

Tomorrow's TV commercials may bring more skin to your screen

By NORMAN BLACK

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The TV commercial for toilet paper begins with a closeup of a peach, filmed in such a way that it resembles a person's buttocks. Then the camera backs off, showing the fruit and making a point about softness by using sandpaper.

Should the commercial wind up in your living room? Most broadcasters participating in a special clinic Tuesday agreed they probably would broadcast the ad. But the debate showed that broadcasters aren't always comfortable serving as arbitrators of taste in their communities — a role they are now assuming.

Tuesday's panel was sponsored by the Television Bureau of Advertising in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters. It marked the first time that a large group of broadcasters could discuss the demise of the NAB's Codes of Good Practice and the added responsibility they now face.

For decades, the NAB radio and TV codes were used as an internal industry tool for standardizing advertising guidelines. The codes set up rules for such things as how many commercials could be shown in a given hour, and how many products could be advertised in each commercial. The industry also had a code board, which screened commercials for acceptability.

But last year, following a defeat in federal court, the NAB signed a settlement with the Justice Department agreeing to dismantle the codes. The government called them anti-competitive, arguing they allowed broadcasters to artificially control the amount of air time available for commercials.

Now, every TV station or network is on its own in deciding whether to accept a particular ad.

The result, broadcasters agreed Tuesday, is a greater chance that commercials will vary from city to city. And some broadcasters believe that could mean more skin on the screen.

"We all know that sex sells," said Thomas E. Cookerly, president of Albritton Communications. "I think we're going to be bombarded with more sexy commercials in coming years. What the market will bear is a very valid way to approach it."

"With the penetration of pay cable TV, showing more bare breasts and bottoms, there may be more of an appetite for it," said William G. Moll, the broadcast president of Harte-Hanks Communications. "But I still think it's going to be some years."

"We are indeed an influence on and an arbiter or public taste in our communities," said David E. Henderson, president of Outlet Broadcasting Co. "And audiences in Washington or San Francisco may be more willing to view contemporary material than those someplace else."

"A commercial that's acceptable in Washington may not be in Roanoke, Va., 200 miles away where the Rev. Jerry Falwell (of Moral Majority) is based," Cookerly said.

Broadcasters also must remember that community attitudes can change, the panelists said.

Violence, drugs lead to beefed-up patrols at Amarillo concerts

By BRUCE LEE SMITH
Chief Photographer

AMARILLO — Pampa fans who make the trip to Amarillo for rock concerts at the civic center now face patrols of on-duty police who are making numerous arrests there for drug possession, drinking and complaints of violence.

At Monday's concert by the rock group Triumph, police arrested 15 people and expelled about 50 others from the show.

The arrests were made for possession of marijuana, public drunkenness and possession of an illegal weapon, police said. Dozens of others were expelled from the auditorium for "minor violations," a police spokesman said today.

After several Amarillo citizens complained to city officials last month that drugs and alcohol were being openly consumed at the rock shows, Amarillo police were assigned to bolster private security at the auditorium. Previously, concert promoters only hired private security guards for the rock concerts.

Citizens' complaints increased after a Borger youth was doused with gasoline and set afire during a concert last month by the rock groups Kiss and the Plasmatics. The victim received third degree burns to his legs.

The first assignment for the on-duty patrols was Monday's concert, and the arrests followed.

"Before, as a rule, there were no police officers assigned to the shows," said police Sergeant Mike Amos. "This is a new program that we will be using from now on due to problems in the past."

Amos said that there were 15 uniformed officers, two Department of Public Safety officers and an unspecified number of plainclothes officers working the concert. He added that concertgoers would be arrested or expelled for "any violation we see."

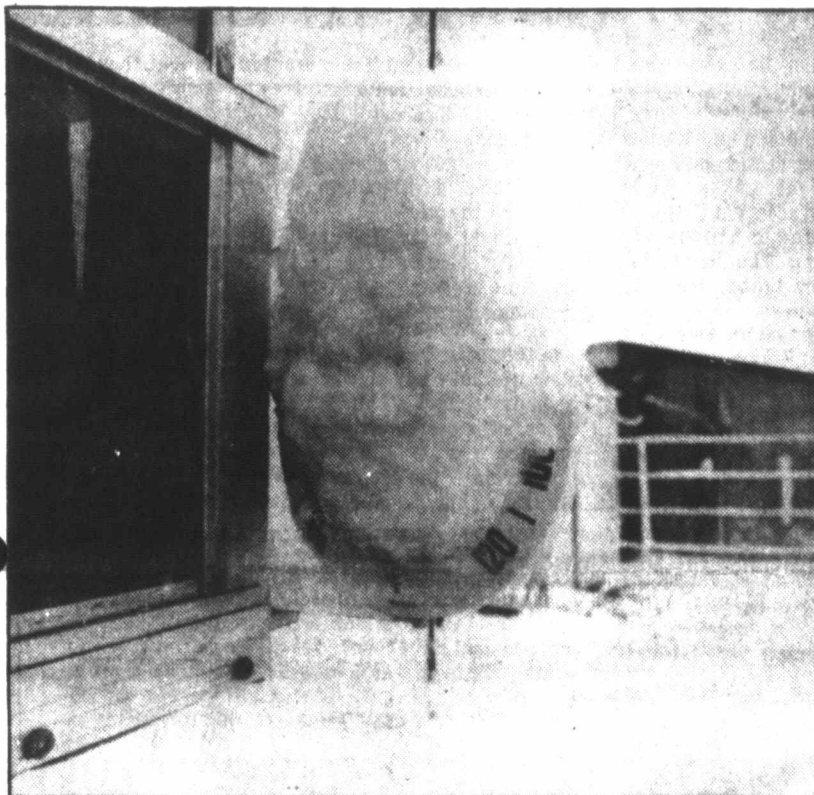

Don Thorn, head of operations for the civic center, said that in addition to the police officers, there were five uniformed security officers, 10 "t-shirt" security people at the front of the stage, and approximately 50 ushers at the concert. He went on to say that the stepped up security measures were for crowd control and safety.

"We just feel that in a lot of ways there is more respect for a uniformed police officer," said Thorn.

But a private security guard working Monday night's concert said trouble at the civic center has been exaggerated.

"I feel that a lot of this has been blown 'way out of proportion. Look around you, most of these kids are just here to have fun. We never have any trouble with 99 percent of them," he said.

Well, it sounded like one...

KNOXVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Residents who spent anxious moments looking for funnel clouds after what sounded like a tornado warning shrieked through the town were relieved to learn it was just a lot of hot air.

Citizens by the dozens called police, the local radio station and the hospital

Tuesday to inquire whether a tornado had been sighted.

Even though the answer was no, the siren wailed on for about 20 minutes.

It took an official at a 3M plant just outside the south-central Iowa city of 8,000 to provide an explanation. The apparent warning was only a steam valve doing what steam valves do best — letting off steam, he said.

City to hold public hearings on annexing new development

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Pampa City Commissioners voted to hold two public hearings on proposed annexation and zoning changes on two early mornings in May at their regular meeting Tuesday morning.

The annexation and rezoning will affect a section of land near the city dump in Pampa near the Pampa Country Club that is bordered by Harvester, Browning and Jupiter Streets. The developer, Walter "Buck" Worley, plans to make it a primarily residential development with one section zoned for single family, one section zoned multi-family and one section zoned commercial.

The first public hearing on the matter will be Tuesday May 10 at the regular city commission meeting at 9:30 a.m. The second public hearing will be Thursday May 12 at 8:30 a.m. on the proposed rezoning site.

Also at the meeting, Pampa Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn explained the city's emergency management plan to the commissioners. In case of a disaster or severe weather, Vaughn said, the city has a plan to save lives and property if possible.

In case of a tornado, whether a National Weather Service watch is issued or not, Vaughn said, spotters will be dispatched to their assigned posts outside the city and will watch and keep in touch with the nerve center located in City Hall at the Pampa Police Department.

He said the emergency management staff is manned completely by volunteers and therefore costs the city nothing to operate. A second part of the plan calls for the Pampa Fire Department and Pampa Medical Services to take their equipment out of the buildings they are normally stored in so that if the buildings get hit, the equipment will be safe.

When a tornado or funnel cloud is spotted, the volunteers will use citizens band, ham and police radios to confirm the sighting and track the storm if its area of danger is in or near the city.

Once a storm is sighted, Vaughn and his staff use several means to warn residents of the impending storm. One method is called "cable takeover," by which any resident who has cable television and has the television on will hear the message as the dispatches from city hall will be broadcast on the television after the city cuts-in on the program. A second method is through the local radio stations, and a third method involves the tornado sirens, which are designed to warn residents who are outdoors to take cover.

"This system worked very well last year when we desperately needed it," Vaughn said. He also said that during regular business hours, the departments of engineering and public works will combine with other city employees to make the system work, as each person who works for the city is trained in emergency procedures.

"Our city staff and volunteers are trained in a cooperative system to make this city a safer place to live," Vaughn said.

Vaughn also noted that he takes no part in command-type decisions during an emergency, but takes his orders from the mayor and city manager. His job is to coordinate the various types of trained employees and volunteers to make the emergency management system work.

Commissioners also voted to advertise for bids for construction work on the last phase of the Highway 70 reconstruction and widening project. City Manager Mack Wofford told the commission that the first major phase of the job, installing a storm drain the length of the road to be worked on had been completed, and now construction is needed on the intersections where Duncan and 23rd Streets meet the highway.

Wofford told the commission the city has purchased a portion of land on the corner of Duncan and the highway in order to make the angle of the intersection less acute.

Gene Barber, an engineer with the firm of Merriam and Barber, which is the consulting firm on the project, told the commission that traffic signals are also included in the work to be finished on the highway.

Wofford said the city is responsible for the construction of all redevelopments at the intersections. The state has funded some of the project as well. Of the $1.5 million in certificates of obligation budgeted for the project, there is about $500,000 left to be used if needed, Wofford said. The commission voted to open bids at 9:30 a.m. on May 24.

Commissioners also approved the issuance of three commendations to the former mayor H.R. "Ray" Thompson, Jr. and former commissioners O.M. "Mickey" Prigmore and Melvin L. Hammon for service to the city while in office. Thompson and Hammon chose not to run for reelection this past April, and Prigmore was not allowed to run for reelection because the city drew new ward lines last year and he was no longer in Ward 1.

Commissioners also approved raises for six city employees: Nadine Bennett, Charles Brewer, Floyd Burns, Ruben Silva, Terry Cox and Kelly Oxley. The commission also approved the terminations of Jamie Lowe and Margaret Randall, and okayed the hiring of Kelly Dow Davis and Donna Gwen Donahue.

They also paid bills in the amount of $208,529.48 for bills incurred between March 22 and April 12.

Whatley: Bond issue is needed to fix streets

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

Pampa Mayor Calvin T. Whatley warned city commissioners Tuesday morning that the city may need to pass a bond issue in the near future to repave and repair the city's streets.

But before any street work is budgeted or done, he said, the city should do something about the water lines that run under the streets.

In an announcement made before the regular city commission meeting, Whatley said the streets are in the poorest condition they have been in since the city paved them. He blamed the harsh winter and the curtailment of regular street maintenance for the problems now facing the city.

Whatley said street maintenance was curtailed because of the high cost of materials.

"For example, in 1966 seal coating cost nine cents a square yard. In 1981, because the material has a petroleum base, the cost was 76 cents a square yard," he said.

In order to seal coat 20 miles of Pampa streets, or the entire 100 miles every five years, it would cost the city $100,000 a year, he said.

"Last summer, due to the 'oil glut', we were able to seal coat 9.8 miles at 47 cents a yard instead of the 6 plus miles that had been budgeted. However, this was only about one-half of what we would like to have seal coated."

Whatley also said seal coating was curtailed because dips at intersections were getting too deep for comfortable and safe driving. To correct this problem, he said, requires more work and expense than just seal coating.

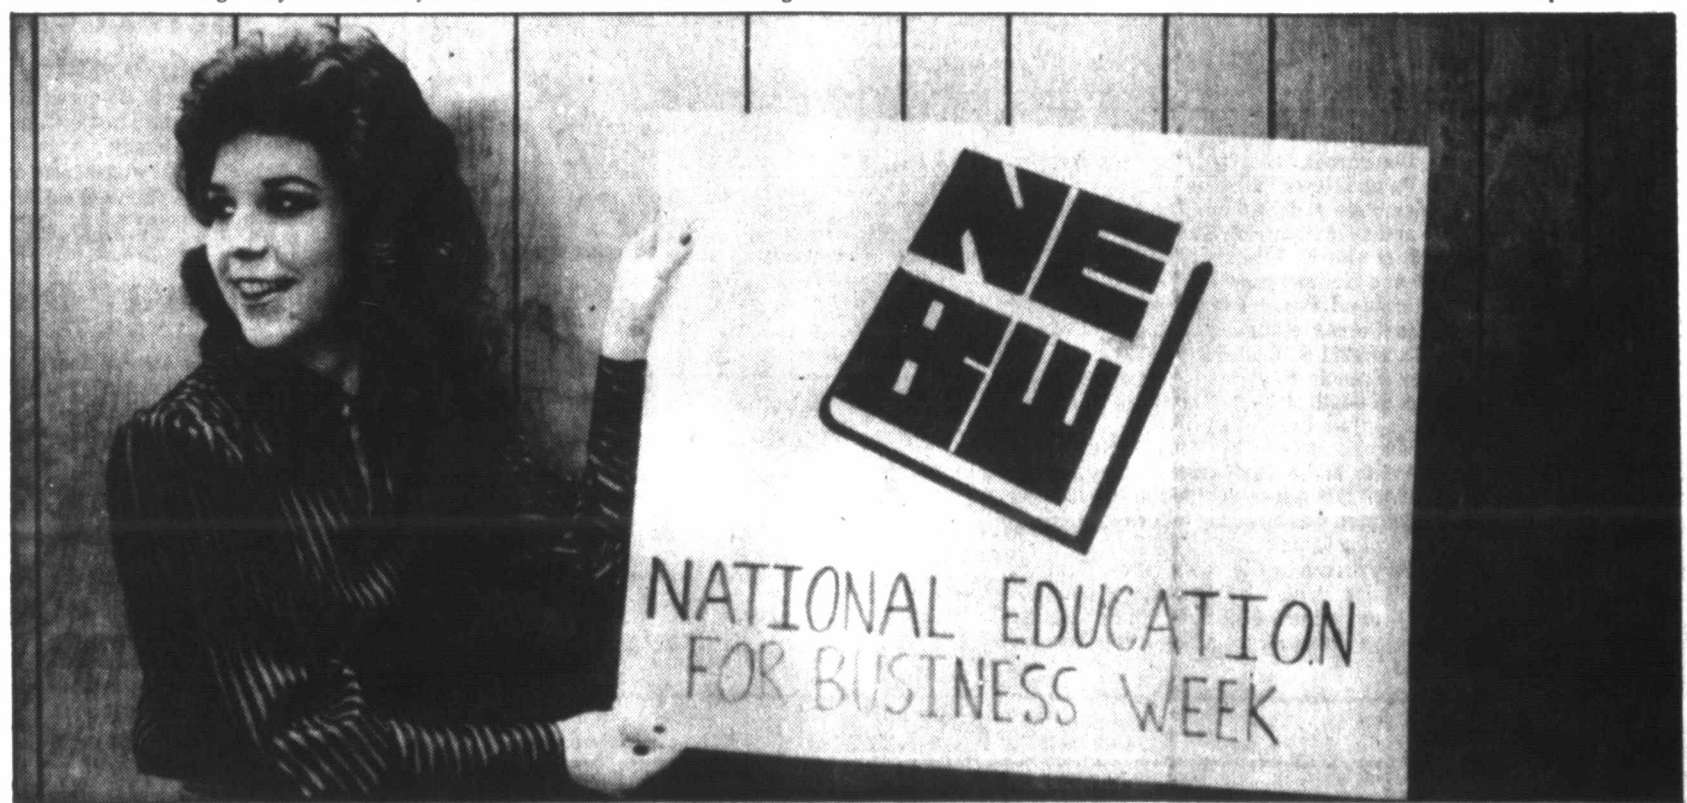

"Street maintenance was also curtailed because of a sincere desire to keep the budget and tax increases to a minimum," Whatley said.

He also pointed out that the streets that were seal coated in the summer of 1982 sustained minimum damage from the winter storms.

Whatley wants major street repairs postponed because water lines that run under them are continually developing breaks. He said three water lines had breaks last Thursday, one on Lafferty, one on Cook and one on Charles Streets.

He suggested the commission put the items on the agenda for the next meeting, April 26.

"I'm sure we agree, nothing can be gained by waiting. This is a big project and would cost a lot of money. To finance such a project would possibly call for a bond issue," he told commissioners.

Washington offers friendship to Chicago

By MIKE ROBINSON

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington, narrowly elected the first black mayor of the nation's second-largest city after a divisive campaign charged with racial tension, today offered his hand "in friendship and fellowship to every living soul in this city."

The two-term congressman, who defeated Republican Bernard Epton in Tuesday's election, will become mayor on a date to be set by the City Council today. He promised a "new Democratic coalition" in his four years in office, and said his first step would be to meet with Epton at a prayer breakfast — as both candidates had promised, win or lose.

"We must work as one people for our common good and our common goals," Washington said after defeating Epton in an election marred by angry mob scenes, watermelon lapel buttons and "Vote Right, Vote White" T-shirts.

Washington overcame a 1972 misdemeanor tax conviction, suspension of his law license and an array of unpaid bills to dash Epton's hope of becoming Chicago's first GOP mayor in 52 years.

He won on a record 1.3 million turnout with a powerful outpouring of black votes, strong support among Hispanics and unexpectedly strong backing from reform-minded "lakefront liberals" at odds with City Hall for years.

With 2,885 of 2,914 precincts reporting early today, Washington had 656,727 votes, or 51.4 percent, to Epton's 617,159, or 48.3 percent. Socialist Ed Warren got 3,725 votes.

Ninety-seven percent of blacks cast their ballots for Washington, compared to 18 percent of whites, according to an exit poll. That was an improvement over the Democratic primary, when Washington got just 6 percent of the white vote in a three-way race.

Washington...

"History was made tonight, oh yeah," the beaming victor said as an estimated 15,000 supporters chanted "We Want Harold" and broke up his acceptance speech with frequent whistles and applause.

"The whole nation is watching, and Chicago has sent a powerful message," he told those who greeted him at Donnelly Hall with nearly three minutes of chants of "Harold, Harold, Harold."

"Out of the crucible of this city's most trying election... blacks and whites, Hispanics, Jews, Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics of all stripes have joined to form a new Democratic coalition," he declared.

Washington will succeed Mayor Jane M. Byrne, who was defeated in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary, promised a write-in effort, then changed her mind. He promised city reforms, but stressed the need for healing.

"I charge you... to rededicate your efforts to heal the divisions that have plagued us. Each of us much reach out and open our arms," he said.

Honore and weary, Epton left the Palmer House late Tuesday after telling supporters he expected to win in a "neck-and-neck" finish. His supporters weren't told he was giving up for the night, and there was no concession.

Washington's election came nearly 200 years after a black trader, Jean Baptiste Point DuSable, established a trading post at the mouth of the Chicago River as the first non-Indian settler here.

At campaign stops, black Washington supporters would sometimes chant: "We discovered it, we should govern it."

Washington had stressed the importance of black support, encouraging a big voter registration drive and telling blacks "It's our turn" to rule Chicago. Prominent Democrats from around the nation came to campaign for him, including former Vice President and presidential candidate Walter Mondale.

In his plea for unity early today, the 60-year-old South Side congressman declared "Chicago is one city."

As in the primary, assistant U.S. attorneys and others monitored for possible vote fraud. Officials reported several hundred complaints, mostly minor. The number was fewer than in the primary, when ballots were impounded amid widespread charges of vote fraud.

One out of five Chicago whites, or 18 percent, voted for Washington, according to an Associated Press-WMAQ-TV exit poll. He got 97 percent among blacks and 58 percent among Hispanics.

Deep snow accumulates in West, while rivers go down in South

By DEAN FOSDICK
 Associated Press Writer

A foot of snow crippled parts of Wyoming and heavy snow was falling today in the northern Plains states as a new storm system took aim on the Great Lakes, while rain-swollen rivers fell slowly from record crests in Dixie.

The blowing flakes glazed roads Tuesday in Arizona and closed schools and businesses in Wyoming. Thunderstorms blew through Iowa, knocking down tree limbs, dropping marble-sized hail and smashing store windows.

The storm was part of a low-pressure system extending from the southern Rockies to the northern Plains, said Steve Corfidi at the National Weather Service's severe storms warning center in Kansas City, Mo.

"We're expecting up to 12 inches of snow in the Dakotas and southern Minnesota before it moves on later today," Corfidi said.

The storm probably will be centered in the upper Great Lakes tonight, he said.

Blowing snow was accumulating quickly Tuesday near Flagstaff, Ariz., and it turned into glare ice on Interstate highways, he said.

Douglas, Wyo., received more than a foot of snow Tuesday. More snow and winds up to 40 mph were forecast today.

"I told people that if they wanted to travel, they'd better go today, because tomorrow they probably won't be going anywhere," forecaster Ray Kowrach at Cheyenne, Wyo., said Tuesday.

Cheyenne got 9 inches of snow by mid-afternoon Tuesday and schools, most government offices and some businesses closed for the day.

Bob Budd of the Wyoming Stockgrowers Association said the storm could be dangerous to livestock. "It's pretty tough this time of year, because so many people are calving and lambing," he said.

In Ottumwa, Iowa, thunderstorms with winds up to 70 mph blew windows out of two department stores, layered the ground with half a half-inch in diameter and scattered tree limbs, officials said. No injuries or power outages were reported.

Meanwhile, the Mississippi River was falling slowly near St. Louis, but flooding continued to create problems in several areas.

At Grafton, Ill., where the Mississippi and Illinois rivers meet, officials ferried voters to polls Tuesday by boat and high-axle trucks as most of the town remained under water.

At West Alton, on the Missouri side of the Mississippi, more than half the town's 500 residents remained out of their homes. The town was flooded Friday when a levee gave way.

Hundreds want 'outhouse' baby

By RANDALL HACKLEY

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) - A tiny, brown-haired baby found wailing and abandoned has tugged at the heart-strings of hundreds of prospective parents who want to replace the one who left her in an outhouse.

Mexican social workers said Tuesday that hundreds of people have asked to adopt the five-pound girl rescued Sunday from a dank latrine in a suburb of Ciudad Juarez.

"She's better now. And she appears happy," hospital spokesman Hilda Munoz said about the girl doctors estimate to be about 11 days old.

Juarez police said they have been unsuccessful in their efforts to identify the girl's mother and consider it unlikely they will ever find either of the girl's parents in this city of 900,000 across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas.

Police said a teen-aged boy told them he was walking past an outhouse at the Independencia colonia on the edge of the Juarez city limits when he heard a baby's wails. Inquisitive, the youth told officers that when he walked closer, he heard the cries of a baby coming from the outdoor latrine.

He peered inside the outhouse and discovered the infant on the latrine's floor, covered only by a ragged white towel, police said.

The teen called to neighbors for help, and police then rushed the girl to the hospital.

Hospital officials said the baby will be put up for adoption within a few days if they are unable to find the girl's parents.

This one's big enough to keep...

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) - The proud father of a baby who weighed 16 pounds, 6 ounces at birth thinks his son will grow up to be a football player, and even the boy's mother admits he's "hard to handle."

Kevin Robert Clark, whose birth at Community Memorial Hospital has attracted attention to match his size, is so big that nurses have placed him in a crib because he doesn't fit the hospital's standard bassinet.

"I teased my wife before she got pregnant that she would have a 15-pound boy," Kevin's father, Robert Clark, said Tuesday. "But I never expected a son this big!"

Nurses joke that "he's going to walk out of the hospital on his own," said the 24-year-old mother, Patricia Clark.

Kevin was 2 1/2 weeks overdue and 25 inches tall when he was born Friday by Caesarean section.

"We just put the 9-month clothes on him and they're tight," Clark said. "He's got a tremendous appetite. He's not on a regular feeding schedule like the other babies in the hospital. Whenever he's hungry, he cries and my wife nurses him."

Despite his unusual size, doctors checked the infant and found him to be in perfect health, Mrs. Clark said.

The Clarks said large babies run in the family. Mrs. Clark weighed 9 pounds at birth, and is now 5-foot-8 and 145 pounds. Her husband, a Navy enlistee stationed at nearby Lakehurst Naval Air Engineering Center, was a 10-pound baby who today stands 6-foot-6 and weighs 250 pounds.

But Kevin was born more than twice the size of the Clarks' only other baby, Kristina, now 3, who weighed in at 8 pounds, 1 ounce.

"He's going to be a football player when he grows up," the proud father predicted.

"He's a real bruiser," agreed Mrs. Clark. "He's hard for me to handle, so the nurses help me with him. But he's really cute and we love him just the same as if he were a little guy."

The largest viable baby ever born, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, was a 22-pound, 8-ounce boy born to a woman in Aversa, Italy, in September 1955.

Airport will try to get runway patched up

The Gray County Airport Board voted to try to get Texas Aeronautical Commission (TAC) and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) money to seal cracks on the runway at Perry LeFors Airport at its regular meeting Tuesday morning.

According to board chairman H.E. Crocker Jr., the board also voted to get roof repairs on the tenant's house and pilot's lounge completed before they consider carpeting for the pilot's lounge.

The board will also solicit bids through the Gray County Commissioners' Court for the installation of a standby generator at the airport, Crocker said. He said the board will get bids from ten contractors and then bring the bids to county commissioners. The board has already purchased the generator, and now needs to solicit bids for its installation.

McLean to get new hose

By STELLA LEE

McLEAN - New McLean Mayor George Terry conducted his first city council meeting Tuesday night after he and new aldermen W.A. Bentley and Loyd Bybee were sworn in.

The city council appointed June Suggs, who placed third in the race to elect two new aldermen, to finish Terry's term as alderman. She will serve for one year.

City councilmen appointed Johnnie Mertel, Ted Simmons and Laverne Brooks to spots on the Housing Advisory Board, and elected alderman Bill Thomas as mayor pro-tem. Thomas will conduct meetings and serve as mayor when Terry is not available.

The council decided to buy eight joints of 1 1/2-inch fire hose, and directed McLean Fire Chief Jim McDonald to get estimates on the cost.

In addition, the council designated the first week in May as McLean Clean-Up week, and paid the city's bills for the month.

Jurors wait for murder tape

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — State district court jurors have seen a crusty tape recorder that allegedly was used to record a man's death, but they still await the chance to hear the "23 minutes of murder" the tape is said to contain.

Cameron County District Attorney Rey Cantu introduced the recorder as evidence Tuesday during the first day of testimony in the murder trial of Paul Wolf, accused of last summer's slaying of Pharr schoolteacher Leticia Castro.

Cantu said the tape recording made by Miss Castro's fiancé, Billy Staton, during his slaying will provide key evidence in the case against Wolf, 21, of La Feria. He said the tape contains "23 minutes of murder."

Prosecutors allege Staton and Miss Castro, both 26, were killed because Wolf and his wife Sherry, 21, were upset over arrangements that allowed Staton to visit his daughter at the Wolf home. Staton was Mrs. Wolf's former husband and father of her 2-year-old daughter.

Government witness Glenn Henderson testified Tuesday that he acted out of friendship when he agreed to help Wolf kill Staton and Miss Castro. Henderson, 19, who has confessed to his part in the slaying and is serving a life prison sentence, was described by Cantu as "my third victim" because he is a "gullible, very slow person."

Henderson explained in detail how he said Wolf plotted to kill Miss Castro and Staton. He testified that Wolf approached him a day before the killings and requested Henderson's help.

"As a friend," Henderson said, he agreed to assist.

"He was going to hit Billy in the head with a bar and Letty in the head with a hammer," said Henderson, a La Feria mechanic.

Henderson said Wolf asked for his help because he had worked as a volunteer fireman and was used to the sight of dead bodies.

Prosecutors say that on the night of the murder, Miss Castro stayed in Staton's car while he went in the house to pick up his daughter.

Staton had concealed the tape recorder under his shirt as part of a plan to demonstrate the animosity shown by the Wolfs over the child visitation arrangements.

The tape was running when Wolf and Miss Castro were "ambushed" and killed, Cantu said.

"Unknown to the three murderers, Billy's tape had been playing all the time," he said.

Henderson said that as Staton talked to his daughter and former wife in the house, Wolf snuck up behind him and beat him over the head with a metal bar.

"He fell out of the seat ... moaning and groaning," Henderson said.

Wolf struck Staton twice more and then went outside and attacked Miss Castro in the front seat of Staton's car, he said.

"Paul was on top of her choking her," Henderson testified.

He said Wolf then told him to get a hammer he had hidden under a bush.

"I got the hammer and hit her on top of the head with the hammer," Henderson said.

He testified he and Wolf dragged Staton's nearly lifeless body from the house and placed it in the trunk of his car.

Wolf then drove Staton's car to a pre-selected Rio Grande Valley drainage canal and dumped Miss Castro's body face down near the water.

Rabbinical assembly rejects women

DALLAS (AP) — A Missouri rabbi who fell four votes shy of becoming the first female rabbi in the conservative Jewish movement says she will try again next year to join the all-male Rabbinical Assembly.

Beverly Magidson, a 31-year-old hospital chaplain who was ordained in the more liberal reformed movement, applied for membership in the Rabbinical Assembly, which represents the conservative wing of Judaism.

But she was approved Tuesday by only 210 of the 285 rabbis who voted after a four-hour floor debate. New members of the group must receive 75 percent of the vote. The assembly is holding its annual convention here this week.

"I was really prepared to go down (in defeat) today," she said in a telephone interview from her St. Louis home.

Tuesday night. "A friend once told me to make this a five-year project. Really, the fact that it could have been over today took a long time to sink in."

Mrs. Magidson said she was raised in the conservative movement, but attended the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, the reformed wing's seminary, so that she could become a rabbi.

Rabbis graduating from the conservative Jewish Theological Seminary are automatically admitted into the Rabbinical Assembly, but that school does not admit women.

Mrs. Magidson can reapply for membership in the Rabbinical Assembly next year, said assembly spokesman Akiba Lubow.

"I will try again," Mrs. Magidson said. "When again will depend on consultations with those (rabbis) who have been helping me."

Applications to the assembly usually are approved with little opposition, Lubow said.

"But in this particular case the members were voting not so much on Rabbi Magidson herself as ... the admission of women into the Rabbinical Assembly," he said.

"While there were four hours of debate on the proposal, the members refrained from a discussion of Rabbi Magidson herself and dealt with the larger issue of admitting women," he said.

Mrs. Magidson, who is married to an accountant and has a 6-month-old son, said approving her application would "open more possibilities for conservative congregations."

But, she said, "I'm not sure that's necessarily what I want to do. What I was really trying to do was to get recognition for the way that I practice my rabbinate."

Lawmaker undergoes chelation for committee

AUSTIN (AP) — A House committee got an unusual illustration of one proposal before it when Houston Rep. Senfronia Thompson underwent "chelation" therapy before the committee to show the treatment is safe.

With an intravenous tube in her arm and a bottle of the chelation drug hanging on a coatrack, Ms. Thompson testified before the House Human Services Committee on Tuesday in favor of her bill legalizing chelation therapy for treatment of numerous diseases.

Chelation involves intravenous administration of ethylenediamine disodium tetraacetate acid, a food additive. The treatment is recognized by the American Medical Association only for use on metal poisoning.

But some doctors and their patients contend the therapy effectively treats calcium build-up in arteries, as well as other diseases, including arthritis, senility, strokes, high blood pressure, gangrene and Parkinson's disease.

"No, I'm not ill," Ms. Thompson told the committee. "I'm being chelated."

She complained that "well-heeled medical interests have whispered that neither the (Food and Drug Administration) or the AMA has approved chelation therapy. My answer is, so what?"

She also displayed bottles of suntan oil, salad dressing, pinto beans and mayonnaise and told the committee all contain EDTA.

Ms. Thompson said she was told by a source that the medical community doesn't want chelation recognized because its alternative for heart disease — surgery — is more lucrative.

Dr. Robert Rogers, a Florida physician, said he had used the drug on patients for several years before the daughter of one complained to county medical authorities. Rogers was put on probation by medical authorities for using the unorthodox treatment.

He appealed to the courts, and in 1980, the Florida Supreme Court overturned a state medical association's sanctions against Rogers.

Rogers said Texas should avoid a court challenge by specifically legalizing use of chelation therapy.

Ms. Thompson said the treatment is safe. "It can be administered in a doctor's office, and, as you can see, I don't mind having it administered in this committee room."

House committee hears DWI proposals

AUSTIN (AP) — A Central Texas judge told a House committee that his Driving While Intoxicated program keeps the county's jail less crowded and its roads cleaner.

Milam County Judge Phil Smith testified Tuesday in favor of a bill by Rep. Hill Kemp, D-Manvel, who wants to make road crew work standard punishment for drunken drivers.

"This has given me a way to punish offenders without tying up my jail," said Smith, adding that DWI-related wrecks have dropped 38 percent since his program began.

The House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee is considering a package of 19 anti-DWI bills. Chairman Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, said the bills would be combined into a single proposal to toughen DWI laws before being sent to the House later this month.

Other proposals include impounding cars of repeat offenders, building rehabilitation facilities for alcoholic motorists, banning open containers in autos, and an end to deferred adjudication — the most lenient form of probation. The committee heard from 18 sponsors of the 19 bills Tuesday.

Attorney General Jim Mattox cautioned committee members "not to tie the hands of judges and prosecutors in dealing with DWI cases. You've got to have flexibility." He encouraged alternatives to prison sentences because of overcrowded jails and prisons.

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, said he would put repeat offenders in jail and "throw away the key," but he said first offenders should be punished some other way.

"El Paso County built a new jail last year and already it's too small," he said. "We've had to put inmates in a hotel downtown."

Kemp said judges already have the authority to sentence DWI offenders to community service projects, but he said his bill would formally allow defendants to be assigned to work for the Texas Highway Department or the county or city — or any state agency.

"It will be a savings to cities and counties who have to hire people to pick up this trash," Kemp said.

Smith said he has been sentencing drunken drivers to pick up trash in Milam County four hours in the morning on six consecutive Saturdays, but Kemp's proposal does not specify the length of the sentence.

"It doesn't restrict it to weekends either," Kemp said. "How long the person has to do it and on what days would be left up to the judge."

If an offender refuses to pick up trash, he could go to jail and lose his drivers license, said Kemp.

Smith said there were 22 alcohol-related traffic accidents in the Cameron area in the past six months, during the period he was sentencing drunken drivers to pick up trash. He said in the same period the previous year there were 36 DWI accidents.

"The ambulance people tell me they say they don't smell as much alcohol at the wrecks like they used to," said Smith. He and Kemp said the purpose was not to embarrass drunken drivers.

"But when you're out there bending over cleaning up trash, it gives you time to reflect on what you did to get there," Kemp said.

Two lawsuits have been filed in Southeast Texas challenging blood tests conducted at refineries. A March 24 suit against a Port Arthur plant contends about 500 employees were given blood tests for drug use under the guise of a medical examination. A February suit claims blood tests at a Nederland plant were so unscientific that marijuana use from weeks before would show up in the blood.

Association spokeswoman Guada Lueck said studies indicate as many as 42 percent of the construction workers use drugs and as much as $15 billion in accident claims and property damage resulted from drug use on the job in 1980.

Charlie Pendleton, an oilfield attorney who specializes in drug laws, drew up the plan for legal searches, she added. Ms. Lueck said constitutional limits on searches do not apply as long as the company has a "right to search" clause in its policy and conducts the search on company premises.

Chapman said the AFL-CIO particularly objected to the idea of a blacklist, where a drug-related firing will be listed on the employee's record.

"The worker might have had a problem years ago, but he'll be blacklisted forever," Chapman said.

He also expressed concern that the searches could be used to harass workers who were not well-liked by management. "There's room for abuse in those type of things," he said.

"I think it would be illegal for them to search," said Neal Haynes, business manager of the Operating Engineers' local. "I think they're going to end up in trouble."

"I don't think we could stand for this," added Tom Wilcoxon, business manager for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers local. "We're certainly not for drug use, but we are for a little bit of dignity."

Spring begins for the economy...

The good news on the economic front, where so much heartache and happiness abide in modern society, is that the nation's economy is growing at a healthy 4 percent annual rate as of the first quarter of this year.

This preliminary "flash" report from the Commerce Department, indicating the best spurt in two years, is the broadest evidence to date that the oft-heralded recovery is finally arriving. Additional good news is that the quarter's inflation rate was only 2.8 percent, the lowest in 17 years.

Such heartening economic developments being seldom unadulterated, the bad news is that the 4 percent figure is well below the 7 percent average increase in gross national product in the first four quarters of the six post World War II recoveries. In other words, this recovery is not as robust as some prominent economists have been predicting. It is limited, tentative, and vulnerable.

Still, it's been a long, hard winter and signs abound that spring really is on the way. For an idea of how bad this recession has been, we need not look beyond last year's after-tax corporate profits, which were down 22.1 percent, the largest annual decline since 1938. Even if after-tax profits surge by 25 percent this year, as economist George L. Perry of the Brookings Institution predicts, U.S. business will only be regaining lost ground. This factor obviously contributed to the high unemployment.

Some economic observers, including Forbes, believe the recovery will gain strength as it goes along, swelling to 6 percent by year's end. This optimism is based on the necessity for business to rebuild its inventories, now depleted. There will be a dramatic pickup in capital investment, mostly in computers, tele-communications, and high-technology equipment - not so much in steel mills and manufacturing plants.

But the real expansion will be fueled by consumers, whose buying power has been bolstered by the flattened inflation rate, by the Reaganomics tax refunds, by falling energy costs, and by surging stock and bond markets that have increased consumer net worth by an astonishing $500 billion during recent months.

Despite interest rates still high by historical standards, the housing industry is rebounding beyond expectations from an annual rate of 1.3 million housing starts in last year's fourth quarter to 1.7 million in January alone. And automobile sales have increased by half a million to a 6-million-a-year pace, a new plateau.

Interest rates must be seen as the big wild card in the recovery outlook. Mortgage rates have declined about four percentage points from 17 percent last year, and the prime rate's recent cut to 10.5 percent is at the lowest level in four years. Consumer lending rates, which lag behind those in business, are expected to decline soon and stimulate consumer spending.

A renewed surge in interest rates would probably shove the economy back into another recession. High interest rates will continue to endanger the recovery and the economy itself unless Congress and the administration can reduce the bloated federal budget, which they seem unwilling and unable to do. The chief hope here is that the recovery will come to the budget's rescue, saving $25 billion with every point drop in the unemployment rate and bringing in uncounted billions in windfall revenues from a prospering country.

With all of its problems, the American economy is still the principal engine for the free world and American consumers offer a dominant market for traders in nearly every land. Economic recovery in Japan and Western Europe will follow in the American train, each strengthening the other. Indeed, we are witness to the marvel of the free-interprise system, which having done penance for its inflationary sins and unchecked government spending, now regenerates itself while communist economies the world around continue to lie fallow.

A possible alternative to total destruction?

By William A. Rasher

NEW YORK (NEA) — In my last column, I discussed the strategic implications of President Reagan's proposal to replace nuclear deterrence with a system of non-nuclear defenses. Despite the knee-jerk response of his political opponents, who typically rushed to poo-poo the plan before giving it even a moment's thought, it offers mankind a welcome escape from the current reliance of both superpowers on the grim concept of security through "mutual assured destruction."

Today, however, let's take a leaf from the book of Mr. Reagan's opponents and consider, not the merits of the plan, but solely its political implications.

First, though, a tip of the hat to Lt. Gen. Dan Graham, the retired chief of Air Force Intelligence who, with a few of his old military colleagues, has been pushing the concept of a strategic non-nuclear defense for at least two years under the name Project High Frontier. Connoisseurs of these columns may recall one I wrote about Graham's proposal back in September 1981, and there is an even older palimpsest on the subject: Graham's own article about it in the May/June 1981 issue of "Signal."

As Mark Twain observed, however, "The man with a new idea is a crank until the idea succeeds," and I wish I had a nickel for every unimaginative stick-in-the-mud who dismissed Graham as a crank for proposing essentially the doctrine they are all busy burning incense before, now that it's been endorsed by the president of the United States.

The really big losers, however, are the anti-nuclear rhetoricians, whose whole stock in trade for over a quarter of a century has been the sheer awfulness of nuclear war. Consider Johnathan Schell, stuck with Lord knows how many hard-cover copies of a book that breathlessly depicts the extinction of the human race as the inevitable consequence of a doctrine (nuclear deterrence) that Mr. Reagan proposes to outmode within 20 years by the development of a non-nuclear defense. Pity poor Father Bryan Hehir, that tireless behind-the-scenes operator on the staff of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, laboriously maneuvering his naive superiors toward what would have been interpreted in the media as a declaration that a strategy of nuclear deterrence is morally impermissible for a Christian — only to find Mr. Reagan beckoning the bishops onward and upward to a new strategic concept so purely defensive in nature that not even St. Francis of Assisi could object to it. Imagine, for that matter, the hapless hierarchs in the Kremlin — privately content with their present edge in nuclear weaponry and positively delighted with current pressures in the West for a nuclear freeze at those levels, but suddenly upstaged by this wretched ex-actor with a plan for a non-nuclear defensive system that will render both nuclear arsenals useless.

At a purely partisan level, what gnashings of teeth there must be over at the Democratic National Committee! As late as two weeks ago, the Party of Compassion could have made this idea its own, seized the rhetorical high ground for the foreseeable future (anti-nuke, high-tech, purely defensive) christened it the O'Neill Plan and begun pressuring the Nobel Committee in Oslo to confer its annual Peace Prize on the speaker. Instead, the Democrats must spend the next 10 or 15 years arguing (falsely) that Mr. Reagan's proposal for a non-nuclear future is "too expensive" or "won't work."

There is something almost eerie about the ease with which Mr. Reagan has disarmed almost every major critic he possessed: the pacifists, the Russians, the Democrats. Take even the relatively minor matter of acronyms. For decades the doctrine of Mutual Assured Destruction has labored under the disadvantage that its initial letters spelled MAD — which is precisely what its critics called the doctrine. President Reagan's proposal for a non-nuclear strategic defense system offers mankind, for the first time in many years, Security Against Nuclear Extinction — or SANE.

What American or European politician, or what communist demagogue for that matter, will try to argue for long against going from MAD to SANE?

'A stranger, who has only been here 2 years'

A fine turnout

I would like to express my opinion on a statement concerning the recent city and school elections. I think Pampa has always had a fine group of city officials as well as school officials. Also, considering the weather and holiday, I think we had a fine turnout at the polls.

Dr. Dow made a statement that Pampa people didn't seem to care about the town or the way it was taken care of.

I'd like to know how a stranger, who's only been here two years, can make that judgment about us. I grew up here and I'm very happy with the way things are, so are my two children who are in Pampa schools. As I see it, may the Best Man (or Woman) Win.

Good Samaritan

Not long ago I skidded on the ice and ended up in a ditch outside of Skellytown. For a woman alone after midnight it was a pretty frightening experience. I could not get my own car on the road and was worried about how to get back to Pampa, or at least some place where I could receive help. Mr. Ben Smith, an employee of ELTORO Drilling Co. stopped to help me. He was also not able to get my car back on the road, but he did take me not only to Pampa, but directly to my house. I was very unable at the time to truly express my gratitude as I was still very upset over the nights events. I would like to let the citizens at least of Pampa know that there are indeed still Good Samaritans around and Thanks again Ben...

Greenberg's article

I just wanted to write and tell you that as an old student of politics I found Paul Greenberg's article in the April 8th issue of your paper one of the most humorous pieces I have ever read.

Greenberg tells us that the Israelis have made no claims on Lebanese territory except that it not be used against them. Mr. Greenberg, it can't be used against them until it is rebuilt from the last bombings and shelling. I think when several hundred civilians (unarmed) are slaughtered, that is making a pretty good claim on someone's territory. I don't think your argument would carry very much weight with the unarmed civilians (or reporters) who were in Lebanon during the bombing and destruction.

Greenberg refers to Israel as a "small, beleaguered state." These people stand behind the flag and patriotism today and hide and tell us to remember the ovens and gas chambers. I tell you it is time to take the flag and patriotism away from them and let them stand for what they are. We can all decide for ourselves then, if we WANT them to have F-16 jets of anybodies.

Greenberg seems to lead us to believe that Yasser Arafat is the arch villain of modern times. He is not. He is a revolutionary, a statesman, and first of all a politician. He is no different than any of Israel's, the Russian's or anyone else's leaders. It is almost certain that when a man is elected to office what is honest and wants to help the little man (the one who works and pays the taxes) he will be assassinated either physically or politically.

Mr. Greenberg, I could continue to tell of the flaws in your line of reasoning, but that isn't needed. There are some people in Pampa, Texas, you just didn't fool.

Turning to psychiatry

It seems that more and more people are turning to psychiatry with their soul problems rather than turn to the Lord.

Part of this trend may be due to the failure of some churches to effectively deal with the disease of the soul. But some people are probably turning to psychiatry as a substitute for God, in whom they no longer believe.

Therefore, may I share with your readers a few quotes from Dr. Bernie Zilbergeld, Ph.D., a clinical psychologist: After 15 years of research he has concluded that "Far from improving lives of people, the mental health professions often contribute to the emotional problems they hope to cure. He further states that "Professional therapy is overpromoted, overused and overvalued" and "Most people who seek treatment do not need the advice and monitoring provided by mental health experts" but "most people could probably get the help they need from friends, relatives or others rather than from therapists."

Even worse, Dr. Zilbergeld claims that "Some people are actually harmed by the psychiatric treatment they receive." He points out "A method powerful enough to produce positive change is also capable of producing harm."

One review of studies of marital and family therapy states "On the whole, it appears that 5 to 10 percent of patients or of marital or family relationships worsen as the result of treatment."

Some clients with no history of severe disturbance become psychotic during counseling, some commit suicide and some do other things that clearly indicate a worsening of their condition." The foregoing quotes are only a sampling from the book "The Shrinking of America" published by Little, Brown.

Whatever value psychiatry may have, it is powerless to deal with the problem of sin which is at the root of all the maladies of the soul. (Incidentally, the word, "Psychiatry" implies "Healing of the Soul.") All mental, emotional and behavioral disorders spring from a flaw in human nature called "Sin." The sin problem cannot be solved on human terms; God alone can solve the sin problem - and He has. Whatever phobias, addictions or maladjustments one may have, one can be transformed into a whole new person when one has an encounter with the Living Christ as Saul of Tarsus did. (Acts 9).

No one seems to think it strange that some psychiatrists use "Primal Scream" therapy in which the client is told that if he will scream long and loud he will be changed into a new kind of human being. Yet, the same intelligent people who endorse the "Primal Scream" therapy will sneer and scoff at the idea of speaking or praying in unknown or other tongues, a practice of the Christian Faith for nearly 2000 years which has been successful for millions of believers, giving them a sound mind and a well-balanced life.

When something works for people, why experiment on people?

Eight Pampa women nominated for service award

CANYON - Nine Pampa residents are among 100 nominees for the Eighth Annual Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards to be presented at a luncheon in their honor Saturday, April 16 at 11 a.m.

Nominees from Pampa are Darlene Birkes, Lilith Brainard, Thelma Bray, Sherry Carlson, Janice Carter, Gladys Casey Davis, Betty Henderson, Helene Hogan, and Ruth Osborne.

Recipients and nominees will be honored at the luncheon, in the West Texas State University (WTSU) East Dining Room. Colette Dowling, author of the bestselling "The Cinderella Complex," will address the luncheon. The theme of the luncheon is "Women-Aware." Music will be provided by the Harrington String Quartet.

The luncheon is sponsored by the WTSU Returning Student Program. Tickets for the program are $10 and must be reserved by Wednesday, April 13 through the Returning Student Office, or by calling 656-2172.

Women are nominated by individuals and organizations for contributions to civic and volunteer service, career and professional areas. Nominees are from cities all across the Panhandle, including Borger, Canadian, Clarendon, McLean, and Wheeler.

Twentieth Century Forum has nominated Birkes, who was the 1982 Citizen of the Year, awarded by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. She has also been involved with the Quivira Council of Girl Scouts, as a troop leader, newsletter editor and officer. She has worked as a board member for the United Way, edited the Gray County Heritage Cookbook in 1982 for the Chamber of Commerce Civic Beautification Committee, served as state chairman for the Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority, and is active in Pampa City Panhellenic, First United Methodist Church, Pampa Fine Arts Association Board, and Pampa Garden Club. She is a Meals on Wheels volunteer and also helped charter the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation. She and her husband, Wallace, were host parents for American Field Service in 1977-78.

Brainard has been nominated by the Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club. She and her husband, Ed, are involved in ranching and she has donated her time to civic and church organizations. She has coordinated fundraising drives for multiple sclerosis, Kidney Foundation, American Cancer Society, Heart Association, cystic fibrosis and Easter Seals. She delivers meals for Meals on Wheels and is a district president of Parent-Teacher Association. Also among her activities are involvement in the Twentieth Century Cotillion, band boosters and Top O' Texas Republican Club. She is the mother of five children.

Bray is the nominee of Nina Spoonmore and Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. She works at the U.S. Post Office in Pampa and has organized a number of civic projects. She helped charter the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation, started the Festival of Christmas Trees in 1982 and chaired the Gray County 80th Birthday Celebration in 1982. Bray, who grew up in Pampa, is a member of Beautiful Texas County state board of directors, Pampa Garden Club, Gray County Historical Commission, helped organize Truteans of Pampa High School, Twentieth Century Cotillion, Altrusa Club and has attended the First United Methodist Church for 30 years. She was Pampa Woman of the Year for Beta Sigma Phi Sorority in 1963 and received a special achievement award in 1970 from the Texas Garden Clubs, Inc. She is also an active member of the WTSU Alumni Association Board.

Twentieth Century Culture Club has nominated Carlson, who moved to Pampa in 1974. She is employed as a bookkeeper for Fabri - Test, Inc. Since moving to Pampa from Oklahoma, Carlson has become president of the advisory board for the Satellite School and is a member of the Gray County Association for Retarded Citizens. She has served on Pampa Independent School District committees and is an active member of the First Christian Church. She also has assisted in fund drives for the Gray County March of Dimes, Community Concert membership drive and the United Way. She and her husband Jerry are the parents of one son, Chris.

Carter was nominated by the Worthwhile Extension Club. She and her husband, W.A., have operated Carter Sand and Gravel for 37 years. She has become involved with a number of civic activities including forming two home extension clubs in Gray County, is chairman for the Gray County Extension Council, is a member of the Gray County Family Living Committee and has worked with 4-H for which she received the 1979 Friend of 4-H Award. She has also volunteered at Coronado Community Hospital, is a member of Tri-County Democratic Club and the board of the Community Day Care Center. In 1976, she won the grandmother's division in the National Cow Calling Contest at Miami and has appeared on network television shows, including "To Tell the Truth."

Pam Extension Homemakers Club has nominated Davis. She has taught school for 36 years, 28 of those years at Plainview. She has been a member of Progressive Baptist Church for 36 years and has served as pastor sine die of her husband. She is also a member of the Ministerial Alliance of Pampa, Pampa Garden Club, Tri-County Democratic Club, Family Living and Youth Task Force, is a 4-H club leader and directs the South Side Senior Citizens Center. In 1982, she was named Best Homemaker Teacher in Texas at the Booker T. Washington all-school reunion.

Henderson was nominated by Pampa City Panhellenic. She taught junior high school courses for six years. Her civic involvement has included Pampa Fine Arts Association for which she is working on a project for a fine arts building. Pampa Classroom Teachers, member of Special Education Advisory Committee, is a trustee with the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation and has served as an elder and Sunday school superintendent at the Presbyterian Church.

The Progressive Extension Homemakers Club nominated Hogan. She is president of the Pampa Civic Culture Club, a charter member of Progressive Extension Homemakers Club, fashion show modeling instructor for 4-H Club, volunteer for Meals on Wheels, March of Dimes and Multiple Sclerosis. She is also a member of the First Christian Church and the Petroleum Engineers Wives Society. During the 1950s, she hosted a morning radio program and owned a millinery shop and dancing school.

Osborne has been nominated by the Tri-County Democratic Club and Wanda Carter. She donates time and effort to fund raising for agencies. She works with the Community Day Care Center and helped found and furnish the new South Side Senior Citizens Center. She has worked as a county Democratic chairman and is president of the Tri-County Democratic Club. Other activities include the First United Methodist Church, and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. She received the governor's award in recognition of service as a Texas volunteer. She and her husband, Jake, are the parents of one son and one daughter.

It's barbecue time!

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

FINALLY! Signs of spring are everywhere and for many, this signals the beginning of the cookout season. For the experienced grill-side chef as well as the beginner, this is a good time to brush up on some barbecuing basics.

Whether cooking burgers or franks, steaks or chops, ribs or roasts, the secret to success is a good fire. Meats should be cooked at a low to moderate temperature. Higher temperatures could lead to burning, too much shrinkage and loss of juiciness and flavor.

You'll know the fire has reached the right temperature when the coals are covered with a gray ash and glowing in the center. The briquets should be piled in a pyramid when the fire is started, then spread into a single layer when it is time to put the steaks on.

Maintaining the temperature throughout cooking is important. Adjusting the grid, rearranging, adding or removing coals, adjusting dampers or draft door and using windbreaks are all ways of controlling the temperature. Besides that, they're all good excuses for staying outside in the beautiful weather!

To get your grill ready for the barbecuing season, start with a good cleaning to get rid of all last year's residues. Start with a bucket of hot, soapy water, a stiff wire brush and add lots of elbow grease. Rinse well with the backyard hose.

After the initial cleaning job, keeping the grill in good shape is easy. For those with a covered grill: When the coals are good and hot, let the grill rack heat over the coals for about 10 minutes with the grill covered. Then simply brush the grill lightly with a wire brush or crumpled aluminum foil or newspaper (don't use colored news print). The particles of charred grease and food will fall away.

If you don't have a covered grill, wrap the grill rack tightly in heavy duty foil and place it over hot coals for several minutes. Naturally, when cleaning any hot surface use extreme caution. Wear heavy flame proof gloves, and keep children and pets away.

Once the grill rack is clean, you can help keep it that way by spraying it with vegetable oil or nonstick spray.

Line the firebox with a heavy-duty foil and top it with a one-inch layer of small pea-size gravel. Next, pile the charcoal briquets into a pyramid or mound in the center of the firebox. Not too many, mind you, for that's a sure sign of an inexperienced barbecuer.

Spray starter fluid over the charcoals until they're soaked. Allow a minute for it to soak in, then ignite with a match. Let the coals burn 20 to 30 minutes or until the fire dies down to a glow and a thin layer of grey ash covers the coals.

Never apply starter fluid to a lighted fire or hot coals!

When coals are ready, carefully arrange them to suit the type of food you plan to cook. For steaks, chops and burgers, rake coals over the entire firebox, about 1/2-inch apart.

To spit-roast, place an aluminum foil drip pan under the meat and spread the coals in a circle around the firebox.

For grilling a large piece of meat in a covered grill, center a foil drip pan in the firebox and pile coals on both sides of the pan. And, if kabobs are your specialty, you line up the coals in rows and around the edge of the grill. Place skewers on the grill above spaces between the rows of hot coals. Here's a recipe for cheaper cut of steak that makes great barbecue and the marinade works well with other cuts of meat, too.

MARINATED BAR-B-Q STEAK

- 1 c. chopped onion
- 1/2 c. horseradish
- 1-3 c. dark corn syrup
- 1/2 c. vinegar
- 1/4 c. corn oil
- 1/4 c. ketchup
- 2 cloves garlic, minced or pressed
- 1 t. salt
- 1/2 t. pepper
- One 2 or 2 1/2 lb. boneless chuck roast, cut 2 in. thick

In a small bowl mix together onion, horseradish, corn syrup, vinegar, corn oil, ketchup, garlic, salt and pepper. Place steak in shallow dish. Pour marinade over steak. Cover; refrigerate several hours or overnight, turning occasionally.

Drain excess marinade from steak. Grill 6 inches from source of heat, turning as needed and basting frequently with marinade, 40 to 50 minutes or until desired doneness. Cut diagonally across grain into thin slices. This recipe makes 6 servings.

Springtime means the aroma of backyard barbecues is replacing the smell of smoke from stoves and fireplaces. With warm temperatures finally coming to the Panhandle this week, now's the time to brush up on barbecuing techniques and recipes.

Pair barbecue meats with salad

What's the perfect accompaniment to a thick, juicy steak, succulent pork chops or tender roast beef? Many diners agree it's salad — a fresh, crisp vegetable salad.

But if you find yourself making the same salad again and again with lettuce, a few chopped vegetables and perhaps a tomato wedge, you're not doing your menus justice. Today's supermarket produce sections are brimming with a growing variety of fresh, flavorful, even exotic items great for mixing and matching in salads.

For an unlimited array of salads, begin by teaming up two or more greens — endive, iceberg, leaf, bibb and Romain lettuce, to name a few, then let your imagination go. In addition to traditional salad fixings, try increasingly popular fresh bean and alfalfa sprouts, zucchini, cauliflower, broccoli and mushrooms.

Don't overlook fresh fruits as salad possibilities. Avocado slices, orange and grapefruit sections, pineapple chunks and apple and pear slices will add a refreshing flavor to a basic vegetable salad. Other ingredient possibilities include crumbled bacon, chopped egg, grated cheese, unsalted nuts and flavored croutons. When all is assembled, just toss with a favorite dressing and dig in!

Here is a salad recipe that can be made ahead of time and would go especially well with barbecued meats. It was submitted by Kathy Logan of Pampa at a Pampa Newcomer Club salad luncheon. Kathy and her husband James moved here last year from Kansas City.

Kan. James works for Phillips Petroleum Company in Phillips. Kathy calls her salad recipe:

- ### MRS. BENNETT'S SALAD
- One head of lettuce (torn in bite-sized pieces)
 - 1/2 c. chopped celery
 - 1/2 c. green garden onions
 - 1/2 c. green pepper
 - 1/2 c. red pepper
 - One pkg. frozen peas, uncooked

Layer all ingredients in order in a 9 by 12 inch casserole dish. (Ed. note: This salad looks especially pretty in glass dishes.) Spread 1 1/2 cups of mayonnaise on top of peas. Add 4 oz. or more of shredded cheddar cheese. Top with eight slices of crisp bacon (crumbled) or 1/2 jar of imitation bacon bits. Let sit several hours or overnight. Serve as is, or toss. You may add tomatoes just before serving.

Says Soviets will counter US missile

MOSCOW (AP) — Deploying the MX missile will tilt the strategic balance in favor of the United States and will be countered by new Soviet weaponry, a leading Soviet arms control specialist says.

The latest U.S. plans for an MX system have a "rather sinister" overtone because they intensify the nuclear arms competition, Oleg Bykov said.

Instead of new weapons systems, he said, the United States and Soviet Union should "devise ways of stopping the arms race and then reducing ... strategic levels."

The MX plans are "out of step with what is perceived to be the urgent need for a freeze and reduction."

Bykov, acting director of the Institute of World Economy and International Relations, was interviewed Tuesday by The Associated Press, a day after a special U.S. commission made its recommendations to President Reagan on a basing system for the new missiles.

The Russian academic stressed he was not speaking for the Soviet leadership. But his views generally have reflected those of the Kremlin.

"Of course, it takes two to make an arms race," he said. "And the Soviet leadership has put it in so many words: We will respond."

The interview, conducted in Bykov's 17th-floor suite at the institute's office tower in southern Moscow, ranged over various aspects of the arms race, including Reagan's call for an advanced anti-missile defense system, which Bykov described as "highly destabilizing."

The MX, which could be deployed in the mid-1990s, is a highly accurate, powerful new missile that will carry up to 10 nuclear warheads. The most advanced U.S. land-based missile currently in use, the Minuteman III, carries three warheads.

The commission recommended that the United States build and deploy 100 MXs in existing Minuteman missile silos in the American Midwest.

The commission also called for development of a smaller, single-warhead missile for deployment in the 1990s.

Reagan is expected to endorse the MX report next week. It comes at a time when U.S.-Soviet negotiations on limiting or reducing long- and medium-range missiles appear deadlocked.

The Soviets are known to be testing a new, solid-fueled intercontinental ballistic missile that presumably would replace some of their current liquid-fueled arsenal. Missiles using liquid propellant are considered less reliable.

Bykov refused to discuss technical aspects of the new missile.

House panel seeks ban on secret CIA-war

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel, upset with reported CIA backing for rebels trying to oust the leftist Nicaraguan government, wants to ban all U.S. support for military actions inside or against Nicaragua.

On a party-line voice vote, the Democratic-controlled House Foreign Affairs Western Hemisphere subcommittee approved the ban Tuesday and sent it on for consideration by the full committee.

The subcommittee also voted to require that the government of El Salvador agree to a dialogue with leftist insurgents and dramatically improve its human rights record to qualify for continued U.S. military aid.

And it voted stringent limits on aid to El Salvador and Honduras and a ban on military aid to the military government of Guatemala. In separate actions, the panel also voted to limit U.S. military aid to El Salvador to $50 million in each of the next two years and kill President Reagan's request for $50 million in additional military aid this year.

The vote on Nicaragua came despite new assurances from the Reagan administration that the CIA is not trying to overthrow the Nicaraguan government and thus is complying with existing congressional restrictions on CIA actions against Nicaragua.

But faced with public statements by the rebels that they have received U.S. aid and that their goal is to overthrow the Sandinistas, many members of Congress remain unconvinced.

"What has precipitated this (proposed) amendment is the conviction that the administration is end-running the existing law," said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y.

Following stepped-up rebel attacks inside Nicaragua last month, several members of the House and Senate intelligence committees said the CIA might be violating a law passed late last year prohibiting covert U.S. military aid "for the purpose" of toppling the Sandinista government.

The new, more tightly worded proposal is sponsored by the panel's chairman, Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., and is reminiscent of the 1976 Clark amendment that prohibited covert CIA actions against the leftist government of Angola. That law is named after its sponsor, former Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa.

The Barnes proposal would prohibit the United States from providing "any assistance of any kind ... for the purpose or which would have the effect of supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in or against Nicaragua by any nation, group, organization, movement or individuals" unless the president determines that it is in U.S. security interests and Congress agrees.

Arafat says Mideast peace talks will continue

By The Associated Press

PLO chief Yasser Arafat says negotiations between his guerrilla movement and Jordan's King Hussein will continue, Swedish radio reported today, while Arab sources in Morocco said President Reagan is drafting a new Middle East peace plan.

In another development, the Israelis said Tuesday they would expand Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, a move likely to anger U.S. and Middle East leaders who suggested a freeze on settlements might improve prospects for peace talks.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, at a Washington news conference, indicated the United States would not make any bold attempt to revive the Reagan plan, and he blamed the PLO for frustrating the American initiative. Reagan's proposal called for an autonomous Palestinian homeland in association with Jordan, but Hussein on Sunday called off talks with the PLO that could have led to his active participation in the plan.

The Swedish radio report said Arafat, who arrived in Stockholm Tuesday night, told Social Democratic leaders he was optimistic about resuming negotiations with Jordan.

The report quoted Arafat's spokesman, Abdul Rahman, as saying the talks will continue in Rabat, Morocco, starting Monday and that Arafat has dispatched PLO emissaries to Hussein and Morocco's King Hassan II in preparation for them.

Rahman reportedly refused comment on Hussein's statement that negotiations were over.

The Bahrain-based Gulf

News Agency, quoting Arab sources in Morocco, said Reagan planned to announce a new peace initiative before an Arab summit temporarily set for April 25 in Fez, Morocco.

However, Algeria's official newspaper, El Mujahid, said the breakdown in talks between Jordan and the PLO on Sunday made the summit unlikely.

There was no comment from U.S. officials about the report on a new initiative.

In Washington, Shultz blamed the PLO for the latest setbacks to the Reagan plan, which envisioned limited Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan. The U.S. administration hoped Jordan would negotiate on behalf of the guerrilla organization.

Shultz said the next move was up to the Arab countries and he suggested they should withdraw the mandate they had given the PLO in 1974 to act as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

"The PLO clearly has been the party that has, at least temporarily, frustrated what is a most promising opportunity for peace with justice and security in the Middle East," Shultz said.

Ben-Zion Rubin, the Israeli deputy minister for Labor and Social Affairs, announced in Tel Aviv that his government will expand 68 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip over the next 18 months to increase the Jewish population from 30,000 to 50,000.

Both territories, seized by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, currently are populated by 1.3 million Arabs.

Try to involve yourself in ventures this coming year where you can use your ideas. In situations where you're free to think your own thoughts you are apt to be more successful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have a pretty good eye for bargains today, so be on the alert. You might find something you've wanted, at a savings. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed in your Aries predictions for the year ahead. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic combinations and compatibilities for all signs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be more productive today trying to advance your personal interests, rather than spending time half-heartedly pushing others along.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Companions sense you can be trusted with keeping secrets. Today, they're apt to tell you things about which they wouldn't talk to others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Small talk will be more pleasing to your ear today than weighty conversations. Seek pals who don't take life too seriously.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Weigh your words carefully today so that what you say will leave the type of impression you desire.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Start planning ahead carefully at this time so that you can extend your present efforts comfortably into your future hopes and objectives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your abilities to research, probe or detect are exceptionally keen today. This is a good time to root out information that's been eluding you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If the suggestions offered today by your mate or partner regarding a joint interest are better than yours, don't be too proud to admit it.

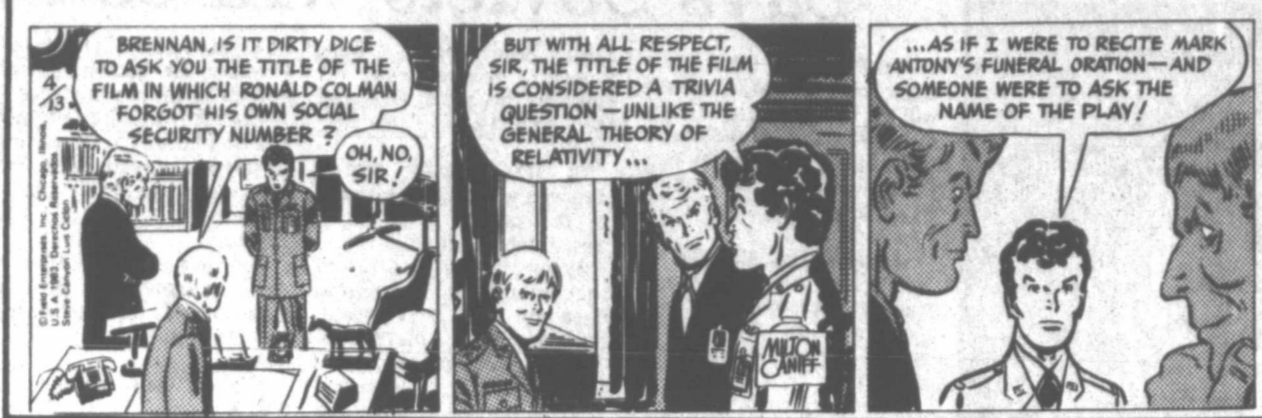

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your productivity and efficiency will be considerably enhanced today if you make a detailed list of what you hope to accomplish, then follow it to the letter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Seek pleasurable outlets today, but make sure they are mentally relaxing. Stay away from games you sometimes take too seriously.

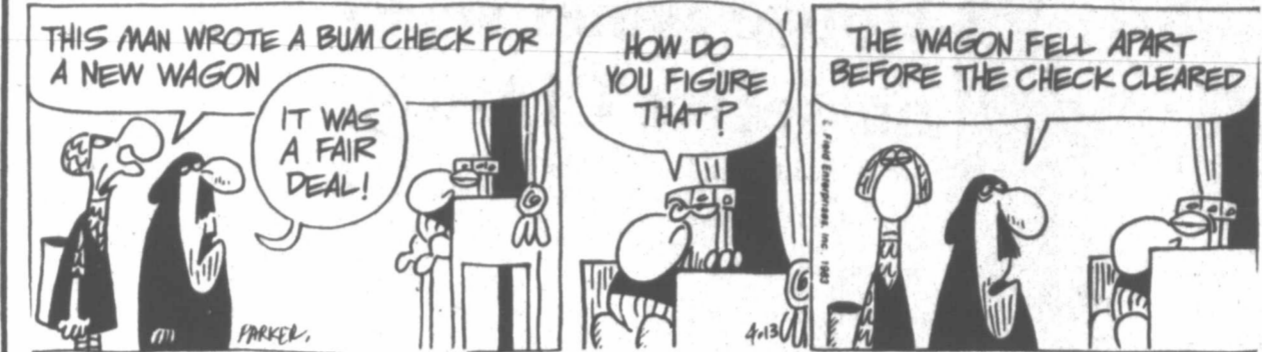

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Put your two cents' worth in today regarding domestic issues about which you feel strongly. Your input could help get everyone on the right track.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Take time today to clear up your paperwork and put your accounts in order. If you let things accumulate, they'll become even less appealing chores.

RBI Single

Pampa junior Garland Allen starts Pampa off on a five-run spree in the second inning with this single into centerfield, scoring a run. The Harvesters went on to notch a 9-6 win over Levelland Tuesday afternoon in District 1-4A baseball action. The win evaded Pampa's district record at 3-3. (Staff Photo)

Pampa topples Levelland with 3-run sixth inning

Randy Skaggs came out of the bullpen to perform some preventative maintenance against Levelland Tuesday afternoon.

Skaggs, a senior righthander, prevented the Lobos from scoring any more runs and then used his bat to help the Harvesters to a 9-6 District 1-4A win at the PHS field.

Skaggs was called upon in the fifth inning after Rick Bailey's two-run homer off Bryan Bowen knotted the score at 6-all. Skaggs held the Lobos hitless for the next two and two-thirds innings while striking out three and walking one. His two-rbi single in the sixth inning broke the deadlock and then teammate Tobi Rithaler followed with a run-scoring single to give the Harvesters a three-run advantage.

After giving up a leadoff walk in the top of the seventh, Skaggs (1-0) retired the next four hitters, striking out the last two to end the game.

Pampa evened its loop mark at 3-3 while overall the Harvesters are 6-8. Levelland drops to 2-4 and 7-10.

Levelland was leading, 3-1, when Pampa erupted for five runs in the second inning. Garland Allen, Ricky Baird and Bowen had consecutive hits, accounting for three runs. Two more runs crossed the plate on a passed ball and an infield error.

Levelland added another run in the third to make it 6-3 and then Bailey sent Bowen's first pitch over the right field fence to tie the score in the fifth.

NL roundup Cards stop Pittsburgh streak

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates' road show was a huge success. It was their home opener that was a bummer.

Montreal's home debut, on the other hand, was a delight for the Chicago Cubs, while the Atlanta Braves continued one streak while stopping another.

After reeling off five straight victories on the road, the Pirates returned home Tuesday where they fell 4-3 in 10 innings to the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I'll take five out of six all season long and like our chances," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

While Pittsburgh was losing its first game, the Cubs were tasting victory for the first time this season, blanking Montreal 5-0.

"I read an article in the paper that the trout season was just around the corner. Maybe they're right," said Cubs pitcher Steve Trout, who scattered nine hits before needing ninth-inning relief help. "I think the team needed this win more than I did."

In Atlanta, the Braves stretched their winning streak to six games and ended Cincinnati's streak at four with a 4-1 triumph.

Other National League contests Tuesday saw

Philadelphia edge the New York Mets 4-3 in 10 innings. San Francisco beat San Diego 6-5 and Los Angeles top Houston 3-1.

The Cardinals broke a 3-3 tie in the top of the 10th, then had to stave off a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the bottom of the inning.

"If you had taken odds on that at Las Vegas, you would have gotten tremendous odds," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of Bill Madlock's grounding into a pitcher-to-home-to-first double play. Gene Tenace then lined out to end the game.

"I've been playing a long time, and something like that hasn't happened very often," said Cards reliever Eric Rasmussen, who threw the double-play ball in earning his first save.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead on Brian Harper's sacrifice fly in the second inning and his solo home run in the fifth. But St. Louis tied the score in the sixth after two were out, then took a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Lonnie Smith's RBI single.

Mike Easler singled and scored the tying run for the Pirates in the eighth on a grounder by Madlock before Keith Hernandez doubled to lead off the 10th and come around to score on two fly balls to center. Cubs 5, Expos 0.

Keith Moreland cracked a three-run homer in the first inning as Chicago posted its first triumph of the season.

The Cubs, winless in their first six starts, jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning, then boosted their margin to 5-0 in the third when Leon Durham hit a solo homer.

Braves 4, Reds 1

Rick Behenna, making his major league debut, hurled a two-hitter for five innings and singled his first two trips to the plate to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati.

"I think I overdid it a little," Behenna said, referring to his not being able to go the distance.

Playground vandalism reported at schools

Playground vandalism at Pampa elementary schools may result in abolishing certain activities, such as shooting baskets, according to coach Deck Woldt.

"There's four basketball goals at Horace Mann that have been bent down toward the ground so you can't shoot a basket," Woldt said. "We're having this problem at all the elementary schools and even at the middle school."

Woldt said the goals at Horace Mann would probably be taken down and stored away until the vandalism stops.

"We'll probably keep the backboards up and the kids can use them as a rebounding board," Woldt added.

Signups continue

Registration for Little League Baseball and Girls' Little League Softball in Pampa continues today from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the Optimist Club.

Anyone reaching the age of nine by Aug. 1 this year is eligible. The sign-up continues Thursday at the same time.

At the conclusion of the registration period, each youngster will be placed on a team.

Shockers down Dumas

Jimmy Bridges hurled a three-hitter and also hit a triple as Pampa walloped Dumas, 17-4, Monday in a junior varsity game.

Juan Soto also banged a three-bagger for the Shockers. Other hitting stars were Eric Quarles and Ricky Poole.

The Shockers are 3-1 for the season.

Lefors buries Higgins

LEFORS—Lefors rolled over Higgins, 25-2, Tuesday in area high school baseball action.

Cody Allison pitched a one-hitter for the Pirates while rapping two doubles and two singles.

Donnie Wingert banged out four hits, Bo Lake had two doubles and a single and Russell Taylor a double.

Preston West added a solo homer.

"We really had a good day," Lefors coach Ricky Palmer said. "The team is really starting to come around."

Lefors travels to Tascosa on Saturday to play their junior varsity team at 4 p.m. The Pirates then play Dumas JV Monday afternoon.

Lefors won't open district play until April 26, hosting Kelton in a 1:30 p.m. doubleheader. All district games will be played at Lefors.

Lefors has a 1-3 record so far in its first season of fielding a baseball team.

State promoting tourism by 'de-Texification' tactics

AUSTIN (AP) — Of course Texans know that not every resident of the Lone Star State eats chili. Or acts like J.R. Or wears boots. Or even remembers the Alamo.

But New Yorkers and Californians are less savvy. So the state is setting them straight through a high-priced advertising campaign to lure them and their dollars away from their subways and hot tubs. Full-page ads debunking Texas traits and promoting Texas tourism have been placed in the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times.

"Our studies show that Americans still think of Texas as a John Wayne movie set — cactus, cattle and cowboys," said Frank Hildebrand, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency. "We're not saying we're not Western — we're very proud of that. At the same time, we're trying to convey that Texas is far more than the stereotype."

Such "de-Texification" may smack of heresy, but Hildebrand said the approach seems to work.

In 1963, when the Legislature created the tourist agency, the state ranked 23rd in the nation in the visitor trade. Today it ranks third, just behind California and Florida. Agency studies estimate that visitors spend $12.5 billion in Texas each year, about $400 million of which goes into state and local tax coffers. That's $2.5 billion more than the revenue generated by Texas agriculture.

"No state has come on so strong (in tourism) so rapidly as Texas," said Hildebrand, who had headed the agency since its inception. "I think the state is realizing that old standbys (of income) are weakening and it has to incorporate new sources of wealth."

Hildebrand thinks the state can do even better. His agency is paying almost $1.3 million this fiscal year to tout Texas in such diverse publications as Reader's Digest, Bon Appetit and the London Sunday Times.

The ads were developed by Neal Speice Communications of Austin. Many of the ads use a point-counterpoint approach, displaying two color photographs side by side.

One ad carries the heading "Haute Cuisine" over a picture of four unsmiling fellows presiding over an array of gourmet delights in Dallas' opulent Adolphus Hotel. The other picture was shot in the rustic Kreuz Market in Lockhart. Four beaming pit masters display ribs, beef, pork and sausages under the heading "Hot Cuisine."

Another ad contrasts an "Old West" photograph of cowboys in Palo Duro Canyon with the ultramodern "New South" skyline of Houston. And an "Old Missions" picture of the Mission Espiritu Santo in Goliad is juxtaposed with a "New Missions" photograph of the Johnson Space Center near Houston.

The bureaucrats of Austin's Congress Avenue and the pitchmen of New York's Madison Avenue are relatively new acquaintances. As recently as 1958, no state funds could be used to promote the tourist trade. A "carpetbagger clause" in the 1876 state constitution barred the use of state money to attract immigrants to Texas, and subsequent court rulings defined tourists as immigrants. It took a constitutional amendment in 1958 to put Texas into the business of selling itself.

The 35 million people who visited Texas last year are as difficult to stereotype as the natives. About 8.3 million of the came on business trips.

The state drew 3 million foreign visitors, mostly from Mexico, Canada, England, West Germany and Australia, in that order. Hildebrand said the peso devaluation has virtually killed the Mexican market, and predicted that Canada will leap into top place next year.

The domestic trade hails mostly from, in order, California, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New York.
