Severe Battle Is Reported In Manchuria

Many Killed In Past Few Days Near Chinchow, Say Dispatches

(By The Associated Press) Tokyo and Tientsin dispatches said Japanese detachment of Chinese irregulars were in a severe battle near Chinchow, southwest of Chinchow. It was reported that during the last few days forty Japanese including a colonel were killed. Several small Japanese forces were beaten. Railways have been destroyed preventing reinforcements.

Legitimate investment of capital will be welcomed in West Texas declared directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in resolutions adopted at Sweetwater Monday.

Pretty good resolutions; pretty wise. We have not assumed in this column to measure the wisdom or the expediency of the filling of the outer suits by the attorney general against a number of large oil companies.

We took occasion once to say that organizations criticizing the attorney general, personally, for filing the suits, were sort of out of line.

If existing anti-trust laws of this state are inimicable to the welfare of the state they ought to be changed.

But, you can't change laws like that in a jiffy and, if the law is being violated the only way to determine that fact after all, is in the courts.

So, since the suits have been filed we shall see whether existing laws are being violated and, if so, by whom and how.

There are, at that, a whole gob of laws on the statute books of Texas without which we'd be better off. Most of them were enacted with good intentions but have either become obsolete for present purposes or were written incorrectly.

You can't get anywhere if new capital is withheld from a state. We need the new money.

A lot of us fuss because all the money is in Wall street. Well, why not get some of it down here and have it invested in Texas.

There is no justice in a law that prevents any man from using his money in a legitimate enterprise without being threatened with ruin through workings of a monopoly.

Neither is there any justice in a law that prevents any corporation, no matter how large, from free rein in running its own business as long as it does not take away the rights of the individual.

Every individual and corporation has a right to all the money that either can make honestly, no matter how little or how much it may amount to.

West Texas has been helped tremendously by the investment of money by large corporations. In fact, the development that has come to us in the past ten years has been due largely to investments of large oil companies and utility companies—no matter how much you may hate 'big business' that is the truth.

Walker, wife of the proprietor of the camp, heard a wail in the cabin and went inside to investigate. The infant, wrapped in a blanket, was warm from the fire in a gas stove, but was hungry.

Simplify Arms Cut and Curb Experts Lady Rhondda, Liberal Leader Among British Women, Urges Upon Nations

(Editor's Note: With the opening of the world disarmament conference at Geneva February 2 drawing nearer, world leaders are being sounded out as to their views on arms reductions. This is the second of a series of articles outlining the opinions of international figures on the prospects for success of the conference.)

By EDWARD STANLEY LONDON. (AP)—"Keep a close eye on the experts!" is Lady Rhondda's slogan for the next disarmament conference. Lady Rhondda is a viscountess, but she doesn't let the title dull her interest in her fellow man and his world.

Owner of a rich fortune, she has a restless energy and a mind that works on decidedly liberal lines. She sits on the boards of directors of many concerns and actively edits her lively weekly, "Time and Tide." She sheds none of that aura of busy-ness common to so many women who mix in public affairs.

Calmed in her forties, she reminds one in some ways of an American woman executive. Her hair is bobbed, brushed back, and she smiles quickly with a generous mouth. Sometimes she thinks with her eyes shut; again she clasps her hands about a knee. Her eyes are blue-grey; her speech concise, rapid, quiet and pleasant.

Sitting behind a wide, reasonably tidy desk in her Bloomsbury flat, with a bay of big, black-framed windows at her back, you know that she is running her own show, with a sure hand.

All in all, Lady Rhondda probably is the outstanding woman in England, and she is afraid the next disarmament conference may turn out to be just another old home week for the experts.

"What needs to be done is some simple, vigorous act that the ordinary person can understand," she said. "Let each nation agree to reduce its armament budget by a minimum of 25 per cent." (She expects nations totally unarmed.) "That 25 per cent cut would be effective, something that everybody would understand."

"Then let the experts battle it out as to how the rest is to be spent."

"The world's present condition is all in favor of disarmament. Nations realize the need for cooperation, that we are closer together than ever before and that a shock in one part of the world has an almost immediate reaction in all the other parts. It wants security and stability."

"Governments want to save money, and reducing armaments is an economy satisfying both reality and morality."

"Furthermore, we all have made our promises, starting with the peace treaties. If we do not now make some real step toward disarmament in fact, how can we expect the defeated nations not to demand their right to re-arm?"

LADY RHONDDA

Lady Rhondda Says: "Let each nation agree to reduce its armament budget by a minimum of 25 per cent. That would be something everybody would understand."

"The world's present condition is all in favor of disarmament."

"This conference is our last chance. If it is turned over from the start to experts with their quarrels... I think it will fail."

Discussion Of Agents Is Held At Conference

Committee to Meet County Commissioners Here Friday

Following a lengthy session in which expressions both of support and opposition to work of county farm demonstration and home demonstration agents were made, and at which about 200 persons were present a committee of seven was named to meet with the county commissioners' court Friday for a final effort to work out a plan—presumably reduction of salaries—whereby the work of these officials could be continued in Howard county after February 1.

The final speaker of practically all of those attending the meeting, both proponents and opponents of the work fostered by farm and home agents, that there was no way by which the county could continue the offices and be certain of not having a deficit in the general fund at the end of the fiscal year.

Hubert Hayworth and "Happy" Hatch, two prominent 4-H Club boys, addressed the audience, pointing out benefits they had derived from their club work under direction of County Agent J. V. Bush.

Mrs. C. W. Rogers of R Bar, Mrs. Ches Anderson and others of the Elbow community, Mrs. Thorp of Vealmoor, E. Reagan of Big Spring, and others spoke in favor of keeping the county on a sound financial basis and "do without these agents for a year or two until conditions are different."

Mr. Joiner said he knew many people who had always canned various kinds of vegetables, fruits, and preserves for the year.

Making The Best Of It

THE gain in library circulation shown here in 1931 was not a situation peculiar to West Texas, but was common all over the United States, figures recently released by the American Library Association. Reports from 36 of the larger cities show $16,945 more volumes taken out last year than in the previous year.

Matthew S. Dudgeon, head of the Milwaukee library, told the Association at its recent convention in Chicago that many of the persons now crowding the reading rooms are unemployed seeking vocational guidance, others who seek cultural training and still others who read to keep up their courages.

It is one of the few encouraging pictures of the depression. It shows that ambition and determination have yet survived economic adversity and that there are millions of Americans who are confident better times are coming and who are preparing themselves accordingly.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

By M. E. TRACY

In the Scripps-Howard newspapers:

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Can a judge who permits the representatives of other newspapers to sit in his court, bar the representatives of a certain newspaper because in his opinion, editorial comments in that newspaper are, or have been, derogatory to the courts? That is the issue in the case now before the Kentucky Court of Appeals, in which attorneys for the Knoxville (Tenn.) News-Sentinel have made application for a writ of prohibition against Judge Henry R. Prewitt.

Judge Prewitt, chairman of the Knoxville News-Sentinel from sitting in his court, and who has declared that they will never be permitted to sit in his court until the News-Sentinel retracts editorial comments to which he takes exception, or until a higher court overrules his decision.

The history of the case leaves no doubt that Judge Prewitt's action is based entirely on his construction of editorial comments.

Last Wednesday, John Moutoux, a reporter for the Knoxville News-Sentinel, came to Mount Sterling to report the trial of William Hightower for conspiracy to murder, over which Judge Prewitt is presiding.
Soon after his arrival he was informed by Judge Prewitt not only that he would be barred from attending the trial as a representative of the News-Sentinel, but that he would have to make $5,000 bond on contempt proceedings which were about to be instituted against him, all on account of certain articles which had appeared in his paper in connection with the Jones and Burnett trials some three weeks before.

The contempt proceedings were dropped, but J. B. Snyder, who describes himself as an assistant prosecutor in the Hightower trial, filed an affidavit charging Moutoux with making comments derogatory to the court, which resulted in his continued exclusion from the courtroom and on which a hearing was held Monday night.

Meanwhile, the Knoxville News-Sentinel sent Jack Bryan to Mount Sterling to take Moutoux's place as its reporter, but he was barred from doing so by the court on Monday morning, with the declaration that no representative of the News-Sentinel would be allowed to sit in that court as long as that paper maintained its "attitude."

Such damage as the Knoxville News-Sentinel may have suffered is of small importance compared to the precedent which might be established by deciding that representatives of a newspaper can be barred because of editorial comments.

If courts could bar the representatives of one newspaper, on such ground, it necessarily follows that they could bar the representatives of all newspapers.

If a court's opinion of editorial comment were to become the basis for excluding reporters to what ex-items could a prejudiced or politically-minded judge not go?

Judge Prewitt bears an excellent reputation.

His sincerity is not at stake, what is at stake is his conception of judicial authority to bar reporters or representatives of newspapers because he considers editorial comment appearing in that newspaper to be unreasonable, critical or illogical.

As I see it, this is a peculiarly dangerous theory. If carried to an extreme, and no theory should be appraised without that contingency in mind, it would subordinate the right to obtain and publish news to expression of opinion.

Not only the structure of American journalism, but that of the American government itself rests on the principle of free speech, not only with respect to facts but with respect to their interpretation.

HOW'S your HEALTH

Edited by Dr. Iago Goldstein, the New York Academy of Medicine.

COFFEE

There is on record a diverting bit of correspondence exchanged between the great German poet Goethe, and Frau von Stein, a lady of the court.

Frau von Stein complained to Goethe of many things, including certain ailments she suffered at the hands of the poet.

Goethe with remarkable, but no doubt studied obtuseness, replied that her temperamental biliousness was due to her addition to coffee, and he advised her to give up this beverage.

Coffee has been blamed for many things. In compensation, however, as many groundless claims have been made on its behalf.

Millions of pounds of coffee are consumed in the United States every year. Relatively little, however, is known of the actual effects of this beverage.

While the quality of the coffee—its aroma, taste, etc.—depends upon the essential oils contained in the coffee bean, the physiological effect of the beverage is mainly due to the drug caffeine.

Caffeine is a mild stimulant, affecting the heart and the blood vessels. It also apparently stimu-lates metabolism.

When taken in excess coffee may produce sleeplessness, nervous irritability, headache, palpitation of the heart, nausea and even vomiting.

Some are able to consume it in large quantities and show no effect at all. Others are highly sensitive to it.

Caffeine is useful in the condition known as collapse, when it helps to raise blood pressure.

The medicinal dose of caffeine is two and one-half grains, and the average cup of coffee contains from one and a half to three grains of caffeine.

There is current a widespread objection to the use of coffee by children. In the main this objection is warranted, but its reasons are not fully appreciated.

Tomorrow—Children And Coffee.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Carl Vinson of Georgia, "handlubber" chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, lost no time in getting down to work when he learned definitely that he would guide naval legislation on his side of the hill.

Within a few hours after his selection as chairman, he sat down and began to write a bill which seeks to bring the navy up to the level of the London arms conference.

One of the most cautious and thorough of men, as well as an advocate of a big navy, Vinson labored during the Christmas recess day and night.

After numerous conferences with high navy officials and much work a day or so before congress reconvened he appeared personally in the press gallery to distribute copies of his bill to the news men.
Briefly, his bill calls for a 10-year program, involving construction of 120 vessels at a cost of $616,000,000.

WANTS STRONG NAVY Representing a district that is entirely inland, Vinson has long interested himself in Uncle Sam's navy. Years of study have brought him to the belief that:

"We need a navy that is strong enough to defend our possessions and support our policies; to insure the safety of our country and the development of our commerce." And the fact that he wrote his bill calling for a huge sum of money at the time when economy is being preached so much did not phase him. He had no excuses.

"A country doesn't need a navy of one strength when she is prosperous and a navy of another size when there is an economic depression," he says simply.

GEORGIAN
Vinson is almost bald, inclined to portliness, and has an accent that would immediately identify him as coming from south Georgia.
He has the reputation of being a quick thinker.

Many say that he thinks faster

SUNSET PASS by Zane Grey

SYNOPSIS: A beautiful girl and a mystery at Sunset Pass have drawn Trueman Rock there, under the pretext of looking for work. Rock fell in love with Thiry Preston when he first met her, and his intention now is to find some excuse to stay near her.
Trouble threatens him in two directions. Ash Preston, Thiry's brother, has the reputation of a killer and resents any attention that is paid to Thiry. When Rock arrives at Sunset Pass, Ash warns him that he would better leave.
There are also mysterious rumors that Gage Preston, Ash's father and the head of the outfit, is mixed up in cattle rustling. Rock was forced to leave Wagon Tongue six years before because of a gun fight, and he does not want to get in trouble now. But the mystery excites him, and he is determined to help Thiry. Gage Preston offers Rock a job.

Chapter 14
THIRY'S ACCUSATION
Mrs. Preston appeared a worthy mate for this virile cattleman. "Ma, this is Trueman Rock, who's come to ride for me," announced Preston. Then he presented Rock to Alice, a girl of sixteen. She was shy, but curious and friendly. Rock looked instantly to the barefooted, big-eyed children, Lucy and Burr.
"Where's Thiry?" asked the rancher.

"She's ironin' 'em," replied Alice.
"Wal, didn't she hear me call?"
"Reckon she did, Pa, for you'd most woke the daild," replied his wife, and going to the door of the second cabin she called, "Thiry, we've company, an' Pa wants you." Rock caught a low protesting voice that came from inside.
"Nonsense, daughter," replied the mother. "You don't look so awful Anyway, you can't get out of here." Whereupon Thiry appeared in the door in a long blue apron that scarcely hid her graceful symmetry.
Her sleeves were rolled up to the elbow of starchy apron. She came out reluctantly, with troubled eyes and a little frown. She showed no surprise. She had seen him through the window.

"Good afternoon, Miss Preston," greeted Trueman, evincing but little of the pleasure that consumed him.

"Oh, it's Mr. Rock, our new grocery clerk," she responded, in manner and tone that was a little beyond Trueman. "How do you do, and aren't you lost way out here?"
"Reckon I was, but there's hope of me gettin' back in the trail."
"Hey, Rock, what's that about you bein' a grocery clerk?" I reckoned I was hired a cowboy."
Whereupon Rock had to explain that he had been keeping store for Sol Winter when Thiry happened in.
Thiry did not share in the laughter.
Rock thought he saw the gray eyes quicken and darken as she glanced swiftly from him to her father.

"You are a—cowboy, then," she and capable. On the way back round the porch he stopped a moment to have another glimpse. This time she glanced up and caught him.

Rock essayed to smile and pass on, to make his action seem casual.
But her gaze held him stock-still, and it was certain he could not find a ready smile. She ceased her riongling and transfixed him with great eyes of wonder and reproach, almost resentment. Ash accused him, she blamed him for coming. He had brought her more trouble. Rock was so roused that he forgot himself and returned her look with all the amaze and entreaty he felt.

"Come, Rock, let me show you the ranch," called Preston. "We're shore some proud of it."

"You ought to be. I've seen a sight of ranches, but this one is the finest," returned Rock.

"Wal, we throwed up a big cabin," Preston said, "an' we all lived in it for a while. Next I tore that cabin down an' built the double one, an' this one year, which Ash has to himself. He won't sleep with nobody."

ton's business tomorrow, but he finds a new puzzle.

Enforcement - Not Repeal

WET FINANCE

By Professor T. N. Carver
Professor of Economics
Harvard University

Those who advocate legalizing the sale of wine and beer are making some startling claims as to the financial benefits to the government. Several questions arise.

First, assuming that congress could constitutionally pass such an act, would it be binding on the state and local governments, or would they still have the power to prohibit? Second, if it is only to apply to the wet areas in the few wet states, are these wet areas to drink all the wine and beer and pay the excise taxes necessary to raise the immense revenues claimed?

If the act legalizing the sale of wine and beer is to be binding on all the state and local governments, even those which were dry before the Eighteenth Amendment, what becomes of the doctrine of states' rights which the wets hold so sacred? Or is the doctrine of states' rights sacred only when it can be invoked in behalf of their?

If state and local governments are still permitted to prohibit the sale of wine and beer, and if the people in the wet areas alone are to have the privilege of paying the excise taxes, how much will they have to drink in order to enrich the federal treasury as much as the wets claim it would? Again, how would the industrial efficiency of these wet areas be affected by such heavy drinking?

Thirty-eight states now prohibit the manufacture and sale of three per cent beer. Until these laws are repealed it could not be sold in those states even though congress should legalize it. Even in the remaining states there are considerably dry areas. Some of the wettest of these states might follow the lead of congress, but the very states' rights sentiment which the wets have been invoking would tend to prevent it.

And another wild claim made by the wets is that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would put two million men to work. The absurdity of this claim is shown by the fact that even in 1914 there were only 498,906 workers employed in the liquor business. The figures are as follows:

Brewery workers	62,363
Distillery workers	7,217
Wine making	2,259
Maltting	1,982
Retail trade	409,465
Allied manufacturers and trades	15,620

Total 498,906

It is significant that 409,465 of the 498,906 employees were engaged in retail trade, that is, in saloons.
The wets generally say that they do not want the saloon back. If there are to be no saloons, there will be no need for bartenders, mixologists or other experts in selling or mixing drinks. Only a limited number of government agents to dispense liquor would be required.

The wet propagandists also fail to tell their hearers that the money spent for alcoholic liquor can't be spent for other things. If the increase in the sale of liquor should decrease the sales of milk, ice cream and soft drinks, to say nothing of other things, any increase in the demand for bottles or for agricultural products by the liquor trade would be cancelled by the decrease in these other lines.
