SAM RUSSELL MEETS FISHER COUNTY FOLKS

3,000 Hear Him At Rotan, 500 Gather for Roby Talk.

ROTAN, Aug. 17.—An enthusiastic crowd estimated at 3,000 or more, greeted Judge Sam Russell, candidate for congress, here at noon Friday. Hal Collins' Crazy Gang, radio performers from Mineral Wells, appearing with Russell, broadcast their regular 12:45 program from here.

Russell was introduced by Collins as a man of splendid ability and experience and one whom the voters of this district could send to represent them in congress and be assured that they would be well represented.

Judge Russell spoke only a few minutes. His address was well received and he was accorded much applause at frequent intervals during his address.

CISCO, Aug. 17.—Heavy rains over this section Thursday night interfered with the Veterans of Foreign Wars Jamboree program for Saturday morning. The speech which Judge Sam Russell of Stephenville, was scheduled to make from 10:30 to 11:15 was canceled on this account. Judge Russell stopped here enroute to Stephenville where he spoke this afternoon to his home folks.

ROBY, Aug. 17.—Sam Russell of Stephenville, candidate for congress from the 17th district, spoke to an audience of 500 people here Friday night in the interest of his candidacy. He was accorded an attentive hearing.

Judge Edward Yates of Abilene, for many years a resident of Roby, introduced the speaker, praising his ability and qualifications. He said he had known Judge Russell 12 or 15 years, had practiced in his courts and could conscientiously recommend him to his friends as a good man to send to Washington to represent them in congress.

Little Miss Laverne Roland, 7 years of age, sang "God Bless America."

Judge Russell discussed his platform. He stated that he would not take any part in a mud-slinging campaign, and made no reference to his opponent by name.

At McCauley Judge Russell spoke at 4:00 p. m. to a crowd of 500 or more people. He made only a short talk, discussing as much of his platform as he had time for.

Anti-Conscription Bloc Claims Eight Vote Margin Today

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Members of the Senate Anti-Conscription bloc claimed an eight-vote margin of victory today in a drive to modify the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill. Foes of the measure, who would require 12,000,000 men between 21 and 31 years of age to register for a year of army training, said they had gained four votes during the 48 hours in behalf of the amendment of Sen. Francis T. Maloney, D., Conn., which would end the draft until Jan. 1.

Maloney's plan would require the army to try voluntary enlistment stimulated by increased army pay and a one-year term instead of three-year enlistment. If quotas are still unfulfilled the draft would become effective automatically.

Members of the anti-conscription bloc planned an intensive week-end to gain support for Maloney's substitute and to defeat the Burke-Wadsworth Burton K. Wheeler, D., unofficial leader of the bloc, expressed himself as a "dith" opponent of any form of conscription. He objects to Maloney's proposal because it compromises the issue.

Daddy Died a Hero

When eight-months-old Carol Nichols grows up, she will look with mingled pride and sadness at this picture. For, seated on her mother's lap, she wears the Victoria Cross, posthumously awarded to her father for "most conspicuous gallantry" with Britain's Grenadier Guards during the evacuation of Dunkirk. King George made the presentation at a private audience granted the widow.

Hunt Means Of Defense Against Mechanized Units

The Ninety-Fourth Anti-Tank Battalion.

Tanks and other mechanized units, combining mobility, protection for troops employing them, and firepower, have demonstrated the vital part they play in modern warfare. While tanks may be employed to hamper the operations of enemy tank units, experimentation is being made with other means of defense against mechanized weapons.

On January 1, 1940, the 4th Antitank Battalion was organized at Fort Benning, Georgia, pursuant to War Department orders and instructions. Recently this unit was redesignated as the Ninety-Fourth Antitank Battalion, and two other battalions were organized, the Ninety-Third Battalion stationed at Fort Meade, Maryland, and the Ninety-Ninth Battalion at Fort Lewis, Washington.

The Ninety-Fourth Antitank Battalion is equipped with 36 new 37mm antitank guns, which are towed by prime movers (1 1/2 Ton Trucks). It has a peace strength of 22 officers and 388 enlisted men. The 29th Infantry provided an enlisted cadre of 208 men, including many non-commissioned officers for key positions. The personnel has found the unit an interesting one, and have readily adapted themselves to the tempo of stream-lined warfare.

This battalion, in short time it has been in existence, has already participated in the Spring Corps Maneuvers at Fort Benning, Ga., and the Third Army Maneuvers at Camp Beauregard in May.

The 94th Battalion, fully equipped with new trucks, guns, and modernized in every way, has already arrived on the scene in order to participate in the present maneuvers. This battalion is commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Leven C. Allen, Infantry.

Bullock 4-H Club Met Last Tuesday

The Bullock 4-H club met Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Wilson with Margaret Blount, assistant county home demonstration agent present.

Miss Blount told of the plans for the 4-H club encampment the 4th and 5th of Sept. The group also decided on subjects for study for the coming year.

Following the meeting those present visited Lillian Ruth Sudderth and Helen Dempsey's homes and saw their demonstrations.

There were only three members present on account of vacations and other causes. Those present were Bernice Hatton, Lillian Ruth Sudderth and Helen Dempsey.

British Lose 6 Fliers, Nazi 100

LONDON, Aug. 17.—In the massive air battles raging over Britain the Royal Air Force has had one advantage over the Nazi Luftwaffe, considered highly important by military experts. Britain is said to be losing only six fliers to every 100 lost by the Germans.

RAF pilots who bail out of crippled planes live to fight in other battles, but German pilots who make safe landings are lost to the Luftwaffe "for the duration." It is interment for them if they survive their wounds.

In the last nine days of air fights over Britain, 131 British planes have been brought down but 45 pilots have been saved, according to official communique. Fourteen pilots were reported safe Friday when the British acknowledged loss of 22 planes.

The usually well-informed Press Association said 92 of the British pilots whose planes were shot down this week landed safely.

The Germans have lost 623 planes in nine days, according to the official British count. There has been no announcement as to how many Nazi airmen have been captured, but it is obvious German personnel losses are far greater because the attacking bombers require larger crews than the single-seater fighter planes used in defense.

The personnel required for a German attacking force probably averages three men per plane, counting five for the large bombers and ranging down to one for the escort fighters.

This would mean the Germans have lost approximately 1,350 airmen, either killed or captured, in the last nine days. The British personnel loss figures out to only about 6 per cent of the Nazi total.

Harold Ickes To Reply To Willkie

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, former republican and an opponent of machine politics, will make the first new deal reply to the acceptance speech today at Elwood, Ind., of Republican Nominee Wendell L. Willkie, a former democrat, the democratic national committee announced today.

Ickes will speak over the blue network of the National Broadcasting system Monday from 7:30 to 8 p. m. (CST).

GERALD MANN TO SPEAK
Gerald Mann, state attorney general, will speak at Eastland in the 88th district court room at 10:45 Monday morning August 26th. Mr. Mann is not a candidate for office.

STUDY PLANNED OF INDIAN LIFE IN 2 AMERICAS

By ANGEL VINIEGRA
United Press Staff Correspondent
MEXICO, D. F.—Projects drafted at the first Inter-American Indian Congress, recently held in Mexico, are beginning to take permanent form to improve the study of Indian life and affairs throughout the Americas.

A special executive committee has begun the study of a proposal adopted by the congress, which met in the picturesque Indian town of Patzcuaro, state of Michoacan, to found a permanent Inter-American Indian Institute.

The Mexican government will propose this project formally to the other governments of the Americas and invite them to support it, on the basis of the congress' and the committee's recommendations. The latter's studies are expected to be finished within a short time.

Prof. Orozco Leader
The executive committee is headed by Prof. Luis Chavez Orozco, Mexican minister of Indian affairs, and includes Prof. Moises Saez, designated director of the institute; Pierre de L. Boal, counselor of the American embassy in Mexico; Carlos Giron Cerra, Guatemalan engineer, and Federico Avila of Bolivia.

At the committee's first meeting, Prof. Moises Saez reported on progress of organization work since the congress closed. He revealed President Cardenas had placed at the institute's disposal indispensable funds for the publication of the memorial of the congress and for the continuation of preliminary organization work of the institute.

Saez also mentioned the possible formation of an Indian directory of the Americas and outlined arrangements for a trip to New Mexico of a group of Mexican Indians as the guests of several Indian groups in that state. The Mexican Indians will make a tour lasting about a month, visiting various American Indian communities in the southwest.

Studies to Be Made
One of the most important things Saez's statement revealed was a project for studies and scientific investigations under the auspices of the institute. Bronislaw Malinowski, a Polish doctor and professor at London and Yale universities, has accepted the task of carrying on these investigations, once they are approved. Saez said he probably would begin his work in the Mexican state of Oaxaca.

The Mexican ministry of Indian affairs has designated Prof. Julio de la Fuente, now attached to the department of public education and the Mexican Institute of Anthropology and History, to assist Malinowski.

The Indian Institute executive committee, in a formal message, expressed its thanks to President Cardenas for his help in carrying out the work of the Indian congress.

Four Killed and 10 Injured In Mine Collapse

By United Press
EL PASO, Aug. 17.—At least four miners were killed and 10 others injured when a level of an American-owned mine collapsed late yesterday near Santa Barbara, Chihuahua, 360 miles south of El Paso, it was reported here today.

Three other persons were said to have been caught in the cave-in, which was believed to have resulted from a weakening of supporting pillars in the tunnels after prospectors had extracted samples of ore near them.

The mine, owned by the American Mining and Smelting Company, was being worked for gold and silver.

Two of the dead miners were brought up by a rescue squad. They were battered beyond recognition, according to reports.

The injured were taken to a hospital in Parral, near Santa Barbara.

That reminds me...

There comes a time when all of us have to make a decision as to what we will vote for for any office. Now we've got the run-off to consider. Maybe they weeded out the very one we thought would be the best for the job in the first primary. But after all we've got to admit that when the final vote is cast that we should by all that's holy go ahead and cooperate to the best of our ability with the one who was chosen by the biggest majority or plurality. That's democracy.

But on the other hand, until a man is definitely elected the thing is still open for debate and as the old saying goes—"A wise man changes his mind, but a fool, never." But who wants to be classed in either class?

But, getting down to real facts of the case that we have in mind, we are particularly interested in the race for State Railroad Commissioner. This football angle of the state service has been bludgeoned, camouflaged and smeared with charges and counter charges so long in every election that it becomes a sore spot in the eyes of all affected by the results.

One thing we like about Pierce Brooks is that he doesn't talk too much. He tells mostly about the service that he thinks is best for operating the policies of the Railroad Commissioner's department. Naturally every man should defend himself when he is attacked and if ever any man has been attacked, Pierce Brooks has. And of course most unjustly.

Pierce Brooks has been accused of attempting to ride into office on the coat tails of Governor Lee O'Daniel. Just because a man says that he will cooperate with the governor elect is no reason that he is coattailing. That's good business and to the best interest of all the people. And that doesn't mean that he will coattail on the wrong track if there is a split rail.

Safety first is a most valuable motto and believe us as we see it, Pierce Brooks is really the safety first man for the job. Somebody has got to get on to do the thing right at the right time. Certainly the man that rants around on the demerits of somebody else throughout the campaign can't have the people's interest at heart because he is liable to carry on his venom in punishing somebody that didn't do his bidding when he was campaigning.

Pierce Brooks has put his policies up to the people in a clean, clearcut manner and he deserves the consideration of all the voters. Let's elect him as the next Railroad Commissioner to fill the job he seeks.

And remember, the Hatch bill is a good bill and a stepping stone to ward off the building of a tremendous political machine which we certainly don't want in times like these. We like the idea of the people still voting the convictions of their own conscience.

And the rains came, Thank God—just in time for what it takes to make folks happy for the prospects of the future. Bad looking cloud that swooped in on Eastland Saturday morning but when it sat there it gave us a good rain that we needed so badly.

Old Eastland is still forging ahead gradually in new buildings, remodeled homes and business houses. Looks like we're set for future progress and nothing can stop us. That's what we like and we're sure that every man, woman and child that lives within the

Schooner of Past Puts Out to Sea

By United Press
ABERLEEN, Wash.—The famous five-masted schooner Vigilant has obtained a new lease on life through the shortage of Canadian shipping space.

The Seattle vessel was sold to British Columbia interests and is now "somewhere at sea," her destination unknown. In former days the Vigilant—now the City of Albany—used to race the schooner Commodore from Puget Sound to Honolulu. Those were the days when sailing masters took exceptional pride in competitive honors, and the Seattle waterfront at one time found the Vigilant-Commodore rivalry a prime topic of discussion.

Garrett Gives Report Of His Work In House

ABILENE, Aug. 17.—Denying asserted claims of those opposing him that he has been a "do-nothing congressman," and that he is a communist, Clyde L. Garrett, member of congress from Eastland, last night gave a report of his three and a half years' service at a Garrett rally on the federal lawn. A large crowd sat attentively as the congressman spoke for more than an hour.

"I have represented my district to the best of my ability. I went to congress for action and not showmanship. I do not boast of being a great statesman but I have diligently looked after the interests of my district," Garrett said.

He then reviewed his accomplishments and asked that the voters be their own judges. The congressman listed programs he has supported, as follows:

- 1—The farm bill reducing interest on federal land bank notes.
- 2—The farm security administration that, he declared, has saved farms, teams and implements for hundreds of the district.
- 3—The Jones-Bankhead farm tenant purchase program.
- 4—All amendments to the federal farm act aimed at correcting ills of the act.
- 5—The rural electrification program.
- 6—National neutrality act.
- 7—All relief appropriations.
- 8—Tireless work on behalf of world war veterans.

"And they say I am a communist. You be the judge. Would a communist support legislation that I have worked for? A communist wouldn't have voted to create the Dies committee. A communist would have voted against the act requiring fingerprinting of all aliens. A communist would not have favored increasing the number of FBI men. Nor would a communist have voted to deport Harry Bridges. I have never supported any legislation that was communistic in any way."

The congressman then gave his views on current international affairs with emphasis on the national defense act every part of which he said he had supported.

"I have long favored a two-ocean navy and a national defense that will forever protect our shores from any invader."

Garrett also favored the military conscription bill now before congress.

It is the most democratic method of military service. It assures that my boy and your boy will share equally in the defense of our nation. The volunteer system will not work," he declared.

The congressman also warned of fifth column activity within the nation and declared he favored any legislation that would blot out subversive acts within the nation's borders.

Garrett also defended his record as a support of pensions for the old people and denied that he even remotely favored socialism.

Roosevelt Did Not Listen To Willkie Speak

By Tom F. Reynolds
United Press White House Correspondent

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO NORWOOD, N. Y., Aug. 17.—President Roosevelt meets the Canadian Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, tonight for a conference which may result in an understanding on problems of defending the western hemisphere.

Mr. Roosevelt had already announced that conversations are in progress with Canada on defense of the western hemisphere and negotiations are proceeding with Great Britain for western hemisphere defenses against aggression from overseas.

King will board Mr. Roosevelt's train about 6 p. m. at Ogdensburg, N. Y., after the president has inspected the war games of the first army in progress there. In approximately 100 square miles in the Ogdensburg region bordering on the Canadian border, 91,000 regulars and national guardsmen are simulating the conditions of actual warfare.

In Mr. Roosevelt's private car, the president and King will have dinner together and spend the evening talking. The prime minister will spend the night aboard Mr. Roosevelt's train and Sunday morning will accompany the president to military religious services conducted in the field for the troops.

J. Pierrepont Moffett, American minister to Canada, accompanied King to Ottawa.

Sometime around noon Sunday, King will go back to Canada and Mr. Roosevelt will leave for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt will not be part of the radio audience listening to the acceptance speech of Wendell L. Willkie, republican presidential nominee, this afternoon. He will be in a motor car near the St. Lawrence River, checking up on men, ordnance and material gathered for the war games.

Mr. Roosevelt was accompanied by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Chairman Andrew J. May, D. C., of the house military affairs committee. Others in the official party were his military and naval aides, Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, and Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the navy. He arrives at Ogdensburg, early this afternoon.

Bridge East of Ranger Washed Out Due to Rains

Eastbound traffic from Ranger was being routed through Caddo, Saturday due to a washout at Russell creek bridge about five miles east of Ranger on highway 80.

Work for widening of the bridge was in progress and a detour around the structure had been built. This was destroyed by waters from the heavy rains early Saturday. Restoration of the detour was in progress, yesterday, and it was believed that the temporary bridge would be ready for Sunday traffic.

R. A. F. BLASTS OIL PLANTS IN GERMANY

A thundering swarm of German bombers struck at Britain in pre-dawn raids, Saturday, blasting a wide area of Wales. Southeastern towns and the southeast coast suffered the full force of the raid, Saturday afternoon.

Many already were homeless as the Nazis went into their seventh successive day of intensive mass attacks on harbors, airports, factories and warehouses.

Even as funds were being collected for the relief of the homeless, other homes were destroyed by delayed action bombs exploding Saturday morning.

While British pursuit planes fought new swarms of invading warplanes, the air ministry revealed the British bombers raiding Germany Friday night, had struck heavily at the Nazi-air-fuel supply, wrecking "very large damage" on a great synthetic fuel plant at Leuna, near Liepsig, where coal is transformed into gasoline.

The air ministry said a hundred bombs dropped on the Leuna plant, which "normally produces 400,000 metric tons of synthetic oil annually," set off a chain of fires marking almost the entire area of the main plant.

Dogfights Begin Early
Two bombers failed to find their mark, the statement said. One returned home with its bombs; the other lost a salvo at a large Nazi anti-aircraft battery.

"These are samples of the extreme care the RAF takes to identify its targets and thus avoid all danger of bombing nonmilitary objectives," the ministry explained.

At the same time the ministry revised upward its figures of German planes destroyed, reporting 75—not 71—Nazi raiders had been shot down during Friday's "very much smaller" scale attacks and insisting that a new check of Thursday's air battles showed 180 invading aircraft "certainly destroyed." The previous figure for Thursday was 169. British losses Friday were 22 planes, but 14 pilots were saved.

Saturday's daylight raids began with dogfights over an inland town in the southeast, where British fighters shot down one Messerschmitt and captured its pilot.

The new squadrons were sighted shortly after the surprise explosion in a southwestern London suburb of delayed-action German bombs, which the British said were dropped Friday night by Nazi warplanes in their smashing attack at both sides of the Thames estuary.

A dozen persons visiting the scene of the bombardment narrowly escaped injury and others were sent scurrying to air raid shelters by the explosions. They had moved away from the site a bare minute before the bombs went off.

Casualties in Wales
There were two more bomb explosions later in the day. One damaged several houses and the other exploded near a factory.

Night operations by the Nazi air force—following up Friday's large-scale mass daylight attacks on widespread areas—were concentrated mainly on Wales, where a large number of casualties and at least one death were reported.

The air ministry meanwhile scaled down its estimate of the number of German planes engaged in Friday's operations, saying there were not as many as the reported 1,000 which took part in Thursday's mass assaults. Earlier unofficial reports had indicated that as many as 2-500 might have taken part.

Two women and a man were taken to a hospital Friday night when two bombs struck in the main square of a Welsh town. Houses were damaged, the windows of three hotels were shattered, and a fire brigades turned out to keep in check a blaze which broke out in the center of the town.

Two whistling bombs crashed in the middle of another town, damaging property and causing several casualties. One woman said: "It is remarkable that some people weren't killed. One woman fell from her bedroom into the room below. She was not seriously injured."

German planes also were reported over Southwest and Southeast England during the night, while a single raider dropped nine bombs on a southwest coast town. Searchlights failed to pick up the plane in the moonlight.

New Technique Required
The bombs fell in a residential district, the shattering explosions shaking the town out of its sleep.

How to Conquer Courteously

Even conquest is not what it was in the old days. The world isn't getting any more decent or any more moral, but it is getting a darned sight slicker.

Observe the difference between conquest, 1940 model, and conquest in the old bad days.

In the O. B. D. the invading army marched in, beat the defenders, massacred everybody in sight, stole everything removable, and went home, leaving behind a suitable garrison and an iron-fisted governor.

These matters have been improved upon in our enlightened age. Follow the modern procedure:

The invading army marches in, beats the defenders. So far it is all the same. But now it changes. Nobody is massacred. Nothing is stolen. The occupying troops are polite, not to say courtly. They pay for everything.

Now follow closely. They pay with special money, all printed up in the home country for the occasion. The shopkeeper who sells a pair of silk stockings to a trooper is paid in this special money—let's call 'em blitz-dollars.

But the invaded country is still using its old traditional money. People will take blitz-dollars from the invaders, but not from each other. So the merchant takes his accumulated blitz-dollars to the national bank of his country, and says, here, I want old-fashioned money for these. The bank obligates, because it must, at a rate of exchange set by the conquerors.

Now watch more closely. The silk stockings, which are goods and therefore valuable, have gone off to the country of the invader. All that the invaded country has to show for them is certain printed slips, fast accumulating in the national bank. If the invaded country is to get anything valuable back for the silk stockings, these blitz-dollars must be capable of being exchanged for other goods.

But they aren't, except in the invading country. So, to get anything back at all for the goods bought and shipped away for blitz-dollars, the invaded country must buy something from the invader with them.

The invader then offers to take back his blitz-dollars for exactly whatever goods he chooses to dump on the invaded country at exactly whatever prices he chooses to charge. The invaded victim has no choice.

It isn't business. It isn't quite stealing in the manner of old-time conquerors riding off with loot at the saddle-bow. Just what it is we scarcely know. But France, and Norway, and Belgium, and Poland are finding out.

It is a noted chiropractor that advises sufferers from uncerated teeth to wade in six inches of cold water in the bathtub. The cure is simple. Merely slip, fall, and knock out the offending molars.

After putting his horse through jumps, Il Duce asks, "Am I sick? Am I tired?" The rest of the stanza probably goes, "Oh, I am! OK, you're fired."

'That's the Man to Fear!'

R. A. F. Blasts—

but while a number of houses were damaged there were no casualties.

Britain, against whom Germany is directing the greatest air attack in history, claimed continued mastery of her skies for her fighter pilots and her defense gunners on the ground.

She declared her resistance was so fierce it had compelled the German air force to resort to a new technique in its daily assaults.

The Nazi air force has lost almost 80 planes a day since the six successive days of major attacks began last Sunday, the British said. That toll has been so damaging, they added, that the raiders, once past the coast, no longer can concentrate their bombardments on specific objectives but must deploy over a wide area.

The Germans Friday bombed many places in many counties, with two of the chief attacks directed at the Thames Estuary. Both were turned back before the raiders could strike at London itself, although the second wave dropped explosives in the southwestern suburbs.

An official statement said first reports indicated the number of persons killed was small, despite widespread damage. The casualties included some of the personnel at RAF airfields, it was acknowledged.

British censorship banned publication of any total of casualties, which the government now releases only monthly. However, an Associated Press correspondent who toured the bombed southwestern area told of seeing 13 bodies himself. He saw a factory, two schools, a railway station ticket office, a church and a mission hall, several stores and a number of houses that were wrecked or burned to the ground.

"Deliberate" Attack on Homes. The government charged the Germans for the first time with staging a "deliberate attack" on a nonmilitary objective.

The communique said "several persons were fatally injured" in an attack on the "residential town of Eastbourne," peace-time resort on the south coast. "Residential" means Eastbourne is considered to be without military objectives, though it is in the defense area from which children have been removed and where travel is restricted.

The Nazi warplanes dive-bombed the town Friday night. RAF fighters tangled with the Germans in dogfights obscured by clouds from watchers were believed to have been shot down, while the body of a German pilot was found on the roof of an empty schoolhouse and another Nazi airman who bailed out of his plane was drowned in the sea.

The first attack on the London area came at lunch time. The massive Nazi flying column, met by British fighters and antiaircraft fire, was split in two. Part of the raiding force was turned back before it reached the outskirts of the city, while the others battled their way up the Thames estuary, bombing the Tilbury docks, Northfleet and Barking.

Then they skirted around the southeast portion of London without dropping any bombs in this area, the air ministry said.

New squadrons came roaring up the estuary at tea time. This time they lost their cargoes over the

Britain's Queen Sees for Herself

In Britain, as in America, machine-tool production is a vital link in defense industry. So it was with great interest that Queen Elizabeth looked through an eyepiece, as pictured above, at the operation of a high-speed lathe during a recent visit to a tool and gauge factory.

Meanwhile the British countering Nazi claims of having lost only 32 planes Thursday, issued a special communique declaring that, although most of Thursday's air battles took place over the sea, "it is now known that 49 enemy aircraft were brought down on land."

"The German high command will find it difficult," the air ministry declared, "to explain how the wreckage of 49 of their aircraft came so strewn over the British countryside if their total losses for the day were only 32."

The air ministry also claimed complete destruction of the Nazi squadrons which launched a dive-bombing attack on Croydon airfield just outside London Thursday. "Not a single one of the enemy formations returned to tell the tale," the ministry reported.

Twenty to 30 Junker bombers were said to have been used in that attack.

Life Holds Something Stronger Than Forces of Destruction, Decay

Text: Psalm 23

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

THIS lesson is confined to the 23rd Psalm, usually called the Shepherd's Psalm. There is not a purer gem in all literature, and the lines of this Psalm, constituting six brief verses in our modern presentation of it, have taken hold of human experience as perhaps no other single passage has done.

Why is this? In part, it is due to the simplicity and beauty of the Psalm itself; but it is not due also to the contrast the Psalm offers to so much that is in our daily life and in the experience of the world? It is a Psalm of peace; it is a Psalm of refreshing. Even to read it when we are in the midst of trouble is to find an atmosphere and place of peace.

It is a good Psalm to read, even when people are in the midst of want and danger, as great multitudes of human beings are today. It reminds us that these sad and dark experiences are not all of human life, that they are not indeed of God's purpose and planning, that there is for man a life of peace and quiet, of faith and strength, that goodness and loving kindness have not departed from the universe.

We speak of this Psalm as the Psalm of David, because we think of David as a shepherd as well as a king. If David really wrote it, the contrast between the Psalm and much of his own life is very striking. For David was a man of blood and war and the Bible represents him as being forbidden to build the temple because of that fact.

But there was in David also something very fine and gentle as well as something strong and courageous. We see him first of all as the young shepherd boy, going out with great daring to kill Goliath. But there was a later passage in his life that revealed the quality of his spirit.

HARD pressed in battle, he had made a casual wish that he might have a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem. Valiant and loyal soldiers heard that wish and risked their lives to bring him a crust of that water. But David would not use it to slake his thirst. Men had risked their life blood to bring it. It was something sacred, and he poured it out on the ground as an offering. It was a great act of faith and of worship which only a man who is essentially a poet could have conceived or performed. It was this quality in David that made him capable of writing such a Psalm.

It never grows old or worn out. Men have read it hundreds of times; yet it comes with vitality and freshness as a lesson still to be studied, but even more, to be enjoyed.

SERIAL STORY

MURDER INCOGNITO

BY NORMAN KAHL

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY Everyone in the house is under suspicion. Right before the eyes of the drawing room. Suddenly, there is a shot.

CHAPTER VI

It seemed hours after the shot before anyone moved. Dale Appleby, his face pallid, was the first to leap to his feet.

"My God! Another one," he said in a hoarse whisper. He started toward the study, and Mardell and Barbour rose to follow him. O'Leary barred the way.

"Never mind, gentlemen," he said. "It's all right."

Barbour, the red tint missing from his fleshy cheeks, seemed genuinely frightened. "But that shot—"

"I ordered that shot fired," O'Leary said calmly. "It was fired from the den out of the window and into the air—harmlessly. No one was hurt this time."

"But why?" Dale demanded. "Just to satisfy my curiosity," said the lieutenant. "Saylor was shot to death. We know that. But no one heard the shot. Yet everyone heard this one. So Saylor couldn't have been shot with an ordinary gun. Whoever did the job used a silencer. With a silencer, a gun could be shot off in the den and you wouldn't be able to hear anything. It's too far away from this room, and Saylor had the door closed."

Slowly the men ambled back to their chairs. They were still a little agry.

O'Leary turned to Mardell. "May I see you in the study for a few minutes?"

THE lieutenant motioned Mardell to a chair. "What were you doing here tonight, Mardell?" he asked bluntly.

Suave and self-composed, Winslow Mardell leaned back in his chair and propped his head gracefully against the cushioned support. "Just a social visit, Lieutenant. Saylor asked me for dinner along with the others."

From his pocket, O'Leary extracted a sheaf of papers, clipped together. "You wouldn't know anything about these?"

Mardell tilted his head slightly and glanced at the papers. Then he smiled. "So you found them."

O'Leary went on. "A lot of dough is represented here—$35,000. Not exactly chicken feed. These I. O. U.'s are yours, aren't they? You signed them."

Mardell looked bored. "Sure they're mine. So what?"

"How come?"

"A little business—between Saylor and me."

"Gambling debts, aren't they?" Mardell said evenly. "Maybe."

"Were you going to pay them?" The man's eyes flashed. "Certainly. Do you think—?"

"Tonight?"

For the first time, Mardell seemed ill at ease. "Well, no. I didn't have that much cash on me." He leaned forward angrily. "But Saylor knew that. He knew I was going to settle up. He didn't need the money right away."

O'Leary folded his arms and breathed deeply. "All right, Mardell. That's all for the time being. Tell Miss Waters and Mr. Appleby I want to see them."

"THERE'S something about that mug I don't like," Sergeant Carroll commented after Mardell had gone.

O'Leary nodded. "He'll bear a little checking."

Carroll had slouched back in a chair along the inner wall. He didn't bother to get up when Dale and Rhoda entered the room.

"Sit down," O'Leary invited. "Mr. Appleby, I want to know where your stepfather's will might be found."

"I don't know," Dale replied. "He never confided in me."

"You don't know who'll get his money? There must be quite a lot of it."

"No, I can't say."

"Do you expect any?"

Dale exchanged a swift glance with Rhoda. "I'll get my mother's money. That's written into her will. He couldn't have changed that."

"Will that be very much?"

"Yes."

"When your mother died, she left all her money to Saylor?"

Dale looked at the girl. "Tell him, Dale," she urged.

"I may as well," the young man decided. "Most of my mother's money was left to me, you see—but in a trust fund over which Saylor had almost unlimited power. He didn't need to give the money to me, even when I reached 21, if he didn't feel like it—and he didn't feel like it."

"Did you ever ask your stepfather for the money, Mr. Appleby?"

"Yes—but he refused."

"Why?"

Dale flushed. "I don't think that—"

"I'll tell you why," Rhoda exploded. Her delicate features were tense. Her pretty fists were tightly clenched. "Martin Saylor hated me. He told Dale he wouldn't release the money until I was out of the picture."

Sergeant Carroll leaned forward. "You didn't like him very well?"

Dale answered for her. "Frankly, we didn't."

O'Leary glanced at his wrist watch. "Twelve-thirty. It's too late to do very much more tonight. Mr. Appleby, I'm going to ask a favor of you. I'd like everyone to stay here tonight. Can you arrange it?"

Dale looked startled. "Of course, but—"

"Thank you," said O'Leary.

FORTY-FIVE minutes later, the two officers were still sitting in the study. All the lights had been turned out.

"Chief, this case has me stumped," said Carroll.

"Yeah," O'Leary responded, noncommittally.

"I don't get it at all. A murder couldn't have been committed—and yet it was. All the suspects were in the other room, and the window wasn't opened, and—"

He stopped suddenly. From somewhere just outside the door that led into the library, they heard the sounds of shuffling feet. O'Leary stole quietly behind the divan in which the two men had been sitting and whispered curt orders for the sergeant to stand in the recess next to the fireplace.

The door opened, and a sharp beam of light from an electric torch cut across the room. O'Leary held his breath as the beam passed the sofa behind which he was huddled.

It was impossible, in the darkness, to tell who the man was. His light was turned toward the books in the built-in cases on the east wall, and he seemed to be studying the titles. Finally, he selected two large books and pulled them out of place. He reached his hand in the space where the books had been.

Suddenly O'Leary realized what the man was doing. Behind those books, secreted by a panel, was Saylor's safe. In a few minutes, the man pulled aside a small, steel door and reached his hand into the chamber.

O'Leary lifted himself to his feet. "All right, buddy," he said. "Drop it." He spoke quietly, but in the stillness of the night his voice boomed across the room.

The figure at the bookcase wheeled around. He swung his beam swiftly over the room and caught O'Leary square in the face. In the next instant, there was darkness as the torch was switched off, and then . . . a flash of flame and a crashing sound as he fired a shot at the detective's head.

If She Spends Too Much Try This One

AUSTIN, Tex.—Want to scare your wife out of extravagance? Then take a leaf from this Texan's technique. University of Texas librarians, rummaging through hundred-year-old records in the school's extensive newspaper collection, claim it's a model for disowning debts—not to mention a literary gem: "She has, without cause, left my habitation and is floating on the ocean of tyrannical extravagance, prone to prodigality, taking a wild-goose chase, and kindling her pipe with the coal of curiosity; to abscond and abolish such insidious, clandestine, noxious, pernicious, diabolical and notorious department, I therefore caution all persons from harboring or trusting her on my account, as I will pay no debts of her contracting from this date, unless compelled by law."

The notice was run in the Brownsville Galaxy, and the Texas Gazette (Austin) in 1830. The Austin editor quoted it under the caption: "March of Intellect."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICE "Soul" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 18. The Golden Text is: "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul" (Psalms 66:16). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Seek the Lord, and his strength: seek his face evermore. . . For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (Psalms 105:4; 107:9). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "We cannot deny that Life is self-sustained, and we should never deny the everlasting harmony of Soul, simply because, to the mortal senses, there is seeming discord. It is our ignorance of God, the divine Principle, which produces apparent discord, and the right understanding of Him restores harmony" (page 390).

HORSERADISH jelly is an unusual extra to serve with meat. It's simple to make and a few glasses belong in every well-planned pantry.

JELLIED HORSERADISH
Three and one-half cups sugar, 1 cup prepared horseradish, 1/2 cup vinegar, green coloring if desired, 1/2 bottle fruit pectin.
Measure sugar, horseradish, and vinegar into large saucepan and mix. Place over hottest fire, and while mixture is coming to boil, add coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. As soon as mixture boils, add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full, rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute. Remove from fire, skim and pour quickly. Paraffin at once.
Spiced jams always brighten up a meat course. Right now, it's time for another spiced grape recipe. Here's a jam with the fresh grape flavor and color preserved by quick cooking. However, care must be taken not to overcook because it jellies upon cooling. Formation of cream of tartar crystals in the jam can be prevented by using slightly under-ripe or just-ripe fruit.

15 Days Shooting Added This Year

Game wardens today called attention to the new game laws, which this year give hunters fifteen more days of waterfowl shooting than has been the case the past few years. The season on ducks and geese will be open from November 2 to December 31, and the bag limit will be 10 ducks per day, no hunter to have over two days limit in his possession at one time. In this connection hunters may keep their game twenty days after the season expires. Another change in the regulations is that shooting may start at sunrise instead of 7 o'clock and continue until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The bag limit on geese has been lowered from 4 to 3, no hunter to have in his possession more than six at one time. Exceptions made on the bag limit for waterfowl are that redheads, buffleheads, ruddy and canvas backs are limited to three per day. Hunters must possess licenses to hunt outside their own county, which cost $2 to hunt all game. All licenses expire August 31. Changes announced in the water fowl laws were made, it was said, because ducks are more plentiful this year. Dove shooting will open September 15 and extend through November 15, in this zone, but north of here in the Young, Throckmorton counties their shooting will open September 1 the bag limit being 15 per day. For all shooting guns still must be plugged with only three shells to be used. Headlines report fireworks over draft bill. The ultra-patriot reminds us that fireworks are to celebrate freedom, not hinder it.
