'I thought I'd been hit by a tornado'

Man swerves to avoid car and plows into the side of a home in Pampa

By ANTHONY RANDES
Editor

When the crashing and tearing sounds began, they woke Mrs. L.G. Pierce out of a sound sleep. She turned on the light, took one look in the living room, and thought her home had been hit by a tornado.

But it had been hit by a pickup truck. "I looked in there and saw all my beautiful things just smashed," she said. "Some of them can never be replaced."

The accident happened at 12:15 a.m. Saturday when Thomas Florer was driving east on Kingsmill.

Florer, 30, of 721 Deane Drive, told the Pampa News, "I rounded the curve in the road and looked up, and here came a car in my lane, heading straight toward me. I swerved to avoid him, then looked back to see if I could recognize the car. When I looked back, I was headed straight for a tree and swerved again."

The tree was one of a pair in the front yard of Helen Hopp, at 835 Kingsmill.

Florer's truck shot between the trees and sheered off a porch support on Hopp's house, then went through two driveways and struck Mrs. Pierce's home at 837 Kingsmill about midway between front and back. The damage to the home was immense.

One wall was pushed off the foundation, and an inside wall connecting the living room and the kitchen was ruined. Many appliances in the kitchen were damaged or destroyed, along with most of the living room furniture.

Draperies were flung over shattered furniture, and shards of glass and china covered the floor between the mounds of debris.

One hutch that held Mrs. Pierce's $2,000 collection of crystal was directly in the path of the truck and few items were still intact. Also on that hutch, however, was Pierce's collection of china bells she had accumulated over a lifetime.

She picked carefully through the debris two hours later trying to find some of these family heirlooms intact, and each disappointment brought some tears to her eyes.

At the crash, Mrs. Pierce ran next door to a neighbor's, thinking Pampa had been hit by a tornado. Some lightning and thunder earlier in the evening made this possibility fresh in her mind. Neighbors came over to help pull out the truck, make her comfortable, and straighten what furniture was left in the house.

After the truck was pulled from the side of the house, neighbors worked for several hours nailing plywood over the large hole in its side. Florer's truck was towed away.

Florer miraculously escaped serious injury in the accident, but left at 2:30 a.m. to see his doctor.

Mrs. L.G. Pierce (above) digs through the rubble that used to be her living room and finds a treasured keepsake of her 50th wedding anniversary. Her quiet home on Kingsmill was shattered early Saturday morning when a pickup truck (left) left the roadway and smashed into her home. She was asleep in another room when the accident occurred and wasn't injured. (Staff photos by Anthony Randles)

Chamber changes meeting place

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce has changed its meeting place. The membership luncheon will be held in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn Tuesday. It was previously scheduled for the Pampa Country Club. Edward Pearl of the Phillips Chemical Company will speak on deregulation of natural gas.

weather

Partly cloudy and warm for the Memorial Day weekend, with a chance of thunderstorms today and Monday. Today's high should be in the low 80s, with southwesterly winds 10 to 20 mph, and tonight's low in the mid-50s. Monday should be slightly cooler, with a chance of isolated thunderstorms. The thermometer reached 88 in Pampa Friday afternoon, and the city received a trace of moisture by Saturday morning.

Blockers of brucellosis bill got bad advice

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate sponsor of a bill that apparently would head off a federal quarantine of Texas cattle says some of his colleagues got bad advice from former Gov. Dolph Briscoe in blocking passage of the bill.

The Senate refused by a single vote Friday to debate a bill that might forestall the government's threat to prohibit Texas from shipping its cattle out of state as of next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a federal attorney moved to shift the issue from state to federal court in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and a group of ranchers prepared to file suit in Austin federal court to stop the quarantine.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, sponsor of a brucellosis control measure, needed 21 votes to get his bill before the Senate for final passage, but he got only 20.

Brucellosis causes weight loss and miscarriages in cattle but poses no danger to consumers of meat and pasteurized dairy products. It can, however, be transmitted to slaughter plant workers and others in contact with infected animals or their freshly killed carcasses.

Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said Briscoe had blocked the brucellosis proposal by convincing several senators that the quarantine would have very little economic impact on Texas.

"Briscoe's opposed to the bill because it's inconvenient on him," Glasgow said, but refusal to pass the bill "kills the rest of the cattle industry in the state of Texas."

The Texas Farm Bureau estimated the quarantine could reduce cattle income in Texas by up to $130 million a year.

"We can't take all the milk that's produced in Texas and drink that milk in Texas, and we can't take all the beef that's produced in Texas inside the state of Texas — that's going to drive the price of beef in Texas down to nothing," Glasgow said.

He said Briscoe had put out a news release saying he opposed the bill on principle. "It's real easy for a guy to stand by his principles when he is a multi-millionaire," Glasgow said.

Briscoe, who lost a re-election bid in 1978, is known as one of the largest, if not the largest landowner in Texas. He is said to be interested in running for the U.S. Senate next year. "I think the other senators were listening to Dolph Briscoe, and Dolph Briscoe was telling them we're not going to have a quarantine, but Dolph Briscoe was wrong," Glasgow said.

He predicted Gov. Mark White would have to call a special legislative session to pass a brucellosis bill after the regular session ends at midnight Monday.

"The members (of the Senate) are going to come back and find out that Dolph Briscoe, when he says there is no financial impact, is absolutely wrong, and the heat's about to come from everywhere about this bill," Glasgow said.

His bill would give the Texas Animal Health Commission authority to adopt rules to comply with the federal program of testing and vaccinations. Steers and spayed heifers more than six months old would be exempt.

Under the quarantine, breeding cattle could be shipped out of Texas only from "qualified herds" that have passed two tests for brucellosis.

Sen. John Traeger, who led the opposition to Glasgow's bill, was asked if he thought the federal government would follow through on the quarantine, and he said, "Oh, they probably will. They did a couple of years ago before they cut and run. I can't believe it will be long-lived or sustained."

Asked how the Senate vote should be interpreted, Traeger, D-Seguin, said, "I think it shows Texas is not going to be bulldozed or hoodwinked by the federal government."

Although the Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas obtained an order from State District Judge John Dominguez in Edinburg on Thursday to stop the federal government temporarily from enforcing its quarantine, attorney William Jensen of the U.S. Department of Agriculture said, "As far as we're concerned the (state court) order is ineffective," Jensen said.

Kahl's son is guilty

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — The son of fugitive militant tax protester Gordon Kahl and another man were found guilty Saturday on two counts of second-degree murder in the shootings of two U.S. marshals.

Yorie Kahl and Scott Faul were convicted in the February shooting deaths of the two marshals near Medina, N.D.

The jury found Joan Kahl, Gordon Kahl's wife, not guilty on two counts, and found a fourth defendant, David Broer, guilty on two of nine charges.

Marvin Maloney, assistant U.S. district attorney in Brownsville, said he had filed a petition to remove the case from state court and place it in federal court. He also said he had filed a motion to set aside the temporary restraining order.

Maloney said he is sure his motion will be approved because "it's very clear the federal court has jurisdiction and that the state court does not."

For that reason, a spokesman said today, the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association was preparing a lawsuit to be filed in an Austin federal court Tuesday.

The group plans "to explore every legal avenue to stop the quarantine," said TSCRA president Frates Selligson.

The association also called on White to call a special session of the Legislature to deal with the problem.

New Mexico's 'bootheel' is haven for cutthroats from borderlands

By STEVE BREWER

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Weldon and Betty Grabe led a quiet life on their farm in southern New Mexico, near the Mexican border.

Mrs. Grabe was a Spanish teacher in Animas. Grabe sometimes hired people who were passing through to help out on the farm.

It was two such employees who gunned down the Grabes in 1980. The killers took Grabe's truck and fled into Mexico. Hidalgo County Sheriff William Darnell said.

The resulting investigation showed the serious problems confronting authorities on both sides of the international boundary in dealing with border crime — and planted the seeds for a working relationship that may ease some of those problems.

No one has been prosecuted for the Grabes' deaths, Darnell said. Instead, investigators found themselves blocked by red tape, international treaties and a virtually impossible extradition system.

But through his investigation, which included 2½ months of tracking in Mexico, Darnell made contact with Mexican police officials who were as concerned as he was about the invisible wall the border presents to law enforcement.

"We formed this friendship," he said. "Now, we're talking one department to another, one officer to another."

The border area of the New Mexican bootheel is a vast desert honeycombed with dirt roads that are impossible for one department to cover, said Capt. Daniel Garcia of the Grant County Sheriff's Department. He described the area as "miles and miles of nothing."

It is a pipeline for drug smugglers, illegal aliens and thieves from both sides who count on the protection of the border to keep from getting caught.

Aside from the homicides, the worst problem on the U.S. side of the border is with the thefts of vehicles and other goods from isolated ranches in the bootheel, Darnell said.

"We have a lot of problems with people from Mexico coming up here and stealing things and going back down to Mexico," Garcia said. "Nobody ever sees them again."

The Mexicans face similar problems with Americans, Garcia said, particularly those who run guns into Mexico in exchange for narcotics.

For both sides, the problem always is extradition. Even when officers are able to track down the criminals, the border often prevents them from bringing them to justice.

There is no real extradition procedure between Mexico and the United States, like that among U.S. states. To seek the return of a criminal, officials must go through time-consuming and labyrinthine diplomatic channels, where there are frequently more important issues taking up ambassadors' time.

"If you try to go through channels, by golly, you just don't get anywhere," Garcia said.

Confessed Hitler forger is jailed

By TAMARA JONES

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The confessed Hitler diary forger is accusing the reporter who bought the journals for Stern magazine of "providing the paper the diaries were written on," the journalist's attorney says.

Nazi trinkets dealer Konrad Kujau and reporter Gerd Heidemann were jailed on suspicion of fraud Friday in what has emerged as one of the greatest literary hoaxes this century.

Kujau admitted "he had written the forged Hitler diaries himself and that Heidemann allegedly knew they were fakes when he bought them for Stern magazine," said Hamburg state prosecutor's spokesman Peter Beck.

Heidemann's attorney, Egon Geis, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Friday night that Kujau accused his client of "providing the forgery materials." He said Kujau alleged that Heidemann "provided the paper the diaries were written on. He also alleged that Mr. Heidemann later helped put the (Nazi) seal on the books."

Heidemann denied the charges and "sticks to his previous account" of his role in the affair, his attorney said. Heidemann has maintained from the beginning that he was the victim — not the perpetrator — of the $3.75 million swindle.

The Federal Archives exposed the 62 volumes of Adolf Hitler's purported diaries as "obvious fakes" on May 6, saying tests of three books proved the paper, glue and other materials were manufactured after World War II.

Heidemann was arrested immediately after Kujau's confession Thursday night and questioned all day Friday, the prosecutor's spokesman said.

Stern publisher Henri Nannen issued a brief statement Friday predicting that the arrest of Heidemann would "lead to a complete explanation of the fraud."

The popular newsweekly has yet to recover any of the cash it paid for what it trumpeted as "the journalistic scoop of the post-war period."

Stern published two installments from the diaries before they were exposed as phonies. The magazine fired Heidemann after declaring that he "possibly enriched himself" through the swindle.

Kujau's attorney, Rolf Schmidt-Diemitz, was not in his Stuttgart office Friday and his secretary said she did not know where to reach him. He has not returned any of the AP's repeated telephone calls since Kujau surrendered to authorities May 14.

In Brief

NEW YORK — One hot Sunday last August, Stanford Moore, a Nobel Prize-winning scientist, lifted the cap on a bottle of barbiturates and swallowed too many. His colleagues were surprised, but they understood. In Moore's world, things either worked or they didn't. At age 68, Moore was dying of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis — Lou Gehrig's Disease.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — President Reagan welcomes his summit partners to historic Williamsburg and plans private meetings with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and French President Francois Mitterrand on the eve of the economic conference of the major industrialized democracies.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — A Soviet threat to deploy new nuclear missiles in Eastern Europe could strengthen the resolve of allies, whose leaders are at the economic summit, to stand by the United States.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syria ends several days of military maneuvers which triggered a state of alert by the Israeli and Syrian troops in Lebanon and an exchange of tough words between Tel Aviv and Damascus.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — The mischievous, warm winds of El Nino, which already caused a drought in Australia and torrential rains in Peru, may meddle next with the summer hurricanes. The Atlantic hurricane season officially starts Wednesday, with forecasters predicting a delay in the appearance of the heaviest storms.

SALT LAKE CITY — A major downtown highway becomes a giant spillway as flood-control officials send water down the dammed-up street to relieve pressure from a swollen reservoir. Meanwhile, 200 nursing home residents are evacuated in Bountiful, and communities throughout the state are plagued by mudslides.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Weldon and Betty Grabe led a quiet life on their farm in southern New Mexico near the Mexican border. But then two men Grabe had hired gunned down the couple — and fled to Mexico. After justice got bogged down in red tape and extradition delays, law enforcement officers on both sides of the border began developing a new kind of relationship that's helping keep track of criminals.

Sarpalius filibusters farm bill

By KATHRYN BAKER

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Bill Sarpalius filibustered for almost nine hours against an agricultural workers' compensation bill he said would ruin farmers in his Panhandle district before giving up early today and letting Senators tentatively pass the measure.

Sarpalius, D-Herford, began his filibuster at 4:14 p.m. Friday.

At 12:55 a.m., Sarpalius told his colleagues who had returned to the floor that he was giving up but would again speak in opposition to the measure when it came up for final passage.

"I'm certainly willing to talk a whole lot longer, but I don't think that's fair to you, and I don't think that's fair to the state of Texas," Sarpalius said.

The Senate voted 16-11 for the bill.

Sarpalius, dressed in a blue suit and tennis shoes, had lectured to an almost empty chamber all evening, except when one of two other Senators would pay a visit to the floor and help take up the time by asking him to yield for questions.

The 35-year-old senator had told his colleagues he would talk "throughout the night or however long the good Lord will let my legs stand."

Sarpalius maintained the bill would cost economically depressed farmers too much money.

"I'm going to get you some cough drops because you sound like you need them," Sarpalius was told five hours into his filibuster by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. Parker had returned to the floor to help Sarpalius by taking over the speech-making.

"I got paid a hundred dollars to come liven up your filibuster. I heard it was dull," Parker joked.

Sarpalius also got some help from one of the House clerks who routinely interrupt Senate debate to read the Senate lists of bills passed by the House. Sarpalius could sit down while the messenger read the list.

"The Senator who has the floor would like you to read slowly. I'm not sure why," said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texas, who was presiding.

The clerk complied, carefully enunciating all the bill numbers and descriptions of the legislation until Uribe good-naturedly but literally leaned on him to speed it up.

U.S. 83 may become the Vietnam Highway

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature passed a bill Saturday that would designate U.S. 83, stretching from Brownsville through the Panhandle, as the Texas Vietnam Veterans Memorial Highway.

The Senate passed the House-approved measure 30-1 and sent it to the governor to be signed into law.

Senator sponsor Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said the memorial was particularly appropriate "in view of the lack of recognition given to Vietnam veterans."

Crews work feverishly to save downtown Salt Lake from floods

By KEVIN McCULLEN

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Crews hastened to turn a four-lane downtown thoroughfare into a canal today to control flooding from a reservoir swollen with late spring snow melting under unseasonably high temperatures.

Communities throughout the state were plagued by mudslides, formed when melting snow soaked into clayey soil, and by floods unleashed from streams swollen with water or choked with mud.

As cities across northern Utah coped with flooding, volunteers in Salt Lake City joined city and county crews in building a 6-foot-high dike of plastic and sandbags along two miles of the major artery, 1300 South Street.

Engineers hoped the controlled release of water from Mountain Dell Reservoir through the makeshift canal and into the Jordan River would keep the reservoir from overflowing and rushing unchecked into the city's residential areas. The reservoir was expected to reach its capacity sometime today.

At Haines, Salt Lake City's chief administrative officer, said water was to be released today in 25 cubic foot increments to test the channel's stability. If no leaks developed in the dike, up to 4 feet of water was expected to flow down the street, he said.

"We're going to have a tough week to 10 days before this is over," Gov. Scott Matheson said Friday as he released available state employees to fill sandbags in Salt Lake City or lend a hand to flood crews working elsewhere.

He also urged citizens to volunteer. The National Weather Service predicted smaller streams and creeks would crest statewide within the next 10 days, with larger streams reaching their peak by mid-June.

In Jackson, Miss., officials made plans for a full-scale cleanup as the troublesome Pearl River continued to retreat from its crest of 9.6 feet above flood stage earlier in the week. Touring the area with two congressional colleagues Friday, U.S. Rep. G.V. Montgomery, a Democrat, told state leaders they should draw up plans for flood-control projects and seek federal aid "while the skillet is hot in Washington."

At Vicksburg, Miss., the Mississippi River was predicted headed for a crest today after forcing about 1,200 residents to evacuate.

With an estimated 10,000 Mississippians driven from their homes and about 1.25 million acres flooded, Gov. William Winter has asked President Reagan to declare two dozen counties disaster areas. Total damage has been estimated at $80 million.

Near Redstone, Colo., authorities kept an overnight vigil near a mudslide that blocked Coal Creek on Friday, backing water up behind an earthen dam and forcing temporary evacuation of families from the valley below.

"Mr. Robert Parrish, Magna Cum Laude, will please step forward... I now present you with your Bachelor of Arts degree."

"Thank you, sir."
(Applause from graduating class of Millard Fillmore University.)

"Mr. Parrish, may I have a word with you?"

"I don't believe I know you."

"I'm from the First National Thomas Jefferson Bank. According to our records you borrowed $25,890 to complete your education at 17 percent interest. We were wondering when you were going to start paying us back."

"I haven't even taken off my robe yet. Can't we talk about this tomorrow?"

"We don't know where we'll find you tomorrow. That's why the bank is now sending our people to graduations. We thought we could work out a schedule of payments. Do you have a job, Mr. Parrish?"

"No, I don't have a job."

"What kind of a position were you planning to look for?"

"I'm going to be a social worker."

"Are you trying to tell me that you believe you can pay back $25,890 plus 17 percent interest on a social worker's salary?"

"That's what I studied for. I always wanted to do something to help my fellow men and women."

"The bank considers it out of the question. It would take you 20 years to pay back your student loan."

"But the country needs social workers. There are a lot of people out there hurting and in trouble. I know the pay is lousy but there are other things in life besides making a lot of money."

"I am sure there is a need for your profession. But why not let the people who don't owe student loans pursue it?"

"What do you want me to do?"

"Join a large corporation. I'm certain with your scholastic record you could be earning $75,000 a year in no time."

"I don't want to work for a large corporation. If I did I would have gone to business school."

"If you knew you were going to be a social worker why did you apply for a student loan?"

"Because I couldn't afford to go to college without one. No one asked me when I applied for the money what I intended to be when I graduated."

"We assumed that you would go into something that paid well, so you could honor your loan. It was your duty to level with us, so we would know from the start you were a bad risk."

"Well, it's too late now. I spent the money on my education and I'm going to devote my life to social work. I'll pay you back when I can."

"I think you ought to know, Mr. Parrish, that student loans are guaranteed by the U.S. government and they are taking a very harsh view of people who are not making good on them."

"What you're saying is the government is only interested in students who are going to make enough money to pay back their loans? What happens to the kids who want to be teachers and nurses, or work in the inner cities? America needs them, too."

"Possibly, but that isn't our concern, is it? We loaned you the money in good faith. If I go back to the bank and tell them that you're going into social work, we'll have to report it to Washington, and the next thing you know, you will be dealing with the FBI. Please, for your sake, reconsider what you want to do for a living. I understand, if you play your cards right, you can rise very fast in the telephone company."

"No dice. The bank is stuck with a social worker whether you people like it or not."

"If that's your last word, Mr. Parrish, you'll have to excuse me. I see a graduate over there who owes us $24,000 and wants to become a church minister. That's the last straw."

We're people, too..just like everyone else'

We're people, too

David and I and our friends want to thank you for the article and pictures that were printed in Sunday's paper.

The article couldn't have been written any better. The pictures and the article showed that we are people with feelings too, like everyone else. We enjoyed it very much.

Thank you.

Community unity

We would like to thank you for your fine article in Wednesday's paper and the editorial.

The girls are glad to be having something to do. They are really having fun. When they took the Youth Center and made a Senior Citizens' Center out of it, it took everything away from them. Some mothers and concerned citizens about the youth on the Southside started with nothing and turned it to something big.

I personally wish that the adults could take an example from these girls and come together and form some unity in this community. We need so much on the Southside. The place where the old smelter used to be is grass. It is full of junk and weeds and is a health hazard.

The city ordinance states that you should keep property up. Is that just in some parts of the city?

We really appreciate your publicity and the concern you're showing.

Fund drive

We would like to start a fund drive for Christopher Garcia, who is a patient in Lubbock General Hospital Burn Center who received second and third degree burns over 20 percent of his body. I'm his grandmother from out of state and the case worker said you could help us.

They are staying in Lubbock and you could get more information from the Hospital.

Could you please see about setting some cans in the banks for this fund drive?

Honest folks

Saturday, May 21st, I had made a purchase at Safeway, for $1.77, $2.19 and 83 cents. I went through the express lane. They were real busy. I paid for my groceries with a one hundred dollar bill. Then I discovered in the morning that I was only given change for a $50.

I contacted the manager on Monday. I explained what had happened. I then asked if they had come out long on the register. Mr. Harris, the Safeway Manager, said they had come out 50 dollars long and he then returned my money.

It's nice to know there are some nice and honest people in business. Thank heavens for people like Mr. Harris.

"I probably entered the priesthood for all the wrong reasons," says Father Joseph Stabile, pastor of Pampa's St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church.

Stabile is young, good-looking, muscular, with dark hair and dark eyes. He likes horses, roping, dancing and washing cars on hot afternoons. Not exactly the image of a priest as they are often portrayed at the movies.

But, going back to his first statement, Stabile explains that as a six-year-old in Houston he noticed the priest of his home parish drove a Lincoln Continental and his assistant drove a Corvette. Added to that was the respect the priests received and the awe they inspired in their parishioners.

"In those days, priests were held off in awe," he says. "Nobody thought we were human."

There was a certain amount of dignity and respect that priests had that appealed to me in that kind of a role as a leader," he says.

Stabile also was impressed by the solemn, Latin masses. "I've always had a flair for the dramatic and solemn. I think those things appealed to me then."

"I can't remember ever wanting to be a doctor or a lawyer or a businessman. I always wanted to be a priest," he says.

He entered seminary when he was 13 years old, swayed toward the Vincentian fathers community because, "they seem to have more fun." The Vincentians invited the young Stabile to bowling, swimming and horseback riding events. Another group of fathers recruited by having the boys come to their house for clean-up and packing medical supplies for missions.

"Obviously, entering the seminary made a tremendous difference," he says, "because all the years that I studied helped me to understand what the priesthood is all about."

Stabile entered a local high school seminary, spent four years in college, and finally four years in theology school. He holds a masters degree in theology and the equivalent of a master's degree in Spanish from a university in Mexico City.

Although he spent 13 years studying for the priesthood, Stabile says he was still asking himself the day he was ordained if he was making the right decision. He had every reason to decide not to become a priest.

Stabile was the last boy carrying his family name, the one son of four children.

Of the seven who joined the Vincentian community with Stabile that year, everyone said he would be the first one to leave. "Everyone said Joe likes girls too much, he likes dancing too much. There's no way Joe would stay in the seminary. Well, Joe was the only one out of the seven who made it," he adds with a smile.

He spent the first nine years of his priesthood as a dean of students for a high school seminary in Beaumont. Later he traveled extensively recruiting young men for the Vincentian community. Just before coming to Pampa, he was associate pastor for Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Dallas where his parents live.

Stabile's choice for his next assignment was Pampa. He could either go to Pampa or to Long Beach, Miss.

"What sold me on Pampa was my love for cowboy life and for the country. Also, I had developed friends in the Panhandle area — Canadian and White Deer — while I was recruiting for the community. And I had preached some missions (like a revival) in Borger, Panhandle and White Deer," he explains. He now serves as pastor for both Pampa's Catholic Church and Canadian's Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Only human

When a new priest comes in there's always an adjustment for the parish.

"I think I've been a change from what they're used to," Stabile explains. "Some people like the change and some people have a difficult time adjusting to the change. There are some who will not like me. But they've been good for me."

The role of a priest has not changed since Stabile first decided he would become one, but the way people look at the role of a priest has changed, he says. Laymen are more important and take a more active part in church activities, which is how Stabile feels it should be.

"I'm sure there are better administrators in the parish than I am. I would have no problem with them doing it. Because I'm priest does not mean I'm necessarily the best person to administer," he says.

"I think that's what we thought in church for so many years — that 'Father' had all the answers and 'Father' was always right. I don't think that."

"I'm certainly not always right. I certainly don't always meet each situation with the best solutions or with the best possible approach. I try, but because I'm human I fail, sometimes miserably."

Sometimes a priest needs to "get off his high" horse, Stabile says. "I find in so many experiences when the people of my parish actually minister to me, support me, nourish my faith and encourage me in that way."

You can't go home again... not in alligator shoes

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tourists, beware! Those gorgeous, ridiculously cheap alligator shoes, fur stoles or ivory figurines in foreign stores may be a total waste of cash — not because they're fake, but because they're real.

"Look at these," said Beverly Buisson, holding an elegant pair of turtle-skin high-heels and matching purse. "I took them from a woman at New Orleans International Airport just the other day."

"Naturally she was furious. I would have been too. She paid close to $200 for them in Mexico."

But all sea turtles are endangered species, and it's illegal to bring sea-turtle products into this country.

Or products made from any other endangered species — ivory from Indian elephants, alligators caught illegally, jaguar-skin rugs or coats.

All the big cats are endangered species, for that matter.

Confiscated items made from these animals fill a large room at a federal building in Slidell where the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has offices.

There are skins and shells, stuffed turtles, ivory tusks, whale teeth, stuffed birds, belts, rugs, coats, bracelets, combs, brushes and wall decorations.

"There are about 300 items here," said Ms. Buisson. "This represents the past two to three weeks' work at the airports and wharves."

Some have been confiscated by U.S. Customs officers so Ms. Buisson can decide if they are illegal imports. If they're not, she said, they're returned by certified mail.

"The first thing that gets thrown at us is, 'Why didn't you tell us? Who's going to pay for it?'" said Ms. Buisson. "If it is permitted, they get it back."

And as for why weren't they told, she said, it's not because nobody tried.

Fish & Wildlife, Customs, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Marine Fisheries Service all have information they'll send to anyone who asks for it.

"Our main objective is to protect the animals, and to try to educate people as far as importing and exporting of endangered species," Ms. Buisson said.

"It's not that we enjoy seizing things from people. We really want to stop killing of these animals."

"I you have no sale for something, why kill it? If you continue to have an outlet, naturally you're going to try to kill them."

Newspaper loses closed-door suit

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A civil court jury has ruled the El Paso Times and two of its employees waived the right to complain about a closed meeting of the Civil Service Commission by not protesting immediately.

Ten of the 12 jurors agreed Wednesday that the newspaper, former Editor Barclay Jameson and reporter Susan Ihne lost their privilege to protest the closing to the public of a Sept. 25, 1979, meeting of the city's Civil Service Commission.

The commission had met in a 50-minute, closed session to consider and vote to dismiss charges filed by former Mayor Tom Westfall against city Personnel Director Sam Navarro.

The next morning, an article in The Times stated the commission apparently violated the Texas Open Meetings Act by voting in closed session.

SAVE 20% ON A GAS GRILL

Changes needed in Federal Crop Insurance

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Accounting Office investigators say that the 45-year-old Federal Crop Insurance Corp. needs to make significant changes soon if it expects to provide subsidized protection to the nation's farmers at reasonable costs.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., says that if something isn't done, the corporation will soon be broke.

Congress overhauled the program in 1980, allowing the Agriculture Department agency to expand coverage rapidly to additional crops and to virtually every county. It also allowed the private sector to handle the sales and servicing of policies.

But the GAO, an investigative agency of Congress, said Thursday that the corporation "did not make all the evaluations needed to assure that it was taking the appropriate action" when it expanded operations after the 1980 act.

"It did not resolve, for example, longstanding questions regarding its actuarial procedures," said Brian P. Crowley of GAO's resources, community and economic development division. "We believe some of the changes FCIC instituted will have a significant impact on the program's future costs."

Therefore, he told a House Government Operations subcommittee, "It will be several years before a cost-effective insurance program can be provided" to farmers.

Crowley said in his statement that GAO is still analyzing the insurance program and will be coming up with recommendations for improvements.

But, on the basis of preliminary findings, he said, the corporation should make a number of changes, including adjustments needed to improve actuarial soundness — bringing premiums in line with risks, for example.

Until the 1980 overhaul, the corporation sold crop insurance on specified crops only in certain areas. All the sales and servicing were handled by the agency itself. Now, the agency has switched its sales and servicing to the private sector while providing premium subsidies to farmers and re-insurance to private companies.

Merritt W. Sprague, manager of the corporation, told the subcommittee that the program provides "the best all-risk protection system available for the nation's farmers." He acknowledged, however, that there is room for improvement and that progress is being made.

"In order to improve the corporation's overall operation," Sprague said, "we must have stability. To open crop insurance up now to unnecessary changes would be disastrous to the American farmer, because it would create additional delays which would only result in further damaging our fragile agricultural system."

Sprague said that the corporation "must have sufficient time" to put its improvements into effect.

For Horticulture

HORTICULTURAL ACTIVITIES

If you haven't gotten a lot of your garden planted already, now is certainly the time to plant beans, peas, cucumbers, summer squash, muskmelon and watermelons. Also, you want to sow lettuce seed every two to three weeks to keep salad greens coming along. Use heat tolerant varieties such as Buttercrunch, Ruby, Salad Bowl and Tendersweet. If possible, plant lettuce on east side of a fence to avoid excessive heat.

FLOWERS FOR SUMMER COLOR

If you've waited until now to get your flower bed planted or if early spring flowers are beginning to fade it's not too late to plant. The following are some of the flowers that you can still plant which will perform well in hot weather.

Lantana — for an extra hot, dry place try Lantana. They come in many beautiful color variations: yellow with orange, white, the old-fashioned lavender and many others. Small plants planted now will quickly grow into ground cover. Space plants 12-18 inches apart and by mid-summer you'll have a riot of color. Lantana is another good plant for a hanging basket in the sun.

Zinnia — have guaranteed summer heat tolerance and ability to grow under adverse conditions. The summer garden is not complete without a colorful mass of this old favorite. Even though Zinnias have been around for many summers, there are many new and improved varieties of vivid colors and durability. Zinnia blooms now range in size from tiny border hybrids to giant Dahlia-flavored types.

Portulaca — unsurpassed as a summer border or rock garden plant. Often called "Moss Rose," this summer annual prefers the sun and will tolerate dry, hot conditions to produce warm vivid blankets of gay colors. Salvia — a persistent summer annual, producing bright scarlet or blue spikes of gloom throughout the hot summer until cut down by frost. The rich red varieties are most showy when displayed against a background of green or white. The faded blooms of this annual should be cut often to encourage abundant color.

Cosmos — produces rich yellow or orange blooms in mid-summer up until late fall. Its success often spreads to abandoned gardens and sometimes escapes cultivation, demanding little or no care. The All-America selection "Diablo" produces brilliant, colored blooms which will brighten any garden bed until winter.

Marigolds — love hot weather and, with the exception of having an attack of spider mites occasionally, you'll find them easy to grow. If mites attack, use Kelthane once a week for three weeks.

being careful to spray the underside of the leaves. New marigolds being brought out each year are almost as numerous as new petunias so you will probably have a hard time deciding which ones to plant. Especially intriguing are the new mule or triploid marigolds, which don't produce seed and thus continue to bloom throughout the season. Some of the large flowered forms, like Happy Face are also spectacular and make good hot weather plants.

Gallardia or firewheel — a little annual that grows along the roadside but there are a number of improved varieties offered in the seed catalogs and you should try some of these for spectacular hot-weather flowers. While the wild form will usually produce flowers and inch to an inch-and-a-half across, it's not unusual for some of the cultivated varieties to be four inches or more in diameter. Some of the new selections are perennial in their growth habit. Two of the best are Torchlight which will reach a height of 24-30 inches whereas Goblin is a dwarf plant of 12 inches covered with two to three inch flowers.

GARDENING WITH HANGING BASKETS

If you lack the yard space for flowering annuals or vegetables, try growing them in hanging baskets. Hanging basket gardens can add a vining tomato, cucumber or flowering plant to your porch or balcony without taking up much space.

Any type of drainable container will work fine, whether it's wood, plastic or a wire basket. Line containers with peat moss and make sure they are securely attached with strong hooks. Outside baskets need to be watered daily. If mixing different plants in a basket, start with upright plants in the center, then add trailing plants around the edge of the pot. Be sure plants in combination baskets have similar sun requirements. Vegetable baskets can be an attractive source of homegrown food. Ask for varieties that have been developed especially for growing in baskets or containers. Cherry tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce, radishes and herbs make productive baskets. Be sure not to crowd vegetable plants, especially tomatoes, so that they can develop properly.

Use a porous planting mix in hanging baskets. Garden soil can be too heavy to drain properly and may contain insects, weeds and disease.

PUBLIC WATER HEARINGS

The executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources has scheduled eight hearings to obtain comments on the proposed water resources planning report prepared to amend the Texas Water Plan. Upon the public's review and comment through the hearing process, the planning report will be revised as necessary in light of information received. The planning report will then be submitted to the Texas Water Development Board for consideration and adoption as the amended statewide water conservation, water quality protection, and water supply development plan for Texas.

The closest location and hearing date is July 12 in Lubbock at the Lubbock Civic Center at 7 p.m.

The Water Resources Planning Report has been placed on reserve for public review in 49 libraries. Copies of the report and a summary are available for inspection in each of the 15 Texas Department of Water Resources district offices. Also copies of the report and the summary may be obtained from the state agency.

The executive director welcomes you to make a statement at one of the eight public hearings. As an alternative, we invite you to submit statements by mail. For additional information, you may telephone the department between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at 512-475-3821.

VESICULAR STOMATITIS

The vesicular stomatitis (VS) outbreak reported last fall has continued to cause problems in several Midwestern and Western states. This is a non-fatal disease of cattle, horse and swine that causes a temperature rise and the formation of blisters in the mouth, epithelium of the tongue and soles of the feet. These blisters may occur in other parts of the body and also have caused sores in the region of the teats and udders of cattle. The sores in the mouth make it difficult and painful for the animal to eat and drink causing dehydration and weight losses in affected animals.

Early reports last September indicated outbreaks in New Mexico and Colorado. Later it was confirmed in Montana, Nebraska, South Dakota and Washington. Cattle and horses were infected in Montana and Nebraska and a horse in South Dakota. Investigation of 46 suspicious cases in California, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Oregon and Texas failed to disclose the presence of vesicular stomatitis.

June 6-9 — State 4-H Roundup, College Station

ROUNDUP MEETING

There will be a meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Courthouse Annex for all 4-H'ers participating in State 4-H Roundup. We are also asking at least one parent of each 4-H'er to attend.

The purpose of the meeting will be to: practice demonstrations; review Roundup rules and regulations; get a signature of parents on authorization for medical care and member participation agreement; discuss travel arrangements; time of departure on June 6 and time of arrival June 9.

This is an important meeting. We strongly encourage all to attend. In case of conflict, please contact the extension office at 669-7429.

SOUTH PLAINS 4-H EXTRAVAGANZA

District II in the South Plains is celebrating the 75th anniversary of 4-H in Texas in a "Big Way" on June 11 at the South Plains Fairgrounds in Lubbock. Festivities begin at 10 a.m. and conclude at midnight.

Some of the activities will include: sports events of volleyball and washers; olympic events such as three-legged race, slipper kick, egg roll and poison peanut butter; watermelon eating and seed spitting contest. There will also be awards for the oldest 4-H alumni, the leader with most years service, the 4-H poster winners, the 4-H scrapbook winners and the county with the largest attendance.

A free barbecue dinner will begin at 5:30 p.m. A dance by the Manes Brothers will round out the day's activities. The dance will begin at 8 p.m. with the cost at $5 per person, $7.50 per couple and $10 per family.

STEER VALIDATION

All 4-H'ers who plan to exhibit a steer at the major stock shows in Texas must have these steers purchased and validated before June 30.

If you are planning to show a steer at the major shows and cases of VS are still spreading so that now 14 states have had one or more positive cases. In the states with investigations and positive cases, a total of 964 cases were investigated and 602 were confirmed as positive.

The prompt diagnosis of this virus is important since VS infection in the field cannot be distinguished from foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) unless horses are involved. Horses are not affected by FMD but can get VS. Texas has been lucky to escape so far. However, persons with animals showing symptoms previously described should contact a veterinarian without delay. If no veterinarian is available, they should contact the Texas Animal Health Commission at 512-475-4111.

NEW WORMING DRUG

A new broad-spectrum parasite control agent is now available to Texas horse owners. This product was derived from the avermectins which have a strong action against parasites. One of the avermectin derivatives, designated ivermectin forms the basis of the new horse wormer.

It is being marketed under the trade name Eqvalen. Information from the College of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M University and an equine practitioner indicates that the product has shown excellent activity against most of the intestinal parasites including stomach bots.

It has also been used with success against the Habronema muscae and Onchocerca species. Eqvalen is presently being sold as an injection but should be available in a paste form in the near future. It is sold through veterinarians and is only approved for use in horses not sold for food purposes.

A product called Ivomec for cattle, based on the ivermectin formulation, was approved for cattle this year in Canada. It has been marketed for cattle in most South American countries, Belgium, Spain and New Zealand. Ivomec liquid for sheep was introduced in Brazil and New Zealand, two major sheep-raising nations. Formulations of ivermectin are now being marketed in 25 countries.

The discovery and use of the avermectin compounds should be great help in the control and internal and external parasites of domestic animals as it becomes available for use in other species.

The information given herein is for educational purposes only. Reference to commercial products or trade names is made with the understanding that no discrimination is intended and no endorsement by the Cooperative Extension Service is implied.

haven't informed us yet, you need to contact the county Extension office so you won't be left out.

GRAY COUNTY HORSE SHOW

The Gray County 4-H Open Horse Show will be held Sunday, June 5, at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena in Pampa. Entries will open at 1 p.m. and the show will be at 2 p.m.

The show is open to all youth ages 9-19. Entry fee will be $10 per contestant and there will be two adult classes which will cost $2 per adult contestant. The contestants may show only one horse, but enter as many classes as desired, and the youth contestants should encourage their parents to participate.

One rule change from last year that we've had questions about: You do not have to show to halter to be eligible for high point awards. Youth and adults from area counties are also invited to attend.

If you need more information on the County Horse Show, contact the Extension office at 669-7429.

GRAY COUNTY POP HORSE SHOW

The Gray County POP Horse Show will be held at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena June 11 beginning at 9:30 a.m. Entries will close at 8:30 a.m. for the Halter and Showmanship classes and at 11 a.m. for the Performance Classes on the day of the show. Advance entries can be made by calling the Gray County Extension office. Entry fees are $5 per class. All 4-H members are eligible to participate in this show.

HORSEMANSHIP CLINIC

The Gray County Horse Project Group will sponsor a horsemanship clinic June 6-8 at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena. This clinic will be conducted by the Texas A&M Horsemanship Team and will be very helpful to 4-H members as well as horse project leaders.

The cost of the school will be $20 for all three days or $7 a day if you plan to just attend one or two days.

Registration will be at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, June 6 at the arena. The school will start at 9 a.m. and continue until about 5 p.m. each day with a noon lunch break. You do need to bring a horse and probably a sack lunch to the clinic each day.

If you plan to attend, please contact the Extension office so that we can get an approximate head count.

Most people are very careful about writing their Will. But many forget that funeral planning should be part of their Will.

IS YOUR WILL FORGETTING SOMETHING?

Specific funeral plans should also be filed with your funeral director to protect your family from having to make many decisions at a time when decisions can be confusing and difficult. Pre-planning is important.

We can insure that your wishes are registered with a copy kept on file for your family. A little foresight now can save a lot of confusion later.

"The corporation, as presently structured, will meet the demands of farmers if it is allowed to work unhindered," he said.

When Congress redesigned the insurance program, it allowed for phasing out previous special crop disaster payment program offered by USDA because the expanded insurance would do the job.

English, who is chairman of the panel, said that the corporation "has traveled a rocky road" since 1980 and that he personally believes there should be some kind of separate disaster payments program.

"It is obvious from the information available... that FCIC is in trouble," English said. "It is running through its capital structure at a fast rate. Unless something is done, the corporation will be bankrupt in a year or two."

Crop insurance premiums paid by farmers are subsidized by the federal government at 30 percent of the premium cost, up to a coverage level of 65 percent of a producer's loss.

LIVE ACTION.

Thanks to two live rear PTO speeds, the Kubota L305 does a lot of work standing still. It takes on all kinds of chores, from tilling to serious earth moving. Standard features include a 26 PTO hp 3-cylinder diesel engine, power steering, Category 1 3-point hitch, eight forward and two reverse speeds, 2-speed rear PTO and front engine PTO shaft.

A powerful position and draft control makes handling all kinds of implements easy. Tiller, plow, cultivator, front loader, front blade, rear-mount mower, post hole digger and more. The L305 is built for action. Nothing like it on earth.

Says deputy devoured mouse

OWEGO, N.Y. (AP) - A county sheriff's deputy has been suspended for eating a live mouse after the mouse lost a race in the back room of a tavern, the sheriff says.

"It was misconduct. It was sick," said Tioga County Sheriff James R. Ayers. "I've been in this business for more than 30 years and thought I had everything."

Cpl. Arnold Creeley was suspended for three days without pay, he said.

According to Donald W.
 Arnold, who along with his wife Billy Jo owns the Rainbow Trail tavern, the tavern hosts mouse races
 every Wednesday night.

Two week ago, Creeley's mouse won three of seven races on the 20-foot long track, and just before long time for the eighth race. "he (Creeley) told the mouse if it didn't win, he was going to eat it," Wheeland said.

The mouse lost.
 "A guy dared him to do it,"
 Wheeland said. "He said
 'you're on,' he meaning Creeley," the tavern owner explained.

Then, according to Wheeland, Creeley put ketchup, salt and pepper on the mouse and ate it.

"He said the tail was wiggling in his throat and it took him two swallows," Wheeland said. "It was one of our prize-raising mice."

Contacted Tuesday night
 Creeley said he knew nothing about the incident.

Ayers said Creeley was off duty at the time, but still was suspended on the grounds that he made the department look bad.

Stabile has been influenced throughout his time as a priest by a letter written to him from Bishop Fulton Sheen. (Which is something of a collector's item, he says, since not only did it come from the famous bishop, but it was also written on Braniff Airlines stationery.)

In that short letter, Sheen discussed what he believes is the basic idea of being a priest — victimhood.

"Christ came to be a victim for the salvation of the world. He's (Sheen) saying as priests that's what we've got to do. We've got to become victims for our people. To put ourselves, totally and completely, at the service of others even at the expense of ourselves," Stabile says.

Voluntary victimhood. "That's what's so neat about it," he adds.

How did Stabile feel about the novel and television movie "The Thornbirds" which portrayed a priest falling in love with a woman and breaking his vow of chastity?

"I think they portrayed the situation well. But those who worried about the fact that he broke his vow of celibacy became overly concerned about that. I believe his true sin was his drive for power and the tremendous pride and ambition he had — that aspect of it rather than him falling in love with a woman.

"Our community takes three vows — poverty, chastity and obedience. Most people believe that chastity has always got to be the hardest.

"It is difficult. I'm not going to lie and say it isn't. I would love to have my own family. I love children. I think I would make a good father and a good husband. But I chose freely not to do that.

"I have a lot of very dear friends, men and women, who I know love me. That has affirmed me. I feel comfortable and secure in those kind of relationships, with my own human-ness, my own sexuality and with my own relationships both with men and women.

"Obedience is the difficult one for me, because I'm a strong-willed individual. I am very confident... and proud. I recognize some of these as faults to a degree. Because of that I find obedience is a difficult thing — to give up your will to someone else when you think you have a better idea or an easier solution.

"Strong will — it's a terrible fault. No, not a fault. It's certainly been a blessing to me. I'm a very organized individual, but at times I find it difficult in my ministry.

"Because I'm so self-assured, self-confident, strong-willed, I don't always come across to other people as being very compassionate. Deep down inside, I'm an extremely sensitive individual. And I like to believe I'm a compassionate person when I'm dealing with people in my ministry."

Stabile constantly struggles with these traits, he says. "I could associate a little bit with Father Ralph (the priest in 'The Thornbirds') — his pride and his ambition. I don't have the ambition. I have no desire to be the head of our community." No desire to be pope or bishop, he adds. "I'm not even sure I want to be pastor. There were a lot less headaches when I was associate.

"Twice as much work and twice as many headaches. That's when I go escape with my horse."

On his days off and during free hours, Stabile unwinds by riding his big sorrel Quarter horse pastured in White Deer.

His love for cowboying, like his interest in becoming a priest, began while he was a boy in Houston. Stabile says, "I can remember them using horses and mules across the street from our house to haul off lumber they had cut down to build new houses. I think since that time I've been enamored with the West and Western life.

Stabile has tried to pursue this interest throughout his life. He's owned several horses and he is even a certified horse trainer.

He also enjoys roping. His friends are threatening to put him in some of the local rodeos this year but Stabile is not too sure he's ready for that. "I don't know if I'm brave enough to try."

Stabile pulls out a color photograph of his horse, saddled and ready to go. "The people who sold him to me claimed he's found religion," he quips.

In a more serious vein, Stabile commented on his feelings about the nuclear arms race, an issue raised to controversy recently by statements of other Catholic priests in the country.

"I have never preached it from the pulpit and I'm not sure that I would, but I believe strongly in unilateral withdrawal of nuclear arms for our country. As a Christian I find it disturbing and difficult to believe that we can continue with the power of destruction we have," he says.

"There's a message that we can send as Christians — that we'd be willing to voluntarily become a victim if that will bring about world peace. Again, it's that victimhood that sticks in the back of my mind.

"As a powerful, visible nation we could sway the way the rest of the world goes," he says.

Stabile says he's aware of the fear that is involved with allowing another nation to have all the nuclear power, but he explains his belief in this way:

"They press their button and we press ours, and we're all dead. They press their button and we don't have a button. I'm dead. Either way, I'm gone."

"This really isn't the 'Red or dead' theory," Stabile adds. "I would like to see Russia lay down their arms as well."

"I pray to God that it would never come to that — button pressing, but it's a possibility."

He says he might use the nuclear arms race as an example in preaching about "turning the other cheek," and Christian love, "but I would not ask anyone else to advocate my position because I do. They've all got to study, learn and pray to form their own conclusions."

Widow of tornado victim sues building designer

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — An airport terminal building which collapsed during a violent storm, killing one man, should have been able to withstand the heavy winds, the victim's widow charges in a lawsuit.

Dorothy Mae Vela filed the state court suit Thursday against Walter P. Moore & Associates Inc. of Houston and H.B. Neild and Sons Inc. of Beaumont, alleging the companies were negligent in designing and building the $5 million structure at the Jefferson County Airport.

Arthur Vela, 55, was at the airport to greet sports celebrities participating in a benefit golf tournament. The building was evacuated when the terminal ceiling started to crack but Vela ran back inside to retrieve his ham radio gear, witnesses said.

He was killed when the roof fell on him, officials said.

Four funnel clouds were sighted in the area when the accident occurred May 20. Heavy rain, three-inch hail and winds up to 120 mph whipped the airport.

State District Judge Gary Sanderson scheduled a hearing Tuesday on a motion asking that the collapsed section not be moved or repaired until it is inspected.

Spokesmen for the two companies refused to comment on the lawsuit.

Governor gets tough DWI bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that calls for tougher penalties against drunken drivers and could require some DWI offenders to give up their cars has landed on Governor Mark White's desk.

The Senate on Friday approved the House-Senate conference committee version of the bill by a 30-1 margin.

House members approved it 118-23, despite arguments by members who said a provision of the bill would "let a machine decide if you're guilty or not."

The measure increases penalties for repeat offenders, encourages alcohol rehabilitation and eliminates "deferred adjudication," a procedure by which drivers convicted of DWI can clear their record by serving probation without committing another DWI offense.

The bill makes the refusal to be tested for alcohol in the blood admissible as evidence in court.

Second offenders would face license suspensions of up to two years, a mandatory jail sentence of at least three days, and they could be sentenced to as much as two years in prison.

If a driver picked up a fourth DWI conviction or a DWI conviction while on probation for involuntary manslaughter with a motor vehicle, the judge could take away his car.

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, asked the House to send the bill back to conference committee. He wanted to kill a portion that says a suspect is legally drunk if a measuring instrument used by police shows the person has a 0.10 percent or higher blood-alcohol content.

"The next thing is we'll let computers decide guilt or innocence," said Oliveira.

Under current law a 0.10 or higher reading is a presumption of drunkenness. It can be used as evidence at trial.

Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Thomas R. Brimberry, a former saloonkeeper, lived a life that most people only dream about — and now he's about to pay for it.

At his peak, Brimberry was a free spender who splashed $100 tips around, built a mansion with three Jacuzzis and a sauna, and lost $250,000 in Las Vegas within half an hour.

But prosecutors also accuse him of masterminding a scheme to plunder a brokerage house of up to $23 million, one of the largest losses of its kind in the nation.

On Wednesday, Brimberry, 39, was convicted in Alton, Ill., of two counts of obstructing justice by urging his co-workers to burn records. He was acquitted of a third count. Sentencing was set for June 24.

Brimberry still faces charges in Missouri of lying to a federal grand jury, lying to the federal Securities and Exchange Commission and liquidating equipment after he had agreed in bankruptcy court not to sell his assets.

His problems stem from 1974 when a fire destroyed Brimberry's failing tavern in Pontoon Beach, Ill., and he took an $8,000-a-year job as a margin clerk for Stix & Co., a respected St. Louis brokerage firm.

It wasn't long before he was stealing from the firm, Brimberry later told authorities.

By 1975, Brimberry and James J. Massa, who owned a majority interest in Stix, had worked out a scheme to borrow from 10 accounts controlled by Brimberry, using phony stock as collateral, according to a federal indictment.

But William Gaynor, chief investigator for the SEC, testified later that interest was never paid on the alleged loans, leaving the 10 accounts $23 million short. A federal bankruptcy judge agreed that Brimberry owed the estate that amount.

By 1979, Massa had used $854,000 of the firm's stolen funds to buy a 62 percent majority ownership in Stix. And Brimberry was named a senior vice president, drawing a $300,000 annual salary.

Brimberry, Massa and Stix accountant Duane Skinner were the principals in looting the firm of $16.5 million between them, according to the indictments in federal court.

With all this money, Brimberry suddenly prospered.

A business associate testified that he kept $50,000 in cash in the trunk of his car in case Brimberry wanted to buy something, and Janice Brimberry told reporters recently that she frequently went shopping with $10,000 in her purse.

"After a while, you don't think about it," said Mrs. Brimberry. "You ride the good times, you ride the bad times. But it's not worth it."

In the heart of blue-collar Granite City, Ill., Brimberry bought seven lots and built a $1.75 million mansion. It boasted seven bathrooms with gold fixtures and hammered-brass sinks, a $65,000 stocked liquor cabinet and a $60,000 pool complex.

He once donated a car to a church raffle, and sometimes swooped down to pick up his children from their Catholic school in a helicopter.

"It happened a couple of times, supposedly to give lunch money to his kids or pick one of them up," said Gary Schneider, editor of the Granite City Press-Record.

"But he stopped that after a complaint was filed with the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration)," said Schneider, who lived near the school and witnessed one of the incidents.

And Brimberry took friends, acquaintances and, on one occasion, workmen from his new home on trips to Hawaii, the Bahamas and Las Vegas. His wife estimated that he lost "in the neighborhood of millions of dollars" to his passion for gambling.

His behavior eventually attracted the attention of the Internal Revenue Service.

When he learned that he was the target of an IRS investigation, Brimberry decided to make a deal.

Howard wants a study of treatment of farm animals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. James J. Howard, a Democrat who represents a suburban New Jersey district, has jumped into an emotional farm issue — the safety and ethics of "factory farming."

Howard introduced a bill Thursday that would establish a commission to study whether the drugs used to calm and fatten animals pose a danger to consumers and whether the cramped conditions are cruel to the livestock.

"Issues come by your desk and sometimes they strike you and you get interested in it," Howard said. "You just get interested in it and you say, 'Hey, why not?' It just seemed like an important and worthwhile thing."

But he acknowledged: "Back in my district, I haven't heard from either of my farmers on this."

Michael W. Fox, scientific director of the Humane Society of the United States, accompanied the congressman to a morning news conference and argued that abandoning the practices would be safer for humans, kinder to animals and more profitable for farmers.

But the announcement evoked an angry response from Stuart Proctor, a spokesman for the American Farm Bureau Federation, which has 3 million members. "I think the whole thing is grounded in emotionalism," said Proctor. "It is not grounded on fact. We say the animals are happy in confinement."

Howard's bill is similar to a measure introduced last year by former Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, which died in the House Agriculture Committee.

Howard's version, however, emphasizes the possible dangers to consumers and also will be referred to the Commerce Committee, which might be more receptive to the proposal.

"Questions are arising about how the animals are being brought up and fed and inoculated," Howard said.

"We wonder if inoculations given to animals, because of the way they're bred now, are being passed on to humans."

Under the intensive farming techniques, animals bred for meat or dairy are confined to crowded indoor pens and cages. Four or five hens may be kept in 12-inch-by-18-inch cages and calves being bred for veal may spend their entire lives in 24-inch wide stalls, Howard said.

The animals may be given antibiotics and other medicines to control parasites and their appetites. Critics have argued that animal bacteria may be becoming resistant to the drugs, and may be passing these immunities to humans.

However, supporters of the farming methods have argued that there is no proof of such problems. Proctor noted that the federal Food and Drug Administration is conducting a study, due for completion in 1984, of whether antibiotics fed to animals are diminishing the effectiveness of similar drugs taken by humans.

"They want emotions, not the facts," Proctor said of Howard and other critics. He also denied claims that the crowded conditions are cruel and stressful for the animals, and actually reduce their productivity.

"We say you can't get animals to produce 220 eggs a year, and hogs to produce as effectively as they are, if they are under stress," he said.

IS BAPTISM ESSENTIAL TO SALVATION?

Baptism is immersion in water. While there are those who would substitute sprinkling or pouring for baptism, the fact remains that it is a burial in water (Romans 6:3, 4; Colossians 2:12).

But does one have to be baptized in order to be saved? When those convicted sinners on Pentecost asked Peter, "What shall we do?" Peter answered, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2:38). When Jesus gave the great commission in Mark 16:16, He said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." The language is plain in this passage. Baptism is essential to salvation, first of all, because the Lord says it is. Further, the purpose of baptism is the remission of sins. In other words, one cannot have the forgiveness of sins without baptism (Acts 2:38, 22:16).

While the purpose of baptism is in order to the forgiveness of sins, it also puts one into Christ (Galatians 3:27). This is the same as putting one into the church (1 Corinthians 12:13; Acts 2:47). And so, one cannot be saved without baptism and neither can one be a member of the Lord's church without baptism. It, then, is very much a necessity in order to salvation.

If you haven't been baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins, then you are still in your sins and you are not a member of the church you read about in the New Testament.

State constitution a constantly changing thing

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — Since the Texas Constitution was written more than 100 years ago by people who did not trust their government, it has been amended 253 times. Now, lawmakers want citizens to approve at least 15 more changes in the lengthy document.

Sen. Oscar Mauzy, a constitutional scholar, complained that the 106-year-old constitution has become little more than a reservoir of hundreds of specific laws.

The next series of proposed changes, which voters will decide at the polls this November and next, includes whether the state should garnish wages of wayward fathers who are delinquent in their child support payments and whether legislators should get more money to cover their expenses.

Mauzy, D-Dallas, said the Texas Constitution is among the nation's longest and most-amended because when it was drafted in 1876, "the people did not trust state government because of the bitter experience they had during 11 years of Reconstruction."

He said they denied the government the powers he said it needs to function, and so, little by little over the years, those powers have had to be written back into the document in the form of amendments.

"We look awful silly having to propose and extend to the people six to 12 constitutional amendments every session," Mauzy said. Lawmakers have proposed amendments every session except one. In 1965, a record 27 amendments were proposed.

Over the years, some of them have been painfully specific. In 1946 voters were asked to decide whether the state should pay $75,000 to a contractor who constructed a building on John Tarleton

Agricultural College.

"Those matters ought not to be dealt with in the constitution," Mauzy said.

But two efforts to revise Texas' constitution in 1974 and 1975 failed, and Mauzy said now lawmakers are "burned out" on trying to rewrite the document. He predicted it would be another 10 years before another serious move will be made.

In the meantime, he said, voters will continue to be asked to decide such issues as these, which will be on the Nov. 8, 1983, ballot:

GARNISHMENT OF WAGES — to allow the state to withhold wages from wayward fathers to make court-ordered child support payments; at present the state constitution prohibits any garnishing of wages.

ENEMY ATTACK — to set up emergency procedures for the Legislature to meet during an enemy attack or threat of attack. It would provide for replacement of legislators who might be unavailable for duty during a war. The governor could convene the Legislature wherever he thought safe, and the Legislature could operate with less than a quorum, suspend constitutional rules and substitute emergency rules for up to two years.

HOMESTEADS — to remove the $10,000 limit on the value of a homestead. Homesteads in cities are protected against creditors up to that amount. The amendment would change the limit to one acre, with the value left unspecified. Backers said the $10,000 limit was too low, and changing it to an amount of land would preclude the need to change it again and again as inflation continues.

SEWER LINES — to permit cities to spend public funds to relocate or replace sanitation sewer lines on private property. The property owner would have five years to pay the city back for the work. At present, the constitution prohibits any government project that would enhance the value of private property. Backers said needed work on deteriorating sewer lines is not being done in cases where owners cannot afford to make lump sum payments for the work.

VETERANS HOUSING ASSISTANCE — to authorize state-backed, low-interest, 40-year loans of up to $20,000 to Texas military veterans for their use in making a downpayment on a home; at present veterans can borrow $20,000 to buy rural land.

These amendments have been approved to be put before the voters on Nov. 6, 1984.

JUDICIAL CONDUCT — to make changes in the watchdog panel that handles complaints against judges. It would include masters, magistrates and retired or former judges in the scope of the Judicial Conduct Commission; it would include incompetency as an offense; it would increase size of commission from 11 to 13; and would alter the method of review and removal recommendations.

COLLEGE FUNDS — to provide $100 million annually for equipment, repair and construction at 26 state colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. The proposed fund will guarantee bonds sold by the universities.

MUTUAL INSURANCE —

to permit use of public funds for premiums on mutual insurance contracts. Sponsors said in the old days mutual insurance companies used to assess policyholders from time to time. Because of that, the constitution excluded such companies from state contracts.

What options are available?

By TOM BYRD

We have been discussing having our money and investments managed by others. Perhaps it would be well to pause a moment to consider what options are available to the individual who conducts his investments, or who believes others can achieve better results than he can himself. There are basically six ways to enjoy professional management - Mutual Fund shares, closed - end investment company shares, discretionary account with broker, registered investment advisors, accounts or special trust, specific advice for purchases, sales and timing, via subscription services, newsletters, and financial publications. Let's talk briefly about each of these methods for they each have their own characteristics.

We mentioned mutual funds a few weeks ago. Remember, a group of investors pool their money and own shares of an investment trust. The money is professionally managed, the results reported in a uniform manner to all shareholders, and the securities held by a custodian bank. Technically, a mutual fund holder or open - end investment company, is normally a corporation without fixed equity capitalization which constantly sells and redeems its shares in the over - the - counter market. Sound complicated? Well, it's really not. It merely says that there are no specified number of shares to offer as is the case with a normal corporation. The fund always stands ready to sell additional shares or to redeem outstanding shares - thus the name "open - end". What is the value of these shares? It is quoted in the financial page of most major newspapers. The "big" price quoted is almost always the total net asset value (what all the securities in the portfolio added together are worth) divided by the number of shares in the fund. The "asked price" is the net asset value per share plus the sales charge.

INVESTMENT TERM OF THE WEEK
Net Asset Value - A term usually used in connection with investment companies meaning net asset value per share. It is common practice for an investment company to compute its assets daily, or even twice daily, by totaling the market value of all securities owned. All liabilities are deducted, and the balance divided by the number of shares outstanding. The resulting figure is the net asset value per share.

1950 Pennant Winners

The Pampa Oilers had a 92-53 record in 1950 to capture the West Texas-New Mexico League pennant. It was the second league pennant for the Oilers. Pampa lost to Lamesa in the semi-final round of the Shaunnessey Playoffs. Members of the 1950 team were (front row, l-r) catcher Jerry Squires, shortstop Johnny Jeandron, pitcher George Payte, left fielder Dick Lawson, pitcher

BY L.D. STRATE

If you want proof that Sammy Baugh, the great Texas Christian University and pro football quarterback, once played for the Pampa Oilers, just talk to Harold Miller. He can tell you all about it.

"I'm sure there's a lot of people around who didn't know Baugh played here," said Miller, the original owner of the Oilers. "But he came and played for us his first year right out of college in 1937."

Baugh, who played shortstop, batted .500 for the Oilers in the highly-competitive Denver Post Tournament and signed a pro baseball contract with the St. Louis Cardinals immediately following the tournament. "Baugh was a good athlete and we got a lot of good publicity out of him," Miller said. "He went on to play in the International League and American Association and he really packed them in. He was a big star in both leagues."

Finally, Baugh was forced to choose between baseball and football. "He was also playing football for the Washington Redskins and they didn't want him to play baseball anymore because they were afraid he'd get hurt," Miller said. "That doesn't make a lot of sense, does it?"

Miller and Seitz, both employed at Dansiger Oil Company in Pampa, had founded a semi-pro baseball team called the Dansiger Road Runners in the mid-1930's. Many of the team members were former softball players, but there was also some big-name stars.

"We had some ex-big leaguers like Whitey Vaughn and Sammy Hale," Miller said. "Seitz was also a good player. He had played with the St. Louis Cardinals."

The Road Runners became the Oilers in 1937 and the continued playing teams like the Huber Whitefaces of Berger, Phillips, Lefors, Eason Oilers of Enid, and the Halliburton Company of Duncan.

Miller owned the club through the first three years of league play and was forced to shut down during the second half of 1942 due to World War Two. "We couldn't buy gas or tires or much of anything else," Miller said.

When the league resumed operations again in 1946, Miller sold the club to local businessmen R.L. Edmondson and Lynn Boyd, but he continued to be an avid Oiler fan.

"I didn't miss very many games," Miller said. Miller said hard-hitting Virgil Richardson and versatile Deck Woldt were two of his favorite players.

Edmondson and Boyd continued operating the club until 1947 when Edmondson bought out Boyd's interest and operated the Oilers with his son, R.L. Jr.

Just prior to the opening game of 1949, the Edmondsons sold the Oilers to Mr. and Mrs. Doug Mills. The Mills were the last individual owners and Parker couldn't stop them all by himself although the lefthander did an exceptional job. Parker not only led the league in wins (21) and strikeouts, but he also paced the Oilers in home runs with 23.

Albuquerque defeated Amarillo, four games to one, to win the playoffs. The Oilers were the class of the league in 1950, winning their second pennant (Pampa had won the playoffs in 1946, but finished second during the regular season) by a four-game margin over second-place Albuquerque.

Joe Fortin won the league batting title with a .401 average and Parker won 27 games. Pampa would meet Lamesa and Albuquerque would meet Lubbock in the semi-final round of the playoffs.

The opening game developed into a pitcher's duel between Parker and the Lobos' 20-game winner Eulis Rosson. Pampa outhit Lamesa, 9-5, but the Oilers lost, 2-1, when Jay Haney hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning. Deck Woldt had given Pampa a 1-0 lead on a solo homer in the first. Parker was outstanding in defeat, striking out 10 and not walking a batter.

Lamesa also won the second game, 2-0, on Mack Hyde's four-hitter. The Lobos scored both runs in the sixth inning on Bo Dempsey's single.

Pampa had to use five pitchers in the third game, but the result was a 5-4 win in eleven innings. Jeandron knocked in two runs with a home run, double and single for the Oilers.

Pampa used the long ball to even the series at two games apiece. Homer Matney hit a bases-loaded homer and Parker blasted a two-run shot as the Oilers won, 8-3. Righthander Mel Kramer pitched a five-hitter while striking out ten.

Oiler bats were silenced by Vince Speranza in the fifth and final game as the Lobos won, 6-0.

Speranza allowed just five hits while seven Oilers were left stranded on the bases. Bill Capps led Lamesa with three hits while Bill Ashley hit a homer.

Lamesa lost out to Albuquerque in the playoff finals. The Oilers had won both the playoffs and the pennant the year before.

Hopes were high that Pampa would reach the playoffs again in 1951, but Seitz, still the Oiler manager, wasn't so sure. Even though the Oilers had won five of six exhibition games, Seitz was worried about lack of depth in both pitching and the outfield going into the season opener.

Pre-season predictions had Pampa battling it out with defending champion Albuquerque for the pennant. (Note: The Long Slide)

Lakers face 'must-win' situations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, behind 2-0 in the National Basketball Association championship series against Philadelphia going into today's third game, say they must beat the 76ers in their next two meetings to have a realistic chance of defending their title.

"We have to win these two games, no question about it," said forward Jamaal Wilkes. "If we can do it, then it's a mini-series."

The Lakers face a difficult task in catching Philadelphia, whom they beat in the championship series in 1980 and last year. Only two teams — the 1969

Boston Celtics against Los Angeles and the 1977 Portland Trail Blazers against the 76ers — have come back from 2-0 deficits to win a best-of-seven NBA final series.

"We're disappointed, but to keep it in perspective, we're playing a team that's been a bridesmaid for a long time," Wilkes said. "They're hungry. They've played good, hard basketball, and made the big plays when they needed them."

Philadelphia came into the series fully rested, while the Lakers had just completed a tough six-game battle with San Antonio in the Western Conference final series.

The 76ers have outlasted the Lakers in the first two contests, and in the second game, Los Angeles' lack of aggressiveness netted them only five free throw attempts, an all-time NBA playoff low.

"The truth is, we've been outplayed," said Lakers General Manager Jerry West. "They've wanted it more than we have."

Reserve forward Bob McAdoo, whose sharpshooting helped Los Angeles beat the 76ers in six games in last year's final series, said it's time for the Lakers to get mad.

Lefors to meet

Gordon in playoffs

Lefors will meet Gordon at 1:30 p.m. Monday in Vernon in the Class A regional baseball tournament. The winner advances to the state quarterfinals.

Lefors routed Darrouzett, 30-3, in bi-district play and drew a bye in the area tournament. Gordon downed Bryson, 19-13, in the area finale to advance to regionals.

Lefors had a 5-6 record in its first year of baseball competition, but went unbeaten in district play. Most of the Pirates' losses were to Class 4A and Class 5A junior varsity teams.

"We've been hitting the ball real good and our pitchers have been throwing strikes," said Lefors coach Ricky Palmer.

Like Lefors, Gordon is in its first year of baseball.

"Gordon has a good team, but Bryson should have beat them," Palmer added. "Bryson was ahead 12-6 and they walked 12 straight batters."

Palmer said Billy West would probably start on the mound against Bryson.

Rangers lose

CHICAGO (AP) — Tom Paciorek drove in five runs with a tie-breaking two-run homer in the sixth inning and a bases-loaded double in the seventh, powering Richard Dotson and the Chicago White Sox to an 8-3 victory over the slumping Texas Rangers.

Harold Baines, who homered in the first inning, walked to open the sixth before Paciorek tagged loser Charlie Hough, 2-5, for his fourth home run of the season and a 4-2 lead.

Dotson, 5-5, was nicked for two runs in the first on singles by Wayne Tolleson, Buddy Bell and Pete O'Brien and a sacrifice fly by Larry Biittner. He did not allow another hit until George Wright singled in the seventh and gave way to Dick Tidrow with none out in the inning.

Fastest Field Ever

Mears has slight edge in Indy 500

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The formula for Sunday's Indianapolis 500, with record-setting rookie Teo Fabi at the head of the fastest field ever, may be the most volatile in the 67-year history of the world's richest auto race.

The 5-foot-5 Fabi, 27-year-old veteran of the sports car circuit, surprised the racing world by driving a Cosworth-powered March to one-and four-lap qualifying records last weekend, turning a single lap at 208.049 mph and averaging 207.395 for the sizzling run.

But the Italian is not the favorite in a field that includes five former winners and is expected to be one of the most competitive ever at Indy.

No one driver has dominated the month of practice and time trials leading up to this year's race. A record 10 starters qualified at more than 200 mph.

But Rick Mears, the 1979 champion and former Speedway record-holder who will start his Penske PC-11 from the outside of the front row next to the March-Cosworth of veteran Mike Mosley, would appear to have a slight edge on the basis of starting position and experience.

"You have to think Rick will be the man to beat," says three-time Indy winner Al Unser, who also is Mears' teammate. "He's up front, experienced and he's won here before."

"But I think I've got a real good shot, too, and so do about six or seven other guys."

Mears, who went into last year's race as a heavy favorite but lost to two-time winner Gordon Johncock by sixteen-hundredths of a second in the closest and most dramatic finish in Indy history, doesn't care if he's favored or not.

"The only thing I worry about is running my race," Mears said. "Whether you call me a favorite or not, I still have to go out there and perform. All I have to think about is taking what the car and circumstances on the race track will give me. You can't force things out there in a 500-mile race."

But history shows you can't count on Fabi, even though he is a rookie here and the last first-year Indy starter to win was Graham Hill in 1966. In the past eight years, the pole-winner has won four times and never finished worse than third.

A 30 percent chance of showers is forecast for Sunday morning, with temperatures in the mid-70s. The race is to begin at 11 a.m. EDT.

a year ago, ignited a melee last May that began even before the field crossed the starting line. It's still uncertain if a part in the rear of his Penske racer broke, as he insists, or if he simply lost control in the excitement of the moment, as some veteran drivers claim. But Cogan's car, starting in the middle of the front row, suddenly darted right, hitting the rear of a car driven by four-time winner A.J. Foyt.

Cogan's car then veered back across the track and into the path of 1969 Indy winner Mario Andretti. The collision took both of them out of the race. With cars diving in every direction trying to get past the accident, Dale Whittington ran over the top of the car driven by Roger Mears, Rick's older brother, and eliminated both the Indy rookies from the race.

"The start of the race here always gets so much attention because everybody remembers what has happened in the past and are always talking about it," explains second-year starter Chip Ganassi, who finished 15th. "The thing everybody should remember is that the first two laps just don't mean that much in a 500-mile race. You can't win the race on the first lap, but you can lose it."

Discipline, drive and FUN!

Kids in Pampa are blessed with one of the finest summer baseball programs in the state.

The driving force behind the program is the Pampa Optimist Club and the many sponsors and volunteers who put up the money, coach, manage equipment, chalk lines, mow grass, keep score and cheer the efforts of the town's finest.

About 1,000 Pampa youngsters ages seven through 18 play on the club's baseball teams.

"This is about all I had when I was growing up. These people helped raise me," Marvin Elam said.

Most days you'll find Elam working on the fields or in the equipment room at the Optimist Club Park. Elam, past club president and present head of the Babe Ruth League, was laid off his job at Ingersoll - Rand. He now has time to give back some of the good things he got from the program when he was growing up.

You won't find Pampa's young ball players using drugs or out on the streets looking for trouble. Elam said.

"As long as they're down here, they have a coach on their backs. They're down here to play ball," he said.

Each year the Pampa club organizes a Babe Ruth League (ages 13 - 15), two leagues of sanctioned Little League baseball (9 - 12), girls league softball (9 - 12) and "farm leagues" or T-ball teams (7 - 12) for the little ones and players without the skills for Little League play. A new Optimist league, "Big League - Little League," was formed this year for players 16 to 18 years old and starts play tonight.

The costs of the baseball leagues are picked up by the club and local sponsors and donors. The kids pay a $10 sign-up fee, but a youngster was never turned away for the lack of 10 bucks.

"If a kid can't pay the registration fee, and a coach knows it, the club picks it up," Elam said.

The players' uniforms and baseball equipment are furnished free. The entire program is a labor of love. Elam and others donate time to coach and keep the fields maintained and ready for games. The park of several fields was built entirely with volunteer labor during the early 60s.

Even youngsters who think their team scores a "touchdown" when a pitcher balks, and whose bats usually hit more air than baseball, find a place on a team: everyone who signs up gets to play. The kids who first sign up for Little League (ages 9 - 12), try out for teams before the season begins. Each Little League coach has 10,000 points he bids on players whom he likes at tryouts. Players who aren't sold at the auction are still assigned to a Little League team and get a second chance to make it. But the coach must eventually trim his roster to 15.

"It's the worst part of coaching to cut a kid. It makes you sick — it's a sick situation. But there is a place to go," Elam said.

He said those older boys who can't make the sanctioned Little League are assigned to a "farm team," along with the seven and eight year olds. They get a chance to learn the game in the farm league and can move up to a sanctioned team (just as the pros do it).

The farm league teams play T-ball. The batters swat a hard ball off a plastic tee. The tee eliminates the need for a young pitcher who may walk half the batters in a line-up and hit the other half. With a few exceptions, the rest of the tee ball rules are regulation baseball, and the little ones learn the game. To the little players and parents, their tee-ball games are as important as the World Series and even more fun.

Elam said the baseball program, which the club has sponsored more than 20 years, makes the Pampa Optimist Club much more than an "eat-and-burp" club.

This year, the club is sponsoring the area and district Little League playoffs.

After a season ends, all-star teams from sanctioned Little Leagues across the country meet to see who makes it to the Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa.

Pampa will sponsor the first and second playoffs toward that final action.

Elam said the summer baseball gives Pampa kids "discipline, drive and fun."

Story and photos by Jeff Langley

At right, parents, siblings and friends shout their support to Pampa's youngest ball players at an evening at Optimist Park. A variety of emotions are evident on their faces. In the top photo, tee-ball team members yell for their team, prepare for their turn at bat, mug for the photographer or listen to concerned fathers (background) giving pointers.

With graduation comes a time among families where they must adjust to children leaving home. The period between the first and last child leaving home to live independently is referred to as the launching family age.

communicate with their children or spent little time with them probably experience this feeling of loss the most.

There are ways to weather the transition from a home with children to one without. Eight ideas to use in adjusting to children leaving home follow.

1. Anticipate the fact of life that children will someday be living independently of you.

2. Clarify your feelings about the departure of the children. Remember, it is not the end of the world, but the beginning of a new stage of life.

3. Use earlier transitions as learning experiences in handling this change in your life. Recall the separations from your children you've already lived through — the first time a child went to school, to camp, etc.

4. Look to the pleasures involved as children disengage themselves from their parents' home. There is more time for parents to pursue their own interests. There is more time and less interruption for the marital relationship.

5. Accept the changes that are occurring. The job of parents is to provide a framework in which children can grow. The long term goal of a "mother" is to work herself out of a job.

6. Plan for the time when all the children are no longer living at home. Don't let it sneak up on you.

7. Arrange to see young adults periodically through visits to them and by welcoming their visits to you.

8. Keep in touch by mail or telephone to maintain close ties.

Just remember this famous statement of Dr. Bernice Newgarten, researcher on aging: "It's not really a problem when your children grow up and leave home. It's a problem when they grow up and DON'T leave home!"

Roles of husbands and wives alter after children leave the nest. Women become more independent and creative while men become less aggressive and less dominant in the marital relationship.

Parents move from an intensely child-centered life stage to one in which, hopefully, the children are managing on their own. A woman whose major role and identity was as a mother will experience difficulty unless she realized that a major task of parenting is to guide children toward independent living. Also a woman who has anticipated a change in her role as mother and has planned for the future will adjust more easily.

Men evaluate themselves at this stage. Some men regret the loss of the opportunity to take time for their children when they were home. Men who were not

1. Anticipate the fact of life that children will someday be living independently of you.

2. Clarify your feelings about the departure of the children. Remember, it is not the end of the world, but the beginning of a new stage of life.

3. Use earlier transitions as learning experiences in handling this change in your life. Recall the separations from your children you've already lived through — the first time a child went to school, to camp, etc.

4. Look to the pleasures involved as children disengage themselves from their parents' home. There is more time for parents to pursue their own interests. There is more time and less interruption for the marital relationship.

5. Accept the changes that are occurring. The job of parents is to provide a framework in which children can grow. The long term goal of a "mother" is to work herself out of a job.

6. Plan for the time when all the children are no longer living at home. Don't let it sneak up on you.

7. Arrange to see young adults periodically through visits to them and by welcoming their visits to you.

8. Keep in touch by mail or telephone to maintain close ties.

Just remember this famous statement of Dr. Bernice Newgarten, researcher on aging: "It's not really a problem when your children grow up and leave home. It's a problem when they grow up and DON'T leave home!"

Roles of husbands and wives alter after children leave the nest. Women become more independent and creative while men become less aggressive and less dominant in the marital relationship.

Parents move from an intensely child-centered life stage to one in which, hopefully, the children are managing on their own. A woman whose major role and identity was as a mother will experience difficulty unless she realized that a major task of parenting is to guide children toward independent living. Also a woman who has anticipated a change in her role as mother and has planned for the future will adjust more easily.

Men evaluate themselves at this stage. Some men regret the loss of the opportunity to take time for their children when they were home. Men who were not

DENNIS GRAHAM & KAREN DANIELS

Daniels-Graham

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Daniels of Amarillo announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Karen Renee, to Dennis J. Graham, son of Mrs. Clare Graham of Pampa. The couple plan to marry June 23 at the First Assembly of God Church, 6101 Bell St. in Amarillo.

Miss Daniels is a 1983 graduate of Palo Duro High School of Amarillo. She is working toward a nursing degree at Northwest Texas Hospital School of Nursing.

The prospective groom attended Pampa schools and is currently a manager trainee at Beall's Department Store in Amarillo.

Issues management seen as growing field

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Women already have a firm foothold in corporate and institutional management and may eventually dominate in such posts, believes an expert in the field of issues and policy management.

"Women who are skilled in public policy, strategic planning, risk assessment and the communications arts are well placed to outflank their more traditional male counterparts," says W. Howard Chase, editor of Corporate Public Issues and Their Management.

"The evidence is all around us," adds Chase, who is also co-founder and chairman of the Issues Management Association, whose president is a woman, Dr. Madeleine Hochstein.

Salaries for talented issue-policy managers range from $35,000 at entry level to as high as $200,000, according to Chase. And there is no salary discrimination against women in the field, he says, citing several reasons:

"There are almost as many women as men in the Public Policy graduate schools, and their proportion is growing," he points out. "Ten years ago there were three men for every woman in graduate schools of business administration. Today almost 50 percent of the MBA candidates are women."

"But probably the most important reason for potential female dominance of the issues management field is that they are less troubled by shibboleths of past traditional practices than men," Chase says.

"As major companies move toward the concept that there are only two major functions — the management of profit and the management of public policy, integrated by strategic planning — there will be great opportunity for women to move into the vacuum of leadership created by male traditionalists," Chase predicts.

JANE DINGUS & JOHN HILDEBRANDT

Dingus-Hildebrandt

Jane Dingus and John Hildebrandt, both of Houston, announce their engagement and approaching marriage. The couple plan to marry July 2 at the chapel of St. John the Divine Episcopal Church of Houston.

Miss Dingus is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dingus of Pampa. Hildebrandt's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Roy W. Hildebrandt of Chicago, Ill.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Pampa High School and of Rice University in Houston. She is currently a doctorate candidate at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

Hildebrandt is a graduate Central High School, Davenport, Iowa. He holds a bachelor of science degree and doctorate from the University of Iowa. Dr. Hildebrandt is currently a research instructor on the faculty of Baylor College of Medicine.

Smith-Patton

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Smith of Valley Mills announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Rebecca Elaine, to Richard Neil Patton of Lorena.

Patton's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ronal Patton of Pampa. The couple plan to marry Aug. 6 at the Valley Mills First Baptist Church.

Miss Smith is a 1983 graduate of West Texas State University. She is employed by Hillcrest Hospital in Waco.

Patton is a 1979 graduate of Pampa High School. He attended Frank Phillips Junior College in Borger. He is employed by John Hancock in Waco.

KEVIN REXROAT & DEANNE BRICE

Brice-Rexroat

The parents of Jeri Deanne Brice announce the engagement of their daughter to Kevin Ray Rexroat of Amarillo. Miss Brice is the daughter of Jerry and Mary Brice of Borger. Rexroat's parents are Mrs. Monte Dees of Cincinnati, Ohio and Norman Rexroat of Amarillo.

The wedding has been set for Aug. 6 at the First United Methodist Church of Borger.

The bride is employed at Northwest Texas Hospital as a respiratory therapist. She is a graduate of Amarillo College.

Rexroat is employed at first Savings and Loan of Borger. He is a graduate White Deer High School and of Texas Tech University, majoring in finance. He is a member of Delta Sigma Pi fraternity.

Spicy sausage salad

Let your taste buds travel to new flavors this summer. A nourishing, main dish salad for brunch or lunch is a vacation away from eating habits the rest of the year.

Easy to make and pretty to serve, these main dish salads need only a roll, pitcher of lemonade and fresh fruit to make a memory flavored summer menu.

Precooked sausage links heated and added to garden fresh ingredients provide nourishment for summer sports. They brown quickly, clean up is easy and there's little shrinkage with no waste. One package provides enough servings for four people.

Sweet and sour dressing is always a popular salad topping. Spooned over a mixture of fresh garden ingredients as in the Skillet Spinach Salad, it creates new flavor vistas. The colorful salad is cooked and served from the skillet making kitchen clean up quick and cool.

Pasta is popular and what could be prettier for a summer than macaroni shells dotted with sausage slices, green onions, olives and fresh parsley. The creamy dressing brings the flavors together in one quick - to - make main dish salad. Line the serving dish with fresh lettuce from the garden before spooning in the warm pasta salad.

- SKILLET SPINACH SALAD
- 1 pkg. brown and serve sausage links
 - 2 T. vegetable oil
 - 1 small onion, chopped
 - 2 T. flour
 - 1 c. chicken broth
 - 1-3 c. white wine vinegar
 - 1 T. brown sugar
 - 1/2 t. celery seed
 - 1/4 t. salt
 - 1/2 t. ground pepper
 - 2 med. potatoes, cooked and cubed with skins on
 - Spinach or leaf lettuce torn into pieces, about 3 cups
 - 1 small red pepper, cut into strips
 - 1/2 c. frozen peas, thawed

- 2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered (optional)
- Brown sausage links in large skillet. Remove sausages from skillet and set aside to keep warm. Add oil and onion to skillet. Cook until tender. Stir in flour and cook until bubbly. Slowly stir in broth. Cook until smooth and thickened. Stir in vinegar, sugar, celery seed, salt and pepper. Return sausages to skillet. Add remaining ingredients except eggs and toss gently. Serve immediately garnished with eggs. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

- SAUSAGE 'N PASTA SALAD
- 1 pkg. brown and serve sausage links
 - 8 oz. macaroni shells, medium size, cooked and drained
 - 1/2 c. sliced olives
 - 1/4 c. sliced green onion
 - 2 T. fresh minced parsley
 - 1/4 c. mayonnaise
 - 1/4 c. grated Parmesan cheese
 - 1 T. lemon juice
 - 1/4 t. black pepper
 - 1/4 t. hot pepper sauce

Brown sausage links according to package directions. Cut into chunks. Mix with macaroni shells in serving dish. Combine remaining ingredients and stir into sausage and macaroni. Serve in lettuce-lined salad bowl.

Dear Abby

Aging mother's plea breaks daughter's heart

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: How does one answer the senile elderly nursing home patient who asks, "Why am I here?" My mother, who is in her late 80s, has been in a small, comfortable nursing facility for almost five years. She is in fairly good physical health, but her mind has been failing for 10 to 15 years.

There are days when she doesn't know me, and nights when she gets up at 2 a.m. to take her nursing home searching for her husband who has been dead for five years, but in her more lucid moments, she asks, "Why am I living here with strangers?"

She says she is a "prisoner" and wants to live where she has more freedom. But in order for her to be "free," a still-productive member of the family with other responsibilities would then become the prisoner.

How can I answer my mother? This is the heartbreak of my life.

GETTING OLD MYSELF

DEAR GETTING OLD: An increasing number of people are experiencing the same kind of heartache. The fact that your mother is confused most of the time indicates that she needs around-the-clock care and attention, and unless you can provide this in your own home, she is much better off in a private nursing facility. (Be glad you can afford it.)

In her more lucid moments, take her in your arms, tell her you love her, and explain honestly that she is where she is because of your concern for her safety.

I know it must be painful to send your mother who has nursed you, fed you and sacrificed for you to "live with strangers," but believe me, in your case, it is the most sensible solution for all concerned, so don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: Last night my 17-year-old daughter came home from a date at 1:15 a.m. She invited her date in and they went to the family room to watch TV.

Knowing she was home for the night, I dropped off to sleep. At 3:30 a.m. I awakened. I went downstairs to turn off the lights and found my daughter and her date sleeping with the TV still on! I woke them up and told them it was 3:30, then I went back to bed, thinking the boy would leave. At 4 a.m. he was still there, so I called my daughter out of the room and sternly told her it was time her date went home. At 4:30, he still had not left, so I went downstairs and calmly said, "I think it's time you went home, young man." I stood right there until he left (a matter of seconds).

Afterward I grounded my daughter for the weekend. Now she is angry with me. She says I "embarrassed" her, and because of me the boy will probably never ask her out again.

Was I wrong? What would you have done, Abby?

MIDWEST MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You were not wrong. I would have done exactly what you did. Only I'd have done it sooner.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Gardening by Moonsigns

Know the differences of garden grubs

By LOIS BOYNTON

The Moon will be decreasing: 1-10, 25-31. The Moon will be increasing: 11-24.

The Fruitful Signs are: From 2:30 p.m. the 3rd through 5th (Pisces); 11-12 (Cancer); 20-21 (Scorpio); 31 (Pisces).

The Semi-Fruitful are: 7th until 2:00 the 9th (Taurus); 18-19 (Libra); 15-17 (Capricorn).

The Barren Signs are: 1 - until 2:00 the 2nd, 5-6 (Gemini); 14-15 (Leo); 16-17 (Virgo); 22-24 (Sagittarius); 28-29 (Aquarius).

Remember transplanting is done when the Moon is in a fruitful or semi-fruitful sign regardless of whether it is on the decrease or increase.

Summer is here, the bedding plants should be their places. Portulacco may be sown now where ever you need a low grower and a constant bloomer. They like hot weather and full sun. They will bloom now into October of kept picked.

Don't confuse the grub of the June Bug beetle with the Japanese beetle grub. They are not the same. The grub of the June Bug is as large as your forefinger or larger. It is white with a brown and its six legs are located near its head. They seem to feed on the dead and decaying matter. They do a great job of aerating our composting bins. The middle of this month they hatch out a green beetle with yellow markings about an inch long. They are sometimes called a fruit beetle, because they feed on ripe fruit. They prefer peaches. They will gather on decaying fruit left under the tree, where they can be hand picked and dropped into a can of cleaning fluid or kerosene. This controls their population for us.

The Japanese beetle grub is much smaller than the June Bug beetle. It feeds on living roots of plants and vegetation. They hatch out this month. They feed on tender leaves of trees and shrubs, especially roses. They can be controlled while in the grub stage by applying "DOOM," a spore powder, to the soil where they are found. It should be applied then when the ground is frozen. A pound of spore powder will treat about 4,000 square feet of turf. It will be effective for about six years.

Nature worried about the brown spots on the iris foliage. This is hysterosporium spot. It attacks only the leaves, never the rhizomes. It is not common with us because it is usually found in humid or rainy regions, that don't have enough wind or humidity to bother it. It is unsightly and the whole plant will turn brown. It is interesting to note that some varieties in a group are not affected. Carefully remove all dead leaves and cut off infected green leaves below the lowest visible spot. Destroy this material. Newly planted fruit trees and bushes should be watered once each week if the weather is dry and given a thorough soaking then.

Keep the fallen fruit picked up and composted.

Divide and replant daffodils and narcissus; store tulips in a cool dry place until autumn. Add cottonseed to roses. This will add nitrogen to them. This will help their next bloom period.

Sprays should never be used when flowers are in full bloom or the bees and insects that help pollinate the blossom will be killed. We find other ways and methods that work for us without spraying.

If you wish to grow large blooms on chrysanthemums and carnations, keep the large terminal buds, pinching out the smaller ones.

The presence of yellowish foliage generally indicates iron deficiency in the soil. Correct this lack by feeding with chelated iron.

You will have apples to fall from your trees during this month. Don't worry, this is natural for them to do this.

Asparagus cutting should be stopped the last of the month, giving the plants a chance to build up their crowns for next year. The fern-like growth that develops must be left on until it dies in the fall, when it can be cut down to the ground level.

A friend dropped by to report that the rain brought two prairie dogs to her backyard, which she was not very happy about. They must have traveled a long way.

If you have leftover seed you wish to store, wrap two tablespoons of fresh powdered milk in facial tissue, held with a rubber band. Place in a dry, wide-mouth quart jar, put in the seed packets and close the top tight. Store in refrigerator until needed. These will keep in this way from three to five years.

Since all the rain the wild flowers are beautiful along the highways. Have you noticed them? Take time to slow down and enjoy them.

Now is the time to apply mulch; the ground is wet. This will help to preserve this moisture, and also the waterbill.

Bring out houseplants and place in shaded area. Do not forget to water them often

Do not cut the oriental poppy leaves until they have turned brown.

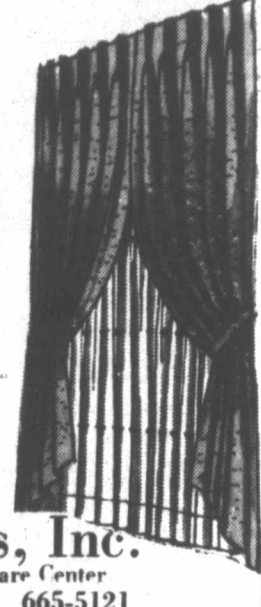

Bagworms will become active now on the evergreen. Hand pick them, carrying a pail of cleaning fluid to drop them into. If you will be diligent and get at it as soon as they appear, you will not have to spray.

Cut flowers for the house early in the morning before the day gets hot.

Peeking at Pampa

Hooray for May when the sun rises a little earlier than last month. And so must I, if you are to know what's been happening around here.

The clown unit of the Khiva Shrine Temple of Amarillo used a riot of laughter and fun when it came to Coronado Community Hospital recently — first to entertain Ricky Sellers, a patient, but stopped by every open room to greet and play tricks on patients, families and employees.

Clowns do have a way of stirring things up a bit. One grabbed and hugged Wanda Taylor, and before she recovered, reminded her of past events, he proved to be someone she had worked with at Pantex. That is a trick! The clowns make at least two regular hospital visits per week in Amarillo.

Overheard an all-American mother and children trio being introduced as Connie, Jeanette and Scot Carlson of Midland. Connie with her short hairdo and warm smile could pass for a high school student. Her parents are Erma Lee and Gene Barber. Another proud, petite grandma seen with a little one was Helen (Mrs. Gene) Hall. (Sorry about renaming her Ruth not long ago!)

Recent birthdays and anniversaries: Dr. Renee Grabato, Roy Kay, Eula Wilkerson, Beulah (Mrs. Jack) Merchant, Chanta and Dr. Vijay Mohan celebrated their anniversary and his birthday.

Trecia Kennedy breezed home before spending the summer in Florida.

Dr. Frank Venal and his little one enjoyed a Saturday afternoon outing at the mall together. Where was Vickie?

Here's a good track record! Jody and Wesley, sons of Mackie Wood, brought three track trophies home at Panhandle. Both boys for the mile relay — and setting a record. Jody doubled first place in intermediate hurdles.

Sumi Hayes caused eyes to turn her way when she attended the CCH awards dinner dressed in an outstanding Japanese kimono. She received a five year service award. A little bird tells me she sings beautifully in Japanese.

The latest downtown business retirees are Jane and John Gattis who recently sold their store. Plans include traveling — golfing is taken for granted. Happy retirement, Jane and John!

One of Pampa's most dearly loved citizens — and doctors — announced his well-earned retirement June 1, after 54 years of dedicated service to this community. He is Dr. R. M. Bellamy, honored and loved by all who know him. Wonder how many five generation families he has treated? How will his patients speak of his retirement? Very tearfully!

Do you enjoy seeing a whole roomful of people having fun, laughing and talking? That describes the recent retirement party for Alvin Scott, a postal employee for 35 or more years. Jean, efficient Gray County treasurer, and their two sons, Dennis and Steve, attended.

Lynn (Mrs. Doug) Lockwood oh'd and ah'd about the Pampa High School senior prom May 20. She peeked and reported: beautiful occasion, girls and dresses, will behaved dancers, and all in all a super class! The cream of the crop!

Randy Tucker was recently named recipient of an international Rotary scholarship to spend a full year abroad. In the meantime, the love bug hit Randy and he declined the scholarship in favor of marriage. Is that putting the heart before the course?

Absolutely no one who eats out should be lonely at supper hour when Pampa diners play musical tables by visting here and there. You simply must go see for yourself. That's where I learned Larry McWilliams dittoed Fred Neslage's hole-in-one on the golf course! Other visitors were Colleen Hamilton while Gene and Julie waited rather patiently.

Also visiting were Mary Burdette, Alice Smith, Pauline and Jack Vaughn and his mother, Evelyn Holloway. Floy Heath, Alberta Jeffries with a Beta Sigma Phi group of vivacious and brightly dressed young beauties, Wanda and Leonard Hudson, Henry McClelland — Margaret was visiting children and grandchildren in California — Fletcher Kennedy, Del Beagle, Edwin Vicars, Ruby and J. E. Gunn, Dee Patterson and Delea Vicars. Later, there were Laura and Floyd plus Gene Imel.

Must tell you about seeing another trio — Nancy and Doug Coffee with Tracy Cary. Nancy looked so cheery in an off-white suit with the brightest of pink blouses — perfect match for her sweet smile. Her family wedding the previous week was a breathtakingly memorable occasion for all who attended.

Wish you could have seen Agnes Rose dressed in white including a chic hat. The suit was outlined in navy or could have been black piping. Also spied Katie and Roy Taylor — pretty Jamilou Garren dressed in stripings of delicate pink with her good looking family. Minelle and Paul Turner.

Pauline and Milo Carlson made a congenial foursome. Saw loads of the Dr. W. L. Campbell clan including Nan and Dave Warren of Borger, their children and grandchildren. Is it possible Dr. Campbell can be a GREAT grandparent? Oh, me! Let's think about that a minute...

A word of caution. Do make the extra effort to drive safely this holiday weekend so I can see you next week! KATIE

Gardening

Castor oil plants make a quick dramatic effect. Their large palmate leaves and thick stems create a tropical air. They provide a quick screen or may be used to fill in bare areas of new property. The flower buds should be cut from the plant before they open so the seeds never form since they are poisonous. The foliage is also toxic, so this may not be a wise choice if there are small children around.

In talking to your flowers, we forgot to say it would be well that you watch your language.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

This coming year you may feel impelled to make some major changes in your life. Once you commit yourself to a positive course, proceed without looking back.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck may be taking a day off, so it's best to avoid speculative situations today. Without her help, the odds may be against you. Gemini predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't permit old, unresolved domestic issues to surface today, especially in front of outsiders. Something embarrassing and unpleasant could result.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be very careful today not to make hard tasks even more difficult. If co-workers suggest better methods, try to be receptive, not resistant.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A lesson can be learned in budgeting if you review your financial situation realistically. Don't condemn yourself for past mistakes. Strive to correct them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Guard against dictating today.

to persons over whom you have dominion. Even the lesser lights will rebel if they are ordered about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not permit dark thoughts to run rampant today, because they could cast a shadow over all of your involvements. A negative attitude is a liability.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let your peers draw you into a situation today which you can't really afford. If you haven't got the bread to back you up, it's best to back out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Subdue tendencies today to seesaw where your objectives are concerned. The results will be haphazard if you fail to stick to your course.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You could be too tough on yourself today to draw any conclusions from self-analyzing thoughts. Think of others, not No. 1.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be cautious where you place your trust today, especially when dealing with persons about whom you know little. Don't be deceived by outward appearances.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In ventures today requiring a joint effort, be sure all parties understand the ground rules. All must make equal contributions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rather than to put forth a dismal effort today, it's better to temporarily shelve frustrating projects. A poor attitude produces poor results.

Rene Enriquez of 'Hill Street Blues'

A new Capt. Queeg

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rene Enriquez says his own life began to change when his character on NBC's "Hill Street Blues" was named Hispanic Officer of the Year.

That was also a watershed for the character. Lt. Ray Culetano, who rejected the award as a meaningless, patronizing gesture.

"They gave him a banquet and what did they serve?" Enriquez asks. "Huevos rancheros. What was the drink? Margaritas. One speaker called him a Mexican and another called him a Puerto Rican. Nobody bothered to find out he is Colombian. He tells them off and he walks out. I've wanted to do that myself so many times."

"You work in a place for a year and nobody knows anything about you. Finally they have to give him a token. They make him Hispanic Officer of the Year. Big deal! How many Hispanics are there?"

Enriquez's character of Lt. Culetano is a part of the ensemble company that makes up the hit NBC series. The series, which veers between explosive drama and chaotic humor, made its debut in January 1981 and went on to sweep the Emmy awards that September. It repeated its performance at the awards ceremony the following year.

Enriquez is a tall, solidly built man, whose bald head is tanned a deep brown from a recent vacation at his oceanfront retreat in Mexico. He wears a white embroidered guayabera shirt from the Yucatan Peninsula.

He says, "All of a sudden my career has been blossoming. They gave me a 'three-parter on 'Hill Street Blues.' My character became such a positive role for Hispanics and others. I've just finished two movies. I've got another movie coming out in the fall and I'm under consideration for a miniseries."

Enriquez was born in San Francisco but grew up in Nicaragua, where he was descended from an old, established family. An uncle, Emiliano Chamorro, was president of Nicaragua prior to the Somozas. Another relative was publisher and editor of La Prensa until his assassination.

He has played a wide range of Hispanic characters and he hopes he will be accepted in other characterizations. For the miniseries he is up for a role as an Arab.

"I like very much the idea of being such a positive spokesman for Hispanics," he says. "It's very rewarding for me the love that Hispanics have for this character."

Michael Moriarty prepares to do a matinee performance of Herman Wouk's "The Caine Mutiny Court - Martial," recently at the Circle in the Square theater on Broadway. Moriarty plays the part of Capt. Queeg, the part made famous by the late Humphrey Bogart who sneered his way through the 1954 movie version. (AP Laserphoto)

The artists: The unrelenting moralist

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — In a country where more than 200,000 mourners flooded the streets for Jean-Paul Sartre's funeral three years ago, it's no surprise two recent volumes of the philosopher's private notebooks are already on France's best-seller list.

"Les Carnets de la Droite de Guerre" ("Notebooks From a Phony War") and "Cahiers Pour une Morale" ("Notebooks in Search of Morality") provide fresh insight into the man who would become a legend, inspiring generations of writers, philosophers and leftist political activists throughout the world.

"A writer must refuse to let himself be transformed into an institution," Sartre once said. But he failed miserably, turning into the undisputed giant of 20th century French literature. French literary critics, for once in general agreement, have hailed the works that contain fresh insight into the man who refused the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1964.

"Just as Picasso symbolizes painting, just as Marilyn (Monroe) symbolizes the movies, Jean-Paul Sartre incarnates literature," wrote Jean-Pierre Enard in Le Matin.

"More than any of his other works, the Notebooks initiate Sartre as a writer," wrote Enard. "With few notes on his works in progress, everything else — from his readings to his love of life, his daily experiences to his hopes and dreams, lead to just one thing — his becoming a writer."

For most Sartre admirers, the 432 pages of first-person narrative are merely a titillating prelude to the 1,000-page volume of letters to Simone de Beauvoir, his faithful companion of 40 years. The letters will be published this fall.

The two met while philosophy students at the prestigious Ecole Normale Supérieure, where the young Sartre was known as much for his practical jokes as his intellectual brilliance.

Although they never married, and maintained separate apartments, theirs was a unique relationship that remained intact, despite a series of well-publicized love affairs during which Miss de Beauvoir suffered fits of jealousy.

In the notebooks, the first of which Sartre wrote at age 34 in 1939-40 while a prisoner of war, Sartre describes himself as an incurable romantic, hopelessly drawn into love affairs doomed to fail.

Sartre also calls himself as an uncontrollable gourmand. Placed on a strict diet for health reasons, he admits that he also cheated on Miss de Beauvoir with food.

Critics say Sartre's unforgiving self-portrait is both touching and rare, for he once declared the private side of man was not meant to be seen, even posthumously.

He wrote nonstop during his year in prison, despite a painful and steadily worsening eye condition that eventually led to total blindness.

Bixby's 'Beantown' a pleasant surprise

By David Handler

Sometimes a hit does come along in mid-season. Not often, but sometimes. Look at "The A Team." It's the only new show of the entire season to land in the ratings top 10. The only one.

Mostly, though, what we've been seeing lately has been a grab bag of almosts, not quite hits, maybe and outright no ways. They've been coming and going so fast it's hard to pay attention to all of them.

Two that come quickly to mind, "Wizards and Warriors" and "Zorro and Son," don't even warrant that attention. Maybe CBS thought they sounded like cute ideas, but they sure have turned out as clumsy spoofs — "Wizards and Warriors" of the dragon-slayer epics, "Zorro and Son" of, well, you figure it out.

There is actually one pleasant surprise — "Goodnight, Beantown," a chipper, appealing adult sitcom.

Some of what we've been seeing hasn't been altogether bad. In that category, I'd nominate CBS's "Tucker's Witch" and ABC's "Ryan's Four."

"Beantown" focuses on an anchorman Matt Cassidy (Bill Bixby), who has been broadcasting the news in Boston since the days of the Nehru jacket. Unfortunately, the ratings for his straight, no-nonsense show have been slipping. So his boss brings in a woman co-anchor. Jennifer Barnes (Marianne Hartley) also happens to be Matt's new, and quite annoying, next-door neighbor.

He is hostile to the co-anchor idea. He immediately dismisses Jennifer and her West Coast credentials. "If I want to be patronized and dismissed," she snaps, "I can call my ex-husband."

They bicker. When they go on the air the bickering doesn't stop. This makes Matt even angrier, until their little he and she act turns out to be a smash hit. And we're on our way.

"Tucker's Witch" actually got its start last fall, but was yanked so abruptly — it was just about the only fall series to get the quick hook — that I doubt many people got a chance to look at it. I certainly didn't.

Michael Moriarty in 'The Caine Mutiny'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One of Humphrey Bogart's most memorable film roles was as the tyrannical, unbalanced Capt. Queeg, U.S.N., in "The Caine Mutiny." It's a tough act to follow.

But Michael Moriarty's doing it. He stars as the good captain in the Broadway revival of "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial." Herman Wouk's 1954 drama about the Navy trial held after Queeg's executive officer forcibly relieves him of command of his World War II destroyer during a typhoon.

Still basking in the afterglow of good reviews for his work in the recently-opened show, Moriarty isn't bothered that many think of Bogart as Queeg — the role originally played on stage by Lloyd Nolan.

"No, because the movie script and the play are two entirely different pieces," he says. "The movie had flashbacks, made it so clear that Queeg was off his gourd. There was no suspense."

"Here, it's up to the audience to determine who's telling the truth and who is not. It's like doing an entirely different script with the same character."

Besides, he adds, "acting to me is doing classic roles just because they're there to be done. The fact other actors did them just seems a moot point."

Moriarty owns Emmys for "The Glass Menagerie" and "The Holocaust," and won Broadway's Tony award in 1974 for his work in "Find Your Way Home."

But the tall, lanky, 42-year-old actor, who shares top billing in "Mutiny" with another Tony-winner, John Rubinstein, doesn't think of himself as a leading man.

Even though that's what first got him noticed in "Bang the Drum Slowly," the widely-praised 1973 baseball movie where he essayed a quietly flakey pitcher who refuses to abandon his dim, dying catcher, played by Robert De Niro.

He could have cashed in on it, he reckons, "probably marketed myself into the kind of Jimmy Stewart-Henry Fonda mold. But I couldn't. I wasn't trained to do that, nor do I want to. I don't even think of it in those terms."

"I'd prefer they say, 'Ah, the new Lon Chaney, he's done everything, ballplayers, gays, crazy commanders.' Besides, had I capitalized on 'Bang the Drum,' I probably wouldn't have the rich life I have now."

The "rich life" includes teaching, composing, a bit of singing, jazz piano and, for kicks, softball (his grandfather played with and managed the Detroit Tigers) in the Broadway Show League with his "Caine Mutiny" colleagues.

He isn't quite sure what he's most involved in these days — music or acting.

Largely self-taught in theory, harmony and composition, he's currently working on a classical piece for strings, which he hopes will be in the vein of Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings."

Another project: "White Jazz," a one-man musical about "a rather confused" jazz musician-composer.

'Entity' horror-ble to women

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — There's a lot of discussion about the new horror film "The Entity." The film deals with a woman who claims she has been assaulted and raped by something that isn't there — an entity, a spirit, something.

Women's groups don't like the theme. They object to the fact that a woman is assaulted — or perhaps only thinks she has been assaulted — and feel it is degrading to women.

Barbara Hershey plays the woman in the film. Everybody, even the film's critics, agree her performance is brilliant.

Miss Hershey says she is surprised by the fuss the picture has kicked up. As far as she is concerned, the biggest problem with the film was it was a tough acting assignment.

"The Entity" is based on a true case, a Culver City, Calif., woman who claimed she had been attacked by something that wasn't there.

He works with hands all day and feet all night

By BILL JOHNSON

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Lewis Jones works with his hands all day, installing or fixing someone's plumbing, but at night he's on his toes performing a pax de deux tour en l'air.

He's the first to admit that he's something of a novelty. "As far as I know, I'm the only dancing plumber in the country," he says with a grin.

A serious ballet student for five years, his advertisement in the telephone company's yellow pages features a large wrench and the phrase, "The Dancing Plumber."

And while the visions conjured by the two vocations might seem as different as John Wayne and Rudolf Nureyev, Jones sees them as just differing expressions of civilization.

"Doctors keep you well, but plumbing keeps you from dying before your time," he explains. "Doctors and plumbing grew up together as civilization grew. Ballet is about the ultimate expression of real civilization."

Jones, clad in blue jeans and a green shirt with a dirt smudge on one shoulder, talks animatedly about both ballet and plumbing. His two Manx cats, Mark Anthony and Cleopatra, wander through the living room of his home.

He mentions several female dancers, and their families, as being particularly supportive. "They knew what a hard time I was having, working and taking dance lessons at the same time," he says.

When I went back he said, "You really weren't kidding." He thought I had gone out to get drunk or something.

He adds that, still to often, he gets a questioning look when he explains that he is a ballet dancer.

"But I think, more and more, men are beginning to realize that ballet dancing is not what it had the stigma of for so long," he says. "I think a lot of them are finally realizing that it takes a real athlete to be a male ballet dancer."

If ballet dancing is at one end of the scale, the martial arts are at the other. But strange as it may seem, it was the martial arts that got Jones into ballet in the first place.

He was deeply involved in kung fu under master George Ing and was taking part in a demonstration at St. Gregory's College in Shawnee.

"I mentioned to one of the other participants, Donnie Hardin, that I had seen some ballet on TV the night before and how some of the moves looked very much like what we were doing."

As he tells it now, just so he wouldn't have to fib, he went to the University of Oklahoma and took one semester of ballet.

That was about 10 years ago, and the tiny seed that was planted at St. Gregory's didn't take firm root until he went to a ballet performance and saw Bojan Spassoff.

"Man, he was really tearing them up," Jones says. That was enough to make him a dedicated dancer. He spent one year in classes with the Metropolitan Ballet and the last four with Spassoff and his wife, Stephanie Wolf, who are the instructors at the School of Ballet Oklahoma.

"I couldn't have done it without the support," says Jones, 30. "Sometimes I go to practice all covered with dirt and just sort of shake myself a little, get into my dance tights and we're all the same."
