RAINS CHEER WHEAT AREAS OF NORTHWEST

CHICAGO, June 16.—Frequent showers in the Dakotas today broke a drought that threatened to become the worst in the history of the northwest and which was reported by grain statisticians to be costing the American farmers a million bushels of wheat daily.
Weather reports told of scattered rains throughout North Dakota, the largest spring wheat producing state. Precipitation was reported heaviest along the Canadian border. Southern and eastern sections of the wheat belt received little relief.
In the nation's grain market traders sold wheat futures in small amounts on the strength of the weather news, but there was no rush to liquidate as the drought situation still was regarded as critical. Price losses were confined to a cent a bushel or less on Chicago and Minneapolis exchanges.

VETERANS GET READY TO CASH BONUS BONDS

Texas veterans of the World War prepared for the second step needed to collect $83,000,000 on adjusted service certificates Tuesday after a day "at home" waiting to receive their bonds.
Ex-soldiers cancelled social engagements Monday and stayed by their homes and offices to make certain the postman found them when they came to deliver their share in the nearly $2,000,000,000 bonus. Tuesday those who held bonds began their vigil at certification offices, the first step toward receiving cash for the bonds.
The postman played no favorites in handing out the gifts. From governor to those in jail the bonds got a hearty reception.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The flow of nearly $2,000,000,000 in soldier bonus bonds sent out yesterday, started back to the treasury today for conversion into cash.
Reports from throughout the United States indicated a large percent of the bonds, perhaps a majority, would be converted by the 3,518,000 World War veterans.
Long lines formed at post offices and banks throughout the nation as veterans certified their bonds for conversion into treasury checks, which may be cashed immediately. Veterans will begin receiving these checks.

LANDON, KNOX MEET TO MAKE THEIR PLANS

TOPEKA, Kan., June 16.—Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas and Col. Frank Knox of Chicago, heading the Republican national ticket in the fight against the Democratic new deal, met today and pledged themselves to a hard, earnest fight for the presidency.
While bands played and crowds cheered the men met on the steps of the Kansas state house.
After greetings were over Landon and Knox went to the governor's office. Knox said he expected to go to New Hampshire for a brief rest before starting the campaign.
"All plans, however, are up to the committee. I am just a soldier in this and am ready for any task assigned me. I am taking orders from my boss," he said as he smiled and nodded at Landon.
"Telegrams and letters show an unmistakable trend toward the Republican party, particularly in the middle west. I have received many messages from Democrats, too," Knox said.
Senate conferees left the meeting shortly after noon, but the house managers remained in session to discuss compromise proposals for the bill, designed to force corporations to pay out earnings as taxable dividends by putting a stiff levy on undivided profits.
"There was no progress this morning. At present no basis for agreement has been reached, but that does not mean that the deadlock cannot be quickly resolved once we find the opening for an accord," one conferee said.
It was understood the plan submitted by the senate group, but without agreement of all senate conferees, provided a flat 15 per cent tax on corporate earnings, an exemption of around $2,000 from any super-tax. The super-tax then would be levied on a graduated basis dependent on the amount of profits distributed.

States' Rights Theory Struck By Own Dart

The U. S. Supreme Court has many remarkable achievements to its credit, but nothing can ever excel the sheer virtuosity of the sleight-of-hand performance...

Observe the neat way in which this was accomplished. The court led off with the Guffey decision. In this case it ruled that the federal government could not try to remedy evil working conditions through the fixing of minimum wage laws...

Then came the New York minimum wage law. Here, apparently, was the answer to the Guffey case. This attempt to fix minimums was the work of a state, not of the federal government...

But when the smoke had blown away, the New York law had gone the way of the Guffey law. The "states' right" which the Guffey act was killed to preserve turned out to be non-existent.

That leaves us out in the middle of no man's land, with our supreme legal authority ruling that neither state nor national government can act against such things as sweatshops...

For the whole case for states' rights rests upon the belief that our nation can best make progress by letting the individual states handle such problems in their own way.

Our age has grown so complex, the interplay of economic forces affects the life of the individual so profoundly, that the problems have to be handled by someone. They can't be ignored.

And the old-line believer in democracy and freedom is likely to prefer that the states do the handling.

For it is in that way that we may be protected against too great regimentation by the central government. We don't avoid the erection of an oppressively strong federal power by giving the power to nobody at all...

A state which can protect the economic interests of its citizens is the best of all guarantees against over-reaching at Washington.

A state which can protect the economic interests of its citizens is the best of all guarantees against over-reaching at Washington.

It is this thing which has been struck down by the recent supreme court decision. The states no longer have the power they need. The first line of our defense against regimentation and centralization of government has been overwhelmed.

The venerable justices have given aid and comfort to their own worst enemies. The only people who can rejoice over the decision are those who hope to see all power to deal with economic problems lodged in Washington.

Resolution

WHEREAS, in the recommendation for the appointment of postmasters, it has been the method of our congressmen, in many instances, to go in person to a mass meeting called by him for the purpose of selecting a postmaster and in the convening of such mass meeting, he would inform the persons present that the postmaster would be elected for his recommendation by vote, but no one would be permitted to vote in such election for postmaster except voters who had supported him and voted for him in the last two campaigns for congress, and who lived within one mile of the post office, thus eliminating 75 per cent or more of patrons of the post office besides evading and ignoring entirely the civil service law which provides that the postmaster must be one of three who has made the highest grade in a competitive examination.

Life in the Nude Centennial Problem

DALLAS.—Life in the nude, called "vulgarity" in some quarters and "art" in others, was a principal subject of conversation during the Texas Centennial Exposition's first days.

Concessionaires have spared no pains to present their wares in artistic backgrounds. Probably the show must pleasing to aesthetes is an "apple dancer," a comely miss who twirls gracefully behind a costume consisting mainly of an apple. Some critics on the back row have complained that the "apple" really is nearer the size of a basketball.

A "life class" presented by another midway attraction has lured many customers at 25 cents a person. The customer becomes a "student" on payment of that sum, and is directed to the studio provided with a score of benches, easels, crayon and drawing paper.

With the class seated, the "instructor" draws back the curtain on a "subject" attired exactly as the Barker had promised.

The same concession offers programs billed as "A former Dallas debutante dressed as Lady Godiva."

Other shows featuring life in the nude exposed include a nudist colony, a French theatre, and several sets of dancers trained to carry on the world fair traditions of Little

Y A WANT-AD—IT ALWAYS PAYS!

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GAIL EVERETT, ambitious to become a designer, comes to New York and—due to a stroke of luck—meets DEREK HARGREAVES, proprietor of an exclusive shop. Her temperamental and difficult to work for.

Meanwhile, in Arizona, Gail's cousin, MARK CHAPMAN, returns home after years of wandering, and finds her in the hands of the Travers Mining Co. MARK suspects the deal is crooked and gets in touch with GAIL'S HUSBAND, New York lawyer, HAROLD. Gail's pleasure in learning that Gail is to marry Dick is not shared.

Handing comes to see Gail and tells her about the plot to buy her land, really worth a fortune. Gail's pleasure in learning that she is rich is dimmed by the fact that no word has come from Dick.

One difficulty after another opens the Travers' scheme into a financial ruin. Gail, believing Derek is true with Lucille, decides to leave that they will be married soon.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIV
NATALIE settled herself comfortably against a pillow. "I don't see why you haven't married Dick yet," she said, smiling. "He's an awfully nice chap—and then look at all the money he has. I know he's crazy about you. They all are; you'd never have any in-law troubles." "I'm sorry I didn't see Mr. Spaulding."

"To Arizona, wasn't it?" "Yes." "Is he interested in mines too?" "Oh, he's interested in lots of different things. Perhaps mining is one of them, though I think this trip was in connection with some land he owns. Rosemary said something about an irrigation project. She thinks it would be a grand idea for us to fly out there with Dick and bring her father home."

"Oh, that would be great! Then you could meet your uncle and see your property," exclaimed Natalie. "Yes, that's what she said." "Why don't you do it, Gail?" "Maybe I will."

GAIL tossed the morning newspaper aside. She knew she must make up her mind about a number of things. There was the proposed trip to Arizona and she did want to meet her long-lost uncle. Then there was Dick—he was still urging her to marry him. He'd asked her again this last week-end and again she'd turned him down. She really ought to do something about an apartment, but that hinged partly on her plans after her trip to the west.

Her little room was growing hotter by the minute, for it got the morning sun. Suddenly Gail thought of the announcement she had read about the gardens of Mrs. Peter Hinchcliffe on Long Island being open to the public today, a benefit affair for crippled children.

She picked up the telephone and learned that a train would leave in half an hour. She decided to go. It would be lovely to spend a day beneath the green, young-leaved trees, to hear birds sing instead of the raucous noises of Manhattan.

Perhaps away from all the clamor and dirt of the city she would be able to make up her mind about her problems.

"What about Derek Hargreaves? When are you going to marry him?" "I was silent." "Then you haven't seen him yet?" Mrs. Morton continued. "I think that is a mistake. That young man loves you, but remember a less scrupulous woman than you can usually turn a man's heart where she wants it—no matter how fine or strong he is, perhaps because he is so gallant. Besides, if a man feels that the woman he loves is neglecting him he has an excuse for straying."

That night Gail could not settle down to anything. She had turned down an invitation from Natalie to join her and some other girls who were going to some affair.

At last she pulled on a hat, deciding to go for a walk. It would at least kill time. She sauntered along aimlessly. Then suddenly she found herself before the building where Derek's studio was. Sometimes he worked at night. Gail glanced up and saw that a dim light gleamed against the long north windows. So he was working tonight!

She walked on more slowly. How could Derek paint in that light? But perhaps he was not working. Mrs. Morton had suggested that Gail should go to his studio and explain things. But she had nothing to explain!

She was on Park avenue now, but it was not the Park avenue of winter when luxurious limousines speed along and women, richly dressed in furs that cost fortunes and jewels worth ransoms, pass into magnificent hotels, accompanied by immaculate escorts. Tired mothers from less favored streets were dragging fretful children by their sticky little hands, seeking a breath of fresh air.

A car stopped at the curb and Gail saw a tall young woman, swathed in an evening wrap of sheer black velvet, step quickly within the tessellated hall of a handsome apartment house.

Could Gail have followed she would have seen the young woman slip off the cape she entered Don Luis Doro's apartment. It was Lucille Travers.

"Luis," she whispered in tragic tones, as the Japanese butler closed the door of the library. "I've made up my mind. I'm ready to marry you if you'll take me away from New York."

"Beautiful, I knew you'd come to me at last." The swarthy, middle-aged beef baron from the Argentine, pressed his lips to Lucille's.

Jail Comforts are Boon to Indians
NEW DELHI, India. — Indian railway authorities are baffled by thousands of "bikers"—who want to be arrested. Beggars for a long time have been making a practice of traveling on railways without tickets so that arrest will lead them to the "comforts" provided in the prisons. Officials are almost at their wits' end to deal with this "racket." Now they propose amendments for ticketless travelers. They estimate that 2,700,000 persons have been getting free rides on the trains annually, representing a loss to the railways of nearly $2,000,000.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE

JELLY that won't jell is not one of the modern housewife's trials. Science has taken care of that. There are four necessary ingredients for jelly and these must be used in correct proportions: fruit juice, fruit acid, sugar and pectin.

Some fruits which are lacking in pectin when fully ripe will jell naturally if used when slightly under-ripe. A good commercial pectin can be added to any fruit to make a perfect, firm jelly.

The fruits that make the best jelly when used alone are sour apples (including crabapples), currants, sour blackberries, under-ripe gooseberries and decidedly under-ripe raspberries. These fruits naturally have the right proportions of fruit acid and pectin.

Test Shows Pectin Lack

The acidity of a fruit is readily determined by the taste, but the presence of pectin must be determined by test. Should a juice lack acid, this can quickly be corrected by adding 1 tablespoon lemon juice to each cup of juice. Lemon juice added to strawberries or any red fruit will make the color more vivid, too.

When you want to determine the amount of pectin there are two simple rules you can depend on. One test is made by the use of Epsom Salts and the other by denatured alcohol. As denatured alcohol is poisonous, care must be taken that the tested juice is not tasted.

To test for pectin with alcohol, measure 1 tablespoon of fruit juice into a dish and add 1 tablespoon alcohol. If a jelly-like mass forms immediately, a large amount of pectin is present and one cup of sugar to one cup of fruit juice should be used to make

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Berries with ready-to-serve cereal, cream, poached eggs on toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Cheese fondue, creamed new peas, cabbage and grapefruit, salad, apple crisp, milk, tea.
DINNER: Vegetable plate, peanut brittle ice cream, sponge drops, milk, coffee.

the jelly. If the juice forms into small flaky particles, there is a small amount of pectin and two-thirds cup of sugar to one cup of juice is the right proportion. If the mixture remains unchanged in consistency, there is no pectin present and commercial pectin of some fruit known to be rich in pectin must be added.

To Make Epsom Salt Test

To make the Epsom Salts test mix 1 tablespoon fruit juice, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1-2 tablespoon Epsom Salts. Stir until the salts are dissolved and then let stand twenty minutes. The jelly-like mass or the formation of flaky particles indicates the amount of sugar needed.

Hard fruits such as apples and quinces must be cut in quarters and cooked in enough water to make tender in order to extract the juice. Soft fruits such as berries and currants are heated in just enough water to prevent burning until the juice flows freely. Put into jelly bag and drip. This first extraction of juice produces the finest jelly, clear and sparkling.

After the first extraction return the pulp to preserving kettle with water to half cover and heat slowly to the boiling point. Simmer gently for twenty minutes and pour into jelly bag to drip.

Rules overning Scoring Detailed

(Editor's note: Rules governing scoring of runs are detailed today in one of a series of articles on softball rules explanation by Joe Hughes, Eastland umpire.)

The rule which governs the scoring of runs is, of course, a point of interest. Primarily because that is the object of the game, and that is what it takes to win.

Here is Section 1 of Rule 28—Scoring of Runs. (Section 2 will follow tomorrow.)

"One run shall be scored every time a base-runner, after having legally touched the first three bases, shall legally touch the home base before three men are put out; provided, however, that if he reaches home on or during a play in which the third man is forced out or is put out before reaching first base, a run shall not count; also, if the third out is made by a preceding runner failing to touch a base a run shall not count. No run shall be scored on any play in which the third man is called out for leaving his base before a pitched ball has reached or passed the batter."

This section of the scoring rule explains when a run does not count. Section 2, which is tricky in its meaning, is often misinterpreted. Watch for it tomorrow.

"It has become evident that I am not a candidate," said Hoover. We understand, also, that prohibition has been repealed.
