Shipyards Workers ... Purchase Old Bus

TIGARD, Ore. (UP)—The newly formed workmen's club here—composed of 40 employees in shipyards at Portland—are not worrying about transportation.

They are operating an old school bus now, but next month they expect to take delivery on a new $4,500 model.

Today's Soldier Is Better Paid Than Early Texas Army

PORTLAND, Ma. (UP)—Take it from the Salvation Army, America's 1942 doughboys are just like their dads back in 1917-18.

Major Alva M. Holbrook, Salvation Army, here on a visit, said he told American troops at Hawaii:

"You get just as hungry and you can stuff away just as many doughnuts as your pappies. And when you are not in training or fighting, you do the same things."

BUNCO VICTIM TURNS SLEUTH CATCHES GANG

By ROBERT FAHS
United Press Staff Correspondent
PHOENIX, Ariz. — An old sea-dog, who refused to take his losses quietly and let the law take its course, can sit back in the sunshine again, smoke his pipe and smile with the satisfaction of keeping a promise to himself.

Louis Van Rillaer, a retired sea captain from San Francisco, was swindled out of $7,700 in a horse race bunco game on Nov. 26, 1939, while he was vacationing in Phoenix. He vowed he would never rest until he had put the swindlers behind bars.

He became an amateur Sherlock Holmes and began a long and sometimes discouraging search, but he always remembered his vow that he would locate and prosecute the confidence men if it took him to the ends of the earth and the remaining days of his life.

Searched 2 1/2 Years
His perseverance won out. As the result of his determination, all three members of the bunco gang who fleeced him out of his hard-saved cash are now serving sentences in the Arizona state prison.

The amazing story of sleuthing and tracking down members of the gang covers a two-and-half year period of traveling throughout the United States.

Van Rillaer located one of the trio, Max Kaplan, in Florida after a year of searching and caused his arrest. Kaplan was returned to Phoenix for trial. A jury found him guilty after five minutes deliberation and Kaplan was sentenced to from five to 10 years imprisonment.

The retired sea captain-detective then took up the trail of Edward Price and finally caused his arrest in Portland, Ore. Price, who also used the name Phelan as an returned to Phoenix and was sentenced to from two to five years in prison.

"Good Faith" Scheme
The third man, whom authorities said was the "payoff" or head man of the trio, still continued to elude Van Rillaer. Finally, through the efforts of Sheriff Lon Jordan of Phoenix, Florida officers apprehended Harry Lewis, 56, a man with 11 aliases, and he was brought here for trial.

Just as Lewis was to go on trial he entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to serve from four to eight years in prison.

Van Rillaer said the bunco scheme involved a horse racing betting system which would bring fabulous profits. He said he was convinced so thoroughly that he made a special trip to San Francisco to obtain the $7,700 and returned to deliver it to the trio to show his "good faith" so he could share in the horse race winnings.

Youngster of 14 Is A Professional In Legerdemain

FITTSBURGH — Gilbert Daniels, 14, youngest professional magician in this area, is the envy of all the neighborhood kids.

For Gilbert can pull rabbits out of hats, read minds, and do most everything the older mystics have done.

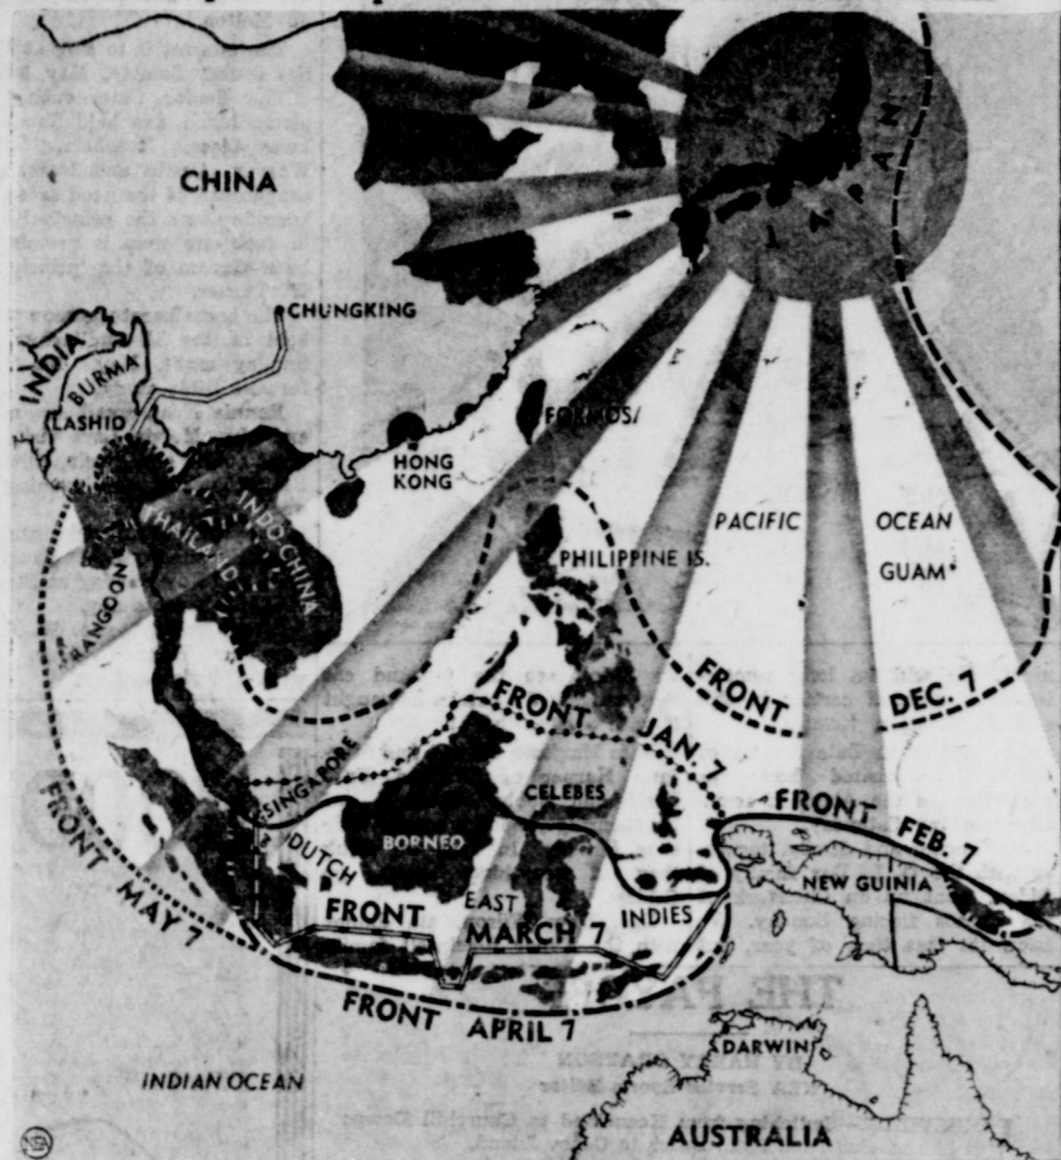

A protégé of his magic-minded scoutmaster, Kenneth Dietz, Gilbert inherited the honor of being the youngest magic maker, when his teacher was inducted into the army.

The youth had been acting as assistant to Dietz, performing as drummer, chalk-talk artist, and proving an apt pupil in rope-twirling, mind-reading and dramatics. He also designed most of the apparatus used in the act, making it in his manual training class at Swissvale high school.

When he was drafted, Dietz left most of his magic equipment in care of his protégé. The boy, during his five years in the magic "business" has acted as assistant at over 100 performances Dietz has given.

He is the youngest member of Mystic 52, Pittsburgh Musicians club, and has already attended a convention of the International Brotherhood of Magicians at Cincinnati.

Tempo Of Japan's Drive Slows In Fifth Month

Despite stabbing deeper into Burma, taking strategic Lashio, juncture of rail line and Burma Road, Japan was halted on most fronts in fifth month of war. India and Australia remained free of invasion attempts. Map shows month by month gains since Pearl Harbor.

Commencement exercises are scheduled for Monday, June 1, at which time 214 graduates from the business school will have their degrees conferred upon them, along with nearly 1,000 graduates of other schools and colleges of the University of Texas.

Cattle Drive Is Returning With Tire Rationing

PAWHUSKA, Okla. — The old-style cattle drive is coming back in Oklahoma.

In the Osage cattle country ranchers are once more reverting to the trail drives to move cattle to summer ranges instead of transporting them by trucks as they have done in the past few years.

Tire-rationing, which affects seriously the huge livestock trailer-trucks, is the reason for renewal of a custom that includes eating from a tin plate near a camp-fire, and bedding down the herds at nightfall to the tune of cowboy ballads.

Only difference in the modern trail drive and the kind old-timers tell about is that a "motorized division" transports feed for the herds each night. Otherwise, it's the same as when cowboys went on a spring drive that lasted until late summer.

The Blanton and Everest JH drive was comparatively short—about 60 miles. But the trip took four days and during two of those days it rained. The young cowboys missed a warm bed and the solace of a radio, but old-timers started reminiscences of drives spiced with cattle rustlers, Indian raids and "some of the damndest weather ever."

Price Regulation Being Explained In Southwest

DALLAS — Explanations of the Maximum Price Regulation as it affects retailers will be taken to the retailers in all sections of this region of the Office of Price Administration beginning Monday.

Max L. McCullough, OPA Region Administrator for the States of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas, announced that the explanations would be made in 71 trade-area meetings starting Monday night in each of the six states. The schedule will continue until the regulation is effective at the retail level on May 18, with a few additional meetings scheduled after the effective date.

In cooperation with chamber of commerce and trade groups, the meetings were arranged in cities where they would be accessible to retailers and merchandisers in all trade areas. Arrangements for each meeting are in the hands of local committees.

"These clinic meetings are rescheduled especially for retailers, and full opportunity will be provided at each for retailers to ask questions and get answers concerning the regulation provisions," Mr. McCullough said. "Although the clinics are primarily for retailers, they will be open to all merchandisers and others who wish to attend."

Each clinic will be conducted by a team of two men. One will be a specialist on the price provisions of the regulations and one will be a specialist on its legal aspects. Both will explain what the provisions are and how they operate.

The teams are working out of the Dallas region headquarters under the supervision of Mr. McCullough, C. W. Nichols, acting region price director, and Thomas Mosheim, chief region price attorney. Members of the five teams were trained in two test meetings held in trade centers near Dallas Thursday and Friday nights, with Mr. Nichols and Mr. Mosheim composing the team.

Girl Finds Flying For CAP Offers Her Many Thrills

LUBBOCK — Flying is one hobby you can share with Uncle Sam, believes Kay Chauncey, junior journalism student at Texas Tech. She is one of six women observers for Lubbock branch of the Civil Air Patrol.

Petite, blonde and energetic, Kay "soloed" in October and expects to complete enough hours for a private license by the end of May. In addition to working to do a journalism degree, she does stenographic work in the college press. She hopes to spend a part of the summer learning aerial patrol along the Texas gulf coast and the Mexican border.

Because of the air base located here, amateur fliers are "rationed" on flying space and must stay within a certain section about the northeast part of Lubbock, Kay explains. With other Civil Air Patrol members, she spends regular hours in drill and studies navigation in ground school.

Lubbock branch of Civil Air Patrol, a national organization of civilian pilots, was started a few months ago. Clent Breedlove is captain and its six women members belong to a local group known as "Femin-Airs." Thus far, their work has been practice in observing. The patrol was originally formed to report on alien activity along the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

900,000 Drivers Licenses Issued Since October 1

AUSTIN — Nine hundred thousand Texas drivers' licenses have been issued under the new drivers' license law since last October 1. State Police Director Homer Garrison announced today.

This is considerably less than half the 2,250,000 licenses which are expected to be issued by the end of September, Garrison said, warning that an unmanageable rush will occur late in the summer unless the rate of applications is speeded up immediately.

"The Drivers License Division is issuing only 160,000 licenses a month now, and is prepared to give rapid service," Garrison said. "If the applications continue to come in at their present rate, the number of applications each month will have to jump to 250,000 or 300,000 in July, August and September to meet the deadline."

Applications now are being accepted from any holder of an operator's license regardless of its serial number.

WOODEN TIRES PROVE SUCCESS ON MILK TRUCK

By WILLIAM McMENAMIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO — Wooden tires for automobiles and trucks that may provide a partial answer to the rubber shortage are in use on milk wagons of the Beatrice Creamery company, its president, C. H. Hashell, announced.

Looking ahead to the day when no rubber tires are available, the company decided to experiment with a switch to horse drawn wagons equipped with wooden tires. The idea originated in a purchasing department conference.

Hashell said the experiment was a complete success. The wooden tires are expected to last about a year, or 8,000 to 10,000 miles of service.

The present cost is $20 per wheel but this can be reduced by mass production to $12 to $15.

Drivers of milk wagons using the wooden tires on an experimental basis report they do not make nearly as much noise as a steel tire on the old-fashioned milk wagon.

There haven't been any complaints about the wooden tires, except that they cause a little more vibration than rubber ones. Hashell says they are not nearly as comfortable riding, but the American trucker and motorist can't be too particular when the rubber runs out.

The wooden tired wagon is easier for the horse to pull than a rubber tired vehicle.

The tire consists of a series of V-shaped oak blocks. The bottom of the block is cut into a narrow wedge that fits the rim channel of an ordinary auto wheel.

There are 40 blocks to a tire. Each is the same size as the tire on an old model Ford or Chevrolet. The blocks are bolted together through the rim of the wheel and are ready for mounting the same as a rubber tired wheel.

These wooden blocks are soaked in hot linseed oil and paraffin for 16 hours and white lead fills the cracks between the blocks when they are mounted. The oil and paraffin are used to preserve the wood and waterproof it to cut the danger of splitting and cracking.

If compelled to go to wooden wheels, the switch back to rubber can be made easily, without damage to the wheel. Experiments also are being made with maple blocks which may lessen the danger of splitting.

The Creamery asked the Batavia Body Co., Batavia, Ill., to design the wooden tires. This was done with the assistance of the Metzger Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., which has for years manufactured wooden wheels for hand trucks.

An agreement was worked out between the two companies to build wooden wheels for milk wagons and sample sets were made quickly.

Twenty-one sets were ordered for test at Waukegan, Ill., Denver, Wichita, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Dayton, O., Topeka, Kan., and Lincoln, Neb.

One or two sets will be used in each town. As soon as the rubber tires on the wagons wear out, they will be replaced until a total of 100 milk wagons using wooden tires will be in use throughout the Middle West, Hashell said.

The wagons are built with second-hand axles and wheels from obsolete Fords and Chevrolets.

Committee Urged To Requisition Tires And Autos

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Seven high-ranking government officials asserting that the rubber situation is "perilous from a military standpoint" urged the Senate Military Affairs Committee today to approve legislation authorizing requisitioning of automobiles and tires.

CORREGIDOR IS STORMED BY A JAP INVASION

The American defenders of Corregidor Fortress in Manila Bay, went down under the battering of Japanese big guns and assault troops in steel barges today, while heavy fighting raged from Australia to the northern tip of Madagascar.

Exhausted, sick and hungry, the men under Gen. Johnathan Wainwright surrendered the forts dominating Manila Bay after 27 days of heroic resistance that held a vastly superior enemy back and interrupted the Japanese offensive through the Far East.

Artillery which the Japanese moved into the Bataan Hills smashed for hours at American positions, then enemy shock troops in steel barges crossed the three miles of water to storm the beaches against the defenders, weakened by heavy casualties, lack of food, lack of ammunition and lack of sleep.

The fall of Corregidor coincided with important developments on the Burma Front, where the Japanese are driving into China and are moving closer to India, while on the Madagascar front heavy fighting was in progress in or around the town of Diego Suarez, and the adjacent naval base.

The specialists admit there is no specific solution to the inevitable tension aroused by developments from the war front, but insist that full appraisal of the facts considered on an over-all basis will help the perspective greatly.

"There is no shame in having the jitters," Dr. Hartwell says, explaining that it's merely a matter of more successful covering up on the part of a few. "Of course, it isn't covering it up to other people that makes the difference. It's the covering up for yourself. If you have lied to yourself your dream is apt to collapse like a house of cards."

The war and war news must be considered in a realistic manner, giving thought to the entire perspective, rather than considering only one day's developments, Dr. Lester pointed out. "Confusion is the father of jitters," interjected Dr. Hartwell, "and much of it is developed by one's own biased thinking."

Regular, informal discussions among members of one's family or trusted friends will produce wider knowledge and a clearer picture of the general situation, as well as relieving the "cooped up" tension on one's thoughts, Dr. Hartwell said.

Each person should seek to do something in the civilian defense effort—become a warden, work for the Red Cross, etc.—but in any event keep busy with some physical activity; it releases psychic energy through the use of the hands, the psychiatrist explained.

Confidence in our cause is a requisite in maintaining morale, Dr. Lester said, in citing the coolness of the English who have undergone repeated, terrific air attacks, only to return to their daily pursuits knowing that they have a job to do.

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 6—Two former Texas governors, James V. Allred and Dan Moody, announced today for the United States Senate seat to which W. Lee O'Daniel is seeking re-election.

Allred announced his resignation as federal district judge and his candidacy for the Senate seat from Victoria, and a few minutes later Moody announced that he is a candidate for the United States Senate and will make a statement shortly.

The announcements of both were unexpected, although both had been mentioned frequently as potential candidates.

The two men have similar political backgrounds. Both served as Attorney General and served two terms as governor. Both are in their forties, and both are noted for their vigorous campaign tactics.

Dan Moody, who will be 49 years old on June 1, was famed for his jousts with Jim Ferguson and Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson. He served as attorney general from 1921 to 1925 and then served four years as governor.

In 1929 Moody retired from politics and became a successful attorney in Austin.

James V. Allred is 41 years of age. He served as attorney general from 1931 to 1934 and preceded W. Lee O'Daniel as governor.

Thus three former governors, each with great political followings, will seek the six year term as Senator from Texas, which begins next January.

W. Lee O'Daniel, a former flour salesman and radio announcer, won his first political race when he was elected governor in 1938. He was re-elected in 1940, but resigned after his election to the United States Senate seat, vacated by the death of Sen. Morris Sheppard.

Let's Not Be Naive

THE conclusion of a New York legislative committee, that Communism may menace the United States even more in the future than it has in the past, should not be brushed aside casually just because Russia happens to be our military ally for the moment.

Neither should the danger be minimized on any theory that radicalism is a problem peculiar to New York, or to the larger cities generally. There is ample evidence of its nation-wide activity.

The committee's statement is partially limited by the fact that the legislators were restricted to the relatively narrow field of Stalinist activity centering in the public school system of a single city.

Handicapped thus, after 16 months of intelligently arduous digging the New York committee warns Communism and Communists are not working for the benefit of the United States, or for the cause of democracy. They are working for Communism, and for Russia, and for Josef Stalin.

So long as Russia's interests continue to parallel those of this country and of democracy, we shall have the benefit of the Communists' best co-operation. But the moment the national interests of the U. S. and of the U. S. S. R. again part company, the Reds in our midst once more will stick long knives in our backs and seek to cut the heart out of democracy.

NOTING that there is no substantial evidence that Communism's 20-year designs to instigate a proletarian revolution in the United States have been abandoned, or will be, the legislators note the assumption that "the subversive tactics which have been temporarily disguised will emerge again.

"If, in the meantime, the Communists succeed in extending their influence under cover of their present pseudo-patriotic barb, while we naively take them at face value and permit ourselves to be hoodwinked into a false sense of security, we will find to our sorrow that the problem will be more acute in days to come than it has in the past."

This is not to suggest that we relax in the slightest our those trades unions serving key industries, upon which Stalinist organizers have concentrated.

About the only excuse a drunken driver can offer is that he don't know he was loaded.

Not so many people are driving to work, but just as many have to be driven.

When buying chicken always remember that the good die young.

The difference between a bow tie and a four-in-hand is about fifteen minutes.

LOUISVILLE—Switching from Keeneland to Churchill Downs is like moving from Palm Beach to Coney Island.

There's a track for you, ladies and gentlemen—the monument to John Oliver Keene, four miles west of Lexington, in the heart of the Blue Grass.

Twenty-one years ago Jack Keene put into execution a dream he had for a great many years. He sought to build a course where racing would be conducted for the sport of it, where friends could gather and match their horses, free from undesirable phases of the business. He set about the building of a mile and one-sixteenth track which is as fine as any in the United States.

Keene personally supervised the building of the strip, as he did construction of the three-story limestone clubhouse, the like of which can be found nowhere else in the world. Every piece of rock in the structure was quarried on the Keene property. Experts marvel at the masonry.

All this Keene planned to bequeath to the people of the horse country. Reverses in the crash of 1929 forced him to halt construction of his dream.

Seven years later in the Keeneland Association he found the organization that would carry on racing as he planned it.

KEENELAND is a tax-free, non-profit organization. Only 15 per cent of the plant's earnings is kept as a reserve fund, and when that sum reaches $50,000 all the profits will go to educational and charitable institutions. I understand that will be the case this year.

Keeneland had its biggest mutuels handle for one day this spring when 14,000 persons wagered $221,000, which represents just one race in New York. Keeneland's average daily handle is $110,000 and its daily purse distribution $10,000. You can imagine what staggering purses bigger tracks would have if they gave nearly 10 per cent of their handles to horsemen.

Willie duPont's Delaware Park and the new setup in New Orleans were fashioned after Keeneland.

Horses run truer to form at Keeneland. One meeting set a record when 57 per cent of the favorites came down in front.

I AM writing these words on the day following Palm Sunday, on which churches throughout the country have celebrated the event recorded in our lesson, the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem. Now, within the space of a week, we have emphasized the contrast that our lesson itself suggests. The tragedy that was to befall Him on the following Good Friday, in the betrayal and crucifixion, is not mentioned, but we have included in contrast with the glory of the triumphal entry the prophecy of Jesus concerning the destruction of Jerusalem itself.

Probably many have wondered how, in so short a time, the tragedy of the trial and death of Jesus could have followed so striking a scene of enthusiasm on the part of the people who welcomed Him into Jerusalem, casting their garments in the way and spreading branches along the road. There are two possible explanations. It may be that the reception of Jesus by the people may have had the effect of arousing the enemies of Jesus to more violent action against Him. Those who had so much protective interest in their exercise of authority and teaching that they resented the intrusion of a teacher who "spoke with authority and not as the scribes," who had not been trained in their schools, and who did not bear their particular label, would naturally be only the more intense when they saw the crowds who welcomed Jesus and heard them crying, "Hosanna, blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

IF it was a moving spectacle and one to arouse enthusiasm, it was also one to stir up the most violent hatred and antagonism on the part of those who already had tried to silence the Master and destroy Him and His Ministry.

Another explanation may be

Rat poison was very much in evidence Monday at Alameda, with Mrs. John Love in charge, but we were not informed as to the whys or wherefores in this particular event.

A very interesting Mother's Day program is being planned for Chapel exercises, Friday.

Have you written your mother this week? Then lets don't fail to send her a message by Sunday. That's all this time.

Sooners Cling To Famed Boola Song

By United Press. NORMAN, Okla. War has affected a lot of things on the campus, but the University of Oklahoma still clings to the Yale University school song "Boola Boola" which it has renamed "Boomer Sooner."

Yes, and Harvard, which is the oldest American university, took its song from an old Irish tune, 'Believe Me, If All These Endearing Young Charms' ... Besides, the Sooner band puts a mid-western fervor into the piece that makes the way Yale men sing it sound more like Chopin's funeral march."

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

SERIAL STORY

FRANTIC WEEKEND

BY EDMUND FANCOTT

COPYRIGHT, 1942, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Two cars of week end guests are enroute to Ferdy Lorton's country place near Montreal. In one are the three Marks: Myra, a stenographer; Michael, a soldier, and Peggy, their 17-year-old sister. In the other are beautiful Fay Ransom and Lieut. Nigel Monkhouse, who has seen Fay once before and now is suffering from 15-gauge-d adoration.

THE GUESTS ARRIVE

CHAPTER VI TO compensate for his awkwardness, Nigel drove as fast as his concern for his precious freight would allow, and that was faster than he realized.

After leaving Montreal the car sped through the farmlands and villages of the plain beyond the island. Beyond St. Jerome they turned from the main highway and soon were plunging along a little known road climbing up into the hills through cuttings and long lanes of trees.

Nigel became uncertain of their destination. He consulted a rough map drawn on paper with an air of doubt. "You are sure you know the way?" asked Fay with an amused smile.

"Well, . . . er . . . I think we're all right. We'll ask if we pass anyone." The first people they saw were three, all grouped around a fairly ancient model. One girl leaned with detached patience against the door of the car, while another girl and a soldier struggled angrily with a flat tire.

Nigel pulled up. "Could you tell me if we're on the right road to . . ." Then he stopped and his voice took on a note of relief. "Well if it isn't you!" "It is!" Myra Mack smiled. Michael and his younger sister straightened and turned expectantly toward the other car. There was an awkward moment in which everyone looked at everyone else without quite knowing where introductions should begin.

"Well," said Myra. "To think of meeting you! Miss Ransom, my sister . . ." She cleared the introductory hurdles as Peggy gave forth with a low whistle and an audible comment. "My!" she murmured, gazing at the other car and the other girl. "What a swell outfit!" She included the convertible, Fay Ransom and her escort in the expressive statement. Fay looked cool and devilishly beautiful in blue linen, her hair gleaming copper gold in the sun and blowing free. Peggy, on the other hand, looked decidedly hot. Her hands were grimed from helping her brother and she had forgotten that she had wiped the heat from her face with dirty fingers. I didn't seem to bother her. With engaging frankness she was staring at Nigel Monkhouse, obviously wondering how much he was involved with this beautiful piece of nature's handiwork and whether it would be fun or hard work to try and pry him loose. It was a pity, she thought, that he was not as handsome in his blond way as her brother was darkly good-looking.

Michael, just hot and soiled as his sister, was also staring at Fay with a startled look in his eyes. Myra was the only one who was as cool and collected as Fay Ransom. "Want any help?" asked Nigel, jumping out. "We're almost through," said Michael Mack. "Practically set to go."

Peggy was already examining the other car. She flipped open the rumble and climbed in. "Come out of there," said Myra. "Nothing doing," said Peggy with a pleased grin. "If we are all going the same way, I'm going in style. O.K. folks, let's go."

The car drove away from Myra, whose lips were set in a stern, thin line. Nigel Monkhouse was even more uncomfortable, but Peggy was blissfully happy. This, she decided, was fun.

FERDY'S aunt was weeding a flower bed in front of the wide veranda when the sleek coupe drove up. Ferdy lifted himself from a lazy chair and joined her. Both of them stared as they saw the strange contrast in the car, the extremely attractive girl in the seat and the strange apparition in the rumble.

"Well!" exclaimed his aunt. "We do see some strange things." Ferdy grinned with his usual calm. He guessed the streaked, gamin face in the rumble belonged to Myra's sister, and probably had a normal explanation. The car drove to a stop. Impulsively, before the car door could open, Peggy Mack was down on the ground with a brilliantly white smile breaking across her smudged face. She had already seen it in a glass and had decided it was beyond repair short of soap and hot water. So she had left it as it was.

"You're Peggy Mack," said Ferdy. "Where in the name of decency did you get those two pieces of string you've wrapped around yourself?" Peggy grinned like a pleased child. "Straight from Vogue," she replied. "Wait until your father sees you!" "He won't," laughed Peggy. Then she walked onto the wharf, lithe and lovely as a native princess. Which was what she felt like. Fay, in contrast, was comparatively modest in white latex, but was quite pleased when the eyes of Nigel and Michael followed her as she walked slowly to the wharf.

"Yes," smiled Peggy with a pleased air, holding out grimy fingers. She looked down at her hand and drew it back. "Dirty, isn't it? Pure white spirit beneath, though."

Everyone laughed. Introductions were completed but somehow Peggy's entrance had stolen the show. Nigel Monkhouse glanced several times at this odd child who had kept up a stream of chatter all the rest of the way up to Ferdy's place. Ferdy really did get hold of some queer people, but he had never heard of her robbing the cradle.

Peggy had given two days of careful thought to this weekend. She had ransacked the wardrobe of her best friends to decide what she should borrow to wear, and then had concluded that her line would be gypsy informality. If there were cool pressed linens and expensive prints she could not hope to compete, but if she went to the other extreme and dressed with a carefree ease she would gain by contrast. After all, Ferdy was an artist and she would dress the part to play up to him, except, of course, when it came to a swim suit. She drew the last dress from her savings account to buy something that would open their eyes, provided she could keep it from her father's eyes until they left.

ODDLY enough, as at all Ferdy's parties, the haphazard mixture of guests turned out well. There was just time for a swim before dinner and the whole party drifted down a pine-needled path through the cool woods to the lake below Ferdy's cottage. The path led to a small level grass clearing, a large bathhouse and a wooden wharf.

The men stared with appreciative eyes as Peggy and Fay came out of the bathhouse and up to the wharf. Myra whispered to her sister in ominous tones: "Where in the name of decency did you get those two pieces of string you've wrapped around yourself?"

Peggy grinned like a pleased child. "Straight from Vogue," she replied. "Wait until your father sees you!" "He won't," laughed Peggy. Then she walked onto the wharf, lithe and lovely as a native princess. Which was what she felt like. Fay, in contrast, was comparatively modest in white latex, but was quite pleased when the eyes of Nigel and Michael followed her as she walked slowly to the wharf.
