What
reminds me...

Eastland has had more than its share of sorrow during the past week in the passing of several of its most treasured citizens. Our deaths are and in the recent death Mrs. Myrtle Hill, wife of our friend, Elmo Hill. There are no words that can relieve an aching heart of a father, son and members of the family at this time.
God alone can handle those hours when spiritual wounds must be soothed.

Good weather still keeps folks uncomfortable during the morning hours which certainly is a relief from a three day previous heat and day. Still hoping for rain.

Practically everything is in order and ready for the big annual picnic of the Lone Star Gas company employes. A complete and interesting program for the entire day is arranged. Most of the events will take place at the City park. They are indeed welcome.

Western Railroads
Give New Meaning
To Word 'Vacation'

CHICAGO, Ill.—According to Webster, the word "vacation" means "the act of vacating—free from thought and action." The Western Railroads, however, have elaborated upon the dictionary's description of this all-too-brief holiday, which the American public eagerly anticipates each year, and have given the word a new meaning. They have dressed up "Mrs. Vacation of 1936" in attractive and modern clothing, and have put her out-moded sister of yesterday to shame.

After riding over seemingly endless stretches of hot, arid, cinder and smoke filled stretches of plains and prairie—"broiling" through intolerable heat waves, only to be uncomfortably "chilled" upon sudden ascent to higher territories the next hour, yesterday's tourist usually needed a "rest cure" upon his return home.

Railroads of the West have deliberately changed this picture, today Mr. and Mrs. America's vacation begins the moment they board the train. No more "cinder cure."

No more dread of heat and stuffy atmosphere. Air-conditioning insures pure air at right temperature at all reasons of the year, ending the former association of "banana fumes and carousels." Mildly amplified her newest and daintiest clothing frocks this summer with confident assurance that she and her trip with the same elegant trimness in appearance as when she began it.

The cool comfort of air-conditioned rail travel, however, is only one of the many attractions "Mission of 1936" offers western adventurers. The interiors of the railway coaches surpass the most luxurious dreams of today's traveler. New color schemes, the "last word" in moderns as well as comfortable furniture and soothing scientific lighting—in fact, all the conveniences of the ultra modern home are part of the standard equipment of modern railroads. Swift streamlined transportation, rapid time schedules, traveling time cut in two, lower fares, planned circles of service, it's easy to understand why American public has become broad minded.

AS DEMOCRATS GATHERED IN PHILADELPHIA

Signing Up the Delegations—
Signs of activity were everywhere as final arrangements were completed for the opening of the Democratic Convention. Darrell St. Clair of Washington, D. C., is pictured inspecting a pile of placards that were to be used to identify the delegations of each state and territory.

Oil Belt Gun Club Prepares For Its July 4 Shoot; Visiting Experts Due

Everything is in readiness at the Oil Belt Gun Club for their second annual shoot to be held July 4 at their grounds six miles north of Eastland on the Eastland-Breckenridge road.
Some 25 or 30 out-of-town marksmen are expected from Dallas, Fort Worth, Abilene, Graham and other towns.
A program of 150 targets has been arranged with many merchandise prizes.
One of the new features which will be of interest to old shooters are the new angles at which the skeet targets will be thrown. The Oil Belt club is one of the first in the state to change their traps to throw this angle which is said to be harder than the old style. Old-time skeet shooters may find it as difficult to run a high score as those who have never shot very much.
In order to interest new shooters a special event of 50 targets are being arranged for beginners only.
The clubhouse and grounds will be open to the public. Plenty of room for parking. The clubhouse is on a hill overlooking the grounds making it one of the coolest spots in Eastland county, officials declared.
All shooters and their friend and anyone interested in watching some of the best shots in West Texas break targets are invited to drive out and enjoy themselves, an announcement from the club stated.

Sign Democrats Meet Is Near

ROBINSON IS CHAIRMAN OF CONVENTION

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—Sen. Joseph Robinson assumed the helm of the national Democratic convention today, steering it toward settlement of its two controversial issues—the 1936 platform and abolition of the two-thirds rule of choosing the nominee.
Robinson was acclaimed chairman after delayed submission of the credentials committee report.
Just before he took his post the rules committee voted 36 to 13 to recommend to the convention substitution of majority rule for the ancient two-thirds requirement.
From closed platform drafters issued the word agreement had come to put new teeth in the proposed monopoly plank and compromise was near on the ticklish subject of a constitutional amendment for labor, wages and hours.
The labor question was thrust into prominence by Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York. Today Lehman was formally petitioned by representatives of the National Young Democrats to reconsider his decision against running for reelection.
The first and possibly the only floor debate of the session was expected late today when the rules committee report is presented on the two-thirds rule. Southern representatives, seeking to retain their 104-year-old power over the presidential choice, promised to carry the fight to the floor after their defeat in committee.
The session was brief today on the part of a credentials committee, lasting only 33 minutes. A recess was taken until tonight when the rules and resolutions committee reports are expected to be ready.

DEFENSE NEARS END OF CASE OF VINCE BOSS

By United Press
CUEIRO, Texas, June 25.—Counsel for Vince Boss, Houston youth, charged with killing R. W. Albert, were expected to conclude defense testimony today after presenting witnesses who said the youth and other relatives had been of unsound mind.
Sam Mormino, Waco, great-uncle of the youth, said he believed Boss was temporarily insane when Albert was beaten and slashed to death while making collections on his cheese route between Houston and Hempstead, March 21.
Mormino said a second cousin of the defendant was adjudged insane last year and a great aunt was mentally unbalanced.
The state's rebuttal witnesses are expected to be mental experts called to testify to the youth's sanity, established in a recent hearing at Houston.

Lower Prices For Pork Seen

AMES, Ia.—The agricultural Middle West is becoming increasingly interested in the prospects for export disposal of American farm commodities due to increased output after three years of unfavorable crop conditions.
Dr. T. W. Schultz, head of the Agricultural Economics department at Iowa State College has noted this increasing concern over the export situation in a recent survey, he reported.
Production of pigs, Schultz said by way of example, increased 31 per cent in the last half of 1935 over the last half of 1934, and probably will increase by another 25 per cent in the first half of 1936 as compared to the corresponding period of the last year.
"As every farmer is well aware, those larger supplies mean lower prices unless demand increases proportionately," Dr. Schultz said.
"Domestic demand—the most important consideration—is expected to increase the rest of this year, but not enough to offset the increase in production of hogs."
Schultz said, however, that an increase by 25 to 30 per cent in foreign demand will be necessary to hold hog prices as high during the next 12 months as prices have been during the past 12 month period.
Doubts Heavy Exports
"Business conditions, Schultz said, "have improved in recent months in most foreign countries which purchase American farm products. Despite this improvement, there is little hope for expansion of foreign buying to an extent to absorb the added production that is accumulating."
"Trade barriers," he explained, "are about as high as they were a year ago—which is to say they are extremely high and in the case of lard and pork, Iowa's chief products, almost prohibitive of expanded trade."

Funeral Held For Mrs. Myrtle Hill

Funeral services for Mrs. Myrtle Hill, 43, lifetime resident of Eastland county, who died Wednesday afternoon at Eastland, were to be held from the First Methodist church at 4:30 p. m. Thursday with Rev. E. R. Stanford, pastor of the church officiating. Rev. Stanford was to be assisted by Rev. G. W. Thomas, Ranger Baptist pastor, and Rev. W. A. Richardson, pastor of the First Christian Church of Eastland.
Burial was scheduled in Eastland cemetery under direction of Hamner Undertaking company.
Mrs. Hill was born June 1, 1893 at Ranger. She was married Dec. 25, 1917, to Elmo Hill.
Survivors are her husband and son, James, of Eastland, two sisters, Mrs. Lela Barnett of Mineral Wells and Mrs. G. W. Thomas of Ranger, and two brothers, T. E. and John D. Barefield of Fort Worth.
Pallbearers were to be Weaver Harue, D. J. Jobe, J. B. Johnson, W. A. Wiegand, Jack Muirhead and District Clerk P. L. Crossley.

Iron Bar Falls, Rips Shirt But Misses Worker

BONNEVILLE, Ore.—The "Crowbar Case," famous in medical history, nearly had another one to rival it here in what is probably the outstanding freak accident on the Bonneville Dam.
A concrete worker was standing on a heavy timber at the base of one of the piers in the main spillway dam. Above him a crew was stripping forms from the pier top, 60 feet from the ground. One of the strippers accidentally dropped his crowbar, a five-foot, straight, pointed bar.
It dropped like an arrow, pierced the rim of the concrete worker's hat, shot down through his heavy coat and his underwear, and literally pinned him to the timber when it came out the seat of his trousers and stuck in the wood.
The point of the bar was buried more than three inches in the heavy timber, yet it had never touched the man's skin. He was treated at the emergency hospital for shock.

Native Fined For Helping Lion Escape

By United Press
NAIROBI.—A native was fined $12.50 in a Tanganyika native court for helping a lion to escape.
With the approach of the rainy season and the danger of lions lurking in the long grass beside the paths for the purpose of raiding stock, native authorities in the Tabora district prepared a number of pit traps.
The accused native found a lion in a trap, and then made a ladder, went down and helped the beast escape.
He explained to the court that the lion in question was his friend.

Party Harmony—

The Roosevelt song book inspires Kitty Keelan to set a keynote of Democratic harmony at the convention headquarters in Philadelphia.

ROOSEVELT TO ACCEPT WITH SHORT SPEECH

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 25.—Acceptance at the Democratic national convention Saturday night will be short and snappy, the white house revealed today.
In contrast to the lengthy oration at the convention of the two major parties, the president will accept the Democratic nomination and possibly justify the acts of his administration, give an insight into his future program and make his re-election appeal—all in 2,000 words.
The address, it was understood, would require about 25 minutes. It will be delivered at Franklin Field at the conclusion of the acceptance speech of Vice President John Garner.

Kidnaped Girls Tell of Experience

ATTICA, Kan., June 25.—Two girls, kidnaped yesterday by four men who robbed the Attica State Bank, said today they were treated well the short time they were in the robbers' custody. About $1,000 was taken from the bank. As the robbers fled in a gray Ford sedan they scattered roofing tacks to prevent pursuit.

Landon Arrives At Denver For a Short Vacation

By United Press
DENVER, June 25.—Alf Landon, governor of Kansas and Republican presidential nominee, arrived in Colorado today and was given a rousing welcome.
Republican and Democratic party leaders and state officials rubbed shoulders with each other as they dropped party lines to greet the Landon party.
Landon declined to discuss issues of the coming campaign.
"Those matters will be discussed when the campaign starts. I have come here for a vacation and I am going to spend it in a flannel shirt and high boots."
"If I want to carry Colorado I suppose I will have to use flies when I fish. I like to use bait, but I know Colorado fishermen like to use flies, so I am going to use flies."

Cisco Official and Carbon Man Inspect 800 Acres Pop Corn

CISCO, June 25.—J. E. Spencer, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has returned from a business trip to Austin, Dallas and Fort Worth.
On Sunday Spencer was the guest of G. C. Atkins of the Carbon Peanut company which has 800 acres of pop corn in the winter garden district. This corn is coming into maturity and should make 15 or 20 cars of shelled corn 60,000 pounds to the car, which is wholesaling at 10 cents a pound, Spencer said.
The mill has just received a letter from a California concern asking for samples and price on a 20-car order.
While at Austin Spencer secured committee from Bucy early of the maintenance department that Highway 89 would be kept in good condition for traffic during the Centennial but that likely no paving would start before Fall.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the rally have received definite assurance of delegations attending from Ranger, Cisco and many of the rural communities. The committeemen stated that due to so much advanced interest in the rally that undoubtedly it is going to be one of the greatest youth demonstrations that has ever been staged in this district.

American Fleet Goes Down At Its Inland Scapa Flow Near Paris

By United Press
PARIS.—At Bonneville-sur-Marne, not far from Paris, an American fleet of 25 vessels is gradually sinking in America's inland Scapa Flow.
Strollers along the canal of the Little Darse, which leads from the Marne, come with surprise upon this graveyard of ships, some still afloat, some half-submerged, some showing only their smokestacks, on whose bows are the words, so strange to French eyes, Arkansas, Missouri, Ohio, Kentucky, Worcester, Georgia, and finally—not so strange—St. Louis.
They are part of the war stocks—25 river tugs, bought by the French government from the United States in 1916 with the intention of using them for the Paris-Rouen service. They were handsome boats when they sailed up the Marne, Missouri leading the way, and turned into the canal of the Little Darse in 1916, and the French government had paid 20,000 francs each for them. They were tied up to the bank—temporarily. Coal was left in their bunkers so that they would be ready to move out in a few days and start their new service. They haven't moved since.
After awhile the department of inland navigation took their engines out and, presumably, put

AXE SLAYERS SOUGHT BY SHERIFF'S MEN

By United Press
JOHNSON CITY, June 25.—Officers of Blanco and Travis counties today began a search for the slayer of Mrs. Ernest Herwig and her nine-year-old son, who were found apparent victims of an axe killing at their home near Mountain View.
The bodies were discovered by her husband when he returned home from work last night. The rural phone had been jerked from the wall and he went to Mountain View to notify officers.
State rangers said they had sent one into the hill country on the case, not having been requested by local officers for assistance.
An arrest was believed to be near after an all night search for the weapon.
The boy, son of Mrs. Herwig by a former marriage, was named Max Roebuck.
Both Mr. and Mrs. Herwig had been married before. He had two daughters. They were working with him in the fields. Evidences of a struggle were found. Mrs. Herwig's slippers were off and were at some distance from the body.

Search Abandoned For Convicts In Mexia Territory

By United Press
MEXIA, Texas, June 25.—State and local officers abandoned today the search for Forrest Gibson and Luke Trammel, fugitive convict killers, convinced they would have to await further movement of the pair.
A horse stolen Tuesday from a farmer was found tied to the barn of a farmer at Round Prairie, Robertson county, yesterday, but the farmer told possemen he had not seen the two convicts.
Prison bloodhounds were too exhausted for further use at present. The pursuers said it was useless to continue the chase in the area so well known to Gibson, who was rearred there.

GOP Confidence Is Aroused Today

By United Press
WASHINGTON, June 25.—Inspired by the confidence of National Committee Chairman John Hamilton, Republicans today mapped plans for a vigorous campaign in every section of the country.
Republican hopes also were lifted by promise of Representative William Lemke, union candidate, to conduct an active campaign, after appealing to labor for support, left on a western speaking tour.
Hamilton believes the union party will swing many doubtful middle-western states to Gov. Alf Landon, "for every vote the third party takes from us, it will take from six to nine from the Democrats," he said.

We Can't Ignore Issue of Soil Conservation

We have become so used to having our government approach things sidewise, with a crab-like, scuttling movement, that the pious words about soil conservation in the party platforms look like a cloak for crop control.

The parties pledge themselves to take eroded land out of production and restore it. Remembering that the U. S. Supreme Court said about the original AAA crop control scheme, the ordinary citizen assumes, that this talk of conservation is just another plan to do what the court said the AAA could not do.

Probably it is, to a certain extent. But anyone who doubts that the problem of soil conservation is very real and pressing has only to look at a survey recently completed by the U. S. Soil Conservation Service to learn that he is in error.

This survey reveals, for instance, that no fewer than 735,000,000 acres of once-fertile farm land in the United States have been from 25 to 100 per cent destroyed by erosion. This is an area four times the size of Texas, 23 times the size of New York state; it represents one of the most titanic losses of natural resources that any nation ever suffered.

During the last century, the survey reports, the country has suffered a direct monetary loss by erosion of at least $10,000,000,000—which will be doubled or tripled within 50 years unless something drastic is done.

Sixty-five per cent of the tillable land in the great Piedmont section, reaching from New Jersey to Alabama, has been stripped of its topsoil by wind and rain.

Five hundred thousand acres that were under cultivation in five coastal counties in Alabama a few years ago now are abandoned and worthless. Erosion is costing Oklahoma $50,000,000 a year.

Sheet erosion is menacing 12,000,000 acres of Illinois' incalculably rich, black corn land. In the country as a whole, more than 50,000,000 acres have been so gullied and eroded that they will never again be good for anything.

It would be possible to go citing facts like these for half an hour. Enough has been said, however, to indicate that when the Republicans and the Democrats talk about soil conservation measures, they are not just talking about a new way to reduce agricultural production.

If we were living in the piping times of complete prosperity, with no farm surpluses, unemployment, or unbalanced budget to worry us, this thing that is happening to our soil would strike us as the most serious problem of the century.

In our present condition, it is only one of many problems; but it is hardly an exaggeration to say that in the long run it will probably prove the most important of all.

Whichever party is put in power next November, the campaign to save the greatest of our resources—the land—must be prosecuted with all the determination that would be given to a campaign to repel an invading enemy.

According to an English lecturer, married life is very trying on the nerves until children arrive. Then, of course, the nerves are gone.

Q. Was Elkin, Texas, named for the Illinois city of the same name? E. J. Smithville.

A. No, for Robert M. Elkin, who surveyed the Southern Pacific railroad through the town.

Q. Just how old is the town of Yuleta, said to be the oldest town in Texas? D. A. Courtney.

A. Marcos de Niza discovered an Indian settlement there in 1537 and Coronado took possession of the settlement, which was then on an island, in 1540. Later, the river shifted and Yuleta was thrown into Texas territory. The present town site is traced to 1682.

Q. Did the protestant churches in Texas ever have a "Vigilance" committee? A. R. T. Galveston.

A. On May 8, 1837, a group of ministers of several protestant denominations met at Houston and organized "The Ecclesiastical Committee of Vigilance for Texas." It grew out of the fact that imposters were coming into Texas, representing themselves as ministers and soliciting funds for various purposes. The organization was given wide publicity but did not last long.

Q. What was the first text book used in Texas and for what purpose was it used? L. E. Donna.

A. It was a book of questions to be used by missionaries in teaching the Indians, was compiled and translated by a missionary at the Espada mission and was printed in Mexico in 1760. The questions were intended to improve the religious and moral habits of the Indians.

Little Rock Moves Big Rock of History

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Workmen have completed the moving of the huge rock from which this city gets its name to a location on the statehouse grounds.

The rock, one of the six that lined the south bank of the Arkansas river, that early day settlers used as a crossing guide in fording the stream, weighed more than five tons.

It has been placed on the site of a Civil War prison that was constructed by the Federal Army and later used by the Confederate Army, when town was re-captured in the last days of the war.

"The jail. It seems that there was a fight and bail was needed and I came for you when I heard."

A little hesitantly, Marcia turned and followed Rosita. The French girl summoned a cab and they started through the twilight.

"Robert is so careless," the French girl said.

Marcia did not answer.

"And such a warm heart," she continued. "He loves you, I think. Yes, I think he loves you very much. But he loves others. He would forget."

"Why should he forget?" Marcia asked them.

Rosita shrugged her black-clad shoulders. "Oh—if something should happen to make him very displeased with you. You love him, I think."

To this assertion Marcia turned a quiet, disinterested face.

"This is it," Rosita said, the driver and started to a gray door.

"This? The jail?" But perhaps she was not sure. She looked at the man who had seen the French girl.

"Yes, the jail," she said. "The French girl said."

"The French girl said?" Marcia asked.

CHAPTER VII

Camilla's exclamation of Rosita's name, Phil looked puzzled, and Bob gave a long, low whistle.

"Rosita, of course!" he said. "It is in the world."

"Rosita?" she repeated. "That would be interesting to find out," Camilla said. "Let's get out," she said. "Let's get out."

"Her night off," someone exclaimed.

"Where does she live?" Bob asked.

"That, monsieur, nobody knows," the man answered, with a careless shrug which indicated at one did not reveal addresses.

Bob's hand went into his pocket. He was hesitating, then gave an address on the Left Bank.

"Wrong address, I'll bet," Phil murmured. "But come on."

They did. The cab drew up in front of an old, low house, and a sterner old lady with rizzled curls opened the door.

"Rosita!" she repeated. "Oh, no, Rosita! She lives here, but it is not here tonight. She is way for the day and night."

"Mind if we stick around until she comes back?" Phil asked.

She opened the door and led them into a dusty, airless room. In an hour, Phil stood up.

"I'm afraid she wins. What about getting the gendarmes?"

"A good idea," Bob agreed. "I don't trust Rosita."

"The French jails serve tea? How very considerate. And maybe they have little cakes and sandwiches, too." Her anger was wounding. She had let herself be duped by Rosita. Rosita, reading character, had known that Bob would be the type of man to get himself into trouble, innocently enough, and had used it as an ace card.

"This will interest you," Pierre put a photograph before her.

White with anger, Marcia gazed at it. There was no mistaking the two people in it. She was the girl and the man whose arms held her was Pierre.

"That picture without this is no good," Pierre talked on in a slippery voice that gave the impression of having been rubbed in oil.

"And this one, which I shall show presently to Mademoiselle, has need of the first one to establish the young lady's identity. See!"

He placed a second photograph on the table. The two people were the same. You could tell the girl by her clothes, and her hair and her profile. The man was implanting a kiss on her mouth.

"You—you—!" She would have torn the pictures in two, but remembered, in time, that Pierre had the negatives.

"The likeness is splendid; don't you think?" Rosita murmured.

"What do you want?" Marcia asked.

"Fifty thousand francs," they answered together.

"And if I won't—"

"Every newspaper in America—in your New York—will have these pictures. Every one will know that you and Pierre were—sweethearts."

"You—!" Her words choked in her throat.

"Well!" A soft, sliding word. Marcia stood up and walked out into the street.

From behind her came a low voice. "You have until tomorrow night at 7, Mademoiselle. And then—"

Marcia did not go home. She went alone to a little restaurant to drink more tea and think. It was preposterous. That snickering gigolo had made himself obnoxious and was seeking a reward. She would have him arrested. At once.

She went to police headquarters and eventually found an officer who would listen to her.

"But you are in the picture, you and this man?" he asked.

"And he kissed you?"

"Yes, he did, but—"

"Then he has the evidence. How do I know that you aren't lying?" Marcia got up and hurried from the room. She had to consult somebody. Anybody. Bob wouldn't had got her into this. Got her into it merely by being the irresponsible person he was. But Phil—

She would go to him.

"Hurry, driver," she pleaded. "I'll triple the fare!"

Six Scottsboro Negroes Face Trial Again In July

By MAYNARD STITT
United Press Staff Correspondent

DECATUR, Ala.—With one more exciting chapter written into the five-year history of the notorious Scottsboro assault cases, six of the nine negro defendants will be brought to trial once more here next month.

At the end of the trial of Heywood Patterson, which resulted in a 75-year sentence, the trials of the six were continued due to the illness of a witness considered material by the defense. Only seven of the defendants were arraigned at the special session of the court here in January.

It was at the end of the Patterson trial, while the defendants were being taken to Birmingham, where they are held in jail, that the most recent episode—an attempted break for liberty—occurred.

Ocie Powell, one of the nine defendants, was shot and critically wounded by Sheriff J. Street Sandlin after the negro had slashed the throat of a deputy sheriff in his attempt to escape.

The break was made as the motor car which Sandlin drove, and in which the deputy, Edgar Blacklock, rode, reached the crest of Lacon Mountain, between here and Birmingham. Blacklock and Sandlin were in the front seat of the sheriff's car. Powell, Andy Wright, and a third negro were in the rear seat.

Sandlin said he saw Powell slash at the deputy, and in the rear-view mirror caught a glimpse of Wright preparing to make an

The negroes testified that there had been a fight with white boys on the train, but all denied they had assaulted the girls. The negroes and the women were taken from the train at Paint Rock by a posse that had formed when a telephone call from the youths thrown from the train had informed townspeople of the fight.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE NEA Service Staff Writer WE used to think that cottage cheese was something you served only as is. The smart modern cooks and dietitians have found a new use for it as an accessory. In fact, it's become such a fashion that most of the city markets and dairies offer a very good quality on their counters. It usually may be had in two forms, mixed with cream ready for use or unmixed. The unmixed is cheaper to buy, but if cream must be purchased for the mixing, the final cost is practically the same.

However, cottage cheese can be made at home and it's an excellent way to use up milk when it sours. If you follow the rules carefully you will have successful results.

How to Make It The directions are very simple. Thick, curdled milk that has soured quickly is the best foundation for a good quality of cottage cheese and the following is the easiest of several ways to make it.

Place the bowl containing the thick sour milk into a large pan of hot water. Never let the milk become hotter than blood heat. Too high a temperature toughens and hardens the curd. Let stand until thorough separation takes place. Then pour into a large square of cheesecloth—double thickness—placed over a colander. Gather up the four corners of the cheesecloth and hang up to drain. Let it drain until the curd is firm and the whey is drained out. It's the whey that has the strong acid taste. Remove from cheesecloth to a bowl and beat with a fork, adding cream, either sweet or sour, to make the mixture of the right consistency. An electric beater is splendid for this mixing. Add salt to taste, which is usually about 1 teaspoon to 2 cups of cheese. Season well with white pepper.

Lamb in Rice Border One and one-half pounds of lamb, trim meat in neat pieces of clear meat. Put bones and trimmings into sauce pan, add cold water and let stand thirty minutes. Bring slowly to the boiling point and simmer thirty minutes. Strain. Brown lamb in hot oiled frying pan and put into casserole. Add tomatoes, minced onions, salt, pepper and broth. Cover casserole and cook about an hour. Add peas and cook thirty minutes longer, until tender. Remove meat and vegetables to center of hot platter and surround with a border of steamed rice. Thicken liquid in casserole with flour stirred to a smooth paste with a little cold water. Pour gravy over meat, garnish with ripe olives and serve.

Tomorrow's Menu BREAKFAST: Chilled orange juice, cere, cream, baked French toast, honey, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Open egg and lettuce sandwiches, radishes and olives, peach shortcake, milk, tea. DINNER: Lamb in rice border, salad of mixed vegetables in lime jelly, cottage cheese with fresh strawberry preserves, crisp crackers, milk, coffee.

Hughes Explains Little-Used Rule

By Joe Hughes Here is a rule very seldom used because of the neglect of the players to catch the base-runner. The rule is Section 17 of Rule 27.

"The base-runner in running to first base may over-run said base after touching it in passing without incurring liability to be put out for being off the said base, provided he returns at once and touches the base, after which he may be put out as at any other base. If, after over-running first base, he attempts to run to second base before returning to first base, he shall forfeit such exemption from liability to be put out. (This is an appeal play and the umpire should not make any decision until his attention has been called to it and the play actually made at the base in question.)

When a batter gets a safe hit and he rounds first base, there is no attempt to get him at first base in order to make the outfielder hurry his throw to the infield, usually second base. This action on the part of the base-runner is to hurry the play or draw the outfielders' attention away from the advancing base-runner in case of any sort of a slip in fielding the ball the base-runner has a fine start to second base. In such an instance that base-runner is out if he is touched with the ball in the hand of a fielder. He has made an attempt to advance, so he therefore forfeits the right to leisurely return to the base, He must make it back.

This is an appeal decision, which, of course, makes the umpire look bad. I looked bad on the same play in the Brownwood game and last week a Texas League umpire at Fort Worth had the identical play.

Driver Recalls 1875 Stage Line SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Henry Stone, 78, who drove a stage coach out of San Diego when he was 17, recalled tales of the hectic gold mining days of the southwest when he discovered the coach he piloted over treacherous mountain trails in 1875 on an exhibition at the world's fair here.

Stone was brought to the Exposition by Mrs. G. E. Ashby, supervisor of a WPA historical writers' project at Santa Ana, Calif. He had been living at Artesia, Calif.

Even before he drove the stage between San Diego and Yuma, Ariz., Stone rode with the pony express over the same route, passing gold mining settlements en route where he picked up mail and changed horses.

"Our schedule on the Yuma road was from here to Armo, Potrero, Campo and Mountain Springs," Stone said. "We'd change horses in each of those settlements. A boy would run out with a fresh horse, grab the single line for that animal, and hand us the new line. The company never let us get down off the box for fear we might go a drink. But we'd get that, anyhow."

"Although, we had a lot of fun in those days, I don't know whether it was because times were different, or because we were young. Maybe it was that. It's awful good to be young."

Stone examined the old vehicle carefully, and said it was "in almost as good shape" as when he drove it.

"Right up there near the left side lamp," he said, "you'll find the initials M. R. That was my gig, Rorke, whose daddy was at Campo for a while. I wondered what became of him. He sure was a fine guy."

Trouble was not frequent, Stone, but he admitted to come a "bit wild" at times. "The most trouble I remember a run over the mountains right soon after I began coach instead of riding for the press."

"Up at Campo some of the bandits started to rob the store, but 'Gas' had been for them. I guess he had behind every flour barrel station. As the bandits stepped to the door, he began to He shot 13 of them and the up right there on the step one got away. 'Gas' was sore because he missed one when a gun jammed."
