Quest for Faith

Without faith, life is a desert. He who has no faith has no strength. He is like a ship drifting with neither sail, rudder, nor anchor.

Faith is something, that is. It does not so much matter in what. Faith in religion, faith in science, faith in political system, faith in eventually getting the jackpot in the corner slot machine, faith in something.

Our weakness today is not so much in the lack of planes and cannon, as in our lack of faith. It is here that Germany gained such an initial advantage over France and England. Hitler gave the Germans faith, often an unwilling faith, often a grudging, desperate faith, faith in things which to us are unworthy and despicable, but something to which to cling.

The British "bright young people" were thoroughly disillusioned after the World War. Everything was phony. Nothing mattered. France, too, was shot through with a spirit described by a French phrase best translated as "what-the-hell-ism." This spirit was prevalent in Germany, too, in the early twenties.

But the black pall of depression descended on Germany 10 years and more before it struck westward. Men had to grasp for new and strange faiths. Such as they were, they found.

Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress and one of our greatest poets, is no mere rhymist, but a poet in the real and original sense of a seer, one who looks deeply and sees clearly. He said recently: "Unless we regain the conviction that there are final things for which democracy will fight, we can leave our planes unbuilt and our battleships on paper, for we shall not need them."

He is right. The lines of that faith are clearer now with every shattering bomb that falls in Flanders. It is when they are so gravely threatened that we see at last the precious worth of freedom, and religion, and tolerance, and morality, and the whole panorama of our democratic way. Our faith in, our devotion to, these things can be felt in these hours, hardening and tempering itself in the fires of adversity. What the hour requires, man brings forth.

Into retirement at the ripe old age of 11 goes Shirley Temple. And can those be circles we see forming under Baby Sandy's eyes?

Agriculture's new starchless potato can never go far. The nervous gourmet would always fear it was about to collapse, like one of those shirts finished by the wife.

Thomas Jefferson is said to have invented the wheelbarrow, probably in an attempt to curb federal spending by cutting wagons down to one wheel.

Again with us is night baseball, a sport not revived this season in the principal capitals of Europe.

Time and the River

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—Reports that Mexico City police are hunting an American named George Mink in connection with the recent attack on Leon Trotsky were of peculiar interest to investigators for the Dies committee.

Catton

The Dies committee has a fat dossier on Mink, and would like to make it fatter. Its investigators have been hunting him for several months; during the winter Chief Investigator J. B. Matthews made a hurry-up trip to New Orleans for him, missing him by just one hour.

Testimony before the committee has described Mink as one of the chief overseas agents for the Russian GPU (or NKVD, as it is now called). He is accused of having gone to Spain during the revolution, with the mission of purging the Loyalist army of anti-Communist leaders; previously, the evidence ascribes to him a leading part in extending Communist influence in the American merchant fleet.

Mink helped organize the Marine Workers' Industrial Union, predecessor of the National Maritime Union, and for a time was its national chairman. After this, he is alleged to have traveled extensively in South and Central America on party business. One witness asserted that as long as three years ago Mink was assigned to "take care of" Trotsky.

DIES AND PRESIDENT WORKING TOGETHER

(ONE of the most ironically touching developments in Washington is the rapprochement between Mr. Dies and FDR. As recently as last fall, they were very much at swords points; now they are working in something resembling harmony, gunning for fifth columnists.

It must be reported that it is the White House which has changed its attitude, rather than the red-hunting Texas; and the change clearly was forced by the pressure of events.

Dies has been denouncing the fifth column since long before the nickname was popularized, and has been crying for FBI help in ferreting out its secrets. For a long time he got nothing but the cold shoulder from the administration. Now the New Deal is beginning to realize that Mr. Dies has, as they say, got something there.

BUS DRIVER DECISION MAY COST MILLIONS

SUPREME COURT decision that the Wage and Hour Administration, rather than the Interstate Commerce Commission, has jurisdiction over the 200,000 bus and truck drivers in the country may prove pretty costly to the drivers' bosses.

The Wage-Hour people had held that 42 hours was the legal workweek for the drivers; ICC had said it was 60. Decision means that companies which followed the ICC ruling are liable for over-time wages running a long way back; some of the companies' lawyers have figured the total bill will be somewhere between $2,000,000 and $10,000,000.

Notable are two other things about the decision: (1) it was strictly a "New Deal judges" five-to-four ruling, and (2) the Wage-Hour Administration's interpretive bulletins are formally adjudged to have more legal weight than even the Wage-Hour people themselves supposed they had.

Took the Starch Out of Potatoes

It's okay, girls—now you can eat potatoes without gaining weight. Thank George H. Chisholm, horticulturist on the estate of the late Samuel Untermyer at Yonkers, N. Y. By grafting tomato plants onto ordinary Irish spuds, he produced a starchless potato. Above, he points to his new hybrid, which he calls "topato."

Heading for the White House?

The BRICKERS of OHIO

This is the first of a series presenting the Republican families that may occupy the White House after next year. Democratic presidential possibilities and their will be carried later.

At 46 John William Bricker has enjoyed two years realization of his ambition to become governor of his native Ohio. Now he is talked of for President because of his economic administration and firm dealing with critical relief situations. The steel-gray haired, heavy-set, one-time Mt. Sterling takes the talk calmly.

Bricker ran for governor in 1936, lost, but led the ticket. When elected in 1938 he promptly cut 4500 off state payrolls, slashed bills $10,000,000.

The governor graduated from Ohio State University started his career as city solicitor for Grandview Heights of Ohio's capital, Columbus. He stepped to state college the Public Utilities Commission, later became a member commission. In 1932 he was elected state attorney against a Democratic landslide, was re-elected in 1934.

Bricker was a first lieutenant in the World War, but foreign service because of a heart trouble which he still has. He met his wife, Harriet Day, as he stopped in Columbus to visit a cousin. They have one son, John W. Bricker.

The governor, 6 feet 2 inches, handsome, athletic, sports, plays ball with his boy in the executive mansion, works hard, expects staff to do likewise.

Dark-eyed Mrs. Bricker is quiet, hospitable, but she is in the spotlight to her husband. She has campaigned with him, and has not to leave son John for more than a day or two.

SERIAL STORY

AN EYE FOR A GAL BY HARRY HARRISON KROLL

COPYRIGHT, 1940. NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Steve Hogg tells Rossy that the Tollivars draw lots to decide who was to kill Jay Mc-Afee. He insists he has proof...

CHAPTER VII

THOUGH Rossy McAfee said the words under his breath, Hannah, hurrying along the path through the starlight, had not heard or seen him...

"How come you're here?" he demanded, and in spite of himself he was rough with her.

"You wouldn't think of maw and paw and my folks, would you?" A trace of bitterness came into her voice.

"Ah, I know—I haven't been watching you, but I've seen, just the same. So you would tell Steve he was a liar, and you'd go back and lap up what they fed you, and that would be the end of a second-hand job of doing the right thing.

FOR a moment Rossy breathed heavily, saying nothing. "I told Steve he was a liar, all right. Well, I haven't heard anything yet to make me change my mind about him."

"I reckon you wouldn't believe a word I said."

"You mout say it and let me see if it's a word that my judgment told me could be believed."

"But how do you know it was Steve?"

"That night Steve was follering one of the Tollivars. He had a gun and he aimed to kill him a man. His first man. But instead of ambushing him, he just follered, and came to the house where where they were all meet-

"Well, I reckon that'll make a good boy out of you! Now what you aim to do about it?"

"Looks like I've got to kill me a man."

"In her temper she was panting. "If there's a speck of manhood in you, that's about all that's left!"

WHEN he came out at the summit of the ridge, he was in a region where someone had been timbering. The cutter was heaving second-growth hickory for bolts and handle lengths.

Steve Hogg was getting out timber fast, from the looks of tree tops and shavings and stumps.

from this high vantage. Rossy sat down again, running his fingers through his hair. He began to get excited. Hogg was in too big a hurry about selling off this timber. He had been too anxious to follow Rossy down to Lincoln College, check up with him there, make a full report to Hannah.

Anyway, why had Hannah trailed him so quickly? All on Rossy's account? All because of love?

"Rats!" Rossy scoffed to himself. Steve Hogg put her up to it; now he was trying to prove something on Dr. Tollivar, trying to get Rossy involved in a killing scrape. For family honor. For the sake of an oath made when Rossy was just a child, to get his eye for eye. And on the most powerful argument of all, the alleged accidental murder of his father.

STILL running, Rossy came into the village and went straight for Jesse Leverage's cabin. It was of logs and lost in garden and yard trees. Rossy beat on the door. "Come!" called a cracked voice. Rossy went in. Uncle Jesse was a smallish man, and his years, white upon his thatch, had never mattered to any one. And almost everybody in Hell'n-Damnation had made good use of his wisdom and profited by it, or failed to make use of it and had suffered in consequence.

"Well, how come? Don't you reckon that might be mine after all? There's something stinking up the creek and I come to you to find out what it is."

Little State Law Exists to Combat Fifth Columns

AUSTIN, Tex.—Little state law exists to combat "fifth column" activities in Texas. Treason is defined both by statute and by the state constitution to consist only in levying war against the state, adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. So long as the United States is not at war with any nation the state has no "enemies."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

THE PAY OFF

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK.—Next to the lifting of the cloak of invincibility from the Yankees, perhaps the most striking feature of the major league war this spring is the blitzkrieg conducted by unsung or lightly regarded players against costly and highly touted ones.

Bob Kennedy's chief claim to fame in the White Sox camp was that he was the youngest player in the Texas League. Now Kennedy, who will not be 20 until August, is making plays around third base old-timers never saw before.

Freddie Hutchinson, Detroit's $75,000 beauty, had to be sent out again, but Harold Newhouser, 19 years old and homegrown, stepped in as a starting southpaw. The $65,000 Dominic DiMaggio has been kept in the Red Sox dugout by the close to 400 batting average of Lou Finney, who was nothing more than a handy man with the A's.

Wilburn Butland came up from Minneapolis with Herb Hash to give the Boston Americans badly needed pitching help, but unknown Mickey Harris, in from Scranton, beat both to the front line. Hash has been invaluable, however, as an effective relief worker in 10 of his club's first 26 engagements.

Bill Terry did his utmost to get rid of Joe Moore, but it was the Gauche Ghost who sparked the New York comeback when it became necessary to let the $45,000 Johnny Rucker sit it out. Frankie Gustine was a third baseman in the little Southeastern League, but he was playing plenty of second base and batting .358 for the Pirates when he was 37.

MEANWHILE, the Bucs had to ship the towering left-hander, Johnny Gee, and his $65,000 price tag, back to Syracuse.

U.S. To Extract Oil From Coal

PITTSBURGH.—Research aimed at perfecting methods of obtaining gasoline from America's coal reserves is being conducted by a 16-man staff at the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

Spurred by a $10,000 appropriation for new laboratory equipment approved by Congress, the group of engineers and technicians under Dr. H. H. Storch, director of coal hydrogenation work for the bureau, is pushing studies to unlock the huge store of gasoline contained in coal seams in the event of a future shortage of petroleum-produced gasoline.

Dr. Storch described the program as a type of preparedness effort, looking to the time when petroleum supplies will need to be augmented from other sources.

Experiments are being undertaken with special apparatus to study liquefaction of coal dust at pressures up to 10,000 pounds per square inch. Previous equipment made possible achievement of a pressure of only 5,000 pounds—point at which certain types of coal do not liquefy.

only because the coals they use are different, but also for the reason that both nations are extremely reluctant to give up their technical secrets," Dr. Storch added.

As a result, he pointed out, this country must embark on a research program of its own, conducted in Pittsburgh, the nation's coal center.

Both Great Britain and Germany already have extensive coal hydrogenation plants to make gasoline by this method. The United States, however, is on the outside as far as these systems are concerned.

THE LIGHT THAT MUST NOT FAIL!

By Talbot of Scripps-Howard Alliance

Seventy-five years ago, the Red Cross was founded by Henri Dunant, a young Swiss idealist who believed something could be done to alleviate the horrors of war. Ironically the recent anniversary of this movement marked the beginning of a war that so far has brought more suffering than any other conflict in history. Five million refugees, wrenched from the security of their homes, today look to the world for succor. From the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and from northern France, whole populations have fled from the chaos of shellfire and marching armies. At a moment such as this, we cannot even pause to consider the origin of their distress. Our thankfulness for peace and security must be translated swiftly into tangible assistance. We can do this through the Red Cross. For in its 75 years, its emblem not only has become the symbol of mercy, but also the symbol of action. Already millions of American dollars have been spent for food, clothing and medical attention. We must continue to "press onward in a truly civilized spirit," as Dunant once pleaded. Give what you can, and give quickly, through the Red Cross. Your contribution, large or small, is vital in answering this great challenge.

Amphibian Tank of 40-Man Size Built For the U. S. Navy

CLEARWATER, Fla.—A monster war-machine, an amphibian tank capable of carrying 40 soldiers or 7,000 pounds of cargo, is being built here by Donald Roebline, under a navy department contract.

Roebline, who had built two similar tanks for Red Cross and Coast Guard rescue work, has switched his attention from mercy to war at the request of navy officials. After witnessing demonstrations in which the early tanks splashed through water, climbed steep banks and moved swiftly through dense underbrush, they commissioned him to build an experimental naval tank.

The navy men believed that the machine might be used to transport men and supplies from ship to shore where favorable landing conditions are not available. Materials for the $25,000 model have already been ordered.

The machine probably will be similar in design to the amphibians already completed. Traction for the machines is furnished by wide caempillar treads which grip soggy mud almost as easily as solid earth. They have a land speed of 25 miles an hour and a water speed of 8 1-2 miles an hour.

"On January 1, there were 1,433,000 milk cows reported in Texas valued at $54,834,000," says the Milk Industry Foundation in a statement urging nation-wide support for the Dairy Month campaign. "Production in 1939 equalled 1,996,000,000 quarts.

"Texas is an important state to the dairy industry," the Foundation declared, "and this June program will benefit consumers by emphasizing the food value of milk and dairy products, and enable producers and distributors to promote increased demand for excess farm milk production.

"In addition to fluid milk which brings the farmer his highest price, Texas in 1938 produced 36,829,000 pounds of butter, 24,182,000 pounds of cheese, 10,133,000 gallons of ice cream, 46,708,000 pounds of canned milk.

"In 1938 milk was the third largest single source of farm cash income in the state, topped only by cotton and cattle. Milk was 19 per cent greater than the cash farm income from all grains, 3 times hogs, over twice vegetables; 2 times wheat and corn; 2 1-2 times wool; 4 times fruits and nuts.

"Estimates for the nation as a whole show that milk production on farms this June will reach a new all-time peak. Last June farm milk production in the U. S. totaled 5,332,000,000 quarts of milk."
