MOORE about... EASTLAND

by Virgil E. Moore

No one will argue with you if you say Eastland High School's science department could be improved.

In fact—in this day and time when science is stressed so much—we doubt that any high school's science department is just what the teachers and students would desire.

Never-the-less, Eastland High has turned out some outstanding students who have done much to advance the United States' amazing growth. Take for instance W. T. Timmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Timmons. We actually should say Senior Design Engineer W. T. Timmons, for that's his official title at Convair's big aircraft plant at Fort Worth.

Timmons works on Convair's B-58 Hustler, a supersonic jet bomber. The Hustler, termed the "Airplane of the Hour," is America's deadliest aircraft. The Air Force plans to order $700,000,000 worth of the Fort Worth-built planes. The aircraft, according to Timmons, can be modified and kept up to date as the Strategic Air Command's major weapon for seven or eight years.

The plane will soon get a nuclear warhead to be carried in a detachable pod under the plane. Work on the nuclear warhead is being conducted in Fort Worth and at the Air Force's special weapons center at Kirtland Air Force Base near Albuquerque, N. M.

The B-58 has been undergoing a series of tests at Kirtland and Holloman AFB, N. M., in which the detachable pods are dropped from the plane. Timmons says "we've been studying this system for several years."

With poll taxes selling at the slow rate they are it looks as though someone will have to mention a beer election. That seems to be about the only way to get some citizens to vote.

We spotted the little poem below in "The American Press" the other day. Credit was given to the Tucumcari (N.M.) American Leader. We can't say so much for the poem, but we've got a bad cold and the thing sure will fill up some space.

When the even' shade is fallin' at the endin' of the day, And a feller rest from labor, Smokin' at his pipe o'clay; There's nothin' does him so much good, be fortune up or down. As the little country paper, From his ol' home town!

It ain't a thing of beauty, an' its print ain't always clean. But, it straightens out his temper when a feller's feeling mean. It takes the wrinkles off his face, An' it brushes off the frown— That little country paper for the ol' home town!

It tells of all the parties an' the "balls" on punkin row 'Bout who spent Sunday with whose girl an' how the crops'll grow An' it keeps a feller posted 'bout who is up an' down— That little country paper from his ol' home town!

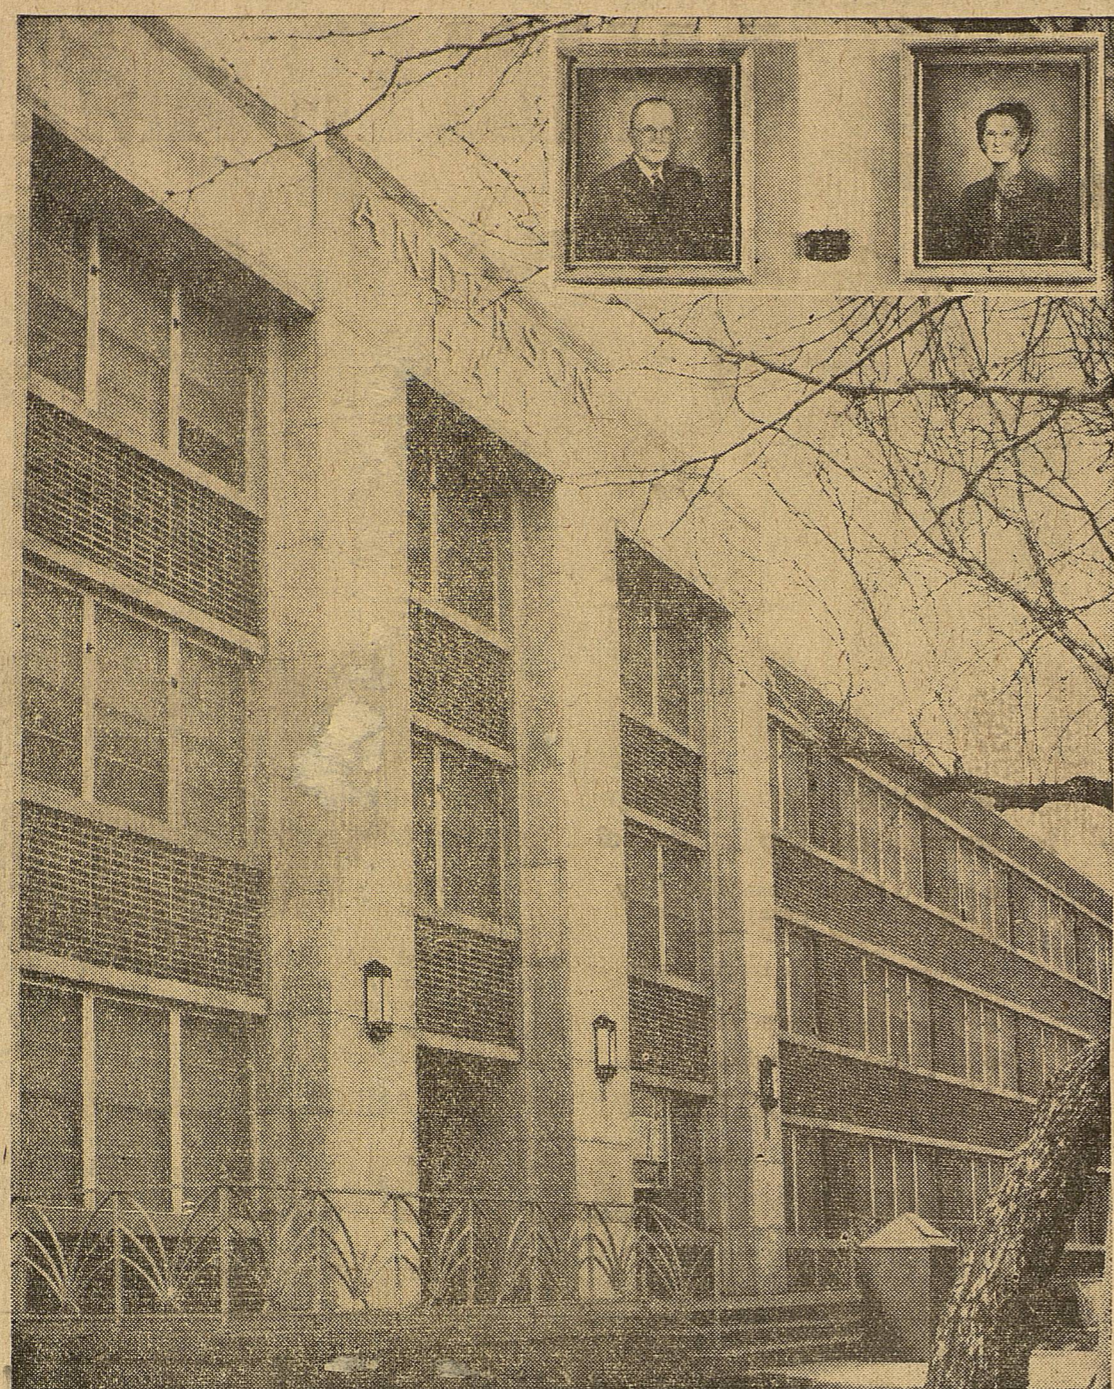

Now, I like to read the dailies an' the picture papers, too. An' at times the latest novels an' some other trash, don't you? that'll brush away a frown. I want the little paper from my ol' home town!

See where the County Sheriff's posse walked off with place honors in the annual Fort Worth rodeo parade. The Sheriff's posse, with some help from the Fosse Anns, now has a full trophy case. In fact, the case—in the courthouse lobby—is so full that the boys are gonna have to stop winning prizes or get a larger trophy case.

Pardon us until Thursday, will you?

County Turkey Industry Million Dollar Business

(Editor's Note: A recent article in "Farm Family" gave a big plug to Eastland County's turkey growers, titled "Eastland County's $1 Million Industry." The article is reprinted below.)

When folks in Eastland County talk turkey, it's not that they're agreeing with each other necessarily. They're actually discussing the two-legged bird—an industry that will gross turkey growers in this West Central Texas county about $1 million this year.

By the close of the year, nearly 225,000 toms and hens—averaging about 20 pounds each—will have been marketed through Ranger or the newly established cooperative at Marlin in Falls County. Earlier in the year growers had hoped to get between 23 and 26 cents a pound, but Eastland County Agent J. M. Cooper now believes the price may be less.

"I'd say 23 cents a pound is a conservative estimate," Cooper added. "One reason the price is off this year is because there are too many turkeys in store."

Although turkey growing is profitable in good years, it is at best a risky business. Not only do growers have to worry about prices from year to year, but they have to keep an eye out for disease. This year, for example, disease killed hundreds of birds.

Another complication has been the heavy rains, which killed thousands of turkeys. One grower, Hardie Tidwell, who operates a 1000 acre farm between Desdemona and Ranger, returned from a trip and found 2000 young turkeys had gotten wet and died during a heavy rainstorm.

"But that's the turkey business," Tidwell said. "Just what is the turkey business? First, let's look at Eastland County as a turkey growing area, and then at two turkey ranches for a better understanding of problems and profits."

County Agent Cooper pointed out several things that make the area excellent for turkey growing. "The climate is good and we don't get much dew," he said.

"Feed companies have also contributed much to the growth in suggesting feeding management. They also helped out financially when tight years came along."

Cooper said that the Central Texas Turkey Growers Association, which was founded in 1952, has done much for the industry. "It's given help in ways you can't express. The members meet once a month and discuss mutual problems. They give aid to each other when disease hits and suggest better management methods when the need arises."

The climate County Agent Cooper referred to earlier is a semi-dry one. Eastland County is as close to West Texas as you can get without being there. Normal years are dry, with an average yearly rainfall of a little over 27 inches. Turkeys like this, being susceptible to heavy rains such as those which battered this area this spring.

Blevins Urges Payment of Poll Tax by Friday

County Democratic Chairman Jay Blevins today joined those urging local citizens to pay their poll tax before the Friday deadline.

Blevins said, with the deadline just three days away, he wanted to state three facts concerning voting and poll tax payment that have been misunderstood:

1. Sworn statements — It is no longer required that a sworn statement accompany a poll tax payment made by mail; that is, it is not necessary that the poll tax be notarized.

2. The blind, deaf and dumb; the permanently disabled; those who have lost a hand or foot; and veterans with 40 percent or more disability are no longer exempt from the payment of poll tax. They must pay the $1.00 state levy—that part of the poll tax going into the state school fund. However, a county may exempt such persons from paying the 75-cent part of the poll tax.

3. Members of the Armed Forces may now vote, but only in the county of residence prior to entering their present terms of service.

Temperatures, ranging on the average from 44 degrees in January to 83 in July, are generally favorable to turkey growing. Another advantage is the rolling terrain and sandy soil, which drains well when rainfall is not too severe.

Two 4-H Club turkey programs also help keep the young folks interested in the traditional Thanksgiving bird. One is the Kincaid Turkey Program, directed by the county agent's office. This year the Kincaid program gave 96 poults each to 14 boys and girls.

The other program, sponsored by Sears, Roebuck & Company, gives three boys 60 turkey poults each. Again supervision is under county agent Cooper and Assistant County Agent Curtis Boase. One of the rules is that boys and girls participating in the program must show their turkeys at the county and state fairs, if the birds can qualify.

Don Kincaid, who operates a turkey farm near Cisco, is one of the growers who hope that programs such as these will continue to keep the turkey industry thriving in Eastland County. And if the industry can continue the pattern set in the last seven years, when the business tripled in size, the prospects appear bright.

But with the silver lining, there are also the numerous problems which make turkey growing a risky business. One of the earliest problems, naturally, is hatchery sanitation. Hardie Tidwell outlines his disease prevention program as a two-step process:

1. Eggs are dipped in chemical solution to get bacteria off the shell.

2. As the eggs are hatching, they are fumigated with a formaldehyde and permanganate solution as a disease killer and preventer.

"This gives the poults a good start and helps keep the disease in your flock at a minimum," Tidwell pointed out.

Kincaid's operation is a little different since he is not only raising turkeys himself, but is in the hatchery business with his father, Alvin, and brothers, Aubrey and (Continued on Page Two)

County Accepts Low Bid On Hospital Job

Ranchers Seek Aid To Maintain Ranger

Eastland County Commissioners Monday accepted a low bid of $1920 to paint Ranger General Hospital.

Five bids were entered, and successful bidder was Monroe Walker. The amount of the bid was for labor only. The County will purchase all paint and other needed supplies.

Commissioners also took under study a request made by Sam Kimmell of Cisco that the county donate $50 monthly to the West Texas Ranchers Association to help pay the cost of hiring a special ranger. Kimmell said the group will ask five other counties to do the same. The Association has 175 members in the five county area. Commissioners said they would have to find out if such a donation could be legally made.

Pioneer of Area Buried Saturday In Eastland

Mrs. Ruth Horton, 83, was buried in Eastland Cemetery Saturday afternoon with Joel Horton, Mrs. Horton's grandson who is a Church of Christ minister in Houston, and Rev. Richard Smith, pastor of the Eastland First Methodist Church, officiating at graveside services.

She was buried in the same lot with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pettit Sr.

Mrs. Horton was born in Missouri, but came to Ohio with her parents in a covered wagon in 1883 and spent most of her childhood on their ranch north of Olney. She married the late Joel Horton in 1891. He was a teacher. They later lived in Rising Star, Desdemona, Eastland and Ranger, where Mr. Horton was superintendent of schools.

Mr. Horton died in 1915 and Mrs. Horton moved to Denton. She is survived by a son, Chas. of Corpus Christi; two daughters, Lucile and Helen, both of Dallas; a brother, Chas. Pettit of Dallas; two sisters, Mrs. H. Davenport of Brownsville, and Mrs. Ed Castleberry of Eastland; two grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

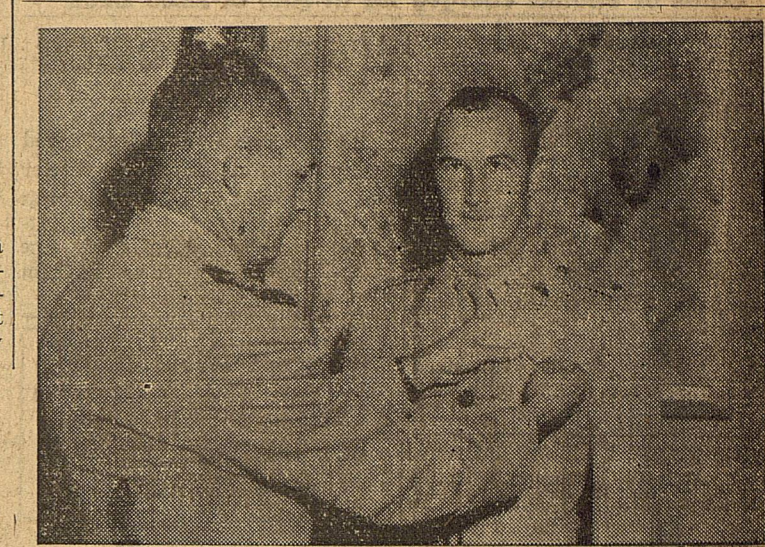

Services were held at 10 a.m. Saturday morning in Dallas. Mrs. Horton was a member of the Highland Park Methodist Church.

NEED TITLE AND RECEIPT

It's Time Again To Register Car

When you go to register your car this year take your title and last year's license receipt. That's the advice of Mrs. Roberta Grisham of the County Tax Assessor-Collector's office. Mrs. Grisham pointed out that a new law requires the tax collector to examine both the title and the license receipt of an automobile before registering it for 1958 and issuing license plates.

"And of course you better take along a little more money with you too. Licensing fees have also been hiked 10 percent across the board."

Large signs have been placed in the office of the tax collector reminding citizens of the law requiring an examination of title and license receipts. The posters says, "Do not ask your tax collector to violate the law."

Eastland County will have two different prefixes this year. Starting with "D" license plates will be issued from 10 through 149. Then a new prefix, "DH" will be issued. Numbering will start at 650.

Below is a chart showing what it will cost you to register your vehicle this year:

Go to Church Sunday

By REV. ROY M. TURNER, First Christian Church, Pastor

Every human heart hungers for fellowship. Nothing except fellowship, the association of spirit with spirit, will satisfy this hunger. The church provides a wholesome environment in which enriching fellowship on a high plane may be experienced by church members. Christians are comrades of the way; they are fellows on the road to God; they have fellowship in achievement and failure, in joy and sorrow. They cannot bear to live without God, without Christ, or without one another. There is strength, which is more than human, in this fellowship.

The fellowship of Christians generates power that makes for justice, understanding, good will, and growth in the lives of men and peoples. A fellowship that produces injustice cannot last. It is not possible," remarked Demosthenes, "to found a lasting power upon justice, perjury, and treachery."

Turkey-

Robert. He points out that incubators are fumigated before the trays of eggs are placed in them. The eggs, too, are dipped in solution to insure cleanliness.

Culling poults before the young birds are sold or turned into the brooder houses is another important step. Tidwell culls his poults when they are six hours old, primarily to remove any infectious diseases. He also culls out deformed or otherwise unsuitable birds.

Since the Kincaids are also in the hatchery business, they must select 10,000 breeder hens to supply eggs. Selection is made when the birds are 20 to 24 weeks old and is a four-step process:

1. No hens are selected from flocks with any disease. Perfect health records are required.
2. Blood samples are drawn from those selected.
3. Hens are banded with numbers and blood samples are sent to labs at Stephenville or Texas A & M College for testing.
4. Consideration is given breast width, height, weight, and other characteristics that might predict the turkey's offspring.

Disease is always a major hazard in turkey raising. One of the Eastland County 4-H Club boys was headed for a fine turkey season when botulism hit his flock. In no time, he lost over half his birds.

Botulism is a food poisoning the turkeys get when they eat decayed matter.

Hardie Tidwell had a round of with his flock this year, too. "This was a bad year for botulism because of the rain," Tidwell said. "Brush grew fast and feed would get wet, decay, and then be eaten by the turkeys." He prescribed permanganate and potassium as a remedy.

Hexamitiasis, or "hex," is another killer among turkey diseases. It is a disease of the lower intestine. Tidwell has found that bluestone and vinegar administered for seven days, followed by three days of fresh water, then five more of bluestone and vinegar, generally cure the birds.

Cannibalism is another big problem, particularly when the turkeys are put on the range after they're eight weeks old.

Kincaid keeps his birds separated in pens on his farm while Tidwell uses his feeder method of separation. The feeder method is initiated when the flock is first put to range. Feed bins are lined up and the turkeys select one to eat from. The bins are then moved to various scattered locations and the turkeys go with their particular feed bin.

The welfare of the turkeys is of utmost importance. Tidwell, for example, even uses an air-conditioned panel truck and station wagon to deliver poults to customers.

"Turkeys can't stand extreme heat when bunched close together," he explains. "The air conditioning is just added insurance that they will be in good condition when they arrive."

The turkey grower can begin to get some idea of his expected profit only when he sees how many birds he will have.

An average bookkeeping record looks something like this: it costs 12 cents a pound in feed, three cents a pound for keep as a poult, and two cents per pound for brooding, medication, and labor. That's a total of 17 cents per pound per turkey by market time. Last year, market prices ranged between 23 and 26 cents per pound.

It is important to know also just when to market turkeys in order to get maximum weight at minimum cost. Tidwell markets his hens at 22 weeks and toms at 24. Kincaid, who raises white turkeys for broiling, puts his on the market at 26 weeks.

Said Tidwell: "If we keep our bronze-type turkeys too long, it hurts our pocket book. After this age (22 to 24 weeks) it takes eight or nine pounds of feed for each pound of meat gained. To make turkeys pay their board and room, you need to get one pound of meat for every four pounds of feed."

But in the end, as the demand goes so goes the market price. And, as County Agent Cooper is quick to point out, "Next year may be another premium year, and that's what keeps the boys in business."

If a church is to fulfill its function it cannot have a grandstand filled with quarterbacks. Membership in a church means becoming involved in the various types of experiences that the church provides. Each person must consider himself able to make a vital contribution as a participating member.

The quest for God has ever been the greatest quest for man. Times will come when man's consciousness of God grows dim and uncertain. As man worships he is renewing his quest until he rediscovers the God who is always trying to find him.

Christians are Disciples, or learners, of Jesus. They are attentive to his voice; they hang on his words. They look for the source of his understanding and his courage. They accept his way of life and give themselves to it.

Christians enjoy the fellowship of working together in a worthy enterprise. A Christian is a worker for Christ; if he is not, he is nothing. A Christian works gratefully, not grudgingly; he works as a man, not as a machine, he works interestedly, mechanically. A Christian works for God and for men, not selfishly for himself and himself alone.
