THIS COULD BE YOUR STORY

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

All characters, organizations and incidents of this serial are entirely fictitious.

YESTERDAY, Joe is still in a critical condition, may have to undergo an operation. Worried and weary after her visit to the hospital, Sue Mary reads of federal agents hunting down subversive elements. She hurries to the federal building, tells her story to the department chief. He tells her not to worry, to go through with plans to meet Nick.

SUE MARY WINS

CHAPTER XXV

THE door to the law office was partly open. Sue Mary pushed it wide, stepping in to the dim light. She started back in surprise as Nick rose from a chair and came toward her. She had hoped to be there ahead of him. She wondered how he had come in, but he had no time to puzzle that out. He was beside her before she could speak. He took her in his arms, looked into her face.

"Why—Nick—you're here early," she said. "Not too early. A man in love doesn't like to wait." He held her tighter and kissed her long while he tried to push him away.

"No, Nick. No, please. You—you said you wanted to talk to me." "We can always talk," he said, kissing her again. She wanted to run; to run anywhere; get away from Nick, from his lips, his arms. She was terrified, but she had to stay. He took her hand and led her to the office.

"We shouldn't be here," she whispered, but he only smiled. It was then that Vera came out of old Ross Clark's office.

"So—she did come," she said, looking at Sue Mary in her usual, poised, assured manner. "Well, now we can call it a night." Sue Mary sat down suddenly, her legs refused to hold her up and again she felt panic taking control of her. She wasn't alone.

Mr. Flanagan and his men could be here. But were they? She wondered if they were here now. How much had they seen and heard? She felt enough confidence in Flanagan and his men to believe they controlled the situation. Yet sitting with Nick was nerve-wracking enough.

VERA was stuffing some papers into her bag. "Let's go. She says—that is unless she's a comest half-wit." Sue Mary felt feminine indignation rising within her. "Half-wit?" she repeated angrily. "You can't do anything about it."

now," Vera told her calmly. "I knew you saw too much the other night when I was here. The only way to keep you from talking—just in case you did understand what was going on—was to make you a partner. That's why you're here tonight."

"So you are in: in on whatever goes on here, and you hadn't better talk unless you want to blow yourself right out of a job and into plenty of trouble. You just do as we say and everything will be all right. Won't it, Nick?"

But Nick wasn't looking at Vera. His gaze was on Sue Mary. "We can talk later," he said to Vera without turning toward her. "If you've got the stuff you'd better get going. Someone might come. We've been lucky so far."

"All right, let's go then." "I'll come down in a minute," he said. "What's stopping you from coming now?"

He turned to her abruptly. "Maybe I want to say something to Sue Mary."

"Well, you can say it at the apartment. If it isn't safe for me to stay here, then it isn't safe for either of you." Vera's briskeness wasn't so emphatic.

"I said I'd be along in a minute. Start down. I'll meet you in the lobby."

Vera walked out and Nick waited a moment. Then he turned to Sue Mary and drew her to him. "Kiss me," he told her. "Nothing's going to happen to you. Stop trembling. You're in this, but you belong to me and we're going to come out ahead. Right on the top."

"No, Nick. Let me go." His lips were on hers again for an endless eternity. Vera's voice, furious and cold, broke them apart.

"So—that's it. You had to talk to her. Natalie was right. You're in love with the little fool." Her voice rose to a high key. "You've used me—just as you used her. Maybe she isn't the only fool. But you won't get away with it this time, Nick. Not as far as I'm concerned anyway. I'll talk—I'll talk."

"That's right, lady, you're going to talk. And soon."

NICK whirled around at the sound of the strange voice. Sue Mary saw Flanagan in the doorway, smiling. Other men were crowding through, behind him. One came out of Ross Clark's office. Several had guns.

"What the—?" Nick muttered. Vera started for the door, but an agent stopped her, motioned her back into the center of the room. "Take the two of them along," Flanagan ordered. "And get those papers away from her. There won't be any airport site announcement tomorrow. I've settled that deal already after talking to young Clark."

"Now, maybe, good citizen Nicky can tell us about the labor trouble at Smithson—as well as a lot of other things we've been wondering about."

They were finally gone, Vera berating Nick and Nick trying desperately to hush her angry flow of words.

"Nice people," Flanagan said to Sue Mary. "I'm sorry you had to go through this, but it seemed the safest way. Get them here as though nothing was going to happen and then nab them."

"You've helped us plenty. Most people want to help these days, but too many of them let their imaginations run wild. But this—this was the real thing. You've done your part tonight."

She felt a glow of gratitude, but her eyes were on the clock. She wanted to get to the hospital. They might be operating on Joe even now.

"Sure, I know," Flanagan was saying. "You're worried about the boy friend. Well, get along. I'll put you in a cab. I have a hunch you're going to find everything all right. You deserve to have it that way."

SUE MARY didn't remember much about the ride. She walked down the corridor to Joe's room. Suppose it was empty! Suppose he had gone to the operating room never to return! She met the nurse at the door.

"Tell me—is he—?" "He's fine. They won't have to operate. It will be a tough struggle back, but he's out of danger. And you can go in—just a second, though."

A second—it was a whole lifetime. The beginning of a new life, she thought, standing by Joe's bed watching his regular breathing, touching his helpless hand. It was a new life and no matter what happened around them, no matter what problems arose in this strange, confused world they would face them together.

The curtains moved gently in the breeze and a faint sound of music came from a radio in another wing of the building. It was midnight and a station was signing off. "God bless America—"

She leaned over and kissed Joe's lips. THE END

River Speedboat Guarding Prisoners

By United Press BATON ROUGE, La.—State

police and prison authorities are planning to end quickly any future breaks from the Angola state penitentiary. The new system calls for the immediate installation of primary and secondary lines around the 25,000-acre penal farm in event of a break. Flashes will be sent to state police district commanders, who will leave at once with picked squads for prearranged stations in the lines. Guards then will drive the fugitives from their hiding places. In addition, prison authorities will use speed boats to patrol the Mississippi river, which forms part of the prison farm's boundary.

Singapore Censors Faced With Problem

By United Press SINGAPORE.—Postal censors in Singapore work in 41 languages—22 European and 19 Asiatic. The languages of the Far East are most widely represented among the staff which censors correspondence from the cosmopolitan community of the Malays. Those most used are Malay, Chinese, Japanese, Javanese, languages of the Philippines and Arabic. The numerous Indian dialects have created special problems for the censors. Take a BIG look at the BIG new FORD!

THE 1941 Ford is the biggest car that ever rolled off the assembly line of the world-famous Rouge Plant! Not just a new front end—but a completely new body! Built on a longer wheelbase. New wide doors. Semi-concealed running boards. As much as seven inches added seating width inside! Windshield and windows so broad and deep they give as much as 33% more glass area. When you've seen its size and admired its beauty—take the new "boulevard" ride in this new Ford. Step away faster, with improved acceleration. A newly designed stabilizer eases steering... helps the ride... maintains balance on the curves. New soft springs work more slowly, gently. Improved shock absorbers smooth the going! Only the Ford way of doing business could provide so much comfort, reliability and economy at low Ford prices. Any Ford dealer will be proud to show you this big car. Then see how little it costs to trade your present car. No matter how you look at it—the 1941 Ford means a good deal!

THE GREAT FORD ROUGE PLANT provides the finest manufacturing facilities in the world. Here the genius and experience of Henry Ford, plus the efficiency of Ford engineers, produce quality cars in huge volume to sell at a low price with small profit—so that when you buy a Ford car, you get value far above the price you pay!

Get the facts and you'll get a FORD!

Luke's Gospel Is More Colorful Than Mark's, but Not as Direct, or Simple

Text: Luke 1:1-4; Acts 1:1; Colossians 4:14; II Timothy 4:11a

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

FROM a quarter's lesson in studies with the poets and philosophers, we turn again to studies in "The Universal Gospel," based on the Gospel of Luke. These studies will extend over a six-month course.
 The Gospel of Luke was not, as the writer indicates, the first of the Gospels to be written. As Luke himself states, there had been others who had "drawn up a narrative concerning those matters which have been fulfilled among us" and the things that had been preserved by these writers from eye-witnesses.
 Why, then, did Luke undertake to write it? Partly because he had the advantage of all these records and could be an editor and compiler in a way in which those who first set down the narrative could not be.

Luke was a highly skilled writer, as the descriptive passages of his Gospel show and as many vivid pages in the Book of Acts, which he also wrote, make clear. He may have had the belief that he was in a position to tell a fuller and more complete story, and that he could tell it with more color and vividness than his predecessors.

There is about his Gospel a lack of the directness and simplicity that characterizes the Gospel of St. Mark, but Luke's story is fuller and more elaborate. We are fortunate in having more than one Gospel record in the New Testament.
 Each Gospel writer supplements the others, and it is in reading them all that we get the full impression of the glorious events and an adequate conception of the Gospel that they reveal.
 It is interesting to study and compare the four Gospels, and in the course of these lessons it will be instructive to consider how much Luke publishes that the others do not. His Gospel is much fuller, for instance, concerning the early events in the life of Jesus as it is fuller in the story of the resurrection and post-resurrection experiences.
 Who was Luke? We do not know a great deal about him, except that he was a physician, the friend and, for a time, the companion of Paul. He was evidently a faithful companion, for while he is mentioned in the portion of our letter from Colossians along with Demas, there is a later reference to Demas as having forsaken Paul, although he says that Luke is still with him.

There is a note of steadfastness in Luke's Gospel and in the Book of the Acts. He sees events always in their largeness and full significance. There is in all that he writes adequate perspective.
 He is not simply the historian, writing down cold facts; he is the earnest disciple, deeply moved by these facts, with a sense of the reality and power of the Gospel that his pages are recording.
 Luke's Gospel was written for his friend, Theophilus, who may have been in Luke's mind the figure for any "lover of God" which the name Theophilus implies. In any case, Luke wrote for many millions more readers than he had in mind, and few writings have so enriched the world as has his Gospel.

Big Tire Contract Given Seiberling Rubber Company

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 3.—The Seiberling Rubber Company today announced receipt of a contract from the White Motor Company to supply Bullet Seal Tubes and Mud and Snow Tires for use on vehicles being manufactured for the mobile units of the United States Army.
 Totalling more than $500,000, the award represents one of the largest single orders ever received by the Seiberling Company.
 In announcing the award, J. Penfield Seiberling, company president, pointed out that it comes at the time of year when replacement tire production normally is at low ebb. For that reason, while the contract will afford steadier employment for Seiberling workers, no particular personnel or plant expansion will be necessary.
 The Jim Horton Tire Service of Eastland is the local distributor for Seiberling tires in this section.
 Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Chaney have gone on a vacation which will take them to Los Angeles.
