COLLEGE MEN GETTING MORE EXTRA WORK

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.— College students, by working while studying, contributed importantly to the efforts of this nation in its first six months of war, E. E. Crabb, president of Investors Syndicate, declared here today in releasing latest abulations of a national college survey made by his organization.

Working students will contribute even more to America's war efforts in the next half year, the survey showed, as greater numbers of students will be called on to take the places of non-war workers leaving their usual jobs for war industry employment or military services.

"Students received more paid employment in the academic year now ending than in the preceding period," Mr. Crabb said. "Such jobs were voluntary. They were not an integral part of studies or co-operative courses."

"Fifteen times as many schools reported that students were working in part-time jobs than were working in seven-hours-a-day jobs while continuing regular studies."

"Indirect war work was mentioned four times more often than direct war work as providing paid employment to students." Mr. Crabb declared that students held more jobs this year than last year and predicted that they could expect a gain in odd-hour employment offers this autumn.

The Investors Syndicate survey is made annually. This year it dealt with the war time role of American colleges, technical schools and universities.

These institutions were asked: "Are your students doing more—(or about the same)—extra-curricular work (outside of regular classes, or co-operative work which is an integral part of courses) now than a year ago?"

Fifty-seven per cent, or 272 of the 477 schools answering this query, asserted that their students did more work outside of class in this than in the preceding academic year. Twenty-three per cent, or 109, declared that their students did less non-class employment. Twenty per cent, or 96, faculties said the same amount of work as a year ago.

Another query was: "Is this part-time or seven hour a day work?"

Part-time student callings were registered by 93.5 per cent, or 320, of the 342 colleges responding to this question. Only 22, or 6.5 per cent of these institutions said their students were kept busy at seven hours a day jobs.

A third question read: "Does this extra-curricular work result from direct war work or indirect war work (such as shortage of workers opening positions to be filled part-time or by odd-hour workers)?"

Eight tenths, or 262 of the 327 schools answering this query, indicated that indirect war work was supplying employment to their students. Only two-tenths, or 65, of these universities, stated that direct war employment provided positions to their students during the academic year now closing.

New Charters For Business Show A Slump In State

AUSTIN — Texas slowed down their pace in creation of new corporations during May, both number and capitalization of new enterprises declining from April, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

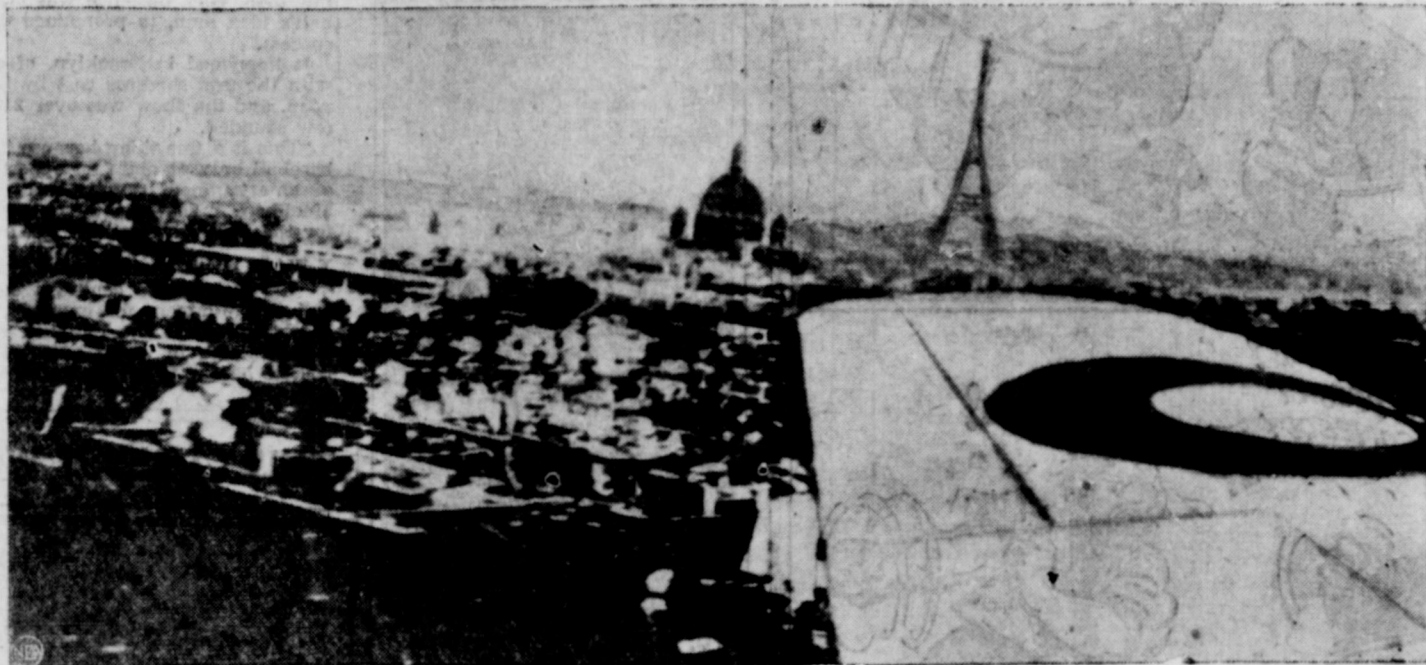

Only 48 new businesses were started during the past month, as compared with 99 in May, 1941, and 56 in April, and total capitalization this year ran to only $473,000 whereas May, 1941, showed $1,793,000 and April had $508,000 in new corporations chartered.

Of the new businesses started, 10 were in the manufacturing field, four in the oil production division.

50 COUNTIES RAISE QUOTAS FOR THE USO

HOUSTON, Tex.—Fifty Texas counties have completely failed to do their share of the USO campaign, Harry C. Wiess, state chairman, reported today.

Ninety-one counties have made their quotas, and reports have been made of partial completions in 114 other counties, bringing Texas within $175,000 of its $1,110,000 quota in the war fund campaign which will provide recreation in Uncle Sam's fighting forces.

"We can make this a Glorious Fourth of July by completing this campaign by that date," Mr. Wiess declared. "Then we civilians can truly say that we have made our soldiers, sailors and marines independent of want for a home away from home."

The drive opened May 11 in every state, seeking a national fund of $32,000,000, and is scheduled to close July 4.

In telegrams to county chairmen, Mr. Wiess called for unceasing effort until the quota is attained.

"We in Texas have an unusual responsibility in this matter because Texas is host to more soldiers than any other state and the USO is spending much more money here than we are being asked to contribute," Mr. Wiess pointed out.

"You realize the important work USO will do to maintain the morale of our soldiers, sailors and marines at the high standard necessary for America to win this war. Knowing that every one in your country wants the hundreds of men who have gone into the war from your county to be given the best care within the power of the USO, we feel confident that your county will make a good showing."

Mr. Wiess also announced that 700 USO centers are now in operation at home and abroad.

PRICE CONTROL WILL EXPAND ON WEDNESDAY

Completing the price control program of the Office of Price Administration, a regulation covering consumers services dealing with commodities has been issued, effective July 1.

In announcing the effective date of the consumer service price regulation, Max L. McCullough, region OPA Administrator, pointed out that services not covered by the ruling, as well as those covered, are listed in the regulation itself.

Some of the more common services which are affected and those which are not affected follow: These are controlled—Shoe shines and repairs, dry cleaning, laundry work, fur repairs and storage, furniture repairs and storage, radio repairs, vacuum cleaner repairs, sewing machine repairs, washing machine repairs, hosiery repairs, clothing alterations, repairs, fountain pen and camera repairs, lawn mower sharpening, hemstitching, tucking, pleating, bicycle and luggage repairs.

These are not controlled—Beauty parlors, barber shops, doctor's and dentists' fees, lawyers' fees, telephone and telegraph, insurance rates, gas and electricity, water rates, transportation rates, turkish baths and masseurs, notary publics' fees, employment agency rates, athletic and health club rates, tree surgery, express company rates, newspaper rates.

FORT WORTH (UP)—Royce Hart's wrist watch stopped at 5:20 when he jumped into Coral Sea approximately six hours after the Japs struck the U. S. aircraft carrier Lexington.

FARM PRICES STILL BELOW WAR I LEVEL

AUSTIN, Tex.—Although the rise in farm prices during the past year is contributing substantially to the rise in farm cash income, the present level of farm prices is still far below that reached in World War I, according to Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

Farm prices had reached a two-year low in August, 1939, just before the outbreak of the war, Dr. Buechel points out, so the increase since then should not be viewed with alarm. Further substantial increases in farm prices above the present level would, he believes, however, be justifiable basis for concern.

Writing a monthly report on farm cash income for the state during May, Dr. Buechel points out that the Texas wheat harvest now under way is expected to be well above last year and that higher prices now prevailing will mean a substantial increase in cash income from that source. Cotton and cottonseed prices during the marketing season are also expected to be considerably above a year ago, Dr. Buechel says, and a crop of the same size as last year will result in substantial income gains from these products.

Growing income from milk and milk products, fruits and vegetables, poultry and eggs are also forecast.

Dr. Buechel pointed out that income from agriculture in the state during May totalled $53,694,000 or 40 per cent more than the $38,415,000 for the same month of 1941. Aggregate farm cash income for the first five months is 60 per cent above last year, he reported.

WORKERS BRING NEW PROBLEM TO WASHINGTON

Washington (UP)—War workers coming to Washington bring along anything from a pet turtle to billy goats, complicating the problems of Roy Miller, manager of the defense housing registry in Washington.

"The girls from small towns present most of the problems, but other workers contribute their share," he said.

He related one instance of a newcomer and her "hobby." She had no sooner taken a room than she started to show a horrified landlady her "hobby." Out of her suitcase crawled live turtles and lizards with collars around their necks. She had packed bugs in small boxes to feed her pets.

"Of course she was an extreme case," said Miller. "But a girl from California who accepted a civil service appointment planned to bring along her pet dogs. I advised her strongly against it."

A classic example of "bringing bags and baggage into town" was furnished by an upstate New York family. The "family circle" included father, mother, three children, a cat, a dog, and two billy goats. They trailed into the registry to try to find an apartment for a month. They said they had found a place to stay after that date—providing someone would take them in an apartment for a month.

Miller said his most recent it-can't-be-solved case was of a West Virginia mountain family that came to Washington with the daughter who had been recruited for a $1,440-a-year job. Dad, mom, grandad, and lil' sis came with the breadwinner to seek their fortune in Washington.

They planned to stay "for some time" until they could find work themselves. The registry found the cheapest accommodations to be had, $1 a day per person at a tourist home. After one day in the Capital City they took themselves back to the mountains of West Virginia. "Rents are too high," they said.

Miller strongly advises no one to come to Washington without a job. His slogan is "See your local civil service office first." Too many become stranded here. He also discourages self-supporting women with children from leaving home to come to defense areas.

"We have to discourage them," he explained. "Many people will not rent to families with children; there is no place to put them in the daytime, and domestic labor is high. Invariably such a woman decides it's all a mistake after being here two weeks, and goes back home. We try to save the government a lot of paper work and the expense of breaking her in by keeping such a woman at home."

Insurance Man's Raft Passes Tests

PORTLAND, Ore (UP)—A newly-designed life raft, equipped to carry 18 men and built entirely without nails, will be produced here in quantity as soon as Washington gives the go ahead.

The raft, approved by U. S. maritime officials, is built of Oregon fir and cedar and galvanized iron. It passed rigorous tests specified by maritime regulations.

The raft was conceived by Leon Bullier, a Portland insurance man.

CRUSADE FOR BETTER HEALTH IS SPONSORED

NEW YORK, June 29—A nation-wide drive for better health in the form of a "Keep Well Crusade" is being launched by life insurance companies and agents through the Institute of Life Insurance as a new, major contribution to the war effort, it was announced today.

The "Keep Well Crusade," endorsed by high government officials and leading medical authorities, is being undertaken to conserve the man-hours of work for war production now being lost through illness, and to help relieve the situation on the home front created by the large number of doctors and nurses being drawn from civilian practice to serve with the armed forces. By the end of this year, 35,000 nurses and 40,000 doctors and dentists will be away at war, according to Mr. Johnson. That is nearly one-third of America's total medical force.

Endorsing the life insurance health conservation campaign, Paul V. McNutt, Administrator of the Federal Security Agency and Chairman of the Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services, stated:

"The success of our war efforts very largely depend upon our ability to arouse and sustain in the public an active consciousness of the importance of personal health. Every man who gives his physician a change to prevent his becoming ill and then does his utmost to keep himself well, is striking directly at the heart of one of our most serious production problems. Nine-tenths of industrial disability is caused by disease and injury not associated with occupation."

Plan for the "Keep Well Crusade" were worked out in consultation with Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, who stated: "Each individual can contribute to his own health protection and improvement by adopting a few simple ways of healthful living. Each of us must accept this responsibility and stick to it with firm purpose. The total individual responsibility for personal health, accepted by millions of American men and women, will make an incalculable contribution to victory."

"Free Zone" Might Lower Whiskey Cost

HOUSTON, Texas, June 30—If a "free zone" is established at Port Houston, the price of imported whiskey may drop in this vicinity.

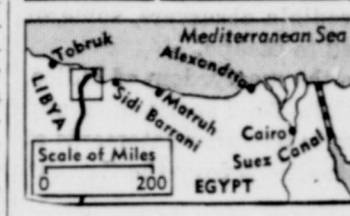

A spokesman for an importing firm said at the recent hearing before a U. S. Commerce Department examiner that "the price of imported liquor might go down 50 cents a bottle" if the free zone is permitted. Such a zone permits imported goods to stand without payment of customs until the merchandise is sold.

It would effect the price of liquor because importers now must allow for breafrage and empty bottles that cannot be found until the cases are opened. Under the "free zone" arrangement, the cases could be opened for inspection before duty is paid—and the importer will not need to pay duty on broken and empty bottles.

Fewer Failures Recorded In May

AUSTIN (UP)—As Texas business sought to stabilize for the war, commercial failures declined perceptibly during May, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research indicates.

The Axis offensives pushed through the redoubled Allied aerial attacks in a 45-mile advance across the Egyptian desert and battled the British mobile units today in the Fuka sector, about 120 airline miles from the Alexandria Naval Base.

Britain's Eighth Army, reinforced by fresh tank units and tough New Zealand troops and supported by American and British bombers, was fighting more stubbornly and effectively, but still had failed to halt the columns of Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel.

Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, assuming direct command after removal of Lt. Gen. Neil M. Ritchie, still was fighting a delaying action on a battle ground of hundreds of square miles around Fuka and was preparing to make his main stand on the narrow, bottleneck near El Daba, 80 miles west of Alexandria.

Reinforcements were reaching the British Eighth Army, but reports published in London that large American Army forces had arrived in Egypt were unconfirmed and appeared to be untrue.

Dispatches from Cairo said that there was greater confidence in British military circles today, presumably as a result of arrival of reinforcements and effective day and night aerial bombardment that destroyed or damaged much Axis equipment and many supply dumps west of Matruh, as far as Tobruk.

The Russians said that their lines were holding on the Kharkov Front, and that counter-attacks had been launched, indicating that the enemy had, as yet, made no important progress in efforts to get started on an offensive toward the Caucasus.

As a result, Hitler's main hope of reaching the Near East oil fields and cutting the Allied supply lines through the Indian Ocean seemed to rest in Egypt, for the time being.

The Japanese have been forced to rush reinforcements into Northern Honan Province, in an attempt to stem the Chinese attacks in an area valuable for coal mines and railroad centers.

Senate Passed Big Army Supply Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 30—Moving swiftly against the fiscal year-end deadline, the United States Senate today approved a $42,820,000,000 Army appropriation for 1943 by a voice vote and returned the bill to the House for concurrence in minor amendments.

The House later unanimously agreed to the amendments written into the Army bill by the senate and sent the measure to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

The Army measure is one of five major supply bills awaiting full congressional action before the start of a new fiscal year, at midnight tonight.

Axis Atrocities

Rightly, we think, Americans tend to be suspicious of atrocity stories in wartime. During World War I this country was deluged with such tales, many of them sponsored by official allied propaganda speakers and writers.

Some, apparently, had no foundation at all. Others were exaggerations. The vast majority of verified incidents turned out to be individual acts of excitement, sadism or lust.

At best, war is brutal. It brings out the worst in the individual. Pillage, rape, torture, murder always have been among the deplorable accompaniments of war.

Having these things in mind, nevertheless the record makes it clear that in World War II the two principal axis powers are deliberately, officially instigating and enforcing a campaign of savagery that must make the inquisitors of old Spain twist enviously in the sepulchers.

These are not exaggerated rumors. They are eye-witness stories told by competent and credible observers, some of whom have been victims and lived to escape.

Some of the worst, indeed, like the martyrdom of Lidice, reach us out of the mouths of official Nazi spokesmen, and in too many instances have proven to be understatement of what was done under specific instructions from the German government in Berlin.

Given a choice, probably most of us would prefer falling into German hands rather than Japanese. That is because we might hope to find individual Germans possessed of normal human decency, whereas the Japanese as a race appear to glory in bestiality and to get a sensual pleasure out of human suffering.

But for mass brutality, organized sadism, deliberate and considered inhumanity conceived and ordered and executed as a national policy, approved by the highest governmental agencies, the barbarous Japanese have not even attempted to emulate the Nazis.

Nor can the German people escape by placing responsibility upon Hitler and Hummler. There are too many evidences that, as a people, they have shown no compunction about carrying out terroristic orgies which no civilized people could have stomachached.

Because of what they have done and are doing, we have a right to hate the Nazis—not as our adversaries in a clash of national ambitions, or even as our deadly enemies in a warfare of ideologies, but as brutal, treacherous beasts who apparently cannot be permitted to mingle among normal human beings.

The same can be said of the Japs, but needn't be, because of them it is universally conceded. Of the Germans, let us not forget.

A Fall Victory Garden Possible Throughout State

COLLEGE STATION — From the grower's point of view, says J. F. Rosborough, horticulturist of the A. and M. College Extension Service, this year's garden program was a "life saver." Increased food prices caused many families to lean heavily upon the home supply of fresh vegetables.

The south half of the state usually grows its best gardens in the winter months.

For fall gardens, prepare the soil by (1) removing all weeds before plowing (don't plow them under); (2) Applying summer manure, or barnyard fertilizer, broadcast over the area to be planted; (3) Plowing three to four inches deep, pulverizing the soil thoroughly, and (4) Applying three to four pounds of commercial fertilizer per hundred feet of row, in addition to the manure. Inoculate, or treat, such seed as beans, peas and cabbage before planting.

A simple method of eliminating blackleg disease (drying up of the roots) is to immerse the seed in water of 122 degrees F. for 25 minutes, Rosborough suggests. Hard-coated seed, such as spinach, should be soaked in warm water over night before planting. It is helpful also to press the soil around the seed by tamping with a hoe or walking on the row after the seeds are covered.

As spinach will not tolerate the heat of late summer, don't plant until October or nearly November. The home gardener can well afford to use the Noble variety, which is more upright in growth and less likely to be drowned out.

Rosborough suggests these vegetables to mature before frost: Beans, stringless green pods; Mustard, New York or Los Angeles; Potatoes, Bliss triumph; English peas, Thomas Laxton; Radishes, scarlet globe. These semi-hardy vegetables will withstand light frost; Carrots, Danvegs half long; Cabbage, Copenhagen, all-head, flat Dutch; Turnips, shogoin, purple top; Broccoli, green sprouting; Beets, Detroit dark red; Swiss chard, Lucullus, Kohlrabi.

Murray-Patman Bill Will Aid Many Little Fellows But Leaves Other Small Businesses Out in Cold

BY PETER EDSON NEA Service Washington Correspondent

PRESIDENTIAL signature on the Murray-Patman bill, known as the small business act, makes this measure a law and sets up a fund of $150 million to be administered by a Smaller War Plants Corporation that will assist small manufacturers who can efficiently produce war or essential civilian materials.

Edson

The country has some 184,000 manufacturing plants. The National Business Conference of Chicago, a strictly private trade association, estimates that of this number, only about 45,000 can be converted to war production. Pessimistically, therefore, the conference predicts that eventually 139,000 plants face the possibility of complete wartime shutdown.

The Bureau of Industry Branches in the War Production Board says this estimate is far too gloomy. The WPB guesses that of these 184,000 manufacturers, all but perhaps 24,000 can keep going during this shut down—and by Oct. 1, 1942—is nothing to cheer over, but it's brighter than the outlook of 139,000 plants being forced to the wall.

Whatever the number eventually put out of business, the reasons for their shutdown are clear. The War Production Board, to conserve critical materials and to release machinery for the making of war supplies, has had to prohibit completely the manufacture of thousands of items made for civilians in times of peace.

ONE suggested remedy, said Reed, would be the creation of a government agency authorized to do three things. Briefly: 1. To defray maintenance costs during enforced shutdowns. 2. To make loans to partially closed plants unable to operate at a profitable level because of material shortages during the war, and unable to obtain other financial assistance. 3. To make loans up to the fair value of frozen inventories of semi-fabricated parts that cannot be assembled into finished products without additional allocations of raw materials needed elsewhere for war production.

Safe And Sane Fourth Is Again Urged For State

AUSTIN, —A plea for a safe and sane Fourth of July was issued today by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer who declared that the glorious Fourth is the anniversary of American freedom—a freedom which is now in jeopardy.

"This nation needs every man, woman, and child at maximum physical strength. Unnecessary loss of life or time from careless accidents is a form of sabotage against our total war effort."

Dr. Cox stressed the fact that hundreds of accidents occur each year among Fourth of July celebrants, including drowning, traffic casualties, and serious injuries from fireworks. He declared that every day's time lost in this manner will handicap the nation's war effort.

"The celebration of American independence is a custom dear to the hearts of all Americans," Dr. Cox said, "but this year as never before care should be taken to avoid accidents which cripple or kill since our maximum man power is needed for the successful prosecution of a war to defend that same American freedom."

"Using caution in water sports and in traveling on the highways will aid materially in cutting down the total number of accidents, and the cautious handling of all fire-

The Payoff

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK.—Claude Passeau, the great Cub pitcher, called it a disgrace to major league baseball, stressed the danger of the bean ball under circumstances he termed distressing.

More than 15,000 persons suffered from hot dog indigestion, but their very presence was enough for Larry MacPhail, baseball's idea man, to pronounce the majors' first twilight game a success.

It happened in Brooklyn, of course, with the lights going on with the first shadows cast by the stands. They kicked off at 7 p. m. and the show was over 21 minutes before the dimout curfew sounded.

"This is a fine thing because it enables the man who could see baseball only at night an opportunity to enjoy his favorite form of entertainment despite war restrictions," says Loud Speaker MacPhail. "That was the only purpose of night baseball. It was for the man who couldn't get away in the afternoon."

I WAS about to ask President MacPhail what he was doing for the blokes who can't get out at night—the night club mob and the milkmen, for example, but hesitated to suggest dawn baseball because the Flatbush redhead is just enterprising and daffy enough to try it out. Wouldn't that be awful—baseball writers having to get up before sunrise? They'd have to stay up all night.

Broken Thumb No Handicap On Range

CAMP WOLTERS, Tex., June 30—Pvt. Harry Briggle of Oelbalt, Iowa, was the only man in his company to come off the target range with a rating of expert, the highest in rifle marksmanship. And he fired his preliminary and record rounds with his right thumb, which he had broken the day before, in splints.

No home is complete without a man—but every kitchen is. Trees cover one-fifth of the earth's surface—and we'd be satisfied if we had Hitler up every one of them.

MARTHA SHOWS HER COLORS

CHAPTER XXIII

HE was conscious, first, of a buzzing in his ears, and then a light in his face. The light was very near. Its heat sent needles of pain through his closed lids and burned his brain. He tried to raise his hand to shade his eyes but the effort was too much.

He lay still, eyes closed, forcing air into his dry lungs. The heat was a little less and the light a little less intense, but he became conscious that his body was heaving and bouncing as though tied to a burro's back. Slowly the buzzing faded from his ears. Again he tried to raise his hands and found he could not.

His mind seemed to be functioning pretty well. He remembered being sick, and falling. And he could hear there was a rustle of silk nearby. He could smell, too; an exotic perfume. But move a muscle, even to opening his eyes, he could not.

He lay a long time, listening to the rustle of silk, trying to identify the perfume and connect it with the sound. He attempted to speak, but his tongue gave no response. He gave that up, gave up trying to move, content only with listening. And then he heard a barrage of knuckles on wood.

"Who is eet?" a voice called on his side. "Pringle, ma'am. We're searching for Mr. Talcott." The door opened. There was a feminine scream, and Pringle's "Excuse me, ma'am!" in hasty, embarrassed withdrawal.

Talcott tried to call out, to open his eyes, to move his hands. His mightiest effort succeeded only in raising one indescribably heavy eyelid. A glaucous flash revealed to him only part of a stateroom; a wardrobe blocked his view. But he did see the back of a woman who was in complete negligee. Her glistening dark hair was a cloud on her shoulders and her dark eyes were hard with anger from the interruption. He was only mildly surprised to recognize Martha Swenson.

The effort was too much; his lid drooped back and he lay, listening to the rustle of silk. The sense of feel was returning; he could feel the warmth of Martha Swenson's nearness.

"This man is strong. He just opened an eye." A man's voice. From behind and beyond Talcott. It was low, almost whispered. He heard, Martha Swenson respond, "You should not remain here, Carl. It is not safe. I sent the captain away, but that fool doctor will come in soon. And the girl. She will be looking for him."

There was movement but no answer. A new presence. Fingers on Talcott's wrist. "Don't try to play possum," the low voice said. "Open your eyes!"

With tremendous effort, Talcott opened them. He was lying in a lower berth; the light that had blinded him was a reading lamp. Its rays glinted on the bald, ugly head of Gerhardt von Stampf.

The baron smiled mockingly. "Surely you had not shared the opinion of the others that I had left the ship!" Talcott couldn't have answered even if he had desired. No. He hadn't shared that opinion—his body was numb. Only his brain and his eyes were alive.

"That pin," the baron chuckled. "You are very careless my friend. I could just as easily have poisoned you. Can it be that I over-rated you? It is no matter. You have caused me a great deal of trouble. I am not one to take loss lightly. I am prepared to bargain with you—"

"Carl! Please go! The others will come back and this time I cannot save you. They will hang you for murder—"

"Silence, fool! I come and go at will. No one can touch me! And you, Lieut. William Talcott—my patience is only so much. That envelope you stole from Halsey. What did you do with it?" You are a fool yourself, Baron von Stampf, Talcott thought. You know I can't answer and yet you ask me questions. Well, maybe I can speak but I don't dare just now.

cal Company and there hand it to Mr. Winters' private secretary. You and she are to be alone when the transaction takes place. There will be no tricks. That is my bargain. You understand?"

A raving maniac. I want to smash your grinning face. I want to see the blood start from your nose as it started from Sebastian and MacDowell—

"Ah! You close your fist! You are very strong. It would be a pity to kill you." He moved, swiftly, beyond the wardrobe; beyond Bill Talcott's vision. Minutes or perhaps hours passed, and then the sound, as of the scratching of fingernails, came from the bathroom door. Swiftly and unceremoniously Martha Swenson pulled a blanket over Talcott's eyes. When she removed it the bathroom door swung idly and von Stampf was gone.

HE awoke suddenly, surprised that he had been asleep. He heard the sound of angry voices and lifted his head to stare with bleary eyes at a full-blown argument between Martha Swenson and the ship's physician. It didn't occur to him immediately that he was able to move again. The tableau was too interesting.

Miss Swenson was dismissing her erstwhile swain in no uncertain terms. Telling him off for a fool, a sap, a sucker and a lecherous old dope.

Talcott grinned. It was very interesting to see the doctor's stuffiness being beaten out of him like dust out of a carpet. He stopped grinning quite suddenly when the door swung open to admit Captain Pringle, Halsey, Professor Constantine and—June Paterson.

Her eyes were frosty and she showed that she had heard enough of the argument to allow her to form some thoughts of her own. But Bill Talcott had no time for explanations.

"Pringle!" he called hoarsely. "Webber's still on the ship." He was just here—threatened June—"

Martha Swenson turned. Her eyes, cold, furious, warning blazed at him. Slowly she moved away, backing toward the bureau.

"Webber doped me with something," he continued doggedly. "On a pin in the lining of my sleeve. Not sure yet if I can stand—watch that woman!"

Professor Constantine was nearest, and he moved with remarkable speed for one who was usually so bewildered. Smashed the revolver to the floor, and with eyes averted, smothered the struggles of the insufficiently-clad Miss Swenson.

How to Help Your Cleaner Work Faster and Last Longer

You can do housecleaning faster and better if your vacuum cleaner dust bag is emptied after each use. Excess dust in the bag slows up the air flow and reduces the suction of the cleaner.

Also oil your cleaner as recommended by the manufacturer and pick up hair pins and other articles that might damage the fan or clog the brush. Avoid letting the cord become twisted or frayed.

Your vacuum cleaner is a valuable investment that may be difficult to replace. Timely repairs by an electric shop that specializes in such work will put your cleaner in first-class shape and keep it working for the duration.

Rev Franklin Swanner, pastor of the Baptist church, officiated at the funeral services.

Born in Stephens county, Nov. 18, 1885, the son of the late L. A. Hightower and wife, Leonard Almyler Hightower, moved with his family to Eastland when he was a mere boy and had spent his life in the county. He served as deputy county clerk and was for some years engaged in the abstract business.

He accumulated considerable farm and ranch interests in the county and for the past several years had spent most of his time looking after these interests and was so engaged when the attack, which caused his death, hit him.

What you see through some glasses depends on what's in 'em.

It's likely that blowouts are going to make a lot of touring plans fall flat this coming summer.

I have known Mr. John Barber, candidate for sheriff from boyhood. He is from a fine family of people and I know him to be a straightforward man. In my opinion, he will make us a fair and impartial sheriff.

I am not making this statement for the hope of reward; for I would not have any kind of office. I am not writing this with any envy toward any other candidate, and Mr. Barber does not know that I am doing this.
