WOMEN'S WAGE MEASURE MAY NOT BE VALID

AUSTIN, June 2.—Plans of the State Industrial commission to recommend a minimum wage for women to the next legislature, may have to be revised as a result of the decision of the U. S. supreme court on the New York minimum wage law, Everett Looney, chairman of the industrial commission said here today.

The only minimum wage provision in present Texas law apparently is a clause of the maximum hour law which requires double payment for any time worked over the hours fixed by law.

"I do not know how far the decision will effect our recommendations until I have read the decisions. It would be difficult to say if a valid law could be written within its term," Looney said.

McDonald Getting Encouragement On His Southern Trip

Back home after a two weeks' swing into South Texas, W. H. (Bill) McDonald of Eastland declared Tuesday that he had met with "wonderful encouragement" everywhere in connection with his candidacy for state land commissioner.

"For instance, in San Antonio, one of the leading political figures there told me that he had never seen a candidate for any state office have his campaign in such excellent shape this early in that important city as my race is," McDonald stated.

On the day that the state democratic convention was held in the Alamo city, the Eastland countian was busy meeting big and little leaders from all parts of Texas and in 15 hours of steady campaigning handed out 1,000 cards, one at a time.

"I'm still meeting lots of former Oil Belt citizens everywhere I go and almost without exception they declare they will roll up their sleeves and go to work to help me win this race," McDonald continued.

He mentioned seeing Ernest L. (Tubby) Thompson, star player on the state championship Breckenridge Buckaroo eleven in 1929.

Young Thompson is now in business with his father, J. E. Thompson, former Breckenridge banker. H. L. Mobley, who formerly operated the Mobley hotel in Cisco, has charge of tax matters for the American National Insurance company and Moody interests in Galveston—a highly important position.

Chapman Williamson, formerly of Cisco, is assistant manager of the magnificent Buccaneer hotel on the beach at Galveston. Mrs. Winnie Tichenor, former Ciscoan, is cashier at the Buccaneer. Owen Barker, former Cisco attorney, is one of the leading members of the Galveston bar and former district attorney.

W. W. Housewright, whom McDonald saw in Houston, is head of the San Benito Bank & Trust company, which has over $1,000,000 in deposits. Housewright six or eight years ago was a Ranger banker.

Clayton Orn, former Cisco attorney who now lives in Fort Worth, was in Houston while the candidate was there. Orn was appearing in a million-dollar oil suit in federal court.

In San Antonio, there is a large number of former Eastland Countians—Sam K. Wasaff (who used to live in Ranger), president and general attorney for the American-Syrian association of America; Judge Joe Burkett, former Eastland official; Dr. M. C. Van de Venter, formerly of Eastland; Dude Campbell, (at one time in the furniture business in Eastland), general agent for electrical products; Newt H. White (formerly of Cisco), head of a real estate company; former Business Manager Reed of Randolph College, Cisco, and former Senator Jeff Strickland. Former Mayor P. C. Sanders of Strawn now lives in San Antonio.

Former Eastland countians seen in Austin included Quincy Lee (Cisco), with Braniff Airlines; Miss Elizabeth Davenport (Eastland) and Miss Francis Cotton (Eastland), with State Comptroller's department, and Bert Bolinger (Ranger), chief clerk, fish, game and oyster commission.

Soldier Buys Newspaper in China; It's Lincoln Assassination Extra

MONTEREY, Cal.—Sergt. Frank Newton of the ordinance department of the U. S. Army arrived at the Presidio of Monterey after four years overseas service in the Orient brought with him a copy of the New York Herald of April 15, 1865.

It was the edition that told the story of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

Interesting as is the paper in itself, the manner in which it came into Newton's possession, 70 years after its publication and 8,000 miles from the streets of New York, where it first appeared, constitute a most unusual story.

It was on a cold, foggy night in the ancient Chinese city of Ting-Tao, Newton recounts, that he began looking around for something to keep himself warm. He noticed a coolie who had padded his clothing with old newspapers to keep out the biting wind. He at once entered into negotiations with the Chinese for a part of his collection.

GROUP TRIES TO REACH TOP OF HIGH PEAK

LONDON, June 2.—A tiny group of men struggled upward today in Arctic cold through howling winds and driving snow in a race to reach the top of the world, Mount Everest, the majestic peak that dominates the Himalayas on the Tibet Indian frontier.

It was a race against time and death, against the demons, who, the natives believe, are waiting on the summit to destroy any man who dares violate this last sanctuary of nature.

Dispatches from India reported in fragmentary form the final assault for this year of the sixth British Everest expedition, led by the veteran Hugh Rutledge, who, because of his age, must step aside at the last moment to let two younger men try to climb the final slopes.

It is humanly possible to climb Everest only for a period of a few weeks at this time of the year. It is a delicate matter of choice of the right day between the subsidence of the northwest gales and the arrival of the southwest monsoon winds from the sea, which will melt the snow and start avalanches.

Police and private detectives had sought him. A newspaper reporter found the youth living under the name "Jay Webster."

"Now I guess I'll have to go back to breakfast in bed and chauffeur-driven autos."

He had 16 cents in his pocket and holes in his shoes when found living with a roommate, Charles Fritz, 21, whom he met three weeks ago when they got a job selling magazines door-to-door.

"I didn't care to have my breakfast brought to my room by a maid and got tired of having a chauffeur drive me to a field when I competed in an athletic event," he said.

He was reluctant to return home, but agreed to return when informed over long distance by his father that his mother was ill and under the care of a doctor because of grief over his disappearance.

Wisconsin Clears Way for Pleasant Touring

Any motorist who ever has plodded along in second gear waiting for some noisy, lumbering truck to get out of the way...

For this commission has made a surprising discovery, to wit: that the ordinary citizen is the man who pays for the country's roads...

In line with this discovery, the commission has issued an order barring all heavy trucks from 21 main Wisconsin highways on week-ends and holidays...

If it were not for the fact that the ordinary American is a game guy when it comes to putting up with nuisances, the force of public opinion would long since have caused similar rules to be put through in every state in the union.

If there is one nuisance in American life today which makes weak men weep and strong men swear, it is the nuisance of the heavy-duty, cross-country truck.

Set out on any kind of motor trip these days and you will learn all about this nuisance before you are 24 hours older.

You come to pleasant, rolling country, and you start to drive up one of those long, gently winding hill roads. The wind is in your face and the green is on the cornfield...

The truck is going up the slope at the breath-taking rate of nine miles an hour. Since it is as long as from here to Christmas, you cannot pass it; you can only hang behind, take its fumes and noise and dust, creep along at a horse-and-buggy pace...

You finally get out from behind the thing and proceed. Within five minutes you are behind another, and the game is repeated. You finish the next chapter, at last, and a swaying monster coming the other way hogs the road and nearly puts you in the ditch.

It is useless to blame the driver; as like as not he has been in the cab for 12 hours straight, and is almost asleep from sheer weariness.

As evening draws near, you stop for the night in a charming roadside inn or tourists' home; and all night long your sleep is ruined by the heaven-splitting roar and rumble of trucks passing and repassing under your window.

You proceed, in the morning, over roads torn and bitten by these same trucks; and you can reflect, as you bump along, that you, as a taxpayer, have built the roads which these trucks are ruining for you.

Reflect on this sort of thing long enough and you are apt to conclude that these Wisconsin commissioners have hit on an idea which is worth copying—and enlarging.

Mansion Area of Oklahoma City Sacrificed to Oil

By REX CHANEY

United Press Staff Correspondent OKLAHOMA CITY, June 2. — The roaring days of Oklahoma City's first oil boom have returned.

A forest of derricks hedges in the state capitol, governor's mansion and scores of fine homes.

The rush for "black gold" started when the Mansion pool, two miles north of the old field, was opened up with sensational production.

Derricks, roaring steam boilers, heavy pipelines, machinery of every description is being jammed between houses, in back yards, near highways and streets.

The city has drilling zones, and city officials would not permit a vote to include the state lands in the zones.

Marland's action profited the state $372,000 by a bonus on leases granted to oil companies.

unable to maintain it and President Houston furloughed it on April 18, 1837.

started wells, and now the state is awaiting production and one-fourth royalty from all oil produced.

Parts of the University of Oklahoma medical school, hospital and crippled children's hospital lands are soon to be leased for drilling.

Wells drilled in near the governor's mansion have produced as high as 27,000 barrels a day.

Several months ago, an election was held extending the oil zones north of the state lands, but not including the state property.

Now some 200 rigs puff as their boilers with a full head of steam, drive the drill stems first into the rich Wilcox sand some 6,000 feet below the surface.

Marland visions a state income of $2,000,000 from oil within about a year.

The first well in the Oklahoma City field was drilled in 1930. Thousands of wells erept north through the east side of the city.

The newly-opened Mansion pool is an extension of the rich southern city oilfield which furnished the sensational Mary Sudik well that ran wild for days, spraying highly volatile crude over a wide area.

In the Capitol, windows rattle and clang as the earth trembles beneath the plunging, grinding force of 240 drill bits piercing dolomite, limestone and other rock formations deep in the earth.

Escaping gas at times screeches, and the smell of oil is heavy in the air. Hundreds of steam plumes stretch across homes unmolested a year ago.

Houses are being moved to make room for derricks in some instances. Immediately south of the field, between the northern and southern banks of derricks, lies Lincoln Terrace, one of the finest residential sections.

The GLAMOROUS ADVENTURE

by Jean Seiwright

© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

HERE TODAY GAIL FLETCHER, winner of a prize for costume design offered by a large silk manufacturing company, comes to New York to see her mother, who is a well-known fashion designer. Gail is the proprietor of an exclusive shop, Madame Lizette's, which is famous for its unusual and difficult to work costumes.

Mrs. FLETCHER, young and beautiful, is interested in Gail and her mother's advice. Presently Gail sees DICK SEARLES, whose sister, ROSEMARY, was her roommate at school.

Meanwhile, in Arizona, MARK CHAPMAN, long a wanderer, returns to his old home in the hands of the Travers Mining Co. Mark suspects the deal is crooked. He does not know the whereabouts of his niece, Gail, right-hand woman of the promoter.

HEA HALL, Madame Lizette's son, is representing the Travers company.

Gail goes to spend the weekend at the Searles home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

There was a note of pride in Dick's voice. "That's 'Heart's Delight,'" he said, pointing out the low, white clapboard house with its gray weathered roof, cresting a low hill.

Gail's eyes glowed as she turned to him. She had never known a real home. Ever since her mother's death, when Gail was little more than a babe, she and her father had wandered from place to place—here for a few months, there for a year, but never long enough anywhere to make a home.

The stark note of an automobile horn brought them swiftly back from the land of romance. Dick glanced in the mirror. "That's the veterinarian," he said. "One of the horses is sick. But this is a fine time to be coming to see the poor brute! I called him before I left home this morning."

"Perhaps he's making a second call if the animal's seriously ill," Gail suggested, as the car flashed past.

"Perhaps," Dick agreed, for with Gail beside him, nothing else mattered.

A few moments later Dick swung into the wide, tree-lined drive, and brought his car to a smooth stop beside the wide porch where Mr. and Mrs. Searles were seated.

"I'm so glad you could come," Mrs. Searles said, and her husband added, "We've been looking forward to seeing you, ever since Dick told us you were in town. We'll have to hear all about your work."

"Yes, Dad, but dinner will be served in a quarter of an hour. I'm sure you'd like to go to your room, wouldn't you, Gail?" Mrs. Searles said as she led the way indoors.

"What a gorgeous view!" she exclaimed, looking at the Sound.

"I thought you'd like it, my dear," Mrs. Searles drew the fluttering net curtains still further aside.

"We're not very formal here. Take your time. There's only the family here tonight. Dick told me he didn't want any other guests." Mrs. Searles smiled significantly as she left the room.

Gail's cheeks grew rosy. She knew Mrs. Searles approved of her friendship with Dick. That it would ripen into a warmer attachment was the wish of every member of the family. Hadn't Rosemary urged her to marry her brother?

Suddenly, as Gail slipped an antique bracelet on her slender wrist, she recalled a pair of twinkling blue eyes and a lock of dark hair that fell carelessly across a wide forehead. Had she lost her heart to Derek Hargreaves—an artist who could probably never offer his wife anything more than a studio apartment, who'd never know from month to month what his income might be? Yet as Gail walked lightly down the broad, softly-carpeted stairs and past the beautiful antique furniture in the hall, she realized that, without love, even a gorgeous home like this would be a prison.

Dinner was a gay affair. Gail related some of her experiences at Madame's, yet, as she talked, she knew she was giving only one angle of the picture. She did not mention the little meannesses that she had discovered were a vital part of Madame Lizette's character.

PRESENTLY they rose from the table and, as it was now too dark to go outdoors, they played bridge—not too seriously, however.

Ten o'clock was striking when Dick laid down his cards. "We've made game, Gail. Do you want to play another?"

Gail smiled, trying to stifle a yawn. "What do you say, Mrs. Searles?"

"I think we'd better stop. It looks to me as though you need a good rest."

"Oh, I'm not tired, only the minute I get near the sea I'm almost overcome with sleep."

"Let's take a walk, Gail. It's a fine moonlight night. I know you'll like it."

"Oh, Dick," whispered Gail as they sauntered slowly toward a rustic summer house where Mrs. Searles often sat and watched the boats going up and down the Sound, "I feel as though we're in some enchanted spot. Doesn't the moonlight make everything look different?"

Dick drew her close to him, but quickly slipping from his arms, she stooped down and pressed her lips against the velvety petals of a huge, sweet-scented pansy. "I never knew flowers could smell so sweet," she murmured.

"I never pay much attention to flowers. Mother is the gardener in our family, and I guess she keeps old Geddes busy getting all the new varieties she hears about; but, Honey, you were speaking about the moonlight. It hasn't changed you. Don't you love me, sweet—just a little?" He caught her hands in his.

"Of course I do, Dick. I love all your family. I think you're dad's adorable and your mother's just too sweet—"

"Gail, Gail! That's not what I want to hear. Why must you always bring in the family? When are you going to marry me?"

"But Dick!" Gail pushed him gently away from her. "I can't. I don't love you like that. Besides I've my work."

"Oh, hang your work! That's only an excuse."

"Dick!"

"Oh, there, Honey, forgive me. I shouldn't speak like that, but if it's that that's coming against us, then—"

"Suddenly she stopped. He knew if he raved against her profession, Gail would have still less use for him.

"I'm going in now," she said softly. "Good night!" The gorgeous moonlit garden had become a place of torture for her.

When she reached the Terrace, Dick hurried after her. "Gail, darling, please don't be angry with me," he begged.

"I'm not," she answered.

"Then promise—if you ever change your mind, you'll let me know."

"All right, Dick, I will." She tiptoed quietly into the house.

ONCE more Dick's sleek, shining car drew to the curb before the clubhouse, and Gail stepped to the curb. "Thanks ever so much, Dick, for the lovely week-end."

"We did have lovely weather, didn't we?" Dick replied wryly, reaching for Gail's dressing case.

"There, Dick, I'll easily manage now." Gail stretched out her arm for her luggage. Then, glancing at her companion, she said, in a low voice, "Don't look like that. Maybe some day you'll be glad I didn't take you up. I've a hunch you will."

"Never! You're the only girl I'll ever love. You'll marry me yet!"

Russia Is Only European Country Larger Than Texas

DALLAS.—Texans, celebrating 100 years of independence this year with the Centennial, may boast that the Lone Star State comprises one-twelfth of the area of the entire United States.

Texas is larger by 83,000 square miles than France.

Russia is the only European country with an area larger than Texas.

Brownwood Special Annual Regatta to Be Held June 20-21

BROWNWOOD, Tex.—Visitors to Brownwood's Second Annual Regatta and Speed Boat Races, June 20 and 21, will find greatly improved facilities for handling the large crowds that attend the event.

Native stone repair shops, concession house, dance pavilion and picnic structures have been constructed along the shore during the winter months by WPA labor.

The parking grounds have been enlarged and cleared of underbrush, paved roads built throughout the park, and a water supply system has been installed.

Numerous improvements will make it easier for spectators to witness the races and water events from more comfortable surroundings.

The races this year are attracting greater attention from speed boat racers throughout the Southwest, and it is expected that the largest field to enter a summer boat race meet this year in Texas will be on hand Sunday afternoon, June 21, for the National Outboard Association race program.

These events start promptly at 2 p. m. Sunday, with five races of two heats each. More than $700 in cash prizes will be awarded to the winners. Forty entries already have been assured.

The two-day program will get under way Saturday morning.

with bait and fly casting tournament under the auspices of the Frank Walton League. Prizes totaling $30 are offered in these events.

Saturday afternoon local boat races will be held and a number of novelty races, designed to interest and thrill the spectator, have been arranged.

Aquaplane riding and other water sports also have been scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

Regatta officials are expecting record breaking crowds at Lake Brownwood for the two-day Regatta, which offers unique entertainment for residents of arid West Texas.

Lake Brownwood, a 7800 acre body of water, is one of the largest inland lakes in the state, and racing officials state its protected waters offer an ideal course for speed boat races.

More than 10,000 people attended the 1935 races last summer, and preparations are being made to entertain larger crowds this year.

One reason why drivers go gray is figuring if that woman just ahead is signaling a turn, or just has a new diamond.

Ten Gallon Hats And Invitations Sent from Texas

DALLAS.—A half dozen ten-gallon hats and Texas Centennial Exposition invitations were presented to internationally-known figures by Mrs. Voley W. Taylor, of Brownsville, president of the Texas Federation of Womens' Clubs, on a trip she made following the General Federation of Womens' Clubs convention in Miami, Fla., recently.

While at the convention she presented a hat and an invitation to the General Federation president, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson of Oklahoma, and extended a general invitation to the convention as a whole.

In Havana Mrs. Taylor presented a hat and invitation to Provisional President Barnet. Details of both the presentation and the Exposition which opens here June 6 were broadcast. Although the parliament was in session in Jamaica arrangements were made with Counsel Armstrong to make the presentation to Governor Denham later.

While Mrs. Taylor was in Panama City she was honor guest at a luncheon attended by more than 200 American women, including the wife of the governor, Mrs. Schley. Here she was given official recognition and talked on the Centennial. She broadcast on the night of her arrival in San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica and the next morning she was received by the president, Leon Cortez. Back in Miami, the train was held so she could keep her appointment at the governor's office in Tallahassee. There she made her presentations to Governor Scholz.

Mrs. Taylor will arrive in Dallas about June 4 to confer with local Federation officials about plans of the organization for the exposition.
