering the best show.

The southern schedule is studded with first-class games chief among which are Duke-V.M.I., Georgia-North Carolina State, Louisiana State-Rice, Oklahoma-Vanderbilt, Tennessee-Virginia Poly and Tu-

Can there be any stronger recommendation for a car than this

CHEVROLET America can't be fooled when it comes to spotting the best "buy" in any field. America knows too much about motor cars for that. So when one certain car wins almost as many buyers as the next two put together, you know the answer: IT MUST BE BETTER. And that's what the new Chevrolet Six most certainly is.

Better looking—it has long, sleek, aer-streamed lines—Fisher's smartest styling. Chevrolet has better bodies—they're built not just of steel alone, but of steel reinforced by a sturdy hardwood frame. Chevrolet has a better engine—six cylinders for lowest gas and oil consumption, cushion balancing for killing vibration. And Chevrolet gives better value—a long line-up of features, including the Starterator, Synchro-Mesh gear-shift, Free Wheeling, which no other low-priced car can match.

Now, in September, is the time to start thinking about a new car for winter! And when you do so, think of the way Chevrolet is leading all other cars in sales. What more could you possibly ask as a recommendation for a car than that?

A. F. Of L. To Receive Specific Items Of Criticism For NRA At Convention

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The American Federation of Labor, meeting next week in the most important convention in its history, will demand that the National Recovery Administration create further safeguards for organized labor.

It was learned that a laudatory report on the NRA had been toned down and specific criticism included:

The executive council of the A. F. of L. feels that the NRA:

- Has not put sufficient men back to work.
- Has resulted in a breakdown of wage differentials between skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers.
- Has resulted in organizing employers effectively while leaving labor to shift for itself.

NRA officials realize that criticism of the NRA is bound to gain increasing attention. The intensive "blue eagle" campaign throughout the country served to hold this in check for a time, since criticism would be interpreted by the more zealous campaigners as a lack of patriotism.

While some in the Roosevelt administration feel that a general attack on the recovery program would be harmful, others feel that there would be a healthy effect from discussing things in the open rather than in an atmosphere of polite camouflage.

The faults found by the A. F. of L. are with specific developments of the NRA and not in any sense with the program as a whole. There is a feeling among federation officials that the NRA has compromised too readily on some controversial questions and that the result has been to lessen the effect of a concerted re-employment drive.

$108,123 Sought From Magnolia In State Suit

AUSTIN, (UP)—Suit filed in 96th District Court here by Attorney General James V. Alfred asks $108,123 from the Magnolia Petroleum as unpaid oil tax. The tax is claimed due on oil production in the past 22 years under the practice of the industry of deducting two per cent for losses. During the period the company reported production of 135,118,068 barrels of oil with a market value of $180,727,826 the attorney general's petition says:

The management of Dill's Circus was very fortunate in securing the services of the Gordon troupe as they were contracted for a summer engagement with a large European circus and were persuaded to cancel and remain in the States. avoid meeting the farmer bloc who are certain the price of their tillage still fall far short of the retail prices of bonds and shares.

Senators— Nearly two-thirds of the U. S. Senate membership has been in and out of town in the past month. For the most part they are trying to get their constituents squared away with the New Deal. Even those who wrapped themselves tightly in the Roosevelt banner at Chicago in June of 1932 are beginning to practice a few off-the-record squalls against the way affairs are shaping up. They even have been bold enough to go into secret huddles up in the Senate Office Building and swear by all that is high and holy they would curb the potential Roosevelt dictatorship. Word came out of several of those informal meetings that too much power was granted the President last spring in the heat of the moment.

Holding— The quickest way these recalcitrants can see of holding President Roosevelt in check is a definite cut of his pet appropriations. Somehow or other the White House is aware of this feeling. The President feels sure he has an ally. It is one of those nation-wide radio hook-ups over which he will call a spade by its first name and leave the answer to the people. Scouts who have been back and forth over the country return every time with the report F. D. R. still holds the public imagination as no man has in years. The administration is betting it will hold up.

Notes— The very quiet young lady secretary of Ed McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor and high nabob in NRA, has a new scheme to get him to appointments. She knows that every time he goes into the corridor he gets held up by potential coders. . . . Also she knows that McGrady has a rather penetrating voice, so she listens from behind her closed office door, then leaps out and steers the boss on to his appointment. . . . What has become of Henry Ford? . . . That is the big question Washington newspaper reporters are asking at NRA. . . . They get no answer.

Crow— The Stock Exchange got one of the biggest thrills in its history when Samuel Untermyer went on a diet of crow. Samuel and the Big Board boys have never been exactly bosom pals. The lawyer hasn't missed many chances to make Wall Street squirm. As recently as last spring he stirred a bad case of local fit-tern when he worked on a bill to regulate the Stock Exchange. So the hierarchy was horrified when the tables were turned. About Face— Untermyer's sudden about face on his plan to plaster fresh taxes on the Exchange had two inside causes. One was the banks. The other was the State of New York. The tax scheme was supposed to make the banks more willing to lend money to the city by promising additional revenues. It worked in reverse. The banks pointed out that if the Exchange moved to New Jersey real estate values would drop and the city would lose tax money instead of gaining. Therefore nothing doing at all on loans until that situation was straightened out. On top of that the State—in the person of Governor Lehman—also got agitated. If the Stock Exchange had moved it would have cost the State more than thirty million in transfer taxes and additional millions in income taxes. This would have knocked the State budget for a row of cinders. So the State in effect told the city it had to quit kicking the State's dog around. The city was in no position to argue. Normally state taxes collected from New York City are about $70,000,000 or 12 per cent in arrears at this time of year. This year the figure is $148,000,000 or 2 1/2 per cent. In addition the State's share of city relief has risen from ten million to thirty million. Altogether the city is costing the state about $100,000,000 more than usual. You can see why the governor might feel annoyed who the city threatened the state's income still more.

Moving— The Exchange's courtship of New Jersey was a sweet piece of ballyhoo. They were set to go through with it all right but it wouldn't have meant as much as the terrific noises indicated. The New Jersey Exchange would have dealt only in a small number of active stocks. Two by four hangouts in New Jersey would have been rechristened main offices. But the New York Exchange would have stayed open and brokers' New York offices would have functioned as before except for transfers. Pictures of Wall Street as a deserted village showed a vivid imagination. But the main point is that the artists convinced their audience. Probably the Exchange will establish a small time foothold in New Jersey for use as a threat in future emergencies. But with the wouldn't be healthy to offend the Governor once the prime cause of complaint is removed. After all Mr. Lehman has friends in Washington and Federal regulation might be very painful.

Pecora— Investigator Pecora has truck-rule of days ready to shoot when the Senate Committee reconvenes early in October. Much of it is on the hot side. But he may find his guns spiked. Some administration insiders have been told the idea (from New York) that now is no time—what with credit problems and deposit insurance—to dredge for mud in banking backwaters. . . . Credit— The New York banks are still pondering how to help the government's credit plans without incurring any risk themselves. The latest idea has its points and may get somewhere. It calls for formation of a corporation to which the banks would subscribe a modest amount of capital. Then when NRA loan applications come up which individual banks are unwilling to handle the RFC would loan money to the new corporation which would re-lend it with a small profit to the industrial borrower. The trick is that the borrower would only get 90 per cent of his money. The other 10 per cent would be put into a corporate reserve for bad debts. In this way the RFC would be covered and there would be small chances for impairment of the capital contributed by the banks. . . . Oversight— When the RFC offered to loan money the banks at 3 per cent it somehow overlooked the fact that it is paying the U. S. Treasury 3 1/2 per cent for the funds it re-lends. Somebody will probably discover the slip if and when any bank applies for some of that 3 per cent cash.

Houston Asks Two Millions For College Bayou City Wants Own University; Petitions Public Works

FORT WORTH (UP)—An application for $2,000,000 for the erection of a university at Houston was made to the Texas public works advisory board here. The application, presented by school superintendent E. E. Eberholzer of Houston and Col. W. B. Bates, Houston school board chairman, calls for a $600,000 grant and a $1,400,000 loan. The proposed institution, to be public-owned, is to be called the University of Houston, Bates said. The loan will be financed by revenue from the university and by assets of the present Houston Junior college. Seven sites, ranging from 30 to 100 acres, have been offered without cost, he said. A separate branch for negroes is planned. W. H. Hinton, Houston Chamber of Commerce manager, accompanied Bates and Eberholzer. Advisory board members also had before them proposed emergency projects for relief in the Rio Grande storm area. Total amount of the storm relief projects had not been determined.

Pig Bonus Termed Blow To Balanced System of Agriculture in Texas AUSTIN (UP)—The government bonus for destruction of pigs and sows is "especially unfortunate" in Texas, said Dr. F. A. Buechel, statistician and assistant director of the bureau of business research of the University of Texas, in a livestock review issued here. Referring to the pig killing, he said: "In Texas the situation is especially unfortunate since great efforts have been put forth by farm leaders to introduce good breeds of hogs in order to develop a balanced system of crop and livestock farming. Artificial price stimulation of cash crops such as cotton and wheat may in a few weeks undo the work which leaders of the 'feeder-breeder' movement have been carrying on for several years."

"Step right up, LADIES and GEN'M'N"

HAVE you ever heard a street-corner medicine man hawking his wares? Confess. Weren't you tempted to buy by his persuasive talk? Why didn't you? Wasn't it because you could feel no real confidence in his product? Wasn't that because, though he was here today, you didn't know where he'd be tomorrow?

How differently you feel when you buy an advertised product. Here is no human personality to persuade you. But, instinctively you know you can trust the word of "The salesman in type." Manufacturers and merchants who advertise are permanent. They stand back of their products! They spend millions of dollars to determine your needs and to perfect products that will satisfy those needs. Unlike the medicine man, their business is built on your continued good-will.

Research laboratories, with the wealth and resources of great industries behind them, are constantly seeking to invent and improve things to make your life simpler and more pleasant. They bring their discoveries to you in the advertisements. Advertised merchandise is merchandise of quality. Merchandise you can depend on. Let the advertisements teach you what's new and good. Let the advertisements guide you in spending your money wisely. Step right up, ladies and gen'm'n!

Bates, Bailey Rest Cases In Kidnap Trial

No Testimony Offered; Lawyer And Farmer Held By Government

WASHINGTON (AP)—The justice department announced Wednesday $75,250 of the Urschel ransom money was located buried in a cotton patch on a farm near Coleman, Texas, occupied by Cass Coleman, described by officials as an uncle of Kathryn Kelly.

Coleman was taken into custody. The money, in ten dollar bills, was found in thermos jugs.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Albert Bates, accused as one of the actual kidnapers of Charles Urschel, and Harvey Bailey, two of ten persons on trial for the kidnaping, put their fates in the hands of the jury Wednesday without offering a word of defense.

With unexpected suddenness Bates and Bailey's attorneys rested their cases immediately after Armon Shannon's testimony concluded the defense of himself, his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon.

MEMPHIS (AP)—John M. Keith, special agent of the department of justice, announced Langford Ramsey, an attorney, former brother-in-law of George "Machine Gun" Kelly, confessed Wednesday Kelly sent him to Coleman, Texas, to get part of the Charles Urschel ransom money, $75,250 of which was recovered near Coleman Wednesday.

With unexpected suddenness Bates and Bailey's attorneys rested their cases immediately after Armon Shannon's testimony concluded the defense of himself, his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon.

Four men were elected to the Board of Directors of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce Tuesday morning at a breakfast meeting of that board.

The new members are: W. Rance King, manager of the Montgomery Ward and Company store; B. F. Robbins, city property owner and oil lease and royalty dealer; Clyde E. Thomas, attorney, and W. A. Robertson, proprietor of Robertson's Men's Wear.

The men fill vacancies on the board. King, Robbins and Robertson were elected by appointment of the 20 directors who are elected. Thomas will fill the unexpired term of G. R. Porter, who has moved from the city.

The board heard reports from several members on results of solicitation of various firms and individuals in an effort to enroll additional members. Assignments recently given "dividual directors will be continued and additional assignments will be made from time to time.

Manager Watson was directed to go to Austin to confer with officials in an effort to get the governor to ask the legislature to change the statute governing condemnation of land for highway right-of-way and channel purposes.

The amendment was supposedly designed to give the highway department authority to condemn property for channel purposes as well as road right-of-way but was actually passed with such wording that the counties alone may file such suits.

The local Chamber is interested in this because the change in the law has prevented condemnation of right-of-way across the northeast corner of Glascock county for Highway No. 9. If the change is not made the highway authority is not going to get out, and a contract, will lead to a "dead end" at the Howard-Glascock county line.

The Glascock county Commission Court has refused to condemn the land.

Communications received with reference to an effort being made to eliminate what are considered unfair differentials between prices of crude oil produced in West Texas and other sections, and on the status of the proposal to erect a post office building here were read.

Clifford B. Jones, regional advisor in the Public Works Administration, informed the organization he had asked for information from the office of Secretary Tolson, to determine whether the federal building can be placed under the Public Works Administration. The site has been ready more than two years and a contract was awarded, but this was found to be on a bid about $18,000 higher than the appropriation made during the Hoover administration, which was reduced 15 per cent at the beginning of the Roosevelt administration, before the Public Works program was inaugurated.

Robbins At Rotary Meet

Good Roads Association Campaign Here Is Outlined

B. F. Robbins, chairman for Howard county in organizing a unit of the Texas Good Roads association, which is functioning to get additional federal aid for construction of highways in the state, spoke and urged the Rotary club membership at the Tuesday luncheon to lend a helping hand to make this movement a success, especially in the Howard county section.

Mr. Robbins was principal speaker on a program in charge of Ray Cantrell and V. O. Hennen.

Mr. Robbins said the number of memberships in the Texas Good Roads Association for Howard county had been set at 200. The membership fee is only $1, he said, and besides membership in this entitled each subscriber to the Texas Highway magazine, official organ of the Texas Good Roads association.

In forming Howard county's organization to put over this project, Mr. Robbins said fifteen committees working under his guidance had been appointed to solicit memberships.

Shine Phillips, recently returned from the National Druggists association meeting held in Chicago, told of his visit to a Century of Progress, giving a vivid description of the many sights at the exposition.

Miss Caroline Moreland, teacher of piano here, furnished the musical feature of the program, rendering three numbers, "Russian Waltz," "When Day Is Done," and a pianolone, "The Three Trees." As an encore Miss Moreland rendered "Some of These Days."

President E. J. Mary read a report of attendance percentage for the local club for the month of August, which showed the attendance figure at 85.99 per cent. Big Spring's club stood thirty-first in attendance record. There was one 100 per cent attendance day of the club during the month of August.

Joe Kuykendall was introduced as a new member of the club, holding the wholesale grocer classification.

H. S. Faw, Miss Caroline Moreland, and B. F. Robbins were introduced as guests.

Seth Johnson of Fort Worth and Bill Kemp of Riverside, California, were visiting Rotarians.

Next week's program will be in charge of W. C. Blankenship.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Possibility of an increase in allowable oil production for Texas, provided sufficient consumptive demand could be shown, was seen Saturday by E. O. Thompson, member of the Texas railroad commission, after renewed conference with federal oil administration.

Thompson said Friday he was satisfied a reported cut intended for Texas had been averted and Saturday again put before the administration the statement that Texas had a daily refiners' market for oil of 1,212,000 barrels or 237,000 barrels more than the allowable output.

"We may not get an actual increase in allowable but at least we are not going to get cut, and had been feared, and there is a possibility we can get a raise if we can show sufficient consumptive demand," he said.

He explained there was a distinction between the market demand for refiners and the consumptive demand in that the latter term referred to what oil refiners currently not only wanted to buy but which they were prepared to refine for immediate consumption.

Communications received with reference to an effort being made to eliminate what are considered unfair differentials between prices of crude oil produced in West Texas and other sections, and on the status of the proposal to erect a post office building here were read.

DEATH THREATS STIR URSCHHEL KIDNAPING CASE

Attorney-General Cummings in Washington said fingerprints found on a death threat letter sent to Charles F. Urschel, whose alleged kidnapers are on trial in Oklahoma City, had been tentatively identified as those of George "Machine Gun" Kelly (left), who is still sought in the case. Kelly was called a "human rat" by Joseph B. Keenan (center), assistant attorney-general directing the federal campaign against kidnapers. Kelly and Albert Bates (right), were branded by Urschel as the machine gunners who kidnaped and held him last July. Keenan said Bates faced a state charge of robbery with firearms, punishable by death, immediately after the kidnap trial. (Associated Press Photos)

Disease, Hunger And Thirst Add To Terrors Of Floods And Storms At Tampico; 54 Are Known Dead

TAMPICO (AP)—Disease, hunger and thirst threatened to add terrors Wednesday to flood and storms which four days ago brought death and destruction here.

The official estimate placed the dead at 54 and the injured at more than 850.

It was feared more bodies were buried in the city-wide ruins; that the number hurt may exceed 1500. Much of the city was in ruins. The harbor was filled with mud and debris and cannot be used.

General Anselmo Macias, director of relief work, said every building in the city was damaged. He believed the number of dead never will be known. The majority of deaths and injuries occurred in the poorer sections.

Mayor Ferrago estimated damage at approximately $3,000,000.

Five Hurt In Two Crashes On Highways

Five persons were injured Friday evening and Saturday in two automobile collisions on the Bankhead highway east of the business district.

A. J. Frazier, drilling contractor, and Mark Harwell, electrician, narrowly escaped serious injuries Friday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding collided.

Harwell was rushed by ambulance to a local hospital where he was given emergency treatment for lacerations about the face and head. He was subsequently released.

Frazier received minor bruises and cuts.

Both cars were practically demolished by impact of the collision. Frazier's car, a new Chevrolet, was moving west and Harwell's car was being turned into a tourist camp on the 1,000 block on East Third street.

Three Mexicans were injured late Saturday when their old model car collided with an Auburn sedan driven by W. C. Campbell of Eastland, who escaped unhurt. His car was severely damaged and the Mexicans' car demolished. The crash occurred about a mile east of the Cosden refinery.

Arturo Montemayer, Weslaco, Tex., received a broken leg and Apolonio Montemayer and Julian Montemayer sustained bruises and lacerations. They were taken to the Big Spring hospital in an Eberley ambulance. Three other Mexicans, all from Weslaco, were in the car.

City Officers Arrest Two Suspects In Post Office Robbery At Wilson; Under Charges In Other Counties

Advance! Not Retreat!

THE REAL ISSUE

The real issue between prohibitionists and the wet is the fact of intoxication. No prohibitionist in America is opposed to liquor that will not produce intoxication. Call it beer, wine, megal, red-eye, milk, water or by any other name, it is non-intoxicating, non-habit forming, harmless to the body, mind and morals, it will have no opposition from prohibitionists. As to beer, there is no nation-wide agitation against Hires Root Beer. There is no uprising against any other drink that is non-intoxicating. The Eighteenth Amendment is against intoxicating liquors only.

The other day a truck ran into Mrs. T. C. Gardner's car. The driver was of the hit and run variety. But Mrs. Gardner's son and another man got the license number on the truck and the police got the driver. He was intoxicated. T. C. Gardner, Mrs. Gardner, their son and the police cared what the driver had been drinking that was not intoxicating. But when he drank something that made him smash their car and greatly endanger their lives, then an issue was raised.

Why not tell the truth? The whole wet argument is based on hypocrisy and lies. The liquor dealers do not want to sell intoxicating liquors to enrich the government, but themselves. Those who want to buy want to get intoxicated. The dries do not oppose drinks that are harmless. Science has not been lying all these years about alcohol and its effects upon the human organism. The history of intoxicating drinks was not forged by preachers and school teachers. It is time for advocates of intoxicating drinks to tell the truth and quit trying to deceive intelligent people by thin-veil hypocrisy.

A GREAT STORE'S POSITION

It is gratifying to those who oppose the use or sale of beer, when a great store like Sanger Brothers in Dallas hands to its employees a notice like the following: Permission to print this notice was requested of Mr. E. P. Simmons by the editor. It is in no sense an advertisement; but, since it supports so practical a cause, the Baptist Standard is advocating we are glad to have permission to print it.

"September 14, 1933. "Notive to Everyone: "On account of the matter at the present time being one that is highly controversial, this store will not have for sale or carry in stock, or have on sale at the fountain the 32 beer.

"Also we are obliged to request that all of our employees refrain from the drinking of the 32 beer during store hours, or at a time just prior to coming to the store. This means that 32 beer must not be consumed by you in the morning just before coming to the store, or during the lunch time. In other words, we must protect the store against any criticism from our customers as the after effects of drinking beer are sufficiently strong as to be just as offensive as the eating of onions or garlic or certain kinds of cheese, or other kinds of strong foods or drinks.

"We make no request nor do we offer any suggestions as to what you should do about the matter after store hours, as after store hours is your time and you must decide for yourself.

"Please see that our request as regards the matter of store hours, or at a time affecting store hours, is carefully observed." E. P. LIMMONS, (Submitted by local chapter of W. C. T. U.)

Mrs. Holt had continued to engage in the cattle business, her ranch lying north-east of Midland. She used the P brand started by Holt more than forty years ago.

Immediate survivors are two daughters, Misses Hank Cowden and Georgia Glass, and a son, O. B. Holt of Midland; a sister, Mrs. George A. Pemberton of Denver, and a brother, Dewitt Bell of Blocker, Okla.

Vigilantes' Not To Enforce Compliance With NRA Codes

Set-Up For Enforcement Of Code Applying To Gasoline Prices In Texas Submitted; Secret Check Begins In Fort Worth

WASHINGTON (UP)—Existing agencies of the government, not volunteer "vigilantes," will be used to enforce compliance with NRA codes, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins said.

A definite plan for policing under the NRA will be announced shortly by Recovery Administrator Johnson. Pointing out the NRA compliance board was appointed for only 45 days, Secretary Perkins asserted her opposition to any system of vigilantes, although she urged citizens to watch for violators and report them to the proper government agencies.

DALLAS (UP)—A set-up for enforcement of the NRA oil code, chiefly as it applies to retail gasoline prices in the Texas and North Texas area was ready for submission Wednesday.

Laverne Guinn, attorney for major and independent oil marketing companies here, made the announcement after a conference with P. M. Mitchell, Tulsa, chairman of the district administrative marketing committee.

Guinn said Mitchell had agreed to the setup, which will be submitted to the entire district Monday at Tulsa.

Texas, now in a district comprising also Kansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, will be given a separate committee. Guinn reported, with a local committee setup for North Texas.

On the North Texas committee will be Dick Cebel, chairman, E. O. Oswalt, O. W. Peterson, all of Fort Worth.

Edward T. Moore, Dallas, vice president of the Simons Oil Company, is strongly favored for chairman of the Texas committee. It was asked because of "the acute gasoline price situation here."

DALLAS (UP)—Five secret investigators began a check of complaints here that business houses displaying the NRA sign were not complying with terms of the recovery agreement. The probes were employed by the city NRA compliance board.

84 Additional Cotton Checks Enroute Here

Notice Of Transmittal Of $20,838 More Received By Griffin

Reception of a certified list Tuesday by County Agent O. F. Griffin heralded the early arrival of an additional 84 cotton benefit checks for Howard county farmers.

When this group of checks arrives, it will place another $20,838 in the hands of local farmers.

To date all checks distributed through Griffin have not been returned by government loans of any sort.

With the exception of a half dozen checks, all have been given to the farmers.

That they are placing the money back in circulation was evidenced in a marked increase of business activity locally Saturday.

Griffin said of the six checks he is now holding, five are ready for distribution and have been for some time, the recipients lacking in interest to call for them.

With reception of the 84 checks, Howard county farmers will have received $135,017 through settlement of 514 or 782 contracts signed here.

Ouster Suits Due To Begin Next Monday

Biggest Civil Action In History Of State Aimed At Oil Companies

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN (UP)—The state's biggest civil law suit is scheduled to start Monday, October 2, in 98th District court here. It is Attorney General James V. Allred for the state asks penalties for alleged anti-trust law violations totaling $17,850,000.

Right of 15 major oil companies, the American Petroleum Institute and the Texas Petroleum Market-Association to continue operating in Texas is attacked. Cancellation of permits and charter forfeitures are asked.

Political destinies, too, are at stake. If Allred wins, his progress to governor or to the United States senate seems assured. Already it has brought a clash with former governor James E. Ferguson, chief adviser of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson.

"The suit should be stopped. It is a blow to national recovery. It will throw thousands out of employment if oil company charters are forfeited," said Ferguson.

"We are not suing because of agreements to raise wages and spread employment," said Allred. "We are suing because we believe a code of ethics was used as a smoke screen to drive out independent filling stations and competition.

Ignoring Ferguson's denunciation of the litigation, Allred has gone ahead preparing for the trial. Sixty witnesses have been summoned from 17 counties.

They are expected to furnish new evidence for the trial. How the code was drafted, adopted, approved by a federal trade commission and put into effect is on record in preliminary testimony taken before a master.

Included as witnesses are: C. H. Roeding, G. E. Baker, Charlie Mays and Claude Oden all of McLennan county; Frank Esmond, Bates Robertson, G. A. Forster, R. E. Tomlinson, Jack Cannon, W. S. Word, C. A. Still, E. W. Sullivan, W. H. Goodnight, Ray Goodnight and Sam Kays all of Dallas county; J. H. Hunt, H. L. (Larry) Bowles, Stanley Hawrylak, Press Wright, H. A. Jones, H. Miller, R. V. Austin, B. L. Hooker, Guy Estill all of Tarrant county; J. A. Davis, Barney Oden, C. W. Long, Ralph Dale, Jimmy Lawless of El Paso county; W. A. Saunders and R. R. (Ray) West of Nueces county; Sam Baswell Jr., H. L. Finch, Fred Galie, and Hal Stack of Potter county; R. T. Hammond of Taylor and A. L. Cate of Wichita county; H. L. Austin, J. T. Wilkinson, J. W. Becker, R. J. Kenney, R. L. Howard, Keno Ogden, Robert Shepard of Tom Green county; J. E. Kelly, F. E. Gurnon, J. D. Keene, M. H. McMichael, C. A. Nietert, V. L. Rapp, Louis F. Schwarz, E. H. Walker, J. W. Pace Jr., all of Cameron county; and George Struckhausen and Charles Newding of Galveston county.

Defense attorneys had summoned B. F. Flynn and Bernard Martin of Wichita Falls.

Preliminary court skirmishes began Jan. 5, 1933. Trial was first set for May 23, 1932. A session of the legislature prevented it. Rep. T. H. McGregor of Austin, as an attorney for a defendant company exercised his constitutional right to postpone pending the session.

When District Judge J. D. Moore agreed to postpone the trial from midsummer to this October, Attorney McGregor agreed not to exercise that right this time.

In the preliminary testimony, Allred sought to establish the agreement was made at Dallas, Sept. 27, 1929, violating the state anti-trust law. Penalties are asked for 783 days of alleged violation beginning Nov. 20, 1929. Minimum daily penalty is $50 a day and the maximum is $1,000 daily.

Besides the American Petroleum Institute and the Texas Petroleum Market-Association the suit named as defendants Standard Oil company of New Jersey, Standard Oil company of California, Socony Vacuum corporation, Shell Oil and Refining company, The Texas company, Sinclair Refining company, Magnolia Petroleum company, Simms Oil company, Shell Petroleum corporation, Cities Service Oil company, Texas Pacific Coal and Oil company, Gulf Refining company, Pasotex Petroleum company and Continental Oil company.

Land Bank Is Swamped With Applications

Night Crew Added To Care For Unprecedented Increase In Loans

HOUSTON—Facing an unprecedented number of applications for loans, the Federal Land Bank of Houston has added a night crew as well as enlarging its day force to speed up the consideration of applications and the closing of loans, the Federal Land Bank said today.

"In the past seven weeks," Mr. Williams said, "more applications have been received than during the previous 29 months, beginning at the outset of 1931. In the first three weeks of September, 2,531 Texas farmers applied for loans totaling $1,023,928. This was nearly twenty-four times the volume of loans sought during the same period of last year.

"When the Emergency Mortgage Act of 1933 was passed by Congress in May, we had nine appraisers. We now have 113 appraisers in the field and about 125 men in training. When their training is completed those who are qualified will be appointed and assigned to regular appraisal work. This will further accelerate the handling of the large number of applications now on hand and being received daily by the bank. Officers and employees of the bank are earnestly endeavoring to give prompt assistance to deserving farmers of Texas," Mr. Williams said.

New Orleans Beats Santone

Pelicans Ahead First Time, Need One More To Take Series

NEW ORLEANS—The championship Southern Association New Orleans Pelicans went out in front in the Dixie series for the first time Monday by winning their second straight victory over San Antonio in Heinemann park by the same score that marked Sunday's win, 5 to 2.

Going into the contest all square at two games apiece, New Orleans outplayed the Pelicans in the first two games, winning 3 to 2 and a three-quarter claim on the all-south championship. Four wins are necessary for the title. In the four previous games, San Antonio had twice moved a game in front, only to have New Orleans come up and tie it in a knot.

With the series already far from being a financial success, only about 2,000 turned out for Monday's game.

As was the case Sunday, San Antonio outbait the Pelis 12 to 7, but the Pelicans were clicking behind the steady hurling of Andy Messenger and the Mission batters were the most part well scattered.

New Orleans won the game in the second inning when they fell on the offerings of the veteran outpinner, Hal Witte, and drove him from the mound after making five hits bring in four runs. Lester White, righthander, who relieved Witte, held the locals in check for the rest of the game, the only other Pel score being Eddie Moore's home run with none on in the seventh.

Denny Galehouse, the "old reliable," who pitched New Orleans' only series victory in Texas and pulled Monday's game out of the fire after Fred Johnson had blown, will hurl for the Pelis Tuesday. Abe "Payday" Miller, who set the Pelis down by a 6-3 score in San Antonio last Friday night, is slated to work for the Missions.

12,000 Square Miles In Missionary Field Under Bishop Seaman

The Episcopal District of North Texas, slightly larger counties cover an area of more than 77,000 square miles is now served by eleven missionaries under the direction of Bishop E. Cecil Seaman, of Amarillo.

The portion of that area that has been assigned to the Rev. W. H. Martin, minister of Trinity Church, Midland, is made up of Howard, Glasscock, Gaines, Andrews, Ector, Winkler, Ward, and Loving counties, nearly 12,000 square miles. There are sixteen towns in this area in which one or more Episcopalians live; and the Bishop's plan is to assure pastoral care for these persons; and for all who feel the need of the joy, the peace, and the consolation of the religion of Jesus Christ, said Vicar Martin.

Rev. Mr. Martin has already developed two strong missions and is planning the systematic use of his band of Layreaders and singers at other points in his field.

Beginning with Sunday, October 1, at 11 o'clock, there will be regular services every Sunday morning in Trinity Chapel, Midland. Rev. Mr. Martin will come to Trinity on the second Sunday of each month for the Holy Communion.

Dr. Amos R. Wood and H. S. Faw of Big Spring will have the honor of conducting the first regular every Sunday Service Sunday morning, October 1. It will be Morning Prayer. The sermon subject will be "Light."

At the close of the service a picture will be taken of the entire congregation, to be sent to Bishop Seaman who may use it as an exhibit at the approaching meeting of the House of Bishops at Davenport, Iowa, to secure funds from the National Council for carrying on the work in the widespread mission fields of North Texas.

Episcopalians and friends of the church are urged to attend this meeting. Visitors are welcome at all services in Trinity Chapel.

Dr. J. R. Spann Takes Part In School Confab

Far-Reaching Recommendations Made For Methodist Colleges

Dr. J. Richard Spann, pastor of the First Methodist church, returned Wednesday morning from Dallas where he attended a meeting of the joint educational commission of the Methodist conferences of Texas.

The commission's session was followed by announcement of an agreement for consolidation and abandonment of various colleges and universities that created considerable interest.

A readjustment program recommended the following:

That three of the Methodist supported institutions be maintained as they are. These are: McMurry, Abilene; Southern Methodist university, Dallas; and Lon Morris college, Jacksonville.

That these four institutions be offered to the cities in which they are located: Kidd-Key college, Sherman; Weatherford college, Weatherford; Wesley college, Greenville; and Texas Woman's college, Fort Worth.

That Southwestern university, Georgetown, be moved to San Antonio and combined with Westmoreland college, the combined schools to be designated as the chief institution under direction of the five Methodist conferences of the state.

That Southwestern's plant be made the seat of a girls' school in event Kidd-Key is given up.

The Texas conferences began a readjustment of the operation of their nine colleges when faced with a $1,500,000 indebtedness. It has been apparent for some time that all could not be maintained; and action was hastened this fall when several opened their fall terms with shrunken attendance.

McMurry of Abilene was not in that group. Figures released Wednesday by J. E. Freeman, college secretary-treasurer, show an enrollment already 20 per cent higher than that of last year. More than 300 students are registered and dormitories are filled.

Said Freeman:

"Under the program of the joint educational commission, McMurry should become one of the larger institutions of senior rank owned by Methodism in the Southwest. It will have the support not only of the five conferences in Texas, but of all the Southern conferences. Heretofore it has been under control only of the Northwest Texas conference."

Under the unification program, the New Mexico and Arizona conferences will become patronizing conferences of McMurry. That will bring in northwestern Oklahoma and southeastern Colorado.

Northwest Texas conference members of the commission include C. E. Breedlove, Haskell; W. H. Hamilton, Chillicothe; and Dr. J. R. Spann.

Mr. Brigham, a cotton buyer, will be stationed at Sulphur Springs for at least a month more.

SPFARKING OF THE "Common Covenant"

It will be clear to you, as it is to me that while the shirking employer may undersell his competitor the savings he thus makes is made at the expense of his country's welfare.

This professional drug store has consistently brought you pure drugs, compounded to a quality standard rather than to a price standard. Never have we offered the all important drug items that go to your family, at anything other than a fair price that allows us to pay our employes fair wages for reasonable hours work.

When we say "drugs compounded to a quality standard rather than to a price standard", and faithfully live up to the saying, we are sure that we comply, and then some, with the Common Covenant of President Roosevelt.

Our prices have always been reasonable.

Settles Hotel

For The Love of Eve

by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER XIII

Tamkinville boasted two hotels but one of them was only open during the tourist season. So Dick took Eve to the other, the Hotel Cortley. She glanced about the lobby with the signed register. The walls were of tan plaster and two columns of speckled imitation red granite supported a dingy ceiling. There were two davenport and a few arm chairs upholstered in red mohair. A pair of elk horns was mounted above the clerk's desk. There was a rubber plant and a row of books on the shelves. The backs belonged to men lined up inside the window who had seen Eve and Dick coming down Center street. This privilege of watching and eavesdropping in Center street was granted to guests of the Hotel Cortley. Indeed, it was the sole diversion of many forced to stay over the weekend.

Eve and Dick were transported to the third floor by a rickety elevator in a cage. The row of backs turned as the elevator door clanked and a row of faces watched them disappear. Eve registered extreme hauteur. As the bellboy led the way to the far end of the corridor Eve noted with interest the number of pieces of carpeting in different colors and designs on that floor. "Thrift here," she noted. "As an area wears out it is replaced instead of buying enough for the entire floor."

Later they walked up Center street and mingled with the crowd. Tamkinville was the "market town" throughout and whole families as well as young couples drove in from the hills for Saturday shopping and the movies.

Eve selected a tiny white restaurant for their evening meal because of the fresh dotted, ruffled curtains hung in the window. Nothing on the menu appealed to them, however and they waited a long time while the proprietor and his waiters bickered over purchase claims. He had assured them "it would be no trouble at all" to serve the clam on the half shell, but when they finally were served, minus cracked ice, Eve and Dick found them lukewarm instead of cold and both felt they had learned a lesson.

The "Fair," Tamkinville's leading store offering Saturday specials in women's and men's apparel. Eve was surprised to note how up-to-date the stock was. She managed to have a chat with the dress buyer who was sent to New York each year and Eve was immediately impressed by the woman's alert manner and thorough knowledge of her business.

Afterward Eve and Dick dropped in at a motion picture theater. So busy had they been lately that a movie seemed to involve a luxurious expenditure of time. When the lights went up a young lad sitting next to Eve remarked to the girl beside him, "Right nice, don't you like here?" But Dick, after an appraising glance about him stated "Eve wanted no money building this place." Later he and Eve mounted the stairs to look at the balcony and Dick rapped softly along the wall. "Cheap construction here all right," he whispered. "But all pleasing to the average eye for very pleasant. They have enough here, really, anyway," he added.

Eve felt like a person somewhat detached from herself as they wandered back to the Cortley. Not a familiar face in sight, the townspeople often turning their heads to look at she and Dick passed, the utter simplicity of the business life, the idleness of the town. A feeling began to steal over Eve that perhaps Bizby's was not as important to the world as she had imagined it to be. "Dick," she said later as they lay awake in their hotel room, the lights out, shades up and rays from the center street are light filtering through the Nottingham lace curtains. "Dick—I feel so peaceful."

"That's why I brought you here, you little kitten. You were all tangled up in a ball of yarn."

The next morning Eve discovered the Copper Bell Antique Shoppe.

"Oh—what a cute set of corner shelves!" Eve exclaimed. "How I'd love to have it for our dining room!" Dick responded with his noncommittal "Hm—no, what-not." Eve glanced up at him quickly. "You don't like it," she accused. "Why Dick? What's wrong with it?" she persisted.

"Well," Dick explained reluctantly, "it's not really old—fifty years, perhaps. That's why it's so cute. But you needn't be so sniffy about that 'barn' shelves are fashionable again."

Dick was unperturbed. "Some of these things are graceful and pretty," he conceded. "Aunt Sophronia and one with spool turnings. Probably has it stored away in the attic. We'll see something when we're gone east."

"And do look at this, Dick," Eve begged at his arm and drew him to a corner of the shop to look at a chest of drawers. "Oh, Dick, we ought to have this. You can't say 'no' to it."

Dick surveyed the piece but with a shrug. "Knobs fastened with wood screws. Put together with wood pins. About a hundred years. He estimated its age. Perhaps more. And a good job of varnishing. The bestest best of the carved mahogany leaves on the posts are rather unusual. And it has a serpentine top drawer. Not bad."

"Not bad," Eve mocked him. "But the most prize you can give it? Don't you think you might buy it, Dick? That and the water bench that sits little stand over there. The backs belong to two drawers and drop leaves."

Dick looked. "The 'tute little stand is buried apple wood," he said. "It probably would set us back the price of two months' rent."

But Eve would not let her enthusiasm be dampened by two months' rent. She pointed to a pair of candlesticks in sparkling yellow glass. The staff was in the form of a fish, balancing itself gracefully on its chin. "Oh—" she exclaimed, "aren't these simply darning, Dick?"

Dick grinned tolerantly. "Can't say that they are," he returned. "Never could see anything particularly darning about a dolphin—or any other fish, for that matter." He picked up one of the pair, looked at the price mark and set it down with great care. "Fifty dollars for the pair?" he ejaculated. "If not darling, they're at least dear," he conceded. Eve looked at him reproachfully. He knew she hated puns.

"Well, anyway, we simply must get that little spinning-wheel for the bay window. I've always wanted a spinning-wheel," Eve coaxed.

Dick's mother had had a flax-wheel like the one in question. But when the furnishings of his boyhood home had been auctioned off no one regarded it of any value. Dick the only one who had felt any sentimental regard for it, was to make his life anew in other cities and thus was unable to keep either that or the old rosewood organ his mother had played. He purchased a spinning wheel for Eve and they loaded it in the rumble seat.

Eve had jotted down prices and the name of the shop. It was the fashionable thing now to have at least one room with antique furnishings or reproduction of antique.

"I'll just send for some of those pieces I admired a little later," she whispered to the proprietor as she left.

CHAPTER XIV

Christmas fell on Tuesday that year and Eve was overjoyed when Mr. Barnes said that she could have Monday as a holiday and thus be able to spend Christmas with her parents 500 miles away. Bizby's was open until nine o'clock each evening of the week before Christmas and Eve was obliged to spend at least part of every evening at the office. Dick agreed without objection to her spending a week's holiday with her those nights.

Saturday, with the last task completed, Eve said goodbye to the others in the office, wished them a Merry Christmas, and left to meet Dick. On their way to the train they posted their marriage announcements to Eve's friends in Lake City. Those for the home folks had been sent a week earlier. Eve felt a mixture of apprehension and relief after the announcements were mailed. Put at least there was nothing to worry about for the present and she boarded the train with a light heart. Tomorrow she would see her parents again and Dick would be with her.

Henry Bayless met them at the station Saturday morning. Eve smiled at her first and gulped as her eyes filled with tears. Then she hurried forward and kissed him while he struggled for composure. Partings and meetings after long separation always affected Henry Bayless. His eyes were blurry and he swallowed hard. Then he welcomed Dick with a hearty handshake and felt a glow of friendship. She remained at her desk. Hank trusted few men until they proved themselves but his instinct told him Dick Rader was all right.

It had snowed heavily overnight and Hank drove carefully. He was proud of his new car and boasted to Dick of the number of years he had driven the old one.

The Bayless home was in an old section of the city, a tree-lined street. "Nice here in the summer," said Hank as he drove into the yard. Dick saw a modest house of the seven-room variety with side porch and a low attic over the kitchen. Eve's mother, rosy and smiling, beamed a welcome from the doorway.

Dick felt the spirit of Christmas for which he had long been homesick. He accompanied his father-in-law to the woodshed and helped him nail together a stand for the Christmas tree. Later he helped Eve trim the tree. He put extra leaves in the dining room table to accommodate the guests and when Eve's sister, Esther, arrived with her husband and child the baby held out her arms to Dick and seemed to prefer him to anyone else. Later, to the child's intense delight, Dick made a snow man.

Eve's grandmother, accompanied by the son with whom she lived, came for dinner. Grandmother Bayless, little, spry and yet always complaining, enjoyed the day exceedingly. "I have lived a great many years," she said, "but I declare to goodness no one ever surprised me as much as Eve does. That announcement now—coming with a Christmas greeting! 'Twas right odd! I thought to myself, 'That's just like Eve.' Seems like you picked out a right nice man, though. I know you must have asked him if he doesn't look as though he was bold enough to ask you."

After dinner they all gathered in the old parlor and Esther played the piano while the others sang Christmas carols. Then the gifts were distributed. Dick, who had been alone at Christmas for the last 10 years, was amazed at the number of presents displayed. Anxious to paying his way and expecting favors from no one, he was touched and pleased to see how he was accepted and included in the group as one of the family. Grandmother Bayless, in particular, amused him. She brought Eve a handsome quilt of intricate design which she had made herself and then grumbled when she saw the exquisitely colored rag rug which Eve's mother had given to Dick.

"E-m!" Grandmother declared. "Now I know why Kate was so exasperatingly busy drying and sewing all those rags that she couldn't even take time to visit with a person!"

Dick surprised Eve with his gift—a beautifully designed dinner-ding-set with diamonds. "We were engaged and married all in one breath," Eve explained to her mother, "and I had to have only one of the wedding ring."

That evening the whole family bundled into heavy wraps and rode out to "Cousin Myrtle's" in Beachwood. There, in a modern suburb, Cousin Myrtle and her family lived in a house of Normandy type.

There was a tower with a winding wrought iron stair and casement windows. Through diamond-shaped panes of glass the lights of an outdoor Christmas tree twinkled. The beautiful furnished home had not been built by wealth but rather by years of hard work combined with thrift and careful planning.

Dick felt himself attracted to Eve's relatives who seemed so friendly and merry. The next morning "cousins" built their gifts. "It's such fun," the cousins had declared, "to celebrate Christmas and a marriage at the same time." There were shell pink dishes, an onyx base lamp and a portable radio. There were exquisite silver pieces and an electric iron.

Monday evening Esther invited a crowd of young people—all her home friends of Eve's—to her home. There was bridge with a buffet supper and music afterward.

Then Christmas night the whole Bayless family escorted Eve and Dick to the station. "Eve," said her mother a moment before the train arrived, "here is an extra little present for you. Buy yourself a nice silver or something you really want with it. And don't tell your Pa! I saved it myself. It was a $50 bill."

Eve was awake and had eaten breakfast long before the train reached Lake City next morning. She was filled with anxiety. By the time she reached the office the store would have been open for some time and she would have to face everyone at once. They would all know about her marriage. She wondered how they would greet her and what new complications she would have to face.

Would Barnes be nice about it or would he be afraid her work would reflect a divided interest? How would the girls take the news? Myra would be sweet, she knew. But Mona Allen? Eve's trepidation increased later when she entered the store. Mr. Barnes had given her permission to arrive late, inasmuch as her train did not reach Lake City until 10 o'clock. A throng of after-the-holiday shoppers already was jamming the attention of the clerks. Eve felt all eyes focused on herself. She nodded to several acquaintances as she hurried along toward the elevator. Her knees were weak by the time she entered the advertising office.

"Eve!" shrieked Ariens Smith, darting up from her typewriter and flinging her arms about Eve's slight form. "Congratulations, darling!" Myra looked up from the evening slippers she was sketching. She arose and with dignity extended her hand and kissed Eve. "I am so happy for you," she said, smiling. Eve never remembered what she answered. She thought giddily, "What deep dimples Myra has!"

Mona Allen assumed a bored expression. She remained at her desk and as Eve passed she glanced up and returned her greeting with a "Good morning, Mrs. Rader." The words came as a distinct thrust. Strange as it seemed to Eve then, she had never thought of being called anything but "Miss Bayless" or "Eve" by her business associates.

To her intense relief Mr. Barnes was in consultation and she had time to regain her composure before facing him. As Eve opened her desk and lifted out sketches and notes she answered Ariens's questions and learned that the marriage announcement had caused pleasant excitement in the office.

Plans and Myra said they hoped Eve would continue her work. Mona Allen permitted one corner of her mouth to lift in a scornful quiver.

The office boy entered then, almost buried under the stack of newspapers on a large flat-topped desk. She smiled at the boy and asked Eve, "Approaching her desk, he scowled darkly and whispered, 'Don't let Miss Allen get your job. She's counting on it!'"

CHAPTER XV

Eve cupped her hand over the telephone and turned to Dick. Her shoulders dropped.

"Dick," she said, "it's Mona Allen! She says her boy friend can't bring her and she wants me to send someone for her. What shall I tell her?"

"Tell her to stay at home," Dick answered with twinkling eyes.

Eve, nervous and tired, pleaded in a hoarse whisper for him to drive over for Miss Allen. "She says it's only in the 100 block, darling and I hate to offer her for office reasons."

With a shrug he agreed. Later he had ample opportunity to regret the decision. He was waiting in the reception room of the boarding house where Mona Allen lived for what seemed hours. However, when she finally came down the stairs Dick felt his grievance leaving. She looked childlike and her round blue eyes lifted in an innocent expression as she slipped her arm through his and tripped along on her dainty spike heels to his roadster.

The other guests had all arrived when Dick and Mona reached the apartment. Eve had been forced to share her apartment with a schoolmate. It was fortunate for her that Dick had never asked Eve what became of her earnings. So far since her marriage it had taken all she could accumulate to pay for her expenses. This, too, she would never want Dick to know, since he shared her father's aversion to going into debt for luxury.

This was January, 1929. It was well for Eve that she did not know what the year ahead had in store for her and Dick, of the rift the short year would bring in their marriage.

CHAPTER XVI

About the middle of January Eve received a letter from Irene Frontes of New York. One paragraph of that letter was destined to change the trend of events for Eve and Dick Rader.

"Since you have decided to become a business woman," Irene wrote, "don't you think you should get more for your money than the purchase of a few household goods? You would ultimately buy, anyhow? Why don't you invest your earnings in some of the stocks that are so good now? You can build up a nice little fortune for yourself and be independent of your husband. There is such a thing as letting your money work for you, you know. And think of all the things you could do with some extra cash. How about a trip to Europe, for instance? You don't intend to spend my hard-earned salary checks on the trip. I've done pretty well during the last two years, buying low and selling high. I expect to do even better this year. Really I wish you would get in on some of the following which have been making excellent showings—"

Here Irene listed several stocks, the mere names of which were exciting to Eve. If Irene could make money from her earnings so could she, Eve reasoned.

She put the letter in her purse and turned her attention back to the lay-out on her desk. Bizby's had secured the stock of an original rug dealer who was retiring from business and leaving the city. The advertising office was draped with gorgeous Persian rugs and Marya was aglow with eagerness as she worked at her drawing board. "Oh, if only I could do these in color!"

"You can have your Saruks and Bokharas," said Ariens, "but I've a yen for a room-size Chinese rug. If I ever find a man who will buy me one I'll drape myself around his neck for life!"

She shivered as she fastened the sheets of copy together with a clip. She always felt a sense of pride when Barnes entrusted the preparation of a full page advertisement to her. Today she was more than usually pleased. Oriental rugs heretofore had been something to write about. Now, after reading Irene's letter, they had become a definite reality. Some day she, too, might have a good rug.

Her interest was aroused and she determined to follow Irene's suggestion. For the present, however, she decided to keep all this a secret from Dick. After she had made a great deal of money, she would surprise him with the news.

That evening she scanned the financial pages of the newspapers and compared Irene's list with the day's ratings. Each stock showed a gain. Yes, Irene was right! It was a simple matter to make money.

But how, Eve wondered, did one go about it? She had become a slighter bottom how to buy stocks and she decided to ask Dick. He would not suspect that she intended to speculate.

"Dick, dear," she began. "I've heard people talking so much about buying and selling stocks. Where do they do it? I mean here in Lake City?"

"Some of them buy through their bankers," he told her, "and some through stock brokers like Sloan & Sanford."

That was enough for Eve. The next day she hurried through her luncheon and crossed the square to the gray limestone building which housed the Sloan & Sanford company. She scorned the elevator and walked up the stairs. Easy access was one of the features of the brokers' office. The outer door opened and closed with rapidity and a stream of people seemed to be passing through. Feeling a little nervous, Eve entered, hoping no one would notice her. She was at a loss what to do next.

She had a vivid impression of stock exchange scenes during the exciting moments and expected to hear men shouting while others scurried about, all more or less wild-eyed in their feverish anxiety as the ticker clicked off the figures sending their fortunes soaring.

Instead she saw a line of men, mostly middle-aged and elderly, seated in class room chairs with right-arm desks. They were quietly and intently watching the board before which a young lad dashed back and forth, chalking figures. The chief sound was the staccato of the ticker as it spit forth a constant stream of paper tape.

Eve stood, confused, until a boy approached her. "Anything I can do for you?" he questioned.

"Why—uh—is Mr. Sanford in?" Eve stammered, to her own surprise. She had known some Sanfords at school and the name had a pleasant association.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Sanford is out at lunch," the boy replied. "Will some one else be back later?"

Eve answered, relieved, and hurried out. She had not planned what to say to Mr. Sanford.

Dick had told her that some people bought stocks through their banks. Perhaps that would be simpler. Her lunch period was over and Eve could not escape from the office until evening. Then it would be late to go to the bank. She would have to wait until tomorrow.

Reluctantly Kate clutched at this straw. "She did write a white check about buying some furniture."

"Furniture?" Hank repeated, puzzled. "Why I thought they weren't going to buy furniture. Yet I thought they lived in a furnished apartment."

"They do," Kate answered patiently. "But this was something special Eve wanted. She saw it on one of their trips. It was—antique."

"Antique?" Hank groaned. "With my hard-earned money? Well, I'll be damned! No mother; tell her 'no.' Not by a jugful!"

So Eve received less than she had expected and the draft was made out to her mother from the little fund Mrs. Bayless had saved for her. "Kane had made an error sacrifice for her daughter and Eve had to be content with the amount she received."

She wrote her mother a long letter of appreciation. The money was to be considered as a loan. Eve explained and she promised to repay it as soon as she had made gain of that amount. She would hold this for working capital. "You know, Mother," she wrote, "it's impossible to get a start without a little capital!" Kate smiled as she read that. To think her quarters and half dollar, saved from the household allowance and slipped into the cracked sugar bowl on the top pantry shelf, should have grown into "capital"! What would this enterprising daughter of hers do next?

She would have been surprised to know that Eve was about to go. "I'm afraid she might have difficulty keeping her activities from Dick if he played the market through a broker's office. Eve had decided to operate through the bank. She felt, however, as though she were being cheated of the thrill supposed to be connected with playing the stock market. Eve enjoyed excitement and there was little to stimulate her imagination in the stock and bond department of the City Bank.

Mr. Brown suggested four stocks which were on the rising market. "For a quick turnover," he advised, "these are as likely as any to advance."

Eve's funds were so limited that it seemed advisable to concentrate on one as a beginning. She placed her money on Pure Soap Inc.

Eve glanced at the pretty young elevator girl in a patronizing manner as she rode up to the office floor of Bizby's. "One knows so little at that age," she told herself. "I wouldn't want to be a year younger than I am, for see the knowledge I gain all the time! Why only yesterday I didn't know what it was like to invest on the stock market and today I feel rich already!"

The afternoon she worked swiftly, deftly and happily. Ariens commented on her good mood. "I'm having a good day," Eve admitted. "I've turned out my copy in about half the time it usually takes."

"Well, I envy you!" Ariens grumbled. "It would take a million dollars to make me feel like that today."

"Oh, a few hundred thousand can do a lot!" Eve answered airily.

At 2:30 she sent the office boy to buy a copy of the stock edition of an evening paper. When it came Eve turned excitedly to the financial page. Pure Soap, Inc., had gone up two points. Eve made a mental note of her profit. "When it goes up 10 points," she decided, "I'll sell and reinvest the profit in something else. Oh, this is going to be fun!"

CHAPTER XVII

Eve did not sleep well that night. She awoke several times, only to drift back into troubled dreams of buying a stock exchange and finally her old home. In the morning she was so quiet that Dick was worried.

"You're usually skipping about all over the place by 7:30," he said. "What's the matter? Don't you feel well?"

"I'm all right," Eve assured him. "I was just thinking. I mustn't forget to write to Mother today. It's almost a week since her last letter came."

Dick approved of the way in which Eve and her mother kept in close touch with each other. Once every week Mrs. Bayless wrote a long letter, painstakingly written in her cramped handwriting, filled with news of the family, the relatives and Eve's old friends. And once or twice a week Eve dashed off a reply on her typewriter. Her father grumbled, "Eve's letters are too longed long for any man to read. Tell me in a few words what she says."

"Mother, dear," Eve had written. "Did the money he is keeping for me in the 'emergency fund.' You know how Father and I always saved our pennies and nickels and put them in the little red elephant banks until there was enough to deposit down town? Dad said that when we grew up we would have that money for an emergency fund in case anything happened. So I wish he would let me have the money now for something very, very special. I don't want him or Dick to know about it but I'll let you in on the secret. I'm not going to spend the money—I'm going to invest it."

Because her daughter had asked her to do it Kate did try to get the money. But Hank Bayless remained adamant as a rock. He refused to draw out one penny of the sum unless his wife told him what she intended to do with it. Finally Kate told him that Eve wanted it.

"Why should she want that money?" he thundered. "She's getting a good salary and she has a husband with a good job who would be glad to support her if she'd stop the foolishness about working and give him a chance! Now what does she need money for?"

"I'll bet she's up to some damned foolishness," he went on. "Well she'll get no help from me. She's gone into debt, likely as not, for something she doesn't need. Has she written anything lately about buying anything?"

"Reluctantly Kate clutched at this straw. "She did write a white check about buying some furniture."

"Furniture?" Hank repeated, puzzled. "Why I thought they weren't going to buy furniture. Yet I thought they lived in a furnished apartment."

Eve glanced at the pretty young elevator girl in a patronizing manner as she rode up to the office floor of Bizby's. "One knows so little at that age," she told herself. "I wouldn't want to be a year younger than I am, for see the knowledge I gain all the time! Why only yesterday I didn't know what it was like to invest on the stock market and today I feel rich already!"

The afternoon she worked swiftly, deftly and happily. Ariens commented on her good mood. "I'm having a good day," Eve admitted. "I've turned out my copy in about half the time it usually takes."

"Well, I envy you!" Ariens grumbled. "It would take a million dollars to make me feel like that today."

"Oh, a few hundred thousand can do a lot!" Eve answered airily.

At 2:30 she sent the office boy to buy a copy of the stock edition of an evening paper. When it came Eve turned excitedly to the financial page. Pure Soap, Inc., had gone up two points. Eve made a mental note of her profit. "When it goes up 10 points," she decided, "I'll sell and reinvest the profit in something else. Oh, this is going to be fun!"

That evening she watched Dick as he unfolded the final edition of Bizby's. She was always waiting for them at the hall door when they arrived home. He scanned pages one and then turned to the financial pages which he pursued thoroughly before turning back to read the local news.

Eve had not known before that Dick was interested in stock quotations. Was he playing the market, too?

After her return from New York Eve had tried to prod Freda into a confession. She blamed Freda for the unpleasant incident with Theron Reese.

But when Freda invited Eve to a party in her apartment the next evening there seemed nothing to do but accept the invitation. The answer had come to the advertising office with some frocks for Marya to sketch. As she was leaving she turned abruptly toward Eve.

"Oh, I almost forgot!" Freda said. "I'm throwing a party tomorrow night and I'd love to have you girls come."

She had only a slight acquaintance with Mona Allen and her place was for Eve and Ariens but before either of them could reply Mona gave Freda a melting smile and exclaimed, "Oh, how perfectly sweet of you! I'd simply adore a party!"

Mona paused expectantly. Eve was thinking. "Freda didn't mean to include me in that party. The invitation was for Ariens and me. Is she going to let Mona get away with that?"

Without particular cordiality Freda assured Mona that she was glad she could come. Ariens also accepted the invitation.

Eve liked Freda but she could never be sure about Freda's friends. There was Theron Reese, for example. But Eve was certain he would not be at the party. This was February and he had told her he was not due in Lake City until the week before Easter. Reese had mentioned his itinerary in detail at dinner that evening in New York. Going to this party, Eve assured herself, would make it easier to refuse a later invitation that might include Reese. Furthermore Dick had announced that he would not be home to dinner the following evening.

When they came to the first notes of "Love, Come Back to Me" the other singers gradually dropped out to listen to Ariens. Eve hoped her friend had not chosen the song because George's Billie was there. "I had come with Mona Allen."

Someone suggested bridge but it was postponed until later. The apartment house rules forbade music after 11 o'clock and the crowd apparently wanted music as long as possible.

When they sang "Will You Remember" from "Sayings," Sam Joleridge who was crippled and had been sitting quiet in a corner of the room leaped up and joined in the singing, letting his voice ring out loudly.

"Play it again!" he pleaded with the piano player.

But before the last notes of the chorus had been reached a second time Sam turns away abruptly. Freda Carter saw that his eyes were moist.

"It's that song—and what it brings back to me," he told her huskily. "I was in love with a beautiful girl once but it all turned out wrong. After that I thought I had to drink to bolster up my courage. I've been doing it ever since. Even tonight! I'm always drinking to forget myself and I'm a damned fool. Don't think I don't know it! And here I am blubbering all over your place. Why don't you give me my machine order?"

"That's all right, Sam," soothed Freda, patting his arm. "And I want you to stay, of course. Tell me—would you rather the crowd stopped singing?"

"No. Ask the girl at the piano to play 'Liebestraum' will you?" And Ariens played it for him. Afterward she sang again while the others listened.

It was a little later when everyone was feeling that the evening had turned into a distinct success that Theron Reese arrived, spoiling the party for Eve.

"Come now," he said triumphantly. "I didn't tell me you were spending your honeymoon alone when we met in New York. Does hubby know you were out with me there?"

"I'm afraid you'll have to accuse me!" Eve said, rising. She could scarcely control herself, yet she did not wish to make a scene. And the apartment was so small she hardly avoided a scold. She went into the kitchenette.

"May I help you?" she asked Freda who was making preparations for the buffet supper. "Eve wished Dick would come. He had promised to call for her and Ariens."

Ariens came out to help soon and immediately Sam Holdridge joined them. "Freda," he yelled, "won't you send this girl back to the piano? She doesn't belong in the kitchen."

When she and Eve were alone again Freda said with a laugh, "Well, Ariens seems to have him handcuffed and bound."

"Who is he?" Eve asked.

"Don't you know Sam? You should. He's a first rate advertising man. Working at Mason's now. Too bad he drinks so much—he has lots of ability."

Later when Eve looked into the living room she saw that one taste of bridge had been organized by Ariens and Sam Holdridge were still at the piano. Mona Allen was holding Reese's hand, telling his fortune and George's Billie stood alone.

Something impish tempted Eve. "Oh, Mr. Billie!" she called. "Miss Carter would like a man with a good stroke to play this game."

Billie seemed glad to help in the kitchenette. He opened a bottle of olives, sliced the ham and prepared excellent coffee.

"No kitchenette is complete without a handy man," sighed Freda with a wrinkle in her eye. "If you happen to find one who's unattached and not too antique, Eve, be sure to pull an ear for my side."

A moment later she called gaily, "Fall in line for supper! I'm sending you all home early because I've got to be on the job myself tomorrow."

Reese continued his attempts to draw Eve out. He sat beside her and, balancing her plate and coffee cup, she found it inconvenient to move.

Soon the party broke up and the guests paired off to go home. Sam Holdridge asked Ariens to let him escort her but it was true that Sam had been drinking and Ariens was afraid. So he explained that she would have to go home with Eve with whom she had come to the party.

Death Of Governor Seligman Of New Mexico Places Hockenbuhl, Clovis Banker, In Executive Post

ALBUQUERQUE—Twice elected lieutenant governor of the state, A. W. Hockenbuhl, banker and lawyer, became the state's 12th governor since 1924, with the death of Governor Arthur Seligman Monday.

Hockenbuhl attended Missouri university and later graduated from Texas university. He came to New Mexico more than 25 years ago, locating in Quay county, south of Tucuman.

Always quiet and unassuming, Hockenbuhl is widely known about the state capital as "Andy." A fellow banker with the governor, he was in Albuquerque when the governor died.

Hockenbuhl's succession immediately gave rise to many questions which have been perplexing politicians for months.

On complaining of a sharp pain in his chest, the governor left the convention room, accompanied by Oscar Love, Albuquerque banker.

Physicians said the governor had suffered previously from minor attacks and heart attacks. They had warned him some time ago that he was working too hard and should relieve himself of some of his duties.

The governor gave the opening address at the bankers' convention speaking on "General Banking."

Outlaw Goes Peacefully With Police

Wife And Two Men Also Taken In Memphis, Tenn., Rooming House

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—George E. "Machine Gun" Kelly, sought in connection with kidnaping of Charles Urschel of Oklahoma City, surrendered peacefully to officers who surprised him in a rooming house here early Tuesday.

Arrested with the outlaw were a woman Lee said was his wife, Kathryn, and two men described as J. R. Tichnor and S. E. Travis.

Kelly's capture was effected by a group of officers who surrounded a house in which he and the others were sleeping.

Officer Bill Raney entered the front door. As Kelly opened a bedroom door, revolver in hand, Raney ordered him to drop it.

Kelly complied, raising his hands. This morning police received a telegram from the Department of Justice saying the Kellys were hiding in Memphis.

His black hair was dyed yellow and his wife was wearing a red wig. Kathryn Kelly agreed to return to Oklahoma City to face trial.

Tree Army' May Be Called On To Clear Political Debris

BY VERNON A. McGEHEE, United Press Staff Correspondent

ALBUQUERQUE (UP)—The "tree army" in jurisdiction by federal regulations to chop away at forested areas but it may have to clear some political debris in Texas as its first major task.

The question of who shall direct the work of the civilian conservation corps in state parks apparently has the relief commission at odds with the state parks board.

The attorney general's department ruled the relief commission cannot legally assume the duties of the parks board in the improvement of state parks under the federal reforestation bill.

Despite the ruling, the relief commission assumed the job of directing the "tree army" in park improvement work. Relief Director Lawrence Westbrook declared the commission will continue to do so for the present.

The legal opinion had been asked by D. E. Cole, chairman of the state parks board. He attached to his request of correspondence with federal authorities.

Emergency conservation work in Texas is divided into three phases: forestry work, soil work, and park work. Direction of the "tree army" forestry work was assigned Forester E. O. Slesha.

In the case of park work, however, Col. Westbrook declared the state parks board had no set-up for directing conservation projects.

NRA Heads Promise Quick Action To Compliance Boards Sending Complaints From Communities

WASHINGTON—Within a few in any community in the United States as to alleged violations of the President's Reemployment Agreements, the local compliance board will be able to obtain a definite ruling from the district recovery board or, if the district board is unable to decide the point, from Washington direct.

There are 28 district boards throughout the country, with an average of 200 community compliance boards in each district. Under instructions from National Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, all complaints not settled by the local board or the district board will be submitted by the district boards to NRA in Washington by telegraph, and rulings will be transmitted in the same manner.

Community Farm Venture Started By Dallas Woman

DALLAS (UP)—A stone's throw from the downtown district of Dallas, a community farm venture is flourishing.

Situated in the Trinity river industrial district which separates Dallas and its largest suburban sector, Oak Cliff, the farm of 1,000 acres offers recreation and nourishment to hundreds.

The farm is not a high-brow ecological adventure—it is simply Mrs. Jean Well Burchfield's scheme for producing food for those not otherwise able to get it.

"Proceeds from the crop will be used this winter in feeding these unfortunate and there will be no charge made, only that they will be expected to continue their help whenever possible in manual labor to carry on the work."

SHE ATE ALL-BRAN TWELVE YEARS WITH FINE RESULTS

Delicious Cereal Relieves Constipation

Read this very enthusiastic letter:
"Something like eleven or twelve years ago, I began eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. When I started, it was called simply Kellogg's Bran, and I believe it was one of the first products of the kind on the market."
"My friends often laugh at my fondness for ALL-BRAN. It gives such a clean taste in the mouth, and I do not feel satisfied until I have had my ALL-BRAN."
"The Kellogg Company should never stop manufacturing ALL-BRAN, here is one who would be greatly disappointed."—Miss Amy Person, University Park, Iowa.
Science says that ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines and vitamin B to further aid regularity. Also iron for the blood.
The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. How much safer than taking patent medicines—often harmful. Just eat two tablespoons daily for most types of constipation. For serious cases, try it three times daily. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.
Sold in the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Berry Pie An Unfailing Favorite For Autumn Day Meals

There is something so old fashioned and appetizing about a berry pie—it fits in so well with the season that the wise housekeeper will find her popularity steadily increasing if she serves this delectable dessert often.
Naturally a pie is only as good as its crust—so if you are not already proficient in the gentle art of pastry making suppose you try the following recipe for greater success.
Master Pastry Recipe
2 cups sifted flour.
1-3 teaspoon baking powder.
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1-2 cup shortening.
Cold water.
Sift the dry ingredients together, add the shortening, mixing with a fork and finger tips, until the mixture is of a mealy consistency. Add water very slowly until the mixture is sufficiently moistened to hold together. Use as little water as possible. Roll dough on a floured board until 1-8 inch thick. Fit loosely on a pie plate, trim edges and prick with a fork. Bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes if the crust is to be used as a pie shell. The above recipe will make pie shell and top. Use 1-2 for pie shell only.

Cherry Pie
1 quart sour pitted cherries.
1-2 to 3-4 cups sugar.
1-4 cup flour.
Prepare pastry. Mix above ingredients together and put into lower crust. Cover with top crust which should be pierced with a fork. Bake in hot oven for 30 minutes, reduce temperature and bake 20 minutes more.

Strawberry Pie
1 baked pie shell.
8 macaroons, crushed.
1 quart strawberries mashed and hulled.
1 cup sugar.
Line bottom of baked pie shell with macaroons. Stand fresh, whole berries all over the bottom of the shell and around the sides. Crush one cup of berries, add one cup of sugar and cook until thick jam consistency. Allow to cool and pour over prepared shell and whole berries. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

August Retail Distribution In Principal Cities 32 Per Cent Over Volume In Last Report

Retailers Seek More Accurate Gauge Of Consumer Demand Before Adding Stock; Bank Debts Off 8 Per Cent; Loans And Investments Expand

DALLAS, (UP)—Expansion in both retail and wholesale lines continued during August, the eleventh federal reserve district's monthly business review revealed Friday.
"Retail distribution, as evidenced by sales of department stores in principal cities," the report said "reflected an increase of 3 per cent over the previous month, and was 27 per cent in excess of that in August, 1932."
The unusually large increase over the previous month, according to the review, was of special significance because seasonal decline in July was much smaller than usual. "The volume of wholesale trade," the report continued, "showed less than the usual expansion, yet this was not surprising in view of the heavy distribution during the summer months. While reports indicate that consumer buying in rural sections is improving retailers who bought heavily earlier in the summer are attempting to gauge more accurately the prospective consumer demand before adding substantially to inventories."
Bank debts to individual accounts, the report showed, fell off eight per cent during the month from July, a purely seasonal decline. They were, however, four per cent higher than for August a year ago.
Weather during August, generally was favorable to growing crops and ranges. The drought area in large part received much needed moisture, while in other sections the weather was such as to foster maturing of crops and hold in check insect activity and plant disease.
The federal department of agriculture in its September 1 report said crop conditions in the 11th federal reserve district were equal to or above those for the preceding month. Cotton prospects were improved, as were those of some feed crops.
"Federal reserve bank loans to member banks," the review said, "continued at a low level during the past month. The total of these loans amounted to $4,237 on September 15, as compared with $3,998, on August 15 and $12,891,000 on the same date in 1932."
"The loans and investments of member banks in selected cities reflected a substantial expansion between August 9 and September 15. The daily average of combined net demand and time deposits of member banks was $580,108,000 in August, representing a decline of $7,730,000 from the previous month, and $17,064,000 from August last year."
"The recession from a year ago, which has been gradually narrowing in recent months, was smaller in August than in any month since 1920."
Construction activity fell off sharply during August to a level under that of May. The August valuation of building permits, the report showed, was 52 per cent less than in July and four per cent below August' last year.
August's meager wholesale expansion was blame on a 17.9 per cent slump in dry goods. Other reporting lines, notably farm implements, reported improvement, although the expansion in several cases was un-

Sale Of Tea Saturday To Aid Museum

Officials Expect Sufficient Funds To Open Building Soon

Members and friends of the West Texas Memorial Museum Association expect to make enough money from the Lipton Tea sale Saturday to get the Museum headquarters in the old City Hall in readiness for use, provided they receive public support, declares Mrs. George W. Davis, president.
The Museum now houses all its relics. They must, however, be placed in cases and so arranged that the public can view them without danger of damage to the articles. So many more relics were received than the Museum expected and so many of the accessories were valuable that Mrs. Mary Bumpass, director, considered it wiser not to open the building until its interior furnishings were complete. Those who have seen the interior are very enthusiastic over it.
This sale will be held Saturday in 17 leading grocery stores in the city. That many women will be stationed in the stores to aid in the one-day sale. Proceeds will go to Museum fund.
The sale recalls the famous sportsman, Sir Thomas Lipton, who after six unsuccessful attempts to win the American yacht cup, was finally presented a loving cup emblematic of and entitled "The World's Greatest Sportsman and Loser."
Besides being a sportsman, Sir Thomas was known as the world's largest tea merchant. He prided himself on the growing of fine teas and was purveyor of teas to the royalty of Europe. He established a reputation as a dispenser of high grade teas, some of his products having sold as high as $99 per pound.
Firms cooperating in the Saturday sale are: Allen Grocery, White
