Chautauqua plans call for even larger event

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Chautauqua, the festival of fun, food, entertainment and education that brightened Labor Day 1982 for Pampa and area residents will be back again this year, according to Judy Marcum, publicity chairman for the planning committee.

The committee is headed by Lee Cornelison, who also chaired the 1982 committee. This year's festival will be better planned, since planning has already begun, and it is expected to be an even bigger success than last year.

The name Chautauqua comes from a lake by the same name in upstate New York where traveling educational and enlightenment shows originated in the late 1800s. The first traveling shows were somewhat religious in orientation, and existed to teach people something, even if it was only a craft or a new way to do things.

The Chautauqua 1983 planning committee is looking for exhibitors, entertainers and volunteers to help with the festival, to be held in Central Park on Labor Day, September 5, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Featured in the fest will be arts and crafts exhibits and demonstrations, and exhibitors will be invited to sell their wares if they wish, but will be asked to donate a percentage of their profits to the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the sponsor for the second year in a row.

The profits from last year's fest went to buy trees for the park, and they're expected to be planted this spring. Anyone who wants to participate in the festival this year should call one of the following chairmen.

Artists-craftsmen: Jean Tierney, 669-7763.
Displays: Cile Taylor, 669-2034 or 665-5963.
Entertainment: Vickie Moose, 665-1027.
Stage Entertainment: Wanetta Hill, 669-7685.
Food: Faustina Curry, 665-8838.

Anyone who is unsure which chairman to call should call the one that seems most appropriate and be referred if necessary.

Door prizes will be awarded at the festival, which is how the Fine Arts Assn. will make most of its money. Admission to the festival will be free and all events are open to the public.

Marcum said the committee is looking for things that may be educational as well as fun for people, and especially for entertainment for children, an area the committee felt was lacking last year.

She said the committee would also like to include more of the surrounding area and outlying towns this year, so anyone from Perryton to McLean and Panhandle to Wheeler is welcome to come and exhibit their craft or attend the celebration.

Church groups are also welcome, she said. This year's fest will feature a puppet group from one Pampa church, and church drama and choral groups are welcome as well. In addition, the committee plans to run shuttle buses from area parking lots, and church buses might be donated for the day for this purpose, she said.

Chautauqua is a "family-oriented, self-improvement, self enrichment" program, Marcum said. Some of the crafts that might be exhibited include leather crafts, soap making, story telling, wood carving, animal related crafts such as skin sewing or weaving, and any kind of ethnic craft anyone chooses to exhibit.

Marcum said some "old fashioned" crafts might resurface for the fest, like soap making and real storytelling. She also suggested that anyone with a western-type craft that might have been used in the pioneer days in the Panhandle would also be especially interesting.

Craftsmen and anyone wanting to exhibit their wares or entertain Pampa area residents should call the appropriate chairman as soon as possible, as crafts and entertainment are booked on a first-come, first-served and space and time available basis.

Chautauqua 1982 featured dancing, singing, and various types of entertainment, with local industrial and manufacturing companies pitching in to exhibit some of their equipment.

Also part of Chautauqua 82 was some Panhandle and oilfield history, and down home music as well.

Kit and Kat, the mules, will be pulling this wagon around town with a very important passenger April 22. Drew Pearson of the Dallas Cowboys will be speaking at several Pampa schools Friday, April 22, before the basketball game between the Pampa Police Blue

Knights and the Dallas Cowboys Hoopsters. Tickets for the game are available at the police station, Utelus and Archies Aluminum for $6. There will be drawings for prizes during half time. The game will begin at 7:30 in the Clifton McNeely Field House. (Staff photo by Julia Clark)

His father left him a legacy of violence and murder to relive

By LISA LEVITT

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Gerald Gallego Sr., executed in a gas chamber in 1955, left a legacy of murder and violence to his young son. Now a jury has decided that Gerald Gallego Jr. did indeed follow in his father's footsteps.

Gallego Jr. was convicted Monday in the November 1980 "sex-slave" deaths of Craig Miller, 22, and Mary Beth Sowers, 21. He has been implicated by his wife in at least eight other slayings.

The Contra Costa Superior Court panel found Gallego, 36, guilty of two counts of kidnapping and two counts of murder, and also found him guilty of the "special circumstances" of multiple murder in commission of a kidnapping.

That means Gallego, who acted as his own lawyer in the 3 1/2-month trial, could die — as his father did almost 30 years ago — in the gas chamber.

Judge Norman Spellberg, who heard the case after it was moved from Sacramento because of pre-trial publicity, scheduled the penalty phase of the trial for May 2.

Gallego's father was executed in Mississippi at age 26. He was convicted of killing a town marshal and later fled his cell by throwing acid in his jailer's face. His escape triggered one of the biggest manhunts in Mississippi history.

His son, clad in a dark suit, light blue shirt and striped tie, showed little emotion as the clerk read the verdict.

He asked that the jury be polled, but jurors answered with such resolve when polled for the first count — Miller's kidnapping — that Gallego interrupted. "That's enough, judge."

Later, alone in the courtroom, Gallego leaned back in his chair and casually lit a cigarette. Then, surrounded by deputies, he shuffled out of the building with chains around his ankles, the cigarette dangling from his manacled hands.

Gallego and his sixth wife and admitted accomplice, Charlene Gallego, 26, were arrested Nov. 17, 1980, in Omaha, Neb., and charged with the Nov. 2, 1980, kidnap-murders of Miller and Ms. Sowers. The murder weapon never was recovered.

At the time he was arrested, Gallego was wanted on a warrant from Butte County for the rape of his 14-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Gallego pleaded guilty to two counts of murder and testified against her husband in exchange for a sentence of not more than 16 years, eight months. If tried and convicted, she might have faced the death penalty.

She has implicated Gallego, a sometime bartender and ex-convict, in at least eight other murders of young women in California, Nevada and Oregon.

On the stand, Mrs. Gallego described a "sex-slave" fantasy in which her husband envisioned "having a place, possibly in the woods, a cellar or basement-type place where (he) could keep women and use them at (his) disposal."

Mrs. Gallego testified that on the night of Nov. 1, 1980, her husband felt the urge to fulfill that fantasy, ordering her "to get me a girl."

She told the court that they abducted Miller and Ms. Sowers at gunpoint and drove them to an isolated spot where Miller was shot. Ms. Sowers was killed later, after Gallego had sexually assaulted her, Mrs. Gallego said.

No answer filed yet in Celanese lawsuit

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

No answer has been filed yet to a Pampa couple's lawsuit seeking $750,000 in damages from Celanese Chemical Company, resulting from an accident that occurred at the Celanese plant in August 1981.

Larry D. Miller and Lorraine Miller filed suit last week in 223rd District Court against Celanese, charging that a metal floor grate was improperly secured and unstable.

Miller and his partner Jim Cottrell, who own C & M Services, had contracted with Celanese to repair a compressor in the Auxillary Air Building on the Celanese property.

The suit alleges that on August 10, 1981, as Miller and Cottrell were working on the machine, they were using a hoist to move the compressor when it slipped from its position and pushed on a floor grate at an angle that caused the grate to tip and collapse.

Miller was standing on the grate at the time, and when it tipped, he fell into a pit about six or seven feet deep onto some pipes. As he fell, the compressor head, which had already been removed from the compressor, rolled against his right leg. The suit alleges that surgery was necessary to repair the knee and that Miller has developed traumatic arthritis in his right knee as a result.

The original petition in the suit charges that Celanese was negligent in: "failing to maintain the floor grating in a reasonably safe condition;" "permitting the floor grating to be set down on a structure approximately one inch wide without being attached to the surface upon which it was sitting;" "permitting the floor grating to be set down on a surface approximately one inch wide without any bracing underneath;" "failing to inspect floor grating and determine if it was safe for use;" and in failing to repair floor grating when (Celanese) knew or should have known of its dangerous condition."

Miller is suing Celanese for $250,000 to cover medical bills and suffering, and $500,000 for loss of future income and continued medical bills.

Celanese has at least 20 days to respond after being served with a citation in the case. Wayne B. Barfield of Amarillo, Miller's lawyer, said while he and his clients have had some communication with the Celanese Corporation, a settlement has not been discussed.

Marion John, manager of the Pampa Celanese plant said since the matter is being handled by the company's insurer and legal staff, he declined to comment on the case.

Weather

The area forecast calls for increasing cloudiness with a chance of showers or thunderstorms tonight and Wednesday. Low tonight will be near 40, and Wednesday's high will be near 60, with winds out of the west at 20 to 30 mph on Wednesday. Monday's afternoon high was 80, and the overnight low was 46.

Two missing Pampa girls are found out bicycling

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Morris Morgan, an employee of The Pampa News, was driving south on Price Road Monday night when he saw two young girls riding their bicycles beside the road. Immediately after passing them he heard a report on the radio about two missing girls.

When asked how he found the girls, he said, "Oh? Was it them? I didn't know."

"I thought it might be, so I went to a phone and called the police," he said this morning. Morgan said he was about halfway between the airport and the cemetery when he saw the girls, whose names could not be released by the police because they are juveniles.

The two girls, nine and ten years old, were found more than two hours after they had been reported missing Monday evening. They were located by Pampa police officers near 23rd Street and Price Rd., more than three miles from their homes.

In addition to the four officers on duty, five off-duty officers, five detectives and many private citizens joined in the search for the two girls.

Job Hunter

Doyle Harvill is 30 years old and has experience in several fields, but can't find a job. He's been out of work for two months after losing his last job as an oilfield roughneck.

He learned some of his skills in the Navy, but cut his hitch short so he could get married. But now he's alone again, primarily, he says, because they couldn't make ends meet on her $2.50 an hour job.

Harvill has done mechanic work on everything from diesel trucks to cars, and has done some body work as well. He has some welding experience, and has worked doing plumbing, carpentry and electrical work as well.

In addition, he has done dishes in a restaurant, worked on a grain elevator and also worked as a ranch and farm hand, he said.

"I'd like to be better at anything I've done," he said, and he would like to learn more about electronics.

He has a Texas driver's license but no car at his disposal, and he said he wouldn't mind a 24-hour call job if he could get a company vehicle to get to and from work.

"I've driven and walked all over Pampa looking for work," he said. While he'd like to stay close to Pampa to be near his wife and child, he would relocate to take a job.

He has done yardwork but has no tools right now. He's been looking for odd jobs too, but hasn't found anything yet. He said he's beginning to get frustrated and just wants "something steady."

To interview Doyle Harvill, call 665-7976 or the Texas Employment Commission, Coronado Center, at 665-6938.

New storm slams into Rockies

By The Associated Press

As swollen rivers receded in the rain-ravaged South and Northeast, a new storm responsible for at least one death was brewing in the Rockies and Northern Plains today, spreading snow and cold across Colorado and Wyoming.

Disaster relief specialists headed for Louisiana today, where flooding killed at least five people and caused an estimated $625 million in damage during the past week.

Winter storm warnings were posted today in Wyoming, with heavy snow headed for the Rockies and the Black Hills of the Dakotas, said forecaster Hugh Crowther at the National Weather Service's severe storms office in Kansas City.

The new storm claimed one life Monday in Colorado where a man was struck by lightning in Grand Junction, authorities said.

The storm is expected to bring widely scattered showers from Louisiana through Tennessee and the Ohio Valley by Wednesday, Crowther said.

Gov. Dave Treen is seeking federal disaster declarations for 16 southeastern Louisiana parishes, which would enable residents to apply for low-cost loans to help them mop up their flooded homes.

But by today, almost all rivers but the Pearl were back within their banks, and the Pearl continued to fall slowly from its record crest of 21.5 feet early Sunday.

An estimated 40,000 people had fled their homes in Louisiana, with 11,500 people evacuated in Mississippi, and several hundred in neighboring Southern states. Damage was estimated at $425 million in Louisiana and $200 million in Mississippi.

In Ste. Genevieve, Mo., 50 families left their homes Monday as the cresting Mississippi River threatened the one road that connects the north and south halves of the riverfront town.

"It looks like we'll have water across Main Street for two weeks," said city clerk Richard Rose.

New Orleans got 14 inches of rain in a 24-hour period last Thursday, but when it stopped waters receded, Ms. Gianna said.

The New Orleans suburb of Slidell was dunked under 15 feet of water from the cresting Pearl River and 700 homes were damaged, but sandbag dikes kept many homes dry in the city of 65,000, authorities said.

One Slidell man kept his possessions higher and drier than most in a home built on 9-foot stilts.

"I was flooded out in 1979 and again in 1980," Bobby Berryhill said Monday. "After the second one, I went to a builder and said I want me a house on top of pilings 9 feet tall."

flooding, but a photograph showed the lofty residence three feet above the surging waters.

In Maryland, heavy rains submerged about 30 roads in the western part of the state. The Monocacy River remained six feet above flood level today, but officials said the Potomac River, which runs through Washington D.C., was well below flood stage.

The nearly 4 inches of rain that fell Sunday in Connecticut caused only minor damage, authorities said. About 80 families who were chased from their homes by rising water in Essex, Wallingford and Westbrook were allowed to return Monday.

Pouring money in a pothole...

HENDERSON, Minn. (AP) — Public-spirited residents of Henderson have a new outlet for their largesse — they can pour their money down a pothole.

For $10, the south-central Minnesota town will fill a pothole in your name and give you a certificate of appreciation.

For $20, the city will fill the pothole, give you a certificate and a color photo of the pothole.

Soviet wheat in trouble again

WASHINGTON (AP) - Crop watchers in the Agriculture Department say the Soviet Union had severe winterkill in some major winter wheat areas despite "one of the mildest winters on record."

"As a result of the dry fall's effect on germination and plant development, significant areas of winter grains will require re-sowing in the southern and eastern Ukraine and the North Caucasus, where winterkill probably was higher than normal," the department's world outlook board said Monday.

Even so, "it appears that winterkill was about normal" this season from the standpoint of all winter grains, the report said.

The monthly outlook report said that total world grain production in the 1982-83 season is expected to total a record of nearly 1.67 billion metric tons, up slightly from the March forecast and 2 percent more than harvested in 1981-82, the previous high.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Global wheat output was forecast at 473 million metric tons, up marginally from last month's estimate and nearly 6 percent above the 1981-82 crop.

World production of coarse grains, which include corn, oats, barley and sorghum, was indicated at 784 million tons, about the same as in March and 2 percent more than last year.

Rice production, estimated at 409 million tons, was up slightly from last month's forecast but is 1 percent below the record 1981-82 harvest. World soybean production is estimated at 95.2 million tons, up 400,000 tons from last month and 10 percent above 1981-82. Cotton output, at 67.6 million bales, was unchanged from a month ago but was down 5 percent from last year.

The report said that the United States produced 339 million metric tons of the world total of nearly 1.67 billion tons in the 1982-83 year - one-fifth of the global harvest.

In oilseed production - which includes other oil crops as well as soybeans - U.S. output at 70.8 million metric tons represented about four-fifths of the world harvest of 180 million.

The USDA's Crop Reporting Board, meanwhile, said in another report issued Monday that American farmers were hampered in their fieldwork by poor weather last month.

"Rain and snow at midmonth replenished soil moisture but slowed topdressing of wheat, land preparation and seeding of small grains from the central plains through the Corn Belt," the report said. "Freezing temperatures late in the month dipped southward, threatening early blooming fruit trees from Virginia to northern Texas."

But winter wheat was rated "good to excellent in Kansas and fair to mostly good in all other major producing states" as of April 1.

"By the end of March, the crop was greening as far north as Montana, jointing in southern states, and heading on early-planted stands in the Southwest," the report said. "Growers reported only light wind damage and winterkill."

'Dear Yuri, why do you want to conquer the world,' Samantha

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) - A fifth-grader whose letter to Yuri Andropov was quoted in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda hopes that means she will get a reply from the Soviet leader himself.

"I just wanted to know what Andropov was like," Samantha Smith, 10, said Monday. "If you get a letter back from someone, you get to know what he's like."

Pravda recently published excerpts of several letters it said were written by American citizens. Samantha's letter asked, "Why do you want to conquer the whole world, or at least our country?"

Pravda said, "We think we can pardon Samantha her misadings, because the girl is only 10 years old." Samantha's letter offered congratulations to Andropov "on your new job" and asked him if "you're going to vote to have a war or not?"

Jeanne Roper is named to commission

Jeanne Roper of Wheeler was recently appointed to a three-year term on the Criminal Justice Advisory Board of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission by the board.

Roper is the chief juvenile probation officer and assistant chief adult probation officer for the 31st District.

The primary purpose of the advisory board is to set priorities for the year from grant applications submitted by Panhandle area criminal justice agencies. The applications include funding requests for law enforcement projects, corrections projects, court projects and juvenile projects.

After the applications have been put in order of priority on the regional level, they are submitted to the State of Texas for final funding decisions. Those projects which ranked high on the regional level generally receive favorable consideration from the state. Approximately $300,000 is available for fiscal year 1984 projects in the Panhandle.

Serving with Roper on the board are: Calvin Babitzke, County Sheriff, Lipscomb Co.; Aram Berard, Clergyman, Amarillo; George Briant, County Judge, Dallam Co.; Susan Coleman, Attorney, Amarillo; Walter Eubanks, Regional Law Enforcement Academy Director, Amarillo; Sim Goodall, Attorney, Memphis; Harold Mann, Chief Juvenile Probation Officer, Potter Co.; Kenneth Maxwell, County Sheriff, Collingworth Co.; Lloyd McWhirter, Counselor, Swisher Co.; Jerry Neal, Chief of Police, Amarillo; Arvie Reeves, County Sheriff, Oldham Co.; J. J. Ryzman, Chief of Police, Pampa; Roland Saul, Criminal District Attorney, Deaf Smith Co.; Gene Schneider, Retired County Judge, Hutchinson Co.; Jerry Shackelford, 320th Judicial District Judge, Amarillo; Richard Snow, 69th District Chief Probation Officer, Dumas; Harold Wheeler, Chief Adult Probation Officer, Deaf Smith Co.; Carla Woodington, 84th Judicial District Court Administrator, Spearman; and Jess McMullen, Chief of Police, Canyon.

In a telephone interview, Samantha said she didn't remember when she wrote the letter, but recalled that she got the idea from a class assignment that her father, Arthur Smith, had given to his English class at the University of Maine in Augusta.

"He had his class write a letter to a famous person, so I thought I might do one too," said Samantha, a student at Manchester Elementary School.

This wasn't the first time that Samantha has written to somebody famous. Several years ago, she sent a letter to Queen Elizabeth, and got a response from one of her ladies-in-waiting. If Samantha decides to write to any other famous people, it would be either Princess Diana or Prince Charles, she said.

"She has always been a good writer," said her father. "This is just proof that letter writing works and people do pay attention."

Congressmen not immune to our laws

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) - House lawyers are preparing a memo to tell congressmen the Constitution does not give them blanket protection from criminal arrests.

Stanley Brand, counsel to the chief clerk, said the memo was prompted by the mistaken belief of Montgomery County, Md. police last month that Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, had congressional immunity and could not be arrested on drunken driving charges.

Stokes' car was stopped during the early morning of March 25 when an officer suspected him of drunken driving. Police Cpl. Phillip Caswell said the eight-term congressman failed three roadside sobriety tests.

Stokes, chairman of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the ethics committee, told a news conference in Cleveland on Monday he had not been drinking. He said he passed the roadside tests and never was asked to take a Breathalyzer or urinalysis test.

School board workshop is tomorrow

Panhandle area school board members, school superintendents and school administrators will attend the annual school board workshop at West Texas State University Wednesday. Registration will begin at 1 p.m. at the WTSU Activities Center. The workshop fee will be $3.

The general session will begin at 1:30 in the Activities Center Ball Room, Sallie Strain, presiding. A legislative update will be given by Orby Holden of the Texas Association of School Boards at Austin.

Five workshop sessions will be offered beginning at 2:30 p.m. and will be repeated at 3:30 to allow participants to attend two different sessions.

The topics which will be covered are: 1) the roles and relationships of board members in the administration of schools, discussed by Holden; 2) board member orientation by Jerry Edwards of TASS; 3) problems in school finance by Dr. B. T. Stamps, superintendent of Amarillo Independent School District and Dwan Walker of AISD; 4) ideas for success with the community by Jess Butler of TASS; and 5) the legal aspects of dealing with parents, staff members and students by Chris Elizade, also of TASS.

Participants will receive certificates of attendance through the mail, said Dr. Fred Stoker, dean of the WTSU College of Education and conference coordinator. The annual school board workshop is sponsored by the WTSU College of Education, Region XVI Education Service Center of Amarillo and TASS.

Student discovered nude, bound

TULIA, Texas (AP) — A Texas Tech University student was in satisfactory condition today after a seven-hour ordeal in which she was strangled unconscious, stripped, bound, stuffed in a canvas bag and thrown in the trunk of a car for a 75-mile drive.

Another Tech student was arrested near his car here and taken for psychiatric tests Monday to an Amarillo hospital, authorities said. He had not yet been formally charged before a magistrate, although Swisher County District Attorney Ron Felty said aggravated kidnapping charges would be filed.

The woman had spurned the man's romantic advances, police said. She was not sexually assaulted, Felty said.

The woman, 21-year-old Beverly Reed, and the man knew each other because they worked in the same Christian youth group and attended the same Lubbock church, Felty said.

The families of the suspect and Ms. Reed live four blocks apart in Dallas, police said.

"He had attempted several times to date her," Felty said.

Ms. Reed was abducted from her home in Lubbock Sunday night. She told Tulsa police that the man came to her house about 8 p.m. and strangled her until she passed out, said Police Chief Tom Rolin.

She said she didn't remember anything else until she awoke Monday morning in a Amarillo hospital, police said.

Tulia is 75 miles north of Lubbock in the Texas Panhandle.

Ms. Reed had several bruises and abrasions on her body and was suffering from exposure, said Lubbock police spokesman Bill Morgan.

She was found stuffed in a blue canvas bag when the man's car, which was apparently abandoned when it struck a guard rail along Interstate Highway 27 in Tulsa, was towed away from the scene, Morgan said.

The man was found incoherent in some brush nearby the car, Morgan said.

Indians win promise attorney. general will review aid ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Indian leaders who called a controversial attorney general's opinion an "act of war" have won a promise the ruling will be reconsidered.

Indian leaders spent the day in the capital Monday meeting with state officials and legislators. The opinion that has angered them, issued last month by Attorney General Jim Mattox, said there is no legal basis for state aid to Indians.

"This is nothing less than an act of war upon Indians," said a statement signed by the tribal council of the Tigua Indians of El Paso. "We are ready to go to war in every forum and courtroom in this country to defend our people."

The Mattox opinion said Texas should not give special treatment to Indians just because they are Indians and cast doubts on a proposed $1 million in aid for the Indians over the next two years.

Don Miller, an Indian rights attorney representing the Alabama-Coushattas of East Texas and the Tiguas, said the opinion erred in considering Indians a racial group. He said Indians were a political entity.

"We need to encourage the attorney general's office to decide whether they honestly believe the state ought to turn its back on 160 years of history on some bogus equal protection argument," Miller said.

The agreement to review it, announced by Assistant Attorney General Valinda Hathcox, came after a meeting between Mattox and attorneys representing the Indians.

"We have co-existed peacefully with white people for lo these many years," said Chief Robert Fulton Battise, 74, of the Alabama-Coushattas, speaking through an interpreter in his tribal language.

"The attorney general's opinion raised questions regarding the very existence of our tribe," said the chief, who came to Austin with Indian leaders from both tribes for a series of meetings with state officials.

The controversy stems from the arrest of two Alabama-Coushatta Indians caught hunting without licenses in 1981. They argued they had sovereign hunting rights on their 4,315-acre Polk County reservation, and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department asked the attorney general for a ruling.

In the 10-page opinion that followed, however, Mattox ruled they were not entitled to any special treatment whatsoever — including hunting rights, land or state aid. He reasoned the state may not discriminate for or against any group on the basis of race or nationality.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said he will continue making aid payments to the Indians until the matter is resolved.

Rep. Jack Howell, R-El Paso, said he understood a move was afoot to turn the Indian reservations over to Parks and Wildlife and handle them like state parks, but the Indians scoffed at that idea.

"Our people are not animals, curiosities of nature or relics to be kept in glorified zoos or museums," said the Tigua tribal leaders.

The Mattox opinion also said "it is no longer constitutionally permissible" for the state to provide land for the Indians to live on. The acreage in question is owned by the state and held in trust for the Indians — meaning they can derive all benefits of ownership but they can never sell it.

Clayton, Lewis support ethics panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Speaker Bill Clayton and Speaker Gib Lewis, two men who know about having their ethics questioned, say the state needs a commission to answer questions about ethics.

Lewis, the current House speaker, and Clayton, his predecessor, testified Monday to the House State Affairs Committee, which is considering a package of bills that includes creation of a state ethics commission.

"Hopefully, you can report out something that will certainly be worthwhile to all of us who serve in public office," said Lewis, now under scrutiny after admitting he filed an incomplete financial disclosure form.

Clayton, who was acquitted of federal bribery charges, said an ethics panel "would be a great benefit in restoring public confidence in the elective system and state government."

Rep. Jim Turner, D-Crockett, offered one of three ethics commission proposals the committee is considering.

He said there's a "dwindling level of public confidence in elected officials." The East Texas legislator favors a nine-member commission, appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker. The commission would be allowed to issue opinions on questions of ethics.

Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, planned to send all the bills to subcommittee.

Lewis said he favored an ethics commission even before he ran into problems this year. "I think that it is certainly necessary. Of course, some of the incidents that have happened to me this year certainly, I think, solidified my thinking in this behalf," he testified.

Also Monday, Committee Vice Chairman Bill Ceverha said the state should look for ways to reduce the cost of campaigns rather than limiting contributions.

Ceverha, R-Richardson, said newspapers and radio and television stations could help by giving "free space" to candidates. He also suggested free mailing privileges for legislators.

Rep. Steve Wolens, whose bill would limit officials' personal use of campaign money, said political donations have been used to make mortgage payments, buy cars and pay college tuition. He called such expenditures a violation of the trust set up between donor and candidate.

"The field is wide open," said Wolens, D-Dallas. "It's time we put a fence around that very large field."

The bill was supported by John Hildreth, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, who also called for limits on campaign contributions.

He complained that a "handful of wealthy individuals" can determine election results in a system with no limits. Hildreth also said political action committees — PACs — are too powerful. PACs are a danger to the system because their efforts are "tied to a specialized legislative agenda."

But Ceverha said he sees "no danger whatsoever" in political action committees. PACs have made a "wonderful contribution to the system because they got people involved in politics," said Ceverha.

Ceverha said there are enough PACs to guarantee some of them will "be at odds on any particular issue." He said the best way to dilute the power of PACs is to reduce the cost of campaigning.

Bomb bill approved by house panel

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas House committee has approved a bill giving police additional power in dealing with people who plant phony bombs in public places — as well as real bombs.

The measure is needed because the law currently allows possession of parts of an explosive device, the panel was told Monday.

"No self-respecting bomber goes around with his bomb all together. That's the secret of longevity in the bombing business," Dallas police bomb squad head Ron McCracken told the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee on Monday.

Under Dallas Rep. Al Granoff's proposal, it would be against the law to have components of a bomb for use in a criminal endeavor.

McCracken said police now often have no recourse against hoaxers who place realistic-looking devices in public places, causing panic and evacuation.

"As long as there is not a verbal or written threat, we can't do anything to them," McCracken complained.

He said there have even been cases "where he asked for his device back." Police must turn it over, McCracken said.

Bill for unhappy car buyers clears panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas car buyers who find themselves with a "lemon" would get new power to force a settlement with manufacturers under a bill approved for debate by a Senate committee.

The "lemon law" proposal, by Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, was sent to the Senate floor for debate by a 7-1 vote Monday of the Senate Economic Development Committee.

"We are trying here to guarantee that the manufacturer performs the warranty he gives on a car," said Gene Fondren of the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, which is backing the bill.

The bill was opposed by spokesmen for General Motors Corp., Ford, Nissan, and the Motor Vehicle Manufacturer's Association.

"People will think they are getting a cureall and it won't be," said A.H. McMullen, a GM spokesman.

He said car manufacturers feel there is no need for the bill because present law allows complaints about new cars to be filed with the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission.

Fondren said that under Brown's bill the Motor Vehicle Commission would take a consumer's complaint, hold a public hearing if necessary and then, if necessary, order the dealer or manufacturer or both to either replace the vehicle or refund the purchase price.

The car purchaser could be charged for the number of miles he had driven the vehicle and would not have some of the fees refunded.

If a dealer or manufacturer refused to follow the commission's order they could be fined or their state license, issued by the commission, could be suspended.

Fondren said the definition of a "lemon" car would be that a consumer put the car in a dealer's shop for four times without being fixed or that the car was out of service for 30 days while the warranty was still in effect.

Should elections be subsidized?

An outfit calling itself Americans for Fair Elections, sporting the names of numerous politicians past and present on its letterhead (from Jimmy Carter to Scoop Jackson to Mark Hatfield to Edward Brooke to Charles Mathias to Elliott Richardson to leaders from the League of Women Voters, the AFL - CIO and the National Association of Manufacturers) has sent us an elaborate media kit imploring us to do an editorial urging you benighted taxpayers to use that handy - dandy little check - off box on the 1040 form to subsidize political campaigns. They've even included a sample editorial written by the group's chairman, Philip M. Stern, inviting us to pirate it with or without attribution.

We'll respectfully decline the invitation. A free American citizen should be free to donate money to the candidate or party of his or her choice. We have no objection to any person making such a decision and sending as much or as little of his or her own money to politicians as he or she desires.

When the government takes money by force (through the tax system) and uses it to subsidize the exertions of those who aspire to positions of greater eminence and power, however, that's another story. The element of choice, so important in the American tradition, is thereby nullified.

The group with the imposing letterhead is upset because taxpayer participation in the "check-off" scam has been "stuck" at 25 - 28 percent since 1976. They attribute it to massive public ignorance and the mistaken impression that checking the box will cost the taxpayer an extra dollar. We'd like to believe it's due to the majority of the public refusing to be gulled into public endorsement of the eternal campaign that the presidential sweepstakes has become.

Taxpayers may also be insightful enough to know that while putting a check in the "take a politician to an expense - account lunch" box may not cost them an extra dollar outright, it will mean a dollar that can't be allocated to other government functions. The claim that subsidizing politicians doesn't cost taxpayers any extra is at best disingenuous and at worst bordering on the fraudulent. The evidence is that a lot of taxpayers have seen through the scam and are saying, in effect, "not with my money, you don't."

Are we saying that politicians should have to go through what some advocates of public financing call the "degrading" spectacle of "groveling" for the money with which to finance their elaborate ego trips? You bet.

The check-off may hold the germ of an interesting idea, however. How about letting taxpayers "vote" right on the 1040, how they'd like to see the money extracted from them spent? There are 11 major appropriations bills in each session of Congress, covering the 11 major government departments. Why not let taxpayers designate what percentage of their own money they want spent on the major departments (with an extra category for paying off the national debt)? Military spending fans could designate all of it to the Pentagon, while advocates of more social welfare programs could make sure none of their money would be spent on nasty old missiles. Computer technology would make the process of establishing a rough budget, reflecting taxpayer priorities, a relatively simple task, leaving Congress to fill in the details.

Do you suppose our leaders are ready for that kind of democracy?

Mitterand wants them to take in-Seine summer

By ART BUCHWALD

"Is Paris Burning?" You bet your sweet croissant it is. President Francois Mitterand, in order to get his financial house in order, has just issued the most controversial edict since he took office. He has told the French if they want to leave the country on vacation they may only take the equivalent of $427 with them, and they can't use their credit cards outside of France's borders.

This is the equivalent of pulling an Iron Curtain down on French tourists who, contrary to myth, are far more passionate about their vacations than their love affairs.

I just received a letter from a Parisian friend. Cher Ami,

You have probably read by now that our crazy French President has made it impossible for us to leave the country for vacation.

Until his proclamation, our main concern was the placement of American missiles on the Continent. Now our only worry is how we can get out of France in the summertime.

Everyone knows the one thing that makes the Frenchman happy is to travel abroad to see how primitive other cultures are. Once we taste their food and drink their wine, we come home reinforced in our belief that France is still the only civilized nation in the world.

Besides, a trip outside the country is the only opportunity we have to get away from foreign tourists who make our lives so miserable by telling us how happy they are that the French franc is so weak and that Paris is once again the tourist bargain it used to be.

I am not saying the French are not to blame for this sad state of affairs. We all voted for Mitterand because we were bored with watching Giscard d'Estaing on television. Mitterand said he was going to do a lot of stupid things, such as nationalizing all the banks and the industries, which sounded like good fun at the time. But he never said anything about only letting us take the equivalent of $427 out of the country for our vacations.

Had he mentioned this just once in his campaign, he wouldn't have even won the votes of his own family.

When I told Giselle that we couldn't go to England for our holidays she was grief - stricken. Giselle hates the English and was looking forward to spending four weeks there, so she could show the children how miserably the British live, how awful the weather is, and how fortunate they are to be French.

My brother Gerard already had made his reservations for Portugal this summer, just to let the family see how bad European plumbing really can be.

Uncle Jacques was prepared to go to Switzerland, which he despises, but considers the perfect vacation spot because it is the dullest place in Europe. When he returns to the madness of Paris, he feels like a new man.

Now our entire family must cancel their plans and find a place in France for our holidays, which is impossible, because nobody expected the French to stay home this summer.

The reason I am writing to you at this time is that if you had any plans to come to Paris this year, please let me know. Do not bring any money with you. I will be happy to supply you with all the French francs you need at a very good rate.

If you spend enough money here I could come to the U.S. and you could repay me in dollars without that idiot Mitterand being any wiser.

I must be honest with you. America was not my first choice, particularly since Giselle is afraid the children will have a good time and spoil the vacation for all of us. But we will have to take this chance just so we can get out of the country for a few weeks.

If you weren't planning on coming here, I urge you to do so.

If Mitterand does not rescind his order by August 1, you could be a witness to the second French revolution.

Last week 10,000 people marched to the Ministry of Finance gates shouting, "Vacances, liberate," and do you know what Mitterand said when he heard the noise? He said, "Let them eat credit cards."

Demonstrators who march without thinking

By PAUL GREENBERG

They seemed everywhere over the weekend, especially in the news.

They came by bus and car, on horse and foot and stilts. The man on stilts was wearing a green derby and smoking a red pipe. Julie Christie was there. So were three Buddhist monks, people in wheelchairs, skinheads and punks, and somebody dressed in an Easter Bunny suit. They poured into the English countryside, maybe 80,000 strong. They linked arms and formed a fourteen - mile human chain linking three military bases.

And that was just in England. In Scotland, they descended on the Royal Navy's submarine base at Faslane, carrying daffodils and decorating its barbed wire fence with peace symbols.

In Germany, they came on bicycles and in baby carriages; some were in covered wagon. They waved peace banners, carried crosses, and ate Easter eggs. They wore khakis, jeans, and skeleton costumes. Some flung themselves, screaming, on the ground, mock victims of a nuclear holocaust. They released a balloon. They formed a human net over an army barracks.

In this country, they smeared blood on the Riverside Research Institute in New York City and chained themselves to mock - ups of nuclear missiles in front of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory outside of San Francisco.

Why? To protest the arms race. Or, well part of the arms race. The Western part. Said Gert Bastian, newly elected parliamentary representative of the Greens in West Germany, "We realize that protests like this will not cut off American bases but the object is to make people aware of the nuclear threat." At least from the West.

These demonstrations were triggered by the prospect of new Pershing and cruise missiles being deployed in Europe. Not by 315 Soviet SS - 20 missiles already deployed there. The SS - 20s are highly accurate, very mobile, easily concealable. Each carries three nuclear warheads that can be targeted independently. That means 945 of Western Europe's cities could be incinerated within 15 minutes of launch - every great center of population from Perth to Athens, Oslo to Lisbon, with annihilation to spare for suburbs, crossroads, and country stores.

The SS - 20s began moving into place in 1977, a period that was dubbed Detente in unconscious irony. But there were no stars, no clinical briefings on the effects of a nuclear explosion within 3.1 miles of Point Zero.

Now the demonstrations come. That means Europeans are demonstrating against the planned American Pershing and cruise missiles that would offset the actual Soviet SS - 20s already in place. And Americans are demonstrating against the planned MX missile, B - 1 bomber, and Trident submarines designed to deter the actual 1,400 Soviet intercontinental missiles already in place and targeted.

Oh, there have been some demonstrations before now. In June of 1982, hundreds of thousands of Americans jammed New York's Central Park in what may have been the biggest political demonstration in American history. The cry was from a nuclear freeze. The Soviets favor a freeze. That's understandable. It would freeze in those 315 Soviet SS - 20s, not counting the astounding 42,500 Soviet battle tanks that would be protected by nuclear cover. It would freeze out any effective means of overcoming such an advantage - the MX, Pershing II and cruise missiles, the B - 1 bomber, Trident submarines, and neutron bomb.

A week after that great demonstration in Central Park, American intelligence reported an intricate series of Soviet missile tests that duplicated the pattern necessary for a first strike against Western Europe and the U.S. To quote one impressed observer, John Barron: "In a span of seven hours, they fired land and sea - based missiles designed to kill American satellites, destroy U.S. retaliatory power, obliterate American cities, and wipe out Europe. The firings, over Soviet territory and waters, exactly duplicated wartime distances and trajectories, and produced shock among those monitoring them in Washington. Never before had there been such a realistic and comprehensive practice for starting nuclear war."

There were no demonstrations. No protests. No rock music. Only silence.

Of course no one would expect anything but an enforced silence in Moscow. When three tourists went to Red Square to unfurl a banner in Russian ("Bread, Life and Disarmament") they were hustled away before they could hand out a single pamphlet. Those who speak up for anything but Western disarmament in the Soviet Union get the same treatment as those who speak up for human rights. ("A co-founder of Moscow's only independent disarmament group is being administered depressant drugs against his will in the psychiatric hospital where he is being held, his wife said today." - Associated Press, August 6, 1982.)

Where are the demonstrations in the West? Like those not very spontaneous demonstrations in the Soviet Union, they seem to demand the disarmament mainly of democracies.

Curiouser and curiouser. Listen to Vadim Leonov. Before his expulsion from Holland, he was one of those Russian correspondents for Tass who seem to do most of their reporting to the KGB. He got expelled because, among other reasons, he was recorded as saying: "If Moscow decides that 50,000 demonstrators must take to the streets in the Netherlands, then they take to the streets. Do you know how you can get 50,000 demonstrators at a certain place within a week? A message through my channels is sufficient."

Doubtless Comrade Leonov was boasting. Maybe Moscow can call out only 10,000 or 20,000 true believers. Where do the others, the fellow demonstrators, materialize from? These are the literal descendants of the Popular Front, the chumps who rationalized every murder of Easter Europe. It was only necessary to whisper the right shibboleth in their ear (Freedom! Peace!) and off they would march.

Will they ever learn? Do they ever notice how much attention the Peace "Movement" (it's more like a bureaucracy) pays to Western armaments, and how little to Soviet power?

Has it ever occurred to these fellow demonstrators what would happen if they actually succeeded in disarming their countries? Midge Decker of the Committee for the Free World suggested one possibility: "A world in which the democracies have renounced the means to defend themselves against a mightily armed totalitarianism is a world in which there will be no freedom and no peace."

'Gandhi' scores high with Academy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Another 20 years? Without question I would do it again," said a clearly gratified Richard Attenborough as his two decades of struggle on the epic "Gandhi" paid off with eight Oscars, including best picture.

Attenborough, who produced and directed "Gandhi," said his wildest expectations were more than fulfilled Monday night at the 55th annual Academy Awards. The movie also earned him the best director award and, for Ben Kingsley, best actor honors.

Meryl Streep, who won the best actress award for her portrayal of the tortured Polish war refugee in "Sophie's Choice," said she thought she'd given her best performance ever in the role.

"I don't think I'll ever see one like that again," said Ms. Streep.

Six and a half months pregnant with her second child, Miss Streep admitted that attending the ceremony had entailed a certain amount of physical discomfort: "The baby was kicking all night long," she smiled ruefully.

It was Miss Streep's second Oscar — she won for supporting actress in 1979 in "Kramer vs. Kramer."

Louis Gossett Jr. became the first black actor since Sidney Poitier's best actor award for 1963's "Lilies of the Field" to garner an Oscar, winning best supporting honors for his steel-hard drill sergeant in "An Officer and a Gentleman."

Only one other black performer has ever won an Oscar — Hattie McDaniel for "Gone With the Wind" in 1939. Gossett previously won an Emmy as the slave Fiddler in the miniseries "Roots."

Noting that his Oscar-winning role was not written for a black man, Gossett offered some advice to other black actors: "Don't look at black parts — look at parts." He added that the part was not changed in any way after it was given to him.

Speaking to reporters backstage, Attenborough said of "Gandhi" that "no British film has ever won this many Oscars."

consolation prize as best supporting actress for her soap opera star role in "Tootsie."

"I feel real lucky to have worked with actors like Charles Durning, Dabney Coleman and Teri Garr and to have Sydney Pollack as my director and Dustin Hoffman as my leading lady," she said in "Tootsie."

It was the only win for "Tootsie," which had received 10 nominations — second only to the 11 nominations for "Gandhi."

"E.T." the top-grossing film of all time, could muster only four technical awards: best score, special visual effects, sound effects editing and sound.

"Gandhi" rounded out its big coup with an Oscar for John Briley's original screenplay, as well as for costume design, art direction, cinematography and editing.

It also was the second straight British film to take the best picture award. "Chariots of Fire" was an unexpected winner last year.

Said the self-effacing Kingsley: "This is an Oscar for a vision, for the awards were a tribute to the vision and courage of Attenborough, who could get no American company to finance the biography of the man whose spirit of non-violence helped free India from British rule and helped inspire the 1960s U.S. civil rights movement."

It was the only win for "Tootsie," in which Hoffman masqueraded as a soap opera actress. The film had received 10 nominations — second only to "Gandhi's" 11. There were virtually no surprises in the awards, with favorites winning in all major categories.

The award for best song of 1982 was given to Jack Nitzsche, Buffy Sainte-Marie and Will Jennings for "Up Where We Belong," from "An Officer and a Gentleman."

The nationally televised ceremony began with the award for best foreign language to the Spanish-made "Volver a Empezar (To Begin Again)."

The music scoring awards went to two veterans of the pop field: John Williams for his original score for "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" and Henry Mancini for his song score and adaptation (with Leslie Bricusse) for "Victor/Victoria." Williams and Mancini each had won three previous Oscars.

The furor created by the Justice Department over three Canadian documentaries reverberated at the ceremony. One of the films branded as propaganda, the anti-nuclear "If You Love This Planet," was named best documentary short.

Said one of its producers, Terri Nash, "For its tremendous efforts in promoting our film, I'd like to thank the U.S. Department of Justice."

Mickey Rooney received a thunderous ovation when he was brought on stage by Bob Hope to receive his honorary award for 50 years of versatility in films.

"You honor me with the highest tribute I can receive in the business," said Rooney after the audience had seen clips of his films ranging from the 1934 "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to the 1979 "Black Stallion."

Rooney spoke frankly of being the No. 1 movie star at 19 and when he was 40 — "Nobody wanted me. I couldn't get a job."

Arms control nomination deplored and defended as final vote nears

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private advocate of nuclear weapons reductions says Kenneth L. Adelman's nomination, coming up for a close vote in the Senate, has already brought hardship to the arms control agency he would head.

The Senate begins debate today and is scheduled to vote Thursday on President Reagan's nomination of Adelman, 36, deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, to head the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Both sides say the count is close, with a dozen or so senators, most of them Republican, undecided. William H. Kincaide, executive director of the Arms Control Association, told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on international security Monday that the arms control agency has been treated with "malign neglect" by the Reagan administration.

Kincaide said the agency's budget for research has been pared from $4 million in the Carter administration to $1.8 million and its staff had been reduced about 25 percent in recent years.

"Finally, the nomination to the directorship of an individual with very problematic professional qualifications or interest in arms control and with equally problematic access to either the secretary of state or the president has worked an additional and gratuitous hardship on the agency," Kincaide said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., a leading opponent of the nomination, told Senate colleagues in a letter that Adelman lacks "significant arms control experience" and should be replaced with a "credible nominee."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., an Adelman supporter, said in a similar letter, "We are convinced that he is an advocate of balanced arms reduction, and that his views in this regard are consistent with those of President Reagan."

Kincaide testified at a hearing on the administration's proposed budget for the agency, which totals $20 million, compared with $16.7 million in the current fiscal year and $17 million in the last one.

"It is not going too far to say that the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency would be an international joke, were it not that the situation is so tragic," he said.

"At a time when the limitations of purely military approaches to the problem of security are evident as never before, this institution is foundering beneath a burden of malign neglect."

Former high officials of the arms control agency seconded the testimony of Kincaide, a former naval intelligence officer and an author on arms control issues, whose organization is engaged in nonprofit research on weapons reductions.

Ex-arms control director Paul C. Warnke, who led Carter administration negotiations with the Soviet Union, said the agency lacks "the necessary personnel and financial support."

Dear Abby

Families of drug abusers get help from Nar-Anon

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: There is no greater problem today than drug abuse among all age groups. This devastating situation affects the family and friends of the drug abuser in countless ways.

My husband and I know, because our son returned from the service 12 years ago on drugs and has been involved with drugs ever since. For years we dealt with the problem our way, thinking we could surely resolve it. We almost destroyed ourselves and our family life by becoming totally obsessed with the problem and trying to correct it.

Then, two years ago, we discovered a support group called Nar-Anon, which uses methods similar to Al-Anon. We now realize that the responsibility to change rests with the addict, not with us. By attending weekly meetings, we have learned a new way to live our lives in a happier, more productive way.

Nar-Anon guards the anonymity of its members and does no advertising. Those who wish additional information may write to: Nar-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc., P.O. Box 2562, Palos Verdes Peninsula, Calif. 90274.

Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope. A NAR-ANON MEMBER

DEAR MEMBER: I appreciate your letting me know about Nar-Anon. The information is well worth passing on to my readers, especially the pamphlet containing the open letter adapted from "Guide for the Family," written by the Rev. Joseph L. Kellerman, and published by Al-Anon Family Groups:

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY FAMILY

"I am a drug-user. I need help. "Don't solve my problems for me. This only makes me lose respect for you.

"Don't lecture, moralize, scold, blame or argue, whether I'm loaded or sober. It may make you feel better, but it will make the situation worse.

"Don't accept my promises. The nature of my illness prevents me keeping them, even though I mean them at the time. Promises are only my way of postponing pain. And don't keep switching agreements; if an agreement is made, stick to it.

"Don't lose your temper with me. It will destroy you and any possibility of helping me.

"Don't allow your anxiety for me make you do what I should do for myself.

"Don't cover up or try to spare me the consequences of my using. It may reduce the crisis, but it will make my illness worse.

"Above all, don't run away from reality as I do. Drug dependence, my illness, gets worse as my using continues. Start now to learn, to understand, to plan for recovery. Find Nar-Anon, whose groups exist to help the families of drug-abusers.

"I need help — from a doctor, a psychologist, a counselor, from a recovered addict who found sobriety in Narcotics Anonymous and from God. I cannot help myself." — Your User

DEAR ABBY: My future husband snores. And I mean that man really snores up a storm! I've gone on vacations with him and have returned home more exhausted than I was before I left.

I finally told him that after we're married we will need separate bedrooms. He said, "No way — you will just have to get used to it."

Abby, I don't think I can. Do you have any information on snoring? Is it sometimes caused by a medical problem that can be corrected? Please don't throw this away. It's a serious problem. I really love him, but I know I won't be able to sleep with him.

LENA

DEAR LENA: Some cases of snoring are correctable with minor surgery. Your fiancé should be examined by an ear, nose and throat specialist to determine whether his snoring is correctable.

If you need some hard (and loud) evidence to support your complaint, tape his snoring and play it back to him.

Problems? Everybody has them. What are yours? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Plans are underway for Senior Banquet

"One Enchanted Evening" is to be the theme of the 43rd annual Senior Banquet Thursday, April 14, at the First Baptist Church here. Kay DeKalb Smith, Christian singer and comedienne, is scheduled guest speaker.

The banquet, beginning at 8 p.m. in the church's Fellowship Hall, is sponsored each year by the women of the First Baptist Church.

The keynote speaker is a winner of three beauty pageants, always winning "Miss Congeniality." She has made guest TV appearances with David Meece, Pat Boone, Norma Zimmer, Tom Netherton and Chuck Colson. In concert she was most proud of singing with the Billy Graham Crusades as a soloist.

Smith has been featured on the Disneyland Special Day, Gospel Fever and SALT 1. She has performed with the Billy Graham Crusades on television in Birmingham, Ala., and Baltimore, Md., the PTL Club and Porter's Place. She has also made television commercials. Her latest record album is entitled, "The Best Is Yet to Come."

The Baptist Women are inviting all who wish to come to an open house to view the decorations for the Senior Banquet on Thursday from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Local youth urged to enter keep state beautiful contest

Governor Mark White has declared April 17 - 23 as "Keep America Beautiful Week in Texas," in conjunction with the Beautify Texas Council having named April as Youth Activity Month.

Keep America Beautiful Week is observed nationally the third week in April. During this week, communities throughout the state and nation plan wide-ranging, clean-up events. Texas has consistently won honors in the program, including "Top State in the Nation" in 1975. Texas is one of three states named to the Keep America Beautiful Beautification Hall of Fame.

Youth groups are urged to initiate beautification projects in their local areas. These projects may be submitted as entries in the Youth Activity Awards program of the Beautify Texas Council. May 10 is the deadline for submitting these entries. Entry forms are available from the Beautify Texas Council, P.O. Box 2251, Austin, 78767.

The 16th annual meeting of the Beautify Texas Council is set for June 15-17 at the Holiday Inn - Civic Center in Lubbock. Youth award winners will be honored on Youth Day, June 16. Other awards will be presented to the winning cities in the Governor's Community Achievement Awards Program, to outstanding senior citizens and to cooperating organizations. An Ideas Fair is also planned.

Beautify Texas Council (BTC) is a private, non-profit, voluntary organization dedicated to making Texas "the cleanest, most beautiful state in the nation." Members of BTC include hundreds of volunteers from business, industry, youth, Chambers of Commerce and cooperating state agencies, as well as interested individuals who are involved in their local and state beautification projects.

Benny Childs of Freeport is the present BTC president. Mrs. J. B. McCray of Panhandle is Governor of District 4 of the BTC which encompasses 17 of the Texas Panhandle counties.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs Inc. has established the National Council on the Future of Women in the Workplace. Eleanor Holmes Norton, former head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, will chair the council.

PATRICK WAYNE

All-star cast to present light, romantic comedy

AMARILLO — Tonight is opening night at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre with Patrick Wayne, Mary McDonough and Johnny Crawford bringing the light-hearted, romantic comedy "Angel on My Shoulder" to the stage for a month's run.

Patrick Wayne, son of famous Academy Award winning actor, John Wayne, has won star-billing in his own right with his performances on television series and in such movies as "The Alamo," "Mister Roberts," "The Long Grey Line" and "The Searchers." He has recently starred in special productions of "The Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island." Last summer he won applause from area audiences with his performance in "The Tender Trap" at the Country Squire.

Mary McDonough played Erin, one of the Walton daughters for the entire run of the popular television series "The Waltons." She has also appeared in "Love Boat" episodes and in NBC specials.

Actor Johnny Crawford received an Emmy nomination for his work with Chuck Connors in the ABC series, "The Rifleman." His film credits include "El Dorado," "The Great Texas Dynamite Chase" and "The Resurrection of Bronco Billy."

"Angel on My Shoulder" will be on stage Tuesdays through Sundays with a special Senior Citizen matinee at 2 p.m. April 17.

Consumer Watch

Know repairman before he does a job

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

(AP) — In spring, a consumer's thoughts may turn to fixing up the house, but repairs can turn to ruin if you're not careful. Sarah Woodard of the Council of Better Business Bureaus Inc. said complaints about home remodeling are a "perennial problem...every year in the springtime."

Contractors seem to appear from nowhere, she said. They've just repaired your neighbor's house and they have materials left over. Or they've noticed a problem with your driveway that you didn't know about. Sign now and you'll get a bargain.

What you may get from high-pressure tactics, Ms. Woodard said, is trouble.

"If the deal is good, that deal will still be around the next day or the day after," she said.

Ms. Woodard said you don't have to automatically ignore someone who calls at your door unsolicited. But you should investigate a company's reputation before you sign anything or allow any work to be done.

Check local consumer authorities and the Better Business Bureau to find out how long the contractor has been in business. Ask if the firm has operated under other names — a possible clue to potential trouble. Will the company be around tomorrow if you have a problem? Have there been a lot of complaints and how have they been handled? Is the company involved in any legal actions?

A 1980 study released by the Consumer Federation of America concluded that "home improvement abuses are more in need of remedy than any other type of consumer fraud."

Make your own antique cradle, a family heirloom

By CHRIS & JANET BECKETT

Many of you have written to us asking if we had plans for a baby cradle. We decided to pull one of ours out of the attic and show it to you. Our youngest son is almost eight and has long since graduated from this cradle. We expect one day to pass this heirloom on to our grandchildren.

The cradle is placed at a convenient height so there's no stooping or bending to care for the baby. Also, it rocks smoothly regardless of whether it's placed on carpet or bare floor. The front side of the cradle can be hinged, so it drops down — no more reaching over the side rails to change a diaper.

The construction has been simplified so that anyone can build it. Chris built our cradle from solid walnut and birch, but yellow pine would be beautiful for an antique look.

The supporting sides which hold the cradle are 2-by-6s, 54 inches long. The two supporting beams underneath the cradle are also 2-by-6s, 44 inches long, and have been mortised. They hold the cradle snugly, but can be disassembled for storage.

The cradle is 38 inches long, and 18 inches wide, 28 inches high at peak. The sides of the cradle are made from birch plywood. The cradle suspension is provided for 1 1/2-inch wooden dowels or finials which you can buy at a lumberyard or make yourself.

To finish, fill all nail holes with a filler that can be stained. (Don't use a plastic filler.) We recommend yellow carpenter's glue since it sets up fast and is a better glue for woodworking. The lullaby saying on the side is optional, but we think it adds a cozy glow to the cradle.

You can build your own from our design shown here, or modify the cradle to fit your own purpose.

If you would like detailed step-by-step instructions for making this Antique Cradle (includes full-size iron-on transfer patterns for the lullaby design) send $3.25 and specify Project No. 532-2. Mail to Family Crafts, P.O. Box 51289, Department 79065, Tulsa, Okla. 74152

Astro-Graph
 by bernice bede osol

Of the many important things you set out to do this coming year, the achievement of one will dominate all the others. It will be a very ambitious objective.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 Someone with whom you're quite friendly who is always running out of things or coming up short might try to borrow from you again today. Be on guard. Order now. The NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic combinations, compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $1 for your Aries Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Be sure to give your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Once you decide upon a course of action today, stick to it and don't yield to self-doubts. If you're wishy-washy, the results will reflect it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 There's a possibility complications may develop today among friends with whom you mix socially. Try to avoid taking sides.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 If a misunderstanding arises today with a person you feel is a valuable contact, try to resolve it at once or the chill could last for days.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 In your eagerness to attain your objectives today, be careful you're not inconsiderate. Toes you tread upon may later trip you up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Get in touch with the parties concerned today if you are delinquent in any of your obligations. They'll work with you if they know you're trying.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 Today it may seem like everything you want to do is timed by conditions ever which you have little or no control. Keep cool. All will pass.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 Accept the fact that what you're working on is going to take real resolve to be accomplished successfully. You're up to the challenge.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 Be careful about volunteering impulsively today. There's a chance you'll be tapped for a chore others have been dodging.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 A member of your family may be subjected to some unkind remarks from an outsider today. Be sure to let this person know where your real loyalties lie.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
 Persons with biased opinions and limited views will rub you the wrong way today. Instead of letting them disturb you, take steps to avoid their company.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 A potentially profitable situation could develop today, but it might not be in accord with your ethics. Do what brings you honor, not gain.

Dodgers edge Astros

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dave Smith replaced Solano and got Steve Sax on a fly ball to shallow right field before Russell dropped his bunt down the third base line. Smith fielded it and threw home too late to get Thomas.

Julio Solano, 0-2, walked Thomas to open the 11th and fired a wild pitch to the next batter, Steve Yeager. Thomas sprinting to third. Solano then walked Yeager and loaded the bases by giving an intentional walk to Rick Monday, who batted for

Harvesters lose to Dumas

DUMAS—Abel Vasquez limited Pampa to three hits as Dumas posted a 6-2 District 1-4A baseball victory Monday afternoon. Pampa tallied both its runs in the final inning, including a round-tripper by Bryan Bowen. Dumas had four hits while committing three miscues. A double by Rene Gonzales was the only extra base hit for the Demons. Pampa was charged with two errors. Coyle Winborn was the losing pitcher. He was lifted in favor of Deven Cross in the third inning. Dumas, now 2-3 in district action, led 6-0 going into the fifth inning. Pampa drops to 5-8 overall and 2-2 in loop play. The Harvesters host Levelland at 4 p.m. today. In one other 1-4A game Monday, Canyon walloped Borger, 11-0, to run its district mark to 5-0. Canyon meets Lubbock Estacado, also 5-0, today to determine sole possession of first place.

Lady Harvesters qualify five for Class 4A regional track meet

Pampa qualified five tracksters for the regionals during Monday's District 1-4A girls' meet in Levelland.

Pampa's lone winner was Stacey Brown in the 100. She was clocked at 12.15 to edge Lubbock Estacado's Hargrove by a tenth of a second. Miss Brown had the fourth best time in the Panhandle this season.

Qualifying for the regionals with second-place finishes were Sandy Greenway, 800, 2:30.26; second, 400, 26.01; Whitney Kidwell, shot put, 36-11, and Kristi Hughes, high jump, 4-10. This is the straight trip to the regionals for Miss Hughes, who qualified in the high jump as a freshman last season. The top two finishers in each event advance to the regionals April 21-22 at Brownwood. Tina Greenway placed for Pampa with a third-place finish in the 400. Pampa's 400 and 800-relay teams placed third.

Lubbock Estacado run up 142 points to win the meet title while Pampa finished third with 83. The Pampa girls' track team enjoyed one of their best seasons in the past decade. Last season, Pampa placed fourth in the district meet and qualified two for the regionals.

TEAM TOTALS

1. Lubbock Estacado 142;
2. Lubbock Dunbar 113;
3. Pampa 83;
4. Borger 72;
5. Levelland 62;
6. Canyon 57½;
7. Dumas 26½;
8. Brownfield 2.

District 1-2A girls' track results

FOLLETT—Lanecce Lisenby of Miami won two events and led the Warriorettes' 1600-meter relay team to a first-place finish in the District 2-1A girls' track meet Monday.

Miss Lisenby won the high jump with a 4-8 leap and was clocked at 66.84 to win the 400. Joining Miss Lisenby on the winning relay team were Mary Ann Gill, Laura Gill and Cassandra Bailey, who were clocked at 4:28.69.

Miss Bailey also came in first in the 200 with a 26.29. Denise Gilbert of Wheeler won two events, the 1600 (6:16.59) and the 3200 (13:28.64).

The top two finishers qualify for the regional meet. Others qualifying for the regionals with second-place finishes were Karla Benge, Miami; shot; Cheryl Henderson, Wheeler, 3200 and 1600; Shawna Hampton, Wheeler, 800 and 200; Miami, Booker won the district championship with 130 points. Wheeler placed second with 89 points while Miami was third with 85.

Businesses die rapidly

Neighborly chat

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Businesses died last year at a rate unsurpassed since the 1930s and in almost every instance they were listed as victims of recession. It wasn't only so. Many died of mismanagement.

But certainly you cannot say that homebuilders could have bucked the economic obstacles presented them. Or can you?

Toll Brothers, the Philadelphia area's largest home construction company, built more homes last year than in any other year and claims it earned a return of 8 percent on sales.

Most homebuilders, said its president, Robert Toll, have no systems. They stay entrepreneurs rather than grow their enterprises into businesses. They exploit opportunities and fail when these shrink.

Most homebuilders last year sought to interest customers with the same sales tactics they used in good times, but failed to grasp the new factor: financing, Toll said, and he decided to study it.

Retailers also failed, and many of the largest ones had severe problems short of bankruptcy. Poor management certainly must bear some of the blame.

"Retailers lack long-range concern for changing economic and technological situations," says Stephen J. Recobs, director of Purdue University's Retail Institute. Recobs and colleague Richard A. Feinberg surveyed chief executives of 100 top-volume retail department stores throughout the country, asking them to list the specific issues facing their industry.

"Only 7 percent of the executives mentioned the economy, and 6 percent cited technology as significant long-range issues," he said. Said Feinberg: "Retail executives have, historically, been reactive and slow to adopt planning as an integral part of management."

Most analyses of economic conditions fix on a few bogeymen to account for what is happening, say Paul Lawrence and Davis Dyer. The list includes too much government, not enough government, worldwide recession, unfair competition from trading partners, greedy labor unions, obsolete industrial technology.

Davis and Lawrence, a professor at Harvard Business School, concede there is something to be said about such reasons, but they don't believe any of them reveal the complete truth.

In their new book "Renewing American Industry," they say many current economic problems follow an inability of companies to anticipate and adapt to changing conditions.

Lawrence and Dyer surveyed seven major American industries — automotive, steel, hospitals, housing, agriculture, coal and telecommunications — and conclude that success or failure lies in how an organization responds to fundamental changes in its environment.

Mistrial forces rescheduling of attempted murder-for-hire case

HOUSTON (AP) — The trial of a woman accused of trying to buy the killing of noted defense lawyer Percy Foreman has been rescheduled later this month after a state judge declared a mistrial in the case.

State District Judge Doug Shaver declared a mistrial Monday when he learned that prosecutors failed to make the "devastating" tape available to defense attorneys, violating his order that all such tapes be used as evidence be shared.

Shaver said after the mistrial that the recorded telephone conversation between a prosecution witness and defendant Susan Parrish makes it apparent the Houston woman was not talked into the scheme.

Defense attorneys had contended that the conversation indicated that arson investigator James Neal Witt forged the murder scheme and then forced Ms. Parrish to go along with it.

"Once you listen to that tape (you see) the defendant was placed in the position of possibly not being able to use that defense," Shaver said.

Ms. Parrish was accused of trying to hire Witt to help her rob and poison Foreman, a prominent attorney who has defended convicted hit man Charles Harelson and convicted assassin James Earl Ray.

She told Witt on another secretly made tape that Foreman "sold her out" while representing her in her 1978 divorce case against William Forney Sr., a Houston millionaire.

Shaver told jurors a technical problem had kept the tape from defense attorneys. He said it was a key conversation.

"It had been rather devastating evidence, as far as the defense was concerned," Shaver said.

Defense attorney Craig Washington conceded the tape, made a few days before Ms. Parrish's arrest April 30, 1982, was significant.

"My position certainly would not be the same if I had had access to the tapes," said Washington, a state senator who has split time between the legislative session and this trial.

After the trial, Shaver said that on the tape, Witt asks Ms. Parrish whether she would say anything to Foreman as she injected him with poison.

"So long, (expletive deleted)," Shaver quoted Ms. Parrish.

He also said she told Witt, "I'm really looking forward to this. I'm just doing the world the biggest favor."

Prosecutor Ted Wilson said investigators in the Special Crimes Bureau of the Harris County District Attorney's Office made copies of all the conversations they recorded between Witt and Ms. Parrish. He said one conversation did not transfer onto the copy for an unknown reason.

Officials said prosecutors were reviewing the tape in private when they realized it had not been turned over to the defense.

Judges routinely order prosecutors to share such evidence with defense attorneys. The arrangement allows defense lawyers to assess their clients' chances of acquittal and helps them weigh plea bargain offers.

Ms. Parrish, 40, was expected to testify that Witt hatched the plan to kill Foreman and that she was susceptible to persuasion. Defense attorneys have said that only a few days before her arrest, she had tried to commit suicide.

Lawyer plans Nelson shrine

HILLSBORO, Texas (AP) — A Central Texas lawyer says he plans to spend $20 million for a shrine, the Southwest Hall of Fame and Museum, that will honor country music singer Willie Nelson and attract visitors from miles around.

"There are only four great people I've known in my entire life... my mother, my wife, (Baylor University Chancellor) Abner McCall and Willie Nelson," said Frank McGregor, an attorney and former state representative from McLennan County.

"My definition of 'great' is biblical. Abner McCall and Willie Nelson are completely different in their lifestyles, but they're both kind and will do anything for a friend."

Nelson, who hails from nearby Abbott, began his career with performances at the Nite Owl Club in West, another Hill County town, and on KHBR radio in Hillsboro.

The shrine would be built at Interstate 35 and U.S. Highways 77 and 81, about 30 miles north of Waco. The hall of fame and museum would salute country music stars and honor others whose names have been etched in Texas and Southwest history.

Critical to the project's success is Nelson's vocal and visible support.

"We will depend on local support in proving to Willie Nelson that we love him, are proud of him and will go all-out for him," McGregor said. "It depends on whether the people in this area want to honor Willie Nelson. If not, Willie hasn't lost a thing."

"The reason for the location is Willie Nelson, make no mistake about it," he added. "And whether people will support it is directly based on Willie's interest."

Nelson's promoter, Tom Gresham of Austin, said Nelson read a newspaper account of the commissioners' actions on his behalf and McGregor's vision of the shrine. "He thought it was an interesting deal, but he probably doesn't know that much about the whole thing," Gresham said.

McGregor said he believes the singer, songwriter and actor will give the idea his public blessing because of his past displays of homeland ties.

For Abbott's 1973 high school homecoming, Nelson staged one of his first outdoor concerts. And in 1979, Nelson dropped by the high school for a surprise visit and posed for photographs with students.

"Remember to always be proud of who you are and where you're from," Nelson wrote in the school's yearbook, which was dedicated to him that year.

McGregor said he is prepared to donate up to 80 acres of land for the project, which would "be supported completely from charitable contributions."

McGregor's plans hit a roadblock last week when McLennan County commissioners were forced to rescind a vote naming a stretch of Texas Highway 2 after Nelson. They discovered a day after the vote that the weed-smothered road already was named for a deceased county commissioner.

The attorney said the road-naming snafu would not hamper his plans. But a larger obstacle — finding a prominent Texan to chair the board of directors — still has not been overcome.

McGregor, whose application for incorporation was granted a year ago, said a permanent board must be established before the non-profit corporation can gain tax-exempt status with the Internal Revenue Service.

He said several commitments have been received from board candidates, whom he declined to name, but the chairmanship still is up for grabs.

A prime candidate now is Roxanne Pride, whose husband, Charley Pride, cannot be a director because he probably will be inducted into the hall of fame.

McGregor said.

Mexican-born actress dies Monday at 78

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dolores Del Rio, the aristocratic Latin beauty whose 50-year career in movies was launched after a director saw her dancing at a party, is dead at age 78.

Miss Del Rio died Monday afternoon at her fashionable Newport Beach apartment of natural causes, deputy Orange County coroner's investigator Bernie Mazuca said.

The convent-reared daughter of a well-to-do Mexican family, Miss Del Rio began her career as a dancer in a 1925 silent film and went on to star in "Ramona," "The Loves of Carmen," "Evangeline," "Madame du Barry" and more recently "Cheyenne Autumn."

She was born Lolita Dolores Martinez Asunsolo Lopez Negrette. Her father was a banker and the family hacienda was in Durango, Mexico. In 1909, when she was only 4, her family was forced to flee Mexico because of terrorist raids by Pancho Villa's revolutionaries.

She went to the Convent of St. Joseph for her education and was presented to the king and queen of Spain in 1919 during a European trip.

In 1920 she married attorney Jamie Del Rio, 18 years her senior. Hollywood director Edwin Carewe later saw her dancing at a party and offered her a role in "Joanna" in 1925. It was a modest film debut, with much of her performance edited out.

Later films included "High Stepper" (1926), "What Price Glory?" (1927), "Bird of Paradise" (1932), "Flying Down to Rio" (1933), "Madame Du Barry" (1941), "Portrait of Maria" (1945) and "Once Upon A Time" (1967).

She was a star by the time she appeared in "Ramona" in 1928, but her marriage had broken up. She later married Cedric Gibbons, a founder of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences who is credited with designing the Oscar statue. The marriage lasted 10 years.

Miss Del Rio smoothly made the transition from silent movies to talkies, and her singing helped keep her a star.

The actress later became involved with Orson Welles. Together they made "Journey into Fear" in 1942, with Welles co-starring and directing. Shortly afterward they broke up, and Welles married actress Rita Hayworth.

Miss Del Rio played Elvis Presley's mother in "Flaming Star" in 1960, appeared several times in the television series "Marcus Welby M.D." and in 1978 starred in "Children of Sanchez."

She won four Ariles, Mexico's Academy Award, and a Quixote, the Spanish equivalent of an Oscar.

She married producer Lewis Riley in 1959, and they lived in Coyocan, an exclusive suburb of Mexico City, as well as at their beachside home in Newport Beach.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

REX HUMBARND AMANDA MCKERROW

Names in the news

CUYAHOGA FALLS, Ohio (AP) — Television evangelist Rex Humbard will be able to continue his broadcasts, at least temporarily, because of responses to an emergency appeal for donations, a spokesman says.

Jim Dailey, public relations director for the Rex Humbard Foundation, would not say Monday how much money was raised through Humbard's call for financial help. "We did eliminate a significant amount of our deficit, but this hasn't permanently solved the problem," he said.

Dailey refused to disclose the extent of the foundation's financial deficit, but he had said earlier that contributions were down by $1.2 million in January and February compared with 1982 figures.

at a Santa Ana nightclub just 10 miles from her home. The steak house canceled the show.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The husband of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands, Prince Claus, is reported doing so well after undergoing psychiatric treatment that he has left a Swiss clinic.

The German-born prince had been at the University of Basel clinic since last fall.

Claus, 56, returned to the Netherlands on Monday from an Easter holiday with his family in Italy, the government information service announced, and left immediately for West Germany where he will be staying with friends.

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mamie Van Doren hasn't lost her youthful figure, but time is making its mark and the sex goddess of the 1950s finds her name no longer attracts crowds — even in her own backyard.

Still, the 50-year-old Miss Van Doren says she has no regrets.

At the height of her career, she reportedly was making about $250,000 a year. Now she runs an antique shop, gives occasional seminars on "human sexuality," and lately has been working on a nightclub act. She left the movie business in 1967.

"An actress lasts a lot longer than a sex symbol," says Miss Van Doren, born Joan Lucille Olander in Rowena, S.D.

Her name didn't draw enough response to justify an appearance later this month

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ballerina Amanda McKerron has had to cancel an appearance at a benefit to raise funds for Temple Emanuel in suburban Randallstown.

The dancer, who gained world attention in 1981 when she won a gold medal in an international ballet competition in Moscow, injured a hip Saturday night while dancing in Detroit, a spokeswoman said.

Miss McKerron and Charles Maple, both members of the American Ballet Theatre, were scheduled to perform tonight at the Meyerhoff Symphony Hall. Instead, the ballerina was in New York seeing a doctor Monday, said Debbie Rosen McKerron, a spokeswoman for the synagogue and Miss McKerron's sister-in-law.

Restored hotel creating a rush of new interest

By DAVID ELLISON
The Houston Post

RUSK, Texas (AP) — The opening of the Thomas J. Rusk Hotel, a restored version of the structure built on the courthouse square in the 1920s, was the talk of the town.

The two-story hotel opened last month the weekend of the season's inaugural run of the celebrated Texas State Railroad, which draws tourists from around the state for a ride on antique trains powered by restored steam engines.

The hotel and the train shared about equal time in conversations throughout this East Texas community.

"Have you seen the hotel?" they asked at a barbecue the night before the train ride. The question repeatedly popped up the next day during and after the 25.5-mile train ride to Palestine.

All the interest in the hotel was generated by Richard and Diana Lowder, the new owners who will hold a grand opening April 22.

The Lowders bought the hotel about nine months ago and restored it to designs of the 1920s at a cost of about $500,000.

The hotel opened its doors March 18 to its first guests in five years.

The guests, most of them participating in the state railroad festivities, included Texas lawmakers and employees of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

"The best way to open a hotel is to rent all your rooms, which we were quite fortunate to do," Lowder said. "That doesn't happen all the time."

Lowder is no stranger to the hotel business. The past eight years, he worked as a general manager in regional offices of the Hilton Hotels Corp. in Houston, Midland and Salt Lake City, Utah. He has opened eight major hotels for various firms.

"I did have a lot of experience in larger hotels," he said. "But it was our desire in seeking our own adventure to develop a project that has a personality of our own. We tried to do that in our design and our interior furnishing."

The original interior design lacked creativity, Lowder said. So they added wallpaper indicative of the period, wood molding on the walls and doors and tile floors in the bathrooms.

To enhance that nostalgic look, brass beds and ceiling fans were installed in each of the 36 guest rooms and three suites.

For the outside, green awnings were placed above the entrances to the lobby and the private Sam Houston Club as well as over the windows on the second floor.

Bricks were added to the sidewalks in front of the hotel, harking back to the 1920s when brick streets and sidewalks were a familiar sight.

"People are reaching out for and touching the nostalgia of the smaller hotels," he said. "I envision that in each of the smaller communities in Texas there will be a movement in the restoration of the small hotels."

The Lowders visited Rusk upon learning that the hotel was for sale after sitting vacant for five years. It was in poor condition, and the walls had collected five layers of paint over the years.

"It's exactly what we wanted," they said. "I wish you could see the pictures. The before and after is really dramatic." Mrs. Lowder said.

"Everyone, they just couldn't believe we came up with something like this," Lowder said.

They credited civic and business leaders in the community for their support.

"Well, I think it's just great to do what they've done for the downtown area," said Chamber of Commerce President Charles Hassell. "They have spruced up the area and are bringing more people to town. We think it's a great asset to Rusk. The citizens are behind it 100 percent."

Bryan Robinson, 29, a maintenance mechanic, said "I'll tell you, Rusk hasn't seen this much traffic on the square in many years."

Everybody in cars and on foot was stopping and the traffic jams on the square were amazing, Mrs. Lowder said.

"They were walking sideways. It was really funny," she said.

There was pressure from meeting the deadline to open in conjunction with the opening of the railroad season and hosting the first group of guests.

16,000 survivors with 16,000 stories

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-eight years ago this week, a Jewish chaplain with the U.S. Third Army drove a jeep through the gates of Buchenwald, raised a megaphone and announced in Yiddish: "Yidden, ir zeit frei!" — "Jews, you are free!"

He saw a frightened, 8-year-old boy cowering behind a mound of corpses and lifted him into the air, laughing and crying.

On Monday night, in a sporting arena, the chaplain, Rabbi Herschel Shechter of New York City, and the boy, now Rabbi Israel Lau of Israel, liberator and liberated, shared their memory before 16,000 other Jews attending the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors.

Each survivor defied Adolf Hitler's intention to slaughter all the Jews of Europe, and each had his own survival story — accounts of horror, told with distaste and disbelief; stories of atrocity, filled with corpses.

President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, stood with the survivors. The president was warmly received — interrupted by applause 26 times in a 25-minute speech — and applauded most when he pledged American strength to Israel's survival.

"As a man whose heart is with you — and as president of a people you are now so much a part of — I promise you that the security of your safe havens, here and in Israel, will never be compromised," Reagan said, bringing his audience to its feet.

Like the two rabbis, Reagan had a survival story. It concerned two "righteous Gentiles," Alexander Rozlan and his wife, now of Clearwater, Fla., then of Poland, who hid three Jewish children for more than four years.

"Once when German soldiers searched their home," the president recounted, "the Rozlans kept serving wine and whiskey until the troops were so drunk they forgot what they were looking for."

"Later, Rozlan's son was in the hospital with scarlet fever. The boy hid half his medicine under his pillow so he could give it to the Jewish children his family was hiding, because they too had scarlet fever."

Benjamin Meed, now of Brooklyn, N.Y., then of Warsaw, Poland, told a chilling story about death. Meed is the organizer of the conference.

"Forty years ago, I had a brother," said Meed. "His name was Mordechai David. He was only 17 years old. One day I obtained papers in my name that were thought to guarantee my safe passage out of Poland.

"A day before my intended departure, my brother begged me for these papers, and I gave them to him. The papers led him to the infamous Hotel Polski in Warsaw, and eventually to the trains which took him and others together to the unknown.

"It was my name that was listed by the Germans for that transport. By chance I and not my brother could have been on that train."
