

Pampa woman shares her good luck with check to Boys Ranch

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

OLD TASCOSA - A Pampa woman's donation presented during the United Peace Officers Association's annual convention at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Tuesday will help pay for a new sound system in the ranch chapel.

A check for $14,000 was presented to the ranch by UPOA member and retired county judge Woody Pond. A donation from Pampa resident Fannie Mathers added to a donation from the Texas Sheriffs' Association to make up the $14,000 gift, according to the ranch's Director of Public Affairs Louie Hendricks.

"The money will be used to improve the sound system in our chapel...so the boys can hear the preacher a little better," Hendricks said.

He said Tuesday's donation also will buy classroom furniture for the ranch. The donation was accepted by Kerry Mills, president of the Boy's Ranch Junior Staff.

About 125 officers from across the state attended the ranch ceremony.

"Each year they help us with a project. They formed in 1953 to help us build our first high school," Hendricks said about the UPOA.

Mrs. Mathers said she didn't want any thanks or notice for her contribution to the ranch. She said the boys were her husband's favorite charity before he died.

"I had some good luck, and I wanted to share it with them," Mathers said. The ranch has educated and reared about 4,000 boys from around the world.

"The boys are in need of love and guidance. Most come from homes where the father is missing," Hendricks said.

The Panhandle ranch and school near Channing today is home to 370 boys from 22 states. The ranchers' ages range from four to 18. The ranch school includes grades kindergarten through high school.

Once the boys come to the ranch, they are expected to live there until graduation from the ranch high school. Ranchers are allowed to leave only during Christmas, Hendricks said. The average boy's stay is five and a half years.

"The ranch is their last chance to graduate. We'll graduate 42 this year, the largest class ever," he said.

Boy's Ranch graduation ceremonies will be at 10:30 a.m. May 23

During the day-long event Tuesday, UPOA members were entertained by the Boy's Ranch Varsity Band and Glee Club and "The Panhandlers" of the Amarillo Senior Citizens Center.

The UPOA also inducted new officers at the ranch party. The new officers include Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, president; Amarillo DPS officer Ray Finstead, first vice president; Oldham County Sheriff Arvie Reeves, second vice president; Hartley County Judge Joe Thomas, secretary; and retired Carson County Judge Clarence Williams, treasurer.

Cal Farley established his Boy's Ranch in 1939 as a year-round home for "troubled" boys, Hendricks said. Since then

Insurance office plan draws protests

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Five Pampa residents spoke out against a proposed zoning change at Tuesday's city commission meeting. Residents of the Fraser Annex came to the meeting to speak against a zoning appeal brought by Pampa insurance agent Newt Secrest. City commissioners scheduled a public hearing on June 14 at 9:30 a.m. to get more public response on the matter.

Secrest wants to build an insurance office on the corner of 28th Avenue and Perryton Parkway just north of the Pampa Mall, and a home behind it. Secrest's plans call for the home to be built first, and the office to be built within six years.

Residents of the area told the commission they had been burned before with the Hayden Clinic and they did not want any more commercial buildings in their neighborhood.

"It's going to lower our property values. If we approve this now, we're wide open for more offices. Dr. Hayden and Mr. Butler were taken on their word. If we had known what he was going to do, we would have fought it then," said Shirley Woolridge, a resident of the area.

Pampa resident Dan Michael was one of five residents who spoke against allowing an insurance office in his neighborhood.

Dan Michael, a resident of West 26th Avenue, said the residential neighborhood needs to be protected. Jimmy Little, another resident, said residents enjoy the neighborhood the way it is now.

Lee Fraser, former owner of the land, said Secrest wants to get along with the neighbors and has designed the office and home to face away from the residential area of the neighborhood.

"If he really wants to get along with us, he'd build his office somewhere else," Little said.

"If it was zoned residential, it should stay residential. It's unfair to devalue our property for one person," Geneva Michael said.

The zoning matter was brought to the commission on an appeal. Secrest has been turned down by the planning and zoning commission. City engineering employee Forrest Cloyd said the idea of building an office on the very same property has been turned down two other times by the planning and zoning commission.

City Attorney Don Lane said because of the zoning of the land, an office district-specific use permit cannot be issued, and the land would have to be zoned simply office district. A specific use permit would regulate who could have an office there and what they could do with it.

The residents expressed concern that the zoning change might be approved and Secrest could sell the land to someone else before the five years was up, and they would be facing another kind of office building all together.

Lane said the commission must consider what is best for the area. Woolridge told him to try and put himself in her place and see how the residents feel about the change. Lane also told the commission they can't change the zoning without a public hearing.

To override the zoning commission's ruling, the commission must vote a three-quarters majority for the change after the hearings are held, Lane said.

Commissioners also voted to allow City Manager Mack Wofford to negotiate a contract with Merriman and Barber to conduct a street repair and replacement survey similar to the one they conducted in 1980. The contract will be presented to the commission for approval before any work is done.

Gene Barber of the firm told the commission he is anxious to begin work on the survey while bond interest rates are low.

Mayor Calvin Whately said in April that a bond issue may be required to fix the city's streets, and commissioners want support for the bond issue to start in neighborhoods, not in a commission room.

In other business conducted at the meeting, a public hearing was held on the proposed annexing and zoning change of several blocks of the Country Club Heights subdivision just outside the city limits on the city's eastern edge on Harvester Avenue. The changes, which have been approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission, will annex blocks 9, 10 and 11, and lots 2 to 13 of block 8 in the subdivision.

The changes will also rezone lots 2 to 9, block 8 and lots 4 to 10, block 11 from Agriculture to Multi-Family. These will be used for construction of apartments or other multi-family dwellings. Blocks 9 and 10 and lots 1, 2, 3, 11, and 12 of block 11 will be rezoned from Agriculture to Single Family for construction of homes.

An on-site hearing is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Thursday at the proposed home sites. The land is being developed by Walter "Buck" Worley, and is bordered by Harvester, Jupiter and Browning Streets. If no opposition is raised at Thursday's hearing, the annexing and rezoning will take effect in about a month, after the ordinance gets two readings.

Commissioners gave a first reading to two ordinances concerning fees for certain variances. One ordinance would raise the fee for breaking a curb and gutter (ie: to put in a driveway) from $2 for 100 feet to $25 for the first 25 feet and 50 cents for each foot over 25 feet. The $2 fee was set in 1929.

The second ordinance would institute a filing fee of $125 for applying for a zoning variance, whether or not the variance is granted. Wofford said the fees will be used to cover administrative costs of the notices and hearings required for either a variance or a curb cut. The $125 fee is the same as a person now pays for a rezoning or annexing try. Both ordinances need one more reading to become law.

Commissioners accepted a dedication of 20th Avenue East of Holly Lane to the City of Pampa. A local developer had asked the city to dedicate the street, and the developer will pay for the paving and finishing of the street, Wofford said.

A bid from Case Power and Equipment Company of Amarillo for a used backhoe was accepted at the meeting. The bid, in the amount of $23,500, will be paid for with revenue-sharing funds, Wofford said. The city has been leasing the machine from Case for $1,750 per month for the last six months, he said. With the $6,000 trade-in allowance applied to the cost of the machine, the final cost will be $23,500. Two other bids were received, one from Panhandle Implement Co. for $28,250 with a $2,000 trade-in, and Floyd W. McMinn, Inc. of Lefors bid $30,500 with no trade-in. The bids were opened on May 3 at 9:30 a.m.

Wofford also told the commission that the city's pothole-filling program is about 60 percent finished.

The city hired three new employees in April, and 16 city employees got raises. Erin Sue Crane was hired by the finance department, and Bruce A. Denham and Kenneth N. Sams were hired by the police department.

Among the employees who got raises were Virginia L. Coy, finance; John Uland, Parks and Recreation; and Betty Whitson, municipal court, who all got trial service increases. These increases are given after six months in a job.

Employees receiving merit (one-year from trial service) increases were Tommy Amburgey, public utilities; Harry J. Blondeel and Nancy L. Rice, Parks and Recreation; Gary D. Boydston, Joyce Christopher, Dwane A. Fresh, Christian Lockridge, and Allan L. Smith, police; David Callison, personnel; John F. Cook Jr. and Mark E. Franks, fire; and Bill M. King and Jim R. Martin, water district.

Terminations during the month of April were John W. Bennett and Judy King, police; Charles Brewer, parks and recreation; and Howard M. Walker, engineering.

The city's bills for the last two weeks totaled $121,204.

Farmers expect wheat boom despite PIK acres

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a sharp cutback in 1983 crop acreages, American farmers are going to harvest a whopper of a wheat crop.

But for the first time farmers will plant more soybeans than corn — which will be the smallest acreage in more than a century.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that this year's production of winter wheat is estimated at 1.89 billion bushels, down 10 percent from last year but still one of the biggest crops on record.

Officials said the reduction is due mainly to the Reagan administration's acreage-cutback program aimed at reducing huge supplies of grain which have weighed heavily on market prices and farm income for the past several years.

Department economists say the cutbacks in grain crops this year will have only "minimal" effects on consumer food prices but indicate that if livestock feed costs rise there could be some impact in 1984.

Last year's winter wheat crop yielded a record 2.11 billion bushels, pushing total wheat production in 1982 to 2.8 billion bushels, the third record harvest in a row.

Even with a 10 percent smaller harvest, winter wheat production in 1983 would be the fourth largest on record, bigger than any prior to 1980.

The Kansas crop, traditionally the largest, was estimated at 424 million bushels, down only 8 percent from last year's 462 million bushels.

Based on indications as of May 1, the winter wheat yield nationally was estimated at a record 40.2 bushels per acre, compared to 36.1 bushels in 1982.

McLean lawn mowed

McLEAN - The McLean City Council voted Tuesday night to hire Harold Smith to mow grass with a brush cutter for 20 hours a week.

Council members also heard a preliminary report from Russell Garrison of the Gray County Tax Appraisal District about the valuation of McLean and the various exemptions the council might offer to McLean taxpayers. The council did not choose to offer any exemptions to the taxpayers as yet.

Action on removing the property of J.D. Fish from within the city limits was tabled. The council also discussed the legality of city operations with Wayne Bybee and paid the April bills.

Locals honored at Red Cross meet

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

"The red cross swimming course I took when I was three taught me I could do anything I believed I could do," said Marilyn Williams, director of Goodwill in Amarillo. She was speaking to the annual meeting of the Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross Tuesday.

American Red Cross is involved in more than teaching youngsters to swim. The organization is involved in helping people in the military, disaster relief and first aid courses.

Williams said the Red Cross has exacting standards of achievement and an individual who enrolls in one of the courses has to meet those standards before being certified by the organization.

The Gray County Chapter is very active in service to its community, said Dorothy Stowers, chapter chairman.

The swimming instructors taught more people to swim than did the Amarillo chapter, she said. The Red Cross Volunteer program is no respecter of age, Stowers said. As an example she introduced Pampa's oldest volunteer, Libby Shotwell, who will be 81 this year, and Mary Lynch, a high school student that it may have indicated a larger acreage of feed grains this year than some people had expected.

Shotwell served as executive secretary for 25 years before retiring two years ago, and said she intends to keep right on working as a volunteer.

Lynch was honored as the outstanding member in the high school unit of the red cross volunteers. Jack Skelly Jr. was honored for outstanding service to the Gray County Chapter. He has served on the board for 40 years and taught water safety before that Lillian Esson, who has worked with the red cross since 1958, was also honored for outstanding service. She served as the water safety chairman last year.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

FBI flunks fake diploma mills

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Seizing records from Arizona to Florida, FBI agents said they capped a three-year undercover probe of diploma mills in eight states that sold phony sheepskins to "hundreds of people in every profession."

Operation "Dipscam" could lead to indictments against 38 mail-order colleges that provided fake degrees for people now practicing in fields ranging from psychotherapy to cancer treatment, agents said at a news conference here Tuesday.

"We have people with Ph.D.s in psychotherapy who are treating patients and don't have the slightest qualifications," said Robert L. Pence, the FBI agent in charge in North Carolina.

"This is a problem that seems to be affecting the nation's educational system and is turning out phony graduates in every profession imaginable," he said.

In one instance, Agent Otto A. Ezell Jr. sent $1,595 to American National University in Phoenix, Ariz., and explained he was too "backlogged" due to a vacation to do research for a degree, according to an affidavit in federal court in Phoenix.

The school awarded Ezell a master's degree in business administration and a transcript showing he had taken 10 courses for 30 credits, receiving all Bs, the affidavit said.

A call to the school Tuesday reached an answering service, where a woman said school officials would be unavailable for comment until later today.

Pence said graduates of phony colleges include a high-ranking Washington official, a National Football League player, employees of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and state, local and federal employees.

None of the bogus degree-holders was identified.

Pence said one person has already been convicted in the three-year investigation, and evidence is being presented to grand juries in Arizona, Arkansas, Ohio, New York, Florida, California, South Carolina, and North Carolina.

"Hundreds of people in every profession" received the phony certificates, Pence said. The FBI has notified some employers who had given jobs to mail-order graduates and many employees have already lost their jobs, he added.

Five FBI agents received a total of 23 degrees and paid more than $25,000 for the phony certificates, Pence said. They included degrees for medical doctors, psychiatrists, masters of business administration and masters of criminal justice.

Prices ranged from $1,000 for a bachelor's degree to $5,000 for a Ph.D. Some "universities" under investigation had only post office boxes or answering services, he said, and none had classroom space.

Plane crash victims are identified

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — The pilot of a light plane that crashed in a mist-shrouded field probably was using a highway for guidance when he flew too low and clipped some power lines, a federal investigator says.

All four people aboard the plane were killed.

The single-engine Cessna 182, flying in mist and rain, nose-dived into the Comal County wheat field about 11:55 p.m. Monday, according to Department of Public Safety trooper Lin Manford.

Manford said he was on his way home when he looked into his rearview mirror and saw what he first thought was a lightning bolt.

"It was just a big flash that lit up the sky," Manford said. "Then I heard some trucks call for a 'Smokey' on the CB and say a plane was on fire. That was it."

The four victims, burned beyond recognition, were identified early today as Galen G. Gilbert, 33, of San Antonio; Raymond L. Pedrazine Jr., 24, Anthony Earl Davis, 27, and Maria Trevino, whose age was unknown. A Texas Department of Public Safety spokeswoman said three of the victims' hometowns were unavailable.

The bodies were taken to a funeral home in New Braunfels, about 35 miles north of San Antonio.

Gilbert, an attorney, was believed to be the pilot, the spokeswoman said. The plane was registered to him.

"He often flew in that plane," said Nora Adame, a secretary in his law office. "We haven't heard from him all day. He didn't mention anything about going out of town yesterday."

Gilbert's car was parked at the San Antonio International Airport, investigators said.

J.O. Johnson, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said his preliminary investigation showed no engine problems with the Cessna.

The pilot had not filed a flight plan and probably was following Interstate 35 back to San Antonio when the Cessna clipped the lines and caught fire, Johnson said.

Witnesses told Manford the plane apparently was trying to land on the highway when the 325,000-volt power lines sheared off its landing gear.

The flaming Cessna flew about 1,000 yards before crashing into the field, witnesses said.

The National Weather Service said New Braunfels was cloaked in heavy fog and light rain when the accident occurred. Visibility was about two miles.

Interstate 35 was partially closed about six hours Tuesday because of the high voltage wires downed by the plane.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration also traveled to the scene.

The P.M.S. Patriot Band, also under the direction of DiCosimo, will perform "Montage" and "Beacon Hill March."

The finale will be "America the Beautiful," featuring all the Pampa school bands, and directed by Roberson.

Town never forgot slain family

By SCOTT SHEPARD

DONALSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Corn now grows in the field where 10 years ago six members of the Alday family were slain one by one as they came in from their chores.

The years have done little to dim the memory of one of the most celebrated crimes in Georgia history.

Surviving family members and townspeople, mindful of the row of black marble tombstones, want to know why the three men sentenced to die for the slayings are still alive.

"The Alday family is like a bank," said a family friend, who asked not to be identified. "They've got a note due, and they can't collect. In a way, it's true for the whole community. We all want to see justice done."

The death penalty opponents are doing their part to keep the killers alive, but the state isn't doing a thing to see justice is done.

It was May 14, 1973, when Ned Alday and his son, Jerry, were planting corn and came in to investigate a suspicious car near Jerry's mobile home. When they failed to return, Jimmy, another of Ned's sons, went to find them. When he didn't return, Ned's brother, Aubrey, and another of Ned's sons, Chester, went inside the mobile home. All died of gunshot wounds, police said.

According to court testimony, when Mary Alday, Jerry's wife, arrived at the mobile home after grocery shopping, she was raped and taken to a nearby field where she was shot in the head.

Carl Isaacs, Wayne Coleman and George Dungee, all Maryland prison escapees at the time of the slayings, were convicted of murder and sentenced to die in Georgia's electric chair.

They all wait on Death Row at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center in Jackson, outside Atlanta. No one has died in Georgia's electric chair since Oct. 16, 1964.

Each man's case has been before the U.S. Supreme Court twice, and each now is before the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, which must decide whether lower courts erred in conviction or sentencing.

Carl's brother, Billy Isaacs, testified for the state and received a lesser sentence of 40 years in prison for armed robbery. Several years ago, he wrote a letter to the surviving members of the Alday family apologizing for the crime.

The slain Aldays are buried together in the Spring Creek Baptist Church cemetery beneath a large, black marble marker bearing the words, "Alday Family." Inscribed on the tomb are the words, "They steered the course to the same quiet shore, not parted long and now to part no more."

In this southwest Georgia town of 3,300 residents, friends and family feel the wound may never heal.

"That means they must be executed," said 61-year-old Bud Alday, brother of Aubrey and Ned. "I'm not saying we'll ever get over this tragedy, but the wound will be closed if they aren't allowed to sit in prison and laugh at us."

"I didn't even know them (the victims)," Carl Isaacs said in a copyright interview with The Albany Herald in 1975. "I had never seen them before May 14, but I didn't like them. Working people don't do a thing for me. They were just farmers, just beefsteaks... the only thing they ever did... was get killed by me."

Billy Isaacs, who was 15 at the time of the slayings, testified the three others — Carl Isaacs, his half-brother Coleman and Dungee — had escaped from prison in Maryland and needed money to continue their getaway.

"I don't blame the Aldays if they want revenge. I'd feel the same way," Carl Isaacs said. "But then again, I'd like to get out and kill more of them. They represent the type of society I don't like."

Carl Isaacs' words and deeds still echo across the farmland and marshes that make up Seminole County where the Aldays are considered pioneers.

"We got no justice," said Dan White, who was sheriff at the time of the slayings. "After what they did, those boys should be killed... immediately, slowly. It's just a mockery of our justice system."

"Every day I think of them," said Bud Alday, the first family member on the scene after the slayings were discovered. "And every day I regret that their killers were not taken back to the trailer and lynched right there. Then we would have got justice."

"Every day of my life I regret not killing those boys when they were down here. I believe the good Lord would forgive me."

CCH hosts blood drive

Coronado Community Hospital, as part of its National Hospital Week activities, will host a special blood donor drive Thursday from noon to 7 p.m. in the hospital private dining room.

A team of specialists from Coffee Memorial Blood Bank in Amarillo will draw the blood.

Hospital Administrator Norman Knox said there is frequently a significant increase in the demand for blood transfusions about the start of summer, when schools are out and people start their vacations.

"We'd like to be prepared and able to meet these increased requests for blood," Knox said. "It means giving the gift of life in cases of accidents."

Anyone interested in becoming a donor can call the hospital for an appointment (665-3721) or plan to visit the donor station between noon and 7 p.m. Thursday.

Former air controller begins sentence

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A former air traffic controller says his union's decision to strike the federal government "was just and right," even though he is beginning a 90-day prison sentence for his illegal walkout.

Gary Greene surrendered to federal marshals Tuesday, gave his wife an emotional farewell and was taken in handcuffs to a minimum security prison to begin serving the sentence.

Greene, 39, was president of the local representing controllers at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport when he joined the August 1981 strike by 11,000 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controller Organization.

The striking controllers complained of adverse working conditions and insensitivity by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"It was a just and right decision. It was necessary and we did it," Greene said to reporters and a crowd of supporters and former PATCO members gathered at the federal courthouse here Tuesday.

His wife, Chris, however, said she felt "kind of empty now."

"I don't appreciate the thought of losing my husband for 90 days," she said.

Controllers who did not immediately return to work were fired by President Reagan, but only a few were prosecuted.

The AFL-CIO issued a scathing statement Tuesday, saying it was "appalled at the vindictiveness displayed by the jailing of air controller Gary Greene in Fort Worth today. Greene's only crime was being a leader of the workers he represented."

Greene will serve his time at the minimum security Federal Correction Institution in Fort Worth.

Greene and former controllers Ron May and Lee Grant were convicted on felony charges in 1982 and sentenced to a maximum prison terms of a year and a day.

But U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon suspended all but 90 days of the sentences and fined each man $750.

The three appealed to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, but the court upheld their convictions in April.

May said he will surrender when authorities decide where he will serve his sentence. Grant has asked to remain free until the U.S. Supreme Court acts on his appeal.

Port Arthur gets coastal compromise

AUSTIN (AP) — A Port Arthur senator seeking tax concessions for his city "passed the pain barrier" after 6½ hours of his filibuster, and a half hour later got part of what he wanted.

The Senate on Tuesday night tentatively approved a compromise coastal annexation bill after Sen. Carl Parker, fighting a bad cough and injured knee, held out on his feet for more than seven hours to get the compromise.

Parker quit talking just before 8 p.m., after negotiators, including oil company lobbyists, had reached an agreement.

"It doesn't make the cities totally happy, and it doesn't make the oil companies totally happy," Parker told the Senate.

Although senators tentatively approved the measure on voice vote, they delayed final passage until Wednesday or Thursday to give them time to study a proposed amendment. The bill would still have to clear the House.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the compromise would allow coastal cities to annex one league, or 3.45 miles, out to sea and tax property up to 100 percent. For the next 1½ miles, cities could tax property up to 35 percent.

The amendment also would stop coastal cities from extending their boundaries further along the Gulf Coast.

Farabee's original bill would have prohibited cities from annexing more than three miles out to sea.

Parker said, however, Farabee "had kind of leaned on the folks on the other side" during negotiations.

Although the bill was triggered by Port Arthur annexing a Superior Oil Co. natural gas well 10 miles out in the Gulf, it also would apply to other home-rule cities such as Corpus Christi and Galveston.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker of Beaumont ruled last year that Port Arthur's annexation was unconstitutional, and described it as "nothing more than a land grab, motivated solely by lust for tax revenue."

Pending Port Arthur's appeal of that ruling, $3 million in contested property taxes are being held in escrow. Farabee said the compromise bill would have no effect on the lawsuit.

Supporters of Farabee's bill say that allowing cities to annex land as far out as Port Arthur did stifles offshore oil and gas development, because companies would move to federal waters, where they would be free of state and local taxes.

Offshore oil and gas production is important to the state, because it leases areas within 10.5 miles of the coastline, and derives hundreds of millions of dollars in royalties for the fund that helps finance public schools in Texas.

Superior, for example, pays a 55 percent royalty to the state on its offshore well, and the natural gas the state has accepted in lieu of cash has a value of $200 million.

Parker said Superior also had made $100 million off the well.

Coastal cities claim they need to be able to annex out into the gulf to protect their environments from offshore oil and gas exploration.

Parker began his delaying tactics at 12:48 p.m., stating, "You got me on a bad day." He was hoarse and coughing from the start and sucked on a paper cup. An aide said the cough was the result of allergies, and that Parker also had recently wrenched a knee and was favoring it as he stood at his desk.

At one point, Parker suggested that if Superior would let Port Arthur have the $3 million in escrow, the city could build a performing arts center and name it the Superior Oil-Janis Joplin Performing Arts Center in honor of the company and the late rock singer from Port Arthur.

Tax assessor-collector vows to defend himself against indictment

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Ector County Tax Assessor-Collector Curtis Winn says he doesn't understand why he has been indicted in the alleged embezzlement of thousands of dollars in automobile license fees from his office.

One of three sealed indictments handed down by an Ector County grand jury Tuesday charges the long-time county official with one count of misapplication of more than $10,000 in fiduciary funds.

District Attorney Mike Holmes, who has estimated that as much as $50,000 in fees may have been taken from the tax office, said the grand jury had been investigating Winn's office for than two months.

"I do not understand the indictment," Winn said in a telephone interview Tuesday night. "The charges against me are not true. I've got nothing more to say at this point except that I will defend myself."

Winn said March 31 that he discovered one of his employees was embezzling state fees for motor vehicle registration renewal stickers issued in his office, and predicted Tuesday that the other indictments would name two of his workers.

Those indictments had not yet been unsealed Tuesday night, Holmes said.

Winn, who has been tax collector since 1961, surrendered at the Ector County Jail Tuesday afternoon and was released on a $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

The second-degree felony he faces carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Holmes also filed a civil lawsuit asking for Winn's temporary suspension. A hearing is set for Friday on the action.

"During the past 22 years and five months in office, I have tried to serve the people to the best of my ability and have been privileged to make many friends," Winn said. "And now I ask for their support and prayers."

The grand jury had been meeting to investigate the embezzlement charges "off and on for about 70 days," Holmes said. He declined to discuss the case further.

The state comptroller's office, which has audited the tax office's motor vehicle division books, also began a routine audit last week of property tax records in Winn's office, a spokesman for the agency said.

House okays part-time teachers

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite warnings it would lower morale among schoolteachers, the House has approved the concept of using non-certified math and science teachers on a part-time basis to ease a shortage in the state's public schools.

The bill by Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, would allow local school districts to hire mathematicians or scientists without teaching certificates to leave their regular jobs long enough each day to teach up to three classes a day in public schools.

The bill won tentative approval Tuesday, 85-61, and requires a final vote before going to the Senate.

Hammond said the intent of the bill was to attract "public-minded citizens who work for public-minded corporations" who could come to school in the mornings and teach to "help us out of this jam."

Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, a former schoolteacher, argued against the bill, saying it was "not solving an emergency — it's prolonging a critical condition in our schools."

"I'm concerned about the effect on the morale of our certified teachers," Mrs. Glossbrenner said. "I wonder how I would feel if I were teaching school, taking hall duty, grading papers, counseling with kids who have problems at home, and a part-timer walks in, spends two hours a day in school, walks out and earns $40,000," she said.

"It's wrong to put a Band-Aid over a sore that's not a scrape or a bruise but is indeed a cancer that is affecting the public school system of this state," Mrs. Glossbrenner argued.

But Hammond said he was concerned about "the kids who will be going to school this September."

"In the state of Texas last year, we only graduated 20 math teachers," Hammond said. "In the Dallas Independent School District, 7,000 students are being taught math by social studies teachers."

An amendment by Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso, that would have required a certified teacher to be in the classroom with the part-timer failed.

"Just knowing the subject matter is not enough to be a good teacher," Mrs. Polk argued.

House members also tabled a proposed amendment by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, that would have forced the part-timer to get certified after one year in the program.

Hammond protested that such an amendment would mean in effect that the part-time teachers would stay in the program only one year to avoid having to go back to college "and take 24 credit hours (in education courses) to get certified."

Texan says he is innocent of Caribbean crime

ROAD TOWN, British Virgin Islands (AP) — A Texas man convicted of slaying a British subject in Tortola last year, will be sued for damages and hanged if his appeals fail, authorities said Tuesday.

Thomas Henry Ball, 31, of Houston was convicted Oct. 13, 1982, of the murder of Justin Williams of Tortola. A hearing on his appeal is scheduled for June 21.

Tortola is a part of the British Virgin Islands group, near the U.S. Virgin Islands.

An official at the government registrar's office said Ball's appeal will be heard by a traveling 3-judge Circuit Court of Appeals panel.

Ball's case is one of several, but "it is fair to say his case will be given priority," said the official, who declined to be identified.

Authorities said Ball could appeal to the Privy Council in London should the panel turn down his motion.

High Court Justice Cecil Hewlett sentenced Ball to die by hanging once the verdict was handed down. The hanging sentence is mandatory under British law.

Frederick Smith of Barbados, Ball's attorney, the day after the verdict and sentence were announced, filed an appeal with Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court of Appeal, headquartered in St. Lucia. The court is the highest British court in the Eastern Caribbean.

Early this year, Mrs. Roseta Hodge, the mother of the dead man, filed a damage suit against Ball. If the appeal process fails, a judge in Tortola's High Court of Justice will decide on the amount of financial restitution to be paid to the woman.

Tortola police chief Robert Bretherton refused even after the trial to state publicly exactly how Williams was murdered Aug. 13, 1982. Witnesses, however, said Williams was pushed off the Nanny Cay Marina in Tortola during a fight and drowned.

Bretherton said Williams' body was found in 12 feet of water near the marina.

Ball had been in the nearby U.S. Virgin Islands and had traveled to Tortola aboard a sailboat, the "Juliette," police said.

U.S. Immigration authorities in St. Thomas, the capital of the U.S. Virgin Islands, said the craft was boarded on a return trip Aug. 14, 1982, the day after the alleged murder, and 3 handguns, 22 rounds of ammunition and a pound of marijuana were confiscated.

A suspect, the man who sailed the boat back to U.S. territory from Tortola, was questioned and later released. U.S. officials have repeatedly refused to discuss the case further.

Escapee recaptured

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Authorities have captured a 17-year-old capital murder defendant who vanished from a courthouse holding cell during a break in his trial.

Deputies found the teen-ager in a field in Brazoria County about eight hours after he escaped Tuesday, authorities said.

Brady L. Beck had been placed in an anteroom off State District Judge Tom Kenyon's courtroom Tuesday morning, Sheriff's Capt. Gene Smith said.

A deputy was posted as a guard outside the room. Beck disappeared shortly after noon, Smith said. Authorities discovered a back door to the anteroom was ajar.

Kenyon ordered the trial to continue.

Beck is accused of abducting, robbing and slaying Benjamin M. Hudson, 22, in Clute.

Hudson was found shot to death Nov. 1 in a roadside ditch near Brazoria. His wallet was found at a boat ramp in Lake Jackson, about 10 miles away, investigators said.

Dope suspects lose all rights

To catch a dope peddler, you've got to look like a dope peddler.

So goes the argument of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, which has taken to confiscating planes, luxury cars and even gold jewelry from suspected drug pushers so that its undercover agents can travel undetected in the same social circles as their suspects.

The agents are allowed to do this by law. They arrest the suspect and seize his assets, and the U.S. Attorney's Office files civil lawsuits separate from criminal proceedings to keep any assets the suspect may have acquired as the result of drug transactions.

Recently, a lawsuit was filed giving the federal government temporary custody of the $200,000 home of Melvin Roberts, a suspected Fort Worth heroin supplier. It's unclear whether Roberts owns the home. He paid the former owner two $25,000 cash installments and sealed the deal with $135,000 he pulled from a paper sack. But the warranty deed was signed over to retired chauffeur Ray King.

Another home was confiscated in August 1982 - this time belonging to John Russell Webster Jr., a suspected Dallas cocaine dealer. Webster did not pay cash for his home; he did it like most of us do: He made a small down payment and kept up with his monthly mortgage payments.

Whether Roberts or Webster are convicted as drug dealers is inconsequential to whether they might lose their property. The civil suit is separate from the criminal proceeding. But what the feds are trying to prove in the civil suit is criminal activity through criminal activity and illegal profit.

Similar incidents involving the confiscation of cash have occurred in the Odessa - Midland area.

Although confiscating property may be technically legal, the civil lawsuit violates the spirit of the Fifth Amendment's provision against double jeopardy. A drug dealer faces one trial against his person, another against his property.

And with juries as fickle as they come nowadays, a person could win the battle only to lose the war.

If one takes the attitude that suspected drug dealers deserve to lose their property, he or she can't see the constitutional forest for the stunted judicial trees. First there is the common law assumption that a man is innocent until proven otherwise. This tenet is ignored when a suspect's assets are seized. The Fourth Amendment, which protects against unreasonable seizure, also becomes twisted.

For those who still say it serves the "culprits" right, here's a little scenario. You are taken in for suspected drug trafficking. Your car, savings account and home are seized. You're in jail, and you can't use your assets to secure bail money, let alone proper legal defense. Although the jury in your criminal case finds you innocent after seeing through the circumstantial evidence, the jury in the civil case against your property is a little peevish after a lunch of smoked smelt and they're in the mood to believe the world is flat.

You won the battle for your freedom, but lost the war when it came to your most prized possessions.

In short, it's not too difficult to see which is the more atrocious crime: Crippling personal liberty will beat out drug dealing every time.

Ever wonder what causes violent behavior? Might it be the open and public admission that in a time of supposed fiscal crisis, the state government brags about having spent $750,000 on a commission to study the causes of violent behavior, complete with politically inspired dissents and minority reports? Let the learned ideologists rehash their disputes on their own time, with their own money.

Bernard L. Henderson, director of Virginia's Board of Commerce, is trying to eliminate some of that state's more absurd licensing requirements, including the provision requiring beauticians to spend 2,000 hours in beauty school to be eligible to take an examination for a license. We could use somebody like Henderson in Texas.

Do bureaucrats take care of themselves first? Do bears live in the woods? Buried in a recent New York Times story about hard times in Buffalo was this revealing item: "The money - $1.2 million to retrain unemployed workers and the remaining $700,000 for studies to determine where further aid should be spent. ... Nuff said."

Berry's World

"Who would have thought morning happy-talking network news would be better than no talking at all."

Try to grasp this idea, Mister Secretary...

By PAUL GREENBERG

The most naive question of the month comes from Terrel H. Bell, who is the country's secretary of, yep, education. He put his question to the Senate Judiciary Committee the other day in the course of advocating religious meetings at public schools. "If a public school allows students to meet before or after school to discuss or engage in politics, social activism or athletics," Dr. Bell wanted to know, "why should the rule change just because the students happen to be religious?"

Because, to risk boring Gentle Reader with the obvious, church and state are separated in this country - not athletics and state. A slightly more detailed explanation may be found in the First Amendment to the Constitution, which forbids an establishment of religion. A public school has no business sponsoring a Baptist Club or a Buddhist Club in the way it might sponsor a debate club or a football team. That comes too close to an establishment of religion. That simple distinction ought to be clear to a secretary of, yep, education.

Any other questions? Try this one. Suppose this extracurricular club just wants to study religion, or the Bible, or the Koran, and not proselytize or hold religious services? There's no bar to studying about religion in the Bill of Rights or in various Supreme Court decisions, contrary to widely circulated misperceptions. Indeed, an American education would be incomplete without some knowledge of the King James Version - if only for its literary and cultural influence.

P.S. Aren't houses of worship open before and after school hours? Don't families still gather occasionally at mealtimes? If half the effort that is being made to put the state into the religion business were invested in attending church, or studying Scripture at home, all of society might be much the better for it. Instead, religion becomes a political issue and point of contention, when it ought to be a source of peace and understanding. That's likely to happen when the simplest distinctions appear beyond a society's leaders.

As for Dr. Bell's presentation in general before this committee, it might be classified as verbal flotsam. He wound up advocating not only religion in public schools but tuition tax credits - another bad, divisive, and surely unconstitutional idea.

As part of the rhetorical litter placed before the committee there was a letter signed by the President. It supported tuition tax credits because: "Our Constitution recognizes the parental right to choose between public and private education." That may be a dandy right, but how does the current, happy absence of tuition tax credits - that is, the absence of public subsidies for private schools - interfere with that right? No more than the existence of public streets interferes with anyone's right to build his own private drive. And why drag the Constitution into this?

It was all too much even for a senator who supports tuition tax credits. Daniel Moynihan spoke up to ask: "Where in the Constitution does it mention education?" Dr. Bell could only hem and haw in response before Senator Moynihan mercifully cut him short by saying: "I'd just hate to see the president of the U.S. telling me something is in the Constitution that is not there."

That may be thought a small point in these constitutionally unconscious times. Assertions that would have inspired three days of debate when Webster and Hayne held the Senate spellbound now are shrugged off as a little moment. That alone says something about the state of American education. The litter in America's mental environment is scarcely noticed, let alone cleaned up.

Dr. - Sen. Moynihan suggested that Dr. - Sec. Bell "find the young man" in the White House who had written the letter for the President and send him a copy of the Constitution. Senator Moynihan was assuming that Ronald Reagan himself hadn't written it. That's a safe assumption, considering the pressure on a President's time and the possibility that Mr. Reagan might not be up to even misinterpreting the Constitution of the U.S. - on this subject.

Whoever the letter writer was, Dr. Moynihan concluded, "he has a deficiency in his secondary education." And he may not be the only one in this Administration. Judging by Dr. Bell's presentation, he, too, could use a little brush - up on constitutional principles and simple logic. Unfortunately, there may be no formal way to teach common sense. That is the quality most lacking in this Administration's mentally disheveled approach to the whole subject of education. Instead of being in charge of providing education, perhaps it should be getting some.

Why aren't bishops opposed to ALL war?

By PAUL HARVEY

Respectfully, I asked a churchman of my acquaintance why he was taking a public position "in opposition to nuclear war."

I asked, "Why are you not opposed to all war?" It has always seemed to me that to oppose "nuclear war" and not "all war" suggests fear more than morality.

It suggests that we are willing to tolerate war which can be kept at a distance.

That we are willing to continue to send our sons to die on distant shores - but that is as involved as we are willing to be. You've also heard the protestation that, "nuclear weapons kill and maim civilians - women and children."

Ghostly as that prospect may be, some of us are just as concerned for the young men whom each generation has allowed to be sacrificed.

Indeed, is it not possible that these hideous weapons of mass destruction which would spare no place, spare nobody, might not be the best possible deterrent to future war?

True enough, such awesome weapons might fall into the hands of irresponsible revolutionaries in the Middle East or Africa or Latin America - who could hold the world hostage.

But this danger exists regardless of any agreement the superpowers choose to sign.

So though I do not know a quick and easy way to legislate or negotiate a safe future - surely the least safe course is for us to phase out nuclear weapons - whether the Soviets do or not.

If the Soviets retain nuclear weapons we are at the mercy of tyrants.

If both they and we eliminate our nuclear weapons stockpiles - then future wars would be fought with marching men again.

And our six percent fraction of the planet's population could not possibly win.

So - as Prince Philip has acknowledged - "it is nuclear weapons which so far have enforced peace."

So I confronted the churchman with this Hobson's choice and he said:

"Paul, I have been hounded by the anti - nuclear people everywhere I go. I had to say something..."

"So I consulted with a senator who feels as you do, and he advised me to do what senators do to take the heat off: publicly oppose nuclear weapons."

"Because," he said, "privately the senator and you and I know such disarmament will never come about anyway."

'A responsibility to control homosexual behavior...'

Homosexual law

We are in grave danger in the State of Texas! Our Sodomy Law which made homosexual acts illegal has been declared unconstitutional by a Federal Judge.

Why not leave the Gays alone! I thought that, too, until I learned that AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), which is epidemic among Gays, can be given to any of us that receive a blood transfusion.

Hemophiliacs, hospitalized babies and other blood recipients have contracted AIDS and their only contact was through blood donations they received. One source stated that all AIDS victims diagnosed in 1979 and 1980 have died. Those odds are frightening!

Clearly, then, the State of Texas has a responsibility to protect its citizens by controlling homosexual behavior. The House of Representatives has an anti Sodomy bill, HB 2138 which would do this. If we are to have any protection for the next two years, every concerned person must write letters of support for HB 2138 (anti Sodomy bill). Speaker of the House, Honorable Gib Lewis should be contacted and asked to push HB 2138 (anti Sodomy bill) through the house quickly.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Texans for Moral Government, P.O. Box 26304, Fort Worth, Texas, 76121, or by reading the April 18, 1983, issue of Newsweek magazine.

Now is the time for our voices to be heard!

Lobby backing

The intent of the Food Distribution Program is to help the poor. AAM Inc. has seen a need to help not only the poor, the elderly and the shut-ins, but also the working man who has a job and is barely able to make car payments, land or house payments. If he loses his mortgage payment he is left virtually out on the street without a car, land or house and still has a family to feed. Bankruptcies and foreclosures help no one. They, the bankruptcies and foreclosures, provide no solution to the problem.

It is a total disservice to a community and it is morally wrong for a service organization such as the Salvation Army to declare an area or district for itself and to refuse to help those persons qualified for help in that area or district.

It serves without purpose to single out and condemn an individual such as Mrs. Jean Patton who is willing to help any organization such as AAM in making an unselfish attempt to serve God's people.

AAM has no intention to jeopardize any program already in existence if the intended purpose is honest and sincere.

Naive

I fail to understand why the article "We'll never run out of Petroleum" by Oscar Cooley was presented under "Viewpoints" in May. It was a disservice to the citizens. Most people will have enough sense to ignore it but many would like to believe it is true.

We obviously don't know how much reserves we have for sure but there is a fixed supply that is being rapidly consumed.

The article says it is becoming more difficult and costly to produce oil but makes light of the fact as if it was of no concern.

In addition we as a nation are moving toward oil exploration in beautiful portions of our country that should be left undisturbed.

We need to be working on the development of renewable energy sources. Putting our head in the sand and ignoring the oil supply problem is rather naive.

Senate committee approves less than half of what Reagan wanted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise El Salvador aid package approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee leaves President Reagan $60 million short of what he says is needed to help the Salvadoran army combat leftist insurgents. "What it does is increase the risk that the (administration's) program won't succeed," said William Schneider Jr., undersecretary of state for security assistance, after the vote Tuesday.

The plan is subject to Senate and House approval. The amount includes only $50 million of the $110 million in extra aid the president sought to add to the $26.3 million approved by Congress last year.

Schneider, however, commended the committee "for its progress" in granting additional money.

However, the extra $50 million is $20 million more than has thus far been approved by the House Appropriations Committee for fiscal 1983.

The committee approved 17-0 a compromise that would set U.S. military aid to El Salvador at $76.3 million for fiscal 1983, which ends Sept. 30.

The compromise, spearheaded by Sens. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., was approved after the committee rejected, 11-6, a motion to approve the entire $110 million.

Infant girl is abducted

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A suburban Fort Worth couple say a woman masquerading as a nurse talked them into letting her show off their 7-week-old daughter and then made off with the infant.

The baby was taken to the hospital about 8:30 a.m. for a routine examination, Ms. Blaydes said.

Police and FBI agents launched a search for the baby, Cherie Ann Marshall, after the woman kidnapped her from John Peter Smith Hospital about 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, authorities said.

She said that while the parents, Andrew, 23 and Penny, 21, of Forest Hills, were waiting, a woman wearing all white and "looking like a nurse" began to befrend the couple.

The parents gave the infant to the woman after she told them she wanted to show their daughter "to the other nurses on the floor," hospital spokeswoman Sally Blaydes said.

"They assumed she was a nurse," Ms. Blaydes said, adding that the suspect was not an employee of the hospital.

"We expect to be working on it for some time," said Police Lt. L.A. Sager. "We have some leads, but not much."

Shultz calls for aid from Soviets

By The Associated Press U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz is calling on Moscow to urge the withdrawal of its Syrian allies from Lebanon, but Western diplomats in Damascus say Syria is apt to demand major concessions before obliging.

cooperation thus far has clouded the future of the U.S.-mediated draft agreement between Israel and Lebanon for the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon. Israel is not required to withdraw its 25,000 troops unless Syrian and Palestine Liberation Organization forces also leave.

indication Lebanon will ask." He asked the Soviet Union, Syria's main supplier of military aid, to "get on the side of peace" in Lebanon by asking Syria to withdraw its 38,000 troops.

The Soviets have increased their presence in Syria since Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to destroy PLO guerrilla bases.

Syria has not detailed its conditions for pulling out of Lebanon, but the diplomats said Damascus probably would demand guarantees against possible Israeli attacks in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, as well as assurances that the Lebanese government would not take an anti-Syrian line.

Shultz, in Paris for a meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, was scheduled to return to Washington today after a trip of more than two weeks which included his shuttling between Jerusalem and Beirut to help complete the troop withdrawal pact.

Western diplomats in Damascus, who declined to be identified, said they had reports of the Syrian-backed Palestine Liberation Army crossing into Lebanon's Bekaa Valley at night by truck. They said the 2,000 infiltrators included guerrillas evacuated from east Beirut last summer.

Interracial marriages get house approval

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill guaranteeing civil marriages to interracial couples, prompted by a controversy in Fort Worth earlier this year, has won tentative approval in the Texas House.

He told reporters Tuesday that Washington was aware of Syrian objections to the agreement.

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat last week ordered his men still in Lebanon — estimated at 10,000 — on "maximum alert" to cope with a possible Israeli onslaught against Syrian and Palestinian forces in the Bekaa, the PLO news agency

The lack of Syrian support for the bill, which requires a final House vote before it can be sent to the Senate, was prompted by the refusal earlier this year of two Tarrant County justices of the peace to marry interracial couples.

But he added, "That is not the point. The point is will they withdraw when the government of Lebanon asks them to. I have a good

Dear Abby

Unwed girl's condition becomes a family issue

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "Kathy," my son's 18-year-old girlfriend, has informed him that she is pregnant. Her parents, who are devout Catholics, have told her that if she has an abortion she can never set foot in their house again. They insist that she have the child, keep it and raise it. Marriage is out of the question.

Can you rush some advice we can show Kathy to convince her that it would be best for all concerned if she gave up the child for adoption? Since she is a high school drop-out, now studying for her high school equivalency certificate and hoping to go on to some future career, we feel that she should not be saddled with a baby. Kathy's family will not even let her consider adoption.

Perhaps outside advice from you would broaden her outlook.

NO NAMES OR CITIES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: "Kathy" did not ask for my advice, so I shall not offer her any. However, I have some advice for you:

Don't presume to know what's best for Kathy. She must do what she thinks is best for her and her unborn child.

What about your son? As the baby's father, he should have something to say about it.

Free counseling is available at a Planned Parenthood facility for teen-agers who find themselves facing an unplanned pregnancy. Contrary to what many believe, they will not be talked into an abortion. They will receive expert professional counseling in order to help them make a decision they can live with.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the lady who was diagnosed as having herpes, then later learned that she did not have herpes — she was allergic to the colored, scented toilet paper she had been using for years!

I am a 53-year-old male. Twelve years ago my wife brought home a new brand of toilet paper that "smelled pretty." Soon, I began experiencing great irritation in the rectal area. At the same time our young daughter also developed an inflammation in the genital area. Luckily we put two and two together and threw out all the "pretty smelling" toilet paper, and we've had no problems since.

I suspect there are hundreds, maybe thousands, of readers who will benefit from the warning in your column. Thank you.

ALLERGIC BUT AWARE

DEAR ALLERGIC: Thanks for some valuable input.

...

DEAR ABBY: Something has been bugging me for a long time, and I don't know where to go for the answer, so I'm asking you. You've heard the expression, "Mind your p's and q's." What I want to know is what do the "p" and "q" stand for?

I've asked several people, and nobody seems to know.

SUE

DEAR SUE: There are three theories according to "The Morris Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins" by William and Mary Morris:

- (1) In the old days, when British sailors wore pig-tails and pea jackets, they were warned to mind their "p's and q's," meaning pea jackets and queues.
- (2) In English pubs, the bartender kept track of the drinks consumed by the customers by writing the number of pints and quarts on the blackboard. "P's" stood for pints; "q's" stood for quarts. So customers were told to mind their "p's and q's."
- (3) When writing the letters "p" and "q" in lower-case, i.e., "pq," one is the reverse of the other, hence penmanship teachers admonished their students to "mind their p's and q's."

Workplace equality

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans agree that — assuming equal skills — men and women make equally good secretaries.

Though 62 percent of the respondents to the Merit Report poll said there would be no difference in the quality of work, a substantial 35 percent declared that women make better secretaries; only 1 percent thought men were more qualified.

Survey on motherhood

NEW YORK (AP) — In answer to a questionnaire, "How Do You Really Feel About Motherhood?" in Redbook magazine, there were 46,000 replies. Of these, 83 percent expressed the opinion that motherhood is one of several important things a woman can do with her life — not the only thing.

The happiest mothers, the survey indicates, are those who planned their children, feel proud of their motherly skills, are mostly satisfied with the housework and childcare help from their husbands, do not feel they gave up a great deal to have children, and have a good marriage relationship.

"Secret ingredient" inspires recipe contest

Even the simplest homemade desserts seem to taste best. Fortunately, homemade desserts are possible despite time-pressed schedules with the use of convenience products, combined with favorites such as chocolate and fruit.

Creative cooks with such culinary tricks could win $5,000 in the 1983 Kraft Marshmallow Creme "Easy Secret Ingredient" Recipe Contest, accepting entries now through Sept. 30, 1983.

What recipes are potential winners? Any dessert, confection, or other treat which highlights the versatility, creamy texture and marvelous taste of marshmallow creme. Finalist entries will also use this convenience product to shortcut recipe preparation and reduce the number of ingredients required.

Fruit Glazed Mallow Pie is the perfect example. Fruit shines as a dessert star year round, and many entries in last year's contest reflected this trend. This updated variation of a classic tart appeals to the eyes as well as the tastebuds. The attractively arranged lemon gelatin glazed fruit topping would probably make the pie a contender this year. The refreshing lemon flavored filling is particularly light and creamy. It complements any choice of fruits, whether fresh or a combination of fresh, canned and frozen.

FRUIT GLAZED MALLOW PIE

- 1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
  - 1 jar (7 oz.) of marshmallow creme
  - 1 pkg. (3 oz.) lemon flavored gelatin
  - $\frac{1}{2}$  c. boiling water
  - $\frac{1}{2}$  c. cold water
  - 1 (9 in.) baked graham cracker crust
  - $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sliced assorted fruit
- Combine cream cheese and marshmallow creme, mixing with electric mixer or wire whisk until well blended. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water; add cold water. Reserve  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup gelatin; let stand at room temperature. Gradually add remaining gelatin to cream cheese mixture, mixing until blended. Chill until thickened but not set; mix until well blended. Spoon into crust; chill until firm. Arrange fruit on top of pie; top with reserved gelatin. Chill until firm.

Once you've discovered the secret of convenient dessert recipes prepared with marshmallow creme, you too may be a winner. Submit your recipe in one of three recipe categories. Desserts prepared well in advance of serving time fit into the "Make-Ahead Treats" category. Special company desserts that are easy to prepare fit into the "Special Occasion Desserts" category and the family's favorite mealtime finale could be entered in the "Desserts for the Family" category.

Whether your culinary talents lean towards showpiece desserts such as Fruit Glazed Mallow Pie or simple family favorites, your entry could be a $5,000 best-of-contest Grand Prize winner, a $1,000 first prize winner, or the winner of one of the 11 $100 semi-finalist prizes. According to contest experts, though, the first and most important tip for winning is to follow the rules precisely.

Contest rules will be mailed to you if you send your name and address to: "Rules", Kraft Marshmallow Creme "Easy Secret Ingredient" Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 11192, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

National League roundup

Atlanta downs Expos in fight-marred contest

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer
Atlanta's Craig McMurtry went 62-3 innings without being tagged for a hit. Montreal's Scott Sanderson wasn't so lucky.
McMurtry, a rookie right-hander, had Atlanta fans thinking no-hitter before yielding Gary Carter's two-out double in the seventh inning as the Braves beat the Expos 4-2 in a fight-interrupted game Tuesday night.
"The hit was no big deal," said McMurtry, now 4-1. "I made a bad pitch to Carter. I made a mistake pitch and he hit."
Carter's double off the center-field wall barely eluded Brett Butler's grasp. McMurtry, who pitched out of first-inning trouble caused by a walk and an error and then retired 20 straight batters before Carter's hit, left the game in the eighth after surrendering two runs on three more hits.
In other National League games, Philadelphia dunned Cincinnati 3-1. San Diego topped Pittsburgh 4-1. Chicago edged Los Angeles 3-2. St. Louis crunched San Francisco 8-4 and Houston nipped New York 5-4 in 11 innings.

Atlanta's ballpark, known as a paradise for slugfests, was the scene of a real brawl in the sixth inning when Claudell Washington charged to the mound after a brushback pitch from Sanderson. Television replays appeared to indicate Washington inhaled a punch before being pulled away as both benches emptied.
Washington, who had homered in the first inning, was ejected while Sanderson stayed in the game.
"I got him, I just didn't get him enough," Washington said. "The ball was behind my head. I delayed slightly because I didn't want (catcher) Carter to cut me off before I could get to him."
"I wanted to get to him," Washington said.
Last week, in a game in Montreal, Washington spiked Sanderson during a play at first base. Sanderson received six stitches and missed his next start.
"Maybe Claudell thought that had something to do with this," Sanderson said, "but I realized that was an accident."
"I'm never surprised when someone charges the mound," the pitcher said. "It's over, and no damage is done. It was just baseball."
Phillies 3, Reds 1
Tony Perez and Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies were the ones that led standing ovations in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

Perez, who helped lead the Reds to consecutive World Series triumphs in the 1970s, tripled in two first-inning runs after getting a warm greeting from the Cincinnati fans.
Carlton, meanwhile, became only the third pitcher in history to reach the 3,500-strikeout plateau. He fanned seven, running his major league-leading total to 70 this season and his lifetime total to 3,504. Only Houston's Nolan Ryan (3,521) and Walter Johnson (3,508) have fanned more.
Carlton allowed only five hits in upping his record to 5-2.

Stadium.
Denny Walling's bases-loaded single with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning was the difference. Mets reliever Neil Allen, struggling with problems on the field and off, took the loss and fell to 0-4.
Phil Garner tripled in two runs during Houston's four-run eighth as the Astros overcame a 4-0 New York lead for the second straight night.
Hubie Brooks delivered two run-scoring singles for the Mets.

Padres 4, Pirates 1
Andy Hawkins threw a three-hitter to cool off the hot-hitting Pirates, who had batted out 18 hits in a 14-inning victory over San Diego the night before.
Hawkins raised his record to 2-1 with his second complete game of the season.
Steve Garvey's single snapped a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning and Terry Kennedy followed with a two-run double, upping his NL-leading RBI total to 28.
Cubs 3, Dodgers 2
Reliever Mike Prolly summoned when starter Paul Moskau ran into first-inning trouble, pitched 52-3 strong innings and Lee Smith finished up with three perfect innings as Chicago broke the Dodgers' six-game winning streak.

Los Angeles scored twice in the first on run-scoring singles by Dusty Baker and Greg Brock before Prolly came in. He allowed two hits in his stint and then Smith came on for his fourth save.
Larry Bowa's run-scoring single in the fifth inning snapped a 2-2 tie.
Cardinals 8, Giants 4
Darrell Porter drilled a three-run homer in the first inning and added a two-run blast in the sixth as St. Louis ended the Giants' six-game victory string.
Tommy Herr, playing his 337th game in the majors, smacked a two-run shot for his first career homer as the Cardinals snapped their four-game losing streak.

Houston's Olajuwon to forgo NBA hardship draft

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olajuwon, the backbone of the University of Houston's slam dunk, says he'll forgo the National Basketball Association draft and play college basketball at least one more year because he doesn't want to disappoint his parents.
Olajuwon, a 7-foot center from Nigeria, and Cougar forward Clyde Drexler have kept reporters and fans in suspense about their futures since the Cougars bowed to North Carolina State in the NCAA championship game.
UH officials scheduled a news conference Thursday afternoon but Olajuwon decided not to wait and told Houston newspapers in stories published today that he plans to stay in school.
"I can announce it right now," Olajuwon told the Houston Chronicle. "It was a very hard decision. But my parents want me to stay in school. And they were the main part in my decision. I'm not going to disappoint them."

"When I say I'm staying in school, that means I'm not going to enter the NBA draft this year," he said.
Olajuwon, a sophomore, averaged 20 points and 13 rebounds in five NCAA playoff games and earned the Most Valuable Player title in the Final Four.
Drexler, a 6-foot-7 junior, has remained silent about his plans. The deadline for declaring NBA hardship status is midnight Saturday.
"In an interview Tuesday with Houston radio station KIKK, Drexler said it would be in Olajuwon's best interests to return to college.
"He needs the maturity. I think another year in college would really help him as a person," Drexler said.

Olajuwon refused to comment on an alleged conversation he had with a Washington, D.C., agent that might affect his status.
"As of now, all I want to talk about is my college career. I want to be an All-American," he said.
Olajuwon said money was never a factor in considering the pros.
"My parents have enough money to provide me anything I need while I'm in college. Every basketball player dreams of playing in the NBA, but it will still be there," Olajuwon told the Houston Post.
"If you look back sometimes, at all the money and everything, you might think you missed it. But I can do it again," he said.

Center Artis Gilmore (53) of the San Antonio Spurs hauls down a rebound as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) and Kurt Rambis (31) of the Los Angeles Lakers close in during first-period action Tuesday in the Western Conference NBA game. The Spurs evened the series at 1-1 with a 122-113 win. (AP Laserphoto)

San Antonio evens series

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs went quickly, and quietly, in last year's National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series. That won't be the case this year.

George Gervin scored 22 of his game-high 32 points in the second half and Artis Gilmore and Mike Mitchell came through with powerful performances Tuesday night as the Spurs whipped the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers 122-113.

The Spurs, who were beaten by the Lakers in four straight games in the Western Conference final a year ago, are even with Los Angeles 1-1 in the current best-of-seven series.

And what's more, the Spurs have taken the home-court advantage away from the Lakers. Three of the remaining five games of the series, if that many are required, will be played in San Antonio.

"They came in here and accomplished what they wanted to do," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, referring to the fact that the Spurs got a split in the two games at the Forum. "Now we have to go to San Antonio and accomplish what we want to do, which is to win one or both of the games."

"Nobody said that this was going to be easy. This is going to be a tough series, it's going to go six or seven games." The third and fourth games of the series will be played Friday night and Sunday afternoon, respectively, in San Antonio.

Gervin was sensational in the second half despite picking up his fourth foul after just 3:27 of the third quarter. It seemed to inspire him as he scored 16 points in the period, making all seven of his field goal attempts and adding a pair of free throws.

Gervin also had to contend with foul problems throughout the series opener on Sunday, which the Lakers won 119-107.

"The ball felt like a baseball tonight when I got it going," said Gervin. "The key was the overall effort of the team, not my scoring."

"We have to go home and play. We are in a position to take control."

Gilmore, limited to seven points and six rebounds while playing only 32 minutes in the opener, was a different player in the second game.

Free of the foul difficulties that plagued him throughout the first game, the 7-foot-2 San Antonio center scored 27 points, grabbed 20 rebounds and blocked five shots Tuesday night.

"Obviously, I thought the most important thing was to stay out of trouble," said Gilmore, who fouled out with 5:18 left in the first game. "I was able to get position tonight. That was the big difference."

"Artis was more committed than on Sunday," said Riley. "He wasn't inhibited by fouls. He got the ball down low and he had his game tonight."

Mitchell also had 27 points and pulled down 16 rebounds as the Spurs outrebounced the Lakers 53-47. Another key player for San Antonio was guard Johnny Moore, who had 16 points and 15 assists.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 30 points and eight rebounds in the opener, was limited to 19 points and four rebounds Tuesday night. The 7-2 Los Angeles center had just six points and one rebound in the second half.

The Lakers were led by Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Norm Nixon, who scored 28 points apiece. Johnson had a team-leading 12 rebounds while Nixon had 11 assists.

The Spurs led all the way after scoring 10 straight points to go ahead 12-2.

Texas tops Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Tanana doesn't want to be called a junkballer any more. "I'm a finesse pitcher," Tanana insisted following his 4-1-3 innings of one-hit relief in the Texas Rangers' 4-2 victory over the New York Yankees Tuesday night.

Tanana, 1-0, replaced starter Danny Darwin with two on and two out in the fourth inning and the Rangers leading 3-2. He retired Ken Griffey on a grounder back to the mound and blanked the Yankees until giving way to Odell Jones in the ninth.

"To me, that was the play of the game," said Don Zimmer, the former Texas manager who was at the helm of the Yankees as Billy Martin began a three-game suspension. "That was a great move bringing in Tanana. We were starting to hit Darwin pretty hard."

The veteran left-hander kept the Yankee batters off-stride with a wide assortment of pitches and allowed just a seventh-inning single to Jerry Mumphy. "He threw everything at us," said Zimmer. "So much garbage. But I'll tell you one thing, he knows how to pitch."

Tanana finished with two walks, three strikeouts and his first triumph since last Sept. 20. Jones hurled a perfect ninth inning for his fourth save.

"So far, I haven't had a bad game," Tanana said. "If you don't give up a run, that's the name of the game, no matter whether you roll the ball up to the plate or throw it 90 miles an hour. I know what I can do. I know I can do the job. I just hope the roller-coaster keeps going up."

Tanana, who lost his good fastball six years ago because of arm problems, compiled an 11-28 record over his last two seasons. But this year, he hasn't allowed a run in four relief outings covering 11 2-3 innings.

"I pitched darn good ball the last couple of years," said Tanana, a nine-year veteran. "I just didn't get any luck. I didn't get the hits. I didn't get the runs. That's life."

"He's going to have a heck of a year for us," said Texas Manager Doug Rader. "He knows how to change speeds well and has good location. He's a pitcher. We'll use him short, we'll use him long and he'll get some starts. He'll help us everywhere."

The Rangers scored three times in the second inning with the help of George Wright's looping RBI single. Wayne Tolleson's sacrifice fly and the first of two costly errors by New York catcher Butch Wynegar.

Dave Hostetler opened the Texas second with a walk and moved to second on Bobby Johnson's infield hit. Loser Shane Rawley, 4-2, walked Jim Sundberg to load the bases and Wright blooped a single to center, scoring Hostetler. Johnson also scored when Wynegar dropped the throw to the plate for the first of his two errors.

Senate nearing budget showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-led Senate is nearing a showdown on budget plans settling whether taxes should rise significantly next year and curbing the pace of President Reagan's proposed defense buildup.

After nearly two weeks of intensive maneuvering, the budget fight was close to a resolution today.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., was reportedly set to test rival Republican budget plans, one reluctantly supported by Reagan and another which would permit a $300 cap on this year's 10 percent income tax cut.

At issue in the budget fight is whether the sharply-rising federal deficits must be met with increased taxes, or whether the economic recovery should be allowed to continue without any additional federal revenues, despite the deficits expected to approach $200 billion for the next four or five years.

There are also fundamental disagreements over how fast U.S. strategic weapons programs must rise to offset a continuing Soviet buildup.

Sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said Baker would gamble that the partial repeal of the tax cut would fail. Under that proposal, drafted by five Republican holdouts, an additional $14 billion in new taxes would be raised next year, and defense spending would increase below what the president insists is necessary for national security.

Specifically, the five moderates would allow defense spending to go up 6 percent next year, compared with 7.5 percent urged by Republican leaders and tacitly accepted by Reagan, whose original Pentagon budget called for a 10 percent increase.

Baker hopes the defeat of the moderates' plan will force all or most of the 54 Senate Republicans to loyally fall in line behind a high-deficit, nominal tax alternative plan proposed by Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

It was not known how the 46 Senate Democrats would vote for the GOP moderates' plan, which has many elements they have supported.

Vinters seek wine import curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Undercut by a drop in the price of imported wines, California vinters want Congress to help them to win back the palates of American consumers by raising import duties.

John De Luca, president of the California Wine Institute, planned to talk today with wine producers from other states about possible legislation to submit to Congress.

Domestic winemakers say the Europeans have an unfair advantage because they get subsidies from their governments and can charge less. But opponents of further trade restrictions say it's the dollar's high value that makes foreign wines a better buy.

"A year or so ago a French exporter only got about four francs for every dollar's worth he sold," said an Agriculture Department official who asked not to be identified by name. "Now he's getting nearly seven and a half francs. So he can afford to bring the dollar price down."

"I'm buying good French wines myself now because they're cheaper," the official added.

"Don't ask for a good California wine unless you're ready to pay six or seven dollars a bottle," a Washington dealer advised. "But you can get a good foreign wine for three and a half."

The Agriculture Department official, sour on American wine producers' complaints, says the industry's request for help comes after a bad year.

U.S. production dropped to 390 million gallons last year after a series of rapid increases to a peak of 391 million gallons in 1981. Imports increased from 115 million gallons to 122 million gallons.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., Tuesday asked the Agriculture Department to investigate what he called unfair European wine-growing subsidies and recommend a way to stop them.

At a Capitol Hill meeting with De Luca, Wilson proposed an extra "countervailing" duty to raise the price of imported wine by the amount of the foreign subsidy.

De Luca suggested a turnabout strategy in which European governments would be asked to import American wines on the same liberal terms that they export to the United States. Under the plan, the United States would limit wine imports if the foreign country refused.

Italy, France, West Germany and Greece do the most business with the United States. The Common Market helps its wine growers mainly by paying part of their storage costs, then buying up surplus wine and distilling it into alcohol to get it off the market.

Use of macaws for research defended

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The use of 130 imported Bolivian parrots in a research project could ultimately benefit the health of exotic birds in captivity and in the wild, the president of Texas A&M says.

The project has been criticized by the National Audubon Society and other conservation groups which are trying to have it stopped.

But A&M President Frank Vandiver defended the project Tuesday.

"If we do not defend this basic research — mainly dealing with reproduction and nutritional needs — we face the continuing loss of captured macaws which tragically increase the demand for more and more birds," Vandiver said.

A&M is cooperating in a privately funded research project involving about 130 macaws. The project is being undertaken by the university's college of veterinary medicine, along with a Bolivian university — the Universidad Boliviana Gabriel Rene Moreno — and G.T. McAlpin, a South Texas oilman and rancher from Cuero who houses the birds on private land near the A&M campus.

McAlpin pays for importing and keeping the birds and gave Texas A&M $5,000 for administrative costs.

Vandiver emphasized the project would never involve more than 300 macaws and that reports are untrue that 3,000 birds would be imported, the president said.

"The fundamental purpose of our research is to stop the continuing drain on a precious resource, the wild bird population. Of course, we hope our research will also give us the information to aid the growth of macaws in the wild," he said.

Critics say their chief concerns are the large number of macaws to be imported in the project, especially given the high mortality rate of the birds during capture and transit.

Name in the news

LONDON (AP) — Despite two miscarriages, actress Liza Minelli says she is perfectly healthy and still hoping to have a child.

At a news conference in London, where she's about to open in a salute to her film director father, Vincente Minelli, Miss Minelli, 37, said she and husband Mark Gero, a sculptor and producer, want to try again soon.

"Last year, the doctors found out what was wrong with me and told me there was no reason why I should not have children," said Miss Minelli, daughter of the late singer Judy Garland. "But I will have to get on with it."

"I love children and first I would like one of my own. Then I would like to adopt."

Miss Minelli is giving 19 performances at London's Apollo Victoria theater before taking it to Broadway. She performs hit songs from her father's most famous films, including "Gigi" and "An American in Paris."

"My father was 80 this year and I want to pay a special tribute to him," she told reporters.

"Momma was just like anyone else's mother except that whatever she did got into the papers. But my father was much more of a dreamer. He used to tell me that anything was possible. He said I could do anything I wanted to."

"He trusted me. Momma, on the other hand, would say, 'But you haven't finished school,' when I talked about wanting to become a dancer."

MIAMI (AP) — A tanned Prince Charles and Princess Diana waved to onlookers as they stepped off a private jet at Miami International Airport after a 10-day holiday in the Bahamas.

The royal couple shook hands with bystanders briefly Tuesday night before boarding a British Airways flight back to London.

About 30 reporters and onlookers crowded the edge of an airport sun roof to take pictures or catch a glimpse of Charles, in a gray pin-striped suit, and Diana, in a bright yellow dress with a ruffled neckline and ruffled sleeves.

The rest of the passengers on Flight 295, many of whom didn't know the heir to the British throne would be flying with them, had boarded the airplane earlier from a door on the other side of the plane.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Actor Jamie Farr, who played Cpl. Klinger in M-A-S-H and whose father was a Toledo grocer and meat cutter, returns to this city next week to receive an honorary degree.

He will be given an honorary doctorate in performing arts from the University of Toledo at an honors day convocation May 18.

Farr, 46, has a bachelor's degree in film from Columbia College in Los Angeles.

U.S. buildup has dual goal, lasting effects

EDITOR'S NOTE — Technology swiftly changes the nature of nuclear warfare and complicates the job of arms controllers. This, the second of a five-part series, takes a look at the massive Reagan military build-up, its rationale and ramifications.

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up and down the honeycomb corridors of the Pentagon, men and women are busy planning for the war they hope will never come.

In the 27 months of the Reagan presidency, the United States has embarked on the biggest peacetime military buildup in its history.

The program, heavy with new missiles, submarines and bombers for the nuclear force, would cost $1.5 trillion over five years. It has a dual goal: meeting what is seen as a dangerous Soviet military challenge, and giving the United States "leverage" to use on the Soviet Union at the arms-control bargaining table.

Some U.S. strategists contend their counterparts in Moscow believe the Soviet Union can fight and win a nuclear war.

"People just don't understand, from a strategic-targeting point of view, how very powerful their land-based missile force is," said Ronald F. Lehman, a deputy assistant defense secretary who is among those chiefly responsible for U.S. strategic policy.

In two decades of rapid military growth, the Soviet Union has drawn even with the United States — and some say passed it — in strategic nuclear power.

The newest, "fourth-generation" Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles are about as accurate as the best the Americans have — the Minuteman III. And the huge Soviet SS-18's 10 warheads are packed with five times the Minuteman's nuclear devastation — at least five megatons, the equivalent of 5 million tons of TNT.

But to the war "scenarists" in the Kremlin, U.S. capabilities may be just as intimidating.

The Soviets stack most of the nuclear chips on land-based missiles. But the United States has built a versatile, balanced nuclear arsenal, a "triad" of land-based ICBMs, submarine-launched missiles and heavy long-range bombers.

The U.S. Air Force has 1,051 intercontinental missiles, with up to 2,151 warheads, in silos across mid-America, and 316 B-52 bombers, with 2,570 warheads. The Navy has 34 submarines equipped with missiles holding 4,960 warheads.

On the Soviet side, the Strategic Rocket Forces field 1,398 land-based missiles capable of delivering 5,678 warheads. The Soviet air force has 145 aged bombers with only 290 warheads, and the navy has 84 missile subs with 2,813 warheads.

"On balance," President Reagan concluded last year, "the Soviet Union does have a definite margin of superiority."

Many specialists disagree, saying "superiority" is a meaningless word when each side stocks enough warheads to annihilate the other several times over.

But those whose job it is to ponder such things — the "nuclear war priesthood," as they have been called — are concerned about one frailty in the U.S. armor: the potential for a Soviet "first strike."

"The Soviet Union has enough missiles, with enough warheads, with enough yield, with enough accuracy, to destroy our Minuteman missiles in their silos," was how Lehman summed up the problem in an interview.

The theory is that the Soviets' preponderance in land-based missiles, with up to 10 warheads each, gives them a unique edge:

would destroy U.S. cities. Surrender would halt the lethal escalation after the first step.

Many analysts say the Soviet leadership would never risk a first strike. But the theoretical potential remains, and the Reagan administration is grappling with the quandary in two ways, at the negotiating table and in the military budget.

In the Geneva negotiations, the opening U.S. proposal would slash the Soviet advantage in land-based missiles. It calls for reducing both sides' missile-launched warheads by about one-third to 5,000, and for setting a limit of 2,500 on the number of land-based warheads.

A key reason the U.S. Senate did not ratify the last U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation agreement — the SALT II treaty of 1979 — was that it did little about the Soviet numerical edge in land-based warheads.

While the diplomats work on a "build-down," the Pentagon planners press ahead with the buildup — the new intercontinental B-1 bomber, new nuclear-powered aircraft carriers and two new-generation missiles, the land-based MX and the submarine-launched Trident II.

The MX, on the drawing board for a decade, will be the world's deadliest ICBM — 10 warheads carrying the equivalent of the SS-18's megatonnage but with twice the accuracy. The Trident II will be accurate enough to make it the first "silo-busting" submarine missile, capable of dead-eye strikes against enemy missile bases.

Such technological leaps have outstripped the traditional nuclear strategy of "MAD" — "mutual assured destruction," the stalemate supposedly achieved by each superpower's knowledge that attacking the other would invite reciprocal catastrophe.
