Waste No Waste!

"The axis crashed in a deluge of pop bottle tops, chicken bones, rusty pen points and out-at-the-heels socks." You will never read that in a headline or history text, but figuratively speaking it can and may happen.

With most of us in this country just beginning to stir our stumps for victory, we can learn a very profitable lesson in the big importance of little things in winning a war. Best of all here is something everybody can do and it is going to take every man Jack and all his sisters, brothers, cousins and children to do the job.

Every British home now has four cans for four types of waste needed to dull the axis blade. One can is for paper and rags, another for bones, the third for metal and the fourth for garbage.

Not much of the horror of war there, or the glamor of battle, if there is any glamor left in war. It's much more exciting to wave a flag, march in a parade or spellbind the neighbors with a windy speech on what Wavell or MacArthur or Nimitz should have done. But if every American home had four such cans and filled them as quickly as possible we should make a much better showing in that regard than Britain and here is what Britain showed:

The salvage of waste paper alone saved 25,000 tons of shipping space which could be used for more vital materials. The London Passenger Transport Board reduced the thickness of tickets by only .004 of an inch, thereby saving 480 tons of paper annually, and that paper is needed for cartridge wads.

Most important, enough scrap metal—old skillets, sardine tins, razor blades, toothpaste tubes—rolled from those cans, junk heaps and city dumps to build 10 destroyers, 10,000 tanks and 10,000 anti-aircraft guns.

That is only part of the British salvage system, but obviously it is more than worth while. It could possibly spell the difference between defeat and victory, therefore it becomes a necessity.

Americans must join the junk drive. All communities by now should have organizations and resources to handle this job. Boy Scouts, schools, Sunday School classes and clubs are collecting refuse, but they can't collect it if you do not save it for them. "Remember Pearl Harbor" and "Mash 'em MacArthur" may bring you up with your fists clinched tighter than "Waste No Waste," but the latter packs a potential wallop.

Funny how a woman of 30 can have a twin brother of 42.

The handwriting on the wall indicates that the house is rented.

The fellow who sings his own praises doesn't draw a crowd.

Medical College Removal Is Not Being Considered

AUSTIN.—Removal of the state medical college from Galveston was not considered seriously by the legislative committee that investigated the college affairs. One member suggested it, another said removal would be over his dead body, and the others thought so little of it that the committee report ignored it.

University of Texas president Homer Rainey did not advocate it. When queried about it he said he thought the medical school should be at Austin with the rest of the university to take advantage of the university laboratories and other facilities. He recognized that Austin lacked clinical material for so large a medical school.

Were the removal of the college considered desirable, it would not be practical at this time. Galveston was selected as site for the medical school by popular vote. To change it would require a constitutional amendment. Committee Member Arthur Cato of Weatherford who suggested removal, Governor Stevenson and President Rainey all agreed that it would require such an amendment.

Comic Artists Turned Cowhand

Jim Williams, left, and Fred Harman, who draw "Out Our Way" and "Red Ryder" for This Paper, get together on Williams' Arizona ranch. Both men are famous for their portrayals of western life. Williams for his ranch cartoons and Harman for the hard riding hero who gives his name to the strip. Harman visited Williams after a trip to Hollywood, where Red Ryder has gone into the movies and is being starred on a radio network program.

A constitutional amendment can be adopted only by a majority vote. It cannot be submitted to vote except at a regular session of the legislature. No regular session can be held until January, 1943. In that session any 11 senators can block submission for two-thirds of the senate's 31 members must vote for a submission. If nobody opposed submission, a popular election scarcely could be held before mid-summer or fall.

Then an even more difficult obstacle would be met. War priorities has cut off the supply of building materials. The state is having difficulty getting authority to make badly-needed extensions of state hospitals. No hope is held out that priorities would be granted for the buildings required in abandoning one plant to set up a new medical school.

THE GORDONS ARE STERN

CHAPTER XV
ANNA'S diagnosis of Parris' state of mind was correct. Her observation was a neat compound of native peasant shrewdness and affectionate intuition. Parris was apprehensive and miserable for precisely the reasons she had named.

Today, for the first time since—since that dreadful day, he walked boldly down through the evergreen groves toward the pond.
"Renee, my darling, I love you. I didn't know then how much. I know now."

At the sound of the words which startled him back into the present, all sense of her presence was gone.

Time had begun to pass. It wouldn't ever stop now. It would go every day, faster and faster. A stirring, unhappy, frightening thought.

ABERDEEN COLLEGE ended its college year with the usual dull and repetitious ceremonies held during what always seemed the hottest week of the year. Parris avoided most of the events.

A week later Madame von Elm left for St. Louis for hospital observation, and Parris yielded to Drake's insistence on a camping trip. His grandmother returned to Kings Row before him, looking Jess well than when she left.

He went to Anna. "You've got to tell me! What did the doctors say?"
"Nothing new. I must tell you, Madame is not well. Just go on as if everything were as usual, Parris. Don't let her think you are worried about her."

It was in town that afternoon that Parris learned from Colonel Skeffington of Mrs. Tower's death. "Very strange," the Colonel said. "Nobody knew she was ill at all, not at all. If you notice anything curious over there, son—"

Parris found Dr. Tower reading. He appeared as calm and unperturbed as always.
"I just heard a few minutes ago about Mrs. Tower. I'm very sorry."

Dr. Tower looked as if he were not really listening. He inclined his head again.

Parris stammered a little, and continued: "I was away, you know. My grandmother was away, too, in St. Louis, or you would have heard from us."

An awkward silence fell between the two. Parris fumbled with some papers.

"Madame von Elm came to see me just before she went to St. Louis. She wanted to know if you'd be ready to go to Vienna in September."

Parris' breath went out of him. "Oh. His tone was dreary."

"Parris, I undertook this work with you with decided misgivings. I guess it's fair to you to tell you that it has been a pleasure."

Parris blushed.
"I hope that when you get into your work in Vienna you'll find that—all of this has been a help. Some of it has been inadequate, some of it has been—in advance of any institution—I study you could have gotten anywhere. I think some of it will prove useful."

Parris felt a quick surge of curiosity. He was sure that this man was really able and intelligent—probably a very fine doctor. What was the matter? What landed him here in Kings Row with his sole contact these lectures and talks to a medical student?

Parris sighed. "Maybe it would be more sensible for me just to be a doctor, and not start out to specialize in any sort of way, but—"

"Well?"
"It's just that I think I really want to. It sounds a lot more interesting."

"It is. It is a vast field for research. I don't know if the time has come for this kind of study, or not. It looks as if it might come now."

"I guess I keep thinking of Lucy Carr, the—"

"Oh, yes. The insane woman you played to. Oh, yes, yes."

"And Benny Singer."
"You don't feel such people—well, sort of objectionable?"

Parris looked as if he didn't understand what the doctor meant. He shook his head. "No, sir. Never. I liked Mrs. Carr, and I like Benny Singer."

Dr. Tower half closed his eyes. "I sometimes think the whole thing is a problem for the poet."

Louise. She wanted to know if you'd be ready to go to Vienna in September."

"Parris' breath went out of him. "Oh. His tone was dreary."

"Parris, I undertook this work with you with decided misgivings. I guess it's fair to you to tell you that it has been a pleasure."

Dr. Tower half closed his eyes. "I sometimes think the whole thing is a problem for the poet."

Dr. Tower stood up. He pushed books and papers about impatiently. "Well, I hope you've enjoyed the chat. I did. Now, get on with you, Parris Mitchell. You've got a summer of tough work ahead. I won't fool you about that. We'll get those letters off to Vienna, and then we'll know in a month or so how things stand."

Parris was deeply concerned for Drake, whose pride had been dealt a telling blow by Dr. Gordon. That Drake was in love with Louise Gordon, Parris did not doubt—nor that frail, pretty Louise, weakened in strength and purpose by the united wills of overwhelming parents, loved Drake.

Because Drake was considered "wild," and the "town was talking." Louise was forbidden to see him. The two of them had quarreled, Parris interceding in hopes of salving Drake's petulance, easing Louise's pain. How, he wondered, could Dr. and Mrs. Gordon be such pillars of virtue in Kings Row and at the same time so determined to make their daughter miserable? He felt again the strange working of that intuition that made him doubt accepted values. They were steely—the Gordons. Couldn't they see—

Louise was—he supposed "sweet" was the word, and really in love? And that Drake, for all his swaggering, was a fine boy, and lonely?

"Listen, Drake."

"I know that tone of voice. You're going to have some kind of a sensible suggestion. I don't want sensible suggestions. I want you to say something to make me feel better."

"I was just going to ask you why you don't marry Louise, right off. You're your own boss, as Louise said. You've got enough money—"

"I'm not 21 yet, Parris. The Farmers Exchange Bank hasn't got much to say about what I do, but they don't have to give me a cent more'n they think I need to live on."

"But I thought—"

"I've got a checking account. But it's just about three thousand dollars, or was, I mean. I've spent a lot of it. Can you imagine what old Mr. Curley, he's the trustee, would say if I told him I wanted some of my money so I could get married?"

"Could you start in some kind of business, do you think?"

"I've been turning that over and over in my mind. You know I've been talking to Peyton Graves. He's going to work in real estate."

"Sure enough. Old Peyton Graves. I didn't know he had any get-up about him."

"Peyton's got the same idea I had about that tract of land right up there by the public school. He said if I could get my money out and put some in with him—his uncle would let him have some—we could swing in together and make us a lot of money."

Parris looked respectfully at Drake.

"Are you going to do it?"

"Can't. I'll halfway hinted to old Curley something about an investment, and he nearly jumped on me. Not a cent till I'm 21! I'd borrow it against my inheritance, but I don't expect anybody'd let me have it. Curley's stop anything, I guess."

SERMONS CONTINUE

Continuing the course of sermons on Christian Beliefs and Why, the pastor Sunday morning will bring a message on The Modern Use of the Bible. You might find it to be helpful. Other parts of the service will be uplifting. Scores of people find the hour of worship to be the best hour of Sunday. Churchgoing families, it has been demonstrated, are happier.

VESPERS AT SIX

Sunshine, snow, sleet and rain fell upon us last Sunday. Nevertheless our people went to church. The light and cheerfulness in the sanctuary at the vesper hour was a contrast to the mist and cold outside. Mrs. Jeff Haynie delighted the gathering congregation for a quarter-hour with organ music. Grady Morton led us in the singing of old and new hymns. Joy and mirth and worship were experienced. Sunday evening another large group will enjoy another like hour together.

STEAK FRY

The young adults will meet for a steak fry at the city park at 7:30 this (Friday) evening. A roomful of them met at the parsonage last Sunday after vespers. Sunday at the same time a similar company will assemble for the continued discussion of the Sermon on the Mount.

YOUTHTIME

In addition to their usual Sunday morning church school session, the Youth Fellowship will meet at 8 Sunday evening, the place to be announced. Forum subject for the month, directed by the pastor and participated in by the youth, is A Faith By Which To Live. Sunday evening the topic will be, Faith in God. Refreshments will be served and the fellowship will be refreshing.

EASTERTIDE

The church is desirous of having the names of all the children who intend to join the church on Palm Sunday, March 29. During the week of March 22 the pastor will meet with them for instruction about the meaning and obligation of church membership. Adults and youth will be received on Easter and special services at the church will be continued during the week following.

SMITH AND SPURLEN

Eldon G. Smith and Addie Spurlen were united in marriage at the parsonage of the church on the evening of February 28 by the pastor. They will make their home in Dallas where Mr. Smith is employed in the North American Aviation Plant.

MILITARY ADDRESSES

Pvt. Earl B. Braly, H. Q. 11th. Engr.; BN 36th Infantry Division, A. P. O. No. 36, Camp Blanding, Florida. Jack D. Sikes, Barrack 4-4, Williams Field, Chandler, Arizona. Cheer up these boys with a card, letter or gift. Let them know the people at home are thinking of them. Let the relatives keep the pastor informed of the addresses of their people in the services and he will write to them and give their addresses to the public for their friends to keep in touch with them.

CIRCLE MEETINGS

The hour is three Monday afternoon. Number 1: Mrs. Frank Castleberry. Number 2: Mrs. Luther Bean. Number 3: Mrs. B. G. Blair.

ANOTHER KINDNESS

The parsonage family appreciates a living room heater bought by the Woman's Society of Christian Service. It also expresses its thanks to Mrs. W. P. Leslie and Mrs. Raymond McDaniel for additional yard plants.

WORLD SERVICE

The church is seeking to receive half of its $751 World Service offering by Easter. World Service (Benevolences) is distributed to the many types of ministry carried on by The Methodist Church outside the local church. Were a Christian not to visualize the helpful ministry of his dollars as they went through this agency out to touch and bless the lives of little children, the aged, the sick, the Christless, he might be indifferent about the matter. But those with the spirit of Christ plus a vision are keenly interested.

THANKS AGAIN

The church expresses its thanks to the Coca Cola Bottling Company, Raymond McDaniel, manager, for the sign painted and erected in front of our building.

THAT BANQUET

Above 300 people were served at the long tables of the Father and Son banquet, sponsored by the 9:49 class. All details were planned and executed masterfully. Virgil T. Seaberry, teacher; John Jackson, president; George Cross, secretary; A. L. Agate, treasurer; J. M. Davis, ticketman; and a host of other workmen in the class made it click. The food, served by the Martha Dorcas Class, was excellent; and the program was entertaining. The best yet, many said.

A RECORD

Our great church heretofore has had the habit of limping along financially till the last few days of the Conference Year when it would put on a burst of speed and cross the line just ahead of a deficit. It would begin the new year all out of breath and continue its limping. This year, however, directed by a strong finance committee and a cooperative

Board of Stewards, the church is running a little ahead of the deficit from month to month. The members are responding generously. Few of them fail to do their bit. This exercise improves the health of the entire church. All indications point to continuation.

WANT A SOLDIER GUEST

On March 15 the church will invite to its morning service as many soldiers as the members in advance will invite to lunch in their homes. These boys will enjoy visiting in your home and you will enjoy having them. You will notify Mrs. Marene Johnson of the number you will be happy to have with you. Then the total number invited by the members will be invited from one of the nearby camps.

MRS. SPARR

Mrs. Ed Sparr continues to be critically ill. When we call upon her we find her mind dwelling upon the church she loves and the people whose welfare is her deepest concern.

THE SAINT

"Who would a true saint be?
Let him live joyously
And not too soberly,
As of saint's degree:
The world's best saint is he
Who makes good company!"

SATURDAY IS CIVILIAN REGISTRATION DAY IN THIS VOTING PRECINCT

BOOTHS WILL BE OPEN ON MAIN FLOOR LOBBY AT COUNTY COURTHOUSE FROM 9:00
a. m. to 7:00 p. m.

BAPTIST REMINDER

Franklin E. Swanner

We are happy to welcome the American Legion as guests in our services Sunday. We urge that our local members do everything possible to make our visitors welcome.

Next Sunday immediately after the morning service we are to take a religious census of the entire city of Eastland. Those who are to help will bring a couple of sandwiches to the church and we will eat and start to work around 12:30. We would like to have around 100 to help us. We are asking from the Intermediate ages up to cooperate with us. We must have this information if our revival is to be the success we anticipate.

I would like to remind you that our revival will start one week earlier than we had planned. We will begin Sunday March 15th and continue for two weeks.

We are using our local talent in leading our revival. The pastor will do the preaching. We invite your cooperation in making this revival a success.

Our services this past Sunday were fine in spirit even though the attendance was smaller than usual. Let's bring our attendance back to what it should be this next Sunday.

Saturday is registration day for civilians in the Eastland voting precinct, and all persons, from 6 to 90 years of age are urged to register.

Registration booths will be set up on the main floor lobby of the County courthouse where registration cards will be furnished and where there will be someone to assist those who need it. There will be four women at each booth and these will work in three hour shifts. The booths will be kept open from 9:00 a. m. to 7:00 p. m., and while it is not compulsory that one registers, it is very important that they do so, since it is part of the plans—in fact it is the groundwork—of the plans that are being made to protect you and your property in case of emergencies such as air raids, etc. Children and aged people unable to register for themselves should have someone else to do it for them.

C. J. Rhodes is chairman of a committee, the other members of which are W. Q. Verner and Mrs. J. F. Saffley, that has charge of this volunteer registration which is a part of the plans being made ready for the "full blackout" program that is to be called sometime in the near future by the governor of the state.

"Every man, woman and child should be registered Saturday," stated W. Q. Verner, who has been working faithfully on this job, "for if you are not registered and an emergency arises you could very easily be forgotten. Besides, you should register in order that your services would be available if needed."

89 Year Old Preacher, Still Active, Is Of Opinion Most Preachers Do Not Preach Enough Old Time Religion

By United Press

BEEVILLE, Tex.—He's nearing his 89th birthday and he totters when he walks, but there's nothing weak or uncertain about "Brother" S. N. Allen's preaching or his opinion of pastors who look upon the ministry as just another occupation.

An "old-fashioned Methodist preacher" for 57 years, Rev. Allen believes too many of today's ministers are preaching sermons that fail to hit the mark.

"There's plenty of food in the Bible," he contends, "but only a few pastors give it to those who are spiritually hungry. It reminds me of the farmer who goes out to feed his hogs. He carries a big basket loaded with corn, but instead of feeding the corn, he strips off the shucks and hands them out for food. Then he carries the corn back to the crib."

A resident of Beeville since he retired from the ministry nine years ago, Rev. Allen has become a familiar and beloved figure to hundreds of persons in this vicinity. Tall and heavy, his white hair neatly parted in the center, he invariably occupies one of the front pews of the First Methodist church here Sunday after Sunday. Long before the morning service begins, his booming voice may be heard greeting each "sister" and "brother" and he is ceremoniously shaking hands and inquiring after their health.

Rev. Allen hadn't planned to become a minister. He was a cowboy and Indian fighter and rancher before he heard the "call" to enter the ministry. He wrestled mightily with himself before he finally yielded and became a preacher in the old East Texas conference. He was a married man and his formal education was somewhat sketchy, but he had the encouragement of his mother and the feeling that he was needed in the ministry. And preach he did, moving from church to church and town to town, holding revival meetings and exhorting the unconverted to join the church.

A native Texan, Rev. Allen was born in Smith County south of Tyler on June 1, 1853. His parents had come to Texas from Monroe County, Miss.

During the Civil War the little Allen boy was left with his mother and sister to handle the stock. He learned to ride horses and work cattle.

"We rode bad horses when they were sure-nuff outlaws and knew how to pitch," he recalled. "Rodeo outlaws are tame in comparison with some of those horses we rode, or attempted to ride."

When he "developed into a great big overgrown boy," he said.

Eastman Says We Face a Lack Of Transportation

WASHINGTON (UP)—Shortage of transportation facilities in many cities is expected to become more acute as the war effort gains momentum.

Despite increased loads, the War Production Board is unlikely to release strategic materials for new equipment, Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman warned in suggesting steps that might help relieve congestion.

Methods of making greatest possible use of facilities, Eastman pointed out, are staggering business, school and working hours, improving regulation of street traffic to speed vehicle movement, and making more efficient use of private automobiles through doubling up.

Staggering of hours, a step already taken in government agencies, promises to be one of the most effective methods of relieving the problem, he said.

He stressed the importance of this program by pointing out that in most cities more than 50 per cent of total volume of local traffic is carried during morning and evening rush hours, leaving 50 to 75 per cent of the facilities idle during the rest of the day.

Without Painful Backache Many sufferers realize nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pain, leg pain, loss of pep and energy, getting up rigid, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Your FEEDING ADVISOR by TRUITT GREGORY

HOUSING—Very little in the way of housing is required aside from shelter and shade against bad weather.

SANITATION—Give hogs plenty of clean fresh water close to feed at all times. Gaines will never be as profitable if hogs have to travel far for water, or if troughs and tanks are allowed to go dry. Be careful of running streams! There is no telling what disease they may bring from other hog lots.

PARASITES—Pasture should be either clean grounds on which no hogs have run the previous season, or it should have been plowed or sown. Practically all pigs should be wormed for large roundworm (Assarids) at 10 weeks of age. Many of our farmers fool ourselves by assuming that our hogs are in "clean ground."

MANGE—Mange hogs have a skin that is rough cracked, and scabby; and are discriminated against by the packers because the hams and bacon sides make a poor appearance; therefore, treat your hogs for mange when you see the symptoms.

Usually pigs are purchased when weaned, and confined in a small pen and fed table scraps, shorts and water; but that is not enough feed alone to produce good meat and produce it fast.

As hogs approach killing time it may be necessary to increase their feed considerably to get the size and finish desired. There is a great variation in table scraps. Some may consist mainly of melon rinds and cabbage leaves, with very little food value.

With pork fast becoming as important as airplanes everybody who owns a pig is wondering how he can get another 100 lbs. of that $12.00 pork quickly. So keep them growing with a good balanced ration.
