Moore... ABOUT Eastland

By VIRGIL E. MOORE

We can't help but be amused at some of the editorial writing of the large daily newspapers around the state. All of them have a quick answer for Ralph Yarborough's victory in Tuesday's special election. "The conservative votes were split," they insist.

What they mean to say is that the Conservatives in the Democratic Party were robbed of the Republican votes which helped to elect Price Daniel, Allan Shivers and the late Beauford Jester as this state's last three governors. Without the Republican votes the Conservatives cannot win and without conservative Democratic votes the Republicans in the state cannot win.

We have also heard a lot of talk about Yarborough's failure to get a true majority of the 931,855 votes cast in the election. But let us consider it this way. If a true Democratic primary could be held in this state (leaving the Republican voters out), Yarborough's 353,923 votes would have been mighty close to a majority. In fact, leaving out the votes of Thad Hutchinson, the Republican candidate, got and giving all the votes of the lesser candidates to Martin Dies, you quickly see that he would have had just 359,457 votes. That's about 5000 votes more than Yarborough got. But also remember that some of the candidates who polled just a few votes (Hart and White, for instance) were liberals. Take away their votes from Dies and give them to Yarborough and you switch it around. Also remember that there were some Republican votes that went to Dies, since at the last moment it was realized that his boy Thad didn't have a chance, and Dies was the only man who could possibly beat Yarborough. (See Dallas Morning News editorials).

We about half way hate to see a man who has been beaten at the polls as many times as Yarborough has win an election, because we can't help but think that he must have made a lot of commitments. But we would not regretted just as much, if not more, to see Martin Dies, a Republican - thinker who poses as a Democrat, win. Moore About, we suppose, is a man who is unhappy with both sides. We think, perhaps, that the best label you could stick on us would be "conservative-liberal." We feel that Texas voters probably overlooked two of the best men in the race. One, a conservative, Searcy Bracewell, has a great future in front of him. The other, a liberal, Judge James Hart, probably has made his last race.

Someone almost bankrupted Doc Davis the other day. They put a sign on his cookie rack which read, "Free, Take One."

See by the Cisco Press that that city's new telephone directory features a picture of the Cisco dam on the front cover. Sure glad to see the new Bell plan has reached Eastland County. You may remember that last year we complained a little about still having a drawing of the "Spirit of Communication" (Continued on Page Two)

Anyone who has not received the educational leaflets by Friday is asked to contact Mrs. Turner at 853 and one will be brought to you.

Mrs. Turner also stated that it is the aim of the Cancer Society to eventually work itself out of existence by licking the disease through education and money.

The new board will meet again soon and have John Kennedy, YMCA regional Director, with them to complete plans for the entire summer recreational program.

A building supervisor will be appointed by the Board soon whose duty and contribution of her time will be in supervision of the weekly cleaning which members of the clubs take part in.

Long-Eared 'Kittens' Are Adopted By Cat

When Kitty, the large house cat of nine-year-old Margaret Jesse, sprang at a pair of baby jack rabbits bought to the Jesse home by J. B. Jesse, everyone within sight gave up hope for the bunnies.

But Kitty didn't make a meal of the two rabbits as was expected, instead she grabbed up one of them by the ears and took it back to her box home where her five kittens were waiting for another meal. Then the cat raced back and got the other rabbit and did the same. And that's how kitty became the adopted mother of two jack rabbits.

The rabbits weren't bashful at all. They nudged and pushed and fought with the kittens to get the best eating place. And when one of the rabbits would jump out of the box to do a little exploring on its own, Kitty would spring out after it, pick it up by its long ears and return it to the box.

Margaret, daughter of Mrs. Bertha Jesse, was as pleased with the situation as kitty was. It ended her problem of trying to feed the rabbits.

But mother nature apparently didn't like the set-up. One of the rabbits jumped out of the box recently during a cold spell, and the next morning Margaret found it dead. She took the rabbit out in the back yard and went to get a shovel, planning to bury the little rabbit. When she returned,

Along with his desire for better livestock every stockman has the desire to grow more and better stock feed on his range and pastures. Good grass grows good stock, while better grass always means better stock.

Due to the prolonged effects of drought, grass production will likely be critical both in amount and quality in the next few months. At present annual winter grasses are making excellent growth and furnishing much grazing due to a favorable winter season. Within a short time the life cycle of these winter grasses will be completed, and cattle will have to depend on perennial summer growing grasses for their grazing. Many stockmen are all ready making plans to remove their cattle from at least part of their range (Continued on Page 2)

Someone was telling us the other day that what this country really needs is dirtier fingernails and cleaner minds. Could be.

Seems like everyone in this part of the state tried to telephone Dallas the other night after the tornado hit that city. We put in a call shortly after 8 p.m. to the Texas Election Bureau in an attempt to give them Eastland County election returns, but were unable to get the call through until the following morning.

Mrs. Donna Mae Anderson, chief operator here, said the local switchboard looked like a neon sign from the time the first news of the tornado reached here. She termed it the "worse I've ever seen" and said that about the only thing she could remember that would compare with it was when Eastland had that bad hail storm some years back.

More than 100 emergency calls to Dallas were delayed because of busy and out of order circuits, and everyone who wasn't calling Dallas was busy calling someone else in town to tell them about the storm.

Having done our share of adding extra work to the operators' already overworked schedule, we offer our sincere thanks for a job well done. Despite the fact the loc-

Lone Star Gas Offers Free Range For Cake Recipe

Lone Star Gas Company's Home Economics Department, celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary this year, is looking for a recipe for a birthday cake to help celebrate the occasion. And they have chosen the Spring Range Campaign as the time to take this search for an Anniversary Cake recipe to the public.

To the woman who helps the home economist—mark their birthday by furnishing them this very special recipe will go a 1957 thermostatically controlled top burner gas range of her choice. She can select any make or model she desires from the dozens of fine "Burner With A Brain" gas ranges on display at appliance dealers during the campaign.

She does not have to bake a cake or buy anything to enter. The home economists will make the cake. All a customer has to do to enter the contest is pick up an entry blank at the showroom of a dealer participating in the Spring Range Campaign or at a Lone Star showroom. These dealers can be easily identified by the many colorful signs and displays decorating their stores. A cake recipe entry blank will be given to her free. The customer then writes down her favorite cake recipe or a recipe she believes would make the best Silver Anniversary Cake and mails it to Lone Star Gas Company, Home Economics Department, 301 South Harwood Street, Dallas. The entries must be mailed during the campaign months of April and May. A person may send in as many recipes as she likes as long as each is on an official entry blank. The contest is open to everyone except employees of Lone Star Gas Company and their families.

Many pastures which have been severely abused should have a large portion of our present succulent growth of winter grass left on the land as litter. A heavy litter will help keep a large share of the good rains we hope to receive in April and May.

J. D. Herrell recently completed about a mile of terraces and a large diversion terrace on his farm north of Olden.

J. G. Harlow who lives in Dallas built about a mile and a quarter of terraces on his farm east of Cisco.

Roy Adams has completed three miles of terraces, two diversion terraces, and a nice pond on his farm near Dothan.

R. M. Sneed finished building an exceptionally nice pond last week on his farm in the Grapevine community. This pond will cover about four surface acres, is 27 feet deep and is estimated to hold 20 - 25 acre feet of water. Additional drainage area was added to the pond with a large diversion terrace.
