MOORE about... EASTLAND

by Virgil E. Moore

The Family Economics Bureau of a large insurance company was kind enough to send us an article the other day concerning the cost of letter writing. Just before we filed the letter we spotted a dollar mark in it and became interested.

According to the writer, it costs $2 for an official of a bank, insurance company, department store or utility company to answer a letter which you may write him.

This prompts us to think that perhaps we should just add a postscript to each letter we write one of these gentlemen and suggest that if an answer is too much trouble, two bucks will suffice.

According to this startling bit of information, it's the secretary's time and not her boss's that is the biggest single item of cost. She will average 25 to 30 minutes per letter, according to this information. The only thing is, our expert is figuring in not only the cost of taking dictation, typing, correcting and checking spelling in the dictionary, he also is counting the coffee breaks, lipstick repairs and other non-productive operations.

New we can't figure the importance of all this, but we hate to see us get blamed for a $2 letter just because the secretary has to pretty up after she drinks her coffee. The expert suggests that the cost of letter writing can be cut considerably by using general pool of stenographers or a dictating machine. "Dictators develop preferences for the more efficient, better-looking stenographers," our informer warns, however.

We think that we have the answer to the problem faced by these hard working individuals. After watching O. H. Dick answer letters for five years, we are convinced that he is the biggest expert letter writer of them all.

For instance, the other day O. H. got a letter from a firm which was fixing our press camera. In the $2 letter he received, the company wanted to know if he wanted his lens cleaned, his shutter adjusted, his bellows repaired, his handle mended, his range finder calculated, and his camera recovered. Dick simply wrote back, "No, no, no, no, yes, no, no." If those folk don't have a carbon copy of their letter they are in bad shape.

Dick is a tricky one when it comes to letter writing anyhow. When we first went to work for the Elected us a complaint letter and told us to answer it. We did and got it ready for his signature. Just go ahead and sign it yourself he told us, and we did. Never have we had such an eating out as we got when that fellow got that letter. Later we discovered Dick answers his own mail except when someone is going to get it. We haven't written many letters for him since then.

Letters are sometimes hard to write. In fact, we had rather do just about anything than write a letter. It's not so much the actual typing or writing that gets us; but it is hard for us to ever get a stamp on a letter and get it in the mail box. Why, if the Post Office hadn't been kind enough to put this PO box in front of A&P we probably never would get a letter in the mail.

Our wife doesn't have much trouble writing letters as we do. (Continued On Page Four)

District Teams to Face Showdown Action Friday

Cisco answered a question Friday night that everyone has wanted to know the answer to since the Lobos began their string of impressive victories. Yes, the Lions can come from behind and win.

Cisco, hit hard and fast in the first quarter by Ballinger, and outplayed in the entire first half, struck quickly in the second half to ride to a 32-14 victory over Ballinger in 7-AA play.

The win over Ballinger definitely makes Cisco the odds-on favorite to win the district crown, and completely reverses their 1957 ranking. Both of the other district games were nip and tuck affairs, showing that the other four district teams are pretty well even. Coleman edged past Eastland, 24-19, and Ranger gained a 20-14 victory over Winters. Ranger got back Jake Basham in the Winters game and his return to the Bulldog lineup greatly strengthened the team position.

A lot more answers should be forthcoming this Friday night. Cisco will be at Ranger in the big game of the week, and a win by the Lobos could just about assure Cisco of at least a tie for the district crown. Ballinger will play host to Coleman in another tilt, and Winters will be at Eastland. Eastland and Ballinger must win this week to maintain any hope of winning the championship.

Pandall lies easily maintained his lead as the top scorer in the district as he scored four touchdowns against Ballinger. He now has 99 points for the year and the only interest left in the individual scoring race is who will finish second. Just about any of a dozen boys could snag that honor. Pat DeBusk of Coleman and Ken Weington of Ballinger are now tied for the spot with 44 points. Cisco's Duane Hale is just one touchdown off the pace, Coleman's Jerry Harris needs just eight points and Clint Humphreys of Eastland just 10.

New Ford Trucks On Display at King Motor Co.

Ford's 1959 line of trucks, designed and built to the highest quality standards, introduces new economy, durability, styling and driver comfort features in a full range of 371 models, which this year includes a new tilt cab tandem model and a Ford-built four wheel drive.

The new Ford trucks are now on display at King Motor Co. in Eastland.

Ford's new four-wheel drive models, which will be available soon, in the F-100 and F-250 series, will cruise along the highway in two-wheel drive, or pull through deep mud, snow or sand when shifted into four-wheel drive. Equipped with the optional 292 V-8 engine, the new four wheel drive trucks in the F-250 series will climb grades of more than 60 percent.

Another new truck model Ford introduces this year is the tilt cab tandem. Ford sold more tilt cab models in 1958 than any of its competitors. The new model combines the serviceability advantages of the tilt cab with the proven features of the powerful tandem axle and chassis.

New front-end styling of the 1959 Ford trucks includes a new hood on lights and mediums, new "floating type" grille with a horizontal design, new rectangular parking lights mounted in the grille area under the safety twin headlights, and on the light trucks, a new contoured integral bumper with a center recess area that protects the license plate. A new Ford nameplate is superimposed on a

Gray Matter

By JOE GRAY

I've been asked about my Indian friends, the McCurtains from Oklahoma. My questioner wanted to know if these Indians are civilized.

"Civilized?" For heaven's sake, they're all Presbyterians and all of them are in their church every Sunday morning.

Greenwood McCurtain says he doesn't always agree with what the preacher says, but he's always there to see what the old boy has to say.

These McCurtains are fine people. They're Choctaws. If one were to take a good look at the map of Oklahoma he'd find the Southwest corner of Oklahoma is named McCurtain County. It was named for Greenwood's family.

Actually, his grandfather was the last elected chief of the Choctaw nation. So you say these people have a background of leadership that even goes back to the days when the Choctaws were living in Mississippi, Alabama, and that area of the South. That was before the white man ran the Indian out over the storied "Trail of Tears" to Oklahoma.

Not only has Greenwood a heritage based in Indian culture but his people also have a Southern heritage. All of his people fought for the Confederate States of America in the Civil War. They knew the meaning of liberty 100 years ago and were willing to fight for it then as they are now. There hasn't been a war the United States has fought in that the McCurtains weren't in it one way or the other.

For many years before he retired from the practice of law, Greenwood's father was an attorney for the Choctaw Indian nation. Although Oklahoma by that time had become a state in the Union there was a lot of legal matters that had to be taken care of for the Indian Nation for years after statehood.

Mr. McCurtain is still living in Washington, although he is getting feeble and now doesn't get around as well as he used to. He and Will Rogers were good friends. Both of them graduated from Kemper Military Academy in Missouri, although Mr. McCurtain is older than Will Rogers and finished that institution about a decade before Will Rogers entered that school.

I was talking to Greenwood McCurtain the other day about Will Rogers and his father's relationship. They never had a really close relationship with one another although they did visit each other every time they were in one another's hometowns. Greenwood mentioned that he thought one of the things his generation had that the young people don't have today that they could use as reading the writing of Will Rogers.

I'll agree that it is bad that our young people today don't have the steady influence of a fine man in public life as Will Rogers. Greenwood says his father thinks Will Rogers was the greatest American of the 20th century. There are a lot of people of my age and older who'll agree with that.

Surely Will Rogers could have been president if he would have run for the job, but he wouldn't have had it as a gracious gift. He had too much sense to take on something that put a man in such a controversial position as the nation's presidency places a man.

It's hard right now for me to realize that Will Rogers has been dead for 23 years, but as I remember it he was killed in a plane crash with Wiley Post, also an Oklahoman, in August of 1935.

America suffered a loss when Will Rogers died. Rogers is said to have been about one-fourth Cherokee Indian. At his memorial in Claremore, Oklahoma, there is an inscription from the Cherokee Nation claiming him as one-fourth full-blooded member of their race. The Cherokee Nation doesn't go out of the way to claim people as one of their tribe. A fellow has to do something on the ball for that highly civilized nation to claim him, unless he's full-blooded.

My friend Greenwood McCurtain, his brother Jackson McCurtain, who was named for the great Confederate general, their son, daughters, and sons of their cousins and other Indians friend now living in Fort Worth have a little scheme to make a little money. They put on Indian dances around over the country side at gathering that would like to have that type of entertainment. They're glad to do this for their friends, provided their friends are willing to pay for the fee these people dance for—and as Greenwood said, they hope to keep this up so their children will remember what some of the old tribal dances are like.

However, when the boys decided to go in for their tribal dances and set out a program that interested organizations and gatherings could be willing to pay for they had to get together and do a little practice and work out a routine. So the whole idea of them went down to the Arthur Murray dance studio and enrolled in dancing. For a couple of weeks Murray's instructors of the feminine gender didn't know whether the boys were going to scrub them or waltz with them, but the boys lumbered up their legs and worked out a routine.

I wonder what the youngsters would say about their taking Indian dancing lessons at a dancing school! Times have changed in the past few generations.

Girl Scout Movement Here Explained by Mrs. Boney

(Editor's Note: The following story was written for the Telegram by Mrs. Gene Boney, Eastland Girl Scout publicity chairman.)

By MRS. GENE BONEY

I'm sure most of you, at one time or another, have said—with deep feeling—that you wouldn't be a child again for anything in the world. Thinking back, you recall that every minor disappointment was a dire tragedy—that nearly everything you longed for was just beyond your reach—that you were surrounded by adults who constantly said "no," or "don't do that," or "don't ask why . . . just do it."

The universe has changed, wonderfully and a little frighteningly, since we were youngsters. And yet, somehow, the world of children has remained much the same. To the little girl of eight, it still seems like the end of everything when it rains the day of the picnic—she, too, wants terribly to stay up as late as she pleases, to wear ear-rings, to drive a car—in her ears, too, ring the commands to "do this"—"Stop doing that"—and, "don't ask why."

But, she must ask why. She wants to know the "why" of everything she needs to know. This is the excitement, the fascination, the wonder of a child's world. This is the part we forget, unfortunately, as we grow older. At age eight, the little girl's horizon is not very far beyond the toes of her scuffed up shoes—and all the adventure of growing up lies in the process of exploring, seeking, probing, asking . . . of pushing that horizon out beyond her front door, her neighborhood, her community . . . out farther than a bird can fly.

And, by the way . . . how does a bird fly? What keeps it up in the air? Do you remember wondering about this? She wonders about it. She wonders about everything—where does rain come from . . . who gives the postman the letters he leaves in the mailbox—where does the sun go at night—what makes a flower grow—why doesn't everybody have brown eyes?

Where will she find all the answers? Her mother is usually too busy for explanations—her father is either in a hurry to get to work or has come home too tired to answer questions. And she won't be satisfied with the promise, "Some other time." She must know now—there are a million things she must find out about "some other time."

So . . . it behooves us to provide a medium, if we can, through which this alert, searching little girl can find the proper answers, wise guidance and affectionate understanding counsel. We are indeed fortunate in this area. There is just such a medium. We call it Girl Scouts.

Now I know that Girl Scouting is not new to anyone here. And that you know the Scouting movement for girls is based on an ethical code and a promise to fulfill one's duty to God and country and to serve others.

TELEPHONE TALK

By W. H. McNally, Manager

IDEAS FOR '59

You have probably heard of "brainstorming" over at the telephone company. We are having just that. We call it "Ideas for 1959"—ways of improving anything and everything about the telephone company, and its service to you. Top management of our company realize that the men and women that do the actual work of providing the telephone service are in a good position to know ways of saving money, improving service, and etc.

All of the suggestions are put on paper and reviewed by the top management of the company. Not all the suggestions can be used. However, some of them are already in use. Others will receive favorable consideration and will be in effect as time goes on.

LUXURIOUS—BUT NOT A LUXURY

Got a telephone for your bedroom, yet? Nothing tops a bedroom telephone for real luxury living. When I'm home using ours, I like to stretch out on the bed with the phone cradled between my shoulders and my ear. I can relax and really talk that way.

There are plenty of good, practical reasons for having a bedroom phone, too. Privacy, for example. Women often say how reassuring it is to have a phone at their bedside when they're alone in the house at night. It's much nicer to be able to "reach" to answer instead of having to dash to another room.

Here in Eastland a bedroom extension costs only $1.00 a month plus tax and installation. And for a one-time charge of only $10, you can have your choice of any of the nine beautiful color telephones. They're especially smart for bedrooms.

EASY TO KEEP IN TOUCH

I guess at one time or another, we all remember—out of a clear sky—someone we haven't thought of in a long time. "Whatever happened to George?" we say. Or to Ruth, or the Browns, or the Martin family. Usually it's someone we really mean to keep in touch with—like the old couple who used to live next door, or old friends in faraway places. But with so much on our minds and so much to do, the months fly by and we never get around to it.

The quick, easy way to make up for lost time, of course, is to use your telephone.

A long distance phone call is the personal, thoughtful way of keeping in touch with those you care about. Try a call tonight, and you'll see what I mean.

Call by number. It's twice as fast.

If you like to give meat balls a very special treatment, this Polynesian recipe, enhanced by sweet sour cucumber peels, will certainly interest you.

Polynesian Meat Balls (5 servings)

One cup soft bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, 1/4 cup chopped onion, 1/2 cup milk, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 1 pound ground beef, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger, 1 cup pineapple juice, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 1 (8-ounce) can water chestnuts, drained and cut into 1/4-inch slivers, 2 (1 pound) cans bean sprouts, 1/4 cup chopped onion, 1 cup coarsely chopped green pepper.

Combine soft bread crumbs, salt, pepper, onion, milk, 2 teaspoons soy sauce and ground beef. Shape into 16 balls, using about 2 tablespoons of mixture for each ball. Place in a shallow baking pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until browned, about 30 minutes. Combine sugar, cornstarch and ginger. Add pineapple juice, vinegar, remaining teaspoon soy sauce and butter. Cook over low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Add water chestnuts and reheat. Combine bean sprouts, onion and green pepper. Simmer until onion is tender. Drain off liquid. Spoon bean sprout mixture onto

These exotic meat balls dressed up with sweet sour cucumber peels make a lively, guest-pleasing entree.

Sweet Sour Cucumber Peels (1 1/4 cups)

One large cucumber, 1 teaspoon oil, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch, 1/4 cup water, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 teaspoon soy sauce. Wash the cucumber and cut off ends. Peel the cucumber generously so peels have substance. Cut the peels into 2-inch sections, about 1/2-inch wide, yielding about 1 1/4 cups peels. Heat oil and saute cucumber peels in hot oil a few seconds, or until all pieces are coated with oil. Combine sugar and cornstarch in a small saucepan. Add water, vinegar and soy sauce. Heat mixture until it comes to a boil, stirring constantly. Continue cooking for 1 minute. Pour the sweet-sour sauce over peels and chill until crisp.

Girl Scouts—

Another thing I think you might like to know is that this is a varied program — so varied that I cannot possibly describe all of it. But it covers all the things that children are curious about — from boiling eggs to flying. The consistency in Girl Scouting is not in the specific projects the girls take on. One troop may suddenly become fascinated with learning about butterflies and insects. Another may want more than anything in the world to visit the courthouse. Just last year, one troop of Senior Scouts combined a variety of interests developed in Girl Scouting. By making a n d selling fudge and by collecting and selling different items, they financed a two-month summer trip.

The point I would like most to make is that it is not the individual projects girls choose from week to week, that are most important. What is most important is that they learn to be resourceful and self-reliant. This is not something that can be learned from books, or entirely from their families. It is something they must learn through their own adventures and discoveries.

Girl Scouting provides a framework for the adventures and discoveries. It results in a growing number of alert young women in the community who are good citizens and good neighbors.

"This month, the Girl Scouts are conducting a recruitment campaign. Leaders are needed in carrying on existing Brownie troops and to organize new ones for the fifth, sixth and seventh grades.

A meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3:15 in the high school auditorium for all the girls from the fifth, sixth and seventh grades and their mothers.

"If you are interested in scouting for your daughter, it is necessary that you attend this meeting with her," Mrs. Boney said.

"Please don't let your child—and the other children of Eastland down!"

ABOUT YOUR HEALTH

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health.
HENRY A. HOLLE, M.D., Commissioner

You may not know it, but the State Department of Health is a first class entertainer as far as motion pictures are concerned.

The films are not intended solely for entertainment of course. They're all on educational health subjects slanted to every age group from kindergarteners to oldsters.

During the last two years, over 15,000 bookings have been made of health department films, and displayed to more than one-and-a-half millions of Texans.

Film library secretaries claim that some of the more popular films, such as "The High Wall"—a mental health film dealing with human prejudices—are booked weeks in advance. It is for this reason that a second, third and fourth choice is requested when making application for film loans.

Careful records are kept of each film, containing the number of showings and total audience. Unfortunately about half of the loanees do not fill out the requested information on the card enclosed with each film. As a result the totals actually fall short of the whole number of showings and audience covered with each film.

Some films are very popular. "Preface to Life," a film about parent-child relationships for showing to adult audiences, had 26 viewings before 900 people during September.

One of the headaches of the film library is that loanees insist on rewinding films after use.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS AFFECT LOCAL OFFICIALS

Some of the proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution, to be voted upon at the General Election on November 4, will, if adopted, affect officers and employees of cities, counties and precincts. The changes will mainly involve length of terms of office and retirement, disability and benefits.

Proposed Amendment Number Two authorizes each county to establish, following a majority vote of its voters, a retirement, disability and death compensation fund for appointive officers and employees of county or precinct. Elective officers may also be covered if the voters approve.

The fund would be made up of contributions from the income of each officer and employee, plus contributions made by the county. The county's part must at least equal the amount paid in by the individual, but cannot exceed 7 1/2 percent of the individual's salary. Accumulated money in the fund would have to be invested in federal, state, county or municipal bonds.

Those receiving benefits from the fund would not be eligible for any other pension retirement funds or direct aid from the state, unless the entire fund is first released to the state.

Proposed Amendment Number Three would in many instances change the length of term for which the county commissioners court can appoint persons to fill vacancies in the offices of County Judge and Justice of the Peace. Now such appointments can be made "until the next general election for such offices." If the amendment is approved, such appointments may hereafter be made only "until the next succeeding General Election," as is already the case in appointments made by the Governor to fill vacancies in district and appellate courts.

Proposed Amendment Number Four provides an "automatic resignation" for any district, county or precinct official serving a four year term who announces his candidacy for a different office while he still has more than one year of his term to serve. The provisions cover announced or actual candidacy for "any office of profit or trust under the laws of this State or the United States other than the office then held."

Vacancies created by such "automatic" resignations are to be filled in the same manner as other vacancies for the particular office are filled.

Proposed Amendment Number Five would allow Home Rule Cities to amend their city charters to set up longer terms of office, not to exceed four years, for their elective or appointive officers, or both. Other cities, operating under the general laws rather than the Home Rule provisions, could do the same thing by majority vote of their qualified voters.

This amendment also contains a provision for "automatic resignation" where the holder of one office announces for or becomes a candidate for another office while he still has more than one year to serve of a term originally longer than two years.

There is one restriction on cities setting up the longer terms for their noncivil service officers. All members of their governing bodies must be elected by the voters, and vacancies in such governing bodies must be filled by special election rather than by appointment.

(This column, prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)

General Medaris is the first commander of America's new Missile Command. He has been a member of the Armed Services since 1918, when he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps at the age of 16. Prior to that he worked as a newspaper boy in Springfield, Ohio—and supplemented this with another job; turning gas street lamps on and off along his newspaper route!

A salute to America's newspaper boys from a former member of their ranks—Major General John B. Medaris, Commanding General, U. S. Army Ordnance Missile Command

"You're a mighty important young man. First, because you keep us supplied with one of the most vital needs of our day: news of the world. We know we can depend on you for that. Second, because you are one of America's future leaders. And we already have evidence of your ability to "sell America" in the way you and your fellow carriers have helped sell Savings Stamps and Bonds ever since 1941. Today thousands of carriers are investing part of their weekly earnings in Stamps and Bonds—saving for the future.

This is more important today than ever. Every U.S. Savings Bond or Stamp sold helps strengthen America's Peace Power, by providing money to keep our country strong, to advance science and education, and to keep our economy healthy.

So—in honor of Newspaperboy Day, 1958, I salute you. You and your circulation managers are doing a great job. Keep up the good work!"
