Break Down the Barriers

If the governor of North Pennsylvania should erect an electrically-charged barbed wire fence around his state to prevent citizens of other states from doing business with his people, the resulting sound and fury would rock the nation from the Maine woods to Hollywood's swimming pools.

The idea of free commerce between the states ranks almost with our other basic rights, yet there is hardly more free commerce between some of the states than between the United States and Germany. Obviously such local legal barriers hinder the all-out war drive.

Take local building codes. Strict compliance with those regulations has forced Washington to build war plants in comparatively undesirable locations. That means a waste of time and wasted time means wasted American lives on the battle fronts.

Take truck legislation, of which there are 45 varieties. As a result, manufacturers cannot build a heavy duty truck which could be operated legally in all the states. That means the free transport of goods, including war materials, cannot be achieved from some states to others. It would be just as sensible to put water hazards and high jumps on the highways, and make it a real steeplechase.

Take eggs, butter and other dairy products. We are urged to consume more of these commodities so we will be able to put that extra push on the assembly line, in the corn field, in the stores and mills. Donald M. Nelson says that push is necessary. Yet dozens of states dislike the eggs and dairy products of other states so much that a code of regulation and restriction snarls up free commerce in these vital foods. As a result, prices jump, an artificial scarcity appears and workers who need these products most find it more difficult to get them.

Dozens of other state "they-shall-not-pass" road signs clutter up the legal highways. Some of them, such as inspection of grains and animals for disease may be justified. Most of them bog down the victory drive and should be eliminated.

Do the special interests behind these trade shackles imagine for one minute that Hitler permits Munich to prevent trucks carrying shells from Essen to pass through without paying tribute? Do they think the local officials of Tokyo can pile special restrictions on rice from Japan's farming areas?

Whether the people, the federal government or the states and municipalities will strike down these barriers remains to be seen. State and local rights are one thing. The right of a nation of 130,000,000 to fight and work as one unit for the preservation of all is another—which cannot be denied.

SERIAL STORY

KINGS ROW

BY HENRY BELLAMANN

WHY STAY HERE?
CHAPTER XXXIII

NEXT day Parris had a call from Mrs. Skeffington—a peremptory invitation to tea.

Parris bowed over the long skinny hands.

"I'm awfully glad to see you." "Glad to see you, too. I hear you've been skinning the state out of a hundred thousand dollars."

Parris sobered.

"All right, all right. Spout your story. Did that fellow, Drake McHugh, actually have anything to do with this?"

"Everything. I was in Europe."

"So I heard. Smart. Didn't think Drake had that much gumption."

"Well, his wife Randy—"

"Fond of those two, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Loyalty's scarce nowadays. Dying out, along with most everything else worth talking about."

"I'll tell you about this real-estate business if you really want to know."

"Of course I do. That's why I sent for you today."

"Well, this really began when Drake's accident happened. Randy wrote me, or cabled me. . . . When he came to the end she peered sharply through her gold-rimmed glasses.

"I believe you."

"Thanks." His tone was dry.

"Well, you needn't be pernickety about it. I doubt if anybody else will."

"I don't think I care much."

"I hope you don't. The Colonel—well, you know how the Colonel would have reacted to all this. What you going to do about that dirty little newspaper?"

"All that's happened between Drake and me is—well, not for Kings Row. He was kicked around. Mrs. Skeffington, you know that."

"So you think Drake's really a pretty good fellow, do you?"

"He's a very close and very dear friend. I love him more than anybody in the world, Mrs. Skeffington."

"H'm. Want to bring—what's her name?"

"Randy."

"Want to bring her up to see me someday? I guess I'd better know your friends if you are going to have them."

"I'll be delighted, and thank you."

"Parris."

"Yes, ma'am."

"Get out of this town."

"It'll never let you alone. It was a better town once."

"Are you sure?"

"Let me talk. A town can be the temporary camp of a tradition, of a good way of life. It can be an outpost for a long time. Sometimes the thing that made it live moves on—goes somewhere else. And a town like this—the way it is now—will go after you because you're better."

"But, Mrs. Skeffington, Kings Row isn't really my principal concern. It's the hospital, my work there. The patients out at the end of Federal street are just as important as patients in Baltimore, there are—Zurich, or Vienna."

"There are—I haven't said this even to myself—"

"Go on."

"There are plenty of specialists in my field in the important cities, and in the famous clinics. But I'm the only one here, at present. I believe I'm useful. I'm doing what I set out to do when I was a kid. It might as well be here. This is home."

"I think you may be a fool."

"Maybe. I told you what Herr Berdorff said when I suggested he take a professorship at Aberdeen and let his stupid little congregation go to thunder."

"What did he say? I forgot."

"He said: 'Parris! I am a preacher.'"

"You're telling me the same thing, I see."

"No, not really. You are kind to think of me. Colonel Skeffington was heavenly good to my grandmother. You're just like him. But the Colonel stayed on in Kings Row, too!"

"He was tough. So am I."

"Then I'll be tough."

EVENTS and circumstances of the winter brought surprises to Parris. First of all he was surprised to discover that he cared what the people of Kings Row thought of him. For the sake of Drake and Randy he had to appear indifferent, but he did care. The second surprise came when he sensed that the town as a whole regarded him, for a supposed fleeing of the state, with a kind of respect.

Kings Row also rediscovered Drake McHugh. He was, after all, the nephew of old Major Livingston. Mrs. Sansome was heard to say that Mrs. McHugh was said to be really quite acceptable.

Sarah Skeffington clapped her hands together like a convert at a camp meeting when she talked to Parris about it.

THE PRICE
By Robert Moore, Jr.

All that we have, or hope to have,
Was acquired by paying the price,
The things worthwhile do not come free,
But with courage and sacrifice.

Our heritage of liberty,
That is ours to enjoy and hold;
Was gained by sweat and blood and tears,
Mixed with silver and yellow gold.

We, the heirs to freedom's estate,
Must pay the price and pay again,
To preserve the home of liberty,
And pave the way for peace to reign.

Now lets each of us do our part,
And purchase defense bonds and stamps,
To help to buy the tons of fuel,
That keeps the lights in freedom's lamps.

Lets be willing to pay the price,
The price for things worthwhile, and stand,
Firmly united in our war,
For hope and peace in every land!

Corn Belt Congressman Prunes Farm Funds; Illinois' Dirksen Aably Presents His Side

BY EDSON, Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—A large share of the credit for the $48 million or more of the Department of Agriculture appropriation bill in the House of Representatives goes to a big, tousle-headed, 46-year-old Republican congressman from Pekin, Ill., Rudolph McKinley Dirksen.

Despite the fact that he comes from the heart of the farm belt, Dirksen had had all of the New Deal farm experiments he could take, and he went to town to whittle some of them down to size. As a member of the sub-committee on agriculture in the House, Dirksen had been in on the five weeks' deliberation of that body when it held hearings and called before it the bureau chiefs whose mushrooming, mania activities asked for more and more millions. Through thousands of pages of testimony and reports, Dirksen had gathered his information and his arguments, so that when the bill came to the floor of the House for open discussion, he was loaded for bear and ready to lead the attack.

Dirksen spoke on every one of the nine days the bill was before the House and he varied his utterances from one minute up. In one of his minute arguments, he merely read three short paragraphs from the 1940 Agriculture Yearbook, part of a chapter called "Cultural Setting of Agricultural Problems" written by an economic historian from the Social Security Board. A sentence will give you the drift:

"However, once a subjective tradition breaks up, the new material operations may move quickly into the new integration, and subjective elements correlative with modes of living supported by the new material operations will coalesce into a new tradition."

On printing, on crop insurance, on Farm Security Administration, on the huge information sections, Dirksen cited them page, line and figure in a carefully documented case that left no answer.

On FSA, he pointed to 23,000 loans to purchase farm lands and set tenants up in business for themselves, out of which 124 got outright grants and 10,059 had to have additional rehabilitation loans just to keep going in 1941.

On crop insurance, set up for wheat in 1938, he summarized the $31 million in administrative expenses, the $24 million in premiums, the $36 million indemnities, the $12 million losses, the $43 million total cost to the government.

On a printing bill for $1.5 million, he suggested saving enough to send a couple of bombers to Bataan.

Dirksen is well over 6 feet and weighs 200 or more. He wears pince-nez glasses and when his thick brown hair is combed and he sits quietly behind his desk, he looks like any other lawyer, even though he works in his office in snirt sleeves.

LOGISTICS

Strategy is the planning of warfare.

Tactics is the execution of those plans.

Logistics, the third branch of military science, is the supplying of everything necessary to strategy and tactics—in the right amount, at the right place, at the right time.

Now, in total war, we must apply the science of Logistics to all of our activities as a nation—civilian as well as military. WE-ALL are part of the Victory Program.

Our supply lines are literally life lines of the United Nations. Man-power and munition-power are the controlling factors.

Today, Logistics dictates strategy—determines tactics.

Congress has appropriated billions of dollars but it cannot appropriate one single second of time.

Time favors those who appreciate it as the priceless commodity it now is.

In war, when we save time we save lives—and we make our individual contribution to Victory.
