This Seems To Be A Poor Time For Political Alarms

If the rival politicians of this land are as wise as they are supposed to be, they will call off all forensic fencing for a month or so and take in a few of the assorted expositions, fairs, and exhibits with which the native sons are beguiling the heat of the summer.

They will do that because such things, rather than political fights, seem to be what are chiefly interesting the American people just now.

The politician who tries to save the nation when the American people are thinking about something else is likely to be greeted with nothing but a large dose of public apathy.

The exposition business is doing right well this summer. Texas has a big, double-barrelled affair that apparently offers a great deal of entertainment for the money and seems to be drawing customers from everywhere. San Diego has another one, and Cleveland a third, and they are doing all right, too.

That these things should come to flower in the summer of 1936 is a neat little symptom which politicians and others could profitably examine.

They would seem to mean that the people of America have—for the moment, at least—given up their perennial worry about whether their country is going to pot, and have set out to get a little recreation for themselves.

And if they are doing that, it is a pretty fair sign that a few years of life left in them, after all.

This exposition business does not flourish when things are going downhill. People don't pick up and trundle off to look at automotive exhibits, fan dancers, Bavarian villages, and horticultural displays when they are worried about the state of the Union, the flatness of their pocket-books, or the amount of red ink on the ledgers down at the office.

And when they are not worrying about such things, they do not have a great deal of time for the politician who arises to beat his breast, thump the tub, and announce that he has come down from the mountains to save them from a fate worse than death.

The people of this country have been keyed up for three or four years. In those years they have examined their past and studied the future; they have listened to innumerable harangues about the state of the nation, the precepts of the founding fathers, the perils of the present and the condition of their immortal and collective soul. Right now, they seem to be in a mood to relax and stop worrying.

That is going to make it pretty tough for the campaigners. The earth-shaking crisis which they are eternally discovering just over the next hill may be as real as next Saturday night's bath; but how are you going to make the voters view it with the proper amount of alarm when they are thinking what a swell country this has turned out to be, after all?

The millions Haile Selassie took with him, after abdication, were just a little something he had put aside in case the rainy day didn't show up in time.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquirers must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. When the people of Texas know what they were voting for?

A. It is a legal presumption (somewhat strained, it is true) that all wisdom vests in the people, but it is difficult for the electorate to foresee what construction will be placed upon its actions.

Q. Are any of the original buildings at old Camp Verde still standing?

A. The camel corral was destroyed not long after the War between the States, and the stone headquarters house burned in 1910, but an exact replica of the latter has been built on the old site, the old walls being used. The location is about 60 miles northwest of San Antonio, 12 miles north of the town of Bandera, and three miles from the historic Bandera Pass.

Q. Why did Stephen F. Austin threaten to imprison protestant ministers who preached in his colonies?

A. One of the conditions of his grant was that his colonists should be Catholics. His imprisonment threat was regarded only as an effort to show that he was trying to observe that condition.

U.S. Authority Extended Over Migrant Birds

WASHINGTON.—A bill passed by congress during the last session and approved by President Roosevelt on June 29 will reinforce and extend federal authority over migratory birds, the Biological Survey announces. The new law is designed to make effective in this country a convention between the United States and Mexico for protection of migratory birds and animals. Ratification of the new law by Mexico is yet to follow, and it will take effect upon proclamation of the exchange of ratifications. Federal authority over migratory birds heretofore had depended on the Migratory Bird Treaty with Great Britain. The new treaty reinforces this authority by providing for a dual basis for the federal regulations conserving ducks, geese, and other migrants.

Bloodhounds Are Sensitive but Not Vicious Hunters

ANGOLA, La. — Bloodhounds, says Capt. Fred C. Ball, have to be trained like children. Most people think the dogs are natural-born manhunters, but the fact is less than half of them ever can be taught to follow a trail.

The secret of a good bloodhound is the shape of its nose, if long and narrow, the dog's scent nerve is unusually sensitive, explains Ball. And for all their persistence on the hunt, they are not vicious, and seldom attack their prey.

"The best dogs will get a man cornered, then stand off and bay him," declares Ball. Ball is trainer and handler of dogs at the state prison farm here. Convict trustees, called "dog sergeants," are detailed to help him. The dogs and their handlers are continually in demand throughout the state for trailing murderers, robbers and jail-breakers. When convicts escape from the prison farm into the surrounding Tunica hills, the dogs are indispensable. For the hunt, they are usually chained in pairs, with their handlers following on horseback, for if the trail is "hot," the dogs set a fast pace, with their noses skimming the ground and their long ears flopping to their patter.

Bloodhounds have been Ball's lifelong interest. Nothing is sweeter music, he says, than the sound of a dog as he hits a trail and races 10 to 12 miles an hour at full bay.

The perfect trail is one left just after a rain, and the worst is one made just before a rain. But a real dog will not be stopped. He needs only the faintest scent of a man's footprint.

"You really should be able to let the dogs smell a piece of clothing of the man being hunted, or the bed he has slept in, or even a cash register he has robbed," Capt. Ball said. "But even that isn't necessary for a good bloodhound. He can strike a trail from foot-

He received the offer from veteran showman, Walter L. Main, a long-time friend, but before giving it serious consideration, he made sure he would be given a good spot on the circus program. "I won't work a sideshow, will I?" was his first question. "No, you won't Main answered. "We'll put you in a center ring, put up a special billing, provide you with a loud speaker and make it worth your while."

Coxy, now 82 but still active, principally in the Townsend 6000 are pension movement, reserved final decision pending further thought but he assured Main he was anxious to "get on the move again."

Texas Oil Production Is a Monument To Ones Who Made State Lead World

BY H. J. STRUTH
Petroleum Economist

If all the oil produced in Texas to date was placed in barrels of 42 gallons each, and stacked in a single perpendicular column, it would make a monument 2,800,000 miles high! Such is the imaginary monument that stands in Texas today as a tribute to the hardships and courage of the "wildcatter" who made it possible for Texas to lead the world in oil production.

Analysis of the world's oil production statistics, by the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association of Texas, shows that Texas has, with one exception, produced more oil than any other states or foreign nation. Since 1889, Texas has produced 4,200,000,000 barrels of crude oil, which is 15 per cent of all the oil produced in the history of the world! Only California has produced more, and there oil was found 13 years before the first well was drilled in Texas. The accompanying chart shows how Texas' cumulative oil production ranks with other major sources of the world's oil supply.

The black column on the chart may well be termed a monument to the courage and determination of the pioneers of the Texas oil industry. It signifies the pioneering spirit so colorfully written in the pages of Texas history. For the "wildcatter" is truly the pioneer of the oil industry; the "independent" oil producer, who often stakes his all in the possibility of obtaining an oil well, and accepts his fortunes and misfortunes with the spirit that has characterized the empire builders of this great state.

While the efforts of the "wildcatter" have undoubtedly been the "back-bone" of Texas oil development, yet, the uncertainties of that method imposed such great cost upon the industry that the field of geology and geophysics was called upon to help reduce the "remendous financial hazards. Today, all over this state, these technical men are making scientific study of surface and subsurface formations in an effort to locate more accurately hidden oil deposits. Even with these modern methods, this scientific study involves a heavy, constant overhead cost against the industry—often times the discovery of a new oil pool follows years of intensive preliminary study, frequently involving the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Today, there are more than 4,000 "independent" oil operators in Texas, in addition to the so-called "Major" companies; all of them pioneering to maintain the continued leadership of Texas as the world's principal source of oil supply. Much more oil may yet be discovered in Texas in many counties where the drill has not yet penetrated the "Pay" sand. More and more Texas farms are being leased for such development in practically all sections of the state, with redounding benefit to the landowners—to say nothing of the benefits that accrue to the state, the counties, the schools, the cities and the people, when oil

Wild and Woolly Campaign For Governor Predicted By Writer

DALLAS—If the estimated 10,000,000 Centennial visitors to Texas this summer wish to see natives quite as wild and woolly as Texas are reputed to be, they can take time to watch the campaign for governor.

The state's highest office (with a $4,000-a-year salary) has received bids from five Democratic candidates. One of the five will be elected since Texas is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat stronghold as far as state and local politics are concerned.

Tax reform will be the principal campaign issue, although personalities always stand out above platforms in Texas elections. The taxes considered with those to pay old age assistance, the state's first attempt at large-scale social security legislation. The old age assistance law, estimated to be given 50,000 needy citizens past 65 years old, calls for an initial payment by July 1.

Orville S. Carpenter, director of old age assistance, estimated that $20 a month will be the amount first given those who qualify. The money is to be contributed jointly by state and federal governments.

Revenues from liquor taxes at present is being diverted to pay old age pensions. Opponents of Gov. James V. Allred, the youthful incumbent who is seeking a second term, advocate other methods of payment.

Fred W. Fischer, Tyler oil manufacturer, has been the most active campaigner thus far. His platform calls for a 15-cent barrel oil tax and increased levies on other natural resources.

Many observers have named Fischer as the man Allred must beat for re-election. The Tyler man is vigorous, imposing and has been described as a possible successor to colorful "Farmer Jim" Ferguson, ex-governor, and director of two successful campaigns to elect his wife as governor of the largest state.

No state political campaign in 20 years has been without Ferguson. This year is no exception, and his support is expected to bring a large following to state Sen. Roy Sanderford, Belton, seeking election as governor on a platform only after repeated failure of the "wildcatter" drill to penetrate the "Pay" sand. These reserves will continue to be developed, with increasing benefits to Texas and its people, if unreasonable, discriminatory tax schemes are discouraged by the sane-thinking citizens of Texas.

form asking a general 3 per cent sales tax.

How large the Ferguson-Sanderford following will be July 25 when Democrats hold their first primary, none can predict. Many believe Ferguson's "vest pocket vote"—some 200,000 farmers to whom Farmer Jim's word was gospel—has dwindled to a fraction of its former size.

Tom Hunter, fellow townsman of Allred at Wichita Falls, is a fourth major candidate. Hunter has been a paradox of Texas politics for six years. His three campaigns for the governorship have been unsuccessful, but his 1934 drive brought him into the party run-off.

Thus far Hunter's tactics have been mainly to criticize the governor's Centennial-year traveling. He has dubbed Allred "Jaunty Jimmy." His opposition to the present administration of old age pensions also has been bitter. Hunter proposes a state tax on incomes of more than $6,000 as a source of revenue to pay the pensions.

Pierce Brooks, Dallas attorney, a comparative unknown in state campaigns, is the fifth candidate for governor. He has been conducting an active speaking campaign for several weeks.

At least three of Allred's four opponents must be considered as major foes, but thus far the governor seems to have maintained the support that twice elected him to the attorney general's office, and once as governor. A forceful, active campaign, Allred's numerous appearances since his election as governor have given his views wide publicity.

Supplies of Gold Are Squared With Needs of World

WASHINGTON.—The movement for consideration of a reserve gold standard has received additional impetus with publication of a Brookings Institute study of the adequacy of gold supply.

The report, written by Dr. Charles O. Hardy, held that no existing or prospective deficiency in the world gold supply stands in the way of restoration of an international gold standard, whenever such a step is considered advantageous.

On the contrary, Hardy held that the chief dangers are an excessive supply of the metal. From this arises the problem of preventing undue credit expansion without stepping up gold reserve requirements to a level where proportionately increased amount of gold will be needed to take of future growth.

Inadequacy of gold supply not a factor contributing to decline of prices before 1929, 1932, Hardy held, and there no immediate prospect of a drop in gold production to the depression.

The Brookings analysis last contribution to the study possibility of revival of an international standard.

Two high officials of the Federal Reserve System—Dr. E. A. Mowbray, chief economist, and Adolph C. Miller, former governor and special member—made speeches heralding the return in modified form.

Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., of the treasury, has said the United States will cooperate in such a movement as soon as rest of the world is ready. Treasury officials have said they are ready because the balance of international payments has attained a relative stability, but that tied conditions abroad—aided measurably by war fears—holding back any concerted efforts.

Hardy's book said that the gold delegation of the League of Nations in 1929 forecast a production of $2,749,000,000 of gold in 1931-1934, inclusive, a production amounting to 1,000,000 (both figures in billions of dollars of reduced gold value).

In addition, extension of gold areas, withdrawal of gold from circulation, increase of central reserves, and a price level contributed to the undance of the yellow metal.

Furthermore, the report stated if restoration of the gold standard doubtless will be on a basis of monetary units that existed in 1929, further lessening of the metal to support a given volume of credit and a given level.

At present, the United States treasury possesses an amount percentage of the world's supply—almost $10,500,000,000. This is enough to pay off the dollar now in circulation of the country and still have more left than the French Republic which is still on a gold standard. Tremendous amounts of gold bullion have been shipped during the past two years, war scares in Europe sent considerable money abroad, and the United States.

So Much for Love

"Then you think it's all right?" Helena faltered.

morning, Sandy. You aren't denying that a sunrise is no novelty to you?"

Sandra smiled. "I've seen them in evening clothes, Peter. That is, I was in evening clothes; not the sunrises. But that's different. Have you two hardy persons been in the lake already?" She turned her eyes knowingly toward Helena, and the latter thought, "I wonder if she believes I'm taking advantage of her invitation and trying to capture Peter?"

Aloud Helena said, "I've been in, and Mr. Henderson's still trying it. Why don't you join him? It's grand."

Peter faced her humorously. "Darling, if we're to be married you mustn't refer to me as Mr. Henderson. It's Peter. And after we've been married a while you can call me Pete."

The Leigh girl came down from the veranda, searching Peter's face. "You're serious, Peter." Then she turned to Helena. "And why shouldn't he be? You know, last night at dinner I had a fleeting thought that it would be no surprise if you two hit it off in a serious way. I'm psychic about those things."

"Then you think it's all right?" Helena faltered.

"All right?" repeated Sandra. "What difference would it make what I thought? But, since you've asked me, I'll tell you I think it's even better than all right. And I'm excited about being the first to congratulate Peter and wish you happiness. I am the first!"

THE Leigh girl's enthusiasm warmed Helena's heart. Somehow she had feared that Sandra might not quite approve.

"When does it happen?" Sandra wanted to know.

Peter grinned and reached for

Helena's hand. "Right away, doesn't it?"

"W-why, I haven't thought—"

She looked at Sandra helplessly. "Peter," said the other girl, "I want to make a suggestion. It's that you very literally go and jump into the lake. I'll help Helena make her plans."

"Very well, Miss Leigh..."

He bowed low, dropped his beach robe, and sped down toward the lake. At its edge he leaped an amazing distance and struck the water neatly.

"And that," said Sandra smiling, "is the way he does everything. I'm not surprised he's going into matrimony the same way."

"What have you to say for me?" asked Helena.

Sandra put her arm around Helena Derrick's shoulders. "A woman's different, darling. Nobody should be surprised when a woman jumps into marriage at five minutes' notice. I think every girl carries around subconsciously the image of the kind of man she'd fall for. Of course it's an image that's changed a little, maybe, as one grows older—or perhaps forgotten altogether. But—" She stopped suddenly. "You're really in love with him, aren't you?"

"I wouldn't be marrying him if I weren't."

"I thought so," Sandra smiled. "That sticks out all over you, Helena. Do you want me to help you with the wedding? I'd love it."

"I—I don't know. The whole idea of a wedding sort of frightens me."

SANDRA thought a moment. "Peter seems all set. What would you say to doing it now? The gang would pitch in and give

PROVING THEY'RE OLYMPIANS

Ralph Flanagan of Miami churns the water at Warwick, R. I., to win the 1500-meter event in the Olympic swimming team trials in 19:37.8. He also won the 400-meter race to insure a double place in the Berlin games.

Kitty Rawls, seen in a winning spring board dive at the Olympic trials, also captured the 100-meter free style swim.

That smile registers Frank Wycoff's satisfaction over placing third in the 100-meter final to gain his third Olympiad. Faced by an outstanding upset, Ben Eastman (second from right), world's premier half-mile, strains futilely in pursuit of John Wood (left), University of Pittsburgh's negro, as they cross the finish line in the 800-meter preliminary Olympic trials at New York.

SHOWBOAT OPENS AT CONNELLEE TODAY "Show Boat" began making records when Edna Ferber's novel climbed into the best seller class and stayed there like a constant star in the fiction firmament. Then the stage play scored a tremendous hit in New York in 1926. Road shows swept across the country in a trail of triumph. Equal success was attained in London when the company went there. The New York revival in 1932 proved that "Show Boat" had entertainment qualities which did not dim with time. Now the Universal picture, starring Irene Dunne, opens at the Connellee Theatre today. The Jerome Kern-Oscar Hammerstein music retains its appeal. The songs which are inseparable from the play are featured in the film and three new tunes were created by the same pair for the 1936 screen version. The production is a musical romantic drama, centering on the love story of Magnolia and Ravenal, dashing river gambler and heart breaker. Most of the action takes place aboard Captain Andy Hawks' Mississippi show boat, with some sequences in New York, Chicago and in France. The cast contains eight principals in roles they played in the stage production. Irene Dunne portrayed Magnolia in the first road company. Allan Jones, featured opposite her as Ravenal, first interpreted the character in a St. Louis stock company. Those who appeared in the original New York company include Charles Winninger as Captain Andy; Helen Morgan as Julie; Francis X. Mahoney as Rubberface and Sammy White as Schultz. Paul Robeson, singer of "Old Man River," played Joe in the first London offering. There is a singing chorus of 200 voices and a cast of 3,500. Jerome Kern composed the music; Oscar Hammerstein II, who wrote the lyrics, is also the author of the stage play and the screen version. James Whale directed.
