EASTLAND, TEXAS, THURSDAY EVENING, JULY 16, 1936

PRICE TWO CENTS

No. 220

That reminds me...

Boy, those political aspirants certainly swinging heavy on the old age pension business. It is the thorn in their side and all of them want to get on the band wagon. Its kinder more noise in the inside than the outside. Old folks no doubt sitting on the side lines, thinking a whole lot and saying nothing.

W. O. Tyson, recently of Gram, but for several years assistant buyer in the W. C. Stripling furniture department of Fort Worth, as well as having been in business for himself has opened Eastland's newest and only furniture store on West Main street. Mr. Tyson has moved his family here and expects to make it his permanent home. Eastland will afford to support its own furniture store and Mr. Tyson states that regardless of what a person wants to pay for anything for the home if he hasn't it he will get it. There is no reason why a furniture store could not prosper in Eastland here's hoping that Mr. Tyson come to a city that will build him one of the largest furniture stores in this section and that people will give him their business in this line wherever possible.

ATTEMPT MADE UPON LIFE OF KING EDWARD

LONDON, July 16.—A middle-aged eccentric sprang at King Edward VIII today during a royal procession near Buckingham palace, flourishing a revolver in an apparent attempt to assassinate the king.

Bystanders and police overpowered the man.

At Scotland Yard the assailant gave his name as George Andrew Mahon of London, and described himself as a journalist. He is partially crippled, middle-aged and bald.

The evidence presented at a hearing in Bow Street police court indicated he is harmless. Mahon was rather incoherent and denied any intention or desire to hurt the king. He said he merely wanted to "protest" but did not say what he desired to protest.

The incident occurred while the king was riding his horse at the head of a military parade, returning to the palace from ceremonies in Hyde Park.

The street was lined with cheering thousands. The apparent attack happened so suddenly there was the greatest confusion and Scotland Yard, itself, was not sure what happened.

Some witnesses said the man threw a brick-shaped package, which struck the king's horse in the flank, causing the animal to rear. Others thought the man's revolver was knocked from his hand when the crowd attacked him. The revolver hit the horse.

Mrs. Murphy was reported in a serious condition from shock. She was brought here in the same ambulance with the senator.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodward were injured slightly in the accident, hospital attendants said.

Mrs. Murphy said the senator lost control of the car when a front tire blew out. They were driving slowly, she said.

RAINS FALL IN SMALL PORTION OF DRY AREA

CHICAGO, July 16.—The burning prairies of the Dakotas generated new blasts of heat today that threatened to increase the death toll to upwards of 4,000 and spread new destruction over America's drought basin.

Scattered showers brought temporary relief to parts of Illinois, Indiana, southern Michigan and Kentucky, but forecasters saw a continuation of hot weather in the Ohio valley, the upper Mississippi valley, the lower Missouri valley, and the central plains states.

"As the hot air moves east, the western Dakotas will be cooler tonight and the Dakotas, northwestern Minnesota and Nebraska will enjoy cooler weather tomorrow," the weather bureau reported.

The "best" rains fell during the night in southern Illinois and Kentucky. Heavy wind and hail accompanied thunderstorms in central Indiana. That state counted a death toll of 243 after nine consecutive days of 100-degree temperature.

Deaths in Chicago passed 300, while the summer resort states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, reported more than 1,709 deaths attributed to heat. In the Twin Cities alone heat deaths numbered 350.

Texas Visitors to Be Guided While Visiting the State

AUSTIN, Tex.—Visitors to Texas during the Centennial year need no "blind flying" after they cross the State line.

Particularly if they enter the state through Orange, Joquim, Marshall, Texarkana, Paris, Denison, Gainesville, Wichita Falls, Texline, Farwell, Pecos, El Paso, or Milan. For there they may drive into "information houses," placed for their convenience, and giving them every conceivable kind of information about Texas.

The house may be of natural Texas stone, a log cabin, a small colonial house, or Spanish Mission type, but in every instance the service will be the same. A crew of from two to four A. & M. Cadets will answer questions, route tourists over the best roads to their announced destination, explain the difference between night and evening, and tell the visitors just what a "dude ranch" consists of.

J. B. Early, chief of the maintenance division of the State Highway Department, directs the service. "For the personnel he said: "Every boy was handpicked, and was graduated on personality, intelligence and upon recommendation of the officers at A. & M., who know the men they have trained."

Following a report of a typical week in the "information houses," Early said: "The idea is well justified, and we will give the State of Texas far-reaching publicity."

The report of which he spoke, compiled for the week ending June 19, revealed the following facts: 1,191 cars, representing every state in the Union with the exception of Rhode Island, stopped. Drivers made inquiries and said that they would drive a total of 847,000 miles while in Texas. Reports of a separate crew revealed that one out of every six out-of-state cars stopped for information.

All questions are answered as completely as possible, Early said. There is no attempt to divert traffic from its natural course.

"We're selling all of Texas, not a part of it," he said.

Most of the tourists, he said, are particularly anxious to see some Mexicans, and to visit a large ranch, with "dude ranches" preferred.

"What seems to surprise them most," Early explained, "is the fact that we do not charge for the service, and that there is no restrictions on tourists."

Howls Of Alarm Can't Keep Americans From Play

It might be a fine thing if every man who wanted to announce that this country has gone, is going, or shortly will go to the dogs could be made first to go to some quiet spot and sit down for a week or so of peaceful meditation.

We have been through a pretty bad time in the last half dozen years, and there is no use trying to pretend that the dew has been on the rose ever since 1929; but we sometimes have a tendency to carry on as if no people in all history had suffered as we have suffered.

Judging by some of the Jeremiahs on the printed page or the stoical platform, one would imagine that the red-coats once more stood on Concord bridge, that the national capitol was in ruins, that everything west of the Mississippi had sunk into the Pacific ocean, and that the guillotine would start clanking on Main street at 9:45 tomorrow morning.

It is easy for us to forget that this America of ours is a big country—big, and tough. It has stood up under a great deal of kicking around in the past, and it will stand up under a great deal more in the future.

It has taken everything from Sherman's march to the sea to Insull's march to Greece, and survived to come back for more.

What is happening in the land today? Well, some millions of Americans are looking forward to vacation trips.

They will go rolling over the greatest highways on earth, enjoying a sense of complete freedom, as they go, that people of past ages could only dream of; they will travel through a friendly land, breathing clean winds that have a who's, continua to tumble around in; and, if they wish, they can go 10,000 miles without once seeing a frontier guard, a soldier in uniform, or a stranger who cannot greet them in their own tongue.

Other millions are enjoying themselves at home. They are going to baseball games, enjoying the pop-bottle-and-hot-dogs democracy of the bleachers; or they are playing golf, or splashing about at some bathing beach, or loafing in serene content on the tree-shaded front porches of 20,000 small towns — and if their country is, as the prophets of alarm assure us, in one terrible fix, the fact seems to have escaped the attention of most inhabitants.

Now all these millions upon millions of people, who are making a pretty good summer out of it in spite of everything, are just as wise as the Jeremiahs, if not a little bit wiser.

They've been through the mill, of course. They know as well as anyone that the last half dozen years have been rocky ones. But they also know that their country has an immense sanity and toughness of fiber which the depression has not destroyed.

They know, in short, that for all its Black Legions and its Liberty Leagues, its radio demagogues and its tub-thumping politicians, it is still a pretty good sort of country to live in — a country that has lived through worse things than the 1930's ever dreamed of, and can do it again if it has to.

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE

St. Simon was born in the county of Kent, England, and left his home when he was but 12 years of age, to live as a hermit in a wilderness nearby. Here he passed 20 years in penance and prayer, and learned from Our Lady that he was to join an order not then known in England. He waited patiently until the White Friars came, and then he entered the Order of Our Lady of Mount Carmel. His great holiness moved his brethren in the general chapter held at Aylesford, near Rochester, in 1245, to choose him prior-general of the order. In the many persecutions raised against the new religion, Simon went with filial confidence to the Blessed Mother of God. As he knelt in prayer in the White Friars' convent at Cambridge, on July 16, 1251, she appeared before him and presented him with the scapular, in assurance of her protection. Many wonderful works were performed by him as a means of showing that this new practice was approved by Our Blessed Lady. St. Simon Stock died at Bordeaux in 1265.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquirers must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. Did the original old-age pension law provide $30.00 for all eligible applicants over 65 years of age, the State to provide $15.00 and the Federal Government $15.00? M. K., Gonzales.

A. The "original law" is the law now in force. It provides for payments not to exceed the sums in your question, the amount to be based on the need of applicants. This need and the amount to be paid are determined by those who administer the law.

Q. When and where was the first Democratic convention held in Texas? A. P., Anderson.

A. It was held Feb. 21st, 1848, at Austin, to select delegates to the National convention at Baltimore. Thirty-five counties were represented and the delegates supported General Cass of Michigan for president, who received in the November election 10,068 votes. General Taylor, the Whig candidate getting 4,509.

Q. Can any amendment to a Texas bill or law change its original purpose? M. K., Gonzales.

A. Subsequent legislation repeals or revokes any part of a previous law in conflict with it. Consult a lawyer.

Q. Can the old age pension law be changed so as to give one person more than another? M. K., Gonzales.

A. The present law is an "old-age disability law" and not a pension law. It provides for disability payments based on the needs of applicants. The same authority that creates a law can change it.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Decades ago, a railroad magnate, one Vanderbilt, stirred up much resentment when he coined a slogan—"The public be damned!" In case you were thinking that long strides of enlightened progress have been made since, your attention is called to the reason there is no longer any federal co-ordinator of transportation, whose job was to point out methods by which railroads could save lots of money by modernization and elimination of waste. Incredible or not, railroad executives, railroad labor, and even federal officials charged with regulating the railroads ganged up to block continuation of the office of Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman. They didn't say the public could be damned, but that was the effect.

EASTMAN was empowered to order railroads to consolidate facilities and otherwise cut out waste. Rather than be dictatorial, he gave the industry a chance to effect these ends by itself. But he kept urging methods of modernization, standardization, and cheaper buying, and suggested solutions for the problem of facilities made obsolete through buses and trucks. Railroad executives, under leadership of J. J. Pelley, decided they were "being told how to run their business." They didn't like to have their mistakes pointed out to stockholders.

Behind them were New York bankers who, acting as railroad fiscal agents, foresaw reduced profits. Railroad labor unions, their memberships hard hit by unemployment, made an agreement with operators to oppose continuance of the co-ordinator.

Bell Rings In Walls, Rat the Offend

By United Press
RALEIGH, N. C.—A Ralman who tied a bell to a rat he caught in a trap, and turned loose with the idea of frighten away other rats, succeeded only keeping his neighbors awake, George B. Lay of the United States Biological Survey. Reports came in that sleepers could not sleep because a mysterious bell kept ringing in the walls, attic basements. One person reporting the bellled rat a mile from where it was turned loose.

Chesterfield Wins

...because it has the right kind of Turkish tobacco in it

Turkish tobacco is expensive—that's true—every pound has to be imported 4000 miles.

But it's one of the biggest reasons why Chesterfields taste better.

It's another reason why you'll like the aroma—it's more pleasing and fragrant—the Turkish in Chesterfield is another reason why Chesterfield wins.

"BODE'S LAW"

THE RELATIVE DISTANCES OF THE PLANETS FROM THE SUN FOLLOW A CURIOUS RULE KNOWN AS "BODE'S LAW" STARTING WITH THE NUMBERS 0, 3, 6, 12, 24, ETC., DOUBLING EACH TIME, THEN ADDING THE NUMBER 4 TO EACH, WE COME REMARKABLY CLOSE TO THE SCALE OF DISTANCES FOR ALL THE PLANETS EXCEPT NEPTUNE AND PLUTO.

MERCURY,	0 + 4 = 4	ACTUAL DISTANCE	4
VENUS,	3 + 4 = 7	"	7
EARTH,	6 + 4 = 10	"	10
MARS,	12 + 4 = 16	"	15

AMERICA'S Olympic team appears to have everything but transportation. . . . Perhaps the committee was a bit premature in its warning to stowaways aboard the Manhattan. . . . It announced that they would be kept in the brig and not allowed to land, and that any official or athlete aiding a stowaway would find himself in hot water. . . . Jack Sharkey's victories over Tony Shucro and Phil Brubaker is encouraging run-down warriors to take another whirl. . . . The latest is Ben Jeby, who was a synthetic middleweight ruler for a time. . . . In California they say that Alice Marble's presence has had not a little to do with the absence of Mrs. Helen Willis Moody and Helen Hull Jacobs from the Golden State singles in recent years. . . . Miss Marble has annexed that title four years in succession. . . . Mrs. Moody, taking time off from her New York art exhibits, went out to her home city of Berkeley, and captured the California mixed doubles, with Edward (Bud) Chandler as her partner. . . . It was Mrs. Moody's first appearance in a California state championship in years.

BARON GOTTFRIED VON CRAMM pulling a groin muscle out of place with his first serve deprived Wimbledon of a final worthy of that splendid tournament. . . . However, any lingering doubt in regard to the back injury he suffered in losing to Wilmer Allison in the United States singles last fall having permanently affected Fred Perry's game was dispelled when he repelled Don Budge. . . . The California redhead was as right as could be. . . . He had only the singles to concentrate on following the withdrawal of Gene Mako from doubles. . . . Scores farther showed that Budge was ready. . . . He won the first set, 7-5, and put up stern battles in the other three, which went to Perry, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. . . . Too much is plenty, even for Discovery, as the handi-cap champion discovered when he attempted to carry 138 pounds in the Stars and Stripes at Arlington Park. . . . They evidently mistook Discovery for a light-footed truck horse after he packed 136 pounds as though it were a feather in establishing a record by winning the Brooklyn Handicap at Aqueduct without being extended. . . . It was the third time that the chestnut captured that fixture.

GEORGE UHLE'S contemplated comeback, and the success of such veterans as Pop Haines, Flint Rhem, Bob Smith, and Pat Malone explains those big baseball scores. . . . As Rogers Hornsby says, "There ain't no pitching." . . . They continue to grow tennis champions in California. . . . Tab young Bobby Riggs as a future great, and in the none too distant future, too, judging from the way he defeated Frankie Parker in the national clay court final and Gregory Mangin in the match that decided the Nassau Country Club's invitation tournament in New York. . . . Riggs' performances did not surprise west coast tennis followers, who have seen the 1935 junior titleholder replace Frank Shields and Lieut. Dolf Muehlen of the Army Air Corps. . . . You'd never suspect that Bill Summers, the heavyweight umpire, was a lightweight southpaw boxer as a youngster.

BODE'S LAW is one of the mysteries of astronomy. Using the number 10 to represent the distance of the earth from the sun, Bode's Law shows Mercury to be 4, Venus 7, etc. At the time the law was discovered, a large gap existed between the planets Mars and Jupiter, and, since the series of figures showed that a planet should be in this area, astronomers went to work and discovered the asteroid group occupying the space.

So Much for Love

By HARD JONES
© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

CHAPTER I
It was 5 o'clock in the morning and Helena Derrik, attired in a white swim suit, was poised for a dive. In another moment, using her body as a knife, she would slit the water below her. But just now she stood thinking how nice it was to be 20 and full of health.

Helena

And . . . in love. She described a graceful arc and let scarcely a ripple mark the spot where that arc had terminated. Then, far out from the lake shore, the smart white rubber cap appeared on the surface. Helena's arms, looking longer than they were, began a perfect rhythmic stroke that brought her to the lake again. Easily she hoisted herself from the water and began smoothing out her suit, squeezing little rivulets of lake water down her flawless legs.

Wading ashore from the float, Helena stooped to retrieve a bright blue jacket from the sand. Swinging it around her shoulders, she started off at a run toward the big lodge which was set back from the lake in the cool shadows of the towering trees.

"Well!" she heard a voice remark—"I thought I was the early bird—but I perceive I'm just a lousy piker!"

She looked up to see Peter Henderson watching her from the veranda of the lodge. He stood tall and handsome, with a robe of snowling wrapped around his athletic frame. Even in the weak sun of dawn, Peter's thick blond hair shone attractively. Involuntarily, Helena slowed her pace, conscious of a queer feeling that bound her heart. "It's so absurd, but he can do this to me," she thought herself. "I've known him hardly 24 hours . . ."

It had, indeed, been a sleepless night. In lieu of sleep, Helena had lain, reviewing the chain of events which had brought her to Crest Mountain Lodge. For two years she had worked in Helvig's big department store, and it was only this spring that she had been given a department of her own. True, it was a small department, but it was an important one—especially during the summer months.

Now she knew that she had been wise to pay strict attention to the ultimatum of Miss Landes, the personnel manager of Helvig's. She had been wise in taking home the little pamphlets which Miss Landes handed out to her "class" of salesgirls. The majority of the girls seemed to think do you know anything about sports?"

"Why, I—I'm afraid not," Helena had faltered.
"Surely you must know something about them," Miss Landes urged. "At least you know what a smart woman should wear for swimming and tennis and—" she waved her hand vaguely, "well, badminton?"
"Yes, I think I do."
Miss Landes replaced her spectacles. "Good! And before fall you can learn something about the winter sports, too." She smiled at Helena. "You see, Miss Little in the sportswear department is leaving the first of the month. I thought you might like to have her place."

Helena Derrik had gasped. The sportswear department was one of the most important in Helvig's. It was important not so much because of the volume of business, but because of the fact that it drew the daughters of wealthier families in the city.
"You realize, of course," Miss Landes said, "what the sportswear department means. Its customers are chiefly young girls with money to spend—young girls who can influence their families to maintain an account at Helvig's . . . or not maintain an account at Helvig's."
"But, Miss Landes, I—"
"It's my opinion," went on the personnel manager imperturbably, "that you can handle the sportswear department even better than Miss Little. You are good-looking, and you've that healthy, outdoor look that a girl in that department ought to have. But that's not what convinced me, Helena. I've watched you in our personnel classes. You strike me as a girl who is anxious to get somewhere in the world. What do you say?"
"I'd like to try it, Miss Landes."

SO on the Monday of the following week Helena had found herself in the sportswear department. This department of Helvig's big organization was hardly more than one corner of the "glamorous ready-to-wear"—but it was a glamorous corner, done in a silvered modernist mode with indirect lighting and streamlined display cases. Old man Helvig had quickly recognized the trend toward outdoor activities on the part of young women, had been among the first to see that a smart costume was half the fun. He was proud of his sportswear department, and cautioned his buyers that it was to have not only reasonably priced lines, but exclusive outdoor costumes.

Birth of Child On Isle of Corsica Started Centennial

By GORDON W. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN.—When Jose Navarro was born on the Isle of Corsica, the Texas Centennial, including Fort Worth's frontier celebration, was really started. Jose was the father of Jose Antonio Navarro, participant in the Texas Revolution. Navarro county was named for him. Corsicana, its county seat, was named for Corsica because Navarro's father had been born there.

Texas advertising clubs met in Corsicana in 1925. The town's name brought up the topic of Texas history. That brought up the question of how its centennial should be observed. A committee was named with Lowry Martin, Corsicana publisher, at its head. The committee called on Gov. Pat M. Neff. He called a statewide mass meeting. It created the original "Texas Centennial Governing Board of One Hundred." The committee kept the idea alive. As centennial year approached it was decided more a committee was needed. The committee sought state aid. The constitution prohibited private grants. The committee launched a campaign to change the constitution. The amendment authorized a grant for centennial observance. No amount was specified. Originally $5,000,000 was suggested, the proper sum. Then began a fight before legislature—so bitter at times the whole project seemed doomed. Most dangerous obstacle: rivalry of communities for celebration. Unable to agree to themselves, legislators passed a reasonable act.

WPA Wage Rates Cover Wide Range

By Associated Press
SAN ANTONIO.—Wage rates ranging from 20 cents to $1 per hour will be paid workers on Texas Works Progress Administration projects during the new program officially started July 1, it was announced today by State Administrator H. P. Drought.

Employment division officials were completing schedules of hourly rates established for four general occupational titles in the 20 Texas districts. As a result, Texas workers will be paid the hourly wage prevailing in their communities for the type of work they are doing instead of the security wage which they receive under the first WPA program. Prevailing hourly wages throughout Texas, it was established, range for the four occupational titles as follows:

Unskilled labor, 20 to 35 cents; intermediate, 40 to 50 cents; skilled, 65 cents to $1; professional and technical, 75 cents to $1. Provided for by the congressional act which prolonged the life of the WPA, these rates are subject to adjustment in communities where they are found to be in error, Drought said. Data obtained from federal, state and county agencies, labor groups, trade unions, employers and their organizations, municipal authorities and other related groups were used to establish prevailing hourly rates of pay.

"I should like to make it clear that prevailing hourly wages are determined in the communities themselves and not by the WPA," Drought declared. Although in most instances workers will be paid a higher hourly wage, monthly earnings of individual workmen will remain the same as under the first program. These earnings, therefore, will range from a minimum of $21 for unskilled workers in rural counties to a minimum of $75 for professional and technical workers in metropolitan counties.

Payment will be made only for time actually worked, but workers will be allowed every reasonable opportunity to make up time lost due to weather conditions or temporary interruptions in the operation of projects in order to earn scheduled monthly earnings at the determined hourly wage rate.

As in the first program, maximum hours of work for project workers will be eight hours per day, 40 hours per week and 140 hours per month. "Briefly," Drought said, "adoption of prevailing hourly wage rates will mean that in most instances workers will be required to put in fewer hours at their tasks but their semi-monthly pay checks will bring them the same amount of money they earned as security wage workers. The hours to be worked at the determined hourly rate by any worker will be sufficient to total the monthly earnings as prescribed but in no case will they exceed 140 per month."

MYRA NORTH, Special Nurse -- By Thompson and O

ALTHOUGH STILL UNDER SUSPICION HIMSELF, JACK OFFERS TO AID CAPTAIN KARNAK IN UNRAVELING THE MYSTERY OF THE SECRET TOMB.

BUT, MR LANE—YOUR SUGGESTION TO OPEN THE SARCOPHAGUS OF ROHATED IS ABSURD—THAT HASN'T BEEN DISTURBED FOR CENTURIES—EVEN SIR EDMOND...

THAT'S JUST THE POINT, CAPTAIN—WE DON'T KNOW FOR CERTAIN HE HADN'T OPENED IT—BESIDES, HE WAS ALONE IN THE TOMB AT THE TIME OF HIS ACCIDENT!

WOULD HUMBLY SUGGEST APPEALING HYSYER BEFORE GOING FURTHER—SECRET TOMBS DATE VERY UNHEALTHY PLACE!

IT MAY BE EXCEEDING MY AUTHORITY BUT I MUST CONFESS YOU HAVE AROUSED MY CURIOSITY! AS TO HYSYER, I WILL HAVE HIM ACCOMPANY US TO THE TOMB—THEN THERE CAN BE NO TRICKERY!

BUT AT THAT INSTANT, A SHOT RINGS OFF FIRED AT A DISTANCE, FROM ABOVE, THE BULLET ZIPS THROUGH THE BARBOOS OF THE EGYPTIAN CAPTAIN!

IT SEEMS SOMEONE DOESN'T WANT US TO RETURN TO TOMBS!

You Can't Advertise Today and Quit Tomorrow

You're Not Talking to a Mass Meeting . . . You're Talking to a Parade . . . !

BRUCE BARTON

Ceaseless hammering on the same spot helps win prize fights . . . it is the essence of advertising success. Not until enough individuals in the same neighborhood have been sufficiently saturated with a certain slogan, say, to cause them to react on one another does advertising become a social phenomenon.

The modern business man realizes that his best customers wear out at a rate of nearly 3 per cent a year. Advertising-made prospects disappear far faster. Casual impressions, however favorable, dry like dew in the heat of competition.

"Cumulative" effects of advertising come not from one advertisement paving the way for another. This is negligible, to say the least. Cumulative effect, on the contrary, comes from salvaging as customers half-finished prospects.

Each advertiser is in much the same plight. If he quits successful, he loses money. If he quits unsuccessful, he tosses away an equity in public recognition far more valuable than the money: So many thousand partly manufactured customers. The second group are spending as little money as they can and still keep their names before the public. They believe themselves wise spenders because before the public. They believe themselves wise spenders because they spend so very cautiously—or perhaps reluctantly is a better word . . . THE BALD TRUTH IS THAT THESE RELUCTANT SPENDERS ARE, AS A CLASS, THE REAL OVER-SPENDERS IN ADVERTISING!

Man, Sans Clothes, Strolls 15 Blocks On Houston Street

HOUSTON—A 35-year-old man strolled 15 blocks down a residential street, almost blocking traffic—he had forgotten his clothes, every stitch of them.

Women screamed and ran into their homes. Men blinked, rubbed their eyes, laughed or swore as the sight struck them. But, the man walked along unconcernedly until two motorcycle officers caught them.

They hailed a passing automobile and the "nudist" was taken to a motor company, nearby, where a mechanic's long white coat was borrowed. It was learned that the man had had a nervous breakdown and had been treated at a sanitarium.

IT'S a sin and a shame—no two ways about it!—to let ripe fruit go to waste when it could be made into delicious jams and preserves.

The woman who lives in the country and has quantities of cherries, currants, apples and plums on hand naturally feels the urge to can. For those who must buy all the supplies—fruit as well as sugar—it's not such an economy. Nevertheless, almost everyone wants a few choice jars of jam and preserves on the pantry shelves.

No doubt you have favorite recipes you follow each year, but here are some you may want to try. The red raspberry and currant jam is delicious with cottage cheese and crackers. It makes a good sauce for ice cream, too.

Red Raspberry and Currant Jam

One quart currants, 2 quarts red raspberries, 3 pounds sugar. Wash fruit. Stem currants and cut with enough water to prevent sticking until the fruit looks white—just as if you were making jelly. Strain through jelly bag. Bring juice to the boiling point and add sugar and berries. Cook eight minutes and turn into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffine and add a second coating of paraffine when cold.

Cherry Conserve

Two pounds sour cherries (weighed after pitting), 2 cups red raspberry juice, 2 oranges, 1-2 pound raisins, 5 1-2 cups sugar. Wash oranges and cut in thin slices, removing seeds. Put cherries, red raspberry juice, oranges and raisins in preserving kettle and cook 20 minutes. Add sugar and cook 15 minutes longer. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffine.

Black Raspberry Jam

One cup black raspberries, 2 cups rhubarb (cut fine and measured after cutting), 3 cups sugar. Combine all ingredients and bring to the boiling point over a low fire. Then boil rapidly until thick. Put into sterilized jelly glasses and cover with paraffine.

Apple Raspberry Jam

One cup raspberries, 2 cups finely chopped apples, 3 cups sugar. Blackberries can be used as well as raspberries. Put fruit in preserving kettle and bring slowly to the boiling point. You may need to add a few tablespoonfuls of water to prevent sticking before the juice flows freely from the fruit. Cook until apples are tender and add sugar. Boil hard for 10 or 15 minutes after adding sugar. Turn into sterilized jelly glasses.

Current Preserves

Three pounds sugar, 3 pounds currants, 3 oranges. Wash and stem currants. Wash oranges and cut in thin slices, discarding seeds. Mix sugar, currants and oranges and let stand overnight. In the morning cook 25 minutes. Turn into sterilized jelly glass, cover with paraffine and let cool. Cover with a second coating of paraffine and store in a dark, cool place.

Preserves always should be protected from the light because otherwise there's danger of fading.

Cool Millions

Mark Twain lamented the fact that everybody talked about the weather, but nobody did anything about it. Mark Twain died in 1910.

TODAY: Most movie theaters are air-cooled. Modern furnaces heat your house in winter ... cool it in summer.

Refrigerators take just five minutes to make ice for long, tall, cooling drinks. Railway trains cross deserts in midsummer with air-cooled sleepers and coaches. Office buildings, cafes and restaurants are air-cooled.

Even the ships at sea carry air conditioned salons.

If you don't believe anybody has done anything about the weather, just glance through the advertising columns of this newspaper and see how many ways you can defeat the weatherman's whims—today.

As these and other new ways of living are devised, tried and proved, they will be offered to you through newspaper advertising. Keep an eye open for them, and—along with millions of other Americans—keep cool!
