says "American schools are in trouble" and finds that many students leave school "ill-prepared for jobs and effective citizenship.

"A Study of Schooling," a comprehensive study that took more than eight years and included about 27.000 interviews, found the problems of the American educational system to be 'deeply entrenched and virtually chronic." Also, the study said, the schools should undergo "far-reaching

The study characterized the system as one of talky teachers addressing uninterested students who face unclear goals and study in an environment of serious social and educational inequities.

John I. Goodlad, former dean of the Graduate School of Education at the University of California at Los Angeles, and the director of the study, said,

"American schools are in trouble. "Large numbers of students are leaving school ill-prepared for jobs and effective citizenship, and even many of those who appear to be 'making it' are short-changed." he said

The study was sponsored by an independent research organization, the Institute for the Development of Educational Activities, and consisted of questionnaires, interviews and classroom observation by 43 researchers in 13 communities.

Among the changes suggested by Goodlad include:

-Accelerating schooling by two years, with children starting formal education the month after they reach the age of 4 and graduating high school

-Having high school curriculums that require a core of "general education" courses for all students, including those in vocational programs.

-Naming "head teachers" who would have Ph.D.'s and would receive higher salaries. This would serve as an incentive for capable teachers, he said.

Goodlad said a typical day of instruction in a junior or senior high school included 150 minutes of talking. of which "only seven minutes is initiated by students."

As they progress from grade to grade students become less and less involved in their school work, the researchers

According to Goodlad, the atmosphere of most classrooms in the study was "emotionally flat."

"Rarely did we observe laughter. anger or any overt displays of feelings," he said.

The study was also critical of the practice of "tracking." that is, putting students into fast and slow moving sections in core subjects to allow students to move at their own pace. The researchers found the practice altered both the rate of learning and the content of instruction, as well as teacher attitude and classroom atmosphere.

MIAMI (AP) - A Cuban man who passed around copies of a note claiming to have a "blockbuster" bomb in his briefcase hijacked a Miami-bound Eastern Airlines jumbo jet to Cuba today in the second case of air piracy in 48 hours, federal aviation officials said

Eastern Flight 1, with 232 people aboard, landed safely back at Miami International airport at 4:47 a.m. 'minus one male hijacker," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker

It was the fourth case of air piracy this month and the eighth since May 1. No one was injured.

The hijacker did not have a weapon but "he claimed to have a bomb in his briefcase," Barker said.

The flight, carrying 221 passengers

International Airport in New York.

Jim Freeman, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI in Miami, said the hijacker had an employee identification card from the Chase Manhattan Bank.

"The name on the papers he carried was J.C. Montero," said Freeman. That name wasn't listed on the passenger list, Freeman said.

The man "passed a note to a attendant to give to the captain," Freeman said. He also passed photocopies of a note to the passengers. 'indicating his desire to to Cuba and the threat of a bomb.

doing so because you love him,' testified a witness called by the Rev. Jerry West Monday during the battle to keep state inspectors out of his church run day care center.

The State of Texas wants to license or close down the Pampa day care center operated by the Rev. West, minister of the Pampa Baptist Temple

The long - running hearing and attorney general's effort to shut down the Christian day care center resumed Monday morning in the 223rd District Court of Judge Don Cain.

The state says West's day care center must submit to inspection and licensing by the Department of Human Resources, or close.

West, 31, claims the Pampa Christian Academy and School, a school and day care center that admits children from infant to high - school age, is an extension of his ministry and church, the Pampa Baptist Temple. He says the school is therefore protected from state intrusion by the First Amendment's guarantee of the Freedom of Religion.

He says state inspectors from the DHR have no business in his Christian school. Before the state first took him to court in October 1981. West sent back his DHR license to operate the day care center.

The hearing to force licensing follows complaints from some parents that their children were abused while cared for at the Christian Academy.

West admits that based beliefs, he and the staff administer corporal punishment, but denies he abuses the children.

The minister said Monday that spanking children is not at issue in the present hearing. He said the only issue on trial is the Constitution's Freedom of Religion

But the state contends that the regulation governing spankings at day care centers is an issue, just one of several guidelines that licensed day care centers must obey

Under cross - examination by Special Attorney General C. Ed Davis, West's expert witness on religious training. Dr. Rex Fuller of Bonner Springs, Kan. said "the standard that no child under the age of five can receive a spanking' is one state regulation contrary to religious training

"He that spareth his son, hateth his son," testified Dr. Fuller, referring to "Proverbs."

"Nowhere in the Bible do I see that it's not to begin until age five," Fuller told Davis. "When you spank a child, you are doing so because you love him," he The practice of spanking at the church day care center became controversial after several parents complained of abuse. In 1981, simple assault charges were filed against West's assistant after it was alleged he abused a 14 - month - old toddler. "The criminal charges were a setup," West said outside the courtroom Monday.

Gray County Attorney Robert McPherson said the assault charge against former Academy employee James Means has been dismissed.

'We couldn't make a case. The witnesses didn't want to pursue it." McPherson said.

The on - going hearing to close the center has been started, stopped and delayed several times. The hearing was previously adjourned in May last year. First to testify Monday was West's wife, Shirley, a teacher at the school. She said the only requirement for teachers at the school is that they be born again." Mrs. West, 30, said she has no degree, but said the Bible commands her to teach. She said the lessons at the school, including songs, prayer. Bible stories and play acting, are all guided by God's love. Dr. Fuller followed Mrs. West on the stand. He said a degree isn't important in religious training.

"A secular institution does not prepare teachers. I had to overcome training to apply God's word. A person may be qualified by standards of the state, but not qualified by the standards of the Pampa Baptist Temple," Fuller testified

Outside the court, West said the eight teachers and other staff at his school 'do a superb job." He said that in addition to religion, the approximately 75 students at the Christian school study the basics. He said his students' education will match up with any

"The (state) standards have left out the keystone, which is spiritual. It all has to center around the word of God. They are taking a secular yardstick and trying to apply it to a religious setting,"

He said the training at the church, academy and school, including the day care center, is all religious training.

Shortly after 4 a.m. Aug. 11, 1981, police chased a fleeing suspect, Lonnie Cox, east from Borger on Texas 152. In Canadian Second councilman is appointed

By JULIA CLARK Staff Writer The Canadian City Council chambers were overflowing for a regular meeting of that city's council Monday night which saw the second council member appointed by the body within a week. The first order of business at the Monday night session was acceptance of the resignation of council member Warren Lingg, who said because of his impending move from the city, he could no longer hold office.

George Arrington was nominated to fill Lingg's vacated seat. With no other nominations forthcoming, the four remaining council member split the Councilmen Lonnie Donaldson and Ben Mathers voted for Arrington and councilmen Joe Schaef and Guy Folley voted against. With Mayor Therese Abraham breaking the tie, Arrington was sworn into office.

A resident of Canadian noted that according to a state civil statute, when there is more than one vacancy on the city council, only one can be filled by appointment. He recalled the special meeting last week to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Charlie Plumblee and questioned the legality of appointing another councilman at this meeting. He said according to his understanding of the statute, a special election to fill at least one of the vacancies should have been called.

Former Pampa resident is area's highway patrol commanding officer

A Pampa favorite son who left the town he still considers home has worked his way up to the highest ranks of the state police.

Vernon Cawthon, 52, who with his family lived in Pampa for eight years, was named major and regional commander for the Texas Department of Public Safety earlier this year.

"We consider this our DPS home. This is our favorite of the whole state. We never made the kind of friends we made in Pampa," said the man who has had to move in order to move up.

Cawthon was just a lowly trooper during the happy years he spent in Pampa. Now he's the Region V Commander, the state - police boss over 60 counties in the south plains and Texas Panhandle by DPS Director Col. Jim Adams was effective January 1. He is based in Lubbock and commands one of just six regions in the entire state. "Generally, a promotion always means a move. It's rare for the vacancy

Cawthon's appointment as a major to be where you're at," Cawthon said about moving through the DPS ranks.

The major began his 25 years with the state police as a Perryton trooper in 1958. The next year, the Cawthon family moved to Pampa.

Cawthon's wife, Shirley, was active here in Beta Sigma Phi. Their son, Jay. DPS today?

attended grade school here. Jay is now a Baptist preacher in Mineral Wells. Daughter Jan attended middle school and high school in Pampa. Jan is now a schoolteacher in Mineral Wells.

"We were glad to get back to the Panhandle. The people here are better to deal with. They want good law enforcement. It makes our job much easier," Cawthon said. "It's stable - not like Houston. The crime rate doesn't appear to be as bad. It's better to deal with what I call 'Your basic home folks," he said. The new major has seen a lot of the state due to his frequent promotions and forced relocation After his work in Pampa, Cawthon moved to Alice for promotion to sergeant. He transferred back to Tulia, before a transfer to Harlingen as lieutenant in 1972. The commander made captain and moved to Houston in 1977. During his three and a half years there, Cawthon said he tired of the "permissiveness in a growth area. After a stint in Tyler, Cawthon was appointed major. In the 60 - county area, the commander is over the highway patrol's traffic - law enforcement, driver's - license division, motor - vehicle inspection, licensing and weights and communications.

What are the big problems facing the

"We're so thin. We have a trooper for every 132 miles of highway. With our great, open spaces, you have to have voluntary compliance (with the 55 mph speed limit)," Cawthon said. 'We're concentrating on DWI and speeding," he said.

The major said Texans will see the benefits of the newly - enacted, stricter penalties for drunken driving, the same way they have seen the benefits of a 55 mph speed limit.

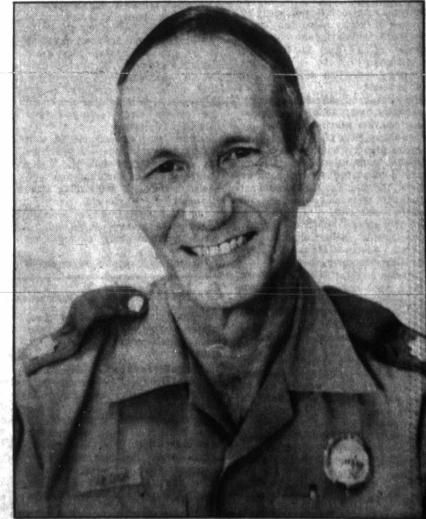

"When they see it works - that their family won't get wiped out by a drunken driver - it will prove it's good," the major said.

'Drunk drivers are involved in over 50 percent of our fatal accidents. We had 4,000 last year," he said Cawthon received his education at Pan American University and Southmost College at Brownsville. The Cawthons now have two grandkids by way of Jan.

The new major likes to play a little golf and to fish in his spare time. Cawthon attributes his success and move up the ranks of law enforcement. He also said he believes fellow Christians make the best officers. "I believe in the Lord. A good Christian officer will do his job and treat people right. That takes the worry out of it," he said.

Brandt gave a slide and chart presentation demonstrating the deteriorated and unsafe condition of the pumps, pumping stations, water lines and water storage tanks within the city of Canadian He also told what work had been done to date and how much remained to be done.

Brandt stated the city sewer system goes back to the 1920s, with additions in 1946 and '47," but has been brought up to (health) standards in the last

He said the lines in the system were under capacity when they were built and were not properly installed. The joints were not sealed, which has permitted exchange of water and sewage between the lines and surrounding ground through the years.

Asked by a resident of Canadian why were they just finding out about the problem. Brandt said, two previous studies of the water system were done. The first was done in 1959 at which time the city was told of inadiquate water lines, and a "peacemeal, pay as you go" program to build a 12 inch "loop was started, he said. It was

After Fuller testified, the state called Dr. Joan Hebler, a pediatrician and expert on child abuse and child development.

Hebler, a professor associated with the University of Texas, who teaches other doctors about child development, helped write the minimum state standards for day care centers. She testified about the state guidelines which were enacted to help protect the "health, safety and well being" of children in institutional care.

Hebler said some of the guidelines which protect children in licensed nurseries include those which prohibit hiring a person convicted of a violent crime or sexual abuse of a child; which require certain staff - to - child ratios; which require cleanliness and adequate facilities; which require the staff to know special medical needs of a child; which require immunization records to be kept; and which say a nursery cannot release a child to an unauthorized person, preventing kidnapping.

LEON, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government today celebrates the fourth anniversary of the revolution that brought it to power, braced for expanded attacks by U.S.-backed insurgents. Organizers say they expect 130,000 people to attend the main ceremonies in Leon, 55 miles northwest of Managua. Leon was the first city to come under Sandinista control in the revolution that ended 42 years of Somoza family rule on

On the eve of the celebration, President Reagan reiterated his opposition to the Nicaraguan government, denouncing its leaders as 'dictators.' He holds Nicaragua responsible for helping leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-supported government in El Salvador — a charge the Nicaraguans deny — and claims the Sandinistas have not lived up to the democratic promises of the revolution.

"This was a revolution that promised to bring freedom to the Nicaraguan Reagan said Monday in a speech in Hollywood, Fla., to the International Longshoremen's Association. "History will call it the revolution of broken promises.

'Nicaragua is today a nation abusing its own people and its neighbors, Reagan added. "The dictators of Nicaragua are actively trying to destroy the budding democracy in neighboring El Salvador."

There was no immediate reaction from the Nicaraguan government.

Congress has scheduled a closed-door session to discuss a bill that would cut off covert U.S. aid to Nicaraguan 'counterrevolutionaries' "contras," as the anti-government rebels are known in Nicaragua. Reagan has called the insurgents

An estimated 2,000 guerrillas, led by former Sandinista hero Eden Pastora, are fighting in the south. They too have threatened to step up their attacks to disrupt the anniversary celebrations.

Pastora, the charismatic Commander Zero of the 1979 revolution, broke with the Sandinistas over their crackdown on political freedom and ties to the Soviet Union and Cuba.

No contct made with Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) - The Vatican's No. 2 official received no calls today during an hour designated for talks with kidnappers of a 15-year-old girl after the church rejected their demand for the release of the pope's Turkish attacker. The Vatican had assigned Italian Cardinal Agostino Casaroli to answer a special telephone during a one-hour span. But deputy Vatican spokesman the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore told reporters. "I am authorized to inform you that during the scheduled hour, no message was received '

Vatican officials said the phone number remained operational after the one-hour period. However, it no longer would be answered by Casaroli but by an answering machine that automatically records conversations, Earlier, Pastore read a statement that said Pope John Paul II already had 'sincerely pardoned," Turk terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, that the Vatican has no power to free him because he was tried in an Italian court, and that Agea himself has declared he wants to remain in prison.

A Vatican official who spoke on condition he not be identified said the Holy See "sees no logic (in the kidnappers' demand) ... and is powerless to meet their demand."

The statement was issued shortly before the Vatican opened the direct telephone line to enable Casaroli to speak with the abductors of Emanuela Orlandi, daughter of a Vatican messenger. Vatican officials agreed to have ANSA said without citing its sources that officials had determined that four people are involved in the kidnapping.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Las Vegas entertainer Wayne Newton and Fort Worth nightclub owner Billy Bob Barnett have joined hands in a proposed western entertainment complex - a venture that could turn the Stockyards district into a major tourist attraction, a developer

The $45-million, 86-acre development, which would include museums, restaurants, bars, rodeo arenas, carnival rides and an international market, could draw as many as four million people a year, Fort Worth developer Bill Beuck said Monday. Newton, Beuck and Barnett, co-owner of the giant police Sgt. W.B. Wilson said Monday.

An Appaloosa mare was found dead in far south Dallas Friday and, in four other incidents dating back to March, seven other horses were killed and sexually mutilated with garden tool handles or pipes.

"To be quite honest, we're really stumped on it," Wilson said. "We've gotten some information on it and we still have a few leads to check out."

Wilson said police have "no indication" a cult is involved. but have not ruled out that possibility.

- The seven previous killings occurred on brightly moonlit nights and the attacker's weapon was always left by the carcass. But, said Wilson, "If they used anything in their little sessions, there's nothing left to indicate it's a cult.

, Wilson said police had psychologists develop a profile of a person who would sexually mutilate horses.

'They 've given us an idea of what to look for. They indicated that these types of people — people who act cruelly to animals — are known as bed wetters or possible arson suspects. Those three traits often go together, "Wilson said.

"But we still don't have any suspects."

The eighth killing took place in a different area of southern Dallas County, and may not be related to the other cases, Wilson said. A veterinarian contacted by police raised the possibility that the horse died of cholera — a disease that can destroy intestines and damage an animal in a manner similar to the other mutilations.

Because the horse was seized and picked up by the sanitation department and already buried there is no way to verify if it was killed or it died by cholera. The owner of the horse believes foul play was involved. Officers at the sceen observed some wounds on the animal," Wilson said.

"But no known weapons were found at the scene. In all the previous cases, the M.O. (mode of operation) was that the reapons were left behind.

Wilson said police were including the death in the horse mutilation investigation.

Scientists claim breakthrough could end foreign dependence on rubber

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - A new process for extracting rubber from a wild American desert shrub could double production from the plant and free the United States from dependence on foreign rubber, say scientists in Texas

A team of researchers headed by Dr. Chauncey Benedict of Texas A&M University and Dr. Henry Yokoyama of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Pasadena, California reported their discovery Monday to the National Science Foundation,

The scientists said they have found a new chemical treatment for guayule (pronounced why-oo-lee), a shrub native to the desert of Southwest Texas and northern Mexico. In the 1900s, the shrubs provided 50 percent of America's rubber supply, but later it became cheaper to buy foreign-produced tropical rubber than to extract it from the

Ms. Burnett was convicted and sentenced to die in 1979 for the death of 3-year-old Jason Phillips of Woodward, Okla.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned her conviction this year, ruling the trial judge improperly allowed a tape-recording to be played for jurors. Prosecutors said the voices on the tape were those of Ms. Burnett and a hypnotist to whom her lawyers had sent her

Ms. Burnett is being tried now in the death of Martha Phillips, the mother of Jason Phillips.

Ms. Burnett's trial, presided over by State District Judge Larry Gist, was moved from Beaumont on a change of venue. Jury selection began Monday.

Weeks before her new trial was ordered, Ms. Burnett wrote a letter to prison authorities asking for her death sentence to be carried out

Ms. Burnett, formerly a Nederland housewife, and Joe Ovide Dugas were charged with kidnapping and killing Jason and his parents - who were visiting from Oklahoma - and the child's grandparents.

Rights record is not that bad

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, which has been critical of President Reagan almost since he took office. has given him a failing grade in nearly every area of civil

The commission has expressed its "disappointment" and "concern" at the administration's record in appointing women and minorities to top-level government posts, as well as in combatting discrimination in schools and colleges.

In our opinion, the allegations constitute not so much a valid indictment of the president as a kind of parting shot by three of the commission's most vocal critics whom he

While a comparison by-the-numbers in terms of governmental and judicial appointments may show Reagan apparently less vigorous in pursuit of 'affirmative action" than Jimmy Carter was, his record is nothing to apologize for:

When it comes to the highest policy-making levels of government, especially the Cabinet and the Supreme Court, women certainly have never been so prominent.

The commission, it seems to us, would better serve the public by monitoring the progress of civil rights throughout the nation, as it is supposed to do, than in chastening the administration for its alleged shortcomings.

Perhaps it will, when the president's three new appointees are confirmed by the Senate, as they should be easily. All three have impeccable credentials and long experience in the field of civil rights, and all three insist they have been guaranteed full independence by the

The only major difference between them and the three members they will replace and the three who will remain on the panel is their opposition to forced school busing and racial quotas.

This is a question of philosopy, not of dedication or lack of dedication to civil rights and equal opportunity.

The charge by the present commission that the Reagan administration is engaged in a "major policy reversal" that could 'jeopardize fundamental civil rights protections" simply does not hold water.

The sweet and sour of sanctions

By DON GRAFF

You know about the reciprocal expulsion of personnel by Nicaragua and the U.S.

At least you should if you've glanced at the front page during the past week or so. That was a headline - making exchange of diplomatic fire in which both governments may have shot off more than a few of their own toes. Just when better communication might be of some help in defusing an increasingly explosive situation, there are three fewer Americans in Nicaragua and 21 fewer Nicaraguas in this country to do any communication.

But let it rest for the moment. Today's subject is an earlier development in the confrontation with Nicaragua that you may have missed, since it is economic in nature and devoid of those elements of human drama that make for a flashy

What we're talking about is the abrogation by Washington back in May of Nicaragua's share of U.S. sugar imports.

By way of brief background, more than almost any other commodity the sugar market is depressed by a chronic glut. To keep prices stable and domestic producers in business. U.S. imports are parceled out under a federally administered quota system among foreign producers. Most of these are the Latin nations to our immediate south and for many of them, dependent for foreign exchange earnings upon agricultural markets, the sugar quotà plays a big role

Knowing this, administrations in Washington have been known to use this quotas for political ends, rewarding our friends and punishing troublemakers. In the most notable example of the latter, Cuba has been denied access to the U.S. market since 1960.

Now Nicaragua is getting similar treatment, with its quota to be redistributed among friendlier producers - Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras

What brings this up now is a report on economic sanctions as a foreign policy tool appearing in the current issue of TransAtlantic Perspectives, the publication of the German Marshall Fund of the U.S.

The report summarizes a forthcoming study of the subject by the Institute for International Economics, a research organization funded by a German Marshall grant, in which 81 instances of the application of economic sanctions by one or more countries against others between 1914 and 1982 are examined as to purpose and effectiveness

Examples include the well - known - the 1935 - 36 League of Nations attempt to punish Italy for the invasion of Ethiopia and the 1980 - 81 U.S. grain embargo to pressure the Soviets out of Afghanistan, both busts - and many that are not. But common threads run through all.

The major economic powers, understandably enough, make the greatest use of economic sanctions to further political goals, with the U.S. far and away in the lead. It has been the principal country imposing sanctions in 52 of the 81

Sanctions rarely are effective in achieving "high" policy goals, such as compelling an aggressor state to withdraw troops from occupied territory. They are more likely to have a desired result when narrowly defined and limited in purpose, such as the U.S. freezing of Iranian assets to free the embassy prisoners. Generally, such financial pressures prove more effective than trade sanctions

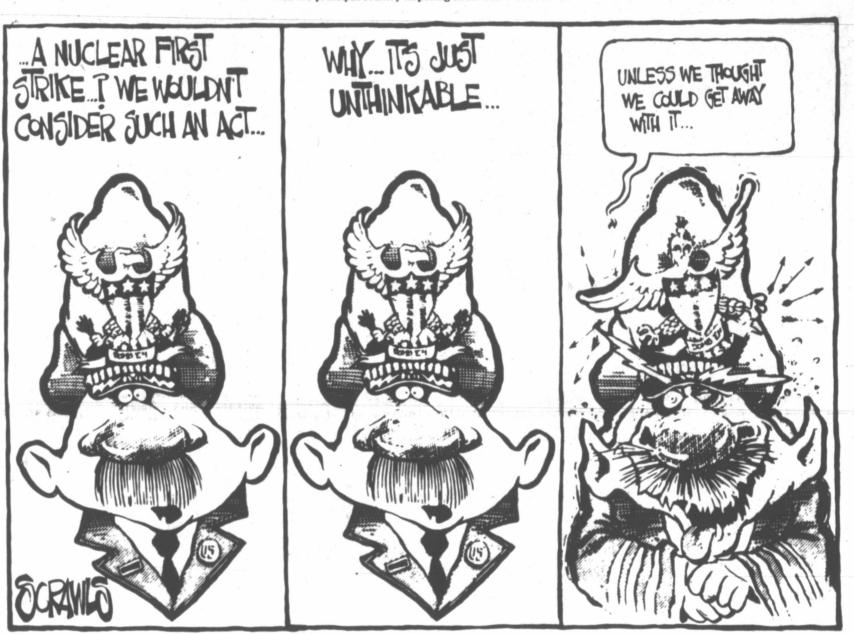

Finally, the most important single lesson from the application of sanctions during the last seven decades is that as a diplomatic weapon they are volatile. More often than not, they have the opposite effect of that intended strengthening resolve in a target country, rallying public strengthening resolve in a target country, support for its government and antagonizing allies of the sanctioning country and elements of its public that may have to bear the economic burden of sanctions.

Back to Nicaragua, the U.S. certainly has a right to decide from which producers it wants to buy sugar. Not buying from the Nicaraguans will certainly have an effet on their hard - pressed economy, although not a decisive one because sugar accounts for only 3 percent of export earnings.

But the issue is political, not economic, and the question iswhether sugar sanctions can make any constructive contribution toward resolving the dangerous impasse in Central America.

From the record, what do you think?

The tricks to upper management job hunting

By ART BUCHWALD

William F. Buckley, in a column the other day, quoted a middle management unemployed worker named Hank as saying "The easiest way to get a job is to have one." Hank said when he had a job, he was approached by rival corporations about joining their firms, and when he made several pitches at other companies, they never once demanded references. As soon as he lost his job however, everyone looked on Hank with suspicion, because Americans tend to believe if you're out of work, you're out of gas.

Mr. Buckley didn't have a solution for Hank's problem, but Hank should never admit to any prospective employer that he is unemployed. The way I would choreograph Hank's job - searching problem is as follows: The first thing I would do is have a pal drop the word that he heard Hank Smith is very unhappy at 'MPPI," (a fictitious company) and might be persuaded to go somewhere else, if the price was right. This would start the gossip mill rolling in the particular industry that Hank is trying to get into. Not only DKB, but LMP, ITT and Digital Research would hear about it.

Then I would have Hank write personal letters from his home address to the chief executive officers of at least 12 of the "Fortune 500" firms. The text would read, "Contrary to rumors all over town, I am not unhappy at MPPI, and have no intention of leaving the firm at this time, particularly when sales are climbing, and profits projected for 1984 will reach an all - time high. I would appreciate it if your search people refrain from calling me at the office, as it will only give credence to the rumor and have a negative effect on the price of MPPI's stock."

This should whet the appetites of the CEO's, who will go to extraordinary lengths to steal a management employee away from another company, but will refuse to nod at anyone who is out of work.

In a few days, if my scenario works, Hank will get a call at his home, probably late at night, from one of the vice presidents of a firm he wrote to.

Hank must whisper, "I can't talk to you from my home. I'll call you from a public booth. MPPI may have my phone Hank then waits ten minutes and calls the person back. The executive invites him to lunch. Hank says, "It's a waste of time, but let's meet where no

The executive suggests an inn 50 miles away, and the lunch

When they meet Hank lays down the ground rules. Under no condition is the DKB company to make contact with MPPI concerning Hank's position there. If it leaks out that DKB is trying to recruit Hank, the DKB CEO personally must deny it The executive agrees to the conditions and the luncheon proceeds. Hank lets the DKB executive do all the talking. The executive makes a big pitch to Hank to come over to DKB from MPPI, pointing out the pension plan, the employee profit sharing advantages, and the freedom he would have to persue his management expertise

Hank plays the reluctant suitor? and says it's a big decision in his life and he has to talk it over with his family. The executive from DKB believes he has Hank on the hook and tells him he'll call him in the morning.

When he does, Hank's wife picks up the phone and says

Hank is out having breakfast with the LMP people Hank waits until late afternoon and then places the call to DKB. He says, "You sold me. I decided to come on board." "You won't regret it, Hank," the executive says joyously."Someday you're going to thank me for giving MPPI the

This sounds like a complicated plan. But if the unemployed executive follows it to the letter, it should work. At least it means a lot of free lunches until you can land a job. means a lot of free lunches until you can land a job

Lebanese president, Jordanian monarch hold a surprise meeting

By The Associated Press Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, en route to Washington to seek more money, peacekeeping troops and guns for his country, talked privately with Jordan's King Hussein in a surprise meeting in France.

No details of the meeting Monday night in Nice, reported by the French news service Agence France-Presse, were made available. But it came while Gemayel is seeking help to break the deadlock over withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon. The Christian Lebanese president, accompanied by Moslem Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, is expected to meet with French officials today before flying Wednesday to Washington, where he will talk with President Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and congressional leaders.

Lebanese news reports said Gemayel wants new U.S. loans and military aid beyond the $251 million package Reagan signed into law last month. He also reportedly wants Congress to help boost the multinational force atrolling the Beirut area to 10,000 men, up from its strength of 5,400 including 1,200 U.S. Marines.

Gemayel says he wants the additional soldiers partly to help enforce peace in the mountains just east of Beirut where violent feuds between Christian and Druse clans have persisted for months. The area is now under Israeli occupation, but the Israelis are expected to pull back to southern Lebanon soon to cut down on casualties resulting from guerrilla ambushes.

Recent Christian-Druse fighting has raised major questions about whether the Christian-dominated Lebanese army of 30,000 soldiers would be able to control the mountain areas once the Israelis leave.

The army, which was powerless to stop sectarian fighting during the 1975-76 civil war, has been unable to assert its authority outside Beirut since the multinational force was deployed there last

In advance of Gemayel's U.S. visit, the U.N. Security Council in New York voted Monday to keep another peacekeeping contingent of soldiers in southern Lebanon for three more months, until

The 13-0 vote, with the Soviet Union and Poland abstaining, came after an appeal by Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem.

Say government may delay end of martial law approved his time off and WARSAW, Poland (AP) -'A high-ranking Parliament official says Communist authorities might postpone ending martial law because they fear pro-Solidarity demonstrations during the outlawed union's third anniversary next month.

"They are afraid of everything," the official said. 'A large number of politicians is expecting the lifting of martial law soon, but we are not sure of that.'

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. reported the possible delay after the state-run news agency PAP said military leaders had agreed formally to end the 19-month-old state of emergency.

It was not clear if their decision meant martial law would end on Friday as widely anticipated because the day is Poland's national holiday

Have you had an experience with a UFO? Barbara Schutte wants to know about it

Associated Press Writer

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) - If your love life falls apart, there's Dear Abby. If you drink too much, you can go to Alcoholics Anonymous. But if you see strange, winking lights floating over your house or strange, winking lights floating over your nouse or furry green men sitting under your apple tree, where do you turn?

Barbara Schutte, 31, hopes you'll turn to her group, Abintra Inc., where you'll find someone to talk to who doesn't believe you've seen too many science fiction movies.

"Seeing a UFO can be very traumatic - it's something you don't know and don't understand, if she said in a recent interview. "If people realized how many others saw UFOs, then they wouldn't feel so singled out. That's why we're here — to show people they're not going nuts, they're not insane."

The name Abintra is derived from the Latin for "from within," referring to the group's aim of providing a friendly, trusting atmosphere in which people can make their UFO revelations.

Ms. Schutte, a nurse who formed the support and research group earlier this year, claims she has seen an unidentified flying object.

She said she was at a southeastern lowa farm on March 22, 1978, when she saw "three huge red globes" hovering above some power lines. 'About every 30 seconds, they faded in and out in a random light pattern. When the lights went out you could just make out the outline of a little square. Then they began to move off very slowly,"

Ms. Schutte said she called the local flight service to see if any special aircraft was being used to survey recent local flooding.

"The man at the flight service said no. He said, 'I suspect what you saw was three geese with red lights strapped on their backs,' and hung up. That really insulted me," she said.

Ms. Schutte said several other people apparently saw the same UFO, but when she tried to talk to them about it, they refused.

When confronted with the suggestion that UFOs do not exist, Ms. Schutte countered with statistics of reported sightings. And while she was never able to discover what she saw, her persistence eventually led her to become an investigator for the Center For UFO

Studies, a research group in Evanston, Ill. She said the biggest problem she encountered was people's unwillingness to talk for fear they would be branded Today, she said, people who have a UFO . experience can call Abintra and talk about their sighting either with her or her colleague, Robert Cweirtniak, a clinical psychologist.

'We get as much information as we can about what was seen and the person who reported it. Then we check star charts, military bases, airports, flight services, the weather service — we try to explain it every way we can," she said. "But if you've checked out everything and come up with nothing, then you have to leave it unidentified

MMDAs, as they are called in the business, were authorized by legislation passed last year to give traditional financial institutions a new competitive weapon against the upstart money funds (MMMFs). They are accounts paying "money market" interest rates set by the individual institutions

In their first half year of existence, they attracted more than $350 billion in deposits. Over the same period, money funds, which have been on the scene for about a decade, saw their assets fall from $232 billion to about $165 billion.

As Chase Econometrics' Bernard M. Markstein III pointed out, growth from zero to $200 billion - a task that took the money funds 10 years to accomplish - came for the MMDAs in just six weeks.

He's ready for marriage but not kid

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 49-year-old man, divorced for 10 years. I raised four children - my youngest is finally out of the nest

I am in love with a young lawyer who is divorced from her lawyer husband and has custody of their only child a 7-year-old boy. If it weren't for the boy, I would marry her in a minute, but I don't want to raise another child! I have told her that.

She says she will send the boy to summer camp, to his father's, to her mother's for weekends and holidays, then to boarding school so I wouldn't have to raise him, but I think the boy deserves better than to be sent away, pushed around and boarded out.

This woman and I are perfect for each other in every way, so why is it so difficult for me to move into her lovely home, let her send the boy away, and live happily

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Because having been a conscientious father, your conscience won't permit you to allow this woman to abandon her responsibilities as a mother in order to have you.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reply to "Wet Nightie," the woman whose husband "gets upset, drinks too much and wets the bed.'

I'm another man who had the same problem, but after I got help I found out the problem was not my "plumbing," but my drinking.

I thought that I could not be an alcoholic because I was not old enough and not on skid row. I was 27 and a successful attorney with a large firm. I also thought I didn't have a drinking problem because I never drank before 5 p.m., although at night I'd drink until I passed

In my case, not only was my drinking making me a bed wetter, it was hurting my marriage in ways I wasn't even

A friend got me to go to Alcoholics Anonymous. I've been sober for a year, and it's been the best year of my life. Incidentally, when I stopped drinking, the bed-wetting stopped immediately. "Wet Nightie" should introduce her

DEAR DRY: I received a flood of letters (no pun intended) from former bed wetters saying, "As soon as I dried up, so did my bed." Let's hear it for A.A. It's the greatest!

DEAR ABBY: I was fortunate to have had my hearing for 53 years, but I now have a profound hearing loss and am enlisting your aid to gain for us deaf persons more hours of captioned TV programs.

ABC is the only network of the big three to provide consistent captioning, and I am grateful for those programs that are now available. But the choices are pathetically limited and only a few hours a week of captioned programs are available to us.

We deaf persons are as hungry for knowledge, diversion and entertainment as the hearing public. If you print my letter, it might help.

PUNTA GORDA, FLA., READER

DEAR READER: One letter (yours or mine) won't help, but the squeaky wheel gets the grease, so if organized groups of the deaf and hearing-impaired were to launch an organized, vigorous letter-writing campaign, you might get some action. NBC and CBS, can you hear me?

DEAR ABBY: The letter about cousins - first, second, third, etc. - reminded me of a cartoon I saw years ago.

It pictured a woman showing her family album to a friend. She was saying, "That's Rodney's first cousin twice removed. Rodney threw him out of the house twice." TEMPLE DUNN, ARLINGTON, VA.

Andrew Young's fence-mending sways whites

EDITOR'S NOTE - When Andrew Young, who was ambassador to the United Nations in the Carter administration, ran for mayor of Atlanta, many in the city's white business leadership began circling the wagons. Today they're mostly in Young's camp, thanks to the mayor's expert fence-mending

BY DAVID PACE Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - He's dined with Arab sheiks, fasted to protest the woes of the jobless, donned a hard hat to help fix city potholes. He's been called the nation's only mayor with a foreign policy, a coalition builder, a man hard to fight with.

In 18 months as Atlanta's mayor. Andrew Young has compiled a record that pleased and surprised many who had opposed his election, especially among white business leaders.

While Young has emerged as a patient mediator in municipal disputes, he no more shuns controversy now than he did as ambassador to the United Nations during the Carter administration or as a civil rights activist and lieutenant to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

When Jimmy Carter chose Atlanta as the site for his presidential library, Young led the fight to win approval of a four-lane parkway to the proposed library, angering neighborhood groups who insisted he was breaking a campaign promise to fight such roadways.

When the city's ministers became upset at the Atlanta Track Club for scheduling the annual Peachtree Road Race on a Sunday, Young was there to mediate the dispute. When the local chapter of civil rights leader Jesse Jackson's Operation PUSH threatened to boycott the Atlanta Arts festival because of little minority participation. Young worked out an 11th hour agreement

"He's easy to communicate with and hard to fight with," says Dan Sweat, president of Central Atlanta Progress, a downtown development group. "And if you fight, because of his prestige and personality, you're going to lose if you don't watch out.

Young took over a city that had been troubled for nearly two years by a string of 29 murders of young blacks, most of them children

There were political problems as well.

Young's predecessor and Atlanta's first black mayor, Maynard Jackson, had alienated the white business community with his dedication to affirmative action in hiring and in awarding city contracts.

The 1981 mayoral election. in which Young got almost no financial support from the white business group, divided the city along racial lines. Young got less than 10 percent of the white vote. His ourselves and helped white opponent, state Rep. Sidney Marcus, got less than 10 percent of the black vote.

After the election, however, Young moved quickly to mend fences. And within months, white business leaders were singing his praises

"I'm hearing daily that the atmosphere in the city has turned around dramatically since Andy has been in." says Charlie Loudermilk, a self-made millionaire and Republican who was the only prominent white businessman to support Young in 1981.

Businessmen are optimistic again about our area, particularly the downtown area. We really got down on ourselves. particularly the last four or five years of Maynard's administration. The top business people were giving up, saying we have no input at

'But it's turned back around now to where it was 10 years ago, when people were saying Atlanta was the greatest place in the world to live and make a living."

Loudermilk led the post-election drive to pay off Young's campaign debts. Within weeks business leaders who had refused to support Young's election contributed $170,000.

'Frankly, it was not a hard sell," Loudermilk says. "The business community was a lover looking for a mate and Andy held his hand out and we all lunged toward it.

"Andrew realized that the future of the city was going to be dependent on private sector development and not government funds. The business community controls the vast majority of the city's wealth and the black community controls virtually all the political power, and we must meet in the middle Young says that the disagreements between the city's white businessmen and Jackson were more a matter of style than substance.

"The business community had the most profitable eight years of their existence under Maynard Jackson," he says. 'They didn't get along with him personally, but if I could do as well for them in business as he did. I'd be happy.

Young went a long way toward winning business support by leading the fight for the presidential parkway and later by pushing for a percent increase in the local sales tax, putting his prestige

Most black leaders denounced the sales tax as regressive, and Young found himself in an unusual position as a long-time advocate for

We worked that out with poor people," Young says.
"And we were convinced convince them that the trade-off they were getting was in their benefit.

"Poor people are profiting by our present sales tax in terms of hospital services available to them that we could not otherwise afford. A sales tax is regressive when poor people don't get their money's worth from

"But basically this is still a poor people's government and I cooperate with business not just in the interest of the profitability of business but because poor people are getting jobs.

His overall popularity among blacks apparently hasn't suffered.

"He has an immense reserve of good will in the black community and it would take a lot to strain that," says Tobe Johnson, chairman of the urban studies program at predominantly black Morehouse College.

City Council President Marvin Arrington agrees that Atlanta blacks remain solidly in Young's corner.

"I think the black community respects an individual who has principles and acts on them." Arrington says. "He has tried to look at the total community, not just the black community or the white community. I think he's more popular today in the black community than he was when he was elected."

Part of Young's success in maintaining his black political base has been his visible efforts to promote many of the same causes he had as a civil rights leader and a congressman.

He joined Jesse Jackson in a press conference to announce the PUSH boycott of Anheuser-Busch because of the company's record in minority employment; he joined activist Dick Gregory and Southern Christian Leadership Conference President Joseph Lowery in a three-day fast to protest the plight of the homeless and jobless; and he supported a city referendum on the nuclear freeze issue.

He signed an open letter criticizing Israel's invasion of Lebanon in 1982 and he has spoken out consistently in opposition to the Reagan administration's foreign

"I have been accused of, and I plead guilty to, being a mayor with a foreign policy. Young said in May. "But when you can't trust your administration's foreign policy, then the mayor must work on his own. One of the things we've been trying to do in Atlanta is establish an island of sanity.' Such comments and actions didn't sit well with many of Atlanta's conservative usinessmen, but most have en willing to indulge Young in his causes as long as he continues to listen and push for économic development. Most, but not all.

"He's a nice, friendly fellow except when he puts on his revolutionary hat and entertains those folks from Central America." Dillard Munford, the convenience store magnate who has been Young's most persistent critic.

"He's been a revolutionary all his life and still is but I don't think he should use the platform of the city of Atlanta to support his causes.

Munford has been particularly critical of Young's travels, both his international economic development excursions and his domestic political trips.

Since taking office, Young has traveled to Surinam. Algeria, Tunisia, Italy. Britain, Bermuda, Nigeria, Zimbabwe, the United Arab Emirates, and Saudia Arabia.

On such trips, Young uses his international contacts to develop his vision of Atlanta as an international city based not on "former colonial ties" but on "new bridges of brotherhood, new partnerships in development.

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)- The Dallas Cowboys know what they will do if unhappy cornerback Everson Walls retires instead of reporting to training camp Thursday: Nothing.

Walls threatened to retire in a conversation with a sports broadcaster Monday but the Cowboys' Tex Schramm, the club president, called it just a "big scare tactic. A mistake on

We have offered him a very lucrative contract, a long term one, and by not reporting he only hurts himself and his teammates." Schramm said. "We are only doing what is fair in relationship with what we pay the other players on the team.

Weinberg said later "I think he (Walls) wants to sleep on it (the retirment). It's just something he wants to think about. Schram said the average fan would have no sympathy for Walls, who is being offered $175,000 this year as part of a five-year, $1.25 million package. "Find me a fan who has sympathy for someone making seven figures." Schramm Club Executive Vice President Gil Brandt is in charge of renegotiating Walls' contract and said a possible retiring tactic might be an attempt to get out of paying a fine. Brandt added "I sure hope his agent can

"He (Schramm) knows better than to get involved," Brandt said. "Once he does it, destroys my credibility." 8 Brandt said he is willing to split the difference and give Walls a four-year contract.

"He can have a four-year contract but at less money than we are offering with a five-year contract," Brandt said.

Walls has led the National Footbal League in interceptions the last two seasons and

In another contract matter, safety Dextor Clinkscale has threatened not to report to camp Thursday. He has said he would prefer to wait until an arbitration ruling Aug. 1.

National Football League arbitrator Sam Kagel is determining the length of Clinkscale's contract which the Cowboys claim has one more season on it. Clinkscale says the contract has expired.

Astros jump on Carlton

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -The Houston Astros apparently forgot that they're supposed to swoon when Steve Carlton pitches.

Carlton owned a 31-11 lifetime record against the Astros before they jumped on him Monday night. Houston bashed Carlton, 9-11, for nine solid hits in 3 2-3 innings, and went on to collect 17 hits in an 8-2 triumph over Philadelphia, dampening the return of Paul Owens as the Phillies' manager.

"I can't remember getting nine hits off Carlton," said the Astros' Ray Knight, who went 3-for-5 to tie George Hendrick of the St. Louis Cardinals for the National League batting lead with a 342 average

Carlton did strike out five to go four ahead of Houston's Nolan Ryan in their continuing battle for the major league all-time strikeout lead. Carlton now has 3.587 career strikeouts. But the Astros are as hot as

South African poet is without a home but is continuing lengthy battle against deportation

By JAMES LITKE ociated Press Writer EVANSTON, III. (AP) -Dennis Brutus, a man of many countries, has no home. He's unwanted in South Africa, unsafe in Zimbabwe, unwelcome in the United

The South African poet-in-exile has requested asylum in the United States. but after 12 years in this country, that has been England is an incertain option, and he's not ager to go there Until February 1981, the Immigration and Naturalization Service allowed him to stay in the United States. Then it made an issue of his status as an "excludable" alien, ruling he should be told to leave because he intends to remain permanently

A status hearing will be held Monday before Immigration Judge Irving Schwartz in Chicago.

Brutus was expelled from South Africa in 1966 after bannings and imprisonment because the white minority government considers him a dangerous advocate of violent struggle against its policy of racial segregation known as apartheid

Born in Rhodesia - now Zimbabwe - of "colored" parents, he grew up and went to school in South Africa, where his mixed-race parentage made him a second-class citizen and his opposition cost him dearly.

After his banishment. Brutus became a non-person: His writings may not be published, his picture may not be shown, he cannot be quoted in the South African tenured professor of English and African literature at Northwestern University.

He is perhaps best known to Americans as the stalwart of a 20-year crusade that resulted in South Africa's suspension from the 1964 and 1968 Olympics at Tokyo and Mexico City, and expulsion from all games after 1970.

Supporters, including members of Congress and scholars, believe that success may explain why the United States wants to deport Brutus before the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles.

"We have little doubt Mr. Brutus' troubles stem from the Reagan administration and its stated policy of 'constructive engagement' with the government of South Africa," said his attorney.

There is plenty of talk that South Africa will try and lay 'We must never accede to the groundwork to return to the sham that the the Olympics by showing up government would promote as equality. Today, 80 percent of South Africans cannot vote. Their homes - such as they

The images of violence and rebirth that permeate Brutus' books of poetry such as 'Salutes and Censures" and The Sirens, Knuckles, Boots," spring from a consciousness stoked by memories of denial. As a young teacher, he was banned from publishing and later from entering schools because of organizing attempts.

Brutus was imprisoned several times for defying those bans, and beaten by his jailers. He endured more than five years of house arrest. After being shot during an, escape attempt, he was ordered to leave.

When he began teaching at a black college in the 1940s. Brutus hit on the idea that would help make South Africa an outcast in world sports. He befriended weightlifter Ron Eland, a black denied a spot on the national team.

Church members protest proposed power line

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of the Episcopal Church have blitzed the state utility commission with pleas and protests over a proposal to build the state's largest power line through a church camp in Grimes

Some 1,000 letter-writers have responded to a request from the Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Texas to oppose construction of the 400-kilovolt line through Camp Allen.

"Not only will the wilderness value of the property which we purchased and developed be substantially nullified, but the gigantic high-tension towers will pose a substantial safety hazard to many children who hike and play throughout the area in the summer and throughout the year," said the Rt. Rev. Maurice Benitez of Houston.

Benitez said the church has invested $10 million in the piney woods camp, which is used each year by more than 12,000 people. including up to 1,500 children in the summer.

"At the very least," Benitez said, "the developed portion of Camp Allen will be severed from the spectacular beauty of the back heavily wooded half of the property by the large and grotesque power line and

His "urgent note" to "My Dear Friends in Christ" was carried on the front page of the May issue of The Texas Churchman, and also was sent out as a letter to Episcopal clergy.

The $141.2 million electrical line, a joint project of Central Power & Light Co. and Houston Lighting & Power Co., would cross six counties, stretching from six miles north of Huntsville to the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

The proposed 153-mile electrical 'corridor' would encompass 341,645 acres. interview community leaders and others to see what they thought about the line slicing through their territory. A majority thought it would have no effect.

Routing the line through Camp Allen "was no oversight," said Eddie Kolodziej, project manager for the Central and South West Services Corp., a subsidiary of CP&L.

"We wanted to minimize the impact on populations, and Camp Allen did not appear to us to be area we should avoid. It seemed the optimum way to go," he said.

The camp, which is named for a late benefactor of the Episcopal church, covers 781 acres, and Benitez said the line would cut a 150-foot swath through the middle of the Utility Commission, which has set an Aug. 22 hearing on what letter-writer John Otis of Galveston described as an "atrocity proposed by Houston Looting and Plunder.

"The wiole thing has done much to make me sick to my stomach," wrote Otis.

Chuck Machen, CP&L director of public and employee communications, said the company has "spent a great deal of time, effort and money and extensive research" in routing the line, and it would be "inappropriate at this time" to change the proposed route.

He said the "kind folks" of the Episcopal church should voice their concerns at the August hearing, and if the PUC supports the church position "we will be happy to reroute

Margaret Mostyn, president of the Austin chapter of the Nurses Environment Health Watch, said exposure to high electromagnetic fields could present a 'subtle health threat'' to campers.

She said it has been documented there is a higher rate of stillbirths among livestock in pastures crossed by high-voltage lines, and children would be particularly "susceptible

Other letter-writers dwelled on the beauty of the area and what it means to escape the city for the "away-from-it-all" camp.

One quoted thu "Woodman, spare that tree" poem. Another suggested that PUC Chairman Al Erwin make a personal visit to 'Children need to have a place to play without the fear of wheels in motion." wrote Mrs. Howard Seals of Galena Park. "Leave us some peace and quiet. Let some little boy catch a frog or lizard and scare a little girl Richard Dorn of Spring, whose two

Weaver Apiaries Inc., ships queen bees throughout the nation and to 22 foreign countries, said the bees use magnetic fields in navigating, and the high-voltage line would confuse them and they would not be able to get back to their hives.
