Man accused of kidnapping wife waives right to quick trial

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

James F. Bichsel, 47, who is charged with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated assault in connection with the abduction of his estranged wife, Nadine Bennett, on February 13, waived arraignment on his charges and waived his right to speedy trial at his scheduled arraignment Thursday morning.

Bichsel's lawyer, James M. Bowers, appeared for his client, and informed 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany that Bichsel wished to waive both his right to arraignment and his right to speedy trial.

Bichsel is charged with abducting his estranged wife at gunpoint and taking her from her house on East Francis across the street to his house on the morning of February 13, and holding her for nearly three hours. He was captured by police later in the afternoon.

Robert Gayle Gulley, who is charged with conspiracy to commit arson in the burning of his ex-wife's home at 1200 W. Browning, also waived arraignment through his attorney, Rick J. Harris.

Gulley's case is set for trial the week of April 18. Pre-trial motions will be heard on Monday, April 18, and several cases from both the 31st and 223rd District Courts will be tried beginning Tuesday, April 19.

Gulley is charged with trying to pay someone to set fire to his ex-wife's house at 1200 E. Browning. His indictment charges that he attempted to give the money to a Pampa police officer to complete the job.

Bichsel's case is not set for trial during the same week because he has waived the right of speedy trial.

Bob will sell if the price is right

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

Former U.S. Congressman Bob Price, currently seeking an appointment to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, has decided to auction off his ranch northwest of Pampa next month, unless he can refinance loans of $2.3 million taken out on the property, Price said today.

"It's gone to hell, and I can't see it's going to get any better," Price said about his farming and ranching business.

Price, 55, a four-term congressman and later state senator from this district, said he wants appointment to the five-member CFTC commission in Washington. The commission regulates all 11 commodity exchanges in the United States. Price said two members of the commission have announced their resignations, clearing the way for his appointment to the panel. Price said he has been in Washington seeking support for his appointment. He said about 30 senators and an equal number of congressmen are supporting him for a CFTC job. Price said he hopes President Reagan will appoint him as chairman of the regulatory agency, which Price helped create as a member of Congress. Commissioners are appointed to five-year terms, but Price said he didn't know if his possible nomination would be for an unexpired, or full term.

Price said he went to Washington in February and asked his friends in Congress to support him for the CFTC job. He said the FBI is conducting a background check on him in relation to the appointment, but he said administration officials have not formally asked him about the job. However, Price said the Washington rumor mill has tapped him as the "top contender" for the appointment.

The former congressman said paying off the outstanding $2.3 million in government loans on his ranch may help in getting the CFTC job. But he said his plan to auction off his 9,600-acre spread is strictly a business decision, one he should have made two years ago, he said.

The ranch, about 14 miles northwest of Pampa, has been in Price's family since 1907, he said. The boundaries of four Panhandle Counties, Gray, Roberts, Hutchinson and Carson, meet on the ranch. 1,600 acres of the property are good farmland, while the rest is suitable for cattle ranching, he said. Price said he has run as many as 3,000 head on the property in past years. The farm and ranch also includes Price's house, corals and barns.

"It all goes," Price said about the planned auction April 28.

He said he expects to receive about $3.5 million to $4 million from the sale.

Price said he wants out of farming and ranching, because he sees nothing but "continual loss." He said he was "hailed out three out of the last five years," while the cattle business has been nothing but a loser for the past 22 months. The rancher also said higher interest rates and costs of fuel, irrigation and other necessary supplies have caused his sustained losses.

Price said his total $2.3 million government debt on the property breaks down to a forty-year loan from the Farmers Home Administration and drought-disaster loans from the Small Business Administration.

Price said after he sells everything and if he receives the CFTC job, he will leave the Panhandle for Washington. If he doesn't get the appointment, Price said he isn't sure where he will live.

The rancher was raised in Reading, Kan., and was a fighter pilot during the Korean War. He moved to the ranch in 1955.

Price, a Republican, served in Congress from 1967 to 1975. His term in the Texas Senate ran from 1978 to 1980.

Wellborn gets 10 years probation

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Larry J. Wellborn, 20, who pleaded guilty to six counts of burglary and escaped from Gray County Jail two weeks ago was placed on ten years probation and fined $2,500 by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany Thursday afternoon.

Wellborn was arrested on January 14 and arraigned on a total of six counts of burglary within the next few days. He was indicted on the six charges by a grand jury and his case was set for trial.

He was arrested with his wife, Joyce, and three other men, Richard D. Page, Levi Aubrey Moore, and William Dewayne Welch. Page, Moore and Welch pleaded guilty and appeared before 223rd District Judge Don Cain and were all placed on probation ranging from three to five years.

District Attorney Guy Hardin had recommended eight years in the Texas Department of Corrections because he felt that Wellborn was the leader of the burglary ring which had committed eight burglaries in two weeks.

Mark Buzzard, Wellborn's court-appointed attorney, painted him as a 20-year-old who worked with three others on the burglaries and deserved at least a chance at probation despite his jailbreak. Buzzard said his client made the break out of desperation.

"He was in jail with the others, and one by one they all got out on probation. People were saying to him 'You're going to the pen.' He got desperate. It wasn't that much money anyway, the group got maybe $1,000 out of all the burglaries."

One burglary was at the Pampa Mall, where the group allegedly broke into game and other coin machines. Another two were in McLean at a combination truck stop-western store, both committed within two days of each other. A fourth was at Second Time Around, a secondhand store on South Barnes where a television was reportedly stolen.

A fifth burglary was committed at National Auto Salvage, where Buzzard said the group "got about $100." A sixth burglary was committed at Harvester Lanes on South Hobart, where the ring was broken with the arrest of the four men and one woman.

In addition, Wellborn was implicated in two other burglaries, one at the Tee Room, a bar on Brown Street, and one at the Cuyler Street Laundry. He denied any connection with the two additional burglaries and was not indicted for them.

He blames the actions of the group partly on hard times. The five were all living together and jobs were scarce.

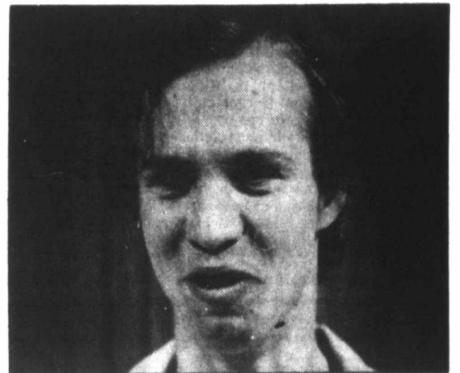

"Even when times are bad, you've got to buy vitamins for your pregnant wife," Buzzard said, "you've got to eat."

He said all the members of the group gave confessions when they were arrested, but only Wellborn confessed to six burglaries. Page confessed to four, and the others all confessed to fewer than four. But Wellborn claimed they all committed them together.

At the sentencing hearing, Buzzard said since a large amount of money was not involved, Wellborn has a family, and poses no great threat to society, he should be given the chance at probation.

"He's been punished enough by the time he's been incarcerated since his arrest," Buzzard said at the hearing. "He was one of several involved who all benefited. No one benefited more than the others, so he shouldn't be punished any more. I think he's a good risk."

McIlhany said it seemed they all lived together, but he wasn't sure anyone who pleaded guilty to six burglaries and had made a jailbreak is a good risk for probation.

Larry J. Wellborn

"It's very hard for me to give you probation with a jailbreak against you, because a jailbreak is absolutely repugnant to our system of justice. I'm giving you longer probation than the others because of the jailbreak."

Wellborn will not be able to leave the county without the permission of his probation officer, and may not leave the state without McIlhany's permission. As of late Thursday afternoon, he had not left to join his wife at her parents' home, where she is staying, but said he had plans to try to secure a permit to do so.

Page, Welch and Moore have all returned to New Mexico.

Horse racing bill appears dead

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — This year's version of the legalized horse race gambling bill seems headed for death in a House committee unless the chairman can change at least one mind.

Eight members of the 15-member Committee on Urban Affairs have told Chairman George Pierce in a confidential letter that they want the bill — co-sponsored by Pierce — to never come out of subcommittee.

"We do not plan to support HB440 if it comes to the committee," the letter to Pierce said.

Committee member Mike Toomey, R-Houston and one of the eight, said Thursday it was "a good bet, pardon my pun" that the bill would die in committee.

If Pierce and other horse race backers can't talk at least one of the eight into a change of heart, legalized pari-mutuel betting in Texas could be dead in Texas for at least another two years.

"It could be in better shape," Pierce, R-San Antonio, said of the bill's status.

Bill author Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said he would "continue to work that committee" despite the majority opposition. Berlanga conceded his bill could be doomed "if they are set in concrete, which I don't think they are."

"All things can happen in the legislative process," he said.

The Berlanga bill calls for local option elections on horse race gambling.

The eight committee members or their spokesmen confirmed Thursday they would vote against it. Their letter to Pierce said they were signing it with the understanding that Pierce "will keep the request confidential."

Pierce read portions of the letter to a reporter who previously talked with the eight legislators or their aides about the matter.

Also Thursday, the committee authorized Pierce to order the director of Texans Against Gambling to submit records showing who is bankrolling his lobbying efforts.

Pierce said he expected Allen Maley Jr. of Dallas to comply with the committee request without being subpoenaed.

Committee member and horse race gambling foe Frank Eikenburg, R-Plano, said the eight votes seem certain, but added, "They aren't solid until after the votes are cast. I'd like to bring it up quick and get rid of it. The longer they postpone it, the more chance people have to change their minds."

Pierce said, "We're not in that big a hurry to get it out."

The eight committee members opposed to legalized horse race gambling are Eikenburg, Toomey, Barry Connelly, R-Houston; Randy Pennington, R-Houston; Al Edwards, D-Houston; Jan McKenna, R-Arlington; Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, and David Cain, D-Dallas.

Bob Kelly, House parliamentarian, said it would take an "extraordinary" action to get the bill to the House floor despite committee rejection. There are several methods to circumvent committees, but those tactics are rarely tried, Kelly said.

The push for horse racing could be resurrected in the Senate, but Berlanga acknowledged some problems there because of tax provisions in his bill. Only the House can originate a tax bill.

"If it gets moved over to their ballpark, it would have to be altered," he said of the Senate, adding that the needed changes could be made.

Wolens disagreed, saying the House committee's rejection would be a fatal blow.

"The underlying impetus behind the bill is that it creates new dollars for general revenue. That's one of the attractions. To eliminate that would be to diffuse much support for the bill," he said.

"Probably, it is over," he said.

If senators do approve a horse race bill, it must go back to a House committee before going to the House floor.

Kelly said under House rules there are several committees that could handle the bill. Speaker Gib Lewis, a horse race advocate, could steer the bill away from the urban affairs panel.

However, Berlanga said it would not be "good administrative policy to send a bill to another committee for the sole purpose" of skirting a certain negative vote.

Anti-gambling lobbyist Maley said his problems with the committee are a result of the solid eight votes against gambling.

The committee voted 13-1 Thursday to give Pierce the power to subpoena Maley's financial and telephone records. Maley has said he has "nothing to hide" and will give the records to the committee.

Maley called his financial records a "red herring" tossed in by Pierce "to try to make the committee members change their position on their vote."

"The way it sits right now, there's no question in anybody's mind that there are eight votes against that bill in his committee," said Maley.

At a hearing earlier this month, Maley refused to answer committee questions about his finances. He told the committee he did not want "to be releasing people's names in advance of a public report without having discussed it with them."

Job Hunter

Frank Rigney, 42, moved to the Panhandle nine years ago from Ohio. He is married and has two daughters, ages 10 and 12 years.

Although his wife is a temporary cook at the First Baptist Church and he has applied for unemployment, Frank is hoping he doesn't "have to collect that first check."

Frank says he is probably one of the few handymen around. He prefers outdoor work, as his history shows.

He was a farm laborer on the Stoval Farms "off and on for three or four years."

He can do carpentry and house painting. He said he painted a house for Keith Stowers.

He also was a janitor at First Baptist Church and did ground maintenance at Coronado Community Hospital for nine months.

If you can use a man of Frank Rigney's talents, you can reach him through Charles Vance at the Texas Unemployment Service (665-0938) or at home at 665-8226.

Reagan signs $4.6 billion jobs bill as boost to the economy

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed into law a bill that gives a $4.6 billion booster shot to the economy in public works projects and provides additional billions urgently needed by more than half the states to continue paying unemployment benefits.

The House gave final congressional approval to the anti-recession legislation late Thursday and the president signed it shortly after it arrived at the White House, about 9:30 p.m.

With many congressmen eager to leave town for a 10-day Easter recess, there was no formal signing ceremony.

Although the major focus of the bill is to create jobs, it also contains a $5 billion emergency supplemental appropriation to replenish a special fund from which 27 states and the District of Columbia are borrowing to meet their unemployment compensation payments.

"We've absolutely run out of money," Jack Hashian of the Labor Department's Employment and Training Administration said Thursday.

He said 19 states either have exhausted their unemployment benefit funds or would today, and that further juggling of accounts — which was done over the past several days — was impossible.

Hashian said federal and state governments pay some $100 million in unemployment benefits daily under various programs and added: "We're flat broke."

The recession-relief portion of the bill contains a provision ensuring that about $2 billion of the money will go to areas hardest hit by the recession.

The measure also provides about $325 million in food and shelter for victims of the longest recession since World War II, as well as several hundred million dollars more for social programs.

It contains $1 billion in Community Development Block Grants to local governments, of which $375 million may pay for public service jobs. That was pushed by women's groups concerned that men would benefit from the public works money in the bill.

Most of the rest of the money will be used for a variety of construction projects, including flood control, highways, Veterans Administration hospital repair, airport improvements and Tennessee Valley Authority programs.

Congressional aides estimate the bill will create tens of thousands of jobs, many of them in hard-pressed regions. But officials were unable to say precisely what type work would be created.

Many of the jobs will be in the construction trades for building highways, repairing hospitals and completing other heavy construction projects. Those jobs will go mainly to highly skilled construction workers.

The bill also provides money for distributing surplus food and establishing shelters for the homeless. There was no estimate of how many people would be helped.

Politically, the legislation was the new Congress' first attempt to alleviate the impact of the long recession. It represented a compromise between Reagan, who began the year opposing a traditional jobs bill, and congressional Democrats, many of whom wanted to spend much more.

Congress sends Social Security bail-out bill to the President

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sent President Reagan a landmark plan today to assure Social Security solvency into the next century by making workers pay more into the system, increasing the retirement age by two years and taxing benefits.

Shortly before midnight Thursday, the House approved the compromise $165 billion package 243-102. Then a 58-14 vote in the Senate early today ended two years of partisan congressional conflict over the explosive issue, and will avert the impending collapse of the system which serves 36 million beneficiaries.

The legislation, which Reagan has embraced and is expected to sign soon, follows the blueprint laid out two months ago by the National Commission on Social Security Reform including:

—Higher payroll taxes in 1984, 1988 and 1989.
—A six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase in benefits.

—A first-ever levy on benefits going to more affluent retirees.

—Mandatory Social Security coverage for new federal workers and employees of non-profit organizations.

—An increase in the current retirement age of 65.

Before the final vote, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., pleaded for support.

"This is not a perfect bill... but we are not a perfect body. This is not the last word, but it is the best we can make at this time," declared Baker.

With action completed on the bill, Congress has left town for a 10-day Easter recess.

The way was cleared for final congressional action after negotiators bargained for nearly 12 hours Thursday to hammer out a compromise version of the legislation which had previously passed the House and Senate.

Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., who served on the reform commission, hailed the package during brief House debate, saying, "It may not be a work of art, but it is artful work... It will do what it was supposed to do: It will save the nation's basic social insurance system from imminent disaster."

But in the Senate, legislators grumbled that their negotiators had given up too much to the House, and that the package relies too much on increased taxes.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., one of the conferees, attacked the compromise, saying, "I refuse to vote for fiscal irresponsibility."

The conferees dropped the Senate's "fail-safe" mechanism — devised by Long — which would automatically have reduced cost-of-living increases if the Social Security trust funds ran low.

Loss of that provision meant "you can't be sure we won't be back in 1985 and 1986 patching up Social Security again," warned Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo.

Senate conferees also agreed to drop their plan to raise the retirement age to 66 by the year 2015 and cut future pensions by 5.3 percent at that point. Instead they agreed to the House position of gradually raising the retirement age to 67 in the next century.

That provision would affect everyone born in 1938 or later. The retirement age would hit 66 in the year 2009 for those born in 1943. There would be no change for almost a decade, but then the age would start rising again to 67 in 2027.

In Brief

WASHINGTON — Congress, ending its political conflict over Social Security, is poised to send President Reagan a plan to keep the retirement system solvent by making workers pay more into it, increasing the retirement age by two years and taxing benefits.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has given speedy approval to a $4.6 billion bill that creates public works jobs and provides money urgently needed to for more than half the states to continue paying unemployment benefits.

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, in another round of political damage control, has asked for and received the resignations of three more top officials of the Environmental Protection Agency, sources say.

DARLINGTON, England — Britain's opposition Labor Party retains its parliamentary seat in a special election in this northeast English town. The ruling Conservatives came in a face-saving second, increasing chances of an early general election next June or October.

WASHINGTON — Motorists who complain that their new cars don't get anywhere near the fuel economy promised in the government's mileage rankings may have less to gripe about in the future. The government is thinking about deflating the ratings.

LOS ANGELES — In an international experiment to spot from space downed planes and sinking ships, an American search-and-rescue satellite is to go aloft next week, joining a Soviet satellite already saving lives.

Just what's going on these days over in the Kremlin?

MOSCOW (AP) — Strange and unexplained events surrounding the Soviet leadership this week caught Western analysts off guard, prompting reassessments of the power lineup inside the secretive world of Kremlin politics.

Word that Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov was hospitalized with heart and kidney problems until early this week leaked on Wednesday.

Andropov reappeared today and met with Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega. The meeting was reported by the official Tass news agency, which distributed a photograph of the two facing each other at a table.

Dmitri F. Ustinov, the defense minister who is assumed to be an Andropov ally, made an unusually quick return to Moscow from Budapest on Tuesday — the same day he left for an official visit to the Hungarian capital.

On Thursday, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, another presumed Andropov ally, received an additional title — first deputy premier.

Throughout all these developments, Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov was in Yugoslavia on a state visit.

In the four months since Andropov became the top Soviet leader, government sources have portrayed him as enjoying total control of the Kremlin power structure.

But the subtle leak of his hospitalization raises the possibility of a political move against him by an enemy in the Politburo, the Soviet Union's most powerful political body. Or his own people may have put out the word, seeking to stifle rumors of a more serious illness.

In this tightly controlled society, information is one of the most valuable political commodities. Its availability usually means it was distributed for a reason, especially when it concerns the man assumed to be the most powerful in the Soviet Union.

School bus crashes, nine are dead

NEWPORT, Ark. (AP) — A school bus carrying 40 people smashed into an embankment and overturned today, killing eight students and the driver, police said.

Forty people were aboard the bus, which missed an intersection before dawn, hit the embankment and rolled over onto its roof, authorities said.

There was no immediate word on how many were injured. Twelve to 15 ambulances took the injured to six hospitals in Jonesboro, Little Rock, Memphis and Newport. Some suffered head, neck and shoulder injuries, officials said.

One of the doctors who attended the injured at a Newport hospital, Dr. Roland Reynolds, said he treated about 25 people. Most injuries were minor, he said.

The bus overturned near Uno, about 18 miles northeast of Newport, at 5:15 a.m., just nine minutes after leaving Jonesboro.

The Jonesboro School Districts bus was carrying 33 students and seven adults, including supervisors, teachers and the bus driver, officials said.

Dispatcher John Carter of the state police headquarters in Jonesboro said 37 people had planned to make the trip, but four did not go.

Of 81-year-old

Lost document leads to eviction

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A judge has ordered an 81-year-old man evicted from the house where he has lived 42 years because he can't find a document which he says guaranteed him the right to pay $26.50 a month in rent for the rest of his life.

Stafford Schmidt has lived in the house since he and two brothers built it in 1941 on land owned by their nephew.

Schmidt told the judge Wednesday the document, signed by his nephew and his nephew's wife, either was misplaced or was stolen from a cedar chest along with other personal items in a burglary 10 years ago.

Although several friends testified they had seen the agreement, Probate Judge Jerome Jones said he needed proof the document existed since there was no mention of it in the will left by Selma Hoke, the wife of Schmidt's nephew.

Jones ordered Schmidt Wednesday to vacate. Schmidt, who is hard of hearing and has diabetes, could be forced to leave the house within 30 days.

"I know he's an old man and all, but there really needs to be something in writing," the judge said.

The dispute went to court because the new owners of the property, Kathy Ward and John Luhnig, want more rent money.

Mrs. Ward, a 31-year-old teacher, and Luhnig, a 26-year-old draftsman, are distant relatives of Schmidt. They inherited the property when their aunt, Mrs. Hoke, died in 1977.

In 1981, Mrs. Ward and Luhnig decided to sell the house and made arrangements with the prospective buyer to lease the house to Schmidt for $230 a month. Schmidt refused to pay the extra rent, and the home was not sold.

Schmidt, a retired carpenter and school custodian with the Dickinson Independent School District, wept at Wednesday hearing when Mrs. Ward testified her aunt had never mentioned the agreement.

Mrs. Ward and Luhnig, both of Houston, refused to discuss the case. Earlier, Mrs. Ward said the dispute "has been horrible."

"I realize it might not sound like a fair thing to do, but he has put us in a box," Mrs. Ward had said. "I don't like forcing him to leave. It upsets me, but we need the money. It boils down to our not being able to afford to have him living there and only paying $26.50 a month."

Schmidt's lawyers said they will try to negotiate a rent increase.

"I'm trying to take it calmly," Schmidt said.

"It's going to hurt, but I know God will make a way. I know I don't want to live with anyone else. I feel like I have a right to live here," he said.

Lilian Boles, 60, of nearby Bacliff, a longtime friend of Schmidt's, called the eviction "heartbreaking."

"That house means a lot to him. You just don't live somewhere for 42 years and then have to leave. The house and the tomato plant garden are his life," she said.

Siamese twins share common heart

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Siamese twin girls born five days have separate hearts, but may share a gall bladder and other internal organs, according to the doctor in charge of caring for the infants.

Dr. Richard Heath, an infant specialist, said Thursday that more tests are needed before doctors can determine "whether surgery can and should be contemplated."

Preliminary results from another test showed the twins may share a liver. More tests on the twin's liver and gastrointestinal tracts were scheduled today.

The dark-haired twins, Brenda and Ivon Hernandez, are attached from the breastbone to the navel.

The six doctors studying their case still need to find out if the babies share a gall bladder or a bile duct. Siamese twins sharing either a heart or a bile duct never have been separated successfully, doctors said.

Since the twins are still connected extensively at the chest, Heath said no one could guarantee they'd survive surgery even if they had two of each organ.

"We still don't have enough information to really make an accurate statement," Heath said. "Obviously, if the heart were significantly conjoined and could not be separated, the chances for survival would be very limited."

The twins' parents, Maria Dolores and Raul Hernandez, were relieved that the babies have separate hearts.

"It seems like good news to me," said Mrs. Hernandez, 26, who is recovering from the Caesarean delivery at Newark Methodist Maternity Hospital. "I hope the other (tests) come out the same way."

Doctors determined there are two hearts when dye injected into one baby's heart and traced with X-rays did not show up in the other baby's heart.

The test also revealed that both have holes in the wall that separates the upper heart chambers. But Heath said the problem isn't serious and rarely causes problems until later in life.

A statement released Thursday doctors also indicated that the two hearts are close and may share some outer layers.

Heath said that if El Paso has enough qualified doctors, the surgery can be done at Providence Memorial Hospital, where the twins are now.

About six to 11 doctors and technicians would be needed to separate the twins, he said.

Even if they can't be separated, there's a chance the twins could survive and possibly even go home, Heath said.

The El Paso Elks Lodge announced Thursday that it had set up a second fund to help pay medical bills. A benefit play has been scheduled, and donations also are being collected at Providence Memorial Hospital and at the El Paso National Bank.

Mattox pushes tougher child abuse laws

AUSTIN (AP) — Prosecutors should be able to compel spouses to testify against each other in child abuse cases and should not hesitate to take abused children away from their parents, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

Speaking to a group of Austin lawyers Thursday, Mattox said one mistake that costs a child's life would turn them into hard-nosed advocates of tougher child abuse laws.

"I know of two or three times, when I in my own conscience today say, I know that I should have taken some more aggressive action in getting that child out of that house," said Mattox, a former Dallas prosecutor. "I've seen some deaths take place."

"It only happens to you once. And if it does, it burns such an impression in your memory, you'll be a reformer in all this area if you aren't already," he said.

Mattox said many times a spouse is the only material witness to child abuse, and under current law, spouses can testify against each other, but do not have to.

"Many times we have put the sanctity of the family above the duty of society to protect the children of that society," said Mattox.

He called the increase in child abuse cases "epidemic" and said he found it "amazing how many perpetrators of these crimes were victims" of child abuse themselves.

Mattox did not flatly endorse but spoke favorably about proposals to extend capital punishment to child abusers who kill. The current death penalty laws covers murder in the course of rape, but Mattox said legislators should consider adding those who kill while sexually abusing a child, even if the abuse does not fit the legal definition of rape.

Workers said safe despite contamination

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of Gulf Nuclear Inc. say workers at their facility are adequately protected from radiation despite preliminary test results showing that one man's lungs contain more than 13 times the allowable level of a nuclear material.

A state health official said laboratory tests have found the man's lungs are contaminated with about 200 nanocuries of americium 241.

The man was operating a lathe at the plant in Webster Feb. 8 when the machine accidentally ruptured a container of the material, said Ed Bailey, director of licensing, regulations and standards at the Texas Bureau of Radiation Control.

Employees were trying to open the container at the time of the accident.

Attorney Dudley Murrey, who is representing the company, said Thursday night company officials have nothing to add to its earlier statement that employees are properly protected.

"It's safe to say that right now they are assessing the situation," Murrey said. "They are evaluating the employees' situation and to what extent they may have been contaminated. Tests are not complete at this point."

He said he does not know when tests of workers from the plant, which are being conducted at a federal laboratory at Oak Ridge, Tenn., will be completed.

Experts have been unable to pinpoint long-term effects of americium in the body, although the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said any dose increases risk of cancer.

A team of state physicists and engineers will be sent into the Webster plant, probably early next week, to investigate the company's procedures and to talk to employees, Bailey said.

The bureau on Monday suspended the plant's license to manufacture and distribute products containing radioactive materials because Gulf Nuclear failed to report the accident last month.

An employee who was concerned that he might be suffering from americium exposure reported the incident to the health department three weeks after the accident, Bailey said. He was fired later, according to Bailey.

Bureau regulations prohibit the dismissal of an employee for reporting health and safety problems, Murrey said. The employee was fired March 2 for excessive absences and the dismissal had nothing to do with his complaint.

Protests blocks rabbit skinning event

DALLAS (AP) — Wildlife groups, hopping mad about a rabbit-skinning contest scheduled for this weekend, have succeeded in pressuring a rabbit breeder's association into canceling the activity.

The animal protection groups charged that the event, run by the Texas Rabbit Breeders Association, could be inhumane because it would result in animals being skinned before they were dead.

"When you get into a contest skinning a live animal and speed is important, the likelihood of that animal dying in a humane way is very, very slim," Jerry Owens, president of the Fund for Animals in East Texas, said.

But the protests from the animal protection groups are unfounded, say organizers of the contest. It was to be held at the association's annual state convention at Fair Park here.

"Anybody who thinks that doesn't know anything about rabbit people," Wilma Wilson of Dallas, president of the breeders association, said.

"It's a commercial demonstration only by our membership," Mrs. Wilson said. "They kill the rabbits instantly (before skinning). Anybody who thinks otherwise, I wish they'd give me a chance to sit down and talk with them."

A rabbit is killed instantly by striking it across the back of the head or by breaking its neck, Mrs. Wilson said.

But the two-day convention, including shows featuring more than 2,700 rabbits from across Texas, will go on as scheduled this weekend.

Owens said he had received calls from Dallas residents protesting the planned skinning event.

"It's one thing for the rabbits to die for their pelts and meat, but just to make a recreational thing out of it — that's not right," said Owens.

The Fund for Animals had threatened, before the breeders canceled the event, to seek a court order barring the skinning, Owens said.

Wayne Gallagher, general manager of the State Fair of Texas, which operates Fair Park, said he suggested that sponsors drop the rabbit skinning after citizen complaints were passed on to him by the Dallas Park Department.

Officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said they began receiving complaints about the show two weeks ago.

"It seemed that the people at the Rabbit Breeders Association realized that it might step on a lot of the community's toes," SPCA official Patricia Little said.

Gallagher said State Fair officials believed that "in an urban society, they (the public) may view it as something other than what it's intended to be. So we said it probably shouldn't do it."

Officer held in extortion

HOUSTON (AP) — Police were holding a Harris County deputy constable for questioning about an attempt to extort $10,000 from a Houston businessman by threatening to kill his wife and child.

No charges had been filed against the reserve officer early today.

Robbery detective Tom Roman declined to identify the businessman who was the target of the alleged telephoned threats, saying police may arrest others in the case.

"The threats have been occurring since Sunday night," Roman said. "There have been conversations every day since Sunday."

Police said the officer, whom constable's officials said was a reserve officer, was arrested Thursday near a shopping center where the money was left.

They key to our economic recovery

There is a consensus building among economists that the recession officially ended in December or January. Such a conclusion is inescapable from the recent flurry of positive economic indicators - a sharp upturn in industrial production, a firming of retail sales, a record rate of inventory liquidation in the last quarter of 1982.

For all this good news, we are also being warned by the same economists that the recovery is going to be modest, that unemployment will remain distressingly high perhaps through all of 1983. What is hard to accept is that a recovery which is something less than spectacular is exactly what the doctor ordered. A more rapid recovery would risk re-igniting inflation and put us back where we started from when the Federal Reserve began putting the money supply through the wringer in 1979.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker indicated in his recent testimony before the Senator Banking Committee that the Fed is not about to abandon its inflation-fighting stance for the sake of encouraging recovery with a pumped-up money supply. The Fed has been under pressure from some quarters to help bring interest rates down by allowing the money supply to grow at a faster rate.

Forcing down interest rates in that manner, Volcker said, would not be successful for long. The resulting inflation eventually would carry interest rates back to a level bringing recovery to a halt.

What would do the most to bring down interest rates and keep them down would be an unmistakable signal from Washington that the steady-as-she-goes course charted by Volcker is going to continue. Lending institutions need assurance that they will not be filling their portfolios with loans at relatively low interest rates, only to see inflation take off again a year or two hence.

President Reagan is in a position to send such a signal by announcing his intention of reappointing Volcker when his term at the Fed expires this summer. If Volcker prefers to bow out, Reagan can look for a successor who is committed to the approach Volcker has been taking.

The Fed chairman today deserves bravos for a policy which a year ago brought mainly critical barbs. The decline in the inflation rate has been truly dramatic, and what has been more impressive is that evidence of an economic turnaround is gathering with no sign that the declining inflation rate is turning around it. Indeed, the recent one-month decline of a full percentage point in the producer price index affirms the hope that inflation will remain below the 5 percent level at least through 1983.

The inflation rate is low enough to justify interest rates lower than what the consumer is encountering in the market-place. With assurance that inflation will remain safely in its cage, there is no reason why interest rates should not come down.

Arizona hosts a Job-A-Thon...

By PAUL HARVEY

During the wind-down of World War II and for a while thereafter, I hosted a Chicago radio program called "Jobs For G.I. Joe."

Veterans were showcased and potential employers listened and offered interviews. Many offered jobs.

Thus were placed hundreds of returning veterans. Many developed those jobs into significant careers. But the greater benefit was an improved public profile of the job-seeker and an enhanced awareness among area employers.

For today's jobless, Arizona is trying something similar: a statewide Job-a-Thon.

Arizona's joblessness is worsened by recession - curtailed copper mining. A major industry layoff is viewed by many communities as cataclysmic. It doesn't have to be. Most jobs in America are in companies that employ fewer than 25 people.

Jack Londen of Phoenix heard President Reagan's appeal for more local level self-help for more private sector initiatives - and responded with a proposal to match jobs and job-seekers with a statewide Job-a-Thon. It will be climaxed on TV and radio throughout the afternoon and evening of Easter Sunday.

The telethon has been a successful fund-raising vehicle for many charities. Why not to help the unemployed?

Nationwide, scattered individual TV and radio stations have sponsored local efforts to accomplish this objective. Most were, to some degree, successful.

Learning from these and expanding the program statewide, Londen and his committee of volunteers are encouraged by hundreds of job openings already pledged as employers discover that some of their backburner expansion plans can be moved up to the front burner.

This Londen calls "creative hiring."

Where bureaucracy has repeatedly demonstrated that the cost of government-created jobs subtracts from the benefits, this entirely non-government program has no overhead. The state's benefit is compounded as individuals remove themselves from welfare rolls to become taxpayers.

Between now and Job-a-Thon time, volunteers are telephoning area employers urging them to do some "creative hiring" now. Hundreds have.

President Reagan, applauding the Arizona effort, hopes it will become a template for other states.

Is going to college worth it?

By OSCAR COOLEY

What is it worth to go to college? One should start thinking of this question when they are in - say the 7th grade.

A college degree, AB or BS, is worth more than $300,000 in extra lifetime earnings, if you are a male; just under half that if a female, says the U.S. Census Bureau.

This, to a 7th grader, looks like quite a lot of money, regardless of your sex. Our guess is that it is too low an estimate, for it is impossible to know what the dollar will be worth 20, 40, 50 years from now. It will probably depreciate more than the Census Bureau expects.

It is also impossible to know what new earning opportunities will be devised during the next half century or so. Were computers envisioned 50 years ago? What about the latest developments in medicine and health care? Entire new industries will probably be born over the years. They will likely require high technology. One will need to know his math to cut a figure in them.

Why is a college degree worth so much more to a man than to a woman? Obviously because men's salaries are higher. It is not because of some inherent prejudice against the female sex but rather because experience has proven that male employees are worth more to an employer. They bring in more profits, the central aim of a profit enterprise. It's a matter of profits, not prejudice.

The youngster in school, considering college, thinks of many things besides potential dollar earnings. In fact, he may not consider the dollars at all. Ask any college graduate why he went to college and he may not even mention the greater dollar return to be expected. Perhaps he went to college because an older brother had gone and he followed suit. Perhaps a school teacher suggested to him that his high school girl friend planned to go and he figured he would have to, or lose her.

Going to college is not just a step upward, it is a long stride. One finds himself in a different world, a world where people read thoughtful books, where one is challenged to think for himself, not merely read and imbibe.

One graduates from the kid stage and becomes an adult. In college people are not ashamed to listen to classical music rather than soap opera. One attends a class where poetry is discussed seriously, not laughed at as highbrow. In the sciences, one does not just memorize formulas; he learns origins, reasons why. A course in Astronomy opens his eyes to how vast God's universe is, how puny the Earth.

It is impossible to place a dollar value on such factors. The Census Bureau's estimate of the money's of a college education made the headlines, but in fact it is a trivial matter. Some decide not to go to college because it takes 4 years of their lives, and they think of the many dollars they could earn, out in the working world, during those 4 years. They are dollar-conscious, and the Census Bureau's study tends to make them more so.

Many used to work their way through college - I knew a boy who came to college with nothing and graduated with all bills paid and money in the bank. He was ambitious; at various times, he was janitor of almost every building on the campus.

One plus for working your way is that you feel the cost, and so you try hard to get good grades and make every class hour count.

One should not decide to go to college because he or his family lacks the money. There are many opportunities to earn, especially during vacation. There are scholarships. And there is the bank; it pays a smart youth to borrow rather than not go - borrow and repay after he or she graduates and begins getting college graduate earnings.

One should talk with adults: are you glad to have gone to college? Sorry? Few will give the second answer.

The teenager has a life of 60 to 80 years ahead of him. If he gets a college degree, it will be very different. It is a serious choice to make.

Can we really purchase peace?

In Rhodesia, southern Africa, tribal rivalries date back to the early 19th century.

It was white British settlers (the country was never more than three percent white) who managed to bring a semblance of peace to the warring tribes by declaring them "one nation, indivisible" in 1890.

But old hatreds festered. Recent years civil strife became civil war.

Warriors of both camps murdered whites, plundered white properties - until the white rulers of Rhodesia agreed to national elections in 1980.

And the white government of Ian Smith was voted out. The black government of Mugabe took over - changed the name of the country to Zimbabwe.

His tribal rival Nkomo continued hit-and-run terrorist raids. More and more whites fled the country.

Now that once-prosperous nation - one of the few in Africa able to feed itself - is about to be torn apart again.

When Zimbabwe's blacks wrested power from the Whites in 1980 they inherited a balanced economy, a healthy treasury, capable and honest civil service.

Though the new prime minister, Mugabe, was and is a professed Marxist, he sensibly avoided drastic land reforms. Even our Wall Street Journal saluted him as a "pragmatist." His country continued to prosper.

Gradually, however, Mugabe began to practice the revolutionary doctrines he had preached - raised taxes - controlled wages and prices - redistributed land - controlled imports.

And with the usual results - reduced incentive to work, reduced trade, inflation soared.

For all this political and economic mismanagement, Mugabe, having to blame somebody other than himself, is blaming others - his rival tribal leader Nkomo - his neighbor - nation, South Africa.

And the few remaining whites.

So the massacres have resumed and Rhodesia, under whatever name, is threatened again by civil war.

Latin America, to be sure, is related to black Africa only distantly.

Yet, this further evidence that civil wars never really accomplish much should sober well-intentioned Americans who imagine that we can somehow purchase peace, wherever; that we can ensure individual rights, wherever; that we can somehow put Humpty - Dumpty together for good and forever.

We can't.

We could bankrupt ourselves trying.

Having your human rights certified

By ART BUCHWALD

According to the law, the President of the U.S. has to certify to Congress that a country accused of violating human rights has made significant progress in ending abuses, before the U.S. government can give it aid. This has presented some problems for Mr. Reagan, particularly where it concerns countries in Latin and Central America such as Chile, Argentina, El Salvador and Guatemala, to name just a few.

One cannot be sure how Mr. Reagan knows if there has been progress made in the human rights area, because the President only has the word of the leaders of these countries that atrocities against the citizens are being kept to a minimum. My guess is that before White House certification is sent up to the Hill, this is what happens.

The State Department puts in a telephone call to the U.S. Ambassador to the country Mr. Reagan has promised military aid.

The man in Washington says, "Mr. Ambassador, how's the human rights situation in your country?"

"Much improved. Last year the junta was holding 100,000 political prisoners, but they've emptied out the prisons and as far as our intelligence people can find out, there are only 95,000 hard-core criminals left."

"The President will be pleased to hear that. Do you see any signs of torture down there?"

"Wait a minute, I'll look out my window. No, it seems all quiet on the streets. No one is torturing anybody, at least not from my view. Do you want me to look on the other side of the Embassy?"

"That isn't necessary. As long as you can't see anything from your window, that's good enough for us."

"Of course they could be torturing at the local police stations, but I don't have the staff to go around checking every precinct in the country."

"The President wouldn't want you to. What does the opposition party say about the human rights situation in the country?"

"Come to think of it, I haven't seen any leaders of the opposition in three months. They all seem to have disappeared."

"Have you inquired about their whereabouts?"

"I did ask one of the colonels the other night at a reception about them, and he said they were holding a party caucus on an island off the shark-infested seashore."

"So to your knowledge the opposition in the country is alive and well?"

"The colonel assured me they were in the best of health, and they all wanted to be remembered to the President."

"Good. What about the man in the street? Does he seem happier than he was a year ago?"

"I can't speak for everybody, but the ones guarding my Embassy seem to be very happy. I spoke to one the other day and he said the army never had it so good."

"Could you give me a progress report on land reform?"

"It seems to be moving along. There was a photograph in the newspaper yesterday on the front page showing a peasant receiving a land grant from the President himself."

"Send us a copy of the paper. Now what about free speech? Can the people criticize the government without fear of being arrested?"

"Of course. We had a fellow in here the other day who ripped the regime to ribbons."

"What was he doing in the embassy?"

"He was asking for political asylum."

"All right, let's move along. As you are aware, the President has to send Congress a certification that the human rights in your country have progressed to the point where he can resume military aid to the government in power. In your opinion can he truthfully do so?"

"Wait a minute, I'll take another look out the window."

How a 'professor' could fool a school

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Most any college will tell you: It couldn't happen here.

But at two Pennsylvania schools and possibly several others on the East Coast, it has. A man used a false identity to get teaching jobs, thwarting what seemed like elaborate, almost foolproof systems that many universities routinely use to check the credentials of teaching applicants.

The man, whom authorities are calling "John Doe" but whose real identity may be Paul Arthur Crafton, a 59-year-old engineering professor at George Washington University, proved that with enough determination and a bit of elementary sleuthing, schools can be tricked.

Doe is accused of assuming false identities to get teaching positions last September at Millersville State College and Shippensburg State College in Pennsylvania.

Authorities say he may have used a similar scheme to get teaching jobs at Towson State College, in Towson, Md., and at Wagner College, on Staten Island, N.Y.

Teaching applicants have been known to "stretch their credentials, claiming degrees or faculty status they don't really have," said Rollins College Dean of Faculty Daniel DeNicola. Other school officials agreed.

But what Doe did, assuming an entirely false identity, is virtually unheard of, most said.

"I think this is a real fluke," says Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. "What you've got here is a real clever con artist. There is no way an institution can protect itself from that."

Based on interviews with officials of the two Pennsylvania colleges, Doe has proven that the teacher application process at their schools, and possibly others around the country, is vulnerable.

A person could consult education journals and do some detective work to find out enough for a masquerade — learn where a professor got his degrees, what books or articles he has written.

But Doe still had to break the key line of defense that universities rely on to screen applicants: the clubbiness of practically every academic discipline that puts professors from all over the country on a first-name basis. A person would have a hard time falsely assuming the identity, for example, of a University of Michigan philosophy professor.

Doe's apparent solution was to choose the identity of an Australian professor named John Byron Hext to get a job at Shippensburg. And he posed as Peter H. Pearse, a non-academic from private industry, to get an associate professorship at Millersburg.

Ray Burd of Shippensburg said that his school put job ads in national publications, inviting resumes and references. The most qualified applicants, including the man calling himself Hext, were invited to campus for interviews with a search committee of three or four professors and the department chairman.

During the interview, "the applicant's expertise is sampled," said Burd, and academic transcripts are studied. Since many schools will send transcripts on written request, that posed no problem for Doe, who apparently must have researched Hext's background.

Far trickier was the problem of job references. Authorities speculated that Doe used post office boxes in identifying the addresses of his references and answered the school's queries himself, or else had an accomplice help him.

Finally, he got the job at Shippensburg. But he was found out and fired March 10 after an article appeared by the real Hext in an education journal, and after students complained about Doe's "intimidating" teaching methods.

Last fall, Doe used similar tactics — posing as Peter H. Pearse — to get an associate professor's job 75 miles away at Millersville.

According to Keith Lovin, vice president for academic affairs, Doe was invited to the Millersville campus for an interview with a faculty committee, including the dean of the school, William Pearman. Pearman was out of town, but later conducted a lengthy telephone interview with Doe.

According to Lovin, Doe claimed he had a degree from the University of Edinburgh, but only had a photocopy of his transcript.

"I wanted him to send an original copy of the transcript from Edinburgh. He complied, and we got it from the school," Lovin said, adding that the transcript appeared to be authentic.

"He presented himself as coming from business. That isn't unusual anymore, to make the transition from business to the academic world," said Lovin. Doe was hired to teach statistics, managerial finance and investment analysis, starting last fall.

Lovin said that Doe's teaching was evaluated, as was customary for new hires, by students and by professors who sat in on his classes. "He was sometimes arrogant in class. He resorted to intimidation," Lovin said.

Labor wins special election

DARLINGTON, England (AP) — Britain's opposition Laborites kept their parliamentary seat in Darlington's special election, and embattled party leader Michael Foot hailed the result today as a protest against mass unemployment.

The ruling Conservatives, who had feared taking a humiliating third place in Thursday's polling, came in a face-saving second, increasing chances Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will call an early general election predicted for June or October.

Commentators agreed the third placing gained by the Social Democratic Party-Liberal Party alliance when official results were announced early today was a bad setback for the 17-month-old centrist grouping in its bid to break the two major parties' 60-year stranglehold on power.

A turnout of 80.1 percent of the voters in this railway town in northeast England gave Labor moderate Oswald O'Brien, 54, a technical college lecturer, a winning 20,544 votes or 39.5 percent.

Conservative candidate

Michael Fallon, 30, a political researcher, took 18,132 votes or 34.8 percent.

Alliance candidate Tony Cook, 31, a local television anchorman who had started the campaign nearly a month ago as a favorite, polled 12,735 votes or 24.5 percent. The remaining 1.2 percent was shared by five fringe candidates.

Career clinic speaker:

Business ethics are changing

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Pampa was filled with consultants from more than 80 fields Wednesday as they arrived to participate in the 19th Career Clinic at Pampa High School.

At the clinic, high school students here were able to find out more about two careers in which they were interested at two different sessions instead of the regular high school classes Wednesday morning.

Once every two years Pampa Altrusa, Rotary and Chamber of Commerce members sponsor the career clinic at Pampa High School by bringing in people actively involved in more than 80 different careers. This year 75 different consultants were involved in the clinic, many of them professionals from the Pampa area, but some from as far away as Colorado and Missouri.

Keynote speaker, O.A. (Bud) Ham, addressed the general assembly Wednesday morning. He discussed the changing ethics of the work world and the expectations of young persons entering the job market.

Following the morning sessions, consultants met at the Coronado Inn for luncheon with the Rotary Club. Again, Ham, a management and communications expert from Parker, Colo., was featured speaker.

People today are living in a "period of tumult," Ham told the group of about 300 people at luncheon. "You can't let life just happen. You have to identify what you want to have happen in your life," he said.

Many resist change, he said. "The people who make the difference in this world are the ones who are willing to take a risk as long as it doesn't go against their own values."

Ham explained that first a person must define what are his "own" values and what are values that have been imposed on him by parents or peers. "Without identifying your values — the ones you really believe in — and owning these values, you will feel guilt or stress about them," he said.

People today are self-fulfillment seekers, he added. Library and book store shelves are loaded with self-help books — books that were almost non-existent in the 1950s.

"People want to become as much as they can now," he said. "They want to enjoy life now." And younger people are not afraid of risking as opposed to the depression and war era children who were taught to be careful and safe, taking no chances.

Because of younger people today being willing to take risks and wanting more from their lives, Ham said, the hierarchy, status system of the business world is beginning to change.

One of these changes include an idea fostered by the Japanese called "participative management," he said. "The principle of this (idea) is that people have a higher level of commitment to decisions they have shared in making," he said.

"Young people demand important psychological incentives," he said, defining the incentives as dignity and respect. They are not only interested in money.

"Creativity is a valuable asset, but it can be killed if a person is not given the right to be wrong," Ham explained.

The largest single factor in fostering motivation is to make people feel worthwhile, he said. And the key to success is integrity, he adds.

"Integrity is everything," Ham said he was told by a speaker once. Maintaining integrity is a full-time job.

"It shocks me that we have to be reminded of that," he commented.

Bobby A. Jones, center, discusses career opportunities in aeronautics with Pampa High School students Wednesday during the 19th Career Clinic here. Jones is employed with the Air Traffic Control Tower in Amarillo. He was one of 75 consultants attending the clinic sponsored by Pampa Altrusa and Rotary clubs and the Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Lamb

Darvon dangers

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Nine years ago my husband was involved in a car accident which killed three of his best friends. He was injured quite severely with a broken leg and arm, internal injuries and so on.

While in the hospital he was on various strong pain killers. After he healed he insisted he was still in pain and started taking 65 milligrams of Darvon five times a day.

After a while I suspected that he really didn't need this much and was taking it just to feel good. He acknowledges that he is emotionally, if not physically, addicted to Darvon, yet he says he can't and won't stop.

I feel he is committing suicide slowly but he doesn't seem to care. Just what does Darvon do to you over a period of time? He is 32 and his son needs a father for a long time. We want a second child and I worry about this. Please advise so I'll have some guidelines. He has a sympathetic physician friend who prescribes for him.

DEAR READER — Darvon does contain an ingredient that is a narcotic analgesic. I note in the rest of your letter that your husband does not drink alcohol or use other drugs. That is important, as Darvon is a depressant and when combined with alcohol can be dangerous. Most of the deaths from Darvon have come from a combination of alcohol and Darvon.

When Darvon Compound-65 is used for a long period of time with other anti-inflammatory medicines, kidney damage and even cancer of the kidney may result. This is because of the phenacetin in Darvon.

And it is addictive, meaning it produces a physical and psychological dependence. It can adversely affect mental function and personality, if used for long periods of time.

Your husband should stop taking Darvon. He may need to taper off but he must quit. I would look for a physician other than the sympathetic one who continues to provide him with Darvon to guide him through this period.

There are many other commonly used medicines, such as tranquilizers that include Valium, which also cause addiction problems and should never be used with alcohol. These are discussed in The Health Letter 12-2, Sedatives, Hypnotics and Tranquilizers: The Pill Problem. Readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — If a person is on a 500-calorie ketogenic-type diet, what keeps him from ketosis?

DEAR READER — Nothing. If the carbohydrates are restricted too much, ketosis will result. You need at least 50 grams of carbohydrates a day to avoid ketosis.

Ketosis is the formation of incompletely metabolized end products of fat. They indicate the liver has been overloaded and cannot process the amount of fat that has been presented to it. The acids formed and eliminated through the kidney deplete the body of important minerals. Dehydration may occur. Ketosis is a major part of the picture of diabetic acidosis and coma.

DEAR ABBY: My doctor, who is also a surgeon, tells me I need an operation for gallstones. I've had gallbladder troubles off and on for many years, but I hate to have surgery at my age. (I am 71.)

You always say, "Get a second opinion," but I have had the same doctor for many years and don't know any other. So where do I go for a second opinion? I like my doctor and don't want to get him mad at me. Thanks for any help you can give me.

NEEDING ANSWERS

DEAR NEEDING: Getting a second opinion is a common practice that most doctors encourage, so don't be afraid to tell your doctor you want one.

To find another specialist in your area, ask your doctor, or call the government's Second Surgical Opinion Hotline. The toll-free number is 1-800-638-6833. In Maryland, call 1-800-492-6603.

If you do decide to go ahead with the operation, you will be asked to sign a statement giving consent for the operation. It's important to discuss all your concerns about your condition and the operation with your surgeon before you sign anything. Don't hesitate to ask these questions:

1. What are the chances of survival without the operation?
2. What are the chances of survival with the operation?
3. Are there other forms of treatment that could be tried before surgery?
4. How much will the operation cost? And will my insurance cover all the costs, including special tests?

5. How much experience has the surgeon had with this particular operation?

6. What percent of the operations were successful?

7. How will the operation affect my health and lifestyle? Are there any activities I will not be able to do after surgery?

Above all, be sure an operation is necessary and that the benefits outweigh the risks before you agree to undergo surgery.

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to our local newspaper stating that she was jogging in the street and was almost hit by an automobile. Then she urged that drivers watch out for joggers to avoid hitting them.

Why? People who are stupid enough to jog in the street surely know they are taking their lives in their hands. There are plenty of parks and side streets for joggers to run in without using the main roads and public streets. But in this town there are hundreds of these show-offs puffing alongside cars in heavy traffic, requiring the drivers to avoid hitting them.

In the past week I came close to hitting a couple of these health nuts late at night on a main highway! There ought to be a law!

FED UP IN MANSFIELD, OHIO

DEAR FED: I agree. Address this matter to your city council. And while we're on the subject, how about the joggers who wear headsets? They wouldn't be able to hear an automobile until it sent them flying through the air. Most joggers are sufficiently intelligent to stay off the main roads and busy streets where they are forced to inhale carbon monoxide from passing vehicles.

Special day for the pastor

The Pampa Church of God, 1123 Gwendolen, will be giving special recognition to its pastor, Rev. Sam Goude, and his family Sunday.

Rev. Goude began his ministry in the church of God in 1957 and came to the local congregation Aug. 22, 1982, after a five year pastorate in Keller.

Guest speaker for the Sunday recognition will be the pastor's son, Rev. Jeff Goude.

Harmony in personal prayer

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Whether they are Protestant or Roman Catholic, whether their church services are simple or elaborate, Christians generally are in harmony when it comes to personal prayer.

They do a lot of it and largely in similar ways, times and attitudes.

These are among details brought out in an unusual cross-denominational survey of readers of 10 mainline denominational magazines, probing specifics about how they pray, when, where and what for.

Previous national studies have indicated that an overwhelming proportion of Americans, 89 percent of them, pray at times, even if not church members, making prayer by far the most prevalent of all religious activities.

For church members, it's even more so, about as much a part of everyday life as eating or sleeping, the new study indicates. All of them, 100 percent of the 1,491 respondents, do it 92 percent daily, most of them several times daily.

The ordinarily private motives, manners and expectations brought to this most widespread religious process are pointed up in the study, which indicates close similarities about it among the mainline church people involved.

Whatever small variations showed up in prayer habits, these generally don't reflect denominational patterns, but rather personal preferences.

"Differences in our prayer practices do not follow denominational lines," writes church historian Martin Marty of the University of Chicago in summarizing the findings.

While collective prayer historically has been a key note in church life, the study indicates that church members nowadays overwhelmingly prefer to pray alone, 85 percent of them.

"We are in prayer life 'alone' and 'do-it-yourselfers,'" Marty says, noting this may make churches nervous, but it may be "God's wonderful way of breaking open organizationalism... and subverting formalism."

The poll involved readers of these magazines and denominations:

U.S. Catholic (Roman Catholic), The Episcopalian (Episcopal), The Lutheran (Lutheran Church in America), The Disciple (Christian Church — Disciples of Christ), The Lutheran Standard (American Lutheran), The Messenger (Church of the Brethren), A.D. (United Presbyterian and United Church of Christ), The Church Herald (Reformed Church) and Presbyterian Survey (Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern)).

Do they think God answers prayers? An overwhelming 96 percent said yes. They also overwhelmingly, 82 percent, believe prayers could result in miracles.

Religious Roundup

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — The United Methodist Church reports its membership declined by 62,000 last year to 9.5 million. But the figure doesn't include about 1.4 million preparatory members, mostly baptized children, and 400,000 members overseas. They're counted in some denominations and would bring the total to 11.3 million.

IN MEMORY OF A Leader

Monuments have been erected to great men in all parts of the world. Some are in recognition of Leadership, others for specific brave acts, and others to those who have shown love and compassion for their fellow men.

The Bible is a monument to God. It reminds us of His great leadership, of His compassion and love, and tells of His great gift to us. But it is even greater than other monuments, for it still leads us.

"... that He might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord."

Attend Church

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EPA considering more realistic auto figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists who complain that their new cars don't get anywhere near the fuel economy promised in the government's mileage rankings may have less to gripe about in the future. The government is thinking about deflating the ratings.

The cuts may be as much as 25 percent in some of the figures now featured prominently in automakers' advertising.

The Environmental Protection Agency has been under attack for years from critics who say its annual mileage ratings bear no relation to real driving conditions. A congressional study in 1980 found the gap between the figures and actual mileage was as great as 30 percent.

Officials said Thursday they hope to issue in the next several weeks proposals to slash the ratings. While the exact way they will do this has not been picked, one proposal being looked at would cut the numbers from the laboratory tests by a fixed percentage.

Under one plan, the highway mileage figure would drop by between 20 percent and 25 percent, and the city mileage figure would go down by between 5 percent and 10 percent.

If fixed-percentage cuts of 10 percent and 25 percent were applied to the top-rated 1983 Volkswagen Rabbit, it would drop its city rating from 50 miles per gallon to 45 mpg and its highway average from 67 mpg to 50 mpg.

For years, the EPA has urged motorists to use the annual rankings only to compare one model against another, not as a prediction of their own mileage.

But government surveys show consumers ignore this disclaimer.

"We have heard loud and clear that consumers use the numbers in a certain way and all our previous efforts to change this haven't worked," said Charles Gray, director of EPA's auto mileage testing center in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Gray said the fixed-percentage cuts were favored by the staff because they would be the simplest to apply. He said other options such as using different percentages depending on car type or modifying the test procedure would be much more complicated to implement.

The EPA tests cars on a laboratory treadmill that duplicates a typical drive. Critics have said for years that the laboratory test does not take into account important conditions, such as weather, which lower mileage.

Laura Johnson

Pampa college student to serve in Australia

Laura Johnson of Pampa, a junior student at Texas Tech University, has been selected to serve as a staff member for the Campus Crusade for Christ ministry in Australia from June 4 through Aug. 14.

Campus Crusade for Christ is an interdenominational Christian movement that functions as an evangelistic arm of the church.

Ms. Johnson, a 1980 graduate of Pampa High School, is the daughter of Bob Johnson of 1841 Fir and Doris Alexander of Amarillo. She is one of 20 students selected from colleges throughout the United States to serve with this Christian outreach program to selected areas throughout the world.

Students chosen as staff members are required to pay their travel expense to and from their designated location which amounts to approximately $2,000. This expense is usually paid through contributions given by church groups, civic organizations and businesses or individuals who are interested in supporting the Campus Crusade for Christ ministry.

Ms. Johnson will be happy to speak to organizations and groups who might be interested in learning more about this ministry. Her college address is 5302 - 11th Street, Lubbock, TX 79416. Contributions to the Campus Crusade are tax deductible.

She has been active in the Tech Campus Crusade movement for the past year where she teaches two bible classes, one a group of freshmen and sophomore dorm students and the other a discipleship group of 14 girls in the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority where she serves as activities officer.

She also is in an action group of eight girls who work closely with the staff to help with the outreach programs to nearby campuses such as West Texas, Amarillo College, Midland College, Odessa College and South Plains.

Indian reservation not really Indian reservation, AG says

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has declared that the Alabama-Coushatta Indian Reservation is "not really" an Indian reservation, and therefore the state Parks and Wildlife Department has the responsibility of enforcing game and fish laws there.

Officials of the agency asked Mattox for the ruling. They said their authority had been questioned by some who felt the reservation should be the domain of the Texas Indian Commission.

The "reservation" consists of two tracts in Polk County, Mattox said Thursday.

One tract of 1,280 acres was purchased in several parcels for the Alabama Indians by the state government in 1854 and 1855. The other tract of 3,071 acres was conveyed in 1955 by the federal government to the state in trust for members of the Alabama and Coushatta tribes.

"The evident purpose of all the state enactments since 1929 concerning the Alabama-Coushatta Indians has been to aid a small, needy, ethnic group to which the state considered itself morally obligated, if not legally so," Mattox's opinion said.

The 3,071-acre tract "is entirely free from any legally meaningful designation as an 'Indian reservation.' The 1929, 1949, 1955 and 1975 enactment of the Texas Legislature were no more effective to constitute it an 'Indian reservation' than they were to so constitute the 1,280-acre tract," Mattox added.

Civics lesson not always right

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civics Lesson No. 1 holds that if a majority of our senators and representatives agree on something, it becomes law. It isn't always true.

Consider the furious fight over repeal of tax withholding on interest and dividends. Savers have dumped millions of letters onto Congress demanding repeal. More than 300 of the 435 House members and 51 of the 100 senators have signed one bill or another to repeal it.

But there's no assurance the majority in Congress will prevail. The chief reason is Civics Lesson No. 2: a president can veto any bill, and it can be overridden only by a two-thirds vote of both houses. President Reagan vigorously opposes repeal of withholding.

At this point, it's not even clear that a repeal bill will ever be sent to the president. The repeal effort may get nowhere.

The battle so far has been focused in the Senate where, on Tuesday, a majority stifled an effort to use a giant Social Security bill as a vehicle for delaying withholding until next year.

A week earlier, opponents of withholding held the Senate at bay for several days, trying to attach their repeal amendment to a bill providing emergency assistance to victims of the recession.

In exchange for letting the recession-relief bill pass, Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., leader of the fight against withholding.

Police say teen gang doesn't exist

HOUSTON (AP) — A special police squad organized to search out the "Smurf Gang," teen-age criminals accused of everything from stealing lunch money to murder, has been disbanded because officers no longer believe the group exists.

The squad of three officers has been looking for evidence of the Smurf Gang, whose members were said to be between 14 and 20 years old, since January, police Sgt. J.R. Wiederhold said Thursday.

But Wiederhold, of the department's juvenile division, and school system spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said there has been no confirmed report of any crimes on Houston campuses that can be attributed to the Smurfs.

"One person we arrested said he was a leader of the Smurf Gang and that he was a Smurf," Wiederhold said. "No one else has said he was with the Smurfs."

The rumors apparently started in December.

218 House members — a majority. But that's easier said than done — even when more than 300 members say they favor repeal — because it's viewed as a slap at the leadership.

If D'Amours gets his discharge petition, his repeal bill almost certainly would be passed by the House. That would send the bill straight to the Senate Finance Committee, whose chairman, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is the chief backer of withholding.

The same procedures could be used eventually to force the repeal bill out of the Finance Committee and to the full Senate for a vote. The Senate probably would pass it and Reagan would exercise his veto. It then would be up to Reagan to convince Congress he was right — and it is rare day that any Congress overrides a veto on any major bill.

Say Sandinista defeat sealed; new threat from south seen

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government says troops are "annihilating" rebel exiles who streamed into northwest Nicaragua from Honduras. But the insurgents' commander says his forces are fighting on several fronts and "the defeat of the leftist regime in Managua is sealed."

While fighting raged Thursday, the Sandinistas faced a new threat on the southern border with Costa Rica, where a separate exile faction announced plans to join the battle to overthrow Nicaragua's 44-month-old leftist government. Military sources said guardposts were reinforced on the Costa Rican frontier.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Mexico and Cuba sided with Nicaragua in Security Council debate Thursday on the Central American nation's charge that it was under attack by anti-Sandinista guerrillas trained by the United States. Washington repeatedly has denied such accusations.

In a broadcast later over the rebels' clandestine radio station, guerrilla commander Col. Enrique Bermudez Varela said his forces are fighting on "the Atlantic coast and in the provinces of Nueva Segovia, Jinotega and Matagalpa."

The radio claimed rebel forces repelled a counterattack by 3,000 government troops in northern Matagalpa province.

The Defense Ministry said government troops ambushed a column of anti-Sandinista exiles crossing into Nicaragua, killed 12 and suffered three casualties.

The ministry said in a brief statement that Sandinista soldiers were continuing "to annihilate the rest of the counter-revolutionary column" near Jalapa, 165 miles northeast of Managua, the capital. It did say how large the invading force was.

The rival claims could not be confirmed independently because the government has banned foreign correspondents from the embattled areas, where fighting reportedly has persisted for the past month.

Commander Leticia Herrera, coordinator of the local Sandinista Defense Committees throughout the country, called on the militias to prepare to fight.

"Facing the new, aggressive escalation of imperialism, we must increase revolutionary vigilance."

Rescue satellite will be used in saving lives

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An American search-and-rescue satellite going aloft next week will join a Soviet satellite already saving lives by pinpointing downed planes and sinking ships from outer space, NASA officials say.

The new satellite, in a north-south orbit about 530 miles high, will scan the entire earth every 12 hours, officials said Thursday.

By bouncing the distress signal down to designated ground stations in any of several nations, the satellite can locate a downed plane within 12 miles.

"Since we started working with the Soviet satellite COSPAS I (last year), there have been 22 lives saved, and we are just really getting started," Bernard J. Trudell said of the demonstration project that also includes Canada and France as prime partners. "Some of those people absolutely would not be alive and walking around today if it wasn't for that satellite. The others were assists," he told a news conference Thursday.

Trudell is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's mission manager for SRSAT, or Search and Rescue Satellite, which is to be launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base on Monday, weather permitting.

NASA says the United States is spending about $29 million on the experimental project, with Canada and France together adding another $24 million. Cost of the Soviet effort, which is independent but coordinated with NASA, is unreported.

Federal law requires ships and private planes to carry emergency radio beacons which, when activated by impact, transmit a continuous distinctive signal. But unless a plane passes within about 100 miles of the transmitter — and has a receiver on — the distress signal will not be heard.

That problem should be solved by satellites. But the nature of the distress signal, designed for aircraft rather than satellite detection, means the space-borne searcher can only be effective when it is within direct sight of both the crash and a ground station. The satellite acts as a mirror to collect the signal and bounce it back to earth for analysis.

"The object of this project is to shorten the time between the occurrence of distress and the rescue ... (That) means saving lives and reducing the costs of rescue operations," Trudell said.

That was graphically demonstrated in the first rescue, on Sept. 10, 1982, barely a week after the joint effort began.

The Canadian government had concluded an unsuccessful $2 million search for a pilot missing in the rugged forests of northern British Columbia, but the victim's father, also a pilot, continued to search on his own, NASA says. The father and two passengers failed to return from a search Sept. 9 and the satellite search program was notified.

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Minnesota doctors are preparing for an experimental bone marrow transplant on a 3-month-old girl suffering from a rare ailment that deprives her of protection against disease.

Stephanie Garcia and her parents were scheduled to fly to Minneapolis by private plane today. Several tests were to be conducted and doctors planned to perform the transplant next week, said Dr. Randall Goldblum of the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

Stephanie suffers from severe combined immune deficiency syndrome, or SCIDS, a disorder that leaves her body defenseless against disease.

Hustling Harvesters

Co-winners of the Hustling Harvester award for the 1982-83 basketball season were Mike Nelson (left) and Coyle Winborn (right). Pampa High head coach Garland Nichols presented the awards during Thursday night's Pampa Harvester Basketball Banquet. Nelson, a senior, led the Harvesters in scoring (23.8 ppg), free throw percentage (70.3) and assists (88). Winborn, a junior, averaged 13.7 ppg while leading the Harvesters in field goal percentage (59.5) and blocked shots (38). (Photo by Lance Defever)

Nelson, Winborn, George top award winners at Pampa basketball banquet

Mike Nelson and Coyle Winborn shared the Hustling Harvester award at the Pampa High Basketball Banquet Thursday night at Coronado Inn.

Nelson, a 6-3 senior, and Winborn, a 6-6 junior, helped lead the Harvesters to a 24-7 record and an area championship.

The pair was voted on by the Harvester coaching staff.

Nelson also received the Most Valuable Player award and the free throw award (70.3 percent). Nelson, who led the Harvesters in scoring (23.8 ppg), was a first-team All-State pick by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches and was named District 1-4A's Player of the Year.

Winborn, who average 13.7 ppg, led the Harvesters in field goal percentage (59.5) and blocked shots (38). Phil Jeffrey, a 6-6 senior, won the rebounding award (277 rebounds).

"This was one of the most talented groups I've ever coached," Pampa High head coach Garland Nichols said of his 1982-83 Harvesters. "I was very proud to be a part of them."

Nichols said four seniors (Nelson, Jeffrey, Terry Ferguson and Paul Prentice) are seeking college basketball scholarships.

"If they go on and get their college diplomas I'd be just as proud of them as if they had made the NBA (National Basketball Association)," Nichols said.

Ferguson, the Harvesters' point guard, led the team in steals (62) while dishing out 54 assists.

Prentice, a parttime starter, gave the Harvesters instant offense when coming off the bench.

Nichols said the Harvesters would continue to have a winning program.

"The seventh grade was undefeated this year, the two ninth grade teams finished 1-2 in the district and the high school junior varsity won award. Trecia George won the Hustling Harvester award for the Pampa High girls' team while Debi Young was named the Most Valuable Player while also winning the rebounding award. Stephanie Smith won the free throw award. Nichols presented a special booster award to Jack Chisum, who flew Harvester assistant coaches free of charge on several scouting trips. Bill Harris was Master of Ceremonies.

Canyon blanks Pampa

CANYON—Canyon banged out a dozen hits enroute to a 13-0 win Thursday in a District 1-4A baseball opener.

Eagles' pitcher Russell Schmidt checked the Harvesters on four hits to run his record to 4-0.

Pampa, now 3-6 for the season, left nine runners stranded and loaded the bases twice with no results.

After Jeff Steward opened the second inning with a single and was thrown out at second trying to steal, Pampa loaded the bases on walks, but failed to score.

With two outs in the sixth, Pampa filled the bases when Toby Ritthaler singled, Bryan Bowen reached first on a fielder's choice and Randy Skaggs walked. But David Owens grounded back to Schmidt to end the inning.

Devin Cross (1-1) was the losing pitcher.

Canyon's biggest inning was the second when the Eagles plated five runs. A two-ri double by Scott Hudson highlighted the inning.

Pampa hosts Lubbock Estacado in district action at 1 p.m. Saturday.

NCAA roundup

Kentucky, Louisville finally get together

By The Associated Press Bluegrass rivals Kentucky and Louisville have a basketball date for the first time in 24 years, while Tobacco Road foes Virginia and North Carolina State will meet for the second time in two weeks and fourth time this season.

Those NCAA matchups will take place Saturday as a result of Thursday night's regional semifinal action. And the fans of the respective teams seem certain to get more excited than the players and coaches.

"It means getting a chance to go to the Final Four," is the way Louisville Coach Denny Crum summed it up. "This time of year there are only eight teams left. They (Kentucky) just happen to be here. We don't care who we play. I think Kentucky feels the same way."

Actually, 12 teams are left. But four more will be eliminated tonight when third-ranked St. John's meets No. 18 Georgia and eighth-ranked North Carolina, the defending NCAA champion, plays Ohio State in the East Regional at Syracuse, N.Y., while top-rated Houston faces No. 17 Memphis State and No. 13 Villanova goes against Iowa in the Midwest Regional at Kansas City, Mo.

In Thursday night's Midwest Regional at Knoxville, Tenn., Melvin Turpin scored 16 points and 12th-ranked Kentucky survived a late Indiana rally to defeat the No. 5 Hoosiers 64-59.

Then, Scooter McCray's

tip-in at the buzzer capped Louisville's comeback from a 16-point, first-half deficit to give the second-ranked Cardinals a dramatic 65-63 triumph over No. 9 Arkansas. That set up the first meeting with Kentucky since the 1959 NCAA Tournament.

In the West Regional at Ogden, Utah, fourth-ranked Virginia withstood the loss of All-America center Ralph Sampson for more than 12 minutes in the second half and defeated No. 11 Boston College 95-92, while No. 16 North Carolina State shot 68 percent — 28 of 41 — and routed Utah 75-56 behind Dereck Whittenburg's 27 points. N.C. State won the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament by defeating Virginia on March 13.

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall had no trouble accounting for the Wildcats' triumph over Indiana that avenged a December loss to the Hoosiers.

"We had excellent shot selection, but mostly we played with patience," Hall said. "Our bench really gave us a big lift," he added, mentioning Bret Bearup, who had eight first-half points, and freshman Kenny Walker, who scored 11 of his 13 in the second half.

Kentucky, in one of its finest efforts of the season, surged to a 57-47 lead over Indiana's Big Ten champions with 8:31 remaining. The Hoosiers pulled within two with 2:49 left but Kentucky continued its delay game and got one free throw from Dirk Minniefield and two from Charles Hurt. Melvin Turpin led the Wildcats with 16 points.

"A lot of people told us we were chokers and couldn't win in the tournament," said Minniefield. "We proved them wrong. All the time, we knew we would be in this position in March. We believe in ourselves."

McCray's decisive tip-in for Louisville came after the Cardinals' third missed shot in the final 11 seconds. McCray and Lancaster Gordon sparked the rally that produced Louisville's 15th victory in a row after a 16-0 burst gave Arkansas a 35-19 lead in the first half.

McCray scored 11 of his 17 points and Gordon had 12 of his 19 in the second half.

Nebraska ousts Horned Frogs

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska's Stan Cloudy has been the man with the great encores and is hoping the best is still to come when the Huskers travel to New York for Monday night's semifinals of college basketball's National Invitation Tournament.

With Cloudy leading the way with 18 points and 9 rebounds, Nebraska collected its third straight NIT home-court victory Thursday, stopping TCU 67-57 in a quarterfinal test.

The win allowed Nebraska, 22-9, to advance to the semifinals for the first time in four tries in the NIT and matched NU's season-best win record set in 1978 (22-9) and 1920 (22-2). The Huskers'

Monday opponent will be determined today.

It was the third straight game Cloudy, the 6-4 Henderson County (Texas) Junior College transfer, has led NU in both scoring and rebounding. Against Tulane, Cloudy had 20 points and 14 rebounds and against Iowa, he had a season high 24 tallies and 8 rebounds.

He has also dished off 14 assists while shooting 58 percent from the field on 27 of 47 field goal tries.

"He is a good competitor and is playing awfully well," said Nebraska Coach Moe Iba. "The thing is he can hit that shot (that you need)."

For his part, Cloudy said it was hard to put into words his feelings after leading NU to victory before a second-consecutive standing-room-only crowd of 14,753.

"I don't know how to express myself, but I know I love every minute of it," he said. "We saw the fans lineup at 6 p.m. (1½ hours before the tip-off) and we didn't want to let them or Coach Iba down."

The Huskers had no letdowns, as they took a 15-4 lead, with Cloudy scoring eight points, in the first 5½ minutes and were never headed. NU led 36-19 at halftime and by as much as 24 points, 62-38, with about six minutes to go.

"The fans ought to be happy. They filled the gym and got us three home games," Iba said.

In the girls' division, Canyon shot a 205 yesterday to win a round in the District 1-4A tournament at the Pampa Country Club.

200 and going strong

Actress Isabel Sanford celebrates at a recent party marking completion of the 200th episode of "The Jeffersons" television series. On the set, she's called "Queen," a tribute to her stern professionalism and voice of authority. (AP Laserphoto)

Veteran actress battles 'the bulge'

Associated Press Writer
 UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — Actress Isabel Sanford's lunch consisted of a small cup of cream of spinach soup, followed by a small cup of chicken creole soup and a few soda crackers.
 Is that any lunch for a star? Yes, when the star is Isabel Sanford, the all-suffering Louise of the long-running CBS television series, "The Jeffersons."
 "I was born fat," she sighs. "When I was growing up, I had no eating discipline; my mother put the food down in front of me and expected me to eat. And I did. I can still eat like a longshoreman if you give me a big plate of food — and I'll go back for seconds."
 "Now I try to stay within a diet program, because I look better in my clothes on the show. Don't get me wrong — I'll never be a Twiggy. I'll never be an anorexia victim. I just try to keep the weight under control."
 During the nine years of "The Jeffersons," Miss Sanford's weight has gone up and down like the show's Nielsen rating. Right now, she seems in good shape, and so is the series. She and co-star Sherman Hemsley recently performed the 200th show. And there's no end in sight.
 "I'd like to round out 10 years with the series," she said. "As long as the writers don't go dry, we can make it. And if they do go dry, we'll get fresh ones."

Nation's top 10 records

- Best-selling record of the week based on Cashbox magazine's nationwide survey:
1. "Billie Jean," Michael Jackson
  2. "Do You Really Want to Hurt Me," Culture Club
  3. "You Are," Lionel Richie
  4. "Hungry Like the Wolf," Duran Duran
  5. "Stray Cat Strut," Stray Cats
  6. "Back on the Chain Gang," Pretenders
  7. "Down Under," Men at Work
  8. "Shame on the Moon," Bob Seger
  9. "One on One," Hall & Oates
  10. "We've Got Tonight," Rogers & Easton

"The best is yet to come," gleams Julia. After one year of marriage Julia and Ritchie look forward to a happy and healthy future.

Like everyone else in New York, JULIA BARR (Brooke, AMC) and her husband Ritchie spent the early part of February 14th digging themselves out from under the record snowfall left behind by the Blizzard of '83. But unlike the rest of us, they spent the rest of the day celebrating their first wedding anniversary. The wet slush and snow managed to dampen everything but Julia's spirits. "Although no one could go anywhere, the weather was nice enough to go play outside, and people were bright and cheerful. Their happiness made our own personal Valentine's Day that much better." Julia and Ritchie capped the evening with a romantic dinner where, Julia admits, the couple indulged in a lot of "ooing and aahing". The first year a couple should bond together; it's the time to develop a good base that can support an entire marriage. We've had just that experience. I'm lucky to have found someone so wonderful with whom to I can share my life.
 Julia boasts a good time was had by all. "I have only one regret: an early work call the next morning."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

This will be a year that ushers in a number of unexpected changes. If you don't let shifting conditions get you off balance you can turn them into advantageous happenings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are planning to make this an active day outdoors, don't overtax yourself. Tomorrow your aching muscles might regret it. Order now: The NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic combinations, compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Aries Astro-Graph predictions for 1983. Be sure to give your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not be biased about the possessions of others today. If something is damaged or stolen you could be held accountable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is a delicate balance which must be maintained at home today, or friction could march in and shove harmony out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be sure to give whatever tasks you perform your undivided attention today. Mishaps are possible if you get careless. Also, keep an eye on coworkers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be too hasty in grabbing the check today. You could tactfully suggest that pals open their purses, too, rather than just sit on them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Hunches and impulses need monitoring today, or else they could impel you to do something which you will later feel wasn't too bright. Proceed cautiously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a possibility you could suffer some sort of financial loss today through a friend or a group with whom you're involved, if you drop your guard.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your desire to express your independence is admirable, but don't go to ridiculous lengths today in order to prove your point. It may hurt your image.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Hiding from responsibilities or sweeping them under the rug will not give you the peace of mind you seek today. Be duty-conscious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your luck has its limitations today. Don't press it to the breaking point. Subdue tendencies to take silly chances.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to be consistent in your thinking today. Once you make your mind up, don't suddenly change it at the last minute.

Defendants await end of jury deliberations

DALLAS (AP) — Anxious police defendants smoked, paced or talked in hushed tones with family and friends as they waited and waited for the verdict they were told they would have to wait still longer to hear.

Jurors in the federal civil rights trial of seven New Orleans officers failed to reach a decision in seven hours Thursday and were instructed to try again today.

The officers are accused of conspiracy and of violating the civil rights of men who said they were brutally interrogated about the Nov. 8, 1980, killing of patrolman Gregory Neupert.

The conspiracy charge carries a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The misdemeanor civil rights charge carries a maximum one year in jail and a $1,000 fine. Defense lawyers would not say what unexpectedly long deliberations may mean for the defendants — detectives Ronald Brink, 37, Thomas R. Woodall, 32, officers Dale Bonura, 34, Stephen Farrar, 31, Richard LeBlanc, 32, and Stephen Rebol, 32; and Sgt. John McKenzie, 40.

But Janet Farrar, the wife of one defendant, called the waiting torturous.

"All through this last 2½ years, it's been distant, like reading a book. It's not me, and it's not Stephen. Now, when it's this close, it's reality, like a slap in the face," she said.

"I felt my heart had been ripped out" when a prosecutor said in closing remarks that the two tragedies in the case were Neupert's death and its effect on the lives of five men brutalized by the defendants, said Kay Bonura, the wife of another defendant.

"I thought, what about the lives of these seven innocent men? Their lives and their loved ones?" Mrs. Bonura said.

Prosecutors contended during the trial that the defendants were criminally overzealous in their hunt for the killer of a fellow officer, men out of control and "willing to take any information they could at any cost."

Clarence Green, Raymond and Ervin Hughes, Robert Davis and Johnny Brownlee testified the officers pistol-whipped them, beat them with fists and a heavy book, threatened them with guns and put plastic bags over their heads to cut off their air supply.

Defense lawyers called the charges a work of fiction — half truths and lies from men determined to hide their cooperation with police from dope pushers and other toughs on the streets of New Orleans' West Bank.

And the defense challenged the motives of Oris Buckner, a New Orleans police detective who testified for the prosecution under a grant of immunity and whose father had died while in the custody of New Orleans police.

"What kind of grudge did he harbor? What kind of bitterness is in that man?" one lawyer asked the jury. All seven defendants denied during their testimony that they beat, threatened or intimidated anyone during the investigation.
