What Is a Hoarder?

A hoarder is a person who wants to have an edge over his fellow citizens to the extent of having an abundant supply of things on hand where there are not sufficient stocks available to supply all his neighbors during a wartime emergency.

That is the definition given by a group of New York merchants advertising against hoarding "in the interest of intelligent buying and patriotic behavior."

It's a pretty good definition. The boys crouching in the muddy foxholes of Bataan could probably say it with more force and color, but it's still just as damning as it is dignified.

Are you a hoarder?
Are you buying up sugar so you'll have an "edge" over that mother whose son died at Pearl Harbor?
Are you a hoarder?

Are you grabbing girdles off department store counters because you fear a shortage and want to make sure you have yours, even if there's none left a month from now for that pretty girl down the street whose husband flew for MacArthur?

If you hoard, remember you are able to over-buy only because (1) you have enough money; (2) your selfish desires overcome your patriotic impulses. By hoarding you take advantage of your neighbor, your country—and yourself.

Hoarding begets more hoarding. If you foresee a shortage of pants or peanuts, the one sure method of aggravating that potential shortage and bringing rationing is to rush all over town buying up stocks and boasting to one and all of your foresight. By hoarding you bring on rationing and possible hardships that might be avoided.

Hoarding is unpatriotic. But conserving what you now have is just as patriotic as buying defense bonds or working harder longer or volunteering for civilian defense. Don't waste. Take care of what you have. Buy only what you really need—now.

When the final history of this war is written, will it be recorded that America lost? That America lost because most of her people remained apathetic toward the war effort and the only ones to arouse from complacency were those who lathered themselves into the hysteria of hoarding?

A special committee of three members has been appointed to study the need and desire for extending the time devoted to the district conventions. The Oilbelt group has adopted the custom of having a Friday night and all day Saturday convention. There is a movement on foot to change this to include the whole day Friday, Friday night and Saturday morning, closing the meeting at noon Saturday. D. O. Fulton, high school principal at Vernon, distributed a questionnaire recently in an attempt to secure opinions of superintendents over the district regarding the using of the day Friday for convention purposes. His committee will make a report of their findings at the convention in Sweetwater next week. Other members of this special committee are W. E. Hancock,

Chillicothe, and R. A. Jarrett, Wichita Falls.

Support of District VII of the Texas State Teachers Association is derived largely from a 50 cent District membership fee which is paid voluntarily by the teachers. Paid memberships each year usually run past the thousand mark. Memberships to date have reached 462, but this figure will increase substantially as the convention draws nearer. Many teachers do not pay the fee until convention time. All memberships are sent directly to S. E. Pass, Abilene, secretary of the District Association.

Many schools over the District enroll their teachers 100 per cent in the District Association. To date the 100 per cent membership schools are Nolan county: Cowan Elementary School, Lewis Elementary School, Emilio Carranda Americanization School and Reagan Junior High School, all of Sweetwater. The Plainview Rural School in Scurry has enrolled 100 per cent. The Breckenridge Senior High School and the whole system of Electra have sent in dues for every teacher. In Abilene, College Heights and Locust

Schools are on the honor list. Also Pleasant Hill Rural in Taylor County.

Under the leadership of J. H. Golden, county superintendent, every rural school in Wichita County has paid the membership dues of 50 cents. These schools include Beaver Creek, City View, Sunshine Hill, Fowlkes, Allendale, Rocky Point, Howard, Friberg, Cashion, Enterprise, and County Line.

Superintendent H. D. Fillers, heading a group of 276 teachers in the city of Wichita Falls, has reported every teacher in his system a paid member of the Oilbelt District.

NEW YORK.—Not the least reason why Cornelius Warmerdam and Gregory Rice are world record-holders is that they would rather compete than eat—especially when it means helping a friend.

Gregory Rice likes to tell this story about Dutch Warmerdam. Last summer the South Bend A. A. was having its first meet on the Notre Dame athletic field, where Greg Rice developed into the greatest distance runner of all time. The South Bend A. A. was founded by little Rice and his coach, John Nicholson, who died just as his finest pupil sealed the heights.

The object was to give track-minded lads of northern Indiana who were not able to attend college an opportunity to continue running after high school.

Rice urges runners, routers in particular, to go on competing following college, for they are not fully matured when they are handed diplomas.

WHEN the South Bend A. A. meet was arranged, Rice, an accountant, was still employed in South Bend, but shortly thereafter departed for work in New York.

Rice returned to South Bend to be the promoter, ticket seller and star attraction of the meet staged by the association he helped organize. It was held shortly after the outdoor National A. A. U. championships.

As a favor to Rice, whom they all admire, most of the prominent athletes of the area were taking part—Tommy Deckard, etc.

ON the afternoon of this South Bend A. A. jamboree, School Teacher Warmerdam was enroute to California by automobile after competing in the Nationals. The only 15-foot polevaulter in history—15 feet 5 3-4 inches outdoors and 15 feet 3-8 inch in—was having lunch at the home of a friend in Elkhart, Ind., 15 miles from the Golden Dome of old Notre Dame. Picking up the newspaper, the Elkhart Truth, he read of the meet being conducted by Rice.

Without finishing his meal, he grabbed his poles and dashed in the direction of South Bend.

A fair sort of an attraction walked in wholly unadvertised.

WARMERDAM won the pole vault, of course, just as Rice copped the mile and two-mile ii. between directing the program.

The story gives you a good idea of the Warmerdam make-up, illustrates how well he likes to compete and his willingness to go out of his way for a friend.

And anybody who knows Gregory Rice will tell you that if the situation had been reversed Montana's Little Steam Engine would have done the same.

East Texas Iron May Aid War Plan

LONGVIEW, Tex. (UP)—Sponsors of the Daingerfield iron and steel plant, which carries the War Production Board approval, say construction should start soon on the project which eventually may cost $30,000,000.

John W. Carpenter, Texas Power and Light Company president, says that the ore can be mined from the top of the ground and that the furnace would draw on a potential 200,000,000 tons of iron ore in 20 Texas counties. The first blast furnace is to turn out 700 tons of iron and steel daily.

The now-defunct OPM approved a $10,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation initial loan which will be used to build the plant, furnaces, coke ovens, and water system for the mill.

"We can produce iron and steel at a lower cost than any other steel mill in the United States," Carpenter said. "Iron ore for the Pittsburgh mills is shipped from Minnesota and then carried by rail to the mills. At Birmingham the ore has to be mined from depths of 200 to 300 feet and then transported a long distance to the plants.

"At Daingerfield, our longest haul after several years will be six miles and we can mine the ore from the top of the ground.

"The East Texas ore's iron content is greater than that of ore from Birmingham or the middle west."

He said the furnace will employ traditional coke and limestone rather than natural gas for processing.

The Daingerfield plant is to be managed by 20 business men from East Texas. Their corporation has not applied for a charter yet. Daingerfield lies 40 miles north

SERIAL STORY

KINGS ROW

BY HENRY BELLAMANN

THE STORY: Schoolmates in small town Kings Row are orphaned Parris Mitchell, despotic...

STRANGE FRIENDSHIP

CHAPTER VIII

PARRIS told his grandmother the story that evening after supper. She was indignant...

"Are they going to do anything about the Singer boy, Colonel?"

"Not now, but somebody will aggravate that boy until he does something desperate."

"Don't you think it would be a good idea to get some sort of employment for him—out of the way somewhere?"

"It would, ma'am. A mighty sensible one. I don't suppose you could take him on your place, could you?"

"I've got more help of that kind than I can use, but if you can't find anything else, let me know. I'm sure he doesn't belong in the asylum, as people are saying."

Colonel Skeffington flared above his shining red beard. "There you are now! Did you ever notice, Marie, how in this town everybody's always ready to send somebody to the asylum? It's a fact. I think it's a bad thing to have a lunatic asylum in this town."

He chuckled and clawed his beard. "What's more, if you'd turn all the lunatics out and put the rest of us in there, I doubt if you could tell any difference."

TOM CARR moved into the overseer's cottage the following week. Parris went down to watch the men unload the household stuff. Mr. Carr was the most extraordinary-looking apparition Parris had ever seen.

Mr. Carr was so lively and said so many funny things that Parris laughed. He realized he hadn't laughed much in a long time.

"Oh, you've got a piano!" Parris exclaimed. "Do you play?"

"No, my wife plays. It was her piano when she was a girl. I brought it out from the East with me."

Years ago. He added the last two words a bit sadly.

"I'll see you later, Sonny; you must come down often and play for Lucy."

Parris grinned. Decidedly Mr. Carr was a very different sort of person from Sven Gyllinson. The thought of Sven made him "goose flesh" all over.

IT was nearly dark when Tom Carr's horse and cart came in sight again, creaking and creeping along the sandy road. In it was the fattest woman Parris had ever seen.

Lucy Carr wore a dress trimmed with many colors. Innumerable strings of beads lay about her neck, and many cheap rings shone on her tiny hands—deformed-looking, helpless little hands—so tiny that they seemed like doll hands attached to her enormous arms.

The cart rolled into the back yard. Tom Carr hopped out gaily, detached a little ladder, and set it close to the wheel. "Now, then, sweetheart, here we are. Give me your hands. Upsadaisy!"

Lucy wheezed noisily. She said "Ha!" once or twice, and then "Ho! Ho! Ho!"

"Lucy, my love, this is Mrs. von Ein's grandson. Name's Sonny."

She leaned so heavily on Tom Carr that he almost carried her. At the door she turned her ponderous weight slowly. She gasped out some words. "Glad, Sonny, glad."

Tom Carr had proved to be a valuable man. Madame was delighted. Parris went to see the Carrs two or three times a week. Lucy always made him play for her. Sometimes she struggled to the piano and played for him. The sounds were as mad as Lucy Carr herself.

Mr. Carr talked once or twice of Lucy to Madame von Ein. "She was a pretty girl. Mrs. von Ein, and a happy girl. A proud girl, too. When we ran out of money it seemed she just couldn't stand the snubs she got here in Kings Row. She just went out of her head. Then she was happy. I made up my mind she should stay happy. Lucy likes your boy, Mrs. von Ein. I've never seen her take to anyone so before."

A STRANGE friendship sprang up between Lucy Carr and Parris. It had begun a few days after the Carrs arrived. Old Tom saw Parris and hailed him.

"Are you busy right now?"

"No, sir."

"Well, Lucy's been asking about you. Wants to see you."

"Me?"

men who have the circumstances of war to conquer! Certainly they will need for their leisure hours books that inspire or soothe or restore thought. For ideas build the world one lives in, and books furnish ideas. Only the imagination and inner resources books foster can render them equal to whatever destiny they may encounter.

May I express a regret that, as I hear, few classics are being read by the enlisted man? Great literature would equip their spiritual armory with mighty weapons against an enemy intent on destroying all human freedoms. But whatever their tastes may be, every book is precious that turns their quiet moments into blessings. Any book is a liberator which gives to all who faithfully use it the companionship of the best and wisest of mankind. It is encouraging to see how many people date a new life from the reading of a book.

Confidently I hope, dear friends, you and the public at large will generously supply our fast growing Army with good books by whose cheering light they may steer their course through a measureless sea of chance. This will be the truest service to our coun-

JAVA—WHERE UNITED NATIONS BATTLE TO TURN WAR TIDE

BRITISH Gen. Sir Archibald Percival Wavell, 58, chief of United Nations Far East forces, looks with apprehension at Java.

HIGH ON A PLATEAU in the mountains of Java is Bandoeng, truly the citadel of the East Indies. Here is the hub of allied military action in the Dutch islands—air bases, military encampments, guns, oil, ammunition, food, supplies for a long siege. If Batavia, and even the Soerabaja naval base, should fall, the fight would still be far from over on Java. In the equatorial hills that cover that island's southern section, Dutch, American and Australian forces may yet make a defiant stand like that of MacArthur on Bataan.

A Letter From Helen Keller To Book Campaign

The gratification with which I have learned of the Victory Book Campaign is indescribable. It will prove a splendid bulwark of morale to the service men of our Armies. In a real sense every worth while book attentively read is a victory over circumstances. This I know from my own experience.

When I hold a favorite book in my hand, limitations fall away from me more than at any other time, and I am free. A wide variety of books on many subjects has given me a glorious world for a lost world, and power over all obstacles.

'To Play We Go' Is Subject For Study Club Meet

"To the child under school age, toys are the tools of life," the Morton Valley Study Club was told recently.

"Children should be provided with a 'well balanced diet' of toys to meet the current needs, interest and abilities of the child for whom they are selected. Toys furnish his experiences; they go with him to his outdoor play; they open to him the world of arts, crafts and mechanical skills."

This is one of the points brought out in the discussion of "To Play We Go" by the Morton Valley Study Club, which met in the school auditorium Feb. 24.

Those present were Mmes. W. F. Crouch, Josie K. Nix, Cecile Eubank, Thad Henderson, J. B. Harbin, D. D. Franklin, J. W. Harrison and W. E. Tankersley.

Cass County Has Cut Expenses Of Its Government

LINDEN, Tex.—One of the most impressive record in cutting public spending has been turned in by County Judge Guy Goolsby and his Cass County Commissioners Court, according to the records in the courthouse here which have been worked into a new Cass County Tax Survey by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

General Fund expenditures for 1941 were down 28.0 per cent from during 1940.

Road and Bridge Fund expenditures dropped 27.0 per cent during 1941 from the year before.

The Permanent Fund's expenditures were cut 40.8 per cent during 1941 from the year before.

Even the Officers' Salary Fund, most troublesome of all county funds for most Texas counties, showed a decline in expenditures of 5.5 per cent in 1941 from 1940.

Cass county's net debt was reduced approximately $109,000 during 1941, 29.3 per cent under what it was at the end of 1940.

The county's net debt at the end of 1941, at $262,000, was equal to 2.5 per cent of the county's assessed valuations.

All funds of Cass county operated on a cash basis during 1941. Moreover, all funds lived close to budget allotments.

Even though assessed valuations have declined sharply from the $19,000,000 peak in 1938, due to a decline in the oil fields in the county, the county's financial house has been put in excellent order to withstand any eventuality.

10 Cent Stamps Are Popular In Setup For Defense Plans

WASHINGTON.—Sales of ten cent Defense Savings Stamps during January increased nearly 500 percent over the previous high mark established in December, 1941, according to figures published today by the Treasury Department. January sales for the five denominations of stamps aggregated $41,005,736.80 as compared with the December total of $25,650,562.80.

The sale of Defense Savings Stamps of all denominations kept pace with the general increase in Defense Bonds and Stamps, which increased from $528,599,000 in December to $1,060,547,000 during January.

A story from Washington says women may harvest the crops next year. They ought to clean up a field pretty well, the way they can go through hubby's pockets.
