If You Haven't $375, Skip This

It's easy to give the little woman a thrill this Christmas. All you need is a bankroll. Then give her one of these beautiful New York's jewelers designed. The diamond necklace costs $25,000; the bracelet, $10,700. The diamond ring-watch comes for pin money: $375.

Conservation District Voting Places are Listed

The election to determine whether the Upper Leon Soil Conservation District shall be formed will be held on Saturday, December 14, 1940. The district includes parts of Comanche and Erath Counties and all of Eastland County except that part lying East of the Jake Hammond Railroad and that part of Eastland County lying north of the Base Line Road and west of the Canyon Road.

CORPUS CHRISTI NAVAL AIR BASE RISES SWIFTLY

By JIM KARR United Press Staff Correspondent CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas.—The navy has come to the Texas coast, and Corpus Christi is on top of a mile-high boom that may double its population of 50,000. The expansion was set off by a $25,000,000 appropriation to build a naval air training base at Flour Bluff, 12 miles southeast of Corpus Christi.

Cartography Before the Warhorse

Il Duce made an embarrassing mistake of putting his cartographers ahead of the Italian warhorse when he ordered this huge map displayed in Rome's Piazza Coenna at beginning of the invasion of Greece. It shows Greece conquered, already incorporated into Greater Italy.

NAVAL VICTORIES ARE CLAIMED BY THREE OF BELLIGERENT NATIONS

Italy rushed reinforcements to the Albanian front today as both Axis and Great Britain claimed important victories in sea and air fighting from the Mediterranean Sea to the Irish Coast. While the Nazi bombers hammered at Liverpool and the Royal Air Force attacked the industrial section of the Ruhr Valley, there were naval engagements in the English Channel and in the Mediterranean Sea with naval bombers participating.

'Kick Me!' Say American Exporters

The fellow who goes around on April Fools' Day with a sign pinned to his coat-tail reading "Kick Me!" is simply an innocent victim. When he finds out about it, he removes the sign.

We hope American exporters to Mexico and Central and South America will prove equally smart when they fully realize the extent to which they have been inviting the same kind of treatment—and providing a nice heavy shoe for the kicker, to boot.

Recent scanning of American trade in Mexico shows that American exporters are actually helping to pay the bill for Nazi penetration in that country.

Like this: An American firm wishing to sell in Mexico turns to a well-established firm as distributor. It does not realize it, but that firm is German, run perhaps by naturalized Germans maintaining that curious dual citizenship which is one of the current German contributions to honesty and candor. The more American goods sold by the German jobber, the more commissions he has to contribute to Nazi work in Mexico—and if he is remotely German, he contributes; the Gestapo or the consul see to that.

Further, advertising money spent in such countries by American firms is often doled out through German-controlled advertising firms or managers, who see to it that only papers favorable to the Axis receive the money, while papers devoted to freedom strive for lack of advertising.

Since this loop-hole in American export policy was revealed as applied to Mexico, it has cropped up in Bolivia and other countries, so it is fair to assume that it is general practice in the countries to the south.

There is no good reason why firms in those countries should not favor with their advertising such papers as are favorable to them, and no reason why they should not "kick back" to the Nazi organization profits made from the sale of Nazi goods.

But it goes against the grain to see commissions paid on the sale of American goods used by Nazi agents to undercut the increasing good-will toward the United States, and to see American advertising appropriations shunted by Nazi agents into Axis-favoring papers while papers devoted to democracy starve.

American business is not silly. As soon as it clearly sees the "Kick Me!" sign it has been wearing when it travels south, it is pretty sure to tear it off and see to it that there is any kicking done it is wearing good stout shoes itself.

Some folks can't figure out why people with less sense than they have get along much better.

A Coldwater, Mich., stockbuyer was trampled by a bull. And all he wanted to do was send the animal to the slaughter house.

Society, Club and Church Notes

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK AT MORNING SERVICE

Dr. Glen Walker, Baptist Missionary just returned from Niagara, will be speaker at the morning services, 10 a. m., Sunday, December 1, at the Baptist church it was announced today.

Dr. Walker will lecture on work in a leper colony located in the Niagara territory in which he worked. Dr. Walker has spent many years in Africa, it is said, and his experiences in work in leper colonies and in the territory are of great interest and his lecture will be one of much interest to his audience.

BOOK REVIEW HEARD AT CLUB MEET

Mrs. K. K. McElroy gave a splendid review of Lella Warren's "Foundation Stone," the book of the month and a best seller, at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Junior Las Leñas Club. Miss Margaret Bell Wynne was leader for the program and presented Mrs. McElroy. Mrs. A. J. Taylor, president, presided over the business session.

"Foundation Stone," which was very cleverly and entertainingly given by Mrs. McElroy, relates the happenings of a large family through generations.

A musical program was given by Miss Ruth Ella Meek, pianist. Present: Misses Maynel Edmondson, Rama Barber, Sybil Holder, Frances Harris, Ruth Meek, Faye Warren, Mary Lou Harbin, Margaret Wynne, Lorene Davidson and Mmes. A. J. Taylor, Roy Gallagher, Howard Miller.

ENTERTAIN WITH THANKSGIVING DINNER

The Sew and Sew Club entertained their husbands Friday with a Thanksgiving supper at the home of Mrs. C. L. Fields, 103 W. Valley.

Traditional Thanksgiving dinner of turkey with all the trimmings, and coffee was served, after which tables were arranged for "42." Partners were selected by matching printed characters. Toast buttered pecans and mints were served throughout the evening.

Decorations of yellow pumpkins and autumn foliage were used to further carry the old-fashioned Thanksgiving motif.

Present: Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Pate, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Cawley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lusk, Mr. and Mrs. Burl Kellett, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Lanier, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Horn, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Hunt.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION TOPIC FOR PARENT-TEACHER MEET

The members of South Ward Parent-Teacher Association met Tuesday afternoon at the school for monthly session with a program on Practical Education.

Henry Pullman, Post Commander Dulin-Daniels Post, American Legion, presented the school with a United States flag.

During the business meeting treasurer report was heard given by Mrs. P. M. Bumpass. Mrs. H. H. Durham reported on new books purchased by South Ward, and a report on the sale of subscription to Holland Magazine was given by Mrs. Gerald Wingate.

The association voted to donate a box of food and clothing, and money, through the Civic League Christmas Cheer project, to a needy family in Eastland.

The December meeting will be on the 17th with a Christmas party scheduled for that time, it was announced Tuesday. Each member is requested to bring a gift to exchange.

In observance of American Education Week, and National Book Week, a program depicting these was heard. Mrs. Donna Reed spoke on Practical Education, and Educational Toys were shown by Miss Adele Kuykendall and Mr. Bernard.

"Thanksgiving Cheer," a reading, was given by Donald Ray Truly. Billy Gene Ashley told of "One Thing I'm Thankful For." "Thankful for the Flag" was read by Gene Frank Eldridge. Shirley Ann Hightower gave the reading, "What Mother Said."

Present: Mmes. A. K. Garrett, A. E. Ashley, W. O. Angus, Joe Stephen, G. Wingate, G. H. Kinard, Pat Ross, H. Rhinart, Guy Robinson, Joe Bailey, W. A. Tyson, Virgil Brown, C. E. Moore, C. L. MARTHA DORCAS CLASS REPORT

endance, despite the rain. Mrs. C. W. Young led song service with song, "I Love to Tell the Story," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. George Lane. Mrs. Ed Sparr had charge of the short business session.

Mrs. W. P. Leslie brought the lesson, subject, "The Parable of the Sower." Mrs. Mac O'Neal acted as secretary pro-tem. Mrs. Geo. Brogdon, reporter pro-tem.

The class was glad to learn that Miss Marie Hayslip, who was badly burned in Fort Worth, is doing nicely. Miss Hayslip is being sponsored by the class in the Methodist Hospital, training as a nurse.

Present: Mmes. B. O. Harrell, Geo. Lane, C. W. Young, Ed Sparr, Lucille Brown, W. P. Leslie, M. B. Titsworth, W. H. Davidson, W. H. Mullings, Clint Jones, Herman Hague, Gene Ashley, A. A. Edmondson, Mas O'Neal, and Geo. Brogdon.

The class was glad to welcome as a visitor, Mrs. Fred Hale, of Lubbock.

MARTHA DORCAS CLASS TO MEET

Martha Dorcas Class of First Methodist Church will meet in regular session Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. All members cordially invited to attend.

SERIAL STORY

DUDE COLLEGE

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, When Wesley's stammered explanations fail to explain anything, Ronnie rushes him away, leaving Andre and Lona together. Carefully Andre reveals the ring that is to identify him to his confederate, Lona glances at them turns on him, furiously. "Why did you delay? The high ones demand action."

WESLEY EXPLAINS

CHAPTER XI

THEY climbed the stone stair with the beautiful wrought iron railing, passed through the gymnasium balcony and out an arched door onto the roof of another arched colonnade such as connected the Pueblo University buildings around a large patio. The roof here made a promenade with a knee-high rail, and Andre Lona Montoya to a moon shadow cast by a high, rustling palm tree.

She put aside her crutch now because they were quite alone. Music from the dance floor seeped out and up to them suggesting a subtle background for romance, but only Andre responded to its suggestion. He looked at Lona with a sudden amused, half-smirking smile.

"You're beautiful when you are angry," he informed her.

"Did you come here on business or on pleasure?" Her voice was snappish. "You have taken too many drinks already tonight."

"Oh, take it easy, kid. I think we could get along fine!" He fingered her arm, up and down. "Would you like a drink yourself? Now?"

"I am being paid to do a job and you are being paid to do a job, Mr. Girardeau. And we both know we can be found murdered if we fail. Why do I have to remind you of that?"

Andre laughed. "This isn't the moment for business! This is a lovely autumn evening! Look at the stars, my dear."

"I am not your dear!"

He smiled genially at her. He had been walking slowly, with an arm around her as if in deference to her sprained ankle, which both knew was pretense. He held her a little closer, noting—with satisfaction—that she did not resist, despite her words. He wanted her to feel his strong arm.

"Like it out here?" He purred that ever so intimately. "Like me?"

She didn't answer.

But she sat on the low railing, 20 feet above the patio grass, and listened while he paid her numerous compliments. It was exceedingly easy to listen to suave Andre Girardeau. His technique was a studied one that he had used many times before.

THE patio there was really a half-acre courtyard, landscaped with grass as rich as a golf green, with shrubs that banked impressively against the tan buildings, with tall curved palms and with vines that somehow managed to bedeck themselves with flowers even in fall. It had been an obvious place for Ronica Bailey to lead her distressed professor friend when she wanted privacy. They had found a rustic bench beside a trickling fountain, and Ronica was sitting in the dim moonlight, hands behind her neck and head back so that she looked up at him. She was Beauty itself in this perfect setting, but Wesley was too upset to observe such things now.

"Stand if you prefer, Wes. But please start talking."

"I, uh, Ronica, I—" He took out his handkerchief to mop his chin, although he could hardly have been perspiring.

"Yes?" she encouraged. "We are out here to explain things. Aren't we?"

"Quite so. I mean—yes, Ronica!" He sat down beside her. "I hope you will not stay angry at me. I—I came to your home. But your father said—he said that this, uh, Girardeau was taking you to the dance, and Girardeau was just ahead of me."

Ronica's knees were crossed and she was swinging one very shapely lower limb as if to express impatience.

"On the contrary, Wes, you arrived just ahead of Andre. He even ran into your car, Daddy said. He had been drinking. You could have come in first. Besides, I don't care what Daddy told you. He's an old dear, but you didn't have to listen to him. You made the date with me, not with him!"

"You—you really would have gone to the dance with me? Me?" Wesley held out a hand as if in supplication.

"Certainly!"

He looked away, contrite. Ronica sensed his mood.

"Wes," she resumed, kindly, "why did you think I might not? Didn't you—believe me?"

He nodded. "At first. But—oh, goodness, Ronica, you really are a lady in every way! To be very frank, I was scared. I, uh, have not had many dates. Not in years. I have but little money, whereas you, the Baileys, and this Girardeau—"

He paused, still looking off.

"I think I understand, Wes. But it's foolish, I mean, unfair."

"I know. But this Girardeau mistook me for a servant and said so. I was trying to apologize for any car damage, when—"

He paused, still looking off.

UNDER the spell of her kindness there the young professor talked himself out. He told more than he had meant to, really; more of his inner feelings.

But he found this good, and it somehow warmed him to Ronica Bailey more than ever, although to keep from revealing this new warmth of feeling he presently lapsed back into a formal manner and tone. Then they had talked for perhaps half an hour Ronica stood up.

"I'm so happy we understand each other," she said, "and I think I shall go explain more to Andre now."

"No," said Wes, with sudden determination. "I shall go myself. I—I wish to demonstrate that I am not, uh, afraid of him. Not awed."

He left her at once. She was smiling at his boyish way, which could be in such contrast to Wesley York, the professor. She sat down again to wait, and with arms still behind her head she gazed at the gymnasium with its lights inside and at the arched colonnade bathed in moon glow.

Her attention was attracted by two figures on the colonnade; man and girl, on the roof. Apparently the girl was sitting, the man standing over her.

Ronica leaned forward, straining to see. The two on the roof were no more than black forms, not quite clear even in silhouette. Curious, she strolled over toward the colonnade to stare upward, and began to hear talking although words were indistinguishable in the music from the dance floor.

THEN all at once a door from the gymnasium balcony opened and a Wesley stood in unmistakable outline up there. He saw the two figures at once and hastened to them and spoke.

"I beg pardon, but this is hardly a safe place for—"

"You again, eh?" said a voice, unmistakably Andre's. "I suppose you'd prefer to kiss her yourself!"

Ronica saw the dark shadows merge, heard the sound of a blow. And then—

Somebody toppled over the low roof railing!

Quite involuntarily, Ronica screamed.
