That is what Leonard Alm (right) says the Payment In Kind program is doing to his custom cutting business. He and his son Tom (left) predict that this will be "the worst year we've ever had." Leonard has been starting the cutting season for 23 years in Pampa. Working his way back north, he ends the season near his home base in Griswold, Iowa cutting corn and soybeans in early December. Alm does not see much during those harvests, as corn and soybeans are included in the PIK program.

"Sure hope it helps the farmers," says Leonard Alm, "but it really hurts the custom cutter." (Staff photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Chautauqua in '83 will double its size

Pampa's own Chautauqua, staged last year at the drop of a hat, has doubled its size.

On a map of Central Park, the festival of educational entertainment, fun and games has already spilled northwest across the Cuyler Street bridge — where it ended last year — and invaded the park beyond, heading for Clarendon College.

Hot air balloon rides are on the map for the Labor Day festival this year, weather permitting, and covered wagon rides. The planning committee hopes to plot booths and exhibits on a Central Park map when it meets this week, a committee spokesperson said Saturday.

Hams from the Lefors Amateur Radio Club will send short messages anywhere in the world, and do it free. The new community theater group in town, so new it has no name, is planning a short stage play and a chance for volunteers from the audience to read parts with actors.

Gymnasts will demonstrate flips and flops every hour, and city policemen will use their radar to clock the speed of volunteer softball pitchers.

Last Labor Day, Pampa's first Chautauqua since the 1920s drew an 8,000 to 9,000 people to the park. The Pampa Fine Arts Association organized the festival in only a few weeks as a home-town picnic for the last long weekend of the summer, copying the formula of the famous Chautauquas which began in New York state a century ago and eventually sent travelling troops to towns across the country. Profits from door prizes last year (admission will be free again this year) bought some trees, being planted this month, for the city parks.

This year, with the Fine Arts Association's Chautauqua committee starting planning in April, the list of sales booths for arts and crafts, demonstrations and entertainments has mushroomed.

There will be about two dozen food and drink booths, with church groups and families selling everything from barbecue to candy apples. The Friends of the Lovett Memorial Library will tell stories to children, starting every half hour. First Baptist Church will produce a children's puppet show.

Artists will paint in the park and explain how to create a tree with oils and brush; potters will throw pots; and area fiddlers will compete with old-time music on the stage. A bit of Panhandle history will be re-enacted with a demonstration of black-powder weapons and a historical program from the Hutchinson County Museum.

The Kwahadi Indians, an Amarillo troop of costumed Boy Scouts performing Indian dances, will return. The stage show, to run all day, will include dancers, the Pampa High School Show Choir, Tae Kwan Do and aerobic demonstrations and country-western bands.

There's still room for more artists, craftsmen, performers and sellers. Anyone interested in displaying, demonstrating or selling crafts at the Chautauqua can phone Cile Taylor (displays) at 669-2034 or 665-5963, or Jean Tierney (arts-crafts) at 669-7763.

Andy out with rare malady

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Andy Griffith is recuperating at home from Guillain-Barre Syndrome, a viral nerve infection, his manager says.

"It's a thing that takes time and I don't expect Andy to go back to work for several months," manager Richard O. Linke said Friday.

Griffith, 56, best known as television's homespun Sheriff Andy Taylor of Mayberry, N.C., on his long-running "Andy Griffith Show" in the 1960s, was hospitalized in May with the infection.

Linke said Griffith is making regular visits to the hospital for physical therapy.

The illness forced Griffith to withdraw from a role in the CBS miniseries "Chiefs," co-starring Charlton Heston, which is currently filming in South Carolina.

Former Pampan named Tech regent

A former Pampan was among three nominees approved Thursday by Gov. Mark White for appointment to the Texas Tech University Board of Regents.

Gerald Joe "Jerry" Ford, formerly of Pampa who now lives in Dallas, was approved by Governor White this week, but as a courtesy to the state senate, the official appointment will not be made until July 1.

The legislature began a special session Wednesday, and the Senate must be in for 10 days before official appointments may be made. After that time the appointments can be submitted to the Senate for confirmation, a spokesman in White's office said.

Terms for the new board members will extend to Jan. 31, 1989.

Ford, 38, is chairman of the West Texas Bank Corporation headquartered in Dallas. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Coyle Ford of 1947 Grape Street in Pampa, he graduated from Pampa High School in 1962.

Ford went on to graduate from law school at Southern Methodist University. He is married and has four children.

Ford will replace Roy K. Furr on the board of regents. Also appointed to the board were Wesley Masters of Amarillo, and Don Johnson of Houston.

Second suspect nabbed for robbery

WHEELER — The second suspect in a two-year-old jewelry store robbery and the beating of an elderly shopkeeper was arrested Friday in Spearman and is now in jail in Wheeler in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Authorities said Linda Barber was arrested at her Spearman home and transported to Wheeler by Wheeler County deputies. Her ex-husband, Lester Doug Williams, was arrested in Spearman Thursday and is being held in Wheeler on a charge of aggravated robbery. His bail was set at $50,000.

Police are seeking another suspect in the crime.

Sheriff's officers say they believe it was Williams, Barber, and another man who entered the Culture Shop in Wheeler on June 29, 1981, severely beat Mrs. Roxy Hanks, and stole $56,000 worth of jewelry.

Williams' arrest came after two years of investigation by Deputy Sheriff Lonnie Miller and Texas Ranger Bill Baten of Pampa, along with a tip from inside the jail in Spearman.

A warrant has been issued for the third accomplice in the robbery, authorities said.

"We know who he is, and we know where he is, we just have to pick him up," a sheriff's office spokesman said.

Arafat stripped of power by the terrorists he founded

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat, evicted from Syria and forced to abandon his fighters in Lebanon, has been stripped of his military power and ability to strike at Israel.

After 14 years as head of the guerrilla organization, Arafat now finds events rapidly moving beyond his control. His only options are political.

Arafat, 53, always carries a pistol and frequently wears an olive drab uniform — symbols of "armed struggle" against Israel but also of the military power he used to keep himself independent of other Arab states and their supporters in the PLO.

But he no longer is able to use the military power of his Fatah guerrilla faction and its dominance of the PLO's financial resources to stop a rebellion by radical dissidents who mutinied May 7.

His ability to control 20,000 guerrillas also was an effective pressure on Saudi Arabia, and other Arab moderates with large Palestinian populations, to continue their financial support of the PLO.

From his former power bases in Lebanon and Jordan, Arafat once had the ability to strike at Israel. He had thus assured himself the option of provoking a war if he wanted.

But now his headquarters is in Tunis, Tunisia, far from the Israeli border. The last bastions of his loyalist guerrillas in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and north Lebanon's port of Tripoli are ringed by Syrian troops.

Arafat retains one strong card: Official recognition by the Arab League as spokesman for the world's 4 million Palestinians. If he is unable to make war with this card he could still attempt to make peace.

One option for Arafat may be returning to Jordan and perhaps signing an agreement with King Hussein to negotiate an end to the Arab-Israeli conflict on the basis of President Reagan's peace plan.

Arafat was forced by Syrian and Libyan-backed guerrillas to abandon that dialogue with Hussein last April because Reagan's plan does not call for an independent Palestinian state or specify a role for the PLO.

A stronger move by Arafat would be reconciling with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, the most populous Arab nation and the only one to recognize Israel. Such reconciliation would inevitably mean accepting peace with the Jewish state.

But either of those options would crack the Arab world with more devastating effect than the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peacemaking with Israel.

Syrian President Hafez Assad, who declared Arafat persona non grata Friday, may challenge Arafat's legitimacy and move to create an "alternative PLO" composed of extremists financed by him and Libya leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

It could also result in a new wave of terrorism by extremists vying to take Arafat's place.

To counter such a move by Syria and the radicals, Arafat may decide to underscore his legitimacy by forming a government in exile.

Arafat's ouster from Syria and his loss of control over the guerrillas in Lebanon will likely mean that Syria alone will determine the withdrawal of foreign forces from the country.

Arafat loyalists suggest Syria is prepared to negotiate a pullout of its 50,000 troops from Lebanon with the United States and Lebanese President Amin Gemayel's government. But they say Syria may insist that the guerrillas remain in the country.

Government seeks abolition of the insanity defense for crime

By SUSAN OKULA

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The U.S. government is asking a federal judge to abolish the centuries-old insanity defense, contending it "rots the foundations of the concept of criminal responsibility."

Lawyers and mental health experts believe a hearing that began in U.S. District Court here last week — in a case involving stolen diamonds — is the first direct challenge of the insanity defense, which provides for acquittal of a suspect if a court finds he was legally insane at the time of the crime.

The U.S. attorney's office argues the defense serves no worthwhile purpose and literally lets a person "get away with murder."

But a defense lawyer contends the government "is seeking a sadistic revenge against those who are unable to control their actions."

Revolving around the case is an issue of the merits of psychiatric testimony about the mental condition of defendants. U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes indicated he is considering three questions: how often psychiatric diagnoses of a defendant agree, how likely juries are to understand expert psychiatric testimony and how reliable are psychiatric predictions on defendants' behavior.

The government challenge appeared first in a federal court in Connecticut shortly after John W. Hinckley Jr. was acquitted by reason of insanity of the attempted assassination of President Reagan. Two defendants changed their pleas after the government's motion was submitted.

But former jewelry store manager John J. Torniero, 32, of Orange, has held to his intention of using the insanity defense in a case involving more than $500,000 in stolen diamonds. His lawyer, Hugh F. Keefe of New Haven, contends Torniero stole the diamonds because he was a compulsive gambler and couldn't help himself. Torniero is charged with 10 counts of transporting stolen goods over state lines.

The government also has asked Cabranes to ban evidence of compulsive gambling.

Any decision from Cabranes would only immediately affect the way he runs his courtroom, although the other six federal judges in Connecticut would probably adopt his reasoning, legal observers say. But if he does rule for the government, Keefe has promised to appeal and hints the case could end up before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The American Psychiatric Association estimates that successful insanity defenses are used in fewer than 1 percent of felonies committed in the United States. Dr. Abraham Halpern, a New York psychiatrist who opposes the defense, estimates U.S. mental hospitals house about 4,000 people acquitted of crimes because of insanity.

In court documents, the government is seeking to convince Cabranes that the mental conditions of defendants merit consideration only during sentencing.

"A patient found not guilty by reason of insanity for the murder of his parents killed his aunt and uncle a few months after discharge from the Buffalo (N.Y.) state hospital," Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeremiah F. Donovan wrote in the government's brief.

Lawyer saved by doctors he sued

BLOOMSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two doctors saved the life of an elderly lawyer who had a heart attack and collapsed as he was beginning to argue a malpractice suit against them in court.

Dr. Ala Al-Mashat and Dr. Ferdinand F. Szabo of Berwick lunged from seats behind the defense table and rushed across the courtroom to aid John Arnold Crisman, 71, who fell to the floor unconscious Thursday morning at the Columbia County Courthouse.

Al-Mashat checked the stricken attorney for vital signs.

quickly opened his jacket and shirt and began steady, rhythmic pumping on his chest while chanting "...one thousand one, one thousand two..."

Moments before, Crisman had told the jury how a "lack of skill, care, diligence and good judgment" by the two doctors had caused his client, Norman R. Houck of Berwick, to suffer complications following gall bladder surgery three years ago.

While Al-Mashat massaged Crisman's heart, Szabo began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Dams can't tame mighty river

By ROBERT MACY

PARKER, Ariz. (AP) — The people who live along the swirling blue-green floodwaters of the Colorado River learned the hard way that the modern miracles of man are no match for the whims of nature.

For centuries the river raced 1,400 miles from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific Ocean, gouging such chasms as the Grand Canyon and defying man's efforts to control the water. Fed by Rocky Mountain snowmelt, the river raged in the spring and summer, then dried to a trickle in the late summer and fall.

Disastrous floods ravaged Southern California's Imperial Valley from 1905 through 1907 and engineers were told to control the Colorado.

The answer began at Black Canyon, Nev., 30 miles southeast of Las Vegas, where engineers sculptured mammoth Hoover Dam, completed in 1935. Davis Dam was added 50 miles downstream, and Parker Dam 88 miles still farther down. Those dams, as well as the Glen Canyon Dam on the Utah-Arizona border, brought confidence that the Colorado had been tamed while providing water and power for Los Angeles, San Diego and other Southwestern cities.

Earlier this month, as builders of the Hoover Dam gathered to mark the 50th anniversary of the pouring of concrete for the dam, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation engineers fretted about record Rocky snowmelts.

The Colorado was dumping 500,000 gallons of water a second into Lake Powell, which straddles the Arizona-Utah border above the Grand Canyon. Record releases would be needed and that would send record flows surging down to Lake Mead and Hoover Dam.

In Brief

KREFELD, West Germany — Hundreds of protesters shouting "Bush, Go Home!" stoned the motorcade of visiting Vice President George Bush. No one in the procession is reported injured.

VATICAN CITY — The deputy editor of the Vatican newspaper resigns after publication of his editorial stating that Polish labor leader Lech Walesa had "lost his battle" and could no longer play a public role as Solidarity leader.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, expelled from Syria and forced to abandon his fighters in Lebanon, has been stripped of his military power and his ability to strike at Israel.

PARKER, Ariz. — Victims along the Colorado River have learned the hard way — the modern miracles of man are no match for the fickle whims of Mother Nature. Dams were erected a half-century ago, but the river is out of its banks once again.

SPACE CENTER, Houston — While the astronauts relax on their first day off in weeks, technicians in California prepare the space shuttle Challenger for a long ride across the country to the Kennedy Space Center.

WASHINGTON — The Medicare trust fund is inching toward insolvency, according to new projections. But an advisory panel thinks that by raising the eligibility age to 67 and raising premiums, the system can survive and expand benefits.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's ruling against the legislative veto will complicate life for members of Congress who came to rely on it as a convenient way to keep a tight rein on the president and regulation writers.

ROME — Italians are expected to deal a blow to the Communists in national elections Sunday and Monday and continue the Christian Democrats' postwar dominance of the country. The Socialist Party, Italy's third largest, is expected to gain a few percentage points.

Reagan not worried by possible 'Briefgate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he'd like to "get at the bottom" of how his 1980 campaign obtained briefing material prepared for then-President Carter.

So far, he has been briefed about the matter by his chief of staff, James A. Baker III, who the chief White House spokesman said had reviewed with Reagan the press coverage of the issue.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said that Reagan had read the letters of four administration officials outlining their recollection of the material, but had made no comment on the letters.

The briefing material in question was said to have been prepared for Carter as he studied for his debate with Reagan on Oct. 28, 1980, in Cleveland.

The president told reporters during a picture-taking session Friday that the issue amounted to "much ado about nothing." He denied knowing anything about it, and said he saw nothing strange about the fact that the four officials said they could recall little, if anything, about the material.

Speakes challenged two of Carter's key advisers in 1980 to make public any specific allegations of wrongdoing, and said: "I'd be willing to bet you a buck they're not as clean as a hound's tooth."

Appraisal group meets Monday to hear report

The Board of Directors of the Gray County Appraisal District will meet Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the district's office, Hughes Building, suite 190-A, 400 W. Kingsmill, Pampa.

After a review of and taking action on expenses, the board will hear a financial report and a reappraisal report from Charles Buzzard the chief appraiser. The proposed budget for 1984 will also be submitted.

Persistent sheriff stalked Lucas for full nine months

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — Montague County Sheriff W.F. Conway began stalking Henry Lee Lucas on the September day that an 80-year-old woman was reported missing.

For nine months, Conway "worked day and night" and "put in hundreds of hours" in his effort to link the 46-year-old man to the slaying of Kate Rich of Ringgold.

Conway finally got his man — along with more than he had bargained for. The drifter told the sheriff he had killed 100 women, including Mrs. Rich, in 16 states.

"I told my wife if he made a statement on this murder there probably would be several more," Conway told The Dallas Morning News shortly before a judge issued a gag order in the Lucas case. "A person just doesn't come into a state and do something like this and not have done another crime before."

Lucas, who had worked for the woman a short time, was the "No. 1 suspect" in Mrs. Rich's death from the beginning, Conway said.

The investigation took him to Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arizona, New Mexico and California. "I was staying on the road most of the time," Conway said.

He booked Lucas in October on a fugitive auto theft warrant from Maryland, but authorities in that state refused to extradite him, Conway said. He was released five days later.

"Early in the year, he decided I was getting too close to him, and he went out one night into the woods and picked up Ms. Rich's remains and burned them," Conway said.

"He washed his hands in muddy waters, but he just didn't get them clean."

The sheriff's break came June 11, when he arrested Lucas on charges of possession of a firearm by a felon.

"Five days later, he sent word to me that he had something to tell me. That's when he gave me a statement."

Lucas drew sketches and gave details of some of the murders, Conway said. Sheriff's officers obtained a search warrant and found human bone fragments in Lucas' wood-burning stove.

By Thursday, Conway was being called by law enforcement officials in 19 states. But for Conway and his three deputies, the tedious investigation was almost over.

Lucas has been charged with three Texas slayings — including that of Mrs. Rich.

"I always say it's luck. But some might say it came from hard work," Conway said.

A long look at balanced funds

By TOM BYRD

Another category of funds that we might examine is Balanced Funds.

Balanced Funds, as you might suspect, attempt to balance their portfolio between debt (bonds) and equity (stocks) securities. They tend to buy selected stocks on the downside and sell them during a market rise. They are generally less aggressive in their investment and philosophy.

Their primary investment objective is to provide above average current income consistent with the prudent employment of their capital. This is normally achieved by the selection of bonds and preferred stocks. These two investments should provide the income the fund seeks. The "consistent with the prudent employment of capital" merely means they use prudent judgment in the selection of their investments. This implies not selecting a bond just because it has a high current income.

Remember, we have previously pointed out that any bond offering an exceptionally high yield — that is, out-of-line with similar bonds of like rating and maturity — usually carries with it some additional risks. That is why the bond pays more interest. You are being additionally compensated for the additional risk you are willing to assume.

So, the fund's management weighs this — the risk and rewards — and decides what compromise, if any, they will make in their decision. Bonds and stocks (preferred) are primary income vehicles with growth potential secondary. Therefore, to balance the portfolio the fund is also managed to take opportunities for growth of capital by selecting securities (usually common stocks) that offer a better than average yield and may also possess growth potential. The aim is to vary these investments in debt and equity in accordance with the investment adviser's interpretation of economic and money market conditions, fiscal and monetary policy and underlying security values.

If the fund managers are successful in the analysis, they will be able to have the bulk of their capital in bonds when interest rates are high.

Byrd is an investment broker for the Edward D. Jones Company of Pampa.

Lucas: A drifter who grew up in institutions

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, who claims to have killed 100 women in 16 states, is described by acquaintances and relatives as a drifter who grew up in poverty and spent much of his adult life in institutions.

Lucas, convicted in 1960 of murdering his mother, has been charged with three slayings and has talked about the killings of as many as 60 women.

Texas officials say they have linked the former mental patient to at least two of the so-called "I-35" murders, a series of slayings in which about 20 young women were found slain along Interstate 35 from Austin to Oklahoma during the late 1970s and 1980.

New Jersey investigators planned to question Lucas Saturday about an unsolved slaying in that state.

Lucas, who is being held under $1 million bond, says he also has killed women in New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, California, Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Michigan, West Virginia, Florida, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Lucas grew up in Blacksburg, Va., an affluent college town nestled between the Blue Ridge and Shenandoah mountains, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram said in a copyright story Saturday.

But the Lucases "lived in a log shack with a room stuck onto one end," a nephew, Leonard Kiser, told the newspaper. "The place was not very neat. There were dishpans with water that looked like they'd been sitting there for a month. It was all rough-looking."

He said Lucas' mother had been married before she met Lucas' father and had at least eight children.

The 1945 Blacksburg school census listed Lucas' father,

Anderson, as "crippled and not working."

Lucas quit school after the fifth grade and in 1952, his mother Viola drew a suspended sentence on a misdemeanor charge of failing to make her son attend school.

At some point, Lucas lost an eye, reportedly from a BB gun or a knife slash, during an argument with his brother.

Police in Tecumseh, Mich., say Lucas spent time in a Georgia reform school and that they picked him up in 1956 after he escaped from a Virginia prison road gang. Virginia and Georgia records on Lucas were unavailable.

In 1959, Lucas returned to Tecumseh to live with his half-sister after he reportedly was paroled from a Virginia prison where he had been serving a six-year term for burglary.

Tecumseh police said they often answered disturbance calls at the home of the half-sister, Opal Jennings.

Kiser said Lucas' mother often visited the home and it was during one of those visits that Lucas killed the 74-year-old woman, strangling and beating her before stabbing her to death in an upstairs bedroom.

Lucas was sentenced to 20 to 40 years in prison. He spent six years in a mental institution, Ionia State Hospital, and was paroled from a Michigan state prison in 1970.

He went to Maryland, again to live with Mrs. Jennings. Less than a year later, he was in trouble in Michigan again — this time accused of molesting two young girls. The charge was reduced to attempted kidnapping and he spent another four years in Michigan prisons before being paroled to Maryland for the second time.

"Nobody in the family really trusted him," said Kiser, who lived with the Mrs. Jennings at the same time as Lucas. "I had an 8-year-old daughter then, and I didn't trust him around my daughter. I watched him like a hawk."

Kiser said Lucas several times "pulled a knife on Opal. There was always some uproar over there."

At some point after his 1975 parole, Lucas married Betty Crawford, the widow of one of his cousins, but the marriage was short-lived, said Kiser. He said Lucas was working part time for Kiser's family auto-salvage business and "collecting some welfare."

The salvage job ended, Kiser said, when Lucas stole a truck from the company that was loaded with "about $2,000 worth of tools."

A warrant was issued for Lucas' arrest and he was traced to Florida, "but by that time he had sold everything off the truck," Kiser said.

Shirley, we'll all miss you...

There are few of us who can honestly say their efforts have made a significant contribution to our community, but Shirley Kucifer is one of those few.

For years, Pampans had wondered what to do about shut-ins...those who for reasons of health or age are unable to leave home. Some older people forget to eat altogether, or eat the wrong food. As a consequence, unless they had close family or friends to care for them, they died before their time.

A group called the Gray County Committee on Aging had tried to come up with an answer to this problem for two years, but lacked the one spark it needed to carry it through.

Enter Shirley Kucifer. Before moving to Pampa in 1978, Shirley had started a Meals on Wheels Program for shut-ins in Dumas.

When she set up housekeeping in Pampa, she wasn't anxious to take on the monumental task of operating a similar program here. She knew all too well the headaches, problems, weather difficulties and loss of sleep that goes with that job.

But the committee finally wore down her objections, and Shirley Kucifer donned the harness of director of Pampa's fledgling Meals on Wheels program in October of 1978. There were 45 shut-ins on the daily meal list then.

In the last five years, Shirley has done it all at one time or another...drive truck...cook meals...wash dishes...and do the bookwork and financial planning such a program requires.

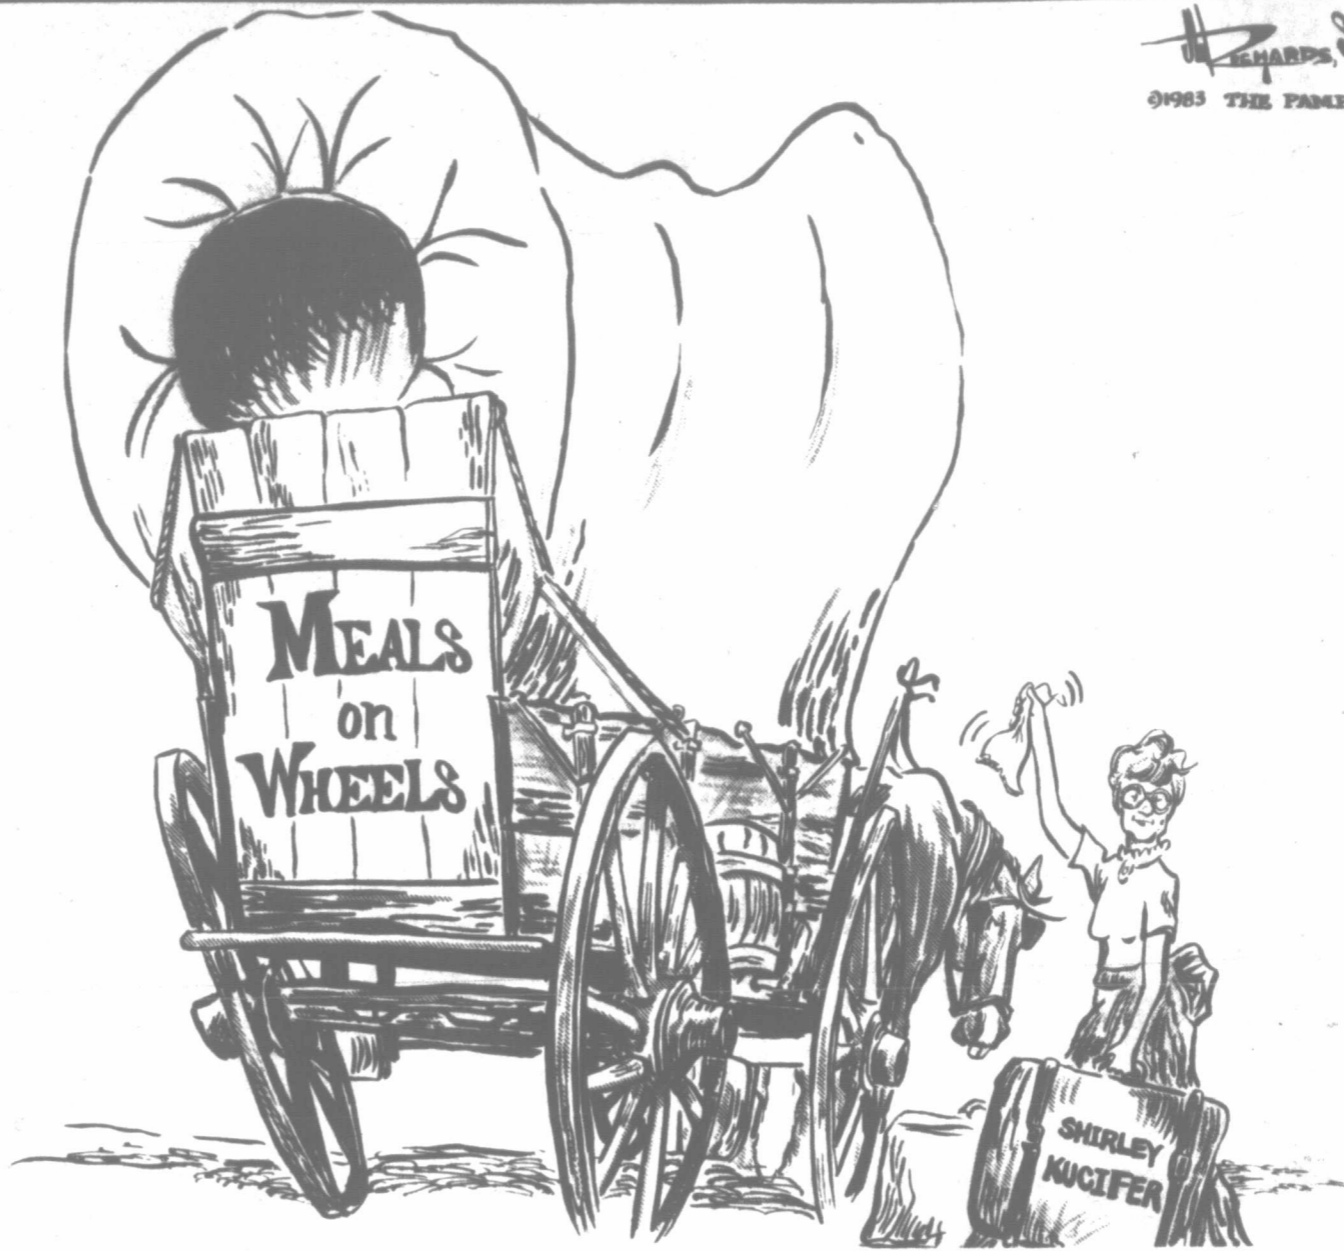

Meals on Wheels began by borrowing the kitchen at Leisure Lodge (now the Coronado Nursing Center), and grew from there. And as the number of meal recipients grew, so did the public support. Because Meals on Wheels is also an example of what a community can do for itself without having to put a burden on the taxpayer. The money comes from individual contributions, donated time, and a portion of the United Way money collected each year.

Today, Pampa's Meals on Wheels feeds 120 people one good meal each day...that works out to 43,800 meals each year.

Shirley Kucifer is leaving for Sweetwater, Texas this week, and to say she will be sorely missed here would be an understatement. Her touch has been felt by so many here who needed her, and the others at Meals on Wheels, every day for their very survival.

Good luck to you, Shirley. And good luck to us, too...because you left a big apron to fill.

Life ain't easy for a general in Argentina

By DON GRAFF

Things may be, as usual, fairly tough all over but they are much more so for the generals and admirals in Buenos Aires these days.

Their regime, a favorite of some strategically situated Americans such as United Nations Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick but a bust with the folks back home, is in deep trouble. They know it and are looking for an out - any out.

The possibility they are now trying to cut a deal with the Peronist party they threw out of office in a 1976 coup that launched a military terror in which thousands of Argentines and others - estimates range from a minimum 6,000 all the way up to 30,000 - disappeared.

The thinking seems to be that since the Peronist leadership initially unleashed the troops on the people in response to the escalating guerrilla violence of the '70s, it shares the blame for the consequences to seek retribution when the country is returned to civilian rule later this year.

Or the officers may simply be realists - which would be a precedent of sorts in Argentine politics. Recognizing that the Peronists are the inevitable inheritors of the power the military is relinquishing, they are trying to make the best of a bad situation that is also of their own making. Scrambling to salvage some of the pieces of their power and prestige after the debacle of last year's Falklands war, they made a public promise of elections with which they are now trapped. The voting is set for October.

If the officers had any lingering doubts as to how low they have fallen in esteem at home and abroad, such were resolved with the release at the end of April of their long-delayed report on the terror's victims. They accounted for only 2,050 individuals, denied knowledge of thousands of others known to have disappeared and criticized families of the vanished ones for continuing to press the issue.

The report sparked denunciations and demonstrations at home and affronted protests from Italy, France, Spain, the Vatican and the secretary - general of the U.N. After a delay of several weeks, possibly indicating a futile hope that the issue would go away given time, the U.S. State Department also weighed in with an expression of "disappointment."

But then look at it this way. Most of the other governments involved were concerned about numbers of their own citizens among the disappeared. Americans got off lightly in that respect and have only our relationship with the present and future Argentine government to think about. That and, of course, the U.S. image throughout Latin America much of the population of which is either forced to endure repressive regimes or has very recent memories of the experience.

Whatever, another transfer of power is coming, as it must eventually in all societies no matter how apparently firm the ruling hand, in an Argentina polarized since Juan Peron seized the supreme leadership in 1946 and launched Peronism, more a populist cult than a political party. Practical alternatives of the moderate right or left have long since been all but eliminated from Argentine politics.

The Peronist leadership, now in union hands, will be getting no deal when it takes over from the officers. The economy is a wreck and inflation the world's worst. Last year, the government began issuing the world's worst, initially worth $100 U.S. Currently, one will get you maybe $10 on the black market.

Considering their crowd - pleasing but economically ruinous penchant in previous periods of power for hiking wages and freezing prices at unrealistically low levels, the Peronists are not the most promising candidates to be the ones to lead a recovery.

Argentines appear about to demonstrate once again their awesome ability to overcome all their immense natural advantages through their inability to learn from their own disastrous history. They are the world's best teachers of how not to run a naturally rich and potentially thriving country.

Things may indeed be tough down there, but it is a fairly safe bet that Argentines - and we - haven't seen anything yet.

Today in history

Today is Sunday, June 26, the 177th day of 1983. There are 188 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 26, 1945, the United Nations charter was signed in San Francisco by 50 nations.

On this date:

In 1284, according to legend, the Pied Piper of Hamelin, Germany, lured 130 children from the town, and they were never heard from again.

In 1844, President John Tyler married Julie Gardiner in a secret ceremony in New York.

In 1944, Allied forces recaptured Cherbourg, France, from the Germans during World War II.

In 1972, floodwaters from Hurricane Agnes began to recede after leaving more than 120 people dead in the Northeast.

Ten years ago: The House of Representatives passed a bill barring funds for bombing operations in Cambodia and Laos.

Five years ago: A bombing at the Versailles Palace in France wrecked three rooms containing art works celebrating the Napoleonic Era.

One year ago: The United States vetoed a United Nations resolution demanding a limited withdrawal of Israeli and Palestine Liberation Organization forces from Lebanon.

Today's birthday: Writer Colin Wilson is 52.

The sticky business of tipping in Europe today

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

LONDON (NEA) —A three-week sojourn in Western Europe, concentrating on Italy and England, has resulted in some miscellaneous observations and reflections which I herewith pass along. It is still a captivating part of the world, but there has been some changes.

After sober reflections (and a little of the other kind, too), I hereby award to Rome the prize for the worst all-round traffic mess in the world. New York's isn't even a close second, despite the immense number of cars involved; its system of gridded streets and avenues is far too logical.

Tokyo's are more reckless than Rome's, and the slow strangulation of Tokyo's overhead expressways by heavy traffic suggests that a second layer of such arteries may soon have to be superimposed on the first; but the unescapable congestion of Rome's narrow streets, laid out as intricately as a bowl of spaghetti, sets the stage for a sort of congealed chaos that no other city can match.

To ease the congestion, the Roman authorities have shrewdly banned the parking of private cars virtually anywhere in the central city. But, since this is obviously impractical, the residents simply ignore the ban — every street in Rome is permanently lined with illegally - parked (and double-parked) cars. The coup de grace is delivered by a series of one-way streets fiendishly calculated to force the whole city's traffic to converge on the Piazza Venezia. Here, a group of striking taxi-drivers is usually assembled (with their obstructing cabs), producing the vehicular equivalent of a blood clot in the city's heart. It really has to be seen to be believed.

But life is far from unbearable in Italy. I am sometimes asked which, of all the places I have visited, I have enjoyed the most — an impossible question, because it must be sharply qualified before it can conceivably be answered: "For what purpose?" "For how long?" etc. And yet, as a short-form answer, I frequently reply: "the Italian Lake District." This lovely region of Lombardy on the southern slopes of the Alps is blessed with five major lakes and numerous minor ones, all of sapphire-blue. For 2,000 years it has been the ambition of everyone with enough money to own a villa overlooking one of these exquisite lakes, with snow peaks of the Alps sparkling in the distance. A steamboat excursion on Lake Como, or Lake Maggiore, or Lake Lugano in good weather comes close to my version of paradise.

London, like most of Europe, had a cold, wet spring, but by the time I got here the worst was over and the sun was doing its healing work. For American admirers of this grand old city, there is both good news and bad news. First, the bad news: Those boxy, shiny-black London taxis are beginning to sprout advertising. Thus far, the ads are confined to the front door panels below the windows on both sides of the cab, but it isn't hard to see where it's all headed: Before long, every London taxi will be heavily festooned as a newlywed's limousine. The good news is that the Houses of Parliament, including Big Ben and Victoria Tower, are being scrubbed clean of 150 years' accumulation of London grime. The job is barely half done, but already the cleaned portions positively glow with a subtle blend of honey, gold and ochre tones.

As all cynics and pessimists expected, the automatic 15 percent charge for services that was added to many European hotel and restaurant bills some years back, greatly simplifying the problem of what to tip, is now gradually disappearing into the basic bill — leaving it up to the bewildered tourist to agonize over adding a futher 10 percent or more. In my hotel restaurant, the menu is magnificently obscure: "Prices are fully inclusive," it coos, thereby clearly implying that a service charge has been included; but then it adds sweetly, "Gratuities are entirely up to you." That's nice; but has one been included in the total, or not? The upshot is that most tourist these days are tipping the management and staff 25 percent or more, involuntarily.

I have noted an interesting change in the latest paperback thrillers. Liberal writers can't stand to make the Russians the Bad Guys, and it's really getting a little absurd to fall back on the Nazis — to be plausible, any Nazi villain must now be pushing 80. So, these days, the fashionable meanies are not the NKVD or even the Gestapo; they are — you guessed it — America's own CIA agents. What a murderous, cold-blooded bunch. I would have never guessed it.

To a healthy shotgun wedding...

By PAUL HARVEY

It was a shotgun wedding - between medical science and nutrition.

Just a decade ago, nutrition was considered quackery, was never taught in med school. It is now. The science of medicine and the now accepted science of nutrition have stopped mean - mouthing one another in favor of mutual respect.

The American Cancer Society last month held a national conference on breast cancer; heard further evidence that diet may contribute to - or protect against - breast cancer.

Hereditry remains the most significant factor, but what you eat is next.

The conference heard warnings against unsaturated fats. Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, of all places, reports in Science News that "40 percent of hip - fracture patients were vitamin D deficient. Seventy - five percent of osteomalacia (softening of the bone) patients lacked vitamin D."

These findings have since been confirmed by Virje University, Amsterdam.

Research funded by the Saturday Evening Post Society revealed that people who take lysine have less cancer.

Lysine, taken one, two or three years, 500 milligrams per day or more, appears to effect a reduced incidence of cancer.

The Society's research director, Dr. Cory SerVaas, says it is too early to claim a certain cause - effect relationship, though this clinical report tends to confirm laboratory findings that "high lysine and low arginine retard growth of a number of viruses."

Now hear this: Dr. Bruce Ames of the University of California, biochemist, is recipient of this year's Charles Mott prize for cancer research.

He says that future cancer studies will focus, not on manmade carcinogens which might cause cancer, but will focus instead on "diet which does cause aging and disease."

He says researchers have overburdened themselves with concerns about manmade substances. Now they will concentrate on cancer - diet research, after which he believes "the answer will come rather quickly."

This, remember, is a scientist whose whole professional experience and reputation are built on knowledge of carcinogens causing cancer and who is now focusing on diet to prevent it.

The New England Journal of Medicine and the Journal of the American Medical Association, traditionally derisive of "the vitamin peddlers" are now selectively endorsing them.

As I say, it was a shotgun wedding but at long last it appears to be a compatible one.

Senior Writer

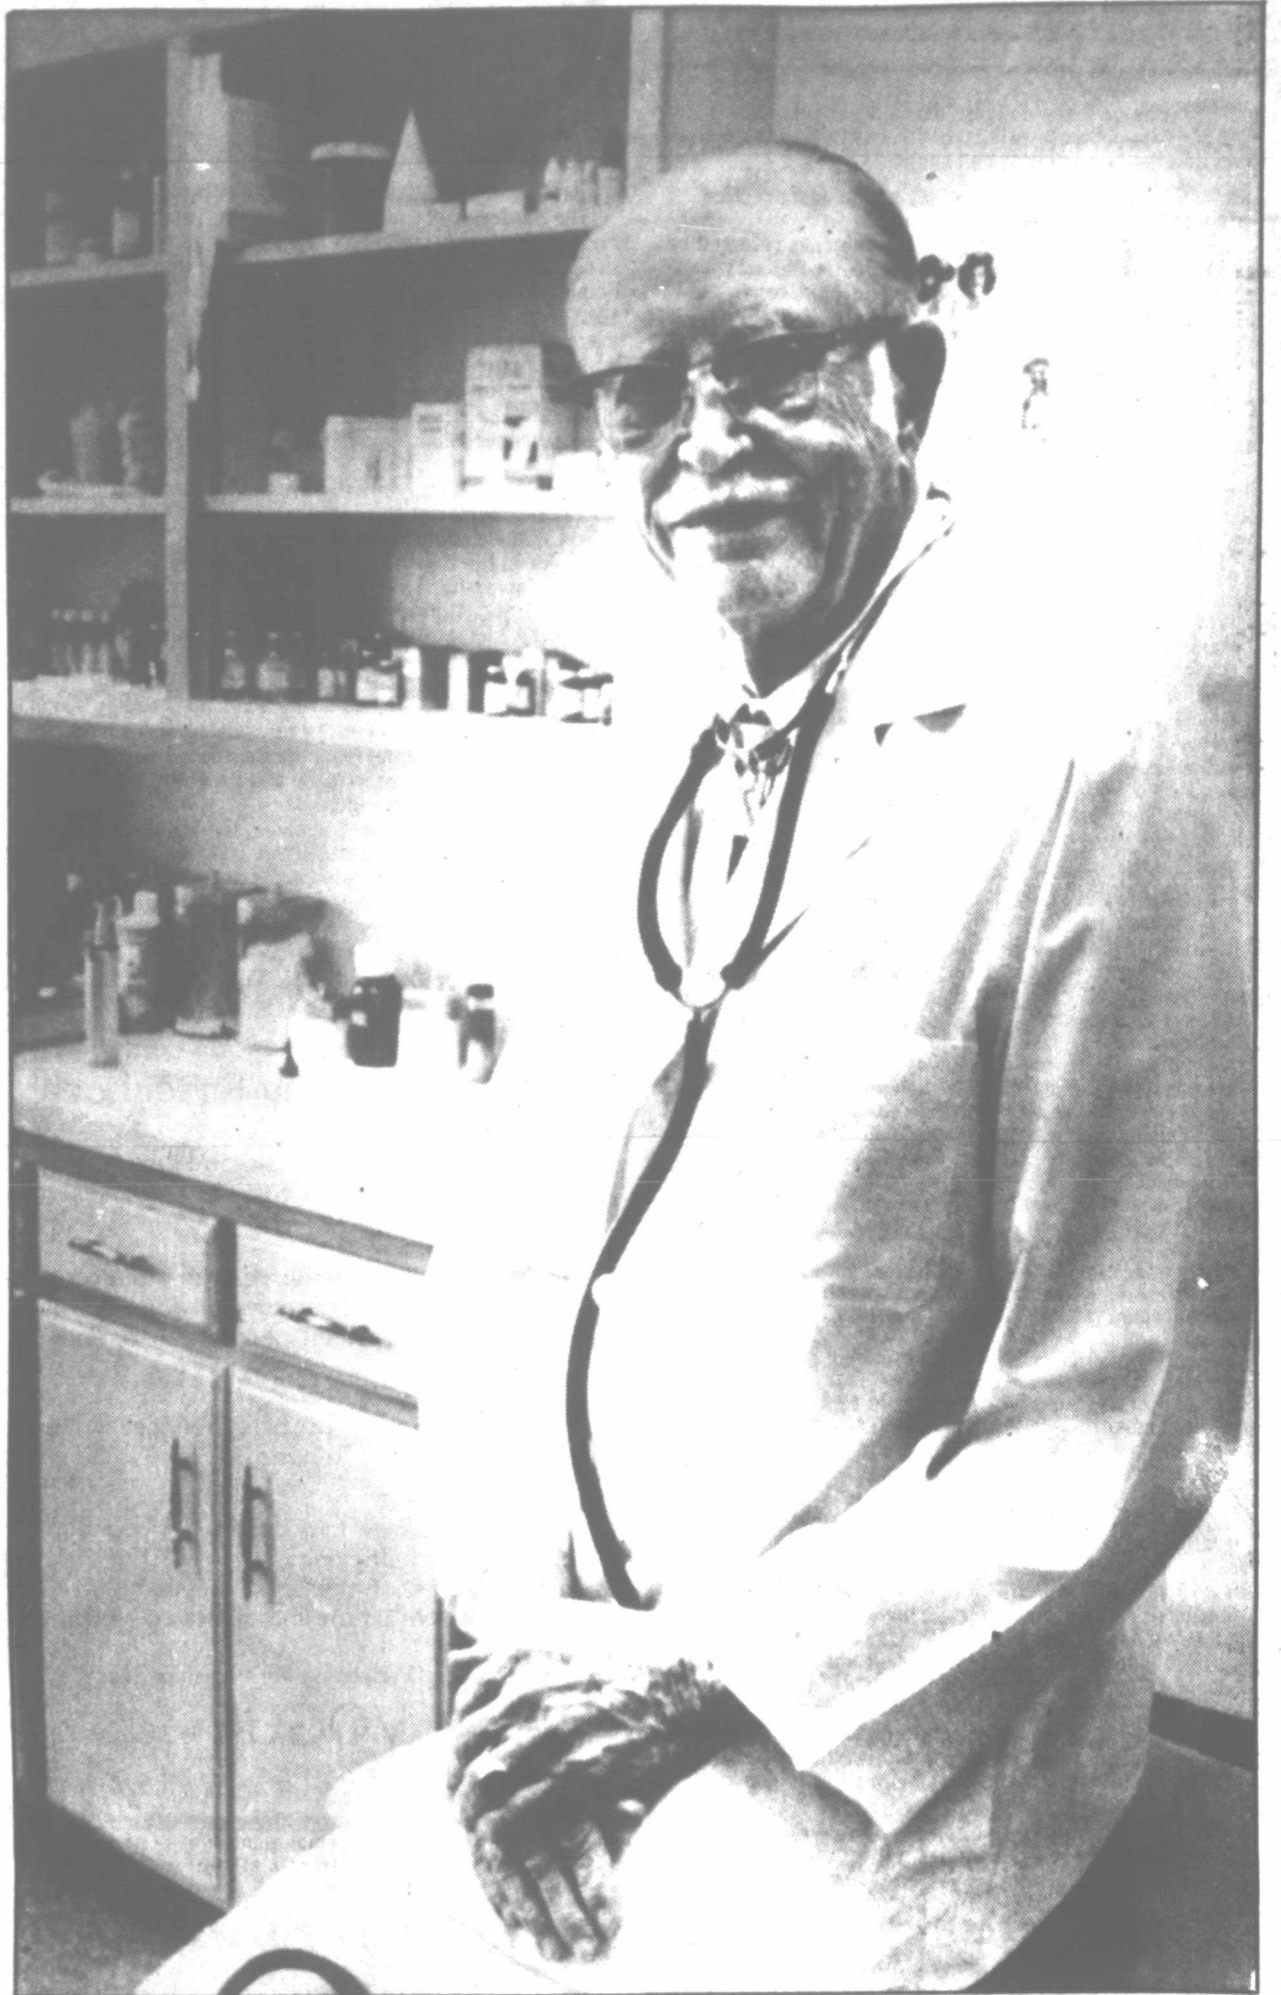

"Back in those days:"
The doctor had no antibiotics. Aspirin was a fairly - new "miracle drug." Heart transplants, artificial hearts, and AIDS disease weren't in a doctor's imagination. Medical schools and hospitals had no equivalent of today's residency programs. Office calls were $2. House calls were solicited. Receptionists were unknown. Doctors practiced the "Art of Medicine." And Pampa was a late - 1920s boomtown.
And "back in those days" is the time a young Dr. Russell Milton Bellamy began practicing medicine here.
Dr. Bellamy, 82, retired earlier this month after 54 years of delivering Pampa's babies, pulling bone fragments from her injured drillers' brains, sewing up her wounded bootleggers, and healing and consoling her sick and dying.
While the Pampa doctor practiced the "Art of Medicine," he witnessed more advances in medical science than those recorded through all history.
Dr. Bellamy was born May 5, 1901 in Toledo, Ohio. Bellamy's father was also a doctor, who could do no more for his tubercular wife than to move to a Southern climate.
The Bellamys moved to Dallas when the doctor was six, "right after the Trinity River Flood." His family first lived there in old hotels and rooming houses.
The doctor recalls vividly his boyhood amazement at the gallows across the street from the family's hotel in front of the courthouse in downtown Dallas. Bellamy said the official gallows hadn't been used for several years, but the dead black man the doctor saw after a lynching by a Dallas mob didn't need the state's gallows.
"It was awful. I was eight or nine years old. It was the first time I'd ever seen a dead person."
"They had built a twenty - foot wooden arch for a national Elks convention right out in front of the first Neiman - Marcus store. On top, it had an Elk horn."
"Word got out, and everybody went rushing down there — all the kids. We just stood there and gawked. He had been hanging there several hours, dangling from the arch. He was supposed to have raped a white woman."
"That was Dallas back in those days. It always bothered me. Black people went through a long period of injustice." Bellamy remembers about the lynching by a Dallas "gang."
Bellamy's father's medical practice took him away from home for long and odd hours. "That was the reason I wasn't going to be a doctor — I said, 'To heck with that.'"
"Outside of delivering babies, I don't think they did a lot of good. I now refer to it as the 'Art of Medicine.' You had to know your patient. You consoled them — placed a cold rag on their heads. If anything was inflamed, it was soaked. They used mustard plasters and cranberry poultices.
"Oh, they knew how to set bones and amputate limbs. But my father stuck a pair of scissors in one eye when he was a child, so he couldn't do surgery," Bellamy said about his father's medical practice at the turn of the century.
Bellamy grew up in Dallas and graduated from high school there. The future Pampa doctor then set out for the University of Texas at Austin to study geology and fisticuffs.
"I wanted to be a boxer."
"I had a few fights, but I usually got whipped."
A boxer named Lacy "dampened my spirits a good deal," and Bellamy considered he wasn't cut out for the sport when Lacy "beat the Sam Hill out of me."
"He and his brother had a reputation as the 'Fightin' Lacy's.' I had heard about seeing stars — I remember what a flash of light it was. I heard the bones crunch."
The fight put Bellamy on the canvas and on his way to an Austin infirmary for treatment by his future wife.
"I didn't pay much attention to her. I was worried about my nose."
"She didn't think too much of me either," he said.
But after he was released, "My roommate said, 'Say, that was sure a good lookin' nurse. I guess I went back to see her.'" Bellamy recalls.
The retired doctor still had no interest in medicine until his sophomore year at U.T. He was out for the summer and couldn't land his usual construction job. Finally, his father arranged a job with a doctor friend in a Dallas lab.
"Back in those days, we didn't have automatic testing. We did all that by hand."

"Dr. Thompkees was a little, shriveled up - looking guy with great big ears. He was a graduate of Harvard and one of the original residents of the Mayo Clinic."
"Something about that fellow — he just changed me — I followed him around like a little puppy dog, just watching to see what he'd do next."
Bellamy was hooked on medicine. He took some extra summer courses, and then entered Baylor Medical School when it was located in Dallas. He served a year's internship at Parkland Hospital.
Meantime, the nurse who treated his broken nose transferred from the Austin infirmary to Parkland. The $25-per - month intern and and nurse soon were dating, when rare, free time allowed.

Get them better

"I think that's the reason she moved to Dallas," he said.
Bellamy married the nurse and went on to Tulane University for post - graduate work. He was ready for his state board exams.
"Back in those days, you took five days in Austin. It was awful. Of course, everybody was afraid. I lost about seven pounds — I couldn't eat."
"Anyway, I passed the board."
"I started practicing with my father in Dallas. Back in those days, you didn't have a receptionist. Nobody had insurance — nobody had Medicare — you didn't even think of it. Office calls were two dollars," he said. Bellamy made house calls, too. "I was tickled to death to make them — I wasn't that well known."

But unlike most of today's doctors who open a practice, "I wasn't making any money," Bellamy said.

The only patients he could get were the ones referred by his dad. But he saw a friend and fellow doctor Bellamy knew from the time he "moonlighted" at an emergency clinic during his Dallas internship.

"I said, 'I'm starvin'...'"

His friend was working as a doctor for the Gulf Pipeline Company, and he thought he could get Bellamy a job.

"It was $350 per month, 10 cents a mile, plus expenses. It sure sounded like a good deal to me."

The doctor landed the Gulf job and traveled from camp to camp and tent to tent. He patched up injured oilfield hands and gave some of the country's first pre-employment physicals for Gulf.

After putting in a little more than a year in the camps, Bellamy yearned to be closer to his wife and the two children who had been added to the family.

Working in the oil patch, he bumped into Pampa doctor J.C. McKean. McKean operated a 24-bed hospital and office above what is now the Singer Sewing Center at 214 N. Cuyler.

Dr. McKean wanted Bellamy to fill in for him at the Pampa hospital for a couple of weeks. When McKean returned about a month later, he talked Bellamy into staying on.

In 1929, the doctor began the Pampa practice that would continue for more than half a century.

During his practice, hundreds of Pampa grandparents and their offspring have come into the world in Bellamy's hands.

The doctor has pulled bone fragments from drillers' brains. "Back in those days, they didn't wear hard hats."

He patched up bootleggers during Prohibition. The doctor once sewed up an outlaw, while rival, armed gang members just outside the door hollered for more of the victim's hide. The sheriff arrived just in time.

Bellamy stayed in Pampa through the Depression. "It sure was tough. I didn't have enough money to leave."

And he served as an Air Force doctor during World War II. Bellamy worked with Pampa's pioneer doctors.

"When I came to Pampa, that was before the days of antibiotics."

He first used an antibiotic, "sulfanilamide, the very first sulfa drug," on a pneumonia patient in the old Worley Hospital.

"When we gave a blood transfusion, you had the donor on one table and the recipient on another table, side-by-side. We connected the veins with tubing. Now, you have a blood bank."

Dr. Bellamy has lived and practiced during the most amazing developments in medicine.

But now he has retired, and even at 82, that's a little hard for him to take.

"If your life's work is one thing, and it suddenly comes to an end..." He visited his old office in the Hughes Building last week. "My name is no longer on the door. They're changing the walls." The realization that he won't be treating patients disturbs him.

"I'm going to Alaska this summer. I'll still go to the hospital staff meetings. I'm thinking about fishing. I haven't played golf in 30 or 40 years. I have a little garden out in back. We'll make a few trips."

Dr. Bellamy knows he's retired to the easy life with his second wife Dorothy. But his thoughts always return to medicine.

"I always enjoyed seeing a patient get well. You don't see sincere doctors treating patients just to make a dollar. That's a universal feeling of doctors. "If you can't get them well, get them better."

Newhawk finds hardest story to write is his own

By KERIGUTEN
San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — At 81 2-3, Holland McCombs still hasn't found time to write his life story.

"The hardest story to write is my own," said the veteran magazine journalist who has reported some of the greatest stories of the century, including the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Although he's retired from Time Inc. and its many magazines, the San Antonian is too busy balancing 26 other projects, two main offices, five homes and his wife Marguerite to devote much time to chronicling his life history.

Yet he's more than happy to share a tale or two or three or four.

McCombs is a man who's always had his hand in the cookie jar of life, and he delights in telling how he's lived life to the fullest... and continues to do so.

He sits on the broad patio of his wife's elegant home near Trinity University, a variety of mementos, including a sepia baby portrait of himself, spread across a glass-top table.

Although he and Marguerite share homes in Dallas, Houston, Wheelock and Honolulu, San Antonio is more and more becoming home for the busy couple.

Yet "home" to McCombs will always be Woodley Farm, "in the northwest corner of Tennessee, 28 miles from Old Man River and nine miles from the Kentucky line," where he was born in 1901, and grew to be a child of the Roaring '20s and its reckless, carefree lifestyle.

"The 1920s was the best decade; the whole world was wonderful," McCombs recalled, pausing to reposition his English motoring cap to a jaunty angle.

"I miss those times. I look back at them longingly. Today people take themselves too seriously. Back then, no one took anything seriously; you were a real square if you did."

In his younger days, McCombs was a gypsy, wandering the world, doing whatever it took to satisfy his curiosity for life.

By the time he applied for work at Time Inc. in 1935 at age 32, he had worked 33 jobs and needed an extra page on his application to list them all.

He has worked as a sugar chemist in Mexico, California and Cuba; an oil field hand; a cotton broker's squidge (sample collector); a semi-professional baseball player; a salesman of used cars, radios, insurance, chemicals, tires, fire extinguishers and vacuum cleaners; an operator of a share-expense travel bureau, a lonely hearts club and two riding academies; a professional gambler and card dealer; and finally as a correspondent and bureau chief for Time Inc.

Not bad for a man without a college degree.

"I've been on the campuses of six universities, but I have no degree; I was a dropout at the University of Tennessee."

Northern Gas brings its rates down

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Omaha-based Northern Natural Gas Company announced Thursday it will reduce its wholesale natural gas rates by approximately 1 percent effective Monday.

The reduction, amounting to about $2.2 million, results from a 1 percent decrease in the cost of transporting gas through the Northern Border Pipeline, company officials said.

Northern Natural Gas and other firms that ship gas through the pipeline are allowed to adjust their rates twice each year to reflect any increase or decrease in the transportation rates they pay Northern Border.

Elderly man sells old, rare books

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Barney Bradshaw buys, sells and sometimes breathes books.

Old books are stacked in the garage and an extra bedroom, or carefully shelved in the den and living room of the 74-year-old Lufkin house he shares with his wife of 46 years.

But there is one book in particular that the soft-spoken rare-book dealer would like to sell: a Geneva, or "Breeches," Bible that was printed in London more than 375 years ago.

Bradshaw, who has been collecting books for 30 years, immediately imparts this trick of the trade and a tip for novices. If a dealer tells you a book is bound in leather, smell it. Demonstrating with his nose literally in the book, Bradshaw said leather will carry a stronger, muskier scent than imitation bindings. Some might call it the "breathe before you buy" method of selecting books.

The "Breeches" Bible, published in 1608, will go for $400. It got its name from a passage in Genesis in which Adam and Eve discover their nakedness. "They sewed fig leaves together and made themselves breeches" is the way the ancient book renders the passage.

Most subsequent versions of the Bible, including the King James, which replaced the Geneva Bible, say Adam and Eve made aprons from the fig leaves.

The Geneva Bible first was published in 1560, and lasted through 140 editions and more than 80 years, making it an extremely popular Bible for the period.

The centuries-old relic, which is several inches thick, is in good shape. It has been rebound in leather in the last century or so, Bradshaw estimates.

Bradshaw says he will sell any of the thousand or so books he owns, but his wife Evelyn disagrees. "He hates to part with them. He wants to find a new, kind, loving home for the books, particularly the Geneva Bible," she said.

She readily admits to a lack of enthusiasm for her husband's hobby, although she taught reading clinics in the Lufkin schools for 20 years.

But that doesn't dampen his enthusiasm. He happily jumps from one volume to another, explaining the history of the book or giving tidbits about the author.

Most of the books, he said, came from garage sales, although he also buys from book dealers through a magazine.

Bradshaw said he got started collecting books because he likes to read. "I never cared about selling books until I retired and I decided I had more than I could read," he said.

Among the peculiar books Bradshaw has is "The History and Description of Angelina County, Texas."

SICK PLANT AND PRESERVATION CLINIC

A clinic to assist home gardeners with food preservation questions and to diagnose sick plants, soil or insect problems will be held June 30. The hours for the free clinic are from 2 to 6 p.m. in the Pampa Mall.

This is a come-and-go affair for anyone with problems or questions about sick plants, insects or food preservation. Vegetable gardeners can bring pressure canner lids with dial or geared gauges to be tested free of charge by Donna Brauchi, county extension agent-home economics. She will also answer any questions relative to food preservation - canning or freezing that anyone may have.

Anyone with problems relating to diseases, insects, soil fertility, gardening and general landscape plants are invited to bring sick or trouble specimens to the informal clinic on Thursday.

There will be three Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialists on hand to assist and counsel homeowners with problems. These specialists include Dr. Bob Berry, plant pathologist; Dr. Carl Patric, entomologist; and Dr. Dale Pennington, soil chemist.

This informal clinic is sponsored by the Gray County Horticulture and Family Living Committees in cooperation with the Gray County Extension office.

Tell your friends and neighbors about the clinic as this will be the best opportunity to get some answers on sick plants during the entire summer growing season. Bring your sick plant specimens or insects to this clinic and one or more of the specialists will assist in advising you on your plant problems. You can get assistance on your food preservation questions and get your pressure canner lids with gauges tested.

Several Extension Service publications will also be available to assist residents with related subject matter. LANDSCAPE IRRIGATION TIPS

Our annual summer weather has arrived - hot and dry! That means homeowners must give careful attention to watering their yards and gardens.

Tips on getting the most from irrigation water so as to keep plants and lawns healthy while keeping water costs down are offered:

1. Practice slow, deep watering to allow roots to penetrate deeper so that plants become more stress-resistant.

2. Soaker hoses and drip irrigation systems work well on trees and shrubs. It's more efficient to water at night or early in the morning because evaporation is less. However, night-time watering can promote more disease problems.

3. Too much water can be as detrimental or even worse than not enough. The rate at which water is applied should be no more rapid than the rate at which the soil can absorb it. Never fertilize landscape plants when soil is dry. It's best to water the area one day, apply fertilizer the next day and water again. Fertilizer will do no good unless it is dissolved and moved down into the soil.

4. Shrubs and trees near foundations, under eaves or on southern and western exposures need frequent watering because they often get less benefit from rainfall and have to deal with heat reflected from walls.

5. Plants on mounds or slopes suffer from drought stress more easily than those on level areas, so these require more frequent watering.

6. Use an organic mulch of cottonseed hulls, grass clippings, chopped straw, hay or similar material to reduce irrigation needs.

7. Treat water as a valuable resource. Use it to water plants when needed but do not waste water.

GARDENER SHOULD KNOW INSECTS

"A stitch in time saves nine," especially when it involves insect control in the home vegetable garden.

To insure good yields of high quality produce, insect control in the home garden is a "must". So learning about these pests will prepare you for them when they arrive on the scene.

There are more than 30 insect pests which will attack vegetables in the home garden, and these are divided into three groups.

One group includes those insects which live in the soil and attack seedlings and underground parts of plants. These include cutworms, wireworms, soil maggots and white grubs.

The other two groups were sucking insects and chewing insects. Sucking insects damage plants by inserting their mouthparts into plant tissue and sucking plant juices. Sucking insects include aphids, whiteflies, leaf-hoppers, squash bugs and stink bugs.

Chewing insects damage plants by actually feeding on foliage, stems or fruit. This group includes cabbage loopers, armyworms, flea beetles, grasshoppers and many others.

However, not all insects are bad. There are numerous beneficial insects that prey on those that harm plants. These include preying mantids, assassin bugs, ladybird beetles, lacewings, parasitic wasps and spiders.

The Extension Service has a new publication, "Insects in Vegetables", that will help gardeners identify these different groups of insects. Come by the county Extension office for a copy.

"RECEIVING JESUS"

"He came unto his own, and they that were his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he the right to become children of God, even to them that believe on his name: who were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:11-13). What does it mean to "receive Jesus"? Many will say it means to "accept Jesus as your personal Saviour." Others will say to just "believe only." The answer to the question lies in the afore-mentioned passage, harmonized with other New Testament teaching on the subject. John was speaking of the Jews, who were "his own". The Jews, as a nation, rejected Jesus as the Christ. Of course, there were many Jews who became Christians. The ones who did "receive Jesus" became children of God.

To "receive Jesus" is to receive His word (John 12:48). To "receive Jesus" is to believe in Him as the Son of God because of what is recorded about Him (John 20:30,31). To "receive Jesus" is to be born of God (John 3:3-5; I John 2:29; 4:7; 5:1). To look at just one passage of scripture without considering its harmony with all other scripture, is to do injustice to the text.

Since the Bible teaches that one must believe in Jesus as the Christ (John 8:24); repent of one's sins (Acts 2:38); confess Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God (Acts 8:37); and be baptized for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), it is conclusive that all of these things are necessary in order to "receive Jesus". The Bible is plain about "receiving Jesus". ONLY those who do the will of the Father in Heaven will enter into Heaven (Matthew 7:21). To do the will of God is to "hear His Son." To "hear" His Son is to obey His will (Hebrews 5:9).

Oklahoma school teaches students to be auctioneers

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —

The staccato chant rattles through the old house, then suddenly stops as the young man looks puzzled and asks what the last bid was on a battered briefcase.

"You've got to be quicker than that," says state Rep. Jay Blodgett. "That's where a ring man comes in handy."

Six other people, sitting at a table and ranged around the wall on sofas and chairs, grin a little uneasily because they know that soon they will be on the spot, trying to keep up "the call."

All are students at Cecil Abernathy's School of Auctioneering. And while there are those who think that auctioneers, like others with the gift of gab, are born, not made, Abernathy says it takes more than just the ability to talk fast to become a successful auctioneer.

In fact, fast talking is a minor part of a 40-hour course designed to teach the intricacies of the trade.

By the time the students finish the 10-night session over two weeks, they'll not only know how to pry a higher bid from a hesitant auctioneer, but how to get out the advertising, hire helpers, promote the sale and collect and record the money.

"Anybody can be an auctioneer with the right training," says Abernathy, who admits to auctioning off just about everything imaginable from a bed to heavy construction equipment over the past 30 years. "But to be successful, you've got to like people — and you've got to get them to like you."

A lot of the session is devoted to attitude: how to hit the right note of friendliness while still keeping it businesslike. He and the other eight instructors constantly hammer on the "friendly business" angle of auctioneering.

"You meet the best people in the world doing auctions," Abernathy says. "It's a wide-open field, and anyone with the right training can make a good living. But you've really got to like people."

Blodgett, who runs an auction company in Duncan when he isn't taking care of state business as a legislator, says virtually the same thing the night he is the instructor. But he emphasizes that there's more to auctioneering than just making money.

"There are auctions that make you feel a lot better than others," Blodgett tells the students. "I auctioned off a machine shop just the other day for $71,000. I did it on 10 percent commission, and we sold it out in three hours."

"That's pretty good money. But I had another auction for a lady who was going into nursing home. She didn't have much furniture, and I auctioned it off for free. Now, that made me feel really good."

Abernathy and Blodgett don't hesitate to point out the possible financial rewards, though.

"The school costs $300 for the 40 hours," Abernathy says. "I've had students who graduate on Friday night and go out Saturday and make that back in one auction."

But, he says, only about half the average class intends to go into auctioneering as a business.

"Some take the course just to get some self-confidence in front of people," he says. "Others want to learn how to do it so they can do it at social events and the like."

The students are drilled in all aspects of the auctioneering business.

"One of the first things they have to learn is the count," Abernathy says. "There are basically only six numbers used in auctions. They are a quarter, a half, one, 2 1/2, five and 10."

"Of course, each stands for any type of number. For instance, a half could mean a half cent, a half-dollar, $50, $500 and so on. One could mean a penny or $1,000."

"Ninety-nine percent of all auctions will use just these six numbers."

Before an auctioneer can make any money, he has to book an auction. That's where the hard work comes in, Abernathy says, and he explains to the students how to go about setting up an auction.

The students also are taught how to make certain everyone understands what is going on at an auction.

"When you first start the sale, give them the terms," says Blodgett. "Tell them whether you'll take checks or credit cards. If I have somebody in the audience buying a lot and paying with checks, I make it a point to ease around and visit with him awhile and find out something about him.

"Somebody will always ask whether you'll help load what they've bought. That's up to you, but try to keep from doing it if you can."

Blodgett says he always makes it a rule to tell the audience "the only guarantee is that there is no guarantee. Make sure they know that you're taking the seller's word that if something is supposed to work, it should work."

While other students take the portable public address system and practice auctioning off Abernathy's office contents, others talk about why they are taking the course.

"I've been interested in this for a long time," says Jason Riddle of Oklahoma City, whose mop of unruly hair pokes out from under a baseball cap. "It is a growing business."

"I'm still going to school, so the only time I could take the course is during the summer. I'm taking it more or less for the experience and I won't decide until later whether I want to make it a career."

At 15 he is the youngest in the class, and the others kid him about being so "light" when he won't raise the bid during their practice sessions.

Learning to be an auctioneer was a matter of necessity for Eddie Shaw, a tall, weathered rancher clad in straw cowboy hat, blue shirt and jeans. He explains that he bought an auction house in his southwestern Oklahoma hometown of Wilton just about two months earlier.

"We used to sit around there and spend the time," he says. "The man who owned it sold out and the auctioneer asked me why didn't I buy it so we'd still have someone to visit, so I did."

"Now my auctioneer says he is quitting, so I decided I'd better learn how to do it," said Shaw, 51 the oldest member of the class. "We sell anything people bring in on consignment, for a 20 percent commission."

Shaw says the auction house is strictly a family operation. While waiting to graduate, he serves as ring man — the man who walks along the edge of the crowd and relays a bid to the auctioneer — while his wife is the cashier and a stepdaughter is the clerk.

Shaw and the rest of the class were somewhat hesitant to get up and practice the call the first night.

"That's why we start out slow," says Abernathy. "We want everybody to get to know everybody else, and to learn the count. Then, on Wednesday, we go for speed."

"But when they finish here, they'll be ready to go out and auction anything except tobacco and real estate. You need a real estate license to auction real estate," he says.

Several have had contact with auctions in the past, including Gary Greer, a ring man for an Oklahoma City auction company that deals in heavy equipment.

"I plan to stay with heavy equipment," Greer says. "I'm chief appraiser for my company, so I know what the equipment is worth."

"I personally appraised 197 oil rigs for auction around the country in 1982."

After several years of experience of working around auctions, Greer has his own idea on what is important.

"You've got to be a salesman," he says. "But you've got to be more of a promoter than a salesman. It's the man who books the auction that makes the money for the company."

New counsel wouldn't have prosecuted customs officer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government attorney says the government had no business prosecuting a Customs Service patrol officer in Texas on grounds that he broke the law by working briefly in a political campaign to fulfill some college course requirements.

Jim J. Dukes, 34, of Brownsville, faces a possible 30-day suspension for working several weekends for the 1978 re-election campaign of Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to meet requirements of a course in political parties Dukes was taking at Pan American University.

FANTISTICS

We're high on low ceilings.

CasaBlanca® wants to clear the air about low ceilings. The fact is, you can enjoy all the beauty, comfort, and craftsmanship of CasaBlanca fans even in low ceiling areas. That's because of an exclusive CasaBlanca feature, the Fan-Lifter Mounting, that can raise any CasaBlanca fan for maximum clearance.

For example, the Fan-Lifter not enough air can be pulled in. The motor operates inefficiently and can often run excessively hot.

With the CasaBlanca Fan-Lifter Mounting, fan blades are positioned the optimum distance from the ceiling. The result is a smoothly distributed current of air, even in bedrooms, kitchens, and other low ceiling areas. And with CasaBlanca's revolutionary Slumber Quiet™ System, noise and vibration are virtually non-existent.

Best of all, you don't give up a thing when you choose a CasaBlanca fan with the Fan-Lifter Mounting. Installation is still a breeze. CasaBlanca's entire line of light fixtures is still available to you. And our unique Fan-Lifter Mounting preserves the elegant design of the CasaBlanca model you choose.

Mounting on our Four Seasons® model positions fan blades just 9 inches from the ceiling. So if you're 6 feet tall, and have 8 foot ceilings, you still have 15 inches of clearance.

But adequate clearance isn't the only factor to consider in choosing a CasaBlanca with the Fan-Lifter Mounting. The amount of space between the ceiling and the fan blades is also critical. If a fan is too close to the ceiling,

So now there's an uplifting solution to the problem of low ceilings. And it's available only from CasaBlanca, makers of the world's finest ceiling fans.

Livestock feeding up, helping corn prices rise

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The price of corn is going up and in 1983-84 may average the highest in three years, according to new Agriculture Department projections. Analysts attributed the improved price outlook to an increase in livestock feeding and this year's planned cutback of grain production under the government's payment-in-kind program. Based on the new projections issued Thursday, the price of corn at the farm in the marketing year that will begin on Oct. 1 is now expected to be $2.75 to $3 per bushel. 10 cents more than USDA economists forecast earlier this month.

That would compare with a 12-month average of $2.65 now estimated for the current year, $2.50 in 1981-82, and a record high of $3.11 per bushel in 1980-81 — when bad weather shriveled yields severely. Corn production this year could be reduced to around 6.05 billion bushels by the administration's 1984 acreage curbs designed to reduce surpluses and boost prices. Last year's harvest was a record of 8.4 billion bushels. The revised price projections were based on a quarterly report which showed that corn inventories on June 1 were less than had been anticipated. Further, officials said, apparently there has been a larger use of corn and sorghum as livestock feed than had been forecast previously. Expansion of hog production is a major factor in the indicated larger use of feed grains. Corn and sorghum being held in the farmer-owned reserve now appears likely to be released for use as prices near the trigger levels, the report said. The analysis said that total corn and sorghum feed use estimates for the current season of 1982-83 have been boosted by 100 million and 50 million bushels, respectively. In all total feed use of corn this year could climb to 4.5 billion bushels, up from less than 4.2 billion in 1981-82. Looking ahead to 1983-84, feed use might settle down to around 4.45 billion bushels — up from 4.3 billion projected on June 13.

No significant changes were reported for other commodities. The June 1 wheat inventory, at 1.54 billion bushels, was a record carryover of old-crop wheat going into a new marketing year. A year ago, the carryover was 1.16 billion bushels. With hog production expanding more rapidly than had been expected, more meat will be available later this year and into 1984. This will mean downward price pressures for livestock producers.

Prices of slaughter hogs at major markets are expected to average $46 to $49 per 100 pounds in the third quarter of this year, down $3-4 from the previous forecast, the report said. In the fourth quarter, prices may be $38 to $42 per hundredweight, down about $6 from earlier indications. "The larger pork output is

In Agriculture

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
The hot summer weather has arrived and wheat harvest should be underway this week. Yields are expected to be a little above average where hail has not caused any damage. However, this was the year that our dryland fields could have benefitted from fertilization. We have had several good dryland years recently and our natural supply of nitrogen has been depleted. Therefore, if your dryland yields fall short of expectations, I would guess that the soil is very short of nitrogen and possibly phosphorus. A soil test will show the nutrient level in your fields.

Mandatory 1983 Wheat Loans for Some Producers
Texas wheat producers, with June 15 and July 1 entitlement dates, who do not have sufficient quantities in a loan program to meet their PIK requirements, will have to forfeit their 1983 crop to the loan in quantities equal to their PIK needs. ASCS sources indicate that there is insufficient CCC wheat inventories to meet the needs of the Texas producers in the June 15 and July 1 entitlement areas, therefore the provision requiring participating producers to forfeit portions of their 1983 crop to CCC loan will be implemented.

Exports to China Behind Last Year
The negative impact on agricultural exports attributable to continued problems between the U.S. and the Peoples Republic of China was brought home by a recent report from the Canadian Wheat Board. The board announced the sale of 2.1 million tons of Canadian wheat to China for the 1983-84 marketing year which began June 1, the sale is the first against the second year of a long term agreement which calls for sales of between 3.5 and 4.2 million tons per year for the three year period beginning in 1982. Meanwhile U.S. exports of wheat to China are running far behind last year's pace. Outstanding sales to China for the new marketing year currently stand at 42,300 tons compared to 2,316,100 tons for the same period last year.

RABIES CASES UP SHARPLY
Texas rabies cases are up sharply for the first third of 1983. During the first four months of this year, 333 cases of rabies were reported compared to 253 cases for the same time period last year. That's more than a 30 percent increase. The big jump was due mainly to an increase in skunk rabies. Cases of skunk rabies for the first third of this year total 269, compared to 204 for the first four months of '82. Rabies cases also were up slightly in foxes, dogs, cats and cattle.

Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, reports that sorghum producers should keep a close eye out for greenbugs on newly emerged sorghum. Although no major greenbug outbreak exists, keep a close watch on young sorghum for this pest. There have been a few fields in the Bushland - Wildorado area sprayed in order to prevent stand loss.

Exports to China Behind Last Year
The negative impact on agricultural exports attributable to continued problems between the U.S. and the Peoples Republic of China was brought home by a recent report from the Canadian Wheat Board. The board announced the sale of 2.1 million tons of Canadian wheat to China for the 1983-84 marketing year which began June 1, the sale is the first against the second year of a long term agreement which calls for sales of between 3.5 and 4.2 million tons per year for the three year period beginning in 1982. Meanwhile U.S. exports of wheat to China are running far behind last year's pace. Outstanding sales to China for the new marketing year currently stand at 42,300 tons compared to 2,316,100 tons for the same period last year.

RABIES CASES UP SHARPLY
Texas rabies cases are up sharply for the first third of 1983. During the first four months of this year, 333 cases of rabies were reported compared to 253 cases for the same time period last year. answer. Thus, wild animal bites should be evaluated individually by the appropriate health authority. CATTLE GRUB CONTROL
Each year between June and September, Texas livestock producers can effectively control costly grubs by applying livestock insecticides. Grub control can be achieved with a variety of systemic treatments which includes sprays, dips, pour-ons, spot-ons and feed mixes. However, insecticide impregnated ear tags being used for biting fly control do not control cattle grubs. During late fall and winter, grubs appear on the backs of livestock. It's too late to begin control measures then since most of the damage has already been done.

4 - H Corner

By JOANNA WARMINSKI and JEFF GOODWIN
County Extension Agents

Good photos can help a 4 - H member record a lot of exciting events and that's where the 4 - H photography program comes in.

The 4 - H photography program can help youngsters learn how to take better pictures by paying particular attention to composition, camera angle, background and many other things that go into a "picture that's worth a thousand words."

DATES
June 27 - July 1 - 4 - H Leadership Electric Camp, Cloudcroft, N.M.
June 28 - 30 - Teen Leadership Camp, Clarendon College
CITIZENSHIP SHORTCOURSE AND HERITAGE TOUR
Swasey Brainard of Pampa left Tuesday for the National 4 - H Citizenship Shortcourse and Heritage Tour. The trip will include two weeks of travel visiting points of historical interest between Dallas and Washington, D.C. Some of the places to be visited will include Mount Vernon, Monticello, the Smithsonian Institute, United States Archives and the Library of Congress. Participants will also tour the U.S. Capitol complex and visit with congressmen from their home districts.

Background is important. A simple background makes the subject stand out. A light-colored background is best for dark subjects; a dark background for light-colored subjects. The photographer should move in as close to the subject as possible to eliminate distracting background elements. Or, shoot from a high or low camera angle.

4 - H photography projects and activities are fun and educational. As they learn - by - doing to take and use pictures, 4 - H members begin to appreciate photography as an art, science and communications tool.

Kodak offers recognition to program members at all levels of participation: six $1,000 scholarships nationally, expense-paid trips to National 4 - H Congress for one member per state, and four medals of honor in each county. Winners are chosen by the Extension Service and awards arranged by the National 4 - H Council.

ELECTRIC CAMP
Eleven Gray County 4 - H'ers will attend the 4 - H Leadership Electric Camp at Camp Scott Able, near Cloudcroft, N.M., June 27 - July 1. Those leaving Monday will be Bryan Smithman, Dave Ridgeway, Stacy Alexander, Scott Webb, Donnie Smith, Jim Ridgeway, Shelly Cochran, Stacie McDonald, Donna Eakin, Cathy Taylor and Cathy Jinks. The camp is sponsored each year by the Southwestern Public Service Company.

4 - H members can share their best photographs with others each year in the Texas 4 - H Photo Exhibit during the Texas 4 - H Project Show in June. This show features single photos or picture stories of typical 4 - H activities. More information on the 4 - H photography program is available at the county Extension office.

The 75th anniversary 4 - H Clover made at Texas 4 - H Roundup on Kyle Field will be on "Good Morning America," at 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Cattle grub losses are displayed in a variety of ways. Besides damaging meat and hides by their feeding activity, they lower beef cattle gains and reduce milk production throughout the year. Profit losses are estimated to cost Texas cattle producers $8 - $10 million each year.

DISTRICT I HORSE SHOW
The District I Horse Show was held at the Bill Cody Arena on June 15 - 16 and there were several Gray County 4 - H'ers participating.

Laura Horne ended up with a fifth place finish in showmanship and an eighth place finish in halter. The two placings gave Laura enough points to finish in 21st place for the overall show. The top 20 horses are eligible for state competition at Waco this summer, so Laura is the first alternate in event one of the top 20 doesn't participate in the State Horse Show.

Michelle Hess picked up a fifth place in the stake race while Leslie Leggett finished fourth in the pole bending event. Other Gray County 4 - H'ers who participated in the District Horse Show were Cindy Coleman, Robyn Coleman, Eva Jo Isbell and Margo Hess.

Wyland betters own diving mark in National Sports Festival

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Wendy Wyland rallied from a poor start to post the highest score ever by an American woman in 10-meter platform diving and successfully defend her championship at the National Sports Festival Saturday.

On the first full day of competition in the annual gathering of America's top young amateur athletes, the semifinals in boxing were marked by upsets, as three defending champions were beaten, while national Golden Gloves champ Jesse Benevides and world lightweight champ Pernel Whitaker won.

Wyland, an 18-year-old from Mission Viejo, Calif., qualified for the U.S. team in the Pan American Games by scoring heavily on four of her last five dives to roll up a 459.66 total, three points better than her old U.S. mark.

Her Mission Viejo

teammate, Megan Neyer, was second at 410.46, and also earned a Pan Am berth. Diving is one of five sports using the festival to choose Pan Am squads.

Wyland, the world champion on the 10-meter tower, won the event at last year's Sports Festival in Indianapolis and was tops in preliminaries Friday.

On Saturday at the Air Force Academy pool, she fell behind in the early mandatory-dive rounds as Kim Engel, of Miami, Fla., forged into the lead, largely on the strength of her second dive, when she received three perfect scores of 10 and several 9s.

Wyland had just one 10 all day, on her third dive, but exploded in the late going with her optional routine. Engel faded in the late rounds and finished seventh of the eight divers.

Padres edge Giants, 3-2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tony Gwynn's two-out single in the eighth inning drove in an unearned run and lifted the San Diego Padres to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

The Giants made two errors in the eighth to help San Diego. With two outs, Garry Templeton was safe on second baseman Joel Youngblood's error. Templeton stole second and went to third on catcher John Rabb's throwing error before scoring on Gwynn's single to left off reliever Gary Lavelle, 5-2.

John Montefusco, 6-1, was the winner, and Gary Lucas got the final two outs for his eighth save.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the first off starter Ed Whitson. Johnnie LeMaster led off with a walk and stole his 27th base. Darrell Evans then walked with one out. Jack Clark lined a run-scoring single to center and Evans also scored on center fielder Alan Wiggins' error.

Starter Fred Breining blanked the Padres until the seventh when singles by Templeton, Juan Bonilla and pinch hitters Ruppert Jones and Kurt Bevacqua made it 2-2.

Yankees hold off Boston, 4-1

BOSTON (AP) — Steve Kemp drove in three runs with a homer and a double and the New York Yankees weathered an eighth-inning Boston threat to beat the Red Sox 4-1 Saturday.

Yankees starter Jay Howell, 1-3, took a five-hit shutout into the eighth, but left after giving up a one-out single to Dwight Evans. Jim Rice greeted reliever Rich Gossage with a single and one out later. Carl Yastrzemski singled Evans home.

Rick Miller followed with an infield hit to load the bases, but Gossage escaped further trouble by getting Rich Gedman to ground out. Gossage pitched the ninth for his eighth save. Jerry Mumphy drilled his fifth homer to give New York a ninth-inning insurance run in the Yankees' 12-hit attack.

Dennis Eckersley, 5-5, took the loss.

In USFL

Panthers, Blitz contest could decide Central Division title

The Michigan Panthers, who have won nine of their last 11 games, visit the Chicago Blitz today in a United States Football League game which should decide the Central Division title.

Three Central clubs are still in the race for three of the remaining playoff berths. Chicago tops the division with an 11-5 record, followed by Michigan and Tampa Bay, each 10-6.

Philadelphia, winner of the Atlantic Division, is the only team set for the July 9-10 playoffs. The three division winners and a wild-card team make the playoffs.

Seven teams are still in the playoff picture heading into the next-to-last weekend of the regular season. In addition to the Central leaders, Oakland, Boston, Denver and Los Angeles are still alive.

The USFL weekend began Saturday with two games — Boston at Oakland and Arizona at New Jersey.

In today's other game, Los Angeles visits Washington. Tampa Bay hosts Denver in the Monday night game. Michigan beat Chicago in their first meeting 17-12. The Panthers have the second-best offense and the top offensive line in the league.

The Blitz will have veteran Bobby Scott at quarterback, having lost Greg Landry and Tim Koegel to injuries. Michigan will be going against the league's top-rated offense.

"I definitely think we are one of the top teams in the league now," says Michigan quarterback Bobby Hebert, a rookie from Northwestern Louisiana.

Cuban runner expected to be one of Olympic stars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the 1980 Olympic Games, one of the biggest disappointments was Alberto Juantorena.

He could be one of the stars of the 1984 Los Angeles Games.

Three years ago, the powerful, long-striding Cuban finished a badly beaten fifth in the 400-meter race, an event he had won — along with the 800 — in the 1976 Olympics. The 400 and 800 double never had been accomplished in Olympic history, and Juantorena returned to Cuba a national hero.

In 1977, Juantorena's career hit another high when he set a world record of 1 minute, 43.44 seconds for the 800. But not long after that, he was stricken with sciatica and tendonitis, missed most of the 1978 and 1979 track and field seasons, and was unprepared for the 1980 Moscow Games.

His invincibility was over — and so, it appeared, might be his track career.

But Juantorena appears to be back — not as strong or as fast as he was, but still an imposing figure.

In a rare appearance in the United States, the 32-year-old Juantorena finished a coasting second Friday in a semi-final heat of the 800 in the Los Angeles Times-TAC International Summer Games.

He was clocked in a leisurely 1:48.94, behind Johnny Gray of the United States (1:48.85). But Juantorena was satisfied — with his performance and with the new $500,000 track in the Los Angeles Coliseum, the site of next year's Olympic track and field competition.

"Just for qualifying, this was a very easy race," he said. "This is a really, really marvelous track."

"It is very fast and soft... for my old legs."

Juantorena's aging legs will get their next test on the track Sunday in the 800 final.

Dear Abby

Woman's wedding bed is for sleeping only

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old male and I've been going with a 23-year-old girl for two years. We love each other and are thinking of marriage. She is sure, but I'm not. The problem? She has absolutely no interest whatsoever in sex.

Before you conclude that I am a sex maniac, let me assure you that I am not. It's not as though she's a virgin because we've had sex before, but she has come right out and said she would rather do anything else. It's not a moral issue with her — she doesn't think it's "wrong," she just doesn't care for it.

I don't want to get locked into an unsatisfactory marriage and find myself looking for outside sex. Whenever I bring up the importance of a good sexual relationship in marriage, she says, "Is that all you ever think about?"

Is once a week too much?

SECOND THOUGHTS

DEAR SECOND: It's too much for someone who would "rather do anything else." It's obvious that your appetite for sex and hers are vastly disparate — translation: "incompatibility." The stuff of which bad marriages are made. You're wise to have second thoughts, and third and fourth. Then take the fifth.

DEAR ABBY: Recently a graveyard on the outskirts of town was moved. A young man who had helped with the job reported that he has actually seen that hair and fingernails had continued to grow long after death.

I could hardly believe it, but I recall hearing that it was true some time ago. Is it?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: That myth has been around long enough to grow a beard. Of course it's not true. For hair and fingernails to grow, there must be life. After a person dies, all life ceases, so obviously nothing can grow.

...

DEAR ABBY: I met a guy four months ago at the home of mutual friends. I took one look at him and I knew he was for me. He told me later it was the same for him. There is just one problem — he's living with a woman and has been for nearly two years. I know he loves me, but he's a very decent guy and doesn't want to walk out on her.

He says she needs him, and she would probably kill herself if he left her. Abby, I need him, too. He is the first guy I have ever loved like this, and I know he loves me just as much.

We have to sneak around to be together, and I hate it! He's on my mind night and day. Now I know what it's like to be lovesick. Please tell me what to do.

LOVESICK

DEAR LOVESICK: Face it, this "decent guy" is cheating on the woman he's been living with for two years. And you're helping him. Tell him you can no longer be a party to this sneaky business, and refuse to see him until you can meet openly and honestly. The rest is up to him.

...

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago we had an overnight guest in our home, and shortly after dinner I was astonished when she started to use dental floss in our kitchen! I don't consider myself squeamish, but I found it very difficult to carry on a conversation with her while she was flossing away.

A few weeks later, while we were on a plane trip, I was again repulsed when a woman seated near me openly used dental floss!

Finally, following lunch with our bridge club, a woman whom I had always considered well-mannered used dental floss as we paused between games!

Has the practice of cleaning one's teeth in public become acceptable? Or am I behind the times?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Although flossing is the best present you can give yourself to ensure good dental hygiene, it should be done in private.

She treasures junk

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

One man's junk is another man's treasure, some wise person once said. The saying holds true for 80-year-old Bonnie Hogan of Pampa, the doll rescuer.

Hogan, aided by friends, retrieves old, often broken, abandoned dolls and turns the sad, dilapidated things almost back to their former glory.

"I don't play with them," she says of her dolls. "I just like to dress them up."

She begins with a good, thorough bathing — scrubbing their hair and ears until they're squeaky clean. Then she lets them dry.

"They're hair is usually standing straight up when I get them," Hogan says. She remedies their hair either by cutting it, or after washing, smoothing the hair down with a dab of mayonnaise rubbed onto her hands.

"It makes it shine like new money," she says. Rubber bands placed around the heads help hold the hair down, too, she adds. She also ties the hair down with a cap or put bobby pins in their hair. "I like to fool with it," she says with a smile.

Next, Hogan begins making clothes for her dolls from scrap materials. She starts from the beginning with the underwear, slips and bras. Next she makes dress or pants and shirts, then adds jewelry, socks, booties and hats. She often crochets shoes and hats for the dolls.

"I never get a pattern for any of them. I just make their clothes up in my mind," Hogan explains.

As a child, she never played with dolls. She didn't have any dolls. "I was raised on a farm and all we knew to do was to go to the fields and work."

Once she won a doll for being the best speller in her class, Hogan remembers. Then she grew up, married and raised six boys and two girls in the Mobeetie area.

Hogan calls her favorite doll the "wedding doll." This one is special because the doll's hair is Hogan's hair, a braid cut in 1922 from her hair that was so long she could sit on it. She says she had to keep more than 40 pins in her hair to make it stay up.

She sewed a seam down the middle of the braid, cut little bangs and glued it on the doll's head. "Sometimes I roll it up with little rollers and make it pretty," she says.

"I'm never still," Hogan says. In addition to rescuing dolls, she quilts, crochets, goes to the Senior Citizens Center regularly and tries to repair whatever broken things she comes across.

"I love to piddle with somebody's junk," she admits. "I like to make things work and I like to see what I can make out of them."

Does your watch not work? Well, Hogan discovered something that may just make it start again. Place the watch, face up, on a cotton ball soaked with kerosene for awhile. "If it needs cleaning, it'll start going again," she says.

Aerobic exercise

Gaining beauty by the beat

NEW YORK (AP) — It's sweaty. It's addicting. It's "foudroyant." In French, that's dazzling.

In hundreds of American cities, in suburban basements and exclusive health clubs, an estimated 6 million Americans strut, skip, stretch and touch their toes, sometimes seven days a week at considerable expense, to the beat of throbbing pop music, until the sweat soaks their T-shirts and their pulse rates soar and they feel the "burn."

And then they come back for more.

Most of Nancy Reagan's staff does it. Former Defense Secretary Harold Brown tried it, but dropped out.

"It's an addiction — a good one, though," says Nancy Mukamal of aerobics after she and two dozen other women had finished punching and dancing their way through a song from the movie "Rocky III" in a church gymnasium on Manhattan's Upper East Side.

Ms. Mukamal goes up to four times a week to her aerobics dancing class, which is run according to principles established in 1969 by the originator of aerobic dance, a former cheerleader named Jacki Sorensen. Mrs. Sorensen was the wife of a B-52 pilot stationed in Puerto Rico when she created an exercise program by combining dancing and the work of Dr. Kenneth Cooper, author of "Aerobics."

The program was tried at YMCAs in New Jersey and spread through the nation in many forms and under many names: Jazzercise, Dancercise, Dance Aerobics, Aerobic Joy, Aerobics in Action, Dance Fitness, Fitness in Tempo, Fitness Fantasia.

Once a week about 10 women from Mrs. Reagan's staff leave the East Wing of the White House after work and walk through the corridors in their leotards to a fifth-floor hallway of an adjacent federal office building.

They work out to the beat from a record player and come back "all icked up," said Dodie Kazanjian, the first lady's deputy press secretary.

Their teacher is Lisa Dobloug, whose Saga Club in Washington's Georgetown section is frequented by many prominent Washingtonians, including Brown. He said in an interview that he has tried Ms. Dobloug's workout but prefers swimming.

"And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air, Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there."

Francis Scott Key

Once a year Americans celebrate the fact that our flag was, and still is, here with rockets and "bombs" bursting in the air.

In most American communities, hand-held sparklers will dray bright silver circles in the night while big colorful bursts of red, blue and white stars explode overhead on July 4. If Francis Scott Key were here today, he would be delighted to know that the noise is happy celebration and, if properly used, fireworks won't harm a soul.

Although fireworks are such an integral part of American celebration, they were created in the East, probably China, more than 2,000 years ago. They were picked up by the Crusaders and brought to Europe where they were eventually included in Western civilization. The Italians were the first Europeans to make fireworks and became respected masters in making the noisy spectacles. From England to Spain fireworks went off to enhance religious events and flatter kings and queens in their royal gardens.

When European emigrants came to the New World to establish the first American colonies, they brought with them their love for a good fireworks display. After the colonies decided to break away from England, John Adams envisioned the first celebration and included in his fantasy fireworks as a matter of course. In fact, fireworks became associated with Independence Day celebrations long before the Declaration of Independence was actually signed. Now more fireworks are blasted for July 4 than for any other national holiday in the world.

It's no secret that fireworks can be extremely dangerous when misused, said George Plimpton, chairman of the National Council on Fireworks Safety. When used with common sense and caution, however, they are as harmless as they are spectacular.

The National Council on Fireworks Safety and the U. S. Consumer product Safety Commission encourage fireworks users to follow these guidelines:

- Read directions
- Have an adult present
- Buy from reliable fireworks stands

- Ignite outdoors
- Have water handy
- Never experiment
- Light one at a time
- Never reignite malfunctioning fireworks
- Keep at a safe distance
- Keep fireworks from small children
- Store fireworks in cool, dry place
- Dispose of them properly

To enjoy fireworks like an expert, note the quality of colors (blue and white are especially difficult to produce); count the number of blasts from one firework; pay attention to the ground displays of pinwheels, fountains and Roman candles; and note the time lapse between each event (it takes a clever operator to keep the audience entertained). Finally, the best view can be had from at least 500 feet from the site, which also happens to be the safest distance. Designated watching areas are chosen with these two facts in mind, so it is doubly wise to stay within them.

Art show judges selected

PANHANDLE — Three art professionals from Pampa and Amarillo will be selecting the best of the artwork made by Carson County residents for the Square House Museum's July exhibit, the Carson County Invitational Art Show.

County residents nominated more than 60 local artists for the show, too many for the Museum's gallery space. An independent jury selected to top 30 to 40 works for the exhibit scheduled July 4-29.

For more information about the Invitational Show, contact the Curator of Education at 537-3118.

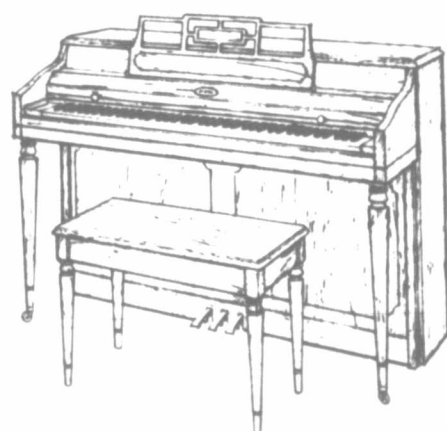

Judges are Barbara Norris, painting instructor for Clarendon College, Pampa Center; Mark Morey, curator of education for the Amarillo Art Center and Mack Steward, former director for the Dord Fitz Gallery in Amarillo.

Stretch your food dollars by preserving

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

If you have made the decision to become involved in food preservation this summer, then you have made a smart and exciting decision. Home food preservation is fast becoming a popular summer activity for many families.

With good planning you can stretch your family food dollar through food preservation. You will be able to experience the joy and pride associated with home food preservation while assuring your family of garden fresh foods the year round.

The right equipment is extremely important for quality food. You might consider sharing equipment with a friend or relative. Or you can take turns canning or even do it together which makes canning more fun and economical.

Select standard canning jars made of tempered glass that can withstand high temperatures. These should have the manufacturer's name or a fancy pattern blown into the glass. Jars you buy prepared food in such as mayonnaise jars, should never be used for home canning because they may not seal properly and may break during canning because of the intense heat and pressure. Also avoid using antique jars because there can be hairline cracks not visible to the eye that could cause the jars to break.

Before canning, examine the sealing edge of jars for nicks, cracks or sharp edges that would prevent a seal by rubbing your finger along the sealing edge. Discard any jars with imperfections.

Most new canning jars come with lids and rings. The sealing compound of lids recommended for one use only will not hold a seal effectively after the first use. Some one-piece lids on the market now are reusable. Be sure to read carefully the instructions that come with the lids and rings.

Also carefully follow instructions found on the box or container for pretreating lids. Screw ring bands may be reused if kept clean and dry in a protective container with a tight-fitting lid. Never use bands with rust, pried or bent edges. If you have extra lids protect them by storing in a dry place.

A pressure canner is a major piece of equipment used in home food preservation. Low acid vegetables are processed under pressure to destroy dangerous bacterial spores that grow in low acid foods.

Low acid foods include asparagus, beans, beets, carrots, corn, greens, hominy, okra, peas, potatoes, pumpkins, squash and sweet potatoes.

A pressure canner with a dial or geared gauge should be tested each year to insure safety and proper temperatures. These gauges may be tested free of charge at the Gray County extension office.

To insure that the pressure canner is safe and ready to use for food preservation, check the following items:

1. The pressure canner should be free from dust or corrosion.
2. The pressure canner should be free from pits, cracks or dents.

3. It should have tight fitting handles.

4. The gasket should be clean. If the canner has a rubber gasket, check to make sure it is still soft and pliable. If it is hardened—replace it.

5. Make sure safety valves and petcocks are clean. Check the safety valve by using a toothpick to clean around it.

The Gray County Horticulture and Family Living Committees are sponsoring Food Preservation and Sick Plant Clinic, Thursday, June 30, from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Pampa Mall. Bring your pressure canner lids with dial or geared gauges to be tested! Also, if you have any food preservation problems or questions, bring them and let us help.

A team of specialists are to be on hand to evaluate houseplant, landscape plant or garden problems. Bring a sample of your plant problem and get an answer.

Publications from the Gray County Extension office will also be available on landscape and gardening problems in addition to food preservation topics.

The Food Preservation and Sick Plant Clinic is free of charge and is a come-and-go activity.

Desk & Derrick speaker to discuss stripper wells

G. E. "Skip" Stahl is scheduled guest speaker at the Desk and Derrick Club meeting, Tuesday, June 28, at 7 p.m. in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

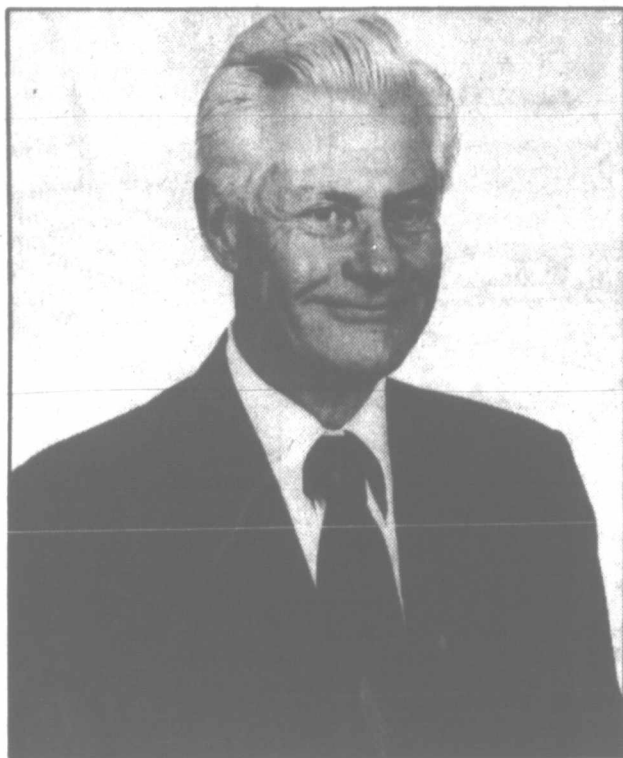

Stahl, president of the National Stripper Well Association, IPPA and a director of PPROA, will discuss the stripper well industry as it affects the Texas Panhandle today.

The guest speaker has been president of Stahl Petroleum for 22 years and Lyric Energy, Inc. for three years.

Formerly he was manager of gas purchases with Northern Natural Gas Company and manager of gas supply with Pioneer Natural Gas.

He holds a bachelor's of science degree in chemical engineering and a L.L. B. from the University of Nebraska.

Visitors are welcome. For reservations, contact Connie Ball at 665-1816.

Just when you figured it out government proposes a new tax

You may THINK you've finally got the federal tax system figured out, but don't be too sure. The politicians are talking again about a whole new type of levy.

The latest proposal—and it's still a long way from reality—involves something called a consumption tax. The idea has been around for several centuries, but it attracted new interest earlier this year when it appeared in a speech by Martin Feldstein, chief of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Feldstein stressed that the consumption tax was still in the idea stage. But he also called it "a very attractive approach to tax reform."

The Tax Foundation Inc., a non-profit, non-partisan research organization founded in 1937, recently looked at the consumption tax — also known as an expenditure tax, spending tax and cash-flow tax — and at how such a tax might work. The researchers at the foundation say writings by the 17th century economist Thomas Hobbes are often cited "as the birth cry of the consumption tax theory." Hobbes asked: "For what reason is there, that he which laboureth much, and sparing the fruits of his labor, consumeth little, should be more charged (taxed) than he that living idly getteth little and spendeth all he gets."

The U.S. Treasury sent a proposal to Congress for a spending tax in 1942 as a way to finance World War II, but the plan received little support and the idea has been largely ignored for the past 40 years.

Some features of existing taxes are similar to consumption taxes in that they exempt savings and investment from levies; the Individual Retirement Account, for example, could be considered a step to a consumption-based tax.

Here is how the researchers said a consumption tax in the United States might work for the individual:

Add up all the cash received in a year, including wages, salary, tips, net business income if self-employed, gifts and inheritances, rental income, interest and dividends, proceeds from the sale of stocks or other assets and proceeds of loans used to buy certain short-term consumer goods like vacation trips.

Women of the Moose install new officers

Pampa chapter No. 1163 of the Women of the Moose conducted installation of officers, appointed officers, chairmen and ritual director Saturday, June 18.

The newly installed officers include Diane Williams, senior regent; Geneva Corcoran, junior graduate regent; June Summers, junior regent; Wilma Eubanks, chaplain; Jean Bennett, recorder and Melba Haggard, treasurer.

Committee heads appointed at the meeting include Vivian Baggerman, library; Lou Terry, hospital; Cletus Guthrie, MooseLaven; Virgie Twigg, college of regents; Betty Johnson, academy of friendship; Nancy Davis, ritual director; Bunny Anderson, star recorder; Jill McGee, sentinel and Lorena Henderson, musician.

The new officers and chairmen assume their duties July 1 for 1983-1984.

Next meeting is to be a business meeting, June 28, at 8 p.m. All co-workers are urged to attend.

Kids' archaeology class part of summer program

PANHANDLE — Archaeology, a popular course in the Carson County Square House Museum's Summer Youth Program, returns this year with a new instructor, Roberta Speer.

Speer is supervisor of the Archeological Research Laboratory at Killgore Research Center at West Texas State University. The course is to be offered Monday and Wednesday afternoons from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. July 6 through 27, at the museum in Panhandle.

Students in the course will go on field trips to Alibates National Monument, the Killgore Research Center in Canyon and participate in archaeological digs. They will also participate in hands-on learning activities at the museum.

A native of Alaska, Speer has been a resident of the Texas Panhandle for many years. She has more than 15 years of professional experience in archaeology, has worked with youth in archaeological projects and published numerous professional articles.

Registration for Summer Youth Program classes are to continue through the first week in July. For more information, please contact the curator of education at 537-3118.

Clarendon College, Pampa Center, announces Phase II of the Secretarial College begins Tuesday, July 5th. The only prerequisite for Phase II is beginning typing skills.

The three courses of study are:

1. RECEPTIONIST SKILLS
Practical application of the correct procedures for greeting visitors and customers, handling incoming and outgoing telephone calls, and processing incoming and outgoing mail.
2. COMMUNICATION SKILLS
Focus on correct grammar, punctuation, spelling, capitalization, and composition and reference materials that go into writing all types of business correspondence.
3. BUSINESS COMMUNICATION
An introduction to and refinement of typing procedures to use in business correspondence and proper maintenance of the typewriter are studied. Focus is on typing copies from script and dictaphone, proofreading, centering typewritten material, and typing different style letters and manuscripts.

SPECIAL FEATURE

Clarendon College, Pampa Center, has obtained the services of a full-time counselor to assist all students—particularly our secretarial students—in a placement service capacity.

REGISTRATION GOING ON NOW

For more information contact the Pampa Center at 665-8801.

Peeking at Pampa

A new season — a new beginning — a garden planted — weddings — honeymoons. It's June and it's summer! Jeannie and the Rev. Claude Cone attended the Southern Baptist Convention in Pittsburgh, Pa., before vacationing to parts unknown. Their handsome son, Craig, with his private pilot's license now in hand is intent on garnering flying hours.

Judy Grimsley just returned refreshed and full of enthusiasm about her vacation in far northwest Washington State — a breathtakingly beautiful spot. Joyce and Ed McNeeley and two of their children vacationed in Florida and the Caribbean, where they report the price of hamburgers is high.

Pattie and John McKnerney, a couple of frisky, youthful senior citizens in their mid-eighties, jumped in their car and took a fun trip to Oklahoma.

Mary Ann (Mrs. Steve Purvis) visited her parents in Virginia.

Rita and Bob Lemons had some oh-so-special guests — their son Barry Russell, his wife and delightful two-year-old daughter Leta.

Did you see Ted Gikas with two special dinner guests last week — Sheila (Chisholm) and Jack Hood, former Pampanos now of California? Headed for Albuquerque to attend a niece's wedding, they swung by Pampa first to visit family (Cora Mae Hood and White Deer relatives) and friends. They also visited with Jan (Mrs. Kevin) Chisholm and daughter of Dallas who came to visit Jan's mother, Lucille Foster.

The staff of Pampa Center, Clarendon College enjoyed a hamburger fry in Central Park. Attending were Mary Jo and Larry Gilbert (He was the hamburger chef!), Linda Dyson, Janyth Bowers, Cherry Eaton, Mike and Wanda Andrews, Dan and Paula Malone, Dana and Fred Epperly, Dr. Nora Hutto, Sue and Ray Thornton, Shirley Warner, Pat Marcum and Bob Johnson.

Enrollment in courses, all evening classes now totals 207.

Keep your eyes peeled for Dr. Hutto, the new sociology teacher. She and her husband (in the cotton seed hull business) and two children, one a tiny baby girl, are active newcomers to Canadian. Norma, bright, pretty and quite young to have her doctorate in higher education, has already co-authored two books on child development. Welcome to the area!

Here are two more reasons why cars are parked for blocks around week nights. Richard Fronheiser, a photographer in private business, is teaching a full-up course on basic photography. A new dark room is the latest addition to the department.

It's a dog's life at Pampa Center for reason No. 2. Glenda McLaughlin and Jackie Morgan teach dog obedience course to a capacity class. Opportunities for learning abound at Pampa Center.

Have you met Dwight Austin, registered respiratory therapist at CCH? He's interesting, pleasant and a knowledgeable professional.

Dr. Vijay Mohan, sporting a beautiful tie tack, is proud of it for two reasons. It represents his membership in the American College of Surgeons and his office staff gave it to him.

One busy man is Gary Schwalk, coordinator of the preschool and children's departments of First Baptist Church where children are wall to wall. He and his wife Peggy attended the conference in Glorieta to brush up on teaching skills.

The pride of Pampa extends beyond the PHS band to include young high-achievers. Add to the ever growing list the name of Melanie Miller, winner of statewide recognition for her radio documentary on Pampa events. Congratulations, Melanie!

Read on about another achiever. GERALYN HILLS, daughter of Majunta and Forrest Hills. GERALYN, a solo dialysis nurse and a graduate of WTSU, was singled out and persuaded to go to work for a manufacturer of dialysis machines in Oklahoma City.

She travels extensively as a trouble shooter as well as instructor both in hospitals and in private homes. By phone she answers questions from across the nation.

Pampa Toastmasters and their spouses went to Borger for the first bi-city meeting. Pampanos brought home the honors: Larry Kilbreth, a PHS teacher, was named best speaker of the evening and Larry Mayo best evaluator.

Betty (Mrs. Jim) Brashears is the first woman ever to be named president of the Pampa group.

Mrs. Herman Whatley looked so smart in an effective play of camel and navy stripes topped with a camel straw hat banded in navy. Did you see Mary McDaniel's eye-catching hat with black and white stripes going around and around? Or, were you busy looking at Malcolm in a fancy yellow suit?

Travis Lively Sr. looked well-pleased to celebrate Father's Day with four generations of his family. Alberteen and Bob Tripplehorn were obviously happy to have David and his two darling daughters of Dallas for a special Father's Day treat.

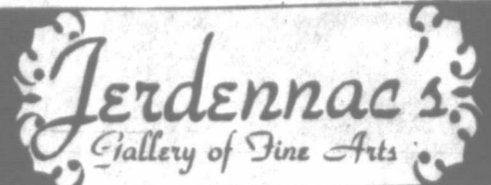

And a bouquet of congratulations and good wishes to Cora Patterson, who just celebrated her 92nd birthday.

And do make plans for a safe holiday weekend next week. See you then. KATIE

ADOLF D. ORINA, M.D.

Announces the closing of his practice, effective June 25, 1983, to assume a fellowship in Medical Oncology at the University of Texas Cancer System - M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Texas.

He is pleased to announce that CHAND BHATIA, M.D. & LAXMAN BHATIA, M.D., both Board Certified in Internal Medicine, will assume the care of his patients. His office will be kept open and the medical records of all his patients will be endorsed to Drs. Bhatia.

Preventing pregnancy without contraceptives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers say they are moving closer to developing a test for ovulation that could help women avoid pregnancy without pills and other birth control devices.

A reliable test to tell when a woman is likely to get pregnant — one that detects an enzyme in cervical mucus which indicates the onset of ovulation — could be available within three years, Dr. Winston Anderson of Howard University said Monday.

Anderson said the test for the enzyme, known as cervical mucus peroxidase (CMP), could be used to supplement other so-called natural birth control methods.

Variations in body temperature and mucus consistency around the cervix are among the methods now used to estimate time of ovulation, the period each month when the ovaries produce mature eggs for possible fertilization. However, none of these methods is 100 percent reliable.

"I don't think a peroxidase test would be 100 percent accurate in itself, but it would be an additive to other techniques," Anderson said in an interview. "No birth control method is totally reliable," he continued, "even 'the pill' is only 95 percent effective."

Anderson said one of the biggest problems facing researchers working on the test at Howard, and at the University of Pennsylvania and other institutions, is distinguishing CMP from other peroxidases made in the body.

Nichols-Osborn

Mary Ann Nichols and Dr. William Sloan Osborn exchanged wedding vows Saturday evening, June 25, at the First Presbyterian Church of Amarillo. Dr. James Carroll, pastor, and Dr. Jordan Grooms, retired Methodist minister, performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Knox Finley Nichols of Lefors. Groom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Charles Osborn of Amarillo.

Wedding music was performed by Mrs. Jerry Harris, vocalist and Margaret Skinner, organist, of Amarillo.

Connie Stroud of Austin attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Candy Berg of Dallas, Mrs. Mike Morris, sister of the bride, of Waco; Jeri Nichols of Amarillo, Nicole Nichols of Irving, and Shelly Osborn, sister of the groom, of Boston, Mass.

Groom's attendants were Garry Ford of Amarillo as best man, Jerry Nichols of Amarillo, the bride's brother; Burt Osborn of Denver, Colo.; Jon Osborn of Austin, both brothers of the groom; Dr. Thad Putnam of Waco, and Dr. Charles Pibus of Amarillo.

Candlelighters were Kirk Nichols and Ben Osborn. Ringbearer was David Grooms.

The Amarillo Country Club was the site of a reception following the ceremony. Assistants were Julie Baskin, Mrs. Mike Slaughter, Mrs. Jerry Nichols, the bride's sister-in-law and Mrs. Larry Blair, the bride's sister.

After a honeymoon trip to San Antonio, the couple will live in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The bride graduated magna cum laude from Texas Tech University in 1981 and the U. S. Army Dietetic Internship, Brooke Army Medical Center in 1982. She is currently serving in the U. S. Army as a registered dietitian.

Dr. Osborn attended Amarillo College, Baylor University and was a 1983 honor graduate of the University of Texas Dental School at San Antonio where he received the American College of Dentists Professionalism Award. Osborn will enter the U. S. Army General Practice residency at Colorado Springs.

Collinsworth-Curtino

Melinda Jean Collinsworth and Joseph Anthony Curtino III were married Saturday, June 25, in an evening service at the First United Methodist Church here. Dr. Richard Whitwam, pastor, performed the ceremony, assisted by Greg Holt of Fort Worth.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. Collinsworth of Pampa. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Curtino Jr. of Corsicana.

Attending the bride were Kristen Douglass as maid of honor, and matron of honor, Cathy Carter of Wheeler, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Diane Webb of Beaumont and Lori Curtino of Corsicana, the groom's sister. Flower girl was Erica Collinsworth of Plano.

Groom's attendants were Bob Wallace of Galveston as best man, Doug Oliver of New York, Kelly Brown of Houston, and James Menke of Austin.

Ushers were Michael Collinsworth of Plano, the bride's brother; Charles Carter of Wheeler; David Curtino of Corsicana, brother of the groom. Ringbearer was Jason Carter of Wheeler.

Special music was provided by organist Tracy Cary and vocalists Angie Baird and Bob Wallace of Galveston.

A reception followed the ceremony in the church parlor. Assisting were Cathy McCain of Odessa, Connie Ball, Dana Chumbley, Sandra Conklin and Karen Holt of Fort Worth, sister of the groom.

After a honeymoon in California, the couple will live in Abilene.

The bride is a 1979 Pampa High School graduate. She graduated from Texas A & M University, College Station, in 1983 with a degree in elementary education.

Curtino is a 1978 Galveston Ball graduate. He received a degree in industrial engineering from Texas A & M in 1982. He is employed by Haliburton in Abilene.

Harkrader-Gibson

Julie Lin Harkrader and James Clifton Gibson, both of Lubbock, were married June 4 in an evening ceremony at the First Christian Church here. The Rev. Harold Wood, the bride's great uncle and a retired minister of Guyman, Okla., officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Quillen of Pampa. Parents of the groom are Jerry Don Gibson of Quanah and Bobbie Gibson of Guyman, Okla.

Darla Miller of Quanah was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Teresa Harkrader of Austin, Tiffany Quillen, both sisters of the bride, and Lori Graf of Canyon.

Jerry Don Gibson acted as his son's best man. Groomsmen were Jace Reid of Lubbock, Benny Teatiller of Amarillo and Mike McSpadden of College Station.

Misty Shuffield of Lubbock played the piano for the ceremony.

After the wedding, a reception was held in the church parlor with Jeri Sanders, Cyndi Nelson, both of Lubbock, Belinda Rubio of Odessa, and the bride's sister, Kim Rechkemmer of Lubbock, serving.

The couple will live in Lubbock.

The bride is a 1977 graduate of Pampa High School. She graduated from West Texas State University in Canyon in 1981. She is employed by Lubbock Independent School District.

The couple will live in Amarillo.

The bride is a graduate of Texas Tech University. She has a private practice as an audiologist.

Saffer is employed at Bruckners and attends Amarillo College.

Icelandic saga

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Timothy Sale lost his gold wedding ring here last November. In January, it turned up — in Iceland.

Sale, a warehouse worker at Reynolds Tobacco, had finished loading a case of cigarettes when he noticed his ring was gone.

On the day the container was to be unloaded, Icelandic police investigators arrived to open it and search for the ring. Each case was carefully unloaded, and about three-fourths of the way into the container, there was the ring.

Sale received his ring back by registered mail.

Beauty Digest

No sweat

Now that the weather's getting warmer, here are some tips for keeping cool. The best way to stay dry during the day is to shower off at night, wait half an hour, then apply your antiperspirant. Reapply in the morning, before dressing. It's also a good idea to alternate antiperspirants so your body won't develop an immunity to them. Another good tip to remember: watch what you eat.

Sounds peachy

Here's a delicious dessert that is easy to make and low in calories. Place a peach half in a parfait glass. You can use either a peeled, fresh peach or a canned water-packed peach. Top off the peach with a tablespoons of pureed raspberries and a dollop of vanilla yogurt. Your yummy parfait is ready to eat - and no need to feel guilty, it's only 45 calories.

"Make it click" this next holiday weekend

Children are encouraged to "Make It Click" during the July 4th holiday season, by buckling up their safety belts or riding in child safety seats, in a campaign launched by the Texas Safety Association and McDonald's Restaurants.

During the "Make It Click" program, each child that visits a McDonald's in Pampa, Amarillo, Canyon, or Hereford from now until July 4 will receive a Ronald McDonald Make It Click sticker to place on a safety belt or child safety seat while supplies last. Also, Make It Click safety pledge cards asking children to buckle up for the holiday period will be distributed. Children can return the signed cards to McDonald's for a free regular hamburger.

Each participating McDonald's restaurant in the Texas Panhandle also will hold a prize drawing for a child car safety seat. Registration is open now until July 3 with drawings scheduled July 4 in each McDonald's restaurant.

The Texas Safety Association, the Texas Safety

Council and the Texas Department of Public Safety are supporting the campaign with programs urging seat belt usage during the summer months.

"Persuading children and adults to buckle up every time they get into a car is not easy," said State Senator Bill Sarpalius, honorary Make It Click chairman for the Panhandle. "But with the combined efforts of national and state safety organizations and McDonald's Restaurants, we feel we can reach enough people to make a difference during the upcoming holiday weekend."

PAT LANGFORD & TAMMY JOHNSON

Summer water sports

The nice part of summer is that exercise can mean fun in the sun rather than calisthenics in the playground.

But when you're physically active in hot weather you should be extra careful to avoid dehydration.

Experts say that people playing in the heat for more than two hours should stop for a water break every 15 minutes. That will help replenish water you lose through perspiration and maintain the body's proper water balance.

As for that old saw about not drinking water while you play, there's no truth in it. You'll always see professional athletes downing beverages.

Water is also important when you're physically active because it serves as a lubricant between the muscles and joints in the body.

Johnson-Langford

The parents of Tammy Gay Johnson announce the engagement of their daughter to Patrick Thomas Langford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Langford of Pampa.

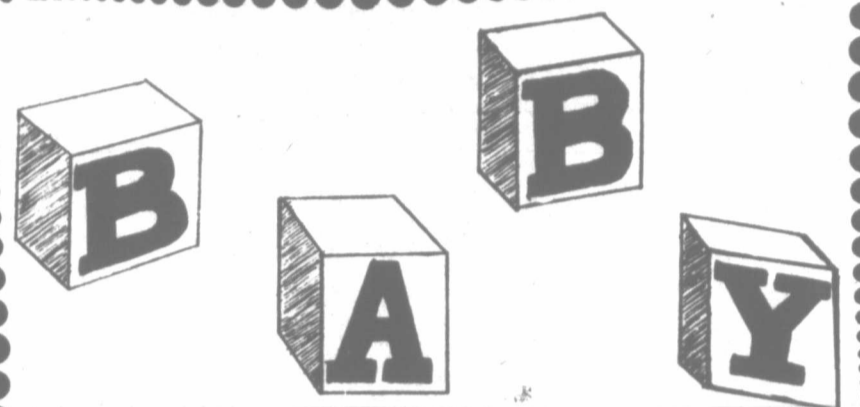

Parents of the bride - elect are Mr. and Mrs. Rube McClain of Pampa and Bobby Jim Johnson of Crosbyton.

The couple plan to marry July 14 at the First Baptist Church here.

Miss Johnson is a 1982 graduate of Pampa High School. She is assistant manager for Payless Shoe Source.

Langford is a 1981 Pampa High School graduate. He is employed by Lone Star Technical.

we're different!
We care more!

Four and a half years ago I made the important decision to lose weight.

Pat Walker's counselors, who really do care about their patrons, taught me how to eat the things I like, but properly.

Years ago I lost 56 1/2 lbs. on the Pat Walker program. Their SYMMETRICON unit provided firming and toning.

Today I feel marvelous, younger and more energetic than ever. Because Pat Walker's cared, I still have my perfect figure.

Dr. Lamb

Healing varicose veins

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have varicose veins. One leg was stripped several years ago. Now I am plagued with ulcers on my ankles. I have two on one ankle. One of them has been there for six months and is finally healing. The other has been the most painful one I've ever had.

I'll admit I have not stayed off my feet and kept them elevated as I should have. Now it is mandatory that I keep them elevated 24 hours a day or I'll be hospitalized. I've had five or six ulcers in the past five years. I wear support hose and still I have ulcers.

I am an active person and want to continue an active life. The itching skin and poor circulation from varicose veins is my main problem. What should I do?

DEAR READER — Of course you should follow your doctor's directions and stay off your feet until your ulcers are healed.

You need to ask him if you should have additional surgery. Surgery is not indicated in every case but if there are veins that could be and should be removed, you might have less trouble with ulcers.

You also need to see about the best type of pressure garment you can get and how you should use it. I often recommend support hose for mild cases or prevention, but when you really need compression you should use something stronger. A pressure-gradient stocking with the greatest pressure at the foot and diminishing pressure upward to the thigh, such as the Jobst stocking, may give better results. Local pressure with a sponge rubber pad over the ulcer may help and is credited by some with healing "silver dollar" sized ulcers.

It is important to take care of varicose veins to avoid the complications you now have. They are not just a cosmetic problem. One important means of prevention is the wearing of pressure stockings during pregnancy.

You'll understand better why you must elevate your feet as your doctor has asked when you review The Health Letter 5-8, Varicose Veins, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am considering having a nose job. Please send me any information you have on this subject, including estimates of cost, time spent in the hospital, recovery, everything. I don't know who else to ask.

DEAR READER — You will need to ask the doctor you see about doing the surgery. Ask your family doctor to refer you to a surgeon who does these procedures. He will know which ones would be best for you to see in your area.

It will be expensive but each doctor's fees vary and so do hospital costs. You may be able to stay in the hospital for just one day.

Use any variety of fresh summer fruits to top Fruity Pizza... a handy dessert idea for summer entertaining. It's made with refrigerated sugar cookie dough and a combination of sour cream and refreshing, chilled whipped topping.

Delightful fruit pizza

Pizza for dessert? The answer is "Anytime!" when the pizza is a scrumptious combination of sugar cookies, frozen whipped topping and ever-so-fresh summer fruits. Cut in handy wedges, the Fruity Pizza makes a great and easy to serve treat at a "Come for Dessert" party, for patio entertaining and for teen-get-togethers.

To bake it easy, you make the crust with sliced refrigerated sugar cookie dough... cool... then add a refreshingly light layer of frozen whipped topping folded into sour cream. Over the whipped topping mixture arrange an assortment of juicy sweet sliced summer fruits such as peaches, nectarines, strawberries and blueberries for garnish.

FRUITY PIZZA
1 (17 oz.) pkg. refrigerated sugar cookies
2 c. thawed whipped topping
1 c. sour cream
Assorted fresh fruit, sliced
Cut cookie dough into 1/4-inch slices. Arrange dough slices, slightly overlapping, on foil-lined 14-inch pizza pan or 15 x 10 x 1-inch jelly roll pan; press edges to seal. Bake at 375 degrees, 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown. Cool; remove from foil onto serving plate.

Fold whipped topping into sour cream; spread over crust. Arrange fruit on whipped topping mixture; chill. Cut into wedges.

Cool and tantalizing fruits and frozen whipped topping team again for a rainbow-bright Layered Tropical Salad. A real natural for summer buffet entertaining.

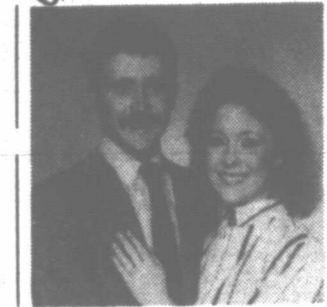

the salad features watermelon chunks, honeydew balls, sliced papaya and kiwi layered with pecans and one container thawed whipped topping.

LAYERED TROPICAL FRUITSALAD
3 c. watermelon chunks
2 c. honeydew balls
3 c. whipped topping
1/4 c. chopped pecans
1 med. papaya, peeled, cut into chunks
1 kiwi, peeled, sliced
Layer watermelon, honeydew, 2 cups whipped topping and 1/4 cup nuts in 1 1/2 quart serving bowl. Top with papaya, kiwi, remaining whipped topping and nuts. Variation: Substitute cantaloupe chunks for papaya and macadamia nuts for pecans.

Fish steaks to grill out of doors

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If you aren't already accustomed to grilling fish outdoors, this summer you may want to try doing so. To encourage you here are some points to bear in mind.

Fish has nutritional advantages: it offers excellent protein and its fat is on the unsaturated side. It is also appealing because often one variety may be substituted for another. You can use what is thrifty in your area. Many underutilized or less commonly used varieties are available at less cost than standard varieties; the former are comparatively inexpensive — and delicious.

Here is a recipe, concocted by a friend of ours, for grilling swordfish steaks. If you substitute another variety for the swordfish, make sure the steaks are firm-fleshed and about 1-inch thick so they will not overcook or be too tender to turn on the grill. The donor of this recipe cooked the steaks about 5 inches from medium-hot coals and the method brought good results.

LUCY'S FISH GRILL
4 swordfish steaks (or a similar variety), each 6 to 8 ounces and about 1 inch thick

2 large limes
1/2 cup dry vermouth
2 tablespoons salad oil
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
Rinse steaks in cold water; pat dry on paper towels.

Trim 1 end from 1 lime and discard; cut 4 thin crosswise slices from the cut end of the lime; wrap slices in saran and refrigerate. Ream the cut lime and the remaining lime to extract 3 to 4 tablespoons juice.

In a plastic bag or shallow dish, stir together the lime juice, vermouth, oil, soy sauce, salt and ginger. Add the fish steaks and turn to coat them with this marinade. Seal bag or tightly cover dish and refrigerate, turning steaks once, for about 1 hour. Remove steaks, reserving marinade.

Grill steaks about 5 inches from medium-hot coals for about 5 minutes, brushing with reserved marinade. Turn with a broad metal spatula; continue to grill and brush with marinade until steaks are still firm but flake easily — 5 to 7 minutes longer. Garnish with lime slices and parsley sprigs. Makes 4 servings.

GRILLED FISH STEAKS — They are good served with a salad of rice, mushrooms and radishes tossed with an oil-and-vinegar dressing.

by bernice bede osol

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There's a chance events will take unexpected twists today which will turn out to be to your advantage. They could happen in a unique series. Cancer predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, career, luck, earnings, travel and much more are discussed. Be sure to give your zodiac sign. Send $5 to Astro-Graph, Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Match maker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Trust your judgment today if you have to make quick decisions where your social interests are concerned. Your evaluation will be accurate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't settle for second best today in work or career-related matters. If you think big, you'll devise deeds to manifest your thoughts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Concentrate on bringing joy and laughter to those with whom you consort today. Dismiss from your mind materialistic and mundane thoughts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck is likely to figure largely in your material affairs today. Be optimistic regarding things which could make or save you money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) As a Sagittarius you are innately curious and like to explore new situations. Today, these two assets could lead you to something lucky.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Pay heed to your instincts in business and financial transactions today. Your inner voice could reveal things which your logic overlooks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something unusual may transpire today to awaken exciting new hopes. Don't discount it, even if it sounds too good to be true.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You are capable of substantial achievements today, but you might not exert yourself unless you feel pushed. Being complacent won't advance your interests.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You mix well with others today, whether it be with familiar friends or a new group. Social encounters should prove fortunate for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be rather lucky today in competitive involvements. You'll respond well to challenge, especially if the stakes are worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) With the right choice of partners today, you should be able to accomplish things which are unattainable on your own. Seek competitive allies.

Sandy Duncan in a new role

NEW YORK (AP) — There are times a baby just won't sleep, like at 2:30 a.m., 4 a.m., and 5:45 a.m. At such times, the parents tend to resemble dead-on arrival when the workday begins.

At noon, though, Sandy Duncan, a new parent, is trying to resemble alert at Radio City Music Hall, where she and her husband, dancer Don Correia, are starring in an extravaganza, "Five-Six-Seven-Eight...DANCE!"

She starts by saying their 8-month-old son, Jeffrey, had a bit of fever during the night, but is sleeping just fine now. Normally bubbly and perky, she neither bubbles nor perks at this time.

There's a long pause between questions and answers. She digs into a hasty lunch of vegetables and Chinese somethings.

She says "DANCE!"

which premiered June 15 and will be on the Music Hall boards through Labor Day, is what you'd call "a giant revue" — full of song, jazz and tap-dancing, film clips, and clown comedy by Bill Irwin and 36 Rockettes, who in one number dress up to resemble 36 Marilyn Monroes.

Miss Duncan, who hails Overton, Texas, gained her widest recognition from TV, including two CBS sitcoms in the early 70s, the Nielsen hit "Funny Face" and the succeeding "The Sandy Duncan Show," a flop.

But she says her heart belongs to the stage, where she began at age 12 as a little Siamese girl in a production of "The King and I" at the Dallas State Fair Music Hall. She worked in stage all through high school. Then, after a year of college, she advanced on New York.

The actress, thrice wed, made her Broadway debut in 1969, in a Chaucerian musical, "Canterbury Tales." It earned her the first of three Tony nominations, the second for "The Boyfriend" in 1970.

After that, Hollywood time in the sitcoms and various guest shots. She didn't like it, she says: "When I left Texas, I never intended to do anything but move to New York and work in the theater."

"When I moved out to Los Angeles, I got sort of sidetracked. My intent was to go out there, do a series, then come back here. But a series of personal things and illness kept me out there."

The illness was a fibroid tumor behind her left eye. Despite surgery, she lost vision in that eye.
