PLANE CARRIER FOR TANK WAS AMERICAN IDEA

By Bernard Crandell
 United Press Staff Correspondent
DETROIT—Transporting army tanks by airplanes, first practiced by the Germans in the invasion of Crete, was an idea conceived more than eight years ago by J. Walter Christie, inventor of tanks during the World War.
 In 1932, Christie developed a 5 1/2-ton tank adapted for transport by special bombing plane to a point that could not otherwise be reached, either because of a limited amount of time or nature of the terrain.
 This small tank had a flying attachment whereby it could be picked up by the plane. The caterpillar tread was to have substituted for the bomber's landing gear both on the take-off and landing. With caterpillar tread the tank could travel 62 miles an hour, and with the tread taken off its eight dual wheels, could travel 100 miles an hour. Each wheel was independently sprung on a patented coil spring arrangement.
 Christie developed the experimental machine at the U. S. Tank Layer Corporation at Lincoln, N. J. It was powered by a 400-horsepower engine perfected by Harry Miller, racing car engineer.
 So far as is known, the tank never was taken into the air, but the idea presumably was successfully carried out by the German Army. Bombers now are large enough to take a small tank with the plane.

MARS RETRACES STEPS HE TRAVELED CENTURIES AGO OVER CRETE, CYPRUS, RHODES

By ROBERT L. FREY
 United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, June 13.—There are parts of the world to which history returns again and again. Such are the islands of Crete, Cyprus and Rhodes in the eastern Mediterranean.
 Since the beginning of recorded history these three have never for long been out of the current of world affairs. Now the struggle for control of the Mediterranean once more has turned the spotlight on them.
 The city of Candia in Crete, over which the Germans and British fought so bitterly, is near the site of ancient Knossos, said to have been the first large city of Europe. Semi-legendary king of Crete was Minos, son of Zeus, first of the Olympian gods.
 Candia originally was a fortress built by the Saracens in the 9th century when the island became a nest of pirates and a great slave mart. Later the Venetians made Candia capital of the island. The Turks and Egyptians successively held Crete until it was turned over to Greece in 1913.
 From Crete Cyprus is the stepping stone to Syria and British Palestine, as it was in the Middle Ages a jumping off place for the Crusaders on their way to Jerusalem. For three centuries the island was ruled by a dynasty stemming from a Crusader, Guy de Lusignan. Both the Knights Templars and Knights of St. John for a time made their headquarters on Cyprus.
 St. Paul preached in Cyprus and once when opposed by a sorcerer there caused him to be struck blind, "not seeing the sun for a season."
 In ancient trade the island supplied much copper. The word "copper" is a corruption of Cyprus.
 Rhodes, which the Italians have occupied since 1912, lies with Crete across the entrance to the Aegean Sea and the approach to the Dardanelles. Possessors of these two islands can block the sea approaches to Turkey or can use them as bases for operations extending to Egypt and the Levant. Rhodes proved an important Axis air base in the attack on Crete.
 Rhodes, too, for a time was ruled by the Crusaders.
 The famous Colossus of Rhodes was a statue of the sun-god, 105 feet high. It was knocked down by an earthquake and during an invasion by the Saracens, they sold the fragments for old metal to a dealer who used 900 camels to carry them away.
 About a hundred miles from Rhodes, the island of Cos is the reputed birthplace of Hippocrates, called "the Father of Medicine" because he did so much to separate it from superstition and give it a basis in science.
 Another of the Dodecanese islands a little farther north, Patmos,

HUGE CROWD IS EXPECTED TO HEAR JOHNSON

The biggest Flag Day celebration, rally and entertainment in the history of Eastland County will be held on the south side of the courthouse square in Eastland Saturday night, beginning at 7:45, with the highlight of the program being an address, over a statewide radio hookup, by Lyndon B. Johnson, candidate for United States Senator.
 The program, consisting of a band concert by the combined bands of Eastland, Ranger and Cisco will include nationally-known singers and an imported orchestra, has been arranged by the seven mayors of the seven towns of Eastland County. They are Hall Walker, mayor of Ranger; C. W. Hoffmann, mayor of Eastland; G. P. Mitcham, mayor of Cisco; Herman Rushing, mayor of Desdemona; Dr. George T. Blackwell, mayor of Gorman; A. N. Searly, mayor of Rising Star and J. E. Gilbert, mayor of Carbon.
 The program will be under the direction of Harwood Woodin, well-known radio master of ceremonies and will include such well-known entertainers as Lambert's Band of Patriots, Sophie Parker, who is known as the Kate Smith of the South; Mary Jane Behm, vocalist; Johnny Landy, harmonica player and Lois Widden and Billy Halameick.
 Featured on the program, beginning at 9:00 o'clock, will be an address made by Congressman Lyndon B. Johnson, from the courthouse square, and which will be carried over the Texas Quality network throughout the state.
 Just before Congressman Johnson begins his speech a Flag Day Revue will be staged at 8:30.
 Fifteen minutes of Congressman Johnson's address will be broadcast, after which he will continue his speech, extemporaneously, to the large crowd expected to be present.
 Notices of the big rally have been sent to all the adjoining counties and the affair has been extensively advertised. It is confidently expected that the largest crowd of Johnson's present campaign will greet him when he takes the platform Saturday night to present the issues of the campaign.

Many Queer Jobs Still Retained By State of Texas

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex.—Did you know that the State of Texas has an armorer? He is one of the many unexpected employees to be found provided for in the departmental appropriations of the 47th legislature.
 The armorer has no such important position as is designated by the title in the days when kings and their knights fought in armor and had an armorer to put them in and out of their steel-work.
 The Texas armorer carries on his armoring duties as a sideline to being a porter in the adjutant general's office. As "porter and armorer" he is paid $720 a year.
 The Department of Agriculture has a "gin inspector." Inquiry reveals that he inspects cotton gins and is in no wise a taster. The same department has a market news specialist. It no longer lists a "rosarian." Presumably some of the other nursery inspectors look after the roses.
 The Board of Education appropriation includes $3,000 a year for "script" writing and $2,000 a year more for the production of radio "scripts." To staff the governor's office the bill provides a secretary, a personal stenographer to the governor, three other stenographers, a files custodian and a porter. There is also an appropriation of $1,200 a year for seasonal help. Appropriation for the governor's office is $30,470 a year.
 Maintenance and other miscellaneous costs of the governor's office, including the up-keep of the "mansion" add $27,500 a year to make a total of $58,720 a year. Items for the governor's household-keeping are: maintenance of mansion and grounds, $2,000 a year; labor and employes for the mansion, $2,000; fuel, electricity, ice, water and telephone, $1,350 a year; household furniture and equipment, $2,500 for the first year and $1,500 for the second.
 The Game Department employs a photographer. The Land Department has a bookbinder. The Department of Labor has a boxing deputy, wrestling deputies and a "woman inspector." The Liquor Control Board has eight employes called "bridge inspectors." They do not inspect bridges but what comes across bridges.
 Best of all state jobs for a lover of the outdoors would seem to be in the Livestock Sanitary Commission. It pays more than 75 men for hunting. These slayers of predatory animals get from $1,080 to $1,350 a year.
 The appropriations for historical state parks for many years have included an item of $1,500 a year for "advisory superintendent" at San Jacinto State Park. Payment of that salary was stopped when Andrew Jackson Houston, son of Gen. Sam Houston, went to Washington as U. S. Senator.
 Two matrons are provided for the state Capitol. The old age assistance division of the welfare board has a maid.
 Expense accounts of state employes are regulated by the appropriation act. While traveling, the limit is $4 a day for room and meals. Receipts are required cents. Tips may not be paid out of state money. An automobile cannot be washed and polished more than once a month at state expense.

Boat Owners May Be a Defense Aid

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Owners of small boats, including fishing craft, can make a distinct contribution to their country's preparedness effort during the national emergency by enlisting in Class M-2 of the Merchant Naval Marine Reserve, it was announced today through the headquarters of the Eighth Naval District here.
 Men deemed especially desirable for four-year enlistment in the Merchant Marine Reserve are those familiar with trawler type vessels, Diesel engine operators and marine salvage workers. Age limits are 17 to 50.
 Class M-2 was established in May and its members, if called to active duty, will serve on coast defense vessels such as mine sweepers, repair tenders and various types of patrol craft. A total of 190 M-2 enlistments by June 30 is the quota which has been set for the entire Eighth Naval District, which includes Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, and western Florida.
 If the reservists are called to active duty, it is contemplated that they will continue in this status only for the duration of the national emergency and Navy officials assert every effort will be made to return them to civilian life as soon as their services can be spared.
 Additional information regarding Class M-2 enlistment may be obtained from the Naval Reserve Armory, 829 Camp Street, New Orleans, or from any Navy Recruiting Station in the district.

Car Sales Show A Big Increase

AUSTIN, Tex.—Record-breaking automobile sales are in progress throughout Texas, judging by reports from 19 representative counties to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.
 Passenger car registration in May jumped 28.4 per cent ahead of the preceding month to 12,505 cars, the bureau reported. The figure compares with sales in May, 1940, totaling 6,736 cars.
 Thus far this year, passenger car sales total 47,986, up 44.6 per cent over the same period last year.
 Though lagging somewhat behind April's sales, commercial cars are also selling ahead of last year, 42.9 per cent above last June, 28.7 ahead for the year through May.

Coin Machines Are Stolen in Ranger Thursday Night

Coin machine bandits were busy in Ranger for a few minutes Thursday night, snatching two machines from one establishment and leaving town immediately after the theft, Chief of Police Lee Ames of Ranger reported today.
 According to Ames two men drove up in front of the Texas drug store on Main Street about 10:30 Thursday night and one of them entered the store while the other remained in the car.
 The man entering the store ordered a small item, and when the clerk went to the back of the store for it he grabbed two machines and fled.
 Both front and back license plates on the automobile in which the two men fled had been bent so they could not be read, Chief Ames reported, but a good description of the car was obtained by clerks at the store. They reported that the car was a green, 1938 model Ford coupe.
 The car apparently turned toward Strawn, and officers were notified, but did not find the car.

Blow Is Struck At German Sea Fleet By British Plane

LONDON, June 13.—Great Britain today struck another hard blow at Germany's dwindling battle fleet when a British plane torpedoed one of the two Nazi pocket battleships in a Nazi war squadron. The attack was delivered off the Norwegian coast after a British plane spotted the ship, which was believed to be either the Luetzow or the Admiral Scheer, proceeding up the coast with German destroyers.

The World After the War

The United States, in the midst of "an unlimited national emergency," is still far enough from "a shooting war" to look ahead to the world as it will be after the shooting is over.

Granted, the first order of business is to see that the world shall not be a mere playground for Nazi "master men," who would then be in a position to remold it in arbitrary accordance with a Nazi heart's desire. That is the first order of business, and one on which practically every American is agreed. It is primary, it is basic, but it is negative.

The positive side remains. We do NOT want a Nazi world. All are agreed on that. But what kind of a world do we want? There the worm of controversy creeps into the apple.

The British, fighting a desperate rear-guard action from Dunkerque to Crete, have had little time to juggle with brave new worlds. They have been most coy in committing themselves to any specific blueprints of future world order, and that is understandable. Your own blueprints are worthless if the other fellow forcibly seizes the contract to do the job.

First off, you must see that you get the job, or at least that the world has a free opportunity to award the job to you. Otherwise the best blueprints are wasted. So the British, putting first things first, have been trying to see to that.

Nevertheless, one way to get the job is to have a blueprint or at least a rough sketch available.

Enough free customers, or potentially free customers, remain, so that the British have at last had to hint at their blueprint. Foreign Secretary Eden has backed up the general lines of President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms: freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from fear, freedom from want. And an India governed "By India, For India, and In India." The last comes late, but it is better late than never. British performance in India gives at least a hope that it is an honest pledge; Nazi or Russian domination there give no such hope.

Blueprints overlap; panaceas clash. British victory, however, certainly gives more hope of a free world than any Nazi "new order" run by and for the benefit of a "master race." It is only in a world that is reasonably free that the United States can hope to move forward to a progressive destiny. We cannot know exact goals today, but we can sense directions. And in today's world, the direction is everything.

Easiest way to find a tack is turn off the lights and hunt barefooted.

When you come out the little end of the horn, turn around and blow!

An optimist is a person who believes that houseflies are looking for a way to get out.

Lovelace Gets Certificate For Driving Safely

Tom Lovelace, citizen of Eastland who operates a trucking business, has just received from his insurance underwriters certificates for safe driving, and awards from the National Safety Council in the form of an emblem for each of these drivers who have completed the year 1940 without a single accident. The drivers who received these national emblems are Claude Griffin, who has a record of having driven 50,000 miles without an accident and who holds a two year award, 1939 and 1940; Raymond Hunt, who drove 10,000 miles without an accident, and has a two year award, 1939 and 1940; and Tom Lovelace Jr., who also completed the year without a scratched fender, and has a one year award.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

YESTERDAY: Stephan is injured. Deborah's family physician asks to bring him to her home. Stephan is unconscious. A sharp-eyed man, whom the doctor identifies as a federal agent, Hilton, accompanies the party. After long hours of waiting, Deborah hears Hilton talking to reporters. "He was trapped with information faintly wounded," Deborah faints.

THE FOG LIFTS
CHAPTER XII
WHEN Deborah struggled back to consciousness, Bridgie, haggard from her long vigil, was sitting beside her bed. "Sure, that's right!" Bridgie applauded as Deborah tried to sit up. "Brace up now, darlint, like the brave girl you are."

"Yes, Deborah remembered wretchedly, she would need all her courage. . . . Strange that Bridgie could smile like that! "Here's Mr. Hilton wantin' a word wid ye," Bridgie was saying cheerfully. "Whist! He's here, I'll fetch a cup of tea to bring the color intil yer chakes against the doctor laves ye in to see himself."

"Now that's more like it!" He smiled at Deborah. "You gave me quite a jolt, Miss Lovett. It was a minute or two before it occurred to me that maybe my last few words had given you an unnecessary shock."

"Why—but you're smiling!" Deborah faltered. "Bridgie was smiling. . . . Do you mean that he's not—that he's all right?" "Well, hardly that yet. I have an idea that the room is still traveling around his bed at a handsome clip. But in a few days he'll be ready to whip his weight in wildcats again."

"But I—still don't understand," Deborah said helplessly. "Mr. Hilton, what did happen last night?" "Plenty, Miss Lovett." He pulled a newspaper from his pocket, began to read.

A SMALL Cape Cod fishing town was the scene last night of an incident which wrote "Finis" to one of the most fantastic careers of a decade of international plot and counterplot. It was the career of a man identified only as "Mr. X," because out of the dozens of names he used, it is impossible to select his real one.

"When trapped last night by intelligence agents with documents involving important United States defense secrets in his possession, he committed suicide rather than—" "But," Deborah asked, still helplessly, "what has all that to do with Stephan?"

Mr. Lovelace operates his trucks under the state authority and attempts to comply with all the regulations required for operating a high class business. He is particularly interested in handling the goods which he transports so that they reach their destination in good shape. He specializes in moving household goods local and long distance in a closed van carrying $5,000 insurance on each load. He also has a bonded warehouse located at 906 North Lamar St. He does crating and packing of small shipments not large enough for special loads. He also has a special service on part loads of household goods, which includes storing these part loads until his van makes a load through places these goods are going.

Mr. Lovelace states that "It has been shown by a careful investigation throughout the country that no man can hope to have a record for safe operation on the highways unless his equipment is in first class shape and his drivers get plenty of rest" between their turns at the wheel.

Argentina Sees Growth Balked By Birth Decreases

BUENOS AIRES—The problem of a steadily declining birth rate in Argentina is causing great concern.

During the period of 1910-1914 the national birth rate averaged 38.9 per thousand, but from 1934 to 1938 the average had dropped to 25 per thousand. In the 1910-1914 period the natural population increase was 20.8 per thousand, compared with 12.5 per thousand in the period of 1934-1938.

Similar to the United States during the years following the Civil War, Argentina, since the turn of the last century, has enjoyed an era of growing wealth accompanied by a rising population. In the 30 years, the nation's population has doubled and it now totals more than 13,000,000.

In recent years there were predictions that the population would rise to 50,000,000, and in many quarters it was believed that such a population would be essential to the full development of the country's vast agricultural, mineral and industrial potentialities.

A population of 50,000,000 is dismissed now as a remote dream. The falling birth rate, combined with immigration restrictions, has reduced the rate of population growth, and the decline is regarded as a definite setback to the progress of the republic.

Although Argentina was neutral, the economic effects of the World War, plus the effects of a series of economic depressions in the two post-war decades, contributed to a further birth rate decline. Sociologists here say that persons in recent years have been unwilling to bring children into the world where uncertainty reigns, as today, and they assert that the large Argentine family is a thing of the past.

It also has been pointed out that 60 per cent of the nation's population lives in urban areas, and this in a country whose major activity is agriculture.

A bill proposed in congress would establish a national commission for the study of population problems, functioning under the ministrp of interior. It would provide a family stipend for government employees, earning no more than 250 pesos (about $62) monthly, of 10 pesos (about $2.50) monthly for each child under 15, and a benefit payment of 15 pesos (about $3.75) monthly for each child to be paid to employees earning less than 150 pesos (about $45) monthly. Special aid will be extended to mothers with seven or more children, including medical services, housing, food grants and clothing, if needed.

One clause in the proposed legislation would provide that government jobs for unskilled or non-professional labor must be filled only by males. Only women who are the sole sources of family income would be detained on such jobs.

Eclipse Is Shown In a Model Form

MADISON Wis. — An eclipse, a device illustrating how eclipses of the sun and moon occur, has been presented to the University of Wisconsin by its inventor, Francis D. Winkley, 86, retired engineer whose hobby is astronomy.

"Most people don't understand eclipses, and they're mystified when they try to figure out how they happen," he said. "My aim in building this new machine was to make it so plain that the average layman and student just starting astronomy could visualize the phenomena clearly."

Winkley's "eclipse" is made of aluminum castings and stainless steel and weighs about 10 pounds. A steel ball in the center of a 10-inch disk represents the earth and a smaller globe at the side represents the moon. As the parts rotate and the bodies pass each other a spotlight (the sun) casts a shadow such as an eclipse would make.

Winkley's interest in astronomy first was kindled in 1877 when he was working as a janitor in Washington observatory here while attending the university. Steel and machines were his first love as a student, but he also worked in the observatory and helped to build some of the star-gazing equipment still in use there.

The tall, elderly man didn't lose his interest in stars during his 43 years as a research engineer for Madison and Chicago, Ill., firms.

"I didn't have much time to experiment," he said, "but I always wanted to figure out ways of making astronomy easier to understand."

He retired from engineering 13 years ago and returned again to the study of heavenly bodies. Three years ago he presented the university a model planetarium.

Winkley also writes poetry and builds furniture in the woodworking shop he has set up in the basement of his home.

Dr. Arthur A. Allen, ornithology professor, explained his records provide a permanent store of the sounds of nature and also afford an opportunity for accurate laboratory analysis of the songs of the various species and aid in understanding the mechanisms of sound production and reception.

"These records," he said, "make a helpful short cut—an open sesame—to the long, difficult task of learning the whole infinitely varied and minutely differentiated range of bird music."

"Every morning during May and June, the active song season, finds us in the field at dawn with the sound-truck, hoping to add new songs to our collection. We start at dawn because then there is less wind and less human activity with its resultant competitive noises. The murmuring leaves and the babbling brooks and the milkman are all our

City Is Orthodox In Listing Funds

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The problem of which came first, the revenue or the expenditure, has caused city officials to order the reprinting of 10,000 pamphlets designed to show taxpayers what happened to their tax-dollar.

The pamphlets were ready for distribution when someone discovered that, through error, the page of "Expenditures" was printed before that on "Revenues." The city fathers decreed that it might give the impression that money was spent before it was raised.

The printers were ordered to change the plates and run off another 10,000 copies.

Merchants Can Indicate Articles Under Stamp Plan

"Retail merchants dealing in cotton goods will be one of the most important groups in the Supplementary Cotton Program. They comprise tens of thousands of America's most important cash crop--cotton. With foreign markets for American cotton sharply curtailed by war--America's merchants have a greater responsibility than ever before to help increase our domestic consumption of 100% American grown, processed, and manufactured cotton products."

This statement was made today by I. C. Underwood, chairman of the Cotton Industry Committee for Eastland county.

In explaining how our local merchants could assist Cotton Stamp Customers and the general public to identify 100% American cotton products in the stores, he said "some retailers rubber stamp the price tag or label with a picture of a cotton boll, or the words "All American Cotton!" Any method may be used which will definitely show that the merchandise is made in the United States entirely from 100% American cotton."

"After participating farmers receive their cotton-order stamps, it is up to the merchants to see that farm customers and others can readily find the American cotton products they are looking for. Adequate stocks and attractive window and counter displays will be to the mutual advantage of merchants, farmers, and the general public."

"Merchants who segregate their stocks of All American cotton piece goods, women's dresses and housecoats, men's overalls and shirts, sheets, men's pants, children's clothing, men's underwear, blankets, work gloves, plowlines, stockings, and numerous other cotton products in attractive displays and advertising will contribute materially to the effectiveness of the Program, and at the same time develop profitable new business," he said.

Horses Decrease In Lone Star State A Census Shows

By United Press

DALLAS, Tex.—That popular song about "riding the range in a Ford V-8" may be more truth than lyrics, a U. S. census of Texas agriculture hinted today.

Cattle population increased slightly, the number of sheep jumped sharply, but something was happening to the horse.

Thirty years ago, Texas prairie land harbored 1,125,834 horses and mules. As of April, 1940, this figure had been more than halved, to 638,408. The decrease has been continual.

Sheep-raising appeared to be supplanting other enterprises in rural Texas, on a rapidly expanding scale. Tabulated at 8,447,809 last year, the sheep population had increased from 7,026,534 in 1935; 5,319,248 in 1930 and a recorded low of 1,377,724 in 1910.

The figure for cattle, 6,281,537 compared with 5,583,471 in 1930 and 6,212,284 in 1910.

An increase in the size of the average farm without a corresponding gain in total cultivated acreage in the state was indicated by the survey.

This meant the displacement of more farm workers, who became unemployed and were forced to seek jobs in the cities. Tenancy reached its lowest proportion, 48.9 percent, since 1910, however, and the number of share-croppers declined almost 50 percent in five years, from 76,468 in 1935 to 39,821 in 1940. A peak of 105,122 was reached in 1930.

The share-cropping system has been frowned upon by farm service agencies.

Aggregate Texas land in cultivation reached 137,683,372 acres last year, virtually the same as five years before. The number of farms dropped, nevertheless, from 501,017 to 418,002 in the period.

Vicious Chulos Use Blitzkrieg on Hunt

TUSCON, Ariz.—Coon dogs and hounds, which are used to hunt mountain lions in Arizona, are born with exceptionally sad looking faces—but these days they're looking even more sorrowful.

The reason for the sadness of the southern Arizona hunting dogs, who can tree or kill a cougar, is the chulo—a small, vicious little animal called "tree monkey" by the Mexicans.

The chulos took over the Tumacacori National forest, according to Ranger Gilbert Sykes, and now are undisputed rulers of the roost.

Sykes reported several packs of lion-hunting dogs had tangled with the chulos and that the dogs came off second best.

"The chulos don't act the way the dogs figure they should act," Sykes said. "Instead of staying in a tree when the hounds corner them the chulo runs down the other side, works a dog over and goes on to the next tree or just turns around and walks off."

The forest ranger said the Mexican animals, which resemble coons, had invaded the Tumacacori district from Old Mexico. He said there probably were more than 200 of the beasts in one district of the forest and asked the Tuscon office to include the animals in the next wildlife census.

Careless drivers don't know the difference between running an auto and running amuck.

English Pupils Are Apt At Farming

MAYFIELD, Sussex, Eng.—The pupils of Mayfield school have started a farm.

They rented a field for $20 a year, plowed it for sowing and then bought rabbits, ducks, pigs and sheep.

They also have a market garden and the whole venture is paying so well that the children—none of them older than 14, are planning to buy another field next year for wheat.

The boys made all the huts, needed for stock, in the carpentry class at school. When the chickens were due, the girls carried the eggs into their classroom and hatched them in the school, interested in starting the farm education authority.

"The whole thing is helping the nation very well indeed. As for education, pupils are learning to do their own books helps their arithmetic."
