By SHERRILL McLEARAN
Correspondent

PERRYTON (Spc) — Citizens' petitions calling for the "immediate resignations of both the city manager and chief of police" will be presented to the Perryton City Council at its meeting tonight.

The citizens, angered about the recent firing of an 18-year veteran of the Perryton police force, are calling for the heads of City Manager J.B. Whigham and Police Chief Joe Hannon.

The citizens' group also complains about pending lawsuits against the city charging police brutality and false imprisonment and for damages resulting from explosions on the city-owned gas system.

The signatures asking for Whigham and Hannon's ousters will be turned over to the city council by Troy Barkley, chairman of the "Quo Warranto" committee, and resident Fred Herman.

Hannon fired Perryton patrolman Charles Sharp, 56, on April 5. The petitions asking for Hannon's badge began circulating the next day.

Hannon fired the 18-year veteran about three years from his retirement for alleged violations of city personnel policies. The chapter and verse cited by Hannon in firing Sharp allege "incompetence or repeated neglect of duty."

Sharp said his dismissal dropped like a bomb with no prior warning.

The fired patrolman has never been certified as a peace officer through approved schools. According to Hannon, Sharp was one of just 18 peace officers in the state who were certified under "grandfather laws." He said Sharp was working as a police officer before the state required approved classroom certification.

Theater owner asks city for harassment law

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

Theater owner Ed Nall Monday night asked his city council to pass a "harassment ordinance" to counter Wheeler preacher Ricky Pfeil's protests against "R"-rated movies Nall shows at the Rogue Theater in Wheeler.

Nall asked the city council to pass a law restricting "dancing or otherwise blocking the use of the public sidewalk, auto honking, chanting, singing, talking or otherwise loud distracting noises which penetrate the business establishments." His suggested harassment ordinance would also limit demonstrations in Wheeler, a town of about 1,100 people, to four people at one time and require a permit 72 hours in advance of demonstrations or picketing.

"We can't put those restrictions on public property," Councilman Joe Montgomery told Nall.

"Our attorney advised us we are better off to stay out of this. We represent everybody in this town. He told us this is strictly hands off, not to take any personal or collective position on this. If we do it for you, we have to do it for your opponents," council member Bernice Hall added.

After Nall's request, member Kirven Roper said, "My motion is we make no statement about anyone or anything where litigation is pending."

The motion carried, and the council also decided to omit from its minutes the meeting with Nall.

"How about putting that in the minutes?" Nall asked.

"I don't see anything here to put in the minutes," Roper said.

"It's the general opinion we don't see any reason to publish it, to put it in the minute book," Mayor Louis Stas, publisher of the Wheeler Times, said.

Nall has filed a $500,000 lawsuit against the Rev. Pfeil and his Wheeler church, the Wheeler Christian Center. Nall claims that for about the past two years, Pfeil and his followers' protests against the Rogue's restricted movies have libeled him, harassed him and ruined his business.

No trial date has been set for the damage suit, but after a hearing last year, Wheeler Judge Grainger McIlhany granted a temporary injunction against Pfeil and ordered the preacher to stay away from Nall until the case is tried.

Pfeil was unavailable for comment this morning, and the preacher has previously declined interviews with reporters from The Pampa News. "He's working at the radio station until noon," a spokesman for Pfeil's church school said this morning.

Nall also complained to the Wheeler council Monday that Wheeler Sheriff Doyle Ramsey and his deputies refuse to answer calls to the Rogue. Nall has repeatedly called the sheriff about the protestors in front of the theater.

"I don't think a person needs protection from someone making faces," councilman David Cross said.

"That's between you and the sheriff," Roper said.

"You people pay him," Nall replied.

"We pay the county for protection, or subsidize it, whatever you want to call it. We don't pay the sheriff," Mayor Stas said.

Nall said wires in his car have been cut in front of the Rogue, and he said prowlers were on the roof of the theater last Friday "at 2 o'clock in the morning."

Nall gave members two registered letters complaining about no law enforcement, which he previously mailed to Stas. Nall asked the council members why they did not reply to his letters.

Stas said he didn't send the letters to other members of the council. He said he gave the letters to the town's lawyer. "If that's wrong, I'm sorry," the mayor said.

"Our lawyer told us there was no reason to answer them," Stas added.

After Nall's complaints about the sheriff's office, Roper said, "You need to talk to the sheriff."

"You need to see if you can come to some sort of meeting of the minds and make an appointment with the sheriff," Hall said.

The Wheeler businessman took the advice and met with Sheriff Ramsey from about 10 to 11:30 p.m. Monday. After the meeting, the theater owner said there was a misunderstanding about calls for help at the Rogue.

"The meeting was very productive. Sheriff Ramsey assured me I have 24-hour protection. He said anytime I call for assistance that he or one of his deputies would be there regardless of the nature of the call," Nall said this morning.

He said there would have been no misunderstanding with Ramsey if Stas "had not withheld my request from the entire city council."

"You don't do city business from the back shop of the newspaper," Nall said.

Beirut Embassy still yields bodies

By EARLEEN F. TATRO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Marine guards raised a single American flag at sunrise today in front of the devastated U.S. Embassy, where officials said an apparent suicide bombing left 19 people dead and 28 others missing and presumed dead.

Embassy spokesman John Reid said the latest casualty count was eight Americans confirmed dead and eight others missing. Ten Lebanese embassy employees were killed, with 20 others believed buried in the huge mounds of rubble, he said, adding that one other person of unknown nationality also was listed as dead.

Police said Monday's blast wounded 120 people, including 22 Americans, ripping open the seven-story embassy's concrete front.

U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon, who escaped serious injury, said it was "very unlikely" any more survivors would be found.

Soldiers and other search squads used a steamshovel and two backhoes to tear apart the debris, piling large chunks of masonry in a heap that already contained several tons of concrete.

Near the building, a U.S. flag fluttered on a flagpole undamaged.

"The embassy Marines put it up at sunrise," said Col. James M. Mead, commander of the U.S. Marine contingent in Lebanon.

Lebanese soldiers raided the Palestinian refugee camp of Sabra and the nearby Tarik Jedida neighborhood today and made an undisclosed number of arrests in connection with the bombing, the privately owned "Voice of Lebanon" radio said without elaborating.

Child molester given probation

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

A Vernon man who pleaded guilty to a charge of indecency with a child was placed on ten years probation and fined $1,000 by 31st District Judge Grainger W. McIlhany Monday.

Johnny Sierman, who was living in Lefors at the time of the incident in May 1982, pleaded guilty to the charge that he touched a six-year-old girl in a sexual way.

At his arraignment in March, Sierman told McIlhany he had voluntarily committed himself to the Vernon Center after the incident and is currently living in Vernon with a counselor from the Center. But when asked as part of the arraignment process what his address was, he gave a Lefors address.

Ricky Earl Mullins, 19, who was charged with three local burglaries, was also placed on ten years probation and fined $1,500. In his testimony before McIlhany, Mullins admitted to breaking into Sexton's Grocery on East Francis and stealing a carton of cigarettes and some lighters on February 9, 1983.

Mullins also admitted to breaking into the Lovett Memorial Library and Tom Rose Motor Company on March 3, 1983. In the course of his testimony, he also admitted to a fourth felony, the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. This felony was committed during the Rose car dealership burglary, in which he took the keys to a Chevrolet and drove it around Pampa, he said.

He hocked a movie projector and cassette tape recorder he took from the library, he said, but the library got its equipment back undamaged. McIlhany also ordered Mullins to make restitution to the victims of his burglaries, including the pawn shop owner who gave him money for the library's equipment.

Mullins said he plans to return to work for his former boss at a local construction company, and will live at 1221 E. Francis.

Randy Howard Love, 21, of Mexico, Mo., was sentenced to seven years probation and fined $750 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawful delivery of marijuana. Love was charged with selling marijuana to Pampa Police officer Terry Cox in September 1982.

Love will be allowed to return to Mexico, Mo., where he lived before moving to Pampa in 1982, and his probation will be based there. He told McIlhany he had a job waiting and a place to live waiting for him in Missouri. Love had been held in the Gray County Jail after he had been placed on bond and left Pampa. He was arrested March 2 in Mexico, Mo. and transferred to the Gray County Jail following his arrest.

Meza murder trial postponed

By LORI-ANN D'ANTONIO
Staff Writer

The trial of 23-year-old Jaime Moriel Meza, who is charged with the murder of Jose Carlos Soto on August 14, 1982, was postponed in 31st District Court Monday because his lawyer, David Martindale, requested a continuance, according to District Attorney Guy Hardin, the prosecutor in the case.

Meza is charged with the shooting death of Soto during a dance at the Tex S Rose Lounge on Brown Street last August. He pleaded not guilty at the time of his indictment.

The results of an autopsy on Soto showed he had been shot five times with a .22 caliber rifle. He was reportedly playing pool in the bar when he was shot. Meza, who was living in Pampa at the time of the shooting, was arrested in El Paso, where authorities believed he might flee to his native Mexico. He was arraigned on the murder charge before Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge on September 27, and was denied bond. He has been confined in the Gray County Jail since September, and no new trial date has been set.

Also postponed was the trial of James F. Bichsel, 47, of Pampa, who is charged with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated assault, after he reportedly abducted his estranged wife Nadine Bennett on February 13. At his arraignment March 24, Bichsel waived his right to arraignment and to a speedy trial through his lawyer, James M. Bowers of Pampa. Bowers said this morning he asked for the continuance because he is not ready for trial as yet.

The trial of Robert Gayle Gulley, who is charged with conspiracy to commit arson was also postponed. Gulley is charged with paying a Pampa police officer to set fire to his ex-wife's house at 1200 E. Browning. His attorney, Rick J. Harris, could not be reached for comment this morning.

Also postponed were the trials of Willie Arthur Broadnax on a charge of malicious mischief, Ray A. Montgomery on a charge of aggravated assault, and Jack Mize, who is charged with two counts of burglary. Bowers, who is Mize's attorney, said he was not ready for trial on Mize's case either.

The trial of Leslie Derle Mize on two counts of burglary was postponed, as was the trial of Valerie Buster on a charge of unlawful delivery of marijuana. A trial on charges of unlawful delivery of marijuana against Dale Addison Wall was also postponed.

Included in the trials postponed were the trials of Forrest Britt and Jimmy Ray Maxwell, who are both charged with burglary of a habitation.

Jimmy Lee Phillips, who is charged with one count of burglary, will also not be tried this week. Phillips is currently in the Gray County Jail after being arrested and charged with an additional burglary while out on bond for the original charge.

The trials of Emmett Dewayne Beasley, who is charged with burglary, Ray Martinez, who is charged with a subsequent offense of driving while intoxicated, and Donald Ray Hill, who is charged with burglary of a habitation, were also postponed.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of Larry Dale Brack for failure to appear on a charge of theft by check-property, and his $5,000 bond was forfeit.

Job Hunter

Brent Bradford, 20, didn't waste any time looking for a new job. He was dismissed from his laborer's job last week, and later the same day he drove all over the Panhandle asking for work and came by the newspaper office as a job hunter.

Bradford was born and reared in Pampa and attended PHS. He quit school to work in the oilfield at age 18, but later received his GED.

Bradford started on an oil rig working lead tongs and later worked his way up to working motors, he said.

He put in about a year with Moran Bros. After completing a well, he was laid off from that job. Now rigs everywhere are stacked, and jobs are buried, he said.

His last job was with Midwest Steel in Borger. He was working as a laborer dismantling plants.

Bradford, who is single, said he also has experience with grouting, concrete work, carpentry and construction.

"I will relocate anywhere in the world," he said.

The job hunter said he wants to continue working in the oil patch, but "I'll take anything that comes along."

He said he is interested in welding and electronics and wants to train for a job in those areas.

"I've been looking today. I stop by a few rigs and pipeline companies but they wouldn't even take application," he said. To interview Brent Bradford, 665-7545.

You get the line and I'll get the pole and we'll go racing...

By RICHARD STEWART
The Houston Chronicle

BRIDGE CITY, Texas (AP) - The sleek racing steeds are at the starting gates, the racing commissioner holds up his arm and the noisy crowd quiets down.

The commissioner starts the race with words familiar to all racing fans: "Hot boudin and cold couscous, come on, crawfish, push, push, push."

Eight crawfish head for the center of the race track in a dash that brings cheers from the crowd. Some crawfish walk forward, some go backward. Some go in circles and some just sort of sit there as if they were trying to figure out what's going on.

What's going on is crawfish racing, a not-always-serious sport that's a regular feature of dozens of festivals and Cajun gatherings in Southwest Louisiana and Southeast Texas.

Crawfish are humble crustaceans that inhabit swamps, ditches and a growing number of ponds that used to be rice fields in Texas and Louisiana.

Crawfish, sometimes affectionately called mud bugs and sometimes even called crayfish by Yankees and other unfortunates who have not yet been exposed to Cajun culture, are not often known for their speed.

They are, however, much cheaper to raise than thoroughbred horses and as Texas Racing Commissioner A.J. Justice points out, "You can always eat the losers."

Justice has long been involved in a campaign to promote Cajun culture in Texas. That campaign required frequent trips to festivals and fais-do-dos in Louisiana. In 1959 Justice made a fateful trip to Breax Bridge, La., for that city's 100th anniversary celebration. That celebration grew into one of the country's most famous festivals.

It was there that Justice first saw crawfish races. He vowed to return to Breax Bridge with a racing crawfish of his own.

In 1963 Justice's crawfish Tante La-La won the world's championship crawfish race at Breax Bridge. The race was held at 8:30 on a morning after a night of partying and Justice and Tante La-La were the only ones who showed up for the race, but Justice insists that Tante La-La would have won even if she had competition.

That was when Justice met Jim Braud, 59, the owner of a photo store in Port Neches. The two decided to import crawfish racing to Texas. They were soon joined by Buddy Porter, 57, who operates a floor covering business down the street from Braud's store.

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe once appointed the trio the official crawfish racing commissioners of Texas. Nobody ever appointed any other commissioners or took away their commission, so the three men still consider themselves commissioners and say no crawfish race in Texas is official unless they are there to oversee it.

Crawfish racing in Texas is clean, Justice says. In Louisiana trainers sometimes put hot sauce on their steeds to speed them up, or tempt them to run faster with a promise of boudin, he says.

A significant change in crawfish race tracks surfaced early this year. A recent crawfish festival in Bridge City featured tracks in which the crawfish started on the outside of the track and waddled to the middle.

Always before the crawfish had been set loose in the middle of the track and the first one to reach the outside won.

The new track has made for faster races, Justice says. Before, some smart crawfish would see the smiling Cajuns around the sides of the track and would hesitate to head in their direction. Now the crawfish follow their natural instinct to flee hungry Cajuns.

The racing commissioners have conducted crawfish races at festivals all over Southeast Texas, at the Texas Folklife Festival in San Antonio and even during a seventh-inning stretch at a Houston Astros baseball game.

Braud recently conducted a series of crawfish races at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

Texas soldiers among Beirut blast victims

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) - The massive explosion at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon counted two soldiers from this Central Texas base among its victims, an official says.

The soldiers were mechanics who left Texas March 7 as part of an armored personnel carrier mobile training team, Maj. Tony Geishauser said.

He identified the victims of Monday's blast as Sgt. 1st Class Richard Twine, 36, of Salop, England; and Staff Sgt. Ben Maxwell, 26, of Appomattox, Va.

The soldiers, assigned to the 602nd Maintenance Company (Direct Support) of the 13th Support Command, were on temporary duty that was to have lasted about two months, the spokesman said.

Texas PUC to hold some GTE hearings in local communities

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) - The Public Utility Commission, criticized for never leaving Austin to hear utility customer complaints, will hold out-of-town hearings in General Telephone Co.'s $65.5 million rate hike request, according to PUC Chairman Al Erwin.

"There is some value in letting people complain even if it's just a general gripe session," Erwin said Monday. He called local hearings "a very good idea."

The cities of Garland, Irving and Plano have asked PUC to set up a hearing in the Dallas area. Erwin said the request probably would be granted at an April 27 commission meeting.

The commission has never conducted hearings outside of Austin. Erwin acknowledged the panel has been criticized as "remote and isolated."

Buddy Langley, GTE president, doubted the value of local hearings.

"We don't think it would accomplish anything we don't already know," he said.

In addition to a Dallas-area hearing, Erwin said the commission might set up a Houston-area hearing in the GTE area. The local hearings will be conducted by hearing examiners, but some commissioners might attend, he said.

At Monday's opening day of the rate hearing, Langley stated as GTE customers complained about service. A Crosby realtor said GTE's service has been a "nightmare."

Carol Foster said her days start with a "ritual" of dialing and redialing in order to make calls.

"I do not think this company should get a rate increase of any sort," she told Hearing Examiner Angela Williams.

GTE wants to add as much as $4 to monthly residential bills in some areas served by the San Angelo-based company.

The PUC staff argues that only a $31.7 million increase is justified. Texas Municipal League lawyers say only $28 million is warranted.

Patricia Rauniker of Irving said GTE officials try to "lull people into a sense of it's OK tomorrow." Mrs. Rauniker announced her telephone number and told the hearing examiner "with luck you can get right through on the right day."

She said her neighbors shrug off their phone problems by saying, "Oh well, it's GTE."

Langley said many of the customer complaints come from "high growth areas," such as Houston and Dallas suburbs, which will have "some abnormal problems" until the company catches up with the growth.

"It's difficult for a utility company to win a popularity contest when they're asking to raise rates," he told a reporter.

Testimony prepared by Rowland Curry, PUC's assistant director of engineering, recommended no penalties against GTE for service problems. The company has been fined in the past for bad service.

GTE "has shown improvement in service during the past few years and has demonstrated its willingness to respond to special complaints" about service, Curry said in written testimony.

Reagan supports MXs in silos

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, abandoning his "dense-pack" plan for deploying MX missiles, is embracing new recommendations for putting the weapon in launch silos holding Minuteman missiles in Wyoming and Nebraska, according to administration sources.

Reagan was meeting with congressional leaders today to endorse the findings of a presidential commission, which called for installing 100 MX missiles in Minuteman silos and developing a new, single-warhead missile for deployment in the early 1990s.

"I don't look for any changes to the technical direction of the report," said an administration source. "I presume he's just going to endorse the report," said another official familiar with the commission's work.

Reagan was expected to bill the new basing package as a necessary ingredient for modernizing America's strategic forces and an important tool for putting pressure on the Soviet Union to negotiate for arms reductions.

In Reagan's view, the Soviets "seem to get the message from determination and strength, instead of conciliation, flexibility and pragmatism," said an administration official, declining to be identified.

Today's announcement starts the clock on a 45-day period that Congress set for itself to judge Reagan's MX basing decision. Congress already has put a freeze on money to produce the 10-warhead weapon pending congressional approval of a basing plan.

Grounded airline files new reorganization plan

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Braniff International, whose "Flying Colors" once crisscrossed three continents, will disappear into a small flight maintenance operation, if a way to resurrect the grounded carrier isn't found within four weeks, officials say.

Braniff filed a reorganization plan Monday that sets up the Dallas-based maintenance operation and leaves the door open for resumed air service.

But Braniff Chairman Howard Putnam said a proposal to put Braniff back in the air will have to come before May 16 and offer more than the latest of several takeover bids by the Hyatt Corp. hotel chain.

Braniff officials asked U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Flowers to give the airline until May 16 "to develop and to propose a viable flying operation."

"Our No. 1 priority is to get airplanes back in the air and people back to work again," Putnam said.

Under Braniff's proposal, which must be approved by Braniff's secured creditors, the revived airline would use up to 31 of Braniff's old Boeing 727 jets and would be based at DFW, Braniff's old hub, Putnam said.

Braniff officials spent the weekend studying a proposal by Hyatt to revive the company as a flying airline, a plan that could return 2,000 former Braniff employees to work.

Hyatt initially offered $10 million in a plan that called for creditors to provide $50 million in notes and the hotel company to get 80 percent control of Braniff. But the creditors vetoed that proposal, and Hyatt has since increased the offer $35 million, Guthrie said.

Braniff's unsecured creditors have only offered

Defendant's mentally ill mother to be witness

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — An attorney for a man accused of killing two people, one who unwittingly tape recorded his own death, says he plans to put his client's mentally ill stepmother on the witness stand.

Attorney James Mardis is attempting to prove 21-year-old farmer Paul Wolf was temporarily insane when Wolf bludgeoned his wife's former husband and his fiancée July 16, 1982.

Wolf is on trial in state district court for the slaying of Leticia Castro, 26, a fourth-grade teacher in Pharr.

He faces trial later for the slaying of construction foreman Billy Staton, who had intended to record the animosity displayed toward him by his ex-wife and Wolf, her new husband, over court orders giving him rights to visit his daughter, Melanie, by Mrs. Wolf.

Instead he recorded his own killing in a tape prosecutors call "23 minutes of murder." Mardis said Wolf was unable to cope with the stress that led to his sudden act of violence because Wolf was raised by a mentally ill stepmother and a hard-driving father who didn't display affection toward his children.

Wolf returned to the witness stand in his own behalf a third time Monday, but often slurred his words, hung his head and seemed confused.

State District Judge Darrell Hester called Wolf's demeanor "strikingly strange."

"Mr. Wolf, if you think you've got 12 fools for a jury you're going to be sadly surprised," Hester said after Wolf continued to disobey his orders to speak clearly Monday.

Wolf broke down several times during his testimony last week, but answered his attorney's questions lucidly.

Hester said Wolf was suddenly acting "crazy" Monday.

"Any 10th grader could see through the act," Hester told Wolf after he excused the jury Monday. "You're only hurting yourself."

Earlier in the day, Hester said he had to presume Wolf had taken drugs or alcohol and ordered him to remain in the Cameron County Jail until the trial is finished. He had been free on bonds totaling $100,000.

Wolf testified he hit Staton on the head with an iron bar, went outside where Miss Castro was waiting, and then he and friend Glenn Henderson each clubbed her with a hammer. Wolf said he and Henderson then dumped the bodies in separate Rio Grande Valley drainage canals.

Cameron County District Attorney Rey Cantu, however, alleged Staton's tape recording "doesn't lie" and shows that Miss Castro and Staton were ambushed.

Wolf has testified he and Henderson had planned to videotape the visit between Melanie and Staton to demonstrate how the 2½-year-old child reacted.

But Melanie began to cry when Staton came to pick her up and "I just lost control," Connie Ellis, Mrs. Wolf's brother John Ziegler of Corpus Christi and Mrs. Wolf's stepfather Leonard Pyle of La Feria, testified Monday that Melanie would scream and cling to her mother when Staton came to pick her up.

Brucellosis quarantine threatened

AUSTIN (AP) — Quick legislative action on new brucellosis control laws would guard Texas from a potential quarantine of its cattle by the federal government, state animal health officials say.

Texas Animal Health Commission Chairman John Armstrong circulated on Monday a letter from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the first threat of a quarantine that Texas officials have received in writing.

Two lawsuits have sidelined state testing for brucellosis, a contagious disease that causes cattle to miscarry or bear weak calves.

A federal brucellosis control program aimed at keeping potentially infected cows from spreading the disease requires states to test their cattle if they want them allowed to go to out-of-state markets.

"Unless the (Texas) commission is able to participate fully in the joint State-Federal Brucellosis Eradication Program, the risk with respect to the dissemination of brucellosis will require that this department quarantine the state of Texas," said the letter, written by James O. Lee, acting administrator of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service of USDA.

Dr. James Alexander, assistant executive director of the Texas Animal Health Commission, said USDA has not yet put a time limit on Texas, but said, "They (USDA) have indicated that if the lawsuits weren't settled they would be forced to quarantine us. They've been talking about it quite a while. Now we've got it in writing."

Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Godley, last week postponed until next Monday floor action on his bill to conform the state brucellosis control program to federal regulations.

Assistant Attorney General George Warner said passage of Gibson's bill, or similar legislation, would throw out the two lawsuits that precipitated the quarantine threat.

The first suit was filed in 1979 by Uvalde rancher R.J. Nunley. Nunley challenged brucellosis testing, arguing he could not afford to round up all the cattle on his 12-county range.

A district court judge agreed and granted Nunley a permanent injunction, exempting him from brucellosis testing of his cattle.

Nunley is partners with former Gov. Dolph Briscoe in a cattle venture. Gibson said he postponed his bill so he could talk to Briscoe to try to work out a compromise satisfactory to cattlemen who see Gibson's present bill as too economically burdensome on them.

Bill would replace 'lemon' cars

AUSTIN (AP) — Car buyers could get another car or partial refund if they got stuck with a "lemon" under a bill that has cleared the Texas Senate.

The Senate on Monday approved a measure that would let the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission order new car dealers and manufacturers to replace "lemon" vehicles or refund the purchase price.

An amendment specified that the customer also could collect the sales tax, registration and other fees associated with buying the vehicle.

However, a "reasonable allowance" for the number of miles the car had been driven could be subtracted from the refund, according to a printed bill analysis.

The standard for a "lemon" car would be one that was taken to the shop four times without being fixed or was out of service for 30 or more business days while the warranty was in effect.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown's bill was sent to the House on 29-0 vote.

Gee, thanks a lot, Lee...

Lee Iacocca, president of the Chrysler Corp., isn't doing free enterprise any favors these days as he travels north, south, east and west lobbying for a 25-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax.

Yes, Iacocca clearly understands the profit theory of capitalism, at least as it applies to Chrysler. He can logically see that artificially boosting the price of gasoline by levying higher taxes is good for his struggling company. Chrysler, after all, has just taken a $6 billion gamble on small, gas-efficient cars, and if gasoline prices drop much below $1, the American public might opt again for the bigger automobiles of yesteryear. That wouldn't be good for a major automaker spending billions to retool to take on the Japanese at their own game.

But as well as Iacocca understands profits, is it possible he grossly misunderstands the American consumer? Do you know of anyone (Iacocca and OPEC aside) who really wants gasoline prices at the $1.50 level again? Can you think of any U.S. automaker (Chrysler aside) which might stand to profit if gasoline prices begin to soar again?

Secondly, what gains have been attained by Chrysler if in the process of forcing higher taxes on the consumer, Iacocca becomes known as the man who helped make it all possible? Next time around, will the consumer buy a Chevy, Ford or Plymouth?

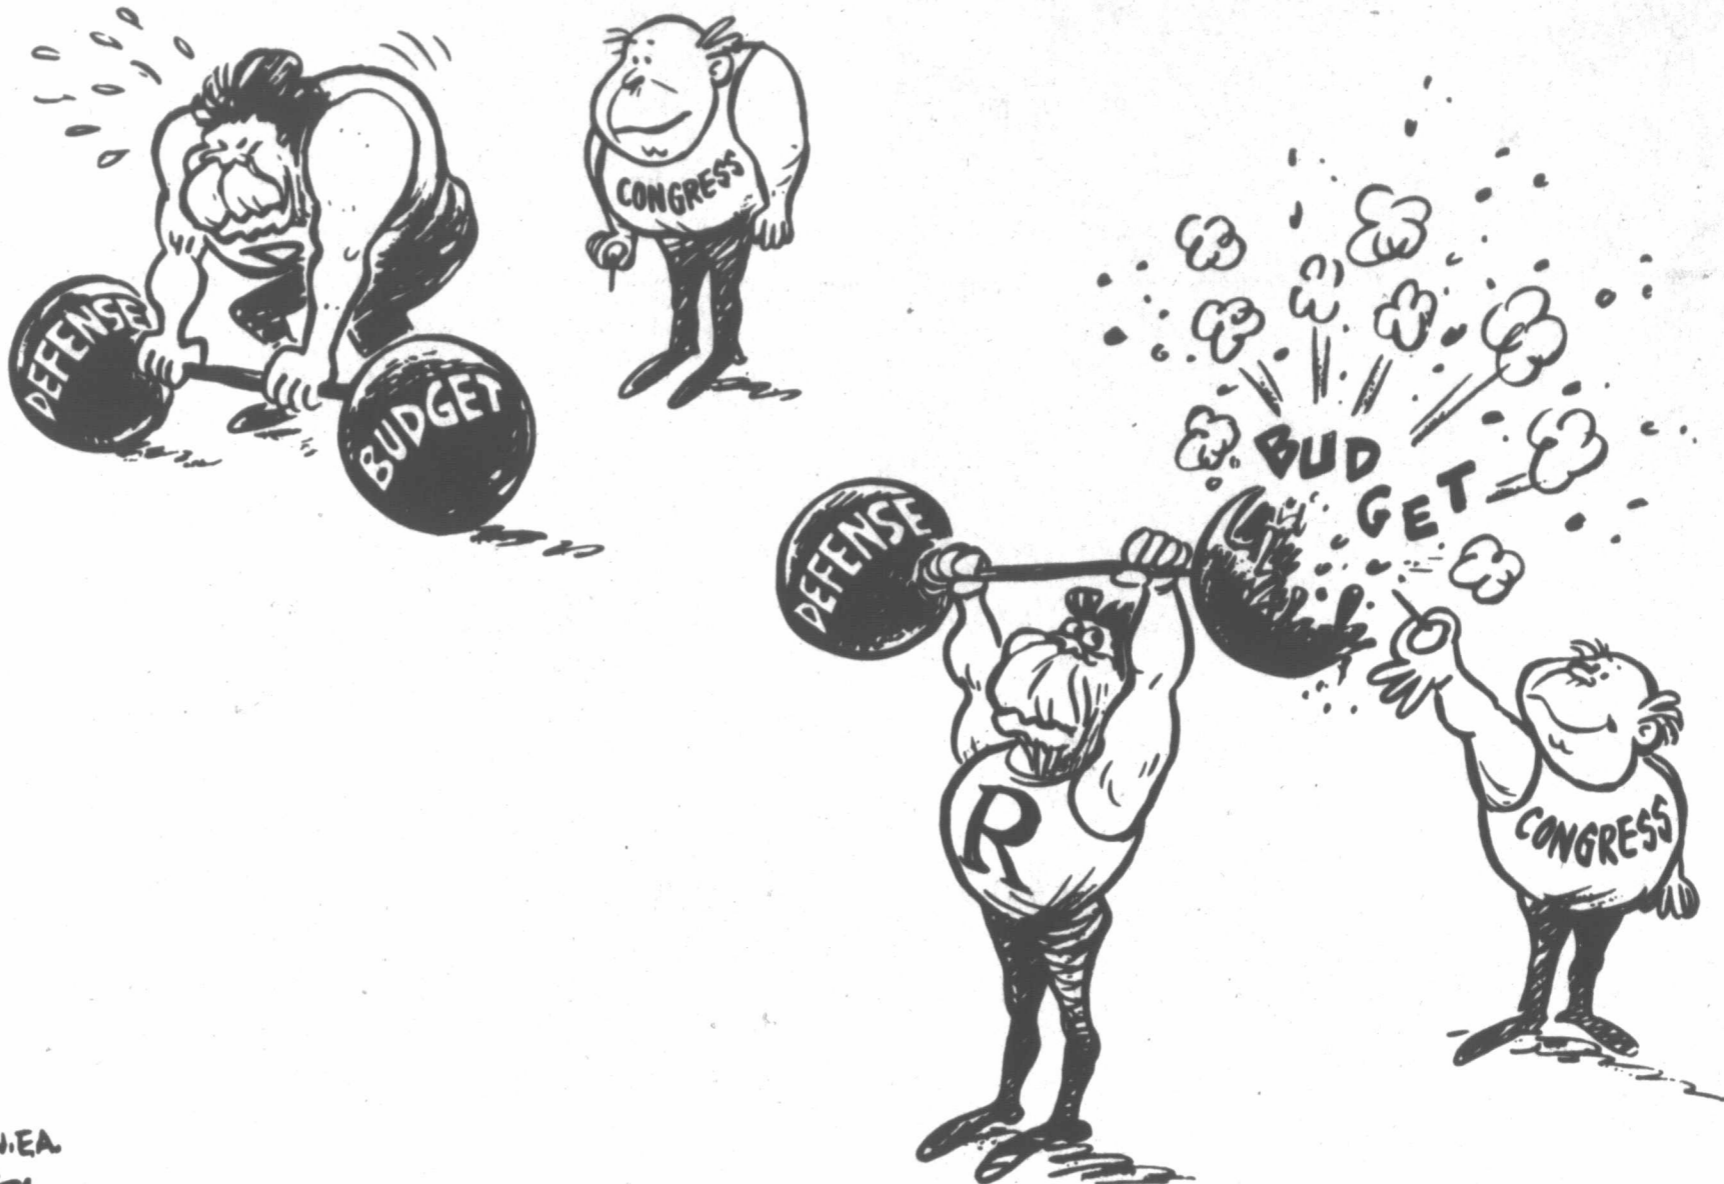

Meanwhile, we wonder if Iacocca even now understands the revolution in car-buying that began in the 1960s when U.S. consumers suddenly took a fancy to the Japanese and European imports. Certainly, high mileage played a part, but additionally the consumer liked the prospects of lower repair costs, the vaunted engineering reputation of the foreign carmakers, the greater maneuverability of the little cars, the Japanese and European advances in safety, and even the unusual (to American eyes) styling at a time when U.S. cars were all beginning to look alike.

In short, the price of gasoline wasn't the whole story in 1965 and it still isn't today, but still Iacocca pursues higher gasoline taxes.

In sum, what we're saying is, yes, we want Chrysler (and Ford, GM and American Motors, too) to survive, grow and be profitable. But if the profit can only be achieved by convincing the government that higher taxes are good for business, then capitalism's days are surely numbered.

Championing a tax increase for whatever noble purpose (and Iacocca can list a couple that don't involve Chrysler's profit picture) is a risky business. For instance, Iacocca sees the 25-cent tax as a means of reducing the federal deficit by $9 billion per year. But what if a group of congressmen takes the view that a $1,000-per-auto "manufacturing tax" might also reduce the deficit? Can pro-tax Iacocca logically mount a protest?

Considering that it was the American taxpayer who really bailed out Chrysler just a couple of years ago when the corporation's financial problems reached a climax, Iacocca has come up with an unusual form of thanks. We can't think of a single positive that might result from another round of gasoline tax increases.

Weather and want affect animals

By OSCAR COOLEY

One of these winters, a lot of Canada wild geese are going to get cold feet. Recent winters such as the last one being mild, they are refraining from flying as far south as usual. Thousands of them have got used to spending the winter in New York state, Illinois, and even southern Ontario.

In midwinter of 1970, aerial surveyors counted only a hundred or so on Lake Cayuga; ten years later there were 11,000, this past winter 23,000. Over the same period the number of geese wintering in North Carolina's Mattamuskeet refuge shrank from 130,000 to 14,000. The reduction has forced motels and hunting guides out of business.

It is not only a matter of climate but of corn. Development of new, short-season varieties has caused more corn to be planted in the north. The average acreage devoted to grain corn in Cayuga and Seneca counties, New York, doubled between 1975 and 1980. When corn is allowed to ripen in the field, always some ears are scattered on the ground. For the geese, this is a favorite dish.

When severely cold weather comes early, preventing the corn from ripening, the farmers put it in the silo, ears and all. Here it goes through a pickling process which prevents spoilage. It becomes corn silage, an excellent feed for cattle. In this case there is no dry corn for the geese to salvage, and so they take off for the south where food will be more plentiful.

The snow, it seems likely, has much to do with making birds go south in winter. In the north, it covers their natural food and they sense that such concealment will be less likely in the south.

Man worries about various species of wild creatures becoming extinct. For this reason, laws are passed to forbid practices that may lead to destruction of an animal species.

Such laws seem to me fruitless. All animal species have to adjust to the environment which they are born into. If it is favorable for a certain species, the species will flourish and multiply; if not, it will dwindle and perhaps become extinct. Other species, better suited to the environment, will take its place.

We think of the state of Ohio as a well settled area, but Ohioans share their land with many wild creatures. For example, during last year's hunting season in Ohio, 51,000 deer were killed. But it is estimated that during the entire year of 1982, 20,000 deer were killed illegally in Ohio. Those figures and up to 71,000 deer killed in one year in a well populated, industrialized state.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, April 19, the 109th day of 1983. There are 256 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On April 19, 1775, the American Revolution began with fighting against British forces at Lexington and Concord, Mass.

On this date:
In 1783, Congress announced the end of the Revolutionary War.

Poachers in Ohio when caught are imprisoned. That widespread poaching continues indicates that the motive - meat for the table - is fairly strong.

A father and son in Meigs county confessed to killing 400 to 475 deer, illegally, over a 6-year period, undoubtedly they sold much of the meat, as well as the hides. It was their way of fighting unemployment and want. I hope they were not severely punished.

Unemployed and needy people sometimes poach to get food for the family. Can they be blamed? There should be a provision in the law that if need can be proven a person may be forgiven for killing a legally protected animal.

"Have you ODED on basketball again?"

It's game, set, match for Hu Na vs. China

By PAUL GREENBERG

It's game and match for Hu Na, the nineteen-year-old tennis whiz and now free woman. She has been granted political asylum in this country after a draining contest in which the other team did just everything they could to psyche her out. At one point, she received a pitiful letter from her father that had the ring of a Government - Issue document. It's remarkable how concerned totalitarian regimes can be about preserving family ties in these circumstances; they'll apparently do anything to help the family except allow people to come and go freely.

The government on the mainland didn't exactly jump over the net to congratulate Hu Na on having won the Liberty Cup. Instead, its embassy in this country issued a bristling statement. Its tone might have been set by John McEnroe after having lost a close one on the court: "This is a grave incident harming the relations between the two countries and will certainly affect bilateral exchanges."

Translated from the Newspeak, this means Peking is going to be darned careful about sending any more talented young people over here with minds, and feet, of their own. Maybe it should have known better; the Soviet have already lost what must be a full ballet company and half a symphony orchestra to the charms of this decadent capitalist society. The U.S. is becoming a citadel of Russian culture thanks to bilateral exchanges, which may be the best thing to happen to American arts and letters since Fulbright scholarships. American sport benefits in the same fashion.

Miss Hu's sort of bilateral exchange tends to be mainly unilateral. Whatever the varied political tendencies of American artists, scholars, and athletes, they know better than to defect to a country like the Soviet Union when the "opportunity" presents itself. (Jane Fonda may have visited Hanoi to expatiate on the treatment of American prisoners of war there; she had enough sense not to stay.)

The Chinese embassy had something else to say about the decision not to grant Hu Na political asylum in this country: "The U.S. government has no grounds whatever to take this course of action. Hu Na is a tennis player who became such after many years of education and loving care in China." Does that mean the right of political asylum does not apply to tennis players? (One hears a lot of talk about tennis bums, but this is ridiculous.) Or is it because she has been educated, loved, and cared for that she may not be granted asylum? Is a puzzlement. There's a word for this kind of logic: Inscrutable.

In a paroxysm of pique, the All-China Sports Federation has decided not to participate in ten international competitions in the U.S. this year. After all, Peking doesn't want to lose its water polo and women's softball teams, too. The decision also cancels any role by the mainland Chinese in other exchanges - art exhibitions, film festivals, in the performing arts, journalism and publishing. The bamboo curtain is being put back in place - lest others follow Hu Na's lead.

Having ruined the normal atmosphere of such exchanges, Peking declares: "The U.S. government action has ruined the normal atmosphere of Sino - U.S. sports exchanges." Whatever this statement is, it isn't a sequitur. If only Washington would agree to keep Chinese athletes in shackles, or at least box them up and ship them home when they got restless, then presumably normalcy would be restored - or at least the normalcy of a blighted totalitarian power that cannot keep its subjects for straying when they get the chance.

It would be difficult to find a purer form of Newspeak than the brand issuing forth from Peking; it makes even the Soviet product look attenuated. Red China's director of cultural relations with foreign countries, one Ding Gu, said of his country's decision to erect a great wall around China's star performers: "The Chinese government has no choice but to take the above measure."

No more choice than the Soviet Union had in building the Berlin Wall. It was either that or expose more of its people to freedom, a dangerous idea that can seduce even the best trained and most carefully screened products of a well-run police state. It happens in the best-regulated of dictatorships.

Director Ding went on to say this about Red China's retribution against its own athletes, artists, and scholars: "The U.S. government should be responsible for the consequences arising therefrom." After all, the U.S. government is guilty of existing, of being dedicated to the proposition that all men have certain unalienable rights, and of refusing to waive one or two in the case of a mere individual. The very existence of such government is a danger to any totalitarian state; it gives people ideas. It may even give them a place to escape to. Few things are so revealing of slavery as contact with freedom; that is why a totalitarian society must limit such contact. But it would scarcely do to admit the reason. Hence all this doublethink.

What a waste of prose for Peking to go on issuing these explanations that don't explain, or rather that explain all too much about the Marxist mentality. Instead of this endless stream of unconsciousness, why not just post gigantic wall posters? They could proclaim: Black is White. White is Black. Freedom is Slavery. And, oh yes, Big Brother is Watching You.

Trunk dunk

What looks like the trunk of an enormous elephant is really a robot from Sweden that can take a ball and drop it deftly through a basketball hoop or delicately pick up an egg. The contraption is one of many on exhibit at McCormick Place in Chicago at the Robots 7 Conference and Exposition, billed as the biggest industrial robot show ever staged. (AP Laserphoto)

250 robots up to tricks

CHICAGO (AP) — It looks like a huge elephant's trunk, but it can delicately pick up an egg and put it in a holder or take a ball and drop it through a basketball hoop.

Although the robot from Sweden is not yet dunking shots, it is one of the flashiest players at the Robots 7 Conference and Exposition that has turned McCormick Place — Chicago's lakefront exhibition center — into a wonderland of 250 hissing, whirring, light-blinking contraptions that can do almost everything but clean fingernails.

The exhibit, which opened Monday, is billed as the biggest industrial robot show ever staged, drawing products from 175 robot builders in 12 countries — $750 million worth of engineering.

At $15 a ticket, the show, open to the public, is expected to draw 30,000 people for its three-day run. But the exhibitors mostly hope to attract manufacturers interested in buying robots for their factories.

Many of the robots are programmed to ham it up to draw crowds to the various booths, like the 13-foot model from Spine Robotics, with its elephant-trunk-like arm able to reach nearly 16 feet.

"The Spine Robot can reach everywhere — from behind, from below, from the front and around," said Per Lenschow, control systems manager.

In a United States Robots display from King of Prussia, Pa., three blue robots warm up like football players — raising and lowering their "necks" and stretching their "arms." Then it's game time and they go to work putting together smoke detectors on an assembly belt.

The "Smokies" going at top speed "can turn out 2,800 smoke detectors on an eight-hour shift," said Mitchell Weiss, director of advanced development of the company. "It takes five humans to produce 2,000 in eight hours.

"Among the many things these robots can do on a diet of electricity is put together their own motors," he said. "It's the nearest thing to propagation in the robot world."

One of the biggest showoffs at the exhibit is "T3-726," the brainchild of Cincinnati Milacrom. It lures crowds to the company's exhibit by dealing cards, explaining the rules of blackjack, calling out point totals and announcing winners. It keeps track of what has been played and knows how many cards are left in the deck and what their values are.

When the robot has a blackjack hand totaling 16 points — with 21 points needed to win — it points to the ceiling and says, "Look at that," and pulls a 5-card from behind its back.

In other words, it cheats.

Penguins find Antarctica in California

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Truckloads of penguins, resembling tuxedo-clad waiters on holiday, trooped in noisy confusion down ramps and hallways into a frozen wonderland — a bit of Antarctica in Southern California.

Like true tourists, the penguins of Sea World craned their necks for a better view of the mini-South Pole, scrambled cautiously up an imitation mountain, jumped over genuine whale bones and sampled the crushed ice that masquerades as snow.

Many gave in to temptation and flopped on their oversized bellies to skid across the ice as they moved into their elaborate new home Monday night.

The marine zoo's $7 million "Penguin Encounter," which opens for the paying public May 28, was conceived as "a window on Antarctica — the most pristine, spectacular place on this planet," said Frank S. Todd, Sea World's curator of birds.

With a wall of mirrors that gives the illusion of endless expanse and almost countless penguins, the exhibit is "the only place anywhere in the world where you can see penguins doing what penguins do," without going almost to the South Pole, Todd said.

Todd said more than 300 penguins, the largest collection anywhere and the world's only self-sustaining captive colony, will settle in the exhibit, offering a tiny version of the Antarctic rookeries that can hold 80,000 birds packed shoulder to shoulder.

The birds were rounded up Monday from the nondescript refrigerated room where many have lived since 1976. They arrived, with shivering handlers, in the back of a freezer truck. In groups of about 40, they were hustled down a carpeted ramp, through a freezer that will soon be full of penguin food — mostly fish — along a hallway lined with photographers and television cameras and up yet another ramp to the 5,000-square-foot exhibit.

The 3-foot-tall Emperor penguins strutted regally like members of a formal wedding party. Their stately bearing was tarnished a bit by a habit of sledding over the ice, propelled by their toes and guided by their wings.

The little 15-inch Adelines were much less sedate. Cackling and squawking, they were herded up the last ramp. A few decided against the trip and snapped at their wranglers' gloved hands.

One ruffled bird, the stereotype of an absent-minded professor with an unruly mop of yellow feathers on top of his head, was so overwhelmed that it required step-by-step guidance with firm hands on back and stomach.

An ersatz iceberg reaching over the 148,000-gallon swimming pool, which stretches under the land, was a popular hangout for Adelines. Several curled up and went to sleep.

After nine expeditions to the frozen continent, Todd is an expert on penguins. The exhibit is his creation; he drew its rooms and rocks in the dirt with a stick before architects got involved.

He said he's tried to give penguins everything they could want. "About the only things we can't do is, I can't have penguins diving to 900 feet and I can't let them migrate.

But with lighting keyed to Antarctic time and crevices and barren rocks, the birds should breed and raise babies for visitors watching, invisibly, behind a 70-foot one-way glass panel, he said.

Ornaments are back in fashion

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

It's been said that if you hold onto outmoded furnishings long enough, they will come back in fashion. If so, those who never abandoned lace doilies, overstuffed furniture and ornate china can congratulate themselves.

Ornament is back in fashion. Designers who were taught that form should follow function and that ornament is bad, have recently taken up the call for embellishment, according to Robert Jensen, an author, teacher and architect.

Jensen is co-author with Patricia Conway of the book, "Ornamentation: The New Decorativeness in Architecture and Design."

The failure of modern technology to solve the problems of living and a new belief in the individual appear to be basic reasons why many artists and designers trained in the modernist discipline are throwing off tradition, the authors believe.

"The urge to embellish and the love of ornamental effect seem to be basic to human nature since human beings have demonstrated a persistent impulse to decorate," said Jensen.

Far from being useless as modernism had taught, such surface embellishments as bright colors, columns, cornices, ornamental iron work and applied surface patterning are functional.

"They delight the eye, intrigue the mind and rest the soul," said Jensen. In practical terms, surface decoration on buildings is often an essential element in helping people to identify the building's function, in reducing surroundings to human scale, in enabling people to pick out landmarks and in directing traffic.

He pointed out that furniture and accessories — whether mass produced or hand-made — have continued to be embellished despite the dictates of modernism as many consumers rejected unadorned, strictly modern furniture and accessories as cold and uncomfortable.

Today, this popular instinct is being endorsed by many artists, craftsmen and architects.

Typical of the new type of artist-craftsman is Tom Loeser of Cambridge, Mass., who recently graduated from Boston University where he was enrolled in its program in artisanry. Trained in traditional woodworking, Loeser has been experimenting with new ideas. His wood and metal chair which hangs flat on the wall as art, or can be quickly assembled as a seat, is displayed in an exhibition on ornamentalism at the Hudson River Museum in Yonkers, N.Y., through May 15.

The young woodworker says he has made about 30 chairs himself, but would like to see the design produced in a factory. Loeser sees no contradiction in designing an art work that is also functional.

Similarly Arlene Slavin, whose painting is on display at the exhibition, also makes decorative screens for use in the home. She feels ornamentalism is an art movement that "gives permission to people to go with their own taste."

Dorothy Halmer, an artist whose medium is ceramics, has on view a "room" composed of a hand-made porcelain tile floor, table and ceramic dinnerware. Her work of art could serve as a setting for a dinner party. To her, ornamentalism signals a return of interest in embellished surfaces.

"Artists like to do them and people love to look at and live with embellished objects," she said.

Miriam Shapiro, whose acrylic and fabric collages drawn from the motifs found in patchwork quilts also are on view tied in the new interest in surface ornament and colorful patterns with the women's movement, in a panel discussion held at the museum.

"Women have been responsible for the decorative arts across cultures and throughout history. In all cultures where blankets were made, pots thrown and tapestries woven, this was women's work. A new interest in women's history has encouraged women artists to use these traditions in their own modern work," she said.

"The art of ornamentalism is an art that everybody can get in on. Today there is no one style authority, but all sorts of voices are speaking," she added.

On the same day, Ms. Shapiro's views were virtually duplicated to an audience of home furnishings professionals attending a program put on by the National Home Fashions League in New York City.

Lella Vignelli, a designer and president of Vignelli Designs, noted that "there is a place for both technology and things made lovingly and carefully and slowly by hand."

"There is a new interest in preserving the past and a new appreciation of history," she said.

Setting up

Karen Bonnell, left, and Anne Lemons hang up one of the exhibits to be shown at the Pampa Art Club's Arts and Crafts Exhibit opening today at Lovett Memorial Library from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. and Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The public is invited to come to the library and view the beautiful works made by local craftsman in the display. ### American Cancer Society

How you live may save your life

"Think about it! How you live may save your life! This is the theme of the 1983 educational and fund-raising Cancer Crusade which began April 1," said Ed Sweet, chairman of the Gray-Roberts unit of the American Cancer Society.

"The crusade this year has very personal meaning for every citizen of Pampa because it confronts us with questions about our lifestyles and environments and the ways in which these may relate to cancer," he said.

The Cancer Crusade volunteers will be distributing a new ACS pamphlet, "Check Your Health," which has two main features.

The first section is a detachable health survey to be confidentially completed and returned to the ACS. The results of the survey (which takes about five minutes to complete) will be used by ACS volunteers to determine more effective cancer education programs in this part of the state.

"For example, if the survey results indicate that very few women in this county are practicing regular breast self-examination, then ACS volunteers will be alerted so that programs on breast self-examination can be emphasized here," said Sweet.

"Today we know that more than three million Americans are alive after experiencing cancer, thanks to early diagnosis and treatment," Sweet said.

"We want to continue the advances that are slowly but surely being made. President Reagan has proclaimed April as 'Cancer Control Month.' We ask that everyone give generously to help support programs of cancer research, education and services to cancer patients."

Dear Abby

Mom can't read to kids if she doesn't know how

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for urging parents to read to their very young children in an effort to inspire them to learn to read for themselves.

However, one of the reasons some parents don't read to their children is because they themselves can't read! Today in the United States there are over 23 million adults who can't read well enough to read a children's bedtime story; to read the notes that come from school; to read a medicine label. These illiterate adults must be taught to read.

Literary Volunteers of America, Inc. (LVA) trains volunteers to teach adults and teens who can't read well enough to function. There are over 160 programs in 29 states. Between 1981 and 1983, 12,000 LVA volunteers taught over 17,000 students to read. Both numbers continue to grow, and we hope that one day we will be a totally literate society.

Please pass this along.

JONATHON McKALLIP,
DIRECTOR OF FIELD SERVICES, LVA

DEAR MR. McKALLIP: Thank you for writing. I learned something today.

I checked out LVA and I learned that it was founded in Syracuse, N.Y., in 1962 to combat the problem of illiteracy in the United States and Canada. Its primary premise is that well-trained volunteers can be effective tutors of adults. The organization has been enormously successful, and continues to grow.

For more information, please send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: LVA, 404 Oak St., Syracuse, N.Y. 13203.

DEAR ABBY: Here's some good news for you. Tell the librarian in Winter Park, Fla., who wrote to say that children don't read anymore, that here in Olympia, Wash., the public library is so popular that you can hardly get into the parking lot.

It might be because of the many services offered, it might be the rocking chairs, it might even be the plants or the stone sculpture of otters that the children "pet" — but something in that place is outdrawing the TV and video games!

I'm not sure whether the community is to be congratulated for the library or the library is to be congratulated for the community, but it's a wonderful spectacle, and I offer it as an encouragement to other towns that want their children to read. It can still happen.

REBECCA WRIGHT, OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR REBECCA: That's the good news. The bad news is that your town's library will probably be hearing from hundreds of librarians asking for details.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is in his late 20s. (I'll call him "Lester.") He's a fine young man and has always known that he was adopted, but he never speaks of it. We asked him a few years ago if he had any desire to know his biological parents and he said, "No. You are the only parents I want to know, and as far as I'm concerned, I have no other."

Lester is being married soon to a young woman whom he has never told that he was adopted. He asked us not to mention it to her because he would prefer that she didn't know.

My wife and I feel that Lester should tell his fiancée, particularly because he grew up in a small town not far from here where everyone there knows that we adopted him when he was a small child.

Many of our friends and relatives from that small town come here to shop and visit, and I worry that Lester's fiancée might hear the truth from someone else.

What should we do?

LESTER'S FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Try to persuade your son to tell his fiancée that he was adopted and tell him (as you told me) why he should do it soon. If he refuses, he will have to handle the consequences.

CHILD ABUSE:

the cure lies in your hands.

Report child abuse and neglect. Call 669-6806 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 669-7407 after 5 p.m. and on weekends. A child's life could be in your hands.

Painting's "Golden Age" to be shown at museum

Forty-one paintings by Dutch, Flemish and German masters of the 16th and 17th centuries are to be exhibited at the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle May 1 - June 13.

"Golden Age of Painting," on loan from the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation of Houston features works by Peter Paul Rubens, Hieronymus Bosch, Lucas Cranach, Jan Steen and other Northern European artists.

The exhibit is to open with a public reception and lecture by North Texas State University art historian Dr. Scott Sullivan at the museum, Sunday, May 1, at 2:30 p.m.

Dr. Sullivan's specialty is 17th century Flemish and Dutch art. His publications include articles for the bulletins of the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts and the Cleveland Museum of Art.

Free group tours of "A Golden Age of Painting" may be scheduled by calling the curator of education at the museum. In addition, two free guide booklets are available — one for classroom teachers and one for pastors and church school leaders.

The Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation of Houston searched private collections and art galleries in Europe and the United States for three years to compile "A Golden Age of Painting." Meant to reflect the richness and variety of the art of the Netherlands of the 16th and 17th centuries, the exhibit includes stately portraits of the wealthy, sedate harbor scenes and pastoral landscapes, allegorical and biblical images, still lifes of tables laden with rich fruits and meats, and everyday genre scenes of soldiers playing dice games and a peasant family feasting at a Saturnalia dinner.

Peter Paul Rubens was one of the most popular and successful painters in the history of art, and the demand for his work was unceasing. This encouraged him to establish a large workshop of assistants and collaborators who often executed the large painting after the master's sketches — to be returned to him later for the finishing touches.

One of Ruben's most precocious pupils was Sir Anthony van Dyck, who developed beyond the influence of his master a strong, stylistic independence that won him acclaim both at home and abroad. In fact, van Dyck succeeded Rubens as court painter to King Charles I of England, and influenced English portrait painters of the next two centuries, most notably Gainsborough. In all his portraits, van Dyck managed to bestow on his sitter an aristocratic dignity, whether he possessed it in real life or not.

Religious subjects were still being commissioned, despite challenges to the Catholic Church by Reformation. Incidents from Christ's life illustrated in the exhibit include "Annunciation to the Shepherds" by Benjamin Gerritsz Cuyp, "Adoration of Kings" by Pieter Brueghel the Younger and "The Deposition from the Cross" by Quentin Massys.

Folk Art Exhibit

NEW YORK (AP) — The Museum of American Folk Art has organized an international traveling exhibition, "American Folk Art: Expressions of a New Spirit," which highlights more than 130 works from its permanent collection.

This exhibition opened in Paris this month. It will be seen in Munich during the summer, later in Hamburg and London before returning to the United States for a nine-city tour.

This is the first large-scale international exhibition devoted to the entire range of America's folk art heritage: it includes folk paintings, folk sculpture, painted and decorated furniture, textiles and other arts from the 17th through the 20th centuries.

Padres bury Braves with 15-hit attack

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
Tim Flannery was only one of nine San Diego Padres who hit an RBI on the night, but his contribution may have been just a little bit bigger.
Flannery singled, tripled, scored twice and drove in a run as his contributions in a 15-hit attack that helped San Diego bury the Atlanta Braves 10-3 Monday night.
In addition, he played another flawless game at third base in place of Luis Salazar, who had made two errors before being replaced by Manager Dick Williams.
"I know my role," Flannery said. "With me, it's only one day at a time. When I'm in there, I go as hard as I can. And when someone else is in there, I cheer for him. I know if I don't produce, I won't be in the lineup long."
With his two hits, Flannery upped his average to .375. Gene Richards was the only Padre with more than one RBI Monday night, driving in a pair with a single in the second inning. Steve Garvey hit a solo homer.

In the only other game played, Los Angeles edged San Francisco 4-3 and Philadelphia clobbered the Chicago Cubs 8-3.
Every Padre that got into the lineup against Atlanta — with the exception of San Diego's three pitchers — had at least one RBI against four Atlanta pitchers. Right-hander Eric Show, 2-0, worked the first 5-1-3 innings for San Diego for the victory.
It was the first win of the year for the Padres over the Braves, who swept a four-game series over San Diego in Atlanta last week. Rookie right-hander Craig McMurtry, 1-1, lasted only two innings for the Braves. Dodgers 4, Giants 3

Dodgers relief ace Greg Minton walked the bases full, and Los Angeles' winning run scored in the top of the ninth inning on Ken Landreaux's ground ball. It was his 11th RBI of the new season.
Trailing 3-0, San Francisco tied the score in the eighth off Burt Hooton on Milt May's two-run homer and a pinch RBI single by Joel Youngblood.
Tom Niedenfuer, who faced only one batter in the eighth, got the victory, and Dave Stewart worked out of a one-out, two-on jam in the ninth to earn his third save.
Phillies 8, Cubs 2
Gary Matthews and Mike Schmidt each homered for the Phillies, backing the eight-hit pitching of John Denny.

The Phillies trailed 2-0 in the third when Matthews led off with a solo shot off Paul Moskau. After Joe Morgan walked, Schmidt homered for the fourth time this season to put Philly ahead 3-2.
Denny walked one and struck out three in evening his record at 1-1. It was his first for Philadelphia, which acquired him from Cleveland last September.

Tennis club to meet

Pampa Tennis Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Citizens Bank to plan this summer's Open Tournament in Pampa.
"We had a big turnout for the tournament last year and we look for another big turnout this year," Club spokesman Joe Davis said.
Davis encouraged all interested persons to attend tonight's meeting.

Pampa hosts league leading Canyon today

Pampa hosts league-leading Canyon at 4 p.m. today in District 1-4A baseball action.
Canyon is 7-1 in district play and 13-3 overall.
Pampa evened its loop mark at 4-4 after edging Levelland, 9-8, last Saturday.
Overall, the Harvesters are 7-9.
District standings through Saturday's games are as follows: 1. Canyon 7-1, 13-3-1; 2. Borger 6-2, 8-7 and Lubbock Estacado 6-2, 13-6; 4. Dumas 4-4, 5-10 and Pampa 4-4, 7-9; 6. Lubbock Dumas 3-4 and 8-12; 7. Levelland 2-6 and 7-11; 8. Brownfield 0-8 and 1-14.

Frosh girls win loop meet

The Pampa freshman girls track team set eight district records on the way to a first-place finish at Borger.
The Pampa girls scored 205 points in the district meet Saturday. Dumas finished second with 141 points, followed by Canyon and Borger.
"This is the best class of freshman girls I've ever seen — they can really fly," said coach Justin Marchel.
District records that fell to the Pampa girls include the 400 meter relay, 800 meter relay, 1,600 meter relay, 1,600 meter run, 3,200 meter run, 100 meter dash, 400 meter run, and the discus throw.
The team of Lissa Dunnam, Melanie Morgan, Rotunda Powell and Courtney Brown broke the district record in the 400 meter relay with a first-place time of 53.2.
The 800 meter relay mark fell to the team of Dunnam, Shere Captain, Morgan and Gwen Jackson who finished at 1:53.4.
Shannon Churchman, Captain, Powell and Brown ran 4:27.5 in the 1,600 meter relay for first place and a new record.
Sande Greenway finished first and broke the district record in the 3,200 meter run at 12:55, and she broke the 1,600 meter record in a time of 5:54. Stephanie Phillips was fourth at 6:35.5.

Brown set a new freshman-girls district record in the 100 meter dash at 13.1. Morgan was right behind Brown for second place at 13.2, and Dunnam took third at 13.3.
Churchman broke the record at 400 meters with first place and a time of 64.9. Krista Lucas was second at 65.8, and Powell was third at 66.8.
Stacy Bennett broke the district discus mark with a heave of 82'2 1/2". Gayle Collier was second at 62'4 1/2".
Bennett also won second in the shot at 30'7 1/2". Collier was sixth in the shot with a toss of 25'10 1/2".
Jackson took second place in the 200 meter run with a time of 28.02; Captain was third at 28.7; and Beverley Payne was fourth at 28.8.
At 800 meters, Payne finished second at 2:42.7; Nancy Southerland was sixth at 2:57.5.
In the 100 meter hurdles, Dana Woods was fifth at 18.3.
Greenway was third in the triple jump with a distance of 29'10 1/2". She was second in the high jump after clearing 4'11" and second in the long jump at 15'1" in the long jump, but she took third place based on shorter previous jumps.
Marchel and assistant coach Randy Burks were excited about the record performances of the freshman team.

"The dynasty has just started. It's super — the girls did a good job," Marchel said.
The coach said the freshman record breakers can only strengthen an already strong, underclass group returning next year.
"Three of our five regional qualifiers will be back next year," Marchel said.
Greenway will move up to compete with the varsity squad at the regional track meet Saturday at Brownwood, he said. Others on the varsity squad to compete at Brownwood include Stacy Brown, Joan Burns, Whitney Kidwell and Kristi Hughes.

Guidry two-hits Toronto

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
Ron Guidry is up because he's keeping the ball down again.
The New York Yankees lanky left-hander, blasted in his first two starts this year when he tried to be too clever with the ball, just reared back and threw it Monday night against Toronto's batters. The result: a two-hit 3-0 victory over the Blue Jays.
Elsewhere in the American League it was Baltimore 4, Cleveland 1; Minnesota 8, Seattle 5; Milwaukee 14, Boston 0, and Oakland 5, California 3.
"I think I worry too much about spotting the ball," said Guidry. "What I wanted to do tonight, if nothing else, was throw the ball hard. I challenged them. I wanted to go right after them. That's the way I used to pitch."
Guidry, who struck out four batters and didn't walk any, gave up a game-opening single to former Yankee teammate Dave Collins, retired 15 consecutive batters, was nicked for an infield hit by Buck Martinez opening the sixth inning, then set down Toronto's final 12 batters.

Orioles 4, Indians 1
Designated hitter Jim Dwyer's fifth-inning leadoff home run snapped a 1-1 tie and propelled the Orioles past Cleveland.
"If he keeps hitting like that, he may be the DH for eternity," said Baltimore Manager Joe Altobelli.
Dwyer is the DH only because Ken Singleton is hurt.
Rick Dempsey drove in two runs for the Orioles with a sacrifice fly in the third inning and a double in the seventh. Scott McGregor pitched a seven-hitter for Baltimore. Twins 8, Mariners 5
Randy Bush's two-run double in the third inning and Mickey Hatcher's two-run single in the seventh led Minnesota out of the West Division basement and dropped the Mariners into it.
Mike Moore walked Gary Ward, Kent Hrbek and Gary Gaetti before Tom

Brunansky's sacrifice fly broke a 1-1 tie and Bush doubled. The Twins made it 5-1 in the sixth on Ward's sacrifice fly.
Brewers 14, Red Sox 0
Boston's scoreless streak stretched to 25 innings as Don Sutton checked the Red Sox on six hits through seven innings and Tom Tellmann wrapped up with two hitless innings of relief.
Charlie Moore had four of the Brewers' 22 hits and drove in three runs, and Paul Molitor, Robin Young, Cecil Cooper and Roy Howell added three hits apiece. For Howell, it was particularly welcome, since he had gone 0-for-35 in a streak dating back to the end of the 1982 season.
A's 5, Angels 3
Mike Davis' two-run single triggered a four-run burst in the third inning against Mike Witt. Wayne Gross' single and Dwayne Murphy's double-play grounder drove in the other runs in the inning. Rod Carew had a two-run single and Reggie Jackson a homer for the Angels.

Winner Crowned

Joan Benoit of Watertown, Mass. receives the traditional victor's wreath from Kathryn White, wife of Boston

Mayor Kevin White, after winning the 87th running of the Boston Marathon in world record time Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Myer, Benoit win Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — On a cool day when Greg Meyer sped to a Boston Marathon victory in the third-fastest time for the 87-year-old race, Joan Benoit stole some of his thunder by obliterating the women's world record.

"Joanie is one of the best athletes in the world, not just among women," said Meyer. "It's time people recognized that."

Benoit set a blistering pace Monday to finish in two hours, 22 minutes, 42 seconds, shaving nearly three minutes off the women's best of 2:25:29. She led most of the way and won by almost seven minutes.

"I don't think it's hit me yet. It will probably hit me tomorrow when I can't get out of bed," said Benoit, who won the 1979 Boston Marathon in 2:35:15.

Meyer's only other Boston Marathon was in 1981, when he led from the 18th mile to the 19th mile before fading to an 11th-place finish.

"I took the lead just about where I lost it two years ago," said Meyer, whose winning time was 2:09:00. "In 1981, I think I made some mistakes and let the course destroy me. We planned for this race."

Meyer, a Grand Rapids, Mich., native now living in Wellesley, Mass., and Benoit, a Portland, Maine, native living in Watertown, Mass., didn't disappoint the forecasters who had installed them as heavy favorites in a field of 6,515 official entrants, including 5,814 men and 701 women.

"I felt it a lot this week," Meyer said of the pressure of being the favorite. "I think I handled it well. I won so it must not have hurt me."

Meyer has won four of his seven marathons. He also has been victorious in his last five races at varying distances.

Ron Tabb, of Eugene, Ore., finished second in 2:09:32, followed by Benji Durden, of Stone Mountain, Ga., in 2:09:57, Ed Mendoza, of Flagstaff, Ariz., in 2:10:06, and Christopher Bunyan, of Carbondale, Ill., in 2:10:54.

Bill Rodgers, seeking his fifth Boston Marathon win in 10 tries, had a cold last week and finished the 26-mile, 385-yard race in 10th place in 2:11:58.

"I was thinking maybe this will be my last marathon so I should try to finish," Rodgers said. "I'm already thinking about the next one."

He missed qualifying for the World Track and Field Championships in Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 7-14. The top three finishers Monday qualified, but Meyer said he would concentrate on the 10-kilometer race and didn't plan to participate in the marathon in Helsinki.

Defending champion Alberto Salazar didn't compete. He finished fifth April 9 in the Rotterdam Marathon. Salazar holds the world record of 2:08:13 and the Boston mark of 2:08:51.

Monday's race was run under nearly ideal weather conditions — cool with a tailwind.

Abraham Aregha led early, but Durden spurred in front at around the eighth mile and held it until Meyer made his move between the 19th and 20th miles. About two miles later, Meyer figured his lead was big enough and his legs strong enough to carry him to victory.

"I just found myself in the lead frequently in the early stages. It was mystifying," said Durden, who was second in the Houston Marathon last Jan. 16. "I had a tail wind and I wasn't breaking any wind ahead of me so I said why not go ahead and run hard. I did and I almost got away with it."

But the determined Meyer wouldn't let him.

"My strategy from the start was whoever went out, no matter who it was, I would stay with him. If it was a rabbit (who) I knew was going to die after five miles I was going to go out and chase him," Meyer said. "I was hoping what Benji was doing was trying to take the sting out of everybody and then see who could crawl home."

But Meyer, 27, had plenty left at the end, and said he could have made one last surge if he needed it.

Benoit started extremely fast and didn't know if she had much energy remaining. It became obvious early that she wouldn't need it.

House budget writers bring plan to within available funds

AUSTIN (AP) — House budget writers, trying to avoid new taxes, have brought their working draft to within the amount of money Texas is expected to have on hand over the next two years. The draft proposes no new taxes, but Gov. Mark White's hope of a 24 percent salary hike for schoolteachers was chopped down to the minimum 4.5 percent annual raise already guaranteed teachers by state law. State taxes have not been raised since 1971, and House Speaker Gib Lewis has said he is committed to a budget that stays within existing revenues to avoid new taxes. Members were able to pare $173 million off their working plan Monday, bringing the document within Comptroller Bob Bullock's estimate of what the government will have in its treasury during the 1984-85 spending period.

The state constitution requires budget writers to stay within the limits of the comptroller's revenue estimate — or raise taxes — and Bullock has reduced his estimate by $2.8 billion since last fall, blaming reduced tax collections on retail sales and oil and gas.

Most of the amount cut Monday came as a result of simply adjusting the anticipated rate of inflation downward from 6 to 4 percent.

An anticipated inflation rate of 6 percent had been written in to the Legislative Budget Board's draft of the budget when the appropriations committee first started working on it Feb. 14.

WE WISH to thank our neighbors, friends, Dr. Frank Kelley, the nurses at Coronado Community Hospital, Reverend Whitman and Carmichael Whitley Funeral Directors for their love and sympathy during the recent loss of our beloved husband and father.

Mrs. O.A. Kelley And Family

New system gets underway Wednesday

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — An Albuquerque man convicted of writing bad checks will be the first probationer monitored by a so-called "electronic handcuff" watchdog system, says the judge who devised the system.

"We started out a little slow," said state District Judge Jack Love of Albuquerque. "But now, it's just a matter of signing the formal judgment and having him come in and get his bracelet."

The man is expected to begin his at-home incarceration Wednesday.

The slow start has come as a variety of problems plagued the probation system, which was ballyhooed in March as a

'Native Texan' plates killed

AUSTIN (AP) — An Illinois native's idea to honor Texas natives with special license plates was defeated in the House after a legislator reeled off a list of famous Texans who would not qualify for the plates.

The House voted 89-29 on Monday against the proposal by Rep. Chip Staniswalis of Illinois, now a Republican lawmaker from Amarillo.

Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, ignited the opposition by noting that Sam Houston, Davy Crockett and Sam Rayburn were not Texas natives.

Staniswalis wanted to allow natives who could prove they were natives pay $50 for a special plate bearing the words "Texas Native." The money would have gone to the state highway department.

"I was born in Illinois at a very early age against my will," said Staniswalis.

He called the $50 would have been a "philanthropic contribution by native Texans" to the highway department.

Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, said the bill was a bad idea because it discriminated against non-native Texans. Jackson said he would oppose "any process that discriminates against our residents."

Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, argued that native Texans should not be recognized for something over which they had no control — where they were born.

revolutionary change in corrections practices.

The "handcuff" is a cigarette-pack-sized transmitter that the probationer wears on his ankle. It emits a signal that is picked up by a receiver attached to the probationer's telephone, which in turn relays it to a computer.

A printout on the computer will show probation officers when the probationer strays further than about 200 feet from the receiver. If those times vary from the probationer's approved work schedule, then the officers check to see if the terms of the probation have been violated, Love said.

When the development of the device by an Albuquerque company was announced earlier this year, company president Michael T. Goss said it eventually could help slow the crowding of jails across the country because people who are not a threat to society could serve their time at home.

Love initially had planned a six-month pilot program, trying the device out with actual probationers.

The first problem arose when he wore one himself and found that it kept him on too short of a leash. Adjustments were made, but before the program could begin, other judges in Albuquerque's 2nd Judicial District raised questions about whether the method would be fair to the poor.

Love had planned to charge the probationers $70 a month for the use of the equipment, which also would require a telephone in each probationer's home.

The issue went to the New Mexico Supreme Court, which on Friday refused to rule on it, saying an actual case could eventually come before the high court.

But the court told Love that if he did begin the pilot program, he should be cautious to keep it from becoming a news media event.

Love said Monday he would not reveal the names of the people placed on the special probation and would ban cameras from his courtroom when he sentences them.

He also said he had "pared the whole program down to two probationers for not more than 30 days. The manufacturer has agreed to pay the cost of those two."

The Albuquerque man who will be outfitted with the device Wednesday agreed to try it as part of a plea-bargain agreement. The man, who had nearly completed one probation, pleaded guilty to writing bad checks and was ordered to spend three years more on probation, Love said.

He said the man, who also will make restitution to the victim businesses, will spend the first month in the pilot program and the rest of his three years under "conventional probation." The agreement allows him to leave his home only to go to work during the first month.
