

Proposal sent to county insurer

Settlement offered in Grandstaff suit

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

Lawyers for the family of 6666 Ranch cowboy Jim Grandstaff, killed by police in 1981, have offered to settle a $3 million lawsuit against Gray County, one of several defendants, before the case is called for trial in Amarillo federal court Monday.

A $300,000 offer to settle with Gray County for total damages and fees was made by the plaintiffs in a June 28 letter. The offer to settle was made by the plaintiffs' law firm, Haynes and Fullenweider of Houston, to the county's law firm, Underwood, Wilson, Berry, Stein & Johnson of Amarillo.

The county's lawyers forwarded the offer to settle to the county's insurance company, St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Companies and its agent, Jean West of Amarillo. County Judge Carl Kennedy said the proposed settlement is "between the plaintiff and insurance company." He said the county's insurance company has not said anything about an out-of-court settlement with the Grandstaff family.

In making the separate, "firm offer to settle" with Gray County, lawyers for the Grandstaffs do not enter the facts of the case "of which we are all aware."

"We view this case as one of virtually certain liability for actual damages and a very strong case for exemplary damages for gross negligence. The chances are excellent that the actual verdict would far exceed our settlement demand. Mr. Grandstaff was a relatively young breadwinner (31) and left two clear dependents," the letter begins.

Its says the plaintiffs will settle for $100,000 in lawyers' fees and costs; $144,000 for Grandstaff's widow, Sharon; $48,000 for his daughter by previous marriage, Jo Cheryl; $4,000 for his father, Joe Grandstaff; and $2,000 each for his stepsons, Randy and Robert Gatlin.

"The offer will remain open until July 20, 1983; selection of a jury; or written withdrawal, whichever occurs first," the letter says.

Gray County is just one defendant in the lawsuit. Kennedy said Friday he believes out-of-court settlements were also proposed to the other defendants, which include the City of Borger, the City of Pampa, Hutchinson and Carson Counties and several past and present law enforcement officers.

Parties to the $3 million civil-rights lawsuit are scheduled to meet in federal court at Amarillo Monday and hear the case called for trial.

The case is set for trial Monday along with a number of other cases on the docket of Federal Judge Mary Lou Robinson. Robinson will try the pending docket's criminal cases first, and then will hear the civil suits, including the Grandstaff case.

No firm court date has been set, but lawyers say the case may go to trial early next month.

Shortly after 4 a.m. Aug. 11, 1981, police chased a fleeing suspect, Lonnie Cox, east from Borger on Texas 152. Police traded gunshots with Cox, who crashed his pickup on the 6666 Ranch in front of Grandstaff's home. Cox temporarily escaped on foot.

Grandstaff drove the few hundred yards from his house to investigate the commotion outside. He parked next to several Borger police cars stopped on the pasture where Cox had crashed and run.

As he stepped from his truck, police shot Grandstaff to death. He was killed by a single bullet in the back. Police later said they mistakenly fired their weapons at Grandstaff, thinking he was Cox, but lawyers for the officers still deny that police killed the cowboy.

Officers from nearby counties and towns were also identified at the scene the morning Grandstaff died.

School controversy resurfaces

Church, state to battle Monday

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

The State of Texas will again try to close down the Pampa day care center operated by the Rev. Jerry West, minister of the Pampa Baptist Temple, when the attorney general battles West in 223rd District Court Monday.

District Judge Don Cain will preside over the hearing to determine whether West must submit his day care center to state inspection and licensing.

West claims the Pampa Christian Academy, a school and day care center that admits children from infant to high school age, is an extension of his ministry and church, the Pampa Baptist Temple. He says the school is therefore protected from state intrusion by the First Amendment's guarantee of the Freedom of Religion.

He says state inspectors from the Department of Human Resources have no business in his Christian school. Before the state first took him to court in October 1981, West sent back his DHR license to operate the day care center.

The DHR and attorney general say West's day care center must submit to inspection or close down.

The hearing to force licensing follows complaints from some parents that their children were abused while in West's care at the Christian Academy.

West admits that, based on Bible beliefs, he and the staff administer corporal punishment, but denies he abuses the children.

Since it began in 1981, the on-going hearing has been started, stopped and delayed several times.

West is a follower and admirer of the late Rev. Lester Roloff, Roloff, who successfully fought the state over licensing of his Christian home in Corpus Christi, was scheduled to testify for West the last time the Pampa preacher was in court in May last year. Roloff, however, left town without testifying. The evangelist has since been killed in a plane crash.

Monday's hearing in Judge Cain's court will begin at 10 a.m.

Rowsey tells incidents leading to throat slashing

By CARNELL HUNNICUTT
Staff Writer

An apparent feud between two next-door neighbors erupted into the beating and slaying of a 29-year-old Pampa woman July 10. However, two persons involved said in exclusive interviews this week that each was responsible for the outbreak of violence.

Carol Witt suffered a six-inch cut to her throat and two black eyes at about midnight Sunday, July 10. After undergoing surgery at Coronado Community Hospital here, she was placed in the hospital's intensive care unit for several days. Late Saturday hospital officials said Witt has been released from the hospital.

Joseph Wayne Rowsey, 42, of 453 Pitts remained in Gray County jail late Saturday in lieu of a $50,000 bond on aggravated assault charges, following his arrest July 10.

Rowsey, in an interview Saturday, accused Witt of engaging in a homosexual relationship with his daughter.

The problems began when his daughter began babysitting for the Witts, Rowsey said.

"It's been about two years ago, she started asking my daughter to babysit for her," he said. "We thought they were nice people. I don't know them personally, Randy or Carol, so they seemed nice enough, you know. They were living together then, but they've been separated before."

"Anyway, she (Carol) said the other babysitter got pregnant. That's what Ann (Rowsey's daughter) said she said. And Ann started babysitting for her. We didn't know at the time until just a few days ago that she was a homosexual," Rowsey charged in the interview.

"She started giving my daughter dope (marijuana) and plus some little kinda pills, and showing her all these nasty books with homosexuals and got my daughter to start committing homosexual acts with her. She (Ann) said they would cut off all the lights and light up a bunch of damn candles, you know — all kinds of unspeakable things," he said.

Rowsey also charged that Witt's husband, Randy, and a woman from New Mexico were involved in homosexual acts with his daughter.

Rowsey alleged that Witt's husband left the Witt home when the couple separated and after this, a group of people Rowsey termed "hippies" began coming over to the Witt house.

"As more came in, the group started getting bigger and they hit my daughter. After two of them hippies (had sex with) her, they hit her and broke her glasses and said if she ever told me or anyone else that they were going to kill her," Rowsey added.

"I noticed my daughter started getting nervous," Rowsey said, scratching his neck. "And they started threatening her and that dope or whatever they were giving her was probably working on her. We knew something was wrong."

Lighting one cigarette after another, Rowsey told this reporter that his daughter finally broke down while talking to his wife and told her the things Rowsey had said earlier.

"I called the sheriff that day during the daytime and Mr. Jordan was in church so they sent a deputy over here named Jerry. I don't know his last name. We told him everything that's been going on."

Rowsey said that later the "hippies" threatened Ann, telling her that they were going to burn her house. Rowsey said he told the "hippies" that Ann couldn't babysit for them anymore. And sometime after that, Rowsey said he told one of the men next door whose truck wouldn't start that he had called the sheriff and that the sheriff could help the man start his truck.

"I guess he went and told Carol and the rest of all them. We were in the process of filing charges if the sheriff hadn't been in church," Rowsey said.

"That's what led us to it," Rowsey said of the violence that happened late July 10. "It just seem unreal to me that anything like that unspeakable things here. I was living right next door to all that stuff and didn't have an idea to what was going on."

But Carol Witt did not mention any of the things Rowsey charged in his interview.

"I arrived home about 11 p.m.," she remembered. "And as I drove up the driveway he (Rowsey) met me and forced me out of the car into his house then he beat me and cut my throat. I don't know how I did it but I talked my way out of the situation."

Randy Witt, Carol's husband added, "She was dragged from her car to Rowsey's house and in front of his family with my four-year-old son watching the whole ordeal. He cut her throat and then sat her on the couch and talked with her."

"My son was terrified! He (Rowsey) put a six-inch gash on her throat and then tells everyone he didn't try to kill her. He hit her and blackened both of her eyes while in the process of getting her into his house," Witt said.

"I want to see the guy go to jail as long as possible," he added.

When asked if he had cut Carol Witt's throat, Rowsey said his attorney advised him not to discuss the actual incident.

John T. White, a Borger attorney, said Saturday that he will represent Rowsey whether the court appoints an attorney for him or not. White said he believed the record will show that Rowsey should not have been arrested and that he plans to file a writ of habeas corpus in 223rd District Court early next week.

Judge delays Nall, Pfeil suit

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

WHEELER — District Judge Grainger McIlhany has postponed the trial for damages filed by a Wheeler theater owner against a Wheeler preacher.

Trial for a $500,000 libel suit that theater owner Ed Nall filed against the Rev. Ricky Pfeil and his church was to have started Monday.

However, both sides agreed to delay the trial until September 12, and McIlhany granted the continuance.

Nall's lawsuit claims the preacher and his followers at the Wheeler Christian Center have damaged his health and reputation and have ruined business at the Rogue Theater in Wheeler. Nall says the damage occurred during the past two years as Pfeil and his followers protested "R"-rated movies shown at the Rogue. The suit says the preacher and others have harassed Nall and his customers.

Testimony during a previous hearing for a temporary injunction granted against Pfeil said that during the protests, the preacher has taken down license plates numbers of customers who park and go into the theater. Pfeil and his followers have walked back-and-forth in front of the Rogue, handing out religious tracts, singing gospel songs, and speaking in "tongues," according to testimony during the earlier hearing.

Pfeil maintains he is only exercising his right to protest "R"-rated movies, movies he considers "raw filth." The preacher has said he realizes the restricted movies are shown at theaters most everywhere and even on pay television, but he said that he protests at the Rogue because it is in his hometown. He says Wheeler, Texas is a good place to start cleaning up what he calls "debauchery" and an "outpouring of sewage."

Five hurt in accident

By JULIA CLARK

MIAMI — Five Oklahoma teenagers on their way to the Pampa's Top O' Texas Rodeo were helped by several unidentified passersby following a one-car accident near Miami shortly before noon Saturday.

A medic, on his way to work, stopped and aided the more seriously injured passengers until the ambulance arrived, said Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines.

Brines said the unidentified medic was only one of several people giving aid at the scene of the accident on U.S. Highway 60 about three miles west of Miami, when he arrived.

"The traffic was backing up and I had my hands full trying to prevent more accidents. Those people gave aid until the ambulances arrived. The medic said he was late for work and I didn't get his name," Brines said. He said the car rolled about 3/4 times before stopping.

Robert Spurlin, 16, Colleen Spurlin, 15, and Paul Spurlin, 13, all of Reydon, Okla., and twin sisters, Teresa and Corrine Leenerts, 15, of Chynne, Okla. were admitted to Coronado Community Hospital.

Paul Spurlin underwent emergency surgery and was then transferred to an Amarillo hospital, a hospital spokesman said. The other teenagers were listed in stable condition at press time.

Officials fear 19 dead after helicopter crash

LONDON (AP) — A helicopter shuttling passengers to the Scilly Isles vacation resort crashed and sank in the English Channel Saturday and officials said 20 of the 26 people aboard were missing and feared drowned.

The six others were rescued after lifeboats and two Royal Navy helicopters raced to the crash scene two miles off St. Mary's, the largest of the five main islands.

The survivors — two pilots, two local women, a 12-year-old boy and a 14-year-old girl — were taken to local hospitals, officials said. One woman was reported seriously injured.

A team of divers was brought in to try to locate survivors in the sunken wreckage. But Michael Osborne, spokesman for Falmouth Coast Guard, held out little hope of finding any more. "Had there been any other survivors, they would have been found on the surface," he said. "It is a matter of looking for a number of bodies at this stage."

Officials feared it would be the worst helicopter accident in British history.

The British Airways helicopter had 23 passengers and three crew members aboard when it crashed, an airline spokesman said.

The helicopter was en route from Penzance on the Cornish peninsula to the Scilly Isles, 25 miles off England's southwest coast, when it lost radio contact just before noon (8 a.m. EDT), the airline spokesman said.

There was no immediate indication of the cause of the accident and none of the passengers was identified. A team of investigators from the Civil Aviation Authority was sent to the scene.

The Royal Navy Rescue Center initially reported seven survivors had been picked up by lifeboats. But the navy and the Department of Transport later said six people had been rescued.

Lt. Cmdr. Andrew Lockett, rescue coordinator at the navy air station at Culdrose, said the Sikorsky 61 helicopter had broken up and the main fuselage was believed to be at the bottom of the channel, about 200 feet deep.

"This makes it a very difficult diving operation," the Falmouth spokesman said, because the depth gives divers only five minutes to work on the wreckage before they have to come to the surface.

Seas were calm but visibility near the crash scene was very poor, the spokesman said. St. Mary's Airport was closed to all traffic because of the accident and the fog.

There was no immediate indication of the cause of the accident and none of the passengers was identified. A team of investigators from the Civil Aviation Authority was sent to the scene.

Britain's worst helicopter crash killed 13 oil workers off Great Yarmouth in the North Sea on Aug. 13, 1981.

The worst helicopter disaster in aviation history occurred on May 10, 1977 when an Israeli military Sea Stallion crashed in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan, killing 54 people.

The Scilly Isles, with some 140 rocky outcroppings and islets, are part of Prince Charles' Duchy of Cornwall and thrive on exporting millions of daffodils and narcissi.

Old woman jailed for hot temper

HOUSTON (AP) — Although she is 81 years old and weighs only 105 pounds, Minnie Samuels doesn't let anyone push her around.

Samuels found herself in trouble with the law Friday after she allegedly pulled a .25-caliber automatic pistol from her apron and threatened to shoot a city van pool driver.

Later, when a Houston policeman questioned her about the incident, Samuels wrestled with him for possession of her pistol, tried to grab a butcher knife to fight him off, punched him in the face and kicked him in the knees, according to a police report.

Samuels remained in Harris County Jail Saturday in lieu of $2,000 bond on an aggravated assault charge.

stemming from the incident with the van driver. Police said no charges were pending against her from the scuffle with the arresting officer.

Gray County commissioners to follow FAA minority program

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Gray County commissioners agreed to adopt the Federal Aviation Administration's minority business enterprise program "insofar as this does not conflict with Texas State law" at the commissioner's court meeting Friday.

Gray County has applied to the FAA for a grant to extend the runway at Perry Lefors Airport in Pampa. As a condition for receiving the grant the FAA requires the county to adopt a "minority business enterprise" program.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said the FAA is basically saying that in the awarding of bids - contracts for work on the runway — "the county endeavor to award a certain percentage" of that contract to a minority or woman-run or owned business.

"As a state agency, we have to comply with the state law," Kennedy said. Therefore the county can adopt the FAA program as it pertains to the grant and insofar as it does not conflict with the state law, he said.

Work at the airport is progressing slowly, said Gene Barber, consulting engineer. He said some problems still exist with the radio-controlled runway lights.

Blue Cross Blue Shield of Texas, the only insurance company to bid for the county's group hospitalization insurance, was awarded the contract by the court.

In adopting the indigent care policy program between Coronado Community Hospital and the county, the commissioners decided to keep the program basically the same. Commissioners also approved the addition of a notice on the cover page of the patient application for indigent care which will say that any patient falsifying a claim - failing to give a true statement - will have to pay the entire bill.

The commissioners approved changing the polling place in Precinct 5 from the Senior Citizen's Center to Lovett Library in McLean. Precinct 10's polling place was changed from the County Courthouse to Lovett Memorial Library in Pampa.

In other business, commissioners offered a five-year lease bid to the Soil Conservation Service at the County Annex, asking 35 cents a square foot or $225 per month rent.

Fire chief's son charged with arson

PERRYTON (Spc) — The son of the Perryton Fire Chief has been charged with setting a house on fire in Booker earlier this week.

Richard "Turkey" Luther, 20, son of Perryton Fire Chief Luther, and James Bechtold, 23, both of Perryton, were charged with arson in district court at Lipscomb.

According to Booker Police Chief Bill Person, Booker City Councilman Jerry Hoover chased two men down an alley when he saw them run from his neighbor's house in the 400 block of Azalea in Booker about midnight Tuesday.

Two units of the Booker Volunteer Fire Department were called to the burning house where Hoover saw the men. The house sustained heavy damage in the fire.

Person said after the men ran from the burning house, Hoover took down the license number on their red and white 1981 Chevrolet pickup and called police.

Luther and Bechtold were arrested near the Friends Church on Main Street in Booker about an hour after the house fire started.

Booker is located about 15 miles east of Perryton. Part of the town is in Ochiltree County, and part is in Lipscomb County.

The house where the suspected arson fire started is located in Lipscomb County, and the two suspects were taken to Lipscomb after their arrests.

After being charged with arson, Luther and Bechtold posted $5,000 and were released.

Best riding club - Boys Ranch Honor Patrol of Borger, first; Gray County 4-H, second; and Southern Skies, third.

Best western costume, male - Father Ronald McCrary.

Classic cars - J.T. Richardson, Gazelle roadster, first; Robert Brogdon, 1955 Ford.

Parade winners may pick up their trophies at the Top O' Texas Rodeo office in the Chamber of Commerce office in the Hughes Building.

Also, as part of rodeo festivities sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce this week, three Pampa stores were chosen as the best Western decorated.

Also received first place honors. Second place went to K-Mart and third place to Rheam's Diamond Shop. Anthony's in the Coronado Center won an honorable mention.

Three killed in Wheeler accident

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

WHEELER - Three people were killed near here when the car in which they were riding collided with a farm tractor early Friday morning.

Denise Lloyd, 26, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Bruce Rogers, 11, of Little Rock, Ark., were pronounced dead at the scene by Wheeler Justice of the Peace Clark Reagan. Driver of the car, Ronnie Lloyd, 31, also of Colorado Springs, was pronounced dead on arrival at Parkview Hospital in Wheeler.

The accident occurred about 2 1/2 miles west of Wheeler on Texas Highway 152 about 8 a.m. Friday, according to Department of Public Safety records. Steve Adkins of Wheeler, was reportedly driving his farm tractor, pulling a manure spreader, east on the highway when the westbound 1978 Pontiac TransAm crossed the center line.

Adkins tried to avoid the accident by steering his tractor toward the shoulder of the road, records show, but the car was apparently moving too fast. The car hit the left rear tire of the tractor, and, after side-swiping the manure spreader, spun around and came to rest in the middle of the highway.

The child, identified as a nephew of the couple in the car, was thrown from the car. Ronnie Lloyd was in the U.S. Air Force, stationed at the academy in Colorado Springs.

Gregory named pharmacy director

Bob Gregory has been named director of the pharmacy department at Coronado Community Hospital, according to Norman Knox, hospital administrator.

Gregory was previously employed by Quincy City Hospital in Boston, Mass., which is managed by Hospital Corporation of America, the firm which owns the local hospital.

He has a master's of science degree in pharmacy from Massachusetts College of Pharmacy in Boston. He is a native of Binghamton, N.Y.

Gregory and his wife Karen, who has a master's degree in nursing, arrived in Pampa July 7.

Knox said that with appointment of Gregory to the pharmacy department, plans are underway to upgrade services of the hospital pharmacy.

Texas in running as the site of world's largest atom smasher

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Science professors at Texas colleges say the state now stands a better chance to convince the federal government to spend $2 billion on a giant atom-smashing accelerator, which could become the single most costly science project undertaken in U.S. history.

Texas is one of at least four states vying for the device, which would require 100 miles of circular, underground tunnels and sophisticated gear. The contraption, which would be the largest atom-smasher ever built, would provide up to 20 trillion volts to push opposing beams of protons and antiprotons into collision at near the speed of light.

The result, scientists say, is that individual atoms could be dissected in greater detail than ever before, and researchers would be better equipped to find out what welds together atoms, the building blocks of the universe.

Dissecting atoms into their components is "just like peeling an onion, layer by layer," said Peter McIntyre, an associate physics professor at Texas A&M University.

Atoms already have been broken up into protons, neutrons, and one level further, into "quarks," which are the building-blocks of the larger units.

But there are many more mysteries to be uncovered within the atom, McIntyre said.

"There's something else down there. I know it," he said. "At this stage it's what I'd call a smell in the nose of a theoretical physicist."

Scientists around the state were encouraged last week when a federal Department of Energy panel reviewing a New York laboratory decided not to recommend locating the accelerator there.

The Texas group wanting the device built here includes scientists from A&M, the University of Texas, Rice University and the University of Houston.

A&M physics department head Robert Tribble and McIntyre said there is a good chance the accelerator will one day be built in the area.

At A&M, McIntyre is heading the lobbying effort to convince federal officials to locate in the state the giant atom-smasher, which already has been dubbed "Texatron" by hopeful scientists.

McIntyre, working in collaboration with Nobel Prize-winning Harvard physicist Sheldon Glashow, has traveled to Washington to talk to Department of Energy officials to push the project for Texas.

The Texatron concept, if approved by the Department of Energy and Congress, calls for undertaking research somewhere in the Houston-Austin-College Station triangle, or perhaps just across Interstate 45 in East Texas.

At least one politician also is excited about the prospect of hosting the giant atom-smasher.

Gov. Mark White's office told the Houston Chronicle he already has promised the four universities to "help out" in acquiring land to dig the 30-foot underground tunnel ring. McIntyre said the land alone would cost about $250 million.

Some people say Texas is a good candidate for the accelerator because of its bountiful open land, which is crucial for the atom-smasher site, and because the state government and universities have expressed an interest in the project.

"There seems to be a willingness here in Texas to look closely at making a commitment," said A&M spokesman Lane Stephenson.

DOE would foot at least 90 percent of the bill for the project.

Awaits sentencing

Jury says

Clore guilty of attempted murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Ray Clore faces a possible two to twenty years in prison after a jury found him guilty of attempted murder for shooting his comatose father in the head.

Clore, 26, originally accused of murder in the death of his father, was convicted Friday on a lesser charge of attempted murder.

Prosecutors asked State District Judge Ted Poe to reduce the charge earlier in the day when they decided the cause of death of the elder Clore, who had suffered many ailments including kidney and heart disease, was uncertain.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said he will ask the jury for probation when the punishment phase of the trial begins Monday.

Clore testified Thursday that he shot his father — his "best friend" — because he thought the comatose man was suffering.

"I walked in the (nursing home) room and stood there and looked at my father," he said. "I said a prayer. I prayed that I'd be forgiven for what I was about to do if it was wrong."

Clore said he believed his father, 62-year-old Robert Clore, had been brain-dead since November, when a heart attack left him comatose. When Zimmermann asked the defendant if he believed he had killed his father, Clore said, "I stopped him from breathing."

Zimmermann said Friday he thought prosecutors gained "a psychological advantage" when the charge was lessened. "They didn't have to brand him as a murderer," he said of the jury.

Prosecutor R.K. Hansen said, "I don't believe it is a compromise verdict at all. It's totally supported by the evidence. I'm personally satisfied because I think the jury did the right thing."

During final arguments Friday, Hansen told jurors there is no provision in Texas law for "mercy killing" or attempted mercy killing. "What Billy Ray Clore did was wrong under the law," Hansen said. "He attempted to cause his father's death."

Grain in poor shape, receiver says

BRADY, Texas (AP) — Some grains stored in a defunct cooperative's elevator are in such poor shape they are unsalable, says the court-appointed receiver.

Ed R. Whitesides of Austin also told a state district judge Friday that grain still is missing, although some grain not previously inventoried was found in the elevator in this North Central Texas town.

Whitesides, a retired Texas Department of Agriculture official, was given responsibility for liquidating the grain in early June after the department sued the Farmers and Ranchers Cooperative, which had been in operation nearly 40 years.

State officials suspended the co-op's grain storage license after inspectors found a substantial grain shortage during a routine inspection.

About 40 depositors had stored grain — including 132,000 bushels of wheat and 4.9 million pounds of milo — in the elevator under the federal commodity loan program.

During an informal court hearing before State District Judge V. Murray Jordan Friday, Whitesides said the grain probably would be moved from the elevator by the end of this week.

"We have had some problems getting the grain out of several bins," Whitesides said. "I thought we could have finished up today, but it will take us some more time."

He said several grains were mixed in one bin, and that a load of corn had been put into a bin with oats and milo.

The corn tested nearly 25 percent moisture and much of it is unusable, even for deer feed, Whitesides said.

"Some of that grain has been wet so long it rotted and stopped up the equipment," causing a delay in the transfer, he added.

Whitesides said a preliminary inspection revealed that about 630,700 pounds of milo was missing, valued at about $33,428, based on the amount the milo brought at high bid.

Darrell Ketchum, supervisor of the state's grain warehouse section, said in early June that about 742,628 pounds of milo and about 19,222 bushels of wheat was missing when inspectors checked the facility.

Whitesides said he had shipped more than 3.4 million pounds of milo from the storage facility through July 13. Wheat shipments have totaled 3.2 million pounds through July 14, and the receiver said he has not received the final rail car weight tickets on an additional 20 loads.

Klan marches through downtown Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Sixty-two Ku Klux Klan members, protected by a wedge of riot-equipped police officers, marched five blocks in a drizzling rain Saturday to shout their messages of white supremacy.

The robed Klansmen and women, carrying flags and posters, stopped at each intersection on the downtown parade route to shout and chant to crowds. Onlookers, estimated by police to total 1,000, were allowed to gather only at streetcorners behind barricades and double rows of officers.

As the Klan approached, the crowds chanted "Death to the Klan" and "Go home honkies" and made obscene gestures.

A few eggs, a rock, a cigarette lighter and a retractable umbrella were thrown at the Klansmen but did not cause any injuries. One onlooker set off a firecracker.

Bridge closed to all trucks

CANADIAN — The bridge on U.S. Highway 83-60, north of Canadian, will be closed for repairs beginning at 8:30 a.m. Monday, according to Department of Public Safety Sgt. Jim Powell.

Powell said automobile traffic on the bridge will be limited and all trucks will be re-routed until repairs are completed, which may take two weeks.

"No truck traffic will be allowed on the bridge until repairs are completed," Powell said. "The Lake Marvin turn-off is one possible route around Canadian," he said.

"You're a bunch of illegal aliens and communists and you ought to be rounded up like the criminals that you are," Klan leader Charles Lee told the crowd. Lee, a construction painter, declined to disclose his hometown.

At the end of the parade, the marchers crossed the street and held a rally on the steps of the old Municipal Building.

One woman with the Klan group was arrested before the march for carrying a pistol and for having a rifle in her car. Two spectators were taken into custody for carrying an 18-inch machete and one was arrested for throwing a cigarette lighter at the marchers, police chief Billy Prince said.

Prince called the march "successful, safe, and relatively uneventful" and said he was "very proud of the way it was handled" by his officers.

"The citizens faced a test of Dallas' maturity and they did very well," Prince said. About 12 people were injured and another dozen arrested in February when rock-throwing protesters battled police protecting a handful of Klan marchers in Austin. No one was injured in subsequent marches in Houston and San Antonio.

"If (Gov.) Mark White doesn't listen to the Klan, we are going to have to go back to Austin and get our message across again," Lee warned Saturday. "We sent him registered letters but he won't talk to us."

Eight mounted officers followed the parade and a police helicopter and dogs were on hand.

The city spent $80,000 in overtime and equipment used by 550 officers involved in the operation, Prince said. On a usual Saturday, about 125 police officers patrol Dallas. About 80 percent of the businesses on Main Street, the parade route, said they would follow police officials' advice and close during the march.

The Dallas Anti-Klan Coalition, which held a rally after the Klan march, filed a lawsuit Saturday challenging the city's power to grant parade permits. The suit seeks to overturn the parade ordinance on grounds police denied the coalition its constitutional rights when it rejected the group's application to march at 1:30 p.m., just after the Klan march.

Instead, police gave the coalition a permit for a 3 p.m. march, which coalition chairman James Price said restricts his group's right of free speech.

The Dallas Anti-Klan Coalition did not march, but it did hold a small rally in front of Dallas City Hall, about a half mile from the parade route. About 100 people gathered to hear speakers rail against the Klan, lead contamination in some Dallas neighborhoods, a proposed public transit system and the closing of a public housing project.

"We have come to oppose the recruiting effort of the Klan in our city," said James Price, a leader of the Dallas Anti-Klan Coalition. "Here in Dallas the powers that be support the Klan by benign neglect. The Klan survives again because of this benign neglect."

Health commissioner reports on AIDS cases, Agent Orange

AUSTIN (AP) — State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said Saturday 20 cases of the rare disease AIDS have been reported in Texas this year, but he indicated that figure does not accurately reflect the extent of the problem.

Bernstein also reported to the State Health Board on Agent Orange and refugees coming into Texas.

Dr. C.E. Gibbs of San Antonio urged the board to make "low-weight" babies a priority issue in its public health efforts.

Gibbs said a proposed program to reduce the number of low-weight babies from 14 to 11 per 1,000 population could save $125 million in health care costs by 1990.

Bernstein said since 1981, a total of 37 cases of AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — has been reported in Texas, "which nobody believes." Seventeen people in Texas have died from AIDS, which results from unknown causes.

Twenty cases have been reported this year, according to a written report from Dr. Jerome Greenberg, associate commissioner for preventable diseases, but he said, "Some treatment and research institutions, particularly in Houston, have a backlog of unreported cases which we expect to add to the total in the next two or three weeks."

The last national total reported was 1,831 cases which indicates that AIDS is still a relatively rare disease," Greenberg said.

His figures show that since 1981, Harris County has reported 25 cases, Bexar five, Dallas four, Travis one, Victoria one and Bell one.

Bernstein said, "We're having serious problems with reporting by some individuals."

He said a medical task force had been formed to study the disease.

The Agent Orange program, which was established by the 1981 Legislature to help Vietnam veterans exposed to the herbicide, has registered 391 veterans, Bernstein said.

He said 79 had been selected by University of Texas health centers for evaluation, and blood and sperm specimens are being collected.

THE LAW OF THE LORD IS PERFECT

"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb." (Psalms 19:7-10) A failure to recognize the absolute perfection of God's law has always led man into the depths of ruin and despair.

Had Adam and Eve recognized the perfection of God's law, they would not have sinned (Genesis 3). Had the multitudes in the days of Noah recognized the perfection of the law of the Lord, "every imagination of the thoughts" of their hearts would not have been only evil continually (Genesis 6:5). Had the Israelites recognized the wisdom and perfection of God's law they would not have sinned in the wilderness (Hebrews 3:7-19). The Jews rejected the Christ and crucified Him because they could not see the perfection of the law of the Lord.

And so it goes that man consistently refuses to acknowledge and accept the law of the Lord as perfect. When men pervert the gospel of Christ (Galatians 1:6,7), which is God's law today (I Corinthians 9:21), they do so because they are either ignorant of, or are unwilling to accept, the perfection of His law. And then there are those who do not recognize it as a law at all, but rather something which can be stretched, bent or slanted to suit their various tastes. But in the final analysis of things, we find that His word is as fixed and eternal as God is.

Regardless of whether we can see the wisdom of it or not, the wisdom is there, in His word, and is the guidance we need to find our way from here to eternity. "And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever" (1 John 2:17).

Arfat gets the old boot...

Yasser Arafat never commanded much credibility as a spokesman for Palestinian refugees and now he commands even less. The anti-Arafat mutiny in the Palestine Liberation Organization has cost Arafat the backing of the Syrian government and sent him packing from the Middle East once again.

The unshaven chairman of the PLO survived the defeat of his guerilla forces at the hands of the Israelis in Beirut last year, but his number may now be up where the future leadership of the Palestinians is concerned. Indeed, it has been questionable all along whether Arafat and the PLO really speak for the Palestinian refugees whom they claim to represent, notwithstanding the willingness of many governments to treat Arafat as an exiled head of state.

Radical factions in the PLO have accused Arafat of selling out the Palestinian cause because of his willingness to consider a negotiated settlement with Israel. Arafat's sincerity as a "moderate" has never been convincing. Perhaps the militant PLO factions backed by Syria and the Soviet Union are suspicious of Arafat's loyalty. Perhaps they simply regard him as a man whose claim to leadership is buried in the rubble of Beirut.

Yasser Arafat's fall from grace in the PLO should bring no regrets from those searching for a peaceful settlement in the Middle East. He has been only a symbolic leader of the scattered Palestinian people, and what he symbolized was not so much a quest for justice as blind hatred of the idea of a Jewish state embracing any part of the old Palestine. The most significant consequence of his expulsion from Syria is that it complicates the problem of engineering a pullout of PLO, Syrian, and Israeli forces from Lebanon.

A unified organization with a credible mandate to negotiate on behalf of displaced Palestinians would be highly valuable in the Mideast peace process. The PLO cannot fill that role so long as it remains the captive of the dream of a military victory over Israel. The Palestinian guerrillas most enthralled by that dream are now giving their freckles commander the boot.

The President should stay home

By PAUL HARVEY

I wish our President would stay home. More than most, this President has He has allowed Vice President Bush and State Secretary Schultz and Defense Secretary Weinberger to run errands, carry messages and patch fences around the world - as he should.

The President has thus been able to give the homefront his full attention to the best interests of Americans.

There are only three reasons any President should ever journey overseas and none is a valid one.

One is to attend a coronation or funeral.

Another is to divert public attention from homefront problems.

The third is to project a public image of "world leader."

Before every election every administration is advised by professional partisans to travel to "appear Presidential."

This President does not need that.

Yet, I hear today that he will be on his way to Japan, Korea and Indonesia in November.

And you will be hearing again all the "reasons why he must."

"To reflect the great importance the U.S. places on Asia-Pacific relations."

"To respond to invitations which the President received from the leaders of those nations during the Williamsburg Economic Summit."

"To reaffirm existing alliances, thus to intercept any Soviet miscalculation of our intentions."

He doesn't have to do that.

State Secretary Schultz, more than adequately, has done that.

The "danger" of foreign travel to an American President is real. Securing his personal safety to the limited extent possible is a real horrendous and expensive effort for host governments and for our own Secret Service.

But there is another danger. In the news business, generations of professional observers have learned that hit and run, on-site, escorted inspections of other nations distort - do not develop - wide-angle perspective.

Yet, rarely have we elected a President of the U.S. who has not soon imagined himself President of the world.

President Reagan, by minding our own business so well, has made us - U.S. - the envy of the world.

He would do well to heed his own admonition and "stay the course."

One race we can't afford to lose

By PAUL GREENBERG

Betty Bumpers is the charming wife of a U.S. senator and the forceful founder of the Peace Links, not necessarily in that order. She visited the university town of Fayetteville, Arkansas, the other day to warn against the grave dangers to world peace. Those dangers are American cruise, MX, Trident, and Pershing missiles. "We have to make sure this weaponry is not deployed," she told her audience. That's an aim the Soviets share, and would applaud. If Mrs. Bumpers mentioned the danger of Soviet SS-20 missiles, which already are deployed, that went unnoticed in accounts of her talk.

Emphasizing the need to stop the buildup of American arms, Mrs. Bumpers warned: "We will be in a new arms race by the end of the year if we fail." Correction: It won't be a new arms race. It'll be the same one this country all but dropped out of during the last decade. Because one of the runners flags doesn't mean the race has stopped. As the record shows:

In 1972, when the first agreement on limiting strategic arms was negotiated with the Soviets, they already had a lead in strategic missiles - 2,000 to 1,700. But the U.S. could make up the difference then with strategic bombers, and with missiles that could fire multiple warheads independently.

Today, in 1983, the Soviets have lengthened their lead in ballistic missiles. They have 2,250 compared to this country's 1,600. They have closed the gap in the number of warheads, with each country possessing about 7,500 - though the Soviets' weapons are much more powerful. American B-52s, already aging in 1972, have become antiques, while the Soviets have introduced a new strategic bomber, the Backfire.

Through the 1970s, this country pretty much followed the policies now being urged on it by those, like Betty Bumpers, who want to keep new American missiles from being deployed. The cruise missile program was postponed, a new strategic submarine was not built, the MX was deployed, the B-1 strategic bomber canceled.

The Soviet response? The Russians built three new intercontinental missiles - the SS-17, SS-18, and SS-19, all with the capacity to deliver independently targeted warheads. They developed four new submarine-launched missiles - the SS-N-8, the SS-N-17, the SS-N-18, and the SS-N-20. They introduced two new missile-firing submarines in addition to their new strategic bomber.

The program now being pushed by Peace Links was largely followed in the past decade. Well, is the world a safer place because of that? One would not know it from Mrs. Bumpers' urgent tone. As someone once said of the arms race: When the Americans build, the Soviets build. When the Americans stop building, the Soviets build. American restraint seems to have little if any effect on the continuing, massive Soviet buildup, which has become a constant in international affairs. By now the Soviet arms program has gone far beyond what might be needed for strictly defensive purposes.

It may not be necessary for the Soviet Union actually to use its massive arsenal to get its way. Already European opinion trembles at even allowing Americans to defend the continent. The Soviet leaders have not disguised their aims. To quote Leonid Brezhnev's prediction back in 1973, "by 1985, as a consequence of what we are achieving by Detente, we will have achieved most of our objectives in Western Europe... a decisive shift in the correlation of forces will be such that, by 1985, we will be able to exert our will wherever we need to."

Marshal Orgakov, the Soviet chief of staff, echoed the same theme in 1979: "The Soviet Union has military superiority over the U.S. Henceforth, the U.S. will be threatened. It had better get used to it." Soviet advances in weaponry have scarcely made that country's leaders more temperate. On the contrary, their growing power could lead them to take foolish risks - with the planet at stake.

No, ma'am, a "new" arms race isn't likely to materialize by the end of the year whether or not the U.S. deploys new missiles - mainly because the old arms race is continuing unabated, at least on the Russians' part. Without those cruise, Trident, MX, and Pershing missiles, the race may only become more one-sided - with incalculable consequences for America, her allies, and the peace of the world. If allowing the Soviets to set the pace of this race hasn't made the world any more peaceful, why should allowing them to grab the lead do so?

Betty Bumpers does have a point. The burdens, sacrifices, and, yes, risks, of defense are undeniably great. But they may be much less than the burdens, sacrifices, and, yes, risks of an inadequate defense.

Is deeper involvement in El Salvador right?

By DON GRAFF

The campus of the University of Central America, situated on the southwest outskirts of San Salvador, is one of the city's more attractive features.

Pastel buildings climbing the flower-spattered flank of a low hill stand out in colorful relief against the intense green of volcanoes ringing the city.

It would be the picture of academic tranquility were it not for helicopters on take-off and landing runs from a military training facility across the street. The occasional buzzing of the campus may be of necessity, maybe not.

"Uca," as it is known locally, is part of Jesuit-operated system with branches throughout Central America. The system plays a very practical role as an alternative to the several government-run national universities, larger and better funded but open to political pressures. Which means they are often closed down for lengthy periods.

The Uca system is also a symbol of a sense of common nationhood that persists, despite today's differences, in the five countries of Central America that for a brief period following independence from Spain actually were an entity. It is no coincidence that Uca's Jesuit administrators are mostly of Spanish origin.

I got to know the San Salvador campus well back in the summer of 1980, shortly after it had acquired a new significance as the only institution of higher education functioning in the country. A few months earlier, troops had closed down the National University with a considerable loss of student life.

Uca's faculty and students were anticipating similar attention momentarily. They were acutely alert to the helicopter activity across the street. But they kept on about their business, one aspect of which was the compiling of a weekly death count from the violence of El Salvador's descent into civil war.

The effort did not endear Uca to the authorities, who preferred to downplay the civilian bloodshed and especially the responsibility of their own troops for most of it.

Well, enough from this reporter's notebook. That was three long years ago. But you surely know why the University of Central America is our subject today. The world has now heard of it.

Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger of the U.S. Navy was assassinated there, the deputy chief of the U.S. military mission and the first American on government orders in El Salvador to die.

He was murdered by terrorists, as the spokesmen in Washington promptly and correctly declared. Whether of the left or right is in question at this writing. But the point is essentially irrelevant in the long run. Elements of both, in the convoluted context of the Salvadoran conflict, have reason to see advantage in this American death and the consequences it may be expected to have.

President Reagan vows that this murder will not shake his commitment to aid the Salvadoran government. That is, however, no reassurance to many of us. Quite the opposite. The question is what form the renewed commitment may take.

The record, like the president's promise, is not reassuring. The U.S. as its governments have demonstrated again and again, will not be intimidated. The usual response to a challenge such as the incident at Uca has been a greater commitment of American resources. And American lives.

Before increasing our commitment to this conflict, we should be asking ourselves some fundamental questions. To whose long-term advantage has deeper involvement worked in the past? To whose is it most likely to work in El Salvador?

Will Uca, which has stood for reason and truth, courageously speaking out against the excesses of El Salvador's self-destructive war, in retrospect come to symbolize something very different to us?

Berry's World

Today in history

Today is Sunday, July 17, the 198th day of 1983. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 17, 1936, the Spanish Civil War began as Gen. Francisco Franco led his army forces in revolt against the royal government.

On this date:

In 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arrested for suspected complicity in a plot to dethrone England's King James I. In 1822, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

Reagan reaffirms arms control commitment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan reiterated on Saturday his offer to reduce the number of MX missiles he wants to deploy if that will help bring about a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms reduction agreement.

In his weekly radio address, the president reiterated his willingness to consider "any serious Soviet counter-offer" to achieve a reduction in the world's nuclear weapons arsenals.

He also pledged to "continue to seek new ideas for achieving an arms reduction breakthrough."

Reagan added: "The United States will negotiate patiently but urgently and always in good faith."

In a reference to his recent congressional victory that permitted him to proceed with development of the MX, Reagan said, "Now, at last, there is hope that we can finally begin to reduce this trend" of expanding the number of nuclear weapons on both sides.

"Americans have joined together, Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives to face the greatest challenge of our time: the urgent task of pursuing a lasting peace in the nuclear era.

"Our political process has forged a consensus, a bipartisan consensus that has united us in our common search for ways to protect our country, reduce the risk of war and ultimately dramatically reduce the level of nuclear weapons — the foundation we need for successful negotiations."

Reagan noted that the administration's MX program calls for eventual deployment of 100 missiles, which are to be placed in reinforced silos in the West.

"The level ultimately deployed, however, will clearly be influenced by the outcome in Geneva," where U.S. and Soviet negotiators are discussing means of reducing their strategic arsenals, he said.

"If an agreement is reached which calls for deep reductions, which is, of course, our goal, the number of missiles could certainly be adjusted downward," he added.

Although Congress has approved money for flight testing the missile, lawmakers are still debating whether to provide money for production of operational models.

In a Democratic response, Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont said the Reagan administration isn't serious about nuclear arms control. He said U.S. arms negotiators are either opposed to arms control or too inexperienced, while Soviet negotiators are experienced professionals.

"It's time for the president to take out those who are inexperienced or uncommitted to arms control and send in the top team," said Leahy, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

"It's time for reality to catch up with the rhetoric. The American people clearly want an arms control agreement with the Soviet union, they recognize human survival is at stake," Leahy said.

MX foes and supporters battle to standoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate supporters and foes of the MX missile battled to a temporary standoff Saturday in an increasingly bitter and personal test of wills between Republican leaders and a small band of Democratic liberals led by Democratic Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.

Opening an unusual Saturday session, Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. conceded that Hart, a candidate for his party's presidential nomination, had achieved his goal of prolonging debate on the land-based intercontinental missile.

Baker had hoped for a final vote on a $200 billion defense authorization bill — including MX funds — by late last week, but said Saturday, "I don't know when we'll finish."

As the Senate debated, Reagan said the congressional coalition that approved continued development of the MX must be sustained.

In his weekly radio address, he said earlier action by Congress permitting him to proceed with the MX, showed "there is hope that we can finally begin to reduce this trend" of U.S. and Soviet expansion of nuclear weapons.

Congress has approved money for flight testing the missile. The current debate is over whether to provide money for production of operational models.

In the radio speech, Reagan reiterated his offer to reduce the number of MX missiles he wants to deploy if that will help bring about a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms reduction agreement.

Baker said by forcing the Senate into "several days of useless work," Hart had damaged his campaign to block production of deployment of the MX.

Baker and other MX backers say they believe Hart and his allies are seeking to put off a conclusive vote until the Democratically-controlled House votes on the missiles as part of a similar defense debate this week.

Market turning skittish as rally nears anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — After enjoying a historic rally that is four weeks from its first birthday, Wall Street now sees discretion as the better part of valor.

To some, it was surprising the rally came so far so fast — the Dow Jones industrial average is up 55 percent since last August, having set unprecedented peaks along the way.

But to others, a year is a long time in the stock market, and the longer the rally lasts, the more difficult it is for them to believe the market will again be swept sharply and broadly higher until a substantial slide has first occurred.

The result is a skittish market as exemplified by its performance this past week, when prices seasawed while investors juggled the effects of an economic recovery and improved corporate earnings with the prospect of higher interest rates.

In viewing the rally's current condition, it is important to remember its origins, analysts say. It was spawned by declining interest rates, but then carried by investors' anticipation of an upcoming recovery and moderating inflation.

The last two factors have come to fruition, highlighted by reports this past week that industrial production was up 1.1 percent in June and that wholesale prices in the first half of the year were down at an annual rate of 1 percent.

"People are saying, 'OK, now that that has happened, what do we do for an encore?'" said Ralph Acampora, technical analyst for Kidder, Peabody & Co.

A common suggestion is selectivity based in part on a company's earnings performance, but that can carry the pitfalls of the rally in general — namely, that the stock may rise, or may have risen, in anticipation of stronger second-quarter results, only to stall or decline once the numbers are out.

This past week, for example, International Business Machines Corp. said its second-quarter profit climbed a sturdy 25 percent, exceeding Wall Street's forecasts by about a dime per share. One of the market's bellweather issues, IBM gained 75 cents that day. But it then immediately opened with a loss of more than $1 the following morning.

Early this past week, fear of a credit-tightening move by the Federal Reserve Board helped pushed the market sharply lower. It steadied midweek but then dived again.

Murder probe triggers smuggling indictments

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — An indictment accusing 21 men of operating a marijuana smuggling ring stemmed from an investigation into a 1981 triple murder here, federal authorities say.

The indictment alleges that more than 70,000 pounds of Mexican marijuana was smuggled from Laredo to Dallas over two years beginning in August 1980.

Five of the 21 men indicted are in the Webb County Jail, two are in jail in Dallas, several others are in state and federal institutions serving sentences on unrelated charges and the rest are fugitives in the United States and Mexico.

The drug smuggling investigation began after the June 1981 murders at Jeanie's Bar in Laredo of Olvido Ortiz Jr., his brother Ramiro Ortiz, both of Laredo; and Daniel Martinez Sifuentes of Corpus Christi.

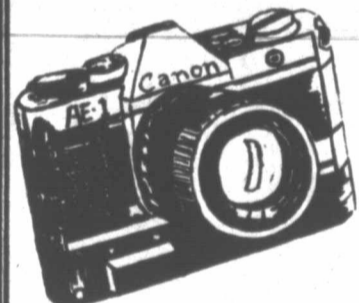

Five of those listed on the drug indictment — Florentino Martinez, Ramiro De Leon Rocha, Rene Gerardo De Leon, Eduardo De Leon and Erasmo De Leon — were charged with the slayings, which authorities said stemmed from a drug deal gone awry.

Blue Bell tries to hold small town image despite its soaring revenues

BRENNHAM, Texas (AP) — There used to be a sign on the highway entering this town on the rolling grasslands of southeastern Texas that read "The Little Creamery Welcomes You to Brenham."

A storm blew it down, but John Barnhill, general sales manager of the Blue Bell Creamery, says it will be replaced.

The sign is important to Blue Bell executives who have watched their "little creamery" explode into a double-dip $80 million-a-year success.

Now they are concerned that if they keep making money this way — sales this year are already projected at $95 million — they could lose their down-home, small town image.

"We are doing our best to be the 'little creamery in Brenham,'" said Barnhill, who nevertheless says his company expects this year to sell 19 million gallons of "Cookies 'N Cream," "Pecan Danish," "Black Forest Cake" and 19 other flavors of ice cream.

"In a way we hesitate to talk about that," said Barnhill. He said image-conscious company officials at one time even flirted with the idea of putting dairy cattle in manicured pastures in front of the plant and building an old-fashioned facade on the side of the complex facing Farm Road 577 "to make it look smaller."

Those ideas were discarded as slightly dishonest, as was one submitted by an advertising agency for a television ad showing a warehouse with the "Blue Bell" sign on the front door.

"The doors would open slowly, and inside would be a room, full of people cranking ice cream makers," Barnhill recalled. "We said no."

But he said the company intends to continue to call itself the "little creamery" and plans to continue a successful advertising campaign based on nostalgia.

For most of its life, Blue Bell, established in 1907 as the Brenham Creamery Co., was in fact a small-time butter and ice cream maker, selling to country stores within a 100-mile radius and avoiding the big cities such as Houston, 75 miles to the east.

It acquired the name Blue Bell in the mid-1930s. In 1958 it dropped butter production, and two years later the company decided to try to break into the Houston ice cream market. It hasn't been the same since.

Blue Bell plans to move into the San Antonio area by next spring, and is expanding its production capacity here by 80 percent to handle the expected demand.

Keep taxes in proper perspective

By TOM BYRD

We are all very much aware of taxes — particularly having just paid them. However, in our investment blueprint we should always keep taxes in the proper perspective. Taxes are the tail and not the dog. As we have discussed in previous articles, we should set up clear-cut investment goals and stick with them. But it would likewise be foolish to ignore the fact that every investment we make — good or bad, wise or foolish — will produce tax consequences.

easier. One of the first things we must do in applying tax knowledge to our investing is the proper use of investment records. Just from a practical point of view how can you determine how you are doing if you don't know where you started?

Good records will tell you which investments are doing well and which are not. Records are obviously essential for tax purposes. Whenever you buy or sell a security — whether it be a stock, bond, or mutual fund — you will receive a confirmation from your broker. This will include the date of the transaction, the name of the security, the amount bought or sold, the net amount owed you or owed the broker.

It is essential, that you keep this confirmation — as it is an official record of your trade. Also, record the transaction in a book you have designated for this purpose. Your broker should be able to assist you with this. If you own property you will likewise want to record income and expenses so as to take full benefit of any proper deductions. Your attorney, tax advisor, or investment advisor will be of limited help to you unless you keep and maintain proper records. This is up to you and may prove to be one of the wisest moves you make.

Byrd is an investment broker for the Edward D. Jones Company in Pampa.

A question of membership

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The depressing shadow of a possible prison term looms over the imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Bill Wilkinson, 40-year-old head of the Klan group, heads for Birmingham, Ala., Wednesday to face U.S. District Judge E. B. Halton Jr. in a contempt of court proceeding.

Halton has ordered Wilkinson to hand over a list of his members to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is somewhat akin to ordering a bull to give the matador a kiss.

"I cannot give the list," Wilkinson said in an interview before he left for Birmingham.

"I feel it is our constitutional right to maintain the privacy of our association. I think that I have the right, and I feel so strongly about that, I won't produce the list."

Actually, the Invisible Empire, one of several Klan groups, already is out of the closet to some extent. It made public its constitution, bylaws and ceremonies a week ago, ending 118 years of total secrecy.

Among other things, the revised constitution forbids any member "to conceal his face with a mask in any public gathering. Masks may be worn for ceremonial purposes in a meeting for members only..."

Wilkinson said the disclosure of the Klan constitution had nothing to do with this case.

The last time Wilkinson went to Birmingham for a court session on the issue he drove so he could take his family along. "I thought it would be a going-away party," he said. "This time I am going to buy a round-trip airline ticket."

This is not to say that he is optimistic. Wilkinson glumly recalls the imperial wizard of another Klan, Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Ala., served nine months of a one-year contempt of Congress sentence for refusing to give a congressional committee a list of members of the United Klan.

Wilkinson contends the Klan faces a double standard of justice in court proceedings.

The NAACP itself fought off, in several federal court cases, attempts to make it disclose the NAACP membership back in the early days of the civil rights movement but federal judges will not give the Klan the same right, he said.

This legal fight started when The People's Association of Decatur filed a class action civil rights suit on Nov. 3, 1980, accusing the Invisible Empire of conspiring to deprive blacks of equal protection under law and inflict grave mental distress.

It seeks half a million dollars for the class of defendants, plus another half million as punishment — plus an order that the Klan pay the plaintiff's lawyers fee.

The suit was later amended to add the NAACP and several children as plaintiffs.

Judge Halton's order to disclose membership came under the process of "discovery," in which the plaintiff seeks information from the defendant to bolster the charge.

Wilkinson's Invisible Empire has been embroiled in so many court cases recently it has run short of money. A Chapter 11 proceeding was filed in federal Bankruptcy Court at Baton Rouge last Jan. 24.

In some cases, the American Civil Liberties Union has been the Klan's knight — fighting not for the Klan but for legal principle.

"I have developed a newfound admiration for many an ACLU attorney in the last few years," said Wilkinson. "Their beliefs are diametrically opposed, yet they represent you..."

He said the Invisible Empire won court fights, usually over refusals to allow demonstrations, against Birmingham, Miami, College Park, Ga., McIntosh County, Ga., the Paulding County Board of Education, Glynn County, Ga., Lagrange, Ga., Hammond, La., and four Connecticut cities.

Waning spirit of Polish people

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Although martial law may end soon, many Poles, embittered and losing their spirit, remain crushed by daily life.

Euphoria from Pope John Paul II's June pilgrimage and signs that civil authority will be restored next week has been tempered by another round of price increases for such basic items as bread, meat and housing.

But Polish analysts and diplomats believe chances are slim that workers can rekindle the sweeping strikes and protests that gave rise to the independent trade union Solidarity in August 1980.

"We are just living life... if you can call it life," remarked a Polish journalist. "There is some hope, but people are frustrated, dispirited, and they worry about the future."

Western diplomats expect what one called a war-of attrition between the government and church-supported independent labor movements.

The pope inspired Poles to defend their right to seek a better lot, but now economists and social scientists worry that the economic burdens may be too much for the country's 37 million inhabitants.

Such figures as a $26 billion debt to the West, a 25 percent drop in national income over three years and a 100 percent cost-of-living rise in 1982 suggest the overall problem.

But the crisis is most evident in long lines snaking through city streets.

Meat, largely gristle, bone and greasy sausage, is rationed at 5.5 pounds a month per person. At a cost of 1,250 zlotys that is 10 percent of the average monthly wage, and many Poles cannot afford even that. Many others cap, however, and lines run as long as 80 people.

Meat prices are to rise by 10 percent in the coming months. Last year they went up as much as 300 percent.

A wage of 12,000 zlotys officially equals $125, but Poles cannot change money legally so it buys only $20 on the black market. Many items are available only at special stores requiring hard currency. As a result, a pair of jeans priced at $25 takes more than the average monthly wage.

Even if they don't convert their money, Poles often must pay two to 10 times the official zloty price for scarce goods.

Poles wait in line for six months for luxuries like furniture. Gas lines can be six hours long. The wait for an apartment at the official price can be 30 years.

A one-room studio in a modest part of town might cost two million zlotys, $21,000 at the official rate or $3,400 on the black market.

On Saturdays, huge crowds through a meadow north of Warsaw to sell Japanese stereos, wilted carrots, peeling hobby horses, running shoes and even hard rock records. The mood is grim and businesslike.

A 16-year-old girl stands silently, holding her stock: a single can of powdered baby formula. Next to her, a toothless old man offers cheap cigarette filters.

The economy is distorted. A shoemaker fixes a pair of heels for the unofficial equivalent of four cents, including the nails. Miners, forced by martial law to stay at their jobs, can earn five times the average wage. Farmers, mostly private, might clear even more.

Additional problems are caused because there are so few consumer goods. People that have money bid up prices so the limited goods that factories do produce often "fall off the back of the truck," as one Pole put it, and are sold to higher bidders than housewives standing in line.

An ordinary citizen cannot buy a car at anything under two to three times the official price. People who paid in advance 10 years ago still await delivery.

"The situation has vastly improved since martial law (December 1981), but it is very bad in absolute terms," said Zdzislaw Sadowski, deputy minister in charge of economic reform.

The economy was improving slightly, he said, and by 1985, "there should be a state of widely restored internal market equilibrium."

But the Polish economy depends on politics, and few analysts are willing to make predictions.

Record shop is one of a kind

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Hidden in this West Texas city is a music store that has about 10,000 vintage records, many of which sell today for the same price they brought decades ago.

But octogenarian Oscar Glickman, maverick owner of The Record Shop, is trying to find a buyer for his store before he dies.

There's a catch: Glickman only plans to sell his shop to a music aficionado who promises to run it exactly as he has since 1934.

"A lot of people want The Record Shop to stay like it is, and do it," said Glickman, nearly dwarfed by rows upon rows of records. "I wouldn't sell at all if I thought I wasn't going to die."

Music lovers, some of whom travel thousands of miles to rummage through the shop, can find out-of-print records by artists such as Sammy Kaye, the Andrews Sisters and Nat King Cole. Bing Crosby's "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," the original, sells like most of the others for $4.98.

"This is a landmark place. You won't find another like this," said Gene Fletcher, a music buff.

Collectors can't beat Glickman's prices. He often charges $98 for albums that first sold for $3.98 in the 1960s. Contemporary albums cost up to $8.98.

"I've never been much of a businessman. I'm not in this to make big money. I just love music, and so do those who come here," said Glickman, clad in a thin brown tie and a dress shirt that has seen better days.

From the first days after Glickman's brother helped finance the Record Shop, "he wanted me off the street. I was no good," Glickman went against usual business practices and refused to return the distributor albums that hadn't sold.

"The reason you see so many old records is I never sent any back," he said. "When you buy records, you're allowed to send back what you don't sell, but that means you pay freight both ways. I figured it would be cheaper to keep them."

Some records he held onto are very forgettable — such as the original soundtrack to the box-office bomb "Cleopatra," which starred Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton and Rex Harrison. He has sold one of the 12 albums the record manufacturer sent him.

"My 'Old Lady'," as Glickman calls his wife, Bobbie, who is blind and suffering from throat cancer, "always fusses at me for lying so much and holding onto them," he said.

But, Glickman pointed out, "We've got records here you probably can't get anywhere else." One collector annually travels from France to Big Spring, a city of 25,000 halfway between Dallas and El Paso, to buy albums, Glickman said. A Liberian student living in Houston purchased about $5,000 worth of albums to take home to Africa, he said. Others make monthly buying pilgrimages from Amarillo, El Paso and Lubbock.

One Lubbock man offered to buy The Record Shop lock-stock-and-barrel, Glickman said, but was turned down because the 25-year-old "didn't know the value of what I have here."

Glickman advised the man to work one year in his store to get to know what the shop had and its relative worth because "I hate for the kid to lose all his money."

Glickman has had some losers. He once sold eight unseen 2,200 dusty albums in the shop basement for 10 cents apiece. The buyer quadrupled his investment in six weeks because he uncovered so many classics. "Nobody knows what we have here — not even me," Glickman said.

Another time, rock singer Marty Balin, formerly of the Jefferson Airplane, strolled in to search for Airplane albums originally issued in the 1960s. Balin, disappointed Glickman didn't recognize him, found the albums he wanted and left.

Glickman, who oddly enough has no home stereo, said Elvis Presley and The Beatles are his best sellers. Glickman, however, prefers Mussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain" and the opera "Madame Butterfly." Of the contemporary rock groups, he likes "The Police."

Among the many features of the 6,955-yard course is three natural lakes plus sites for 120 homes. Larger color designs of the new course are tentatively scheduled to be displayed at all Pampa banks in the near future. The Pampa Public Golf Corporation is currently planning a fund-raising drive headed by John McGuire. The Corporation recently received tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service. Publicity chairman Pat Albert may be contacted at 669-2306 or 665-0186 for progress reports on the new course.

Schlichter will play football in new International League

By The Associated Press Art Schlichter isn't among the players returning to National Football League training camps this week, but that doesn't mean he won't be playing football soon.

The Baltimore Colts' quarterback has been offered work in the new International Football League, even though he has been suspended indefinitely for gambling.

The Ohio Bulldogs, one of 12 charter members of the new IFL, reportedly are trying to get the beleaguered player on their team. Neither Schlichter nor Bulldog owner Guy Cicchini would confirm that negotiations are under way. But neither denied that contact had been established by intermediaries, according to a report in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In the story, Ed Capri, Cicchini's chief adviser, was quoted as saying: "We want Schlichter."

Now at his family's farm home in Bloomingburg, south of Columbus, Ohio, Schlichter said he was "under strict guidelines (by the NFL) not to give any interviews."

He also said, "I have not talked to anybody directly connected with the Bulldogs."

Schlichter was suspended May 20 by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle for gambling.

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Falcons began workouts

Friday at their first NFL training camp under new Coach Dan Henning, who said he had been anxiously awaiting the day for five months.

At Suwanee, Ga., Henning sent 52 players, including 13 veterans, through the first of a week of two-day drills. Missing were top draft choice Mike Pitts of Alabama, No. 2 James Britt of Louisiana State and punter Ralph Giacomarro.

Among the veterans on hand were all four quarterbacks, including starter Steve Bartkowski and running back Gerald Riggs.

In Latrobe, Pa., star wide receiver John Stallworth and safety Donnie Shell, still unsigned for the 1983 season, were among the missing as most of the Pittsburgh Steelers' veterans reported to training camp.

Offensive tackle Larry Brown and defensive linemen Gary Dunn also didn't report because they hadn't reached contract terms.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers opened training camp for rookies, free agents and quarterbacks in Tampa. Fifty-four players were on hand for the practice session.

Coach John McKay said there have been no developments in negotiations with quarterback Doug Williams, a free agent who is seeking a contract that would pay him $600,000 a year.

The Cleveland Browns opened camp in Kirtland, Ohio, without Ron Brown.

McIntire takes second in tourney

Paul McIntire of Pampa finished second Friday in the U.S. Junior Amateur Golf Championship held at the Amarillo Country Club.

McIntire had a 151 to finish second to Missouri City's Andrew Debusk, who carded a 144. Debusk qualified for the U.S. Junior Amateur Championships to be held Aug. 2-6.

This tournament was a sectional qualifying event for the U.S. Junior Amateur.

Ryan Heller of Abilene placed third with a 152.

McIntire, who led the Pampa High Harvesters to a second-place finish in the District 1-4A golf race this season, earlier qualified for the Tournament of Champions Aug. 11-12 in Lubbock.

SMU's integrity suffered during long NCAA probe, president claims

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's integrity has suffered from the NCAA's four-month-old preliminary investigation into football recruiting, President L. Donald Shields says.

"The thing I value the most is my personal and professional integrity, and the integrity of this institution. And I feel our integrity has been violated," Shields told The Dallas Morning News in an interview published Saturday.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association began its investigation in March and must inform the university within six months of its progress. At that time, the NCAA can drop the investigation, continue the preliminary inquiry or inform SMU that it will conduct a full-scale investigation.

Shields said the preliminary inquiry "could be a long one."

SMU athletic director Bob Hitch told the News the probe has caused a morale problem in his department.

"This is probably the most miserable (four) months I've ever spent. My people in our department are very bitter. We've had a tremendous morale problem," he said.

The investigation "is awful embarrassing. It is a very sad time in our department. It's affecting families. It's affecting husbands and wives, and it's affecting 280 student athletes."

SMU's internal inquiry covers "all recruitment aspects," Shields said, and SMU attorney John McElhane added that every media report on the NCAA investigation is being examined.

SMU will share its findings with the NCAA, including possible violations by other institutions, even though the NCAA has given the school no help in targeting areas to investigate, McElhane said.

Shields said the NCAA has not contacted any SMU representative.

He added that he has been "terribly tempted" to comment, especially with information McElhane has provided.

"Right now we could refute a good deal of the allegations," he said.

Despite a limited enforcement staff, the NCAA's probe "has been an active, repeated effort," McElhane said.

Neither Hitch nor Shields blamed alumni for SMU's troubles.

"Our alumni are extremely valuable to the university," Shields said. "They provide for a large percentage of the costs. As for their involvement in the recruiting process causing problems or difficulties — at times it can and it has. Not only here, but at other institutions."

"We're very concerned," added Hitch. "Dr. Shields and I have been here only a short time. We feel we can solve our problems."

SMU has been placed on probation five times, and David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, has admitted that a school's past has an effect on future investigations.

"Based on my limited experience, I would not say all member institutions are monitored equally," said Shields. "I believe the NCAA has a responsibility to take a more active role to see that an institution's good name is protected."

Publicity has complicated SMU's investigation, added McElhane.

"We think it's been extremely unfortunate. I don't want to comment on the fairness or unfairness, but we feel the media attention has to some extent skewed and interfered with the investigative process," he said. "And some of the charges, coupled with headlines on the article, leads to an accusation of guilt which I think the public tends to accept."

Shields said he would initiate litigation against the NCAA only if "justice was not adequately dealt with."

He said his athletic staff would be held accountable for any transgressions, but would not say whether any jobs would be jeopardized.

"It would depend on what the findings are and whom they relate to," he said. "If the findings relate to individuals, yes."

Panthers, Stars to determine inaugural USFL championship

DENVER (AP) — The inaugural United States Football League championship game brings together the Michigan Panthers, a team which got started late, against the Philadelphia Stars' Jim Mora, a coach who who got started late.

Michigan enters Sunday night's game on a definite roll. It lost four of its first five games, one of them against Oakland, then won 11 of the remaining 13 during the regular season to finish at 12-6 and in possession of the Central Division championship.

Then Coach Jim Stanley's Panthers knocked off the Western Division winners, the Invaders, 37-21 to move into the title game in Mile High Stadium.

The Stars didn't hire Mora as their head coach until Jan. 12, more than a week after the USFL draft and less than two months before the season began. They had signed George Perles, an assistant coach with the National Football League's Pittsburgh Steelers, to be their field boss, but Perles changed his mind and went instead to Michigan State. Still, the Stars started hot and never cooled off.

They won their first three games, lost one, won eight in a row before losing again and put together a four-game winning streak before dropping the meaningless season finale.

Their 15-3 record was the best in the league, but it seemed it would all be for naught when their ball-handling fell apart in the semifinal playoff against Chicago. Four interceptions and three fumbles enabled the Blitz to build a 38-17 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Then, in one of the more remarkable comebacks in pro football history, they forced overtime, won the second coin flip and drove 73 yards in 14 plays. Kelvin Bryant's 1-yard dive capping the 44-38 victory.

"Our comeback against Chicago will hopefully carry over into the title game," said Mora. "Michigan is definitely playing better now than when we first played them." — a 29-20 victory by the Stars in Philadelphia last June 5.

The USFL had wildly divergent attendance figures for its two playoff games — a scant 15,684 in Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium and a league-record 60,237 (built in part on reduced-price tickets) in the Pontiac Silverdome. The league was hoping for 45,000 or more in Mile High Stadium (capacity: 75,123).

At about noon Saturday, ticket sales edged past 40,000. The weather for the game was expected to be excellent — temperatures in the 70s and clear skies.

As game-day approached, Denver was gripped by indifference. Unlike the frenetic atmosphere which takes over the NFL's Super Bowl city each January, the Mile High City went about its business with no fanfare for the first USFL title game.

Some attention was being diverted 60 miles away to Greeley, Colo., where Denver Broncos' rookie quarterback John Elway, the NFL's No. 1 draft choice (by Baltimore before The Trade) was holding court.

Each USFL team's quarterback might best be described as a middle-rounder. That's what Philadelphia's Chuck Fusina was in 1979 out of the University of Pittsburgh and what Michigan's Bobby Hebert might have been this year out of Northwest Louisiana State had he not chosen to sign immediately with the Panthers.

Fusina who never got past the clipboard-carrying stage in three years with the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers, then was traded to San Francisco and quickly cut by the 49ers.

The people with the Bucs and 49ers gave him tepid reviews, taking away points because Fusina couldn't throw long. Then Peterson spoke to Joe Paterno at Pitt. "Joe told me, too, that his arm was only average. But he said, 'What Chuck does, Carl, is win, and for that reason I think he'd be perfect for your ballclub.'"

Fusina wasn't overwhelming — fifth among USFL passers — but he didn't have to be. He had Kelvin Bryant, the league's No. 2 rusher (1,442 yards) behind heralded Herschel Walker. And when Fusina and Bryant weren't on the field, the Stars trotted out the Doghouse Defense, which allowed the fewest points in the league, 204 in 18 games.

Hebert, a soft-spoken rookie out of the Louisiana Cajun country, wound up as the USFL's passing champ. At the start of the season, though, the question wasn't whether he'd finish first but whether he'd finish at all. In the first five games he was sacked 15 times. He was running for his life.

Then Stanley went out and did some shopping of his own — for linemen to protect his quarterback. He picked up a fistful of former Pittsburgh Steelers (Ray Pinney, Tyrone McGriff, Thom Dornbrook) and put them in front of Hebert, since then, Hebert has been trapped behind the line only five times. Michigan finished second in scoring with 451 points, five behind Chicago.

"They talk about their line and the additions they've made there," said the Stars' Mora. "But Bobby Hebert's improvement, in my mind, is at least as much a factor in their being in this game right now."

Like the Stars, the Panthers had a solid ground game led by Ken Lacy, a rookie out of Tulsa. He finished third in the league with 1,180 yards.

The Panthers, like the Stars, also rely heavily on defense, particularly on the quarterback-stalking talents of John Coker. He had been a little-used linebacker for three years with Houston in the NFL, then was released last November.

Watson Draws Cheers

Watson takes third round lead in British Golf Open

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Tom Watson was handed a 1-shot, third-round lead Saturday by a scowling Craig Stadler, who slashed and thrashed his way to a double bogey-6 on the final hole at the 112th British Open golf championship.

"The lead, that's where I want to be going into the last round of any tournament," said Watson, who had finished his comeback round of 70 moments before Stadler's adventures in hay on the 54th hole.

"Actually, I have mixed emotions," said Watson, the defending champion who hopes to become the first man to win the British title five times. "I struggled with the driver all day."

The driver cost him a double bogey on the first hole. He hit it unplayable under a bush, had to drop out and made double bogey. He spent the rest of the mild, breezy day trying to get it back.

Watson, golf's Player of the Year five of the past six seasons, finished three trips over the Royal Birkdale Golf Club links in 205, eight shots under par.

Stadler, who led through the first 53 holes, held a 1-shot lead until his drive on the 18th was taken by the wind and whipped 80 yards off line into deep rough.

Stadler could do nothing but hack it back to the fairway, then hit his third into a bunker. He came out long and 2-putted for the six that cost him the top spot, with a 206 total.

He isn't the only one Watson has to worry about. Huddled in a cozy little group at the top of the standings are some of the game's best golfers: current PGA champion Ray Floyd, Australian David Graham, Lee Trevino and the Britain's Nick Faldo. All are within 3 of the lead.

"I know what I have to do," Watson said of Sunday's round. "I have to shoot in the 60s."

Stadler agreed: "The players that are at the top are capable of playing very, very well. Somebody will come out of the box on Sunday — hopefully it will be me."

Those hopes were echoed — for different reasons — by Graham, Floyd and Faldo, tied at 207.

"Give me this one and Augusta (the Masters) and I could retire happy," said Graham, who already owns a U.S. Open and PGA championship. Graham, taking daily medication for a hand problem, scattered nine 3s across his card on the way to a 67. The last 3 was an eagle on the 17th hole, nailed down by a 40-foot putt.

Faldo, 25, a three-time British PGA champion and seeking to become only the second Englishman to win this national championship since 1948, is the favorite of the 30,000-plus galleries. Twice he received applause so warm he paused to wipe tears from his eyes. He shot a 71 that included birdies on all the par-5 holes.

Floyd, with one Masters and two PGA crowns, is stalking his first national open title. He had a 69 that he said "could have been a 64. I threw away several shots out there."

Trevino was at 208 after an erratic 73 that included four birdies and six bogeys. One bogey, on the 18th, was in the manner of a save. He got it on a 20-foot putt that kept him within 3 strokes of the top and sent him into a happy little dance around the green.

Americans Fuzzy Zoeller, Andy Bean and two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, along with South African Mark McNulty were at 209, only 4 off the pace. Zoeller shot a 67, McNulty 68, Bean 70 and Irwin a 72 that should have been at least a shot better.

Jack Nicklaus, who has won this title three times and has been runner-up a record seven times, struggled to a 72 that left him at 215. Masters champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain was 69-211 and U.S. Open title-holder Larry Nelson 73-216.

Arnold Palmer, 53, who won on these links 22 years ago, managed a 68 and was at 214.

Skidding Rangers still in first place

NEW YORK (AP) — New York rookie left-hander Ray Fontenot, who said he wasn't fazed by Oldtimers Day at Yankee Stadium because he never followed baseball that closely, put on a show for the former heroes.

The 25-year-old Fontenot, making his third major-league start, allowed five hits over seven innings and combined with reliever Rich Gossage on a seven-hitter as the Yankees downed Texas 3-1 Saturday, handing the American League West-leading Rangers their eighth defeat in 10 games.

"I went out there before the game and watched the introductions and saw the faces but I didn't follow baseball that much. Once I started warming up, I just put it out of my mind."

"You play and everything but I didn't know the names. In fact, they kind of give me the razz here, when we play a new team and I say, 'Who's this guy?'"

Teams will start remembering Fontenot, who struck out five and walked one to raise his record to 2-0 in the 97-degree heat. The performance was especially impressive because he was used exclusively in relief in 26 games with Columbus in the International League before joining the Yankees on June 19.

He made a good impression on Texas Manager Doug Rader.

"If you make it sink like that," said Rader, "you've got a chance. He threw strikes and he threw groundballs. He did a real good job."

As for the Rangers, Rader seemed unconcerned about their recent slide. "If you lose, you lose. It's not a slump. They're playing great."

Fontenot left in the eighth after giving up a single and a walk and Gossage came on to strike out the ninth for his 11th save.

Dave Winfield, who hit into double plays his other three times at-bat, drew a bases-loaded walk to break a fifth-inning tie.

The Yankees celebrated their 37th annual Oldtimers Day before a crowd of 41,520.

Barber open 3-stroke lead in Seniors golf

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Miller Barber followed up his course record-tying 65 from Friday with a 66 on Saturday and opened up a three-stroke lead in the 150,000 Merrill Lynch-Golf Digest Commemorative Pro-Am senior tournament at the Newport Country Club.

Barber started out Saturday as if he were going to break the course record, playing the first five holes in five strokes under par.

Barber started out with a birdie four, a birdie three, and eagle three. After a par 3 on the fourth hole, Barber birdied the par three fifth.

But he cooled off after that, finishing the front nine with four straight pars that left him 31 at the turn and playing the back nine in 1 under par.

Barber's 65-66-131 score left him three strokes ahead of Gene Littler going into Sunday's final round.

Littler closed with a flourish Saturday, shooting a 30 on the back nine which enabled him to tie the course record at 65.

Tied for third place, a stroke behind Littler at 135 were Roberto DeVicenzo and Mike Souchak.

Divenzo had started the day tied with Barber for the lead, but shot only a 70 and fell four strokes back.

These boys don't play at being soldiers

Local National Guardsmen practice war techniques at Lake McClellan

Sgt. Lloyd Larkin recalls the night he heard the news about the Iranians taking U.S. Embassy people hostage.

"I was flooded with calls from the men in my unit, saying, 'My bags are packed. My equipment is by the door. When the call comes, call me first,'" he remembered.

"None of us want war, but we are ready," Larkin said.

Sgt. Larkin is one of more than 640 volunteers who took part in the National Guard training exercises the July 10 weekend.

The men in our National Guard no longer "play" at being soldiers. I know, I was there. Last weekend when the 2nd Battalion 142 Mechanized Infantry, 49th Armored Division, Texas National Guard went on training exercises near Lake McClellan, I went with them.

Twenty armored personnel carriers (They looked like "tanks" to me), jeeps and several "duce and a half" trucks, carrying the men and supplies, left Pampa about 9:15 a.m. Saturday.

We hadn't any more than arrived at "Wetside", when the squads were given their missions and the exercises began.

I went with Sergeant Kenny Kent, the training coordinator, as an observer on the first exercise. We walked just behind the five-man squad, a part of the "offense" team.

Kent explained what the men were doing and why they darted in and out behind bushes and trees as they worked their way toward their objective — a bridge.

Wanting to get pictures of the men "in action," I asked if I could leave the sergeant's immediate area.

I didn't want to give away the offensive team's position, so I ducked under some trees and along the top of a creek bank. Seeing a soldier crouched behind a tree, I aimed my camera and "shot."

About that moment, another soldier sneaked up on my right. The new recruit who didn't yet have a uniform, hadn't seen me. I held my breath, waiting to see what would happen. He slipped around a bush and...recovering from his surprise at my presence, the recruit whispered, "Did you see which way he went?"

"I'm not here," I whispered back.

"Oh, that's right," he grinned remembering I had been introduced to Company B earlier in the day.

Suddenly "shots" rang out. I was surrounded, somehow I had gotten in between the opposing forces. Ducking into the creek bed, I hurried closer to where I'd heard the shots. Dry brush crackled as someone moved on the bank above me. I crouched under some overhanging branches, waiting.

I could barely make out the form of a soldier belly down, M-16 ready, behind some bushes across the creek.

"Click...click."

"Oh, my gawd! You nearly got yourself shot, young lady," the soldier on the bank above exclaimed when the shutter on my camera clicked. I grinned, ducked and scooted.

Soldiers darted from behind one tree to another, keeping low and watching for the enemy. Offensive team members circled the suspected position of the defense.

Shots rang out from somewhere in the trees and I heard a steady high-pitched tone, indicating someone had been "killed."

Then spurts of shots ran out. It was a .30 caliber machine gun being fired by a soldier defending the bridge.

The two teams were in close combat at this time. A few minutes later, the action was ended.

After lunch the men took part in another training exercise, switching roles. The squad which had defended the bridge took the offense, trying to capture a "key intersection", while the other squad defended the area.

This "battle" took place on want to get "killed", they knew they had to keep down and rush from cover to cover.

From the defense's position, we could see the offense coming through some trees in a draw. The defense squad leader signaled several of his men to circle down and began, some of the soldiers whooped and charged. The "heated battle" was over within a few minutes. The defense had successfully vanquished their "foes."

Following each exercise, the men gathered under the trees for a review and critique of their action.

"Do you know why you were killed?" the observer asked. The soldier nodded, he had taken too long (more than three to five seconds) to run from one cover to another and had failed to keep low.

The National Guard soldiers no longer have any doubt about when they have been "killed" or "wounded." Each M-16 is equipped with a box which "shoots" a light beam and each man wears a harness on which are sensors. When the light beam hits the man within a "kill" zone, a steady high-pitched tone is sounded. If the "shot" is a "near-miss," good enough to wound, it sends out a beeping tone.

See "Reporter" pg. 16

The Church in the woods

NASHUA, Iowa (AP) — They come to the Church in the Wildwood — by the hundreds — to get married.

"About 52,500 weddings have been performed in the church since World War I," said the Rev. John W. Christy. "We've been here five years and performed more than 4,000."

Christy is the pastor of The Little Brown Church in the Vale made famous in the hymn by William S. Pitts.

"As a young man, he was traveling through Bradford (now defunct) to Fredericksburg to visit his fiancée. The coach had stopped here for lunch," Christy said.

"He went strolling through the area and was impressed by the spot where the church now stands — the beautiful trees, the growth and underbrush," Christy said.

When Pitts returned to Wisconsin, he wrote "The Church in the Wildwood" and forgot the song until he returned to Bradford in 1883 to teach music at the local school.

Thighs right

Toning up the inner thigh muscles keeps legs looking sleek and sexy all summer long. Here's how: stand with feet wide apart, and bend forward from the waist; grab your ankles. Now bend your knees and lower your torso; bring your elbows inside your knees, keeping back parallel to floor. Press out with your elbows — feel the stretch? Stretch then relax for a total of five repetitions. Next, still grasping ankles, straighten legs to original position, but press your head between your legs; stretch, relax; repeat five times.

JEFFREY MCGILVRAY & SHERRY RAWLS

GERRI WATSON & KURT KRAUSE

Sneaky snacks

If you find it hard to stay on a diet, because of an urge to nibble, here are some low-calorie substitutes for fattening munchies. For a peachy frozen dessert, try freezing very ripe nectarines then thawing them slightly before eating — yummy! M&M's are out, but why not nosh on frozen raisins or dried currants? Another delicious treat: dates stuffed with peanut butter are filling enough for the strongest snacker.

Reporter finds National Guard trained and ready

ou wouldn't have been if you had kept quiet," the sergeant said during the new of an afternoon. "I disagree," another sergeant said. "In Nam Charlie was coming at me he knew where he was. We yelled, whooped and hollered. It kept our spirits up and we knew we were winning them."

ter, I asked Lt. Jack about the noise thing said he had been trained to be quiet, but maybe each situation is different.

I asked Lt. Col. White about whether officers should argue in front of the troops.

He said they feel the soldiers learn as much from the discussions as they learn in the actual training exercises.

As I watched the men following their leaders' orders without question, I realized not one balked.

There was never a question or argument from the line soldier. They did as they were told, when they were told. They knew when the exercise was over, they could express any disagreements or ask any question, and it would be answered.

"We're not willing to accept any losses — deaths — in training. Our people are willing to play the game," White said. "We train seriously; we do the best we can to prepare to be sent to the front lines," he said.

"Our people are out here because they want to be, not because they have to be," Sgt. James Woods said.

"We feel we can do anything asked of us," White added.

In 1975 the Texas National Guard went to a combined forces "war games exercise" in California. In addition to the Texas National Guard, other National Guard units and "regular" Army soldiers took part in the maneuvers.

White said the Army commanding officers put the Amarillo-based 2nd Battalion (National Guard) in the front lines and held the regular army troops in reserve.

During end of the training session ceremonies last Sunday morning, Lt. Col.

Sam White, Battalion Commander, presented (Pampa-based) Company B of the 2nd B 142 M (Inf) 49th Armored Division, with the "Best Company" award for their performance at Fort Hood National Guard summer camp earlier this summer.

The blue ribbon with "Best Company" embossed in white across it will fly from the top of Company B's standard until next year's summer camp.

"You'll have to earn it again next year," Lt. Col. White told the troops.

Personally, I feel Pampa's Company B with detachments from Borger and Shamrock, bringing eager, well-disciplined soldiers from all over the Panhandle and as far away as Oklahoma City, will do it.

P. S. After dinner Saturday night, Sgt. Kent asked me if I'd like to shoot an M-16 rifle. After a moment of hesitation, I agreed.

One of the soldiers stood the same distance away from me as they put the target boxes when "zeroing in" their weapons. After I lined up the sights, which took a couple of minutes because I wasn't familiar with this particular type of gun, I aimed and squeezed off a shot.

Well, you could "hear" the silence. "You killed him," Sgt. Kent said, trying to hide the surprise in his voice. I fired three more single "shots". Three out of the four shots were "kills" and the other was a "near miss".

Sunday morning when Lt. Col. White asked me if I'd like to join up, I said, yes.

"I want to be an infantry man," I said.

My only complaint about the National Guard and the Army and so many other people's mentality is: Women should stay home and be "protected."

Well, at least I can rest easy: the National Guard in Pampa is a well-trained, well disciplined group of soldiers and I know they can do the job.

Lt. Col. Sam White presents Pampa's Company B with the ribbon signifying they had won honors as the "Best Company" in the battalion during summer camp in May and June.

A National Guard infantryman lies in wait for the "enemy," his M-16 at the ready.

Peeking at Pampa

It's pretty clothes on city women you want to try driving past the arches before or after Sunday School and morning church services.

That's where I saw Cay Turner with Mark Cay's men-colored hose matched background of her black dress and low heels. Cay combines beauty with intellect.

Lacy Terrell whisked Willie Connell — both good dressers — up the steps while they exchanged a few banteries. Shirley (Mrs. Beck) Winborne contrasted black suit with white for a red and true fashion combination.

Helen (Mrs. G. B.) Hogan's black hat banded in blue the color of her soft summer dress gave her a look of ministry drama. Some who chose to begin and pleasure time with sitting out were Kathleen (planted and artistic) and Ralph Hipkins. Kay and Elmer Mytryk — transplanted Easterners — come - Texans. Nell and Rankin with Emmett Pors. Carolyn and Price Smith — Carolyn in flowerbox-light geranium, so right for the holiday.

Perhaps a day later there were Ruth Ann and Art Holland and a few tables away Mercedes Robinson and Herman Sanchez — Mercedes dressed in a shade of pink of the same intensity as Ruth Ann's blue. Louise Slentz and Irvine Dunn with bright smiles. Idell and Earl Maddox. Ruby McWhorter. Alice and Raymond Darsey and Irene and Edwin Nelson engrossed in a smile producing conversation. Rosie, Ed and Cecil Myatt, who took time out to visit other tables. Who needed fireworks!

Still another day Jewell and Buzz Tarpley and Gaynell and Lee Fraser made a happy foursome.

Red and white fashions showed up everywhere last week. In the local supermarket there were Ann (Mrs. Glynn) Lusk and Norma (Mrs. Buff) Maguire. Norma stopped to chat with Polly (Mrs. E. C.) Sidwell, who deserves her reputation as a marvelous cook.

There's nothing quite like the look of pride reserved for grandmothers. Ethel May Clay had that look when she introduced her grandchildren around town last week. An other place Betty Dunbar looked especially spiffy in a red suit contrasted with white. Her sparkling eyes and shiny hair emphasized her spiffy look.

Holiday eve services for Central Baptist Church were held under the trees at Celanese Park, followed with ice cream and cake. Sherry Guinn played the piano while James Greer, now of Houston, led the singing. Sherry, pretty blonde daughter of Mary and Jerry Guinn, is business manager for Tri-Plains International.

Do ask Betty (Mrs. Raymond) Reed about her train tour of seven countries that extended from Istanbul to Paris! Ask about her sketches, too. Flying across the Atlantic in three and one-half hours on the Concorde provided added thrills. Betty has a good time wherever she goes.

Congratulations to Trent Davis and his parents, Brenda and Robert Davis on the birth of Trent's baby brother, Shawn Allen.

Here and there... A word of appreciation to Norma (Mrs. Vernon)

Baggerman, who with her calm, reassuring manner, does much to relieve pre-operation jitters for surgical patients at CCH.

Alma Ash — always helpful — looked fresh as a Georgia peach in a pretty peach-colored suit.

Best wishes to Pebble (Mrs. Frank) Carter as she recovers at home after a rather lengthy hospital stay.

Happy Birthday, belated and otherwise, to Esther Ruth (Mrs. J. E.) Gibson. She spreads a lot of cheer as a faithful, dependable hospital auxiliary volunteer. Dr. George Walters will celebrate his birthday next Saturday.

Houston and Doris were surprised recently when Helen Watson called to say she would be over and instead drive up Bill and Linda Tregoe of Ft. Walton, Fla. Bill was band director here for a number of years and Linda taught at Stephen F. Austin Elementary. Their son, Terry, now lives in Lafayette, Colo. and daughter Sherry is attending college in Mississippi.

Roy and Margaret

Sparkman visited Lake Texoma recently for a family reunion attended by 50 relatives and family friends.

If you need cheering up visit the home of Woody Pond's Woody and Jaunita are great at this.

Delbert, Punkie and Sherrie Daniels of White Deer have just returned from a vacation to Houston. They say it's a nice place to visit, but too much goes on for them to want to live there.

Pampa is blessed with a number of gourmet cooks, such as Peggy Reeves, Margaret Sparkman, Inez Stovall and Ola Tinney.

Sharee and Bob Turk and three sons vacationed in her hometown of Tupelo, Miss. Judy and Robert Martin and Kimberly spent a week in Colorado attending Judy's grandparents' 60th wedding anniversary and grand family reunion.

Martha and the Rev. Bill Boswell and children spent three weeks in North Carolina visiting her family. Renee and Scott Rossi have enjoyed showing her parents around Texas. They're from Illinois.

Sandra and Marlin Hayes report a profitable trip to Las Vegas. Jimmy and Virginia Wilkerson attended the 50th reunion of the Class of 1933 of Clarendon High School.

Retirement seems to agree with Alvin Scott. He and Jean are seen here and there — and often.

Amy and Rick Parnell toured NASA with Rick and Ryan because of Ryan's interest in science. Rick planned the mission trip to Steam Boat Springs, Colo., for 26 members of Central Baptist Church.

A new office opened in the Red Cross Building with Reed (Mrs. Bob) Echols at the helm. It's an umbrella source of information for available health care and social services. Volunteers will keep it going.

See you next week. KATIE

Tips for reducing repair costs

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Even with increasing improvements in appliance quality and reliability, it is inevitable that some appliances will require repair during their lifetime. Appliance manufacturers offer suggestions for reducing the need for, and cost of, repair service.

The first suggestion is to carefully read the warranty. Few appliance owners have read their warranties thoroughly. Knowing the terms of the warranty is an important consideration that should be weighed with all factors before purchasing the appliance.

Understand how the appliance operates. Consumers should study the new appliance and its literature as soon as it arrives in the home. The literature explains the proper operation of the appliance, cautions against product misuse, and details the manufacturer's plan for warranty and product maintenance.

An overwhelming number of service calls are made because someone failed to follow instructions. Too often consumers don't even open the use and care manual.

They simply assume their new appliance operates the same as the old model. When they hear the appliance making "funny" or "different" noises, however, they immediately call for service.

During the warranty period, consumers should use every feature and control so that defects, if they exist, will become apparent soon after installation. All product literature should be retained for the lifetime of the appliance since it lists authorized service facilities, the manufacturer's name and address and in some cases, a telephone directory identification program to aid in locating authorized service facilities. Also save the sales receipts to verify the date of purchase and service receipts to document the appliance's service history.

Consumers should not call for repair service until other factors are considered. The problem may not be the appliance itself, but a blown fuse, a power interruption, a tripped circuit breaker or various other reasons outlined in the instruction guide or a separate booklet from the manufacturer. This information lists the steps to take and areas to check before making an unnecessary service call. Consumers should always be prepared to supply the model and serial numbers and the date of purchase when calling for repair service.

Appliance owners need to be aware of three basic types of appliance servicing available. Factory service is owned and operated by the manufacturer who provides the service training, repair manuals and parts. Such a facility is generally located in larger communities where volume is great enough to warrant specializing in the service of one or more of the company's products.

Authorized service is also known as "factory authorized service." This type of service is provided by separately owned and managed firms that are under contract with either the brand owner or independent wholesale distribution. The manufacturer provides the repair manuals and parts, and service training is provided by either the manufacturer or its representative. A service company may be authorized for several different brands of appliances.

Independent service is provided by separately owned and managed firms that generally are not under any contract with the manufacturer. These service firms provide their own supervision, training, repair manuals and parts, frequently obtaining them from the manufacturers of each brand or from parts distributors which represent the manufacturer.

Manufacturers want customers to have prompt, efficient and courteous service no matter where the service is performed or by whom. Appliance owners experiencing unsatisfactory service generally inform the manufacturer of their situation, but satisfied customers rarely do the same. Manufacturers especially value letters from satisfied customers because they help companies gauge the performance of their service organizations and recognize and reward outstanding service firms and individuals.

Dear Abby

Babysitting grandparents must pay for privileges

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our son and daughter-in-law (I'll call them "Bob and Mary") asked my husband and me to baby-sit their three school-age children while they went on a 21-day cruise. We agreed. No problem. We enjoyed doing it.

When they returned, Mary said she forgot to ask us to keep a separate account of the food we ate so we could reimburse them! She said if we had been in our home, we would have eaten, which is true, but we were shocked. We assumed that taking care of their children was worth whatever food we ate.

Before we left, Mary presented us with a "bill," so my husband wrote out a check and gave it to her. When she took it, she asked us not to mention it to our son.

I think he should be told. My husband disagrees, saying it might cause trouble in their marriage, and he doesn't want to be a troublemaker. What do you think?

SHOOK UP IN CHICAGO

DEAR SHOOK: I vote with you. Mary doesn't deserve to be protected. Furthermore, with shenanigans like this, their marriage is already in trouble.

...

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional photographer who has photographed many couples, and I have never been able to find out why lovers always close their eyes while they're kissing.

I have read many sex-oriented manuals searching for the answer, but I've not been able to satisfy my curiosity concerning this universal custom.

I realize that this is no earthshaking problem, but I would like to have an answer from an authority. Thank you.

CURIOUS IN FORT MYERS, FLA.

DEAR CURIOUS: I don't claim to be an authority, but I'll wing it:

Some lovers close their eyes while kissing because the perspective at such close range is not the greatest. (Besides, what's to see?)

Also, if the kisser is not mad about the kisser, it's easier to fantasize with your eyes closed.

DEAR ABBY: I recently took in a roommate to share expenses for this large apartment. We've been friends for years and get along very well. We're both young women.

About two weeks ago her boyfriend came over. I was in the kitchen when I heard a loud argument going on in her room. It was apparent that they were having some kind of disagreement. He left suddenly, then she came to my room with a swollen lip and red fingermarks across her cheek. She told me her boyfriend had slapped her face and punched her mouth! I was shocked. She said he had never struck her before, but I now recall other occasions when she was bruised and said she had "bumped into a door" or fallen down.

She is really hung up on him, which worries me because I don't want her to end up being a battered wife.

Will you please give this young woman some wake-up advice? I'm finding it hard to keep quiet, but is this my business?

WORRIED ROOMIE

DEAR WORRIED: As her friend for many years, it is your business, but I'll offer no "wake-up advice" to her unless she asks for it. You should tell her that her boyfriend's violent behavior concerns you deeply and urge her to insist that he get professional help.

I cannot stress this fact too strongly: When punching and hitting are tolerated, it almost always escalates to more serious violence.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Jumpsuit styling

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — First came the melding of sportswear and loungewear. Now the lines between loungewear and sleepwear are blurring. A sleep gown may be styled like a bias-cut chemise in cotton knit, as Bill Blass does for Royal Robes, or a silk charmeuse teddy sleeper may be halter-styled, patio fashion.

With the jumpsuit entrenched in sportswear, it's naturally moved into loungewear, and now appears in sleepwear that can double as loungewear. Vanity Fair's version is a whirl of permanent pleating in rose or black Silkenique polyester, with a string sash and lace bodice trim. Wear it strapless as loungewear, or with spaghetti straps to bed.

Bill Tice for Swirl likes his sleep/lounge jumpsuit in cobalt and black Aztec-print cotton gauze, cap-sleeved and cut loose from its black band neckline to its cuffed ankles. At Queen Anne's Lace of Los Angeles, the pajama-cut jumpsuit has a laped halter top which is semi-fitted in a long-torso look.

Another way to give sleepwear a leisure aspect is to add a jacket.

Cause of crib death still a mystery

The mother of an apparently healthy infant lays her child in his crib. An hour later she discovers the sleeping child has died, a victim of sudden infant death syndrome, or SIDS. Similar scenes occur about 8,000 times each year in this country, says the Texas Medical Association. That means one of every 500 live births.

This death is unexpected and the cause unknown. SIDS itself was unknown until the 1960s, when the phenomenon was given its name. It was the mid-1970s before SIDS, also known as "crib death," was used as a cause of death on death certificates.

Now it is the most common cause of death in infants two weeks to a year old, accounting for a third of these deaths. Several groups have responded with funding for research, information distribution and parental counseling.

From what is known, SIDS is not believed to be hereditary. It is not contagious, although a viral infection may be present. SIDS occurs most frequently in the third or fourth month of life. The incidence is higher in infants born prematurely or living in poverty. SIDS occurs more frequently in boys than in girls and in winter more than in summer. Most infants with SIDS die in their sleep, with no signs of trouble and no crying out. Autopsies show that SIDS has nothing to do with suffocation caused by, say, a blanket. Minor inflammation of the upper respiratory tract may be present, but this is not the cause of death. Sleep apnea, a temporary inability to breathe, may be a contributing factor.

Theories aside, a true SIDS victim dies of unknown and unexplained causes. This can have a destructive effect on a family. With nowhere to place the blame, parents may accuse themselves, each other or other family members. The loss of a child to disease or accident can be understood, but not the loss of a baby to an unknown.

For this reason, support groups help families of SIDS victims to adjust to the death and to understand that no one is to blame. Two of these groups are the International Council for Infant Survival at (202) 833-2253 and the national Infant Death Syndrome Foundation, (301) 459-3388. Both groups can provide information on the nearest local chapter.

Consumer Reports

Bleach away mildew

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: Can you tell me what I can use to deal with mildew that has developed in my camping tent? A local salesman said that nothing could stop mildew and that I should just buy a new tent. My tent is a Eureka Riverside, and since a new one would cost $360, I would like very much to save the one I have. Can you help me?

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports chemists say that you should try washing mildew off with a combination of an all-fabric bleach (no chlorine) and one of the newly formulated, stain-removing liquid laundry detergents in water. Scrub it on with a brush, let stand a bit and hose it off. If the mildew remains, repeat the process using a liquid (chlorine) bleach solution of one part bleach to three parts water. Be sure to hose it off within 10 minutes. The chlorine bleach may attack the fabric.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: I have a red velvet sofa and love seat. There are no stains, just the normal dust from continued use. How should I clean the velvet?

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports-textile experts say that you should vacuum the velvet or stroke it with one of the gadgets used to remove lint from clothing. Water or any cleaner containing water will tend to mat the velvet.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: We built a log home and used trees that were freshly cut and peeled. We had no heat in the building this past winter, and now some of the logs and ceiling boards are moldy. What can we use to clean the mold from these logs and to prevent it from forming again?

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports engineers say that they're not surprised that the house is damp and moldy. Fresh logs can contain more than half their weight in water, which will evaporate slowly after cutting. A solution of three-to-one liquid bleach in water should kill the mold. A wood preservative application may prevent its recurrence.

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: Can you please tell me what method to use to remove old paint drippings on aluminum storm windows and asbestos shingles, and how to remove moss from the shingles?

DEAR READER: Consumer Reports engineers say that gel-type paint remover should remove the paint drips. However, you should be careful not to breathe the fumes or to get the remover on yourself.

Try the remover on some inconspicuous part of a shingle before you tackle the drips on any major scale. That way, you can be sure it won't attack the shingles. You can probably remove the moss by scrubbing with liquid bleach in water.

CHICKEN WITH FRESH PEACHES — An oriental marinade and an unusual combination of spices go into the dish.

Spice makes chicken nice

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
If you are interested in trying an unusual combination of flavors, this recipe for Chicken with Fresh Peaches may attract you.

The chicken is marinated in an oriental-style sauce, then sprinkled with four different spices and baked. Fresh peaches and water chestnuts go into the pan shortly before the chicken is ready. Rice complements the dish.

CHICKEN WITH FRESH PEACHES
 1/4 cup soy sauce
 1/4 cup water
 1/2 cup chopped (medium-fine) onion
 1 1/2 teaspoons finely chopped fresh ginger
 1 large clove garlic, finely chopped
 3 1/2-pound frying chicken, cut up
 1/4 teaspoon anise seed, crushed

1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
 2 large fresh peaches, quartered
 8-ounce can water chestnuts, drained and sliced
 In a 3-quart rectangular baking dish (13 1/4 by 8 1/4 by 1 1/2 inches) stir together soy sauce, water, onion, ginger and garlic; add chicken in a single layer; marinate 2 or 3 hours, turning several times. Turn chicken skin side up; stir together anise, allspice, cinnamon and cloves; sprinkle over chicken.

 Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 50 minutes, basting several times; add peaches and water chestnuts; bake until chicken is tender and peaches are heated through — 10 minutes longer. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

FOOD

Giant peanuty birthday cookie

PEANUTTY giant cookie is surprise treat for youngsters.

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Children enjoy the unusual — and fun foods when it comes to parties.

A special giant cookie will get their attention immediately.

If the cookie or cookies are baked for a birthday party to go with ice cream, let the birthday child cut a cookie to start the eating festivities. The peanuty giant cookie also makes a different gift when delivered uncut.

PEANUTTY GIANT COOKIE

- 1 cup margarine
- 3/4 cup peanut butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups quick oats, uncooked
- 3/4 cup raisins
- 3/4 cup plain chocolate candies

Beat together margarine, peanut butter and sugars until light and fluffy; blend in eggs. Add combined flour, soda and salt, mix well. Stir in oats, raisins and 1/4 cup candies. To make 2 giant cookies, place half of the dough onto each of two foil-lined and very lightly greased 12- to 13 1/4-inch pizza pans. Spread dough to within 1 inch from edge of pan. Sprinkle each cookie with 1/4 cup candies. Bake at 325 degrees for 20 to 22 minutes or until lightly golden brown. Cool 10 minutes in pan. Gently remove each cookie with foil liner to wire rack; cool thoroughly. Cut into wedges or squares to serve. This kitchen-tested recipe makes two 12- to 13 1/4-inch giant cookies.

- CRUNCHY SNACK MIX
- 3 cups cheese twists
- 1 1/2 cups peanut chocolate candies
- 1 cup raisins

Combine all ingredients. Store in tightly covered container. Serve as a snack. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 5 cups mix.

Blueberry is popular fruit

This is the season for a host of garden goodies, including that succulent globule we know as the blueberry.

We discovered the blueberry through the American Indian and soon found that it thrived in almost any climate. In the wild state they are found from the northern tip of Alaska down to Florida, and have even been spotted above the Arctic Circle.

In other lands, they are called bilberry and whortleberry. The old English name for them, hurtleberry, gave rise to some confusion — in parts of America this was translated to huckleberry. There is such a fruit but it is different from the blueberry, even though they look alike.

For one thing, the blueberry is filled with dozens of tiny seeds, but they are so soft they are hardly noticeable when eaten. The huckleberry has 10 large, hard seeds which do not give, even when baked in a pie.

Bite down on one of these and you may have a toothache.

The first white man to discover the blueberry was Samuel de Champlain, the French explorer who saw some Indians beating dried berries into a powder near Lake Huron. They added the powder to parched grain meal. The Indians also pounded the berries into venison, then smoke-dried it.

Americans like blueberries, not only for their flavor, but for the fact that they are so easy to prepare.

About 150 million pounds of this berry are consumed by Americans every year. About a third are consumed fresh and the rest in pancakes, muffins, jams, preserves, ice cream and sherbet. For a refreshing dessert, try this recipe for blueberry sherbet.

- 2 cups cultivated blueberries, rinsed and drained
- 1 cup water
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin

1/4 cup lemon juice
 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
 1 teaspoon Angostura aromatic bitters

In saucepan, combine blueberries, water and sugar. Bring to boil, lower heat and simmer 10 minutes. Soak gelatin in lemon juice for 5 minutes, then stir into hot blueberry mixture until gelatin is dissolved. Cool, then freeze until mixture is mushy. Beat with electric mixer until smooth and fluffy. Fold in whipped cream and bitters. Freeze about 6 hours, until firm. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Texas agriculture mixed bag due to weather

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Rains in East and South Texas have temporarily halted grain and cotton harvesting, and slowed cutting, but but should benefit most other crops as well as ranges and pastures, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

But dry areas of West Texas still need rain, he said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

Farmers in the Winter Garden area continue heavy irrigation, and pastures and ranges in Southwest Texas continue to need moisture. Sorghum harvesting is under way in southern counties of the district, with low-average yields being reported due to a dry growing season, said Carpenter.

In Far West Texas, agricultural producers found relief from drought conditions which have grown steadily worse during the past 18 months in some counties. Ranchers are shipping animals from their foundation herds and most have already sold this year's calf and lamb crops at earlier and lighter weights than normal, in an effort to reduce grazing on the drought-distressed land.

The rice crop is progressing in coastal counties, and is about 70 percent headed along the lower coast. It ranges from 20 to 80 percent headed in upper coastal areas. The harvest is expected to be later than usual due to slow growth early in the season, Carpenter said.

Corn harvesting is under way in some Coastal Bend areas, with yields ranging around 60 bushels per acre. Hay harvesting also continues in areas of the state that received sufficient earlier rainfall to produce enough volume to bale.

Freestone peaches are at their seasonal production peak in Gillespie County, in West Central Texas, with the quality reported to be good.

Outlook for the pecan crop is generally good, although insect control measures are continuing. Some pecan varieties are shedding nuts in South Central Texas.

District Extension directors reported these conditions at mid-week:

PANHANDLE: The wheat harvest is nearing completion with better than average yields reported. Corn and sorghum crops are growing well, and warm temperatures are proving beneficial to the cotton crop. Some early harvesting of onions is under way, and potatoes are nearing maturity. Sugar beets are making good progress, but ranges need moisture.

SOUTH PLAINS: Irrigated cotton that has received adequate moisture made good progress this week, except in a number of hail damaged areas. The cotton crop, however, is generally late. Much of the dryland cotton acreage failed to get enough moisture for planting, and those areas that were planted are now in critical need of rain. Irrigated corn is at the tassel stage and making good progress. Wheat harvesting is in the final stages with good yields for both dryland and irrigated crops. Ranges need moisture and general rains are needed throughout the district.

ROLLING PLAINS: Hail damage was reported to another 110,000 acres of cotton in Hall County, and strong winds caused considerable sand damage to cotton in several other counties. The cotton crop is from two to three weeks behind its normal growth schedule. Boll weevil control measures are under way in Jones, Fisher and Cottle Counties, and Kent County has reported some beet armyworm damage. Pastures are beginning to need moisture, with some grasshopper infestation also being reported.

NORTH CENTRAL: The wheat harvest is nearing completion in most areas with good yields reported, along with good oat yields. Cotton is making good growth, and corn is in the dough stage. Some head worms and midge problems are being reported in sorghum. Peaches are up to good stands. Peaches are sizing well, with early varieties producing well.

NORTHEAST: Cotton continues to look good, although some bollworms are being reported. The wheat harvest is in the final stages, with generally good yields being reported. Good corn yields also are expected. High quality vegetable production is continuing in most home gardens. Good peach yields are reported and the outlook for pecans is good. Pastures and cattle are in good condition.

FAR WEST: No moisture has been received to bring any relief from severe drought conditions, which have grown steadily worse during the past 18 months in most counties. Ranchers are shipping some of their foundation herds to market as a result of the continuing drought. In irrigated areas, the cantaloupe harvest is expected to begin soon. Irrigated home gardens are producing well. Some casebearer activity has been reported on small pecans.

WEST CENTRAL: Moisture is still short. Sorghum and cotton crops are making good growth, and some cotton is beginning to square. The sorghum crop is about 50 percent headed, and the wheat harvest is about complete. Some livestock producers are beginning to cull herds as moisture gets short, although not many sheep are going to market because of unfavorable prices. Freestone peaches are plentiful now in the Gillespie County area.

CENTRAL: The sorghum crop is progressing, but additional midge infestations are being reported in some areas. Cotton and corn crops are advancing, with corn continuing to mature. Harvesting of hay also continues, although yields in a number of areas are down due to dry conditions earlier in the growth season. Vegetable production is continuing in home gardens.

EAST: Good corn yields are being reported, and peanuts are in good condition.

In Agriculture

By JOE VANZANT
County Extension Agent

BINDWEED CONTROL

The Texas Highway Department has been contacted about controlling bindweed along their rights-of-ways. They have been very cooperative the past few years in using the herbicide Roundup on bindweed growing along the roadsides where the farmer is also controlling bindweed in adjacent farmland. They will again use Roundup since there is no drift problem or soil sterilant action from this herbicide. It kills the foliage and root system of plants it is sprayed on.

Farmers need to come by the County Extension office and sign certificates that they are actively trying to control bindweed on their farmland adjoining state highways. The Highway Department will try to spray all of the bindweed on their adjoining right-of-ways in early August.

We have a map and certificates to sign up for this program in the Gray County Extension office. Please come by immediately and no later than August 1.

WHEAT-FERTILIZER

An excellent wheat crop is now in the grain bins. Moisture conditions allowed this past wheat crop to make about all the land was capable of producing. We have heard of numerous yields on dryland fields in the 40 to 50 bushel range where fertilizer was applied or on summer fallowed land where there was adequate nutrients available. This compares to dryland yields in the 20 to 30 bushel range. One field that we know of had a soil test made and only four pounds of nitrogen was available in the topsoil.

I think farmers need to get some soil samples made on their land where they plan to plant wheat this fall. We have been making fairly good wheat crops the last several years and have just about depleted our natural supply of available plant nutrients. For only $4 per sample, farmers can certainly get a good idea on the fertility level of wheatland. Sample sheets and boxes are available in the County Extension office.

BRUCELLOSIS CHANGES

House Bill No. 1 relating to the Texas Animal Health Commission and the control of brucellosis and other animal diseases has been reviewed and the following is reported for your information.

The Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) will be composed of 12 commissioners appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Senate, with the appropriate number from each of the following categories: a practitioner of veterinary medicine, a dairyman, a practical cattle raiser, a practical hog raiser, a poultry raiser, a sheep or goat raiser, an individual involved in the equine industry; an individual involved in the feedlot industry; an individual involved in the livestock marketing industry and three members from the general public.

The change has been from nine to 12 commissioners to include three members of the general public.

The new bill also gives the TAHC permission to formulate new rules to cover the movement of cattle sold for slaughter only, where the commission's rules are in compliance with the current Brucellosis Uniform Methods and Rules.

It is expected that the members of the TAHC will meet in the near future to complete the new regulations provided for in the new bill.

For Horticulture

BY JOE VANZANT
County Extension Agent

The recent dry weather is certainly the signal to get out the water hoses for the benefit of anything we want to keep green and in a good, healthy, growing condition.

Landscape plants and particularly our pine trees need a good deep soaking by letting water run slowly around their drip-line area for several hours. I believe we can avoid a lot of disease and insect problems when landscape plants are properly cared for. They transpire a lot of water through their leaves in the hot, dry summer weather.

This water has to come from the soil through the tree's roots system. Don't neglect to give your plants enough water — remember how thirsty you get when outside on a hot, dry, windy day.

TOMATO DISEASES

Many tomato plants are of an age where the foliage is susceptible to diseases. Conditions are good for diseases to occur. This is exactly what is happening in many gardens. Early blight, Septoria leafspot and some Spaulding Journal showing noticed on tomatoes recently.

To control these diseases, gardeners will need to establish a regular spray program, seven-day interval, using approved fungicides. Maneb can be used for good control. Sprays should be continued at regular intervals. Maneb should not be used closer than five days prior to harvest.

BLOSSOM BLIGHT OF SQUASH

Now is the time of the year for blossom blight to be causing serious losses among all varieties of squash, especially where soil remains wet around the plants. These conditions result in severe losses from this disease.

The blossom ends of the affected fruits turn black, water soaked, and are covered by a fungal growth that resembles numerous black-headed pins. The blossom is normally affected first and generally occurs the day after pollination takes place.

To control blossom blight, a fungicide should be used on a short interval, three-day, during peak periods of infection. It is essential that the spray be copper — or maneb — containing fungicide should be used. Wider spacing of plants to allow for better air movement and drying will help prevent the disease. Also, removal of the blossoms after pollination will eliminate the site of primary infection. Mulches have also been used to help reduce the disease occurrence in many areas.

SPIDER MITES — TINY PESTS CAUSE BIG PROBLEMS

Spider mites are tiny but they can cause big problems in home gardens.

These pests prefer tomatoes, beans and peas and do most of their damage in dry, hot weather.

Spider mites, also called red spiders, are only 1-60 inch in length and vary in color from white to green to red.

The tiny pests can build up quickly and completely engulf plants. They lay eggs on the underside of leaves, which hatch in four to five days. A complete life cycle takes three weeks, and as many as 20 overlapping generations can occur in a single year.

Mites spin a thin web which often can be seen on the underside of an infested leaf. They feed by inserting their mouth-parts into the tissues and sucking juice from the plant. While feeding, they inject toxic substances into the plant.

Infestations of spider mites can be identified by tiny white spots on the underside of a leaf. Heavy infestations cause bleaching or yellowing, first along the main leaf veins and then throughout the plant. The plant may also shed buds and small fruit. Spider mites can completely defoliate a plant if not controlled.

Control of spider mites is often difficult and requires from two to four applications of insecticide at five-day intervals. Plants should be checked frequently for spider mites since the pests can build up rapidly.

Insecticides registered for controlling spider mites in gardens are diazinon, kelthane, malathion, ethion and sulfur. However, avoid using sulphur on vine plants as severe plant damage could occur.

As always, read and follow label directions on all insecticides.

Contaminated scrap yard has no permits

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials plan to investigate a Houston scrap company that they say continues to operate without required state permits, although it was warned by city pollution inspectors more than a year ago.

Houston Scrap has accumulated more than 40 pollution violation notices in the last five years. Lead contamination in a dirt road at the plant site might have spread into nearby neighborhoods, officials said.

The company finally applied on June 6 for special exemptions from permits for three salvage facilities, said a spokesman for the Texas Air Control Board.

Cecil Bradford, air control board enforcement chief, said his department will look into the matter and determine "what action, if any, we need to take" about the company's lack of permits.

"If that's what it takes, we can get pretty strong real quick," Bradford said.

Dallas Evans, Houston air quality chief, said he is waiting to see how the company fares in dealing with its permit problems before deciding whether to refer the case to the city attorney for legal action.

Houston Scrap owns three salvage facilities — two aluminum can grinding facilities and a new battery salvage plant to replace one believed to have caused the lead contamination.

The state requires industrial facilities that may cause air pollution to get either a permit or an exemption before they are built.

But Joe Barvin, the company's vice president, said the company should not be required to get the state permits because the recycling operations do not cause pollution. He said other plants of the same type are operating without permits.

Barvin said a new battery reclaiming plant nearing completion will not produce pollution, and will replace a facility that inspectors say had a smoke-emitting lead furnace without any pollution controls.

Records show a city inspector issued two violation notices to Houston Scrap in April 1982 for operating two facilities without construction or operating permits, the Houston Post reported Thursday.

The inspector noted in a report that he gave Barvin a copy of the air board permit regulations, but Barvin "intimated he did not have time to read it."

Option Tender Bonds: Tax-free income plus the protection of a short-term investment.

Option Tender Bonds from Kidder, Peabody offer you the big advantage of not being locked into a long-term commitment. You can purchase these top-quality tax-free bonds with the option to tender them at full par value after a one, three, or five-year holding period... and any year thereafter until the bonds are redeemed or mature. The initial tender date may vary from issue to issue.

Once the first tender date arrives, you have a choice. If interest rates have risen, you can tender your bonds at par and reinvest the proceeds in securities producing higher yields. If rates have declined, you can simply keep your bonds and continue to collect a return higher than the market rate. No matter which way interest rates go, you are protected. That's real flexibility.

A new issue of high quality, AAA-rated Option Tender Bonds is expected soon. For further information, call Sharon McCarrell at 848-2311. Or mail the coupon.

Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to placate others you might change your course of action today, one you know to be right. This won't serve them or yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Think before speaking today, or you might let the cat out of the bag regarding something you wish to keep secret.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Expenses pertaining to non-essential outside activities could get out of hand today if you are not careful. Allocate your funds prudently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't let negative emotional feelings deter you from achieving your objectives today. See yourself as being successful, not as a failure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Time is your ally, but you may not recognize this to be true today. In your impatience to achieve your aims you might defeat your own purpose.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try not to become involved in financial or business dealings with friends today. If you find it necessary to do so, bend over backward to be fair.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) An associate who offered assistance may suddenly withdraw such support today. Just in case this occurs, be prepared to fend for yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Projects you work on today which do not have your complete interest could turn out poorly. Good results won't come from half measures.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to schedule your time today so that you don't do things haphazardly. Even your social activities should be planned wisely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Family related issues must be handled logically today, not emotionally. Don't let your feelings overrule your sound judgment.

oise is a distraction for Cliff Robertson

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

ANGELES (AP) — It's the noon hour and a few passersby hurrying to lunch goggle at the brightly illuminated being enacted in the ornate entrance to a town building.

Robertson is playing a scene for the series "Falcon Crest." Behind them are elevator doors and a steady stream of people for background atmosphere.

Robertson blows his lines.

So hard to concentrate with all the noise, Robertson says. "Even the extras talking. Someone was arguing behind me. He raises his hands in mock despair. I'm away from this bedlam!"

Robertson, an Academy Award winner in 1967 for his first television series since a month stint in the Saturday morning "Rocky Brown of the Rocket Rangers" in 1965.

So is one of the few film roles Robertson has had since he disclosed that David L. Man, then president of Columbia Pictures, had forged a $10,000 check in his name. That set off the so-called "Woodgate Scandal," and Robertson was blackballed by the film industry.

In the Hollywoodgate windmill took four years of exile," he says. "Now there's less active bookkeeping" in Hollywood. I've considered myself a Don Quixote, with or without portfolio. But I just feel we can't accept unfair treatment if you're an American citizen. It's your obligation to stand up and be heard."

The last thing Robertson did in Hollywood was a television movie called "Overboard." That was five years ago. "After that I was blackballed," he says.

He directed and starred in a low-budget film in Florida called "The Pilot." He did a few commercials, wrote a play and a sequel to "Charly."

His re-entry into Hollywood came with the movie "Brainstorm," but its completion and release has been delayed by the death of co-star Natalie Wood. He plays Hugh Hefner of Playboy magazine in Bob Fosse's "Star 80." It's about Dorothy Stratton, the Playboy Playmate who was killed by her husband. He also stars in the movie "Class."

In "Falcon Crest," the prime-time soap opera starring Jane Wyman, Robertson plays Dr. Michael Ranson. Ranson is a successful neurosurgeon who becomes involved with the lives of the Tuscan Valley residents through his association with his cousin, Chase Gioberti (Robert Foxworth).

"My agent called and said they were interested in me," Robertson says. "He said, 'I know you've turned down series for 20 years, but these are good people. I think you ought to consider it.'"

Staying alive or not

Actor John Travolta performs in one of the dance scenes in his new movie "Staying Alive" in which he plays the same character as in "Saturday Night Fever." Critics have panned the movie, but Paramount Pictures expects "Staying Alive" to be a financial success. (AP Laserphoto)

'Reminiscing in Tempo'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Reminiscing in Tempo" is a new show in town. It's a show of jazz, offering both vocals and affectionate portraits of such jazz greats as Duke Ellington, Count

Basie, Louis Armstrong. It's currently housed at Michael's Pub, an East Side jazz club. But plans are to make it the core of a new Broadway jazz musical, maybe filling the void left by the departure of "Sophisticated Ladies."

"At least that's what we're hoping," says Jon Hendricks, a singer since he was 14 working clubs in his native Toledo, Ohio, often backed by a pretty fair pianist name of Art Tatum.

Hendricks, the author and co-star of "Tempo," isn't exactly well known on Broadway. But he is well known to anyone who loves jazz. He once was one-third of the famed vocal trio known as Lambert, Hendricks and Ross.

They were a sensation in the jazz world when they began 25 years ago with a swinging repertory mostly consisting of vocal versions of big-band arrangements recorded by Count Basie's orchestra.

Hendricks wrote the lyrics, setting them to ensemble and solo passages originally recorded by instruments, with his voice and those of the late Dave Lambert and Annie Ross emulating the various instruments in Basie's band.

Theirs was a distinctive sound. The trio wowed the multitudes not only with their treatments of Basie and Ellington hits but also with Hendricks originals, like his rollicking "Gimme That Wine" wherein he notes, "I can't cut loose without my juice..."

Their sound still is heard in "Tempo," whose cast consists of Hendricks; Judith, his wife of 24 years; Stephanie Nakasian, and Bob Gurland — the last renowned for his uncanny re-creations of famous trumpeters, partly because he does them without benefit of trumpet.

Hendricks, 61, says he first was inspired to apply lyrics to instrumental jazz hits after hearing a jazz classic — King Pleasure's recording of "Moody's Mood for Love."

But the first Lambert, Hendricks and Ross album, "Sing a Song of Basie," now a collector's item, was an accident, he insists.

"Dave Lambert and I were living together here and we really had no intention of forming a vocal group. What we wanted to do was to create an 'artistic masterpiece' before we died, which seemed imminent because we were broke and starving to death.

"You live with it," he says.

Milos Forman is turning heads in Czechoslovakia

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Bejeweled damsels in powdered wigs piled high with stiff curls, turn fewer heads as they trip through socialist Prague in silks and bustles than the man who brought them here: Milos Forman.

The Czech-born filmmaker, who took up U.S. citizenship after the state fired him in 1971, is back to film "Amadeus," based on Peter Shaffer's stage play about Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

Forman had decided that Prague was the only city that still looks like 1780 Vienna. And since Czechoslovakia needed the foreign exchange, an accord was reached which, with some strains, appears to be working.

"They are charging for everything, and it gets worse as we go along," says producer Saul Zaentz, who estimated his $15 million budget could run over by 20 percent.

"You live with it," he says.

"You couldn't shoot this film in America."

Official Czechoslovak sentiment is mixed. Forman was hounded out of Barrandov Studios in a cultural purge after the 1968 Soviet invasion. But he has since made five internationally recognized films, including the Academy Award-winning "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "Hair" and "Ragtime."

Forman, who was born in 1932, was trained as a writer at the Czech Film School. He received his training as a director at Laterna Magika. He won international acclaim with his first film, "Black Peter," in 1963.

He declined to be interviewed.

His producer, Zaentz, said he was too busy to spare even a few minutes until filming was finished this month.

His assistant director, Mike Hausman, said Forman is not interested. "It's not in our coordinated advertising campaign," he said. "Another article wouldn't do us any good for a February release."

But others close to Forman said that with two sons still in Czechoslovakia, and mixed feelings about his homeland, the filmmaker was far too ill at ease to talk about it.

Still, Forman and "Amadeus" are hard to miss.

Czechs and tourists gawk as the director takes Prague back 200 years, filming in carved doorways and on cobblestone streets that have not changed since Mozart's time.

Outside the Tyl theater.

where Mozart's opera, "Don Giovanni," opened for the first time, women in towering white wigs and jogging shoes munch sandwiches on lunch break.

The crew of 50 Americans, with a dozen dancers directed by choreographer Twyla Tharp, do not go unnoticed.

At times, it is hard for onlookers to determine who is in costume and who is not.
