

Are you ready for no-holds-barred television?

By NORMAN BLACK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, buttressed by a court decision upholding its deregulation of the radio industry, is prepared to propose the same step for commercial TV stations at a meeting this week.

The proposal, a long-planned initiative by FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler, has been added to the commission's agenda for a meeting on Wednesday. If ultimately approved after public comment, the proposal would free the nation's roughly 850 commercial TV stations of licensing guidelines that:

- Specify minimum percentages of air time for news, information and local programming;
- Specify a maximum percentage of air time for commercials;
- Require TV station executives to conduct formal, detailed interviews of local officials and residents to "ascertain" the needs and interests of the local audience;
- And require strict logging of all programming that is actually aired.

"The proposal directly tracks the radio deregulation order," said one FCC official who asked not to be named.

"There are no major differences." The FCC made the changes for radio stations in 1981. Its decision was upheld May 10 by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The commission's standards for news and commercials are used by the agency's staff in processing license renewal applications.

The programming standard specifies that at least 10 percent of a station's programming should be "non-entertainment." Of that total, at least 5 percent should be locally produced, and at least 5 percent should fall in the category of "informational" programming.

According to another FCC source, Fowler appears to have sufficient votes from his four colleagues to issue the deregulation proposal Wednesday for public comment.

Fowler has long maintained the agency's licensing guidelines constitute an improper infringement on broadcasters' First Amendment rights; that competition is growing in the video industry to the point that consumers can find whatever type of programming they want, and that most broadcasters easily exceed the FCC's guidelines because of their own desire to build local audiences.

49 may die on highways this Fourth

The Texas Department of Public Safety estimates as many as 49 people may die in traffic accidents during the Fourth of July weekend.

"Independence Day can bring more motorists to our streets and highways compared to a regular weekend," Colonel Jim Adams, DPS director, said.

Last year 55 fatalities were recorded during the 78-hour period.

Adams said, "Some people will insist upon drinking excessively and attempting to drive during this period. If a person drinks, that is his personal business, but if he drives drunk—that's police business."

DPS commanders across the state will utilize additional troopers in areas they deem appropriate. DPS will also conduct "Operation Motorcade" to inform the public of the number of traffic deaths occurring during the 78-hour holiday period.

Texas is broke...

AUSTIN (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock says the state has so little money left to spend — about $36,000 — that it couldn't even finance two full days of a legislative session.

"Mother Hubbard has nothing on the state of Texas," Bullock said Monday. "Our cupboard is bare."

Bullock said the recent special session sent him spending measures totaling $15,411,634, leaving an anticipated balance of $36,866 from the money he estimated was available to lawmakers at the beginning of the session, which ended Saturday. "Out of a $30.9 billion state budget, we are looking at a $36,000 reserve," Bullock said in a statement.

He said a single legislative day costs taxpayers about $20,000, and Gov. Mark White has indicated he will call at least one more special session to deal with other issues, including possibly a teachers pay raise.

"We've enjoyed more than a decade without a general tax increase in this state, but another special session may mean the end of that."

Three die when bridge collapses

By JOHN GUSTAVSEN

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — A 100-foot span of highway bridge collapsed before dawn today and hurled trucks and cars into the Mianus River, killing three people and injuring at least three others, authorities said.

Coast Guard and Greenwich police boats were searching the river for more motorists who may have been trapped in their cars.

A 100-foot section carrying three eastbound lanes of the bridge collapsed about 1:30 a.m. on Interstate 95, the main highway into New York City some 20 miles to the southwest, said Chet West, Greenwich Fire Department dispatcher.

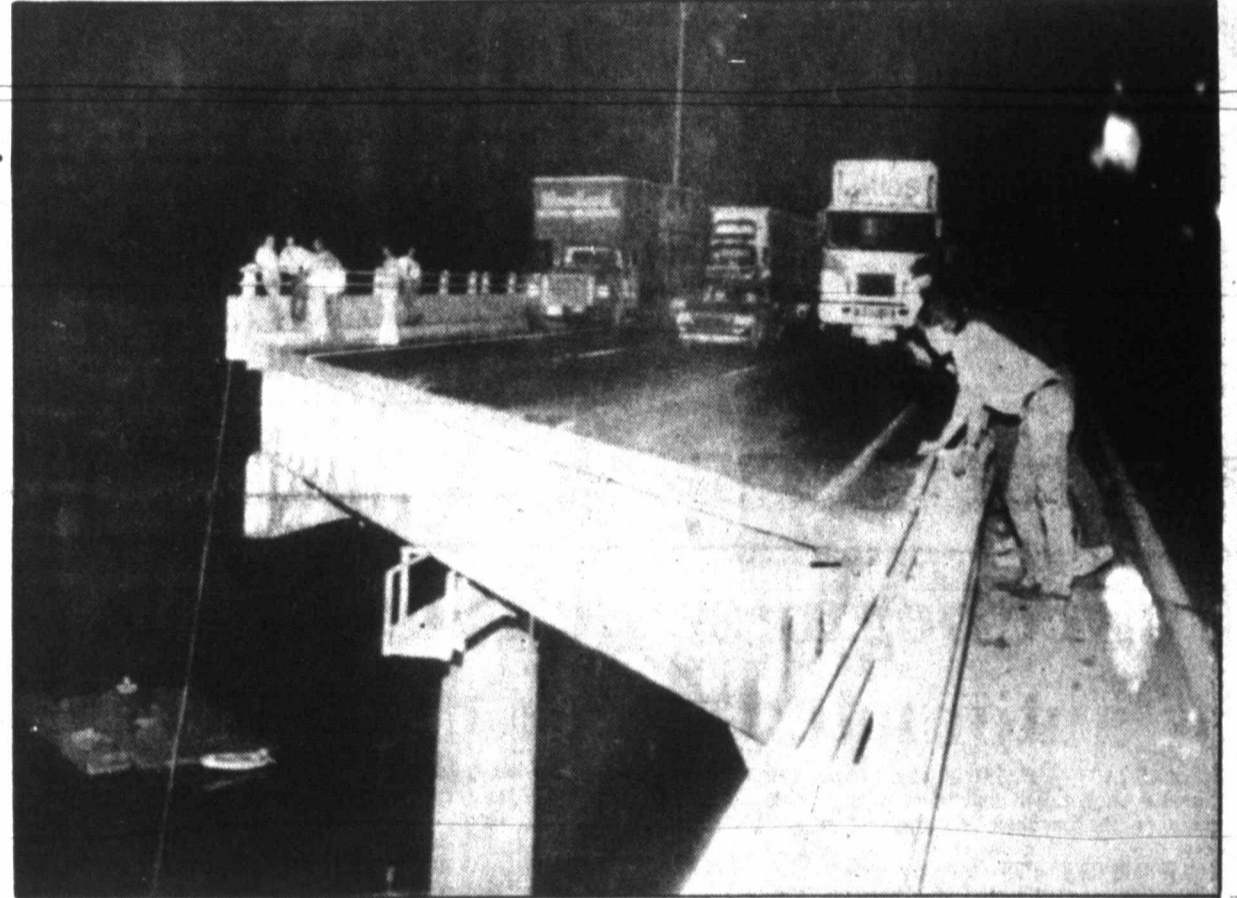

State police spokesman John McLeod confirmed three people died in the accident. In addition, two women and one man were taken to the emergency room of Greenwich Hospital in critical condition, said Joan Grey, nursing supervisor. She said she did not know their identities.

Authorities said they had no idea why the bridge fell apart. The bridge on the Connecticut Turnpike was last inspected in September, said state Transportation Commissioner J. William Burns. "There were problems with the bridge deck, but not with the structure," he said.

The National Transportation Safety Board was sending a team of investigators and Gov. William O'Neill was awakened about 2:30 a.m. and went to the scene, said gubernatorial spokesman Larry deBear.

The accident happened at high tide, when the water is about eight to 10 feet deep, said Lt. Joe Orrico of the Cos Cob Fire Department.

"The bridge is an old bridge. Many people have talked about it needing work for a long time," Orrico said. "I guess it looks like something might get done now."

Emilio Alvarez said he was sitting with friends on his parents' boat in a slip next to the bridge "when I heard an enormous metal crunching sound."

"The splash was incredible. The whole thing was like an explosion," Alvarez said. "That's when we saw a car going over. Almost immediately, I heard a man and a woman screaming for help. I tried to call to them, but they seemed to be too far away."

Greenwich Fire Chief John Tittsworth said one car was submerged 40 feet from the east embankment of Riverside, a section of Greenwich. Another was found 30 feet from the east bank on the shore, according to Cos Cob volunteer fireman Michael O'Connor.

O'Connor said the driver, a woman about 20 years old, had to be twisted out of the back window of the car, which had landed on its left side.

One truck, its cab submerged in the river, was resting vertically against a bridge abutment, he said. Another truck was nearby, on its side, partially under water on the east side of the bridge.

Storm capsizes boat here; eight saved

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Eight people were rescued from Lake Meredith after their boat swamped and capsized in the high winds last night, according to Sheriff Atchley of the National Park Service at Lake Meredith.

Atchley said the owners and six men were in a 17-foot Arrowglass boat on Lake Meredith when the storm struck about 8:30 Monday night.

Charles E. Jones and his wife Micah of Dumas had taken six men from a harvest crew to the lake. According to the report there were five life preservers with the boat. Initially, everyone stayed with the boat, Atchley said. Driven by the high winds, the boat began drifting away from shore to the southwest. Two of the crew, 26-year-old David Haynes and 27-year-old John Hampton, wearing life preservers, swam toward shore. Atchley said as they looked back they could see the boat drifting farther away from shore.

When the two men reached shore, they went to a house in the Arrowhead housing development for help.

After almost four hours in the water, the remaining six people were picked from the raging, wind-driven waters of Lake Meredith about midnight. The Lake Meredith Park Service was aided in the rescue operation by the Fritch chief of police and fire department, Borger police and Hutchinson County Sheriff's Office.

Atchley said the National Weather Service had issued severe weather warnings earlier in the afternoon. People planning an outing on the lake should check with their radio stations or weather service about weather conditions, he said. People should be aware that winds can cause high waves and problems for boaters, she added.

Although there were high winds, thunder and lightning and 1.28 inches of rain recorded in Pampa last night, no heavy damage was reported in the immediate area.

Two transformers on Christy Street were struck by lightning, sending firemen out to extinguish the small fires.

According to a Southwestern Public Service representative in Pampa, no wide areas were without electricity because of the storm. He said only some individual homes were affected, he said.

Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines was out in the rain on Highway 60 between Miami and Canadian about 10:15 last night. He said the rain was coming down so heavy he could not see where he was going. Miami recorded 1.6 inch of rain before midnight.

Brines reported several trees were blown down and were across the highway between Five Mile Park, east of Miami, and the Canadian "Y." Although the road was partially blocked in places, no accidents were reported.

Skellytown reported about an inch of rain, high winds, rain and some hail, but no reports of new damage.

Mary Cousins of Skellytown said there had been some hail damage before, so it was hard to tell which damage is new.

White signs bill to hold off quarantine

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill to persuade the federal government to roll back its quarantine of Texas cattle has been signed into law by Gov. Mark White.

White on Monday signed a bill to bring Texas' brucellosis controls into line with federal regulations of the highly contagious cattle disease.

The measure was approved by the recent special legislative session, which ended Saturday.

"I am very pleased to see this barrier removed once and for all, allowing our cattle industry to continue its trade with other states and nations," the governor said.

The bill would add three members of the general public to the nine-member Texas Animal Health Commission and would allow the commission to treat differently cattle sold for breeding purposes and cattle sold for slaughter, which was a sticking point until a compromise was reached.

The bill also would make the improper use or sale of brucellosis vaccine a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $200 and would require veterinarians to report cases of brucellosis to the commission.

White called the Legislature into special session to deal with brucellosis after the U.S. Department of Agriculture quarantined Texas cattle on June 1. The USDA later extended the time for Texas to comply with federal brucellosis regulations.

Numerous states issued their own quarantines against Texas cattle.

"USDA has assured me that it will advise all who have contemplated or taken action against Texas cattle shippers, that there is no longer a need for concern over the health of our Texas cattle," White said in a statement.

Arafat's base overrun by rebels

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rebel forces today overran a major artillery base of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's loyalists in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley. PLO sources and Lebanese radio stations reported.

The sources, who are sympathetic to the rebels in Arafat's Fatah faction but are not Fatah members, told reporters in Damascus that in addition to the Rauda artillery base, the mutineers overran a security post and a third position outside the Bekaa Valley town of Chitaura, 29 miles east of Beirut.

Both the PLO sources in Damascus and privately owned radio stations in Beirut said there were several casualties, but gave no numbers.

The sources said the rebels also captured two senior officers loyal to Arafat, including Yarmouk Brigade commander Lt. Col. Nasser Yousef.

The Yarmouk Brigade has figured prominently in the rebellion that broke out May 7 when rebel Fatah Col. Saeed Mousa declared his break with Arafat and other Fatah leaders that the mutineers considered too moderate toward Israel. More than a month ago, Mousa traveled from Damascus to the Bekaa and declared he was taking command of the 500-man brigade.

In Taif, Saudi Arabia, King Fahd and his Cabinet met and expressed dismay over the rebellion and vowed to pursue efforts aimed at "sparing Arab blood and safeguarding Palestinian gains," the official Saudi news agency reported.

Arafat is reported planning to convene a leadership meeting in Tunis on Thursday and Friday to discuss the 7-week-old mutiny in his Fatah guerrilla faction, his dispute with Syria and a possible formation of a Palestinian government in exile.

Taking part in the Tunis meeting will be the 15-man executive committee of the PLO and the heads of the eight guerrilla factions making up the organization, according to the radio reports.

Syria expelled Arafat last week because of his accusations that the Syrian army backed the mutineers against his leadership. He promptly left for Tunis, the capital of Tunisia and his current headquarters.

Government subsidized abortions are hot issue today in Canada

By CHARLES CAMPBELL

TORONTO (AP) — A long-smoldering debate on abortion has flared up in cities across Canada, inspiring activists on both sides to carry picket signs, press court challenges and risk jail terms to force changes in the law.

Since 1969, the Canadian criminal code has permitted abortion, but only if a committee of doctors at an accredited hospital certifies that the woman's life or health is in danger.

The law is under attack on one side from activists who say abortion on demand is a woman's right, and on the other from those who say it is murder.

Dr. Henry Morgentaler, who spent 10 months in jail in 1975 despite three acquittals on charges of performing illegal abortions in Montreal, has escalated the battle by opening abortion clinics in Winnipeg and Toronto.

"I believe what we are doing is perfectly legal," Morgentaler told a pro-abortion rally in Toronto. "No longer will women have to beg to committees of strangers to decide whether their pregnancies should be maintained or terminated."

Police have raided the Winnipeg clinic twice since its opening in May. Morgentaler and six members of his staff were charged with conspiracy to perform an illegal abortion, which has a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Morgentaler says he is confident a jury in any major Canadian city will ignore the letter of the law and return innocent verdicts in an abortion case.

His first acquittal in Montreal was overturned by an appeals court, which imposed an 18-month sentence. He served 10 months before the Supreme Court of Canada reinstated the acquittal.

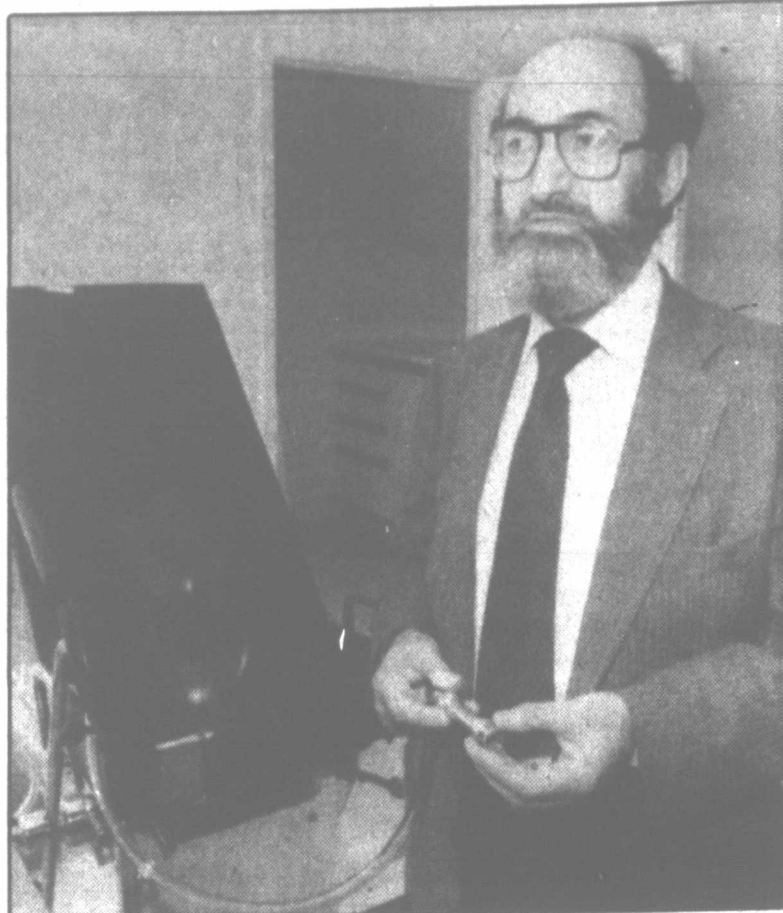

After two more innocent verdicts and a change of government in Quebec, provincial officials dropped all efforts to prosecute abortion cases.

The practical result is that abortion is freely available in Quebec, even in government-run clinics, though the Canadian criminal code is supposed to apply in all provinces.

"It shows how unfair the law is," says Judy Rebeck, a spokeswoman for the Ontario Coalition for Abortion Clinics. "We've been trying to change it through legal channels for 10 years now. We think the majority in this country agrees with us."

The government says 65,127 abortions were performed in Canada in 1981. Another 2,651 Canadian women that year obtained abortions in the United States, where restrictions on abortion have been struck down by the Supreme Court.

Right-to-life activists say few, if any, of the 65,000 abortions performed in a year could be justified on medical grounds to protect the mother. They contend that most of the hospital screening committees in fact do little screening, making abortion available on demand.

Dr. Henry Morgentaler vows to fight to keep his abortion clinics open in Canada.

The champion of the anti-abortion forces is Joe Borowski, who resigned as Manitoba highways minister in 1971 to protest use of tax money to pay for abortions. The government-run health insurance program, which pays nearly all bills for doctors, hospitals and drugs in Canada, covers abortion like any other medical expense.

He also went on a hunger strike against abortion and has led picketers in front of Morgentaler's Winnipeg clinic.

Along with about a dozen other protesters, Borowski was arrested recently at a sit-in at the Manitoba College of Physicians and Surgeons, which his group says should suspend the licenses of any doctors working at Morgentaler's clinic.

Borowski is also pressing a constitutional challenge to the abortion laws which won nationwide headlines when it went to trial in May in Regina,

Saskatchewan, and which may be the vehicle for putting the abortion debate finally to rest.

The judge's ruling is expected this fall, but will almost certainly be appealed by the losing side.

Sensational developments at the trial included testimony from a woman who said God has punished her for having an abortion and from a French geneticist who said 8-week-old embryos "leap for joy" in their mothers' wombs.

The government attorneys assigned to defend the existing law were criticized in pro-abortion circles for not matching the eye-catching case put on by Borowski and his lawyer, but they said the issue eventually would be decided as a question of law.

Borowski contends that Canada's new Charter of Rights and Freedoms, proclaimed just last year, protects fetuses from abortion when it says, "Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of the person."

His opponents, though, contend that the very same language in the charter gives any woman the right to choose for herself whether to have an abortion.

Police begin search for bombers of automated teller machines

DALLAS (AP) — An official of a company that operates automatic bank teller machines says he fears a series of bombings of the machines here may trigger a rash of similar thefts.

Police said they believe the same thieves are responsible for three bombings at north Dallas banks in four days.

"When the first one occurred, we were shocked to find out that one of the TV stations went out and did an investigative job and literally gave a step by step description of how you do it," said Doug Kirk, a spokesman for Affiliated Computer Systems Inc., which operates about 800 MPACT automatic teller machines statewide for numerous banks and financial institutions.

He did not identify the television station. Kirk said the bombings are a first, as far as he knows. "It's possible it has happened in some remote situation somewhere else, but we think we would know about it if it did," he said.

The North Texas Regional Clearing House Association, a financial institution association with 110 members, posted a $2,500 reward for each person arrested and indicted in the bombings of automatic tellers at two of its members' banks — Texas Commerce Bank and the Gateway National Bank, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Police responding to a burglar alarm at about 5 a.m. Sunday found smoke pouring from shattered windows at the Plaza National Bank. They said thieves escaped with an undetermined amount of money from an MPACT machine.

Police spokeswoman Vicki Eiker said investigators believe the same men destroyed a Pulse machine at Texas Commerce Bank late Saturday night and another MPACT machine which was blown open Thursday.

"This is not a gallant kind of new Robin Hood-type thing," said Kirk. "It's a darned serious thing that's happening. People could get hurt."

Witnesses said they saw two men in black fatigues carrying military-type rifles fleeing the Texas Commerce Bank at about 11 p.m. Saturday. Investigators said the passersby apparently frightened the thieves away before they could take any money from the machine.

The bombings caused an estimated $30,000 damage to each of the two bank buildings, investigators said.

An MPACT machine at the Gateway National Bank was destroyed early Thursday and an estimated $2,000 was taken. The building housing the machine also was damaged, police said.

Kirk said the machines are "like a safe. It takes dynamite to blow (them) up. On the one done (Saturday night), the explosion went off and it didn't open. It didn't do the job. It's a terrible feeling ... and people with a criminal nature will see this as a new venture."

In each case, the robbers slipped into small rooms behind the machines to plant the bombs, police said. "It's pretty messy," police investigator Marvin Nowell said. "It does more damage than what they are getting in money. There's not that much money in the machines."

A witness to the Saturday night bombing said that he heard a sound "like someone had hit the building with a vehicle" and saw two men wearing black jumpsuits and carrying military-type rifles run from the bank.

"I saw smoke and debris everywhere and a few seconds later, two guys dressed like SWAT men came out of the smoke," James Bridges, 28, told The Dallas Times Herald.

"I asked them twice if they were security and one of them just turned and looked at me as they continued running," he said. "I suddenly realized what was happening and I ducked behind a building so I wouldn't get shot."

MPACT is the largest system of its kind in the country, Kirk said.

Despite tragedy, balloonists say their sport is among the safest

By SCOTT KRAFT

America's ballooning enthusiasts, stunned by the deaths of Maxie Anderson and Don Ida in a balloon crash in West Germany, say their sport is still one of the safest in the world.

"The safety record of ballooning is 'the best of any form of aviation,'" said Kevin Poeppelman, safety committee chairman for the American Balloon Federation. The ABF investigates fatal balloon accidents in the United States as well as those involving Americans overseas.

There have been 20 deaths in U.S. balloon accidents since 1979, most occurring when balloons touched power lines. About 5,000 pilots are licensed to fly balloons in this country, and several thousand balloons are flown for pleasure and in competition each weekend.

Anderson, 49, of Albuquerque, N.M., and Ida, 48, of Denver, died Monday when their balloon crashed in a Bavarian forest during the Gordon Bennett International Balloon race, which began Sunday.

Anderson and two other balloonists were the first to cross the Atlantic Ocean, landing a helium balloon west of Paris on Aug. 17, 1978. Anderson also made the first non-stop balloon crossing of the United States.

Balloon pilots "should always worry about safety. It's never a piece of cake," said Linda Rutherford, executive director of the International Balloon Fiesta, an annual balloon competition that draws 400 to 500 balloonists to Albuquerque, N.M.

Anderson, who helped with the fiesta, "was probably one of the best," she added.

"He never took risks that he didn't think he could overcome," she said. "He calculated everything down to the last centimeter."

The most recent fatal balloon accident in the United States occurred Oct. 3, 1982, when four people jumped or fell to their deaths after their hot-air balloon caught fire during the Balloon Fiesta in Albuquerque.

On the same weekend, two people were killed in a Greenville, S.C., balloon crash. Five died in Barrington Hills, Ill., in 1981 when a thunderstorm swept their balloon into utility wires and another power line accident that year killed a man in Delaware, Ohio.

In 1980, four people died when a balloon in Davie, Fla., collided with power lines. Two people died in Albuquerque and two others in Wichita, Kan., in 1979.

The accident Monday won't affect balloonists' enthusiasm for the sport, said Mike Cohn, vice president of the American Balloon Federation.

"When the general public reads that a hero like Maxie Anderson was killed in a balloon, their perception of ballooning is that it is dangerous, which probably isn't accurate," he said.

Green berets training recruits

By ELOY O. AGUILAR

PUERTO CASTILLA, Honduras (AP) — "Easy, softly, tenderly, like a caress," a Green Beret adviser whispered to Luis Felicitio Zapata Arous before the 16-year-old pulled the trigger on an M-16 rifle.

"We are learning a lot," said Zapata Arous. "The (the advisers) are very good teachers."

The 120 American advisers on Monday were coaching 40 Honduran recruits who will be in charge of a training center, where the Reagan administration hopes, Salvadoran troops will learn how to fight leftist guerrillas who have been battling the U.S.-backed government for 44 months.

The armies of other Central American countries, friendly to the United States, can also train their recruits at the Regional Military Training Center — now a collection of tents on 286 acres carved out of bug-infested jungle and hill country.

The Honduran government, which will be nominally in charge of the installation, must approve other countries' use of the facility, 12 miles east of this sparsely populated port.

The Salvadoran battalion arrives in a few days. The training for the Salvadorans will be different, said Lt. Col. John Mirus, of Pasco, Wash. "They will train for eight weeks," and "will receive training on basic infantry and advanced tactics."

Mirus is in charge of the Salvadorans' training. "We think we can do the job," he said.

About half of the Green Berets, all volunteers for the job, are Hispanic.

Critics of the U.S. aid program often accuse the Salvadoran military of violating human rights under the guise of suppressing the insurgency.

"Part of their training will deal with treatment of civilians, captured prisoners, and how to work in an area with local authorities, how to avoid abuses," Mirus said.

Oklahoma storms ravage the state

By CHARLIE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

One person was killed and two others were injured as a result of violent thunderstorms that ravaged Oklahoma, pelting the state with winds of up to 80 mph, heavy rains and large hail.

There were also numerous reports of property damage, and scattered power outages statewide.

The National Weather Service said Civil Defense officials had confirmed one fatality from the storm when a large mobile home was destroyed near Collinsville in northern Tulsa County. There were no further details early today.

In downtown Oklahoma City, two workers were injured when the 40-foot high scaffolding on which they were working at Liberty Bank Tower was toppled by wind.

The workers, Steve Moulder, 37, and Harvey Wilson, 25, were reported in stable condition at South Community hospital.

Elsewhere across the state, winds overturned a mobile home near Purcell, damaged a doughnut shop in Lindsay, toppled sheds in Harrah, uprooted trees in Chickasha and destroyed a home's chimney in Duncan.

In Tulsa County, there were scattered reports of tree and power line damage, authorities said. The weather service said part of a hanger roof was damaged at Tulsa International Airport.

In north Tulsa County, near Skiatook, the weather service reported that two mobile homes were damaged, and trees were blown down onto houses.

In Altus, early in the storm's march Monday, winds gusting up to 80 mph and large hail were reported.

A tornado warning was issued for McClain and southern Cleveland counties after a tornado was reported by the public 12 miles southwest of Purcell, authorities said. There were no reports of injuries.

Another tornado warning was issued in Stephens County, where authorities said a tornado was sighted by the public two miles south of Duncan.

There were reports of downed power lines and trees in Woodward and McAlester. Power outages were also reported numerous areas statewide.

Other thunderstorms were reported south of the Red River in north central Texas, with high winds and golfball-sized hail, and in southwestern Kansas.

Although much of the damage statewide was an offshoot of a front which began in the southwest part of the state and marched northeastward, the violent storms launched a multi-pronged attack against Oklahoma.

Early today, three separate lines of thunderstorms continued to march across the state in eastern, northwest and south-central Oklahoma. And, unlike most storms which lose intensity as the night wears on, activity continued to be heavy early today.

A severe thunderstorm watch remained in effect until 3 a.m. today, and early today radar indicated rain over most of Oklahoma.

The stormy weather was triggered by the collision of an upper level disturbance with moist unstable air in advance of a cold front that stretched from Nebraska, through Kansas and northwestern Oklahoma and into the Texas Panhandle.

Pecos rodeo is 100 years old

PECOS, Texas (AP) — The wild, woolly days of the West of the Pecos rodeo, which once featured a surprise appearance by outlaws Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow, will revisit Pecos this week with an eight-day celebration of the 100-year anniversary of the world's first rodeo.

Pecos claims title to the world's first public rodeo, held July 4, 1883, despite arguments from Denver and Cheyenne, Wyo., who say rodeos that tested cow-punchers' abilities first came to their communities a decade earlier.

But Encyclopedia Britannica says the 1883 calf-roping contest down Pecos' main street — with cowboys in dusty pursuit — was the world's first. Bronco and steer riding contests near the Reeves County Courthouse firmed up Pecos' place in the history books, Pecos chronologist Alton Hughes said.

Since "Trav" Windham won the rodeo — he got nothing but a handshake and title then — the Pecos Enterprise has called this city of 13,000 the "home of the world's first rodeo." Winners of the Pecos finale on July 4 will share $172,000, the ninth-best on the 1983 professional rodeo circuit.

The Pecos rodeo, held annually since 1929, also will feature the revival of the world's first Jackrabbit Derby. That event ran once in 1937, and was won by "Also Ran," which allegedly finished first because the rabbit was pregnant and in a hurry to give birth.

"Also Ran" had triplets shortly after the race, Hughes said.

The Enterprise, which sponsored the event then and now, had an entrant named "Man-O-War," but changed the rabbit's name when the animal became the mother of septuplets a week before the race, Hughes said. The newly named "Sob Sister" failed to finish the 200-foot race.

Five rodeo events are scheduled through July 4, and have attracted nearly all of the top Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association leaders.

One not taking part in the rodeo event but who will straddle a horse will be Texas Gov. Mark White. He will be grand marshal.

Joining White will be Western star Dale Evans — husband Roy Rogers is home nursing an illness — and U.S. Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso.

The entire rodeo centennial has reached fever pitch in this historic town. Pecos hotel rooms have been sold out for weeks, and Chamber of Commerce officials are urging those wanting to attend the festivities to arrange rooms in nearby Monahans, Odessa, Fort Davis and Fort Stockton.

"Night in Old Pecos" opened the centennial Monday night at Judge Roy Bean Park, and fireworks on the night of the Fourth will end celebrations of the first rodeo.

In between, horse-drawn carriages will spruce up the 1883 parade, there will be a fiddler's contest and selection of the Golden Girl of the Old West. There also will be dances, town barbecues, a pancake breakfast and mock gunfights.

Now, when he rides down the street in his son's chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce, they don't laugh.

Lucas' statement is only link to Austin slaying, sheriff says

AUSTIN (AP) — A former mental patient who says he's killed scores of people will not be charged in a 1979 Austin murder to which he was linked by his own statement, Travis County Sheriff Doyle Bailey says.

Henry Lee Lucas, 46, is being held on $1 million bond in Montague County, where he is charged with murder in the death of 80-year-old Kate Rich of Ringgold, who had been missing since September 1982.

In the Travis County case, Sandra Dubbs, 34, of Missouri was killed in October 1979. Her body, stabbed 35 times, was found alongside Interstate 35 in Austin. She had been on her way to a San Antonio job interview when she apparently had car trouble, investigators said.

Bailey said Lucas' statement in that case is the only evidence linking Lucas to the slaying. "I don't see anything we can file on in the Dubbs case," the sheriff said.

However, Bailey also said, "We are still investigating."

A source involved in the investigation said, "We would have to develop a whole lot, some additional evidence, to be able to file a complaint." The source asked not to be identified because of a judge's gag order in the Lucas case.

North of here, in Williamson County, Lucas is under investigation in the death of an unidentified woman whose body was found near Interstate 35 in Georgetown on Halloween 1979.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said Monday, "We've turned the case over to the district attorney."

District Attorney Edward Walsh of Georgetown said a decision on whether to file charges would be made in "the next couple of days." Boutwell interviewed Lucas last week.

Walsh said that interview produced no new information on the woman's identity.

Boutwell said, "We're not in any hurry" to file charges in the case. "We know where he is," said the sheriff.

Lucas has discussed the killings of 60 women in 16 states.

He was charged Saturday night in Odessa in the March 1981 strangling of a 46-year-old Odessa woman.

According to a statement issued in Odessa Municipal Court, Lucas confessed to the crime late Friday after Police Detective Billy Hammitt and Texas Ranger C.J. Havrada went to Montague to question him in connection with the slaying of Beverly Joyce Luttrull.

Ms. Luttrull was found in her mobile home March 13, 1981, with a telephone cord wrapped around her neck.

Police would not comment on what evidence linked Lucas with her death.

Lucas was convicted in 1960 of murdering his 74-year-old mother and spent six years in a mental institution before he was paroled from a Michigan prison in 1970.

Lucas also has been charged in the death of his 15-year-old traveling companion, Freida Powell, described by investigators as a Jacksonville, Fla. runaway, whose remains were found scattered over a field in Denton County.

He is indicted in the death of an unidentified woman whose headless body was found east of Plainview in February 1982. The head was found in the desert near Scottsdale, Ariz.

The woman was thought to be Elizabeth Bishop, a former auto repair shop worker and part-time topless dancer. However, Abilene police said Monday that the body was not hers.

Six-year-quest ends in oil riches

GRAHAM, Texas (AP) — A.L. "Red Dog" Creswell's six-year quest for "one good oil well" was a joke to most people in Graham.

As he worked on a shoestring budget and drove a battered Dodge, most people considered his dream laughable.

Now, when he rides down the street in his son's chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce, they don't laugh.

Creswell has drilled fifteen oil wells in a one- or two-square-mile area that straddles Texas 16 on the northeastern outskirts of Graham. And the oil wells are better than "good."

Darrell Creswell, Red Dog's son and partner, says their Cresoper Oil Co. is selling 1,000 barrels a day from the 15 wells on the leases they bought for $10 an acre because nobody wanted them.

And that only includes 250 barrels a day from a well they have tested at 2,100 barrels a day.

"It's hard to believe even now that all those wells are out there," the elder Creswell said. "It's just becoming a reality now."

Riches have not spoiled Creswell, though. Dressed in old oil-stained blue jeans and cowboy hat, Creswell stopped by his office just long enough to sign some papers before heading back out to the oil wells.

"We've got to frac a well in about 30 minutes," Creswell said.

The younger Creswell said his dad deserves all the credit for the discovery.

"I raise the money and my dad had all the land and the dreams. He would have made it with or without me. He is the man I admire most in the entire world and he's the only honest man I know," Darrell Creswell said.

"He likes to get out there and get dirty. Me, I don't ever get dirty," the younger Creswell said.

While his father drives a new Chevrolet pickup now, Darrell goes for flashier transportation, the chauffeur-driven silver and blue 1960 Rolls Royce Bentley.

"It looks different," Darrell said. "I'm a different kind of guy."

Darrell said he didn't have to change his lifestyle very much when they struck it rich because he always lived above his means. "Instead of being in debt, people are now coming around, saying, 'Have I got a deal for you,'" he said.

Darrell quit his job as assistant pastor of Calvary Temple Church in Denver about a year ago and became full partner with his father.

"I'm having a blast; this is great. Anything I see, I can buy. It's a tremendous feeling," Darrell said.

But it wasn't always that way. In 1974, the two Creswells teamed up to drill an oil well on a shoestring budget.

"In 1974, he had an old pulling machine he was drilling with and I was going

Port Aransas detective head is accused of selling pornography

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — Port Aransas police seized $9,000 worth of pornographic video tapes from the home of the chief of detectives after arresting him while he was on duty, Police Chief Nick Baumann said.

Charles Titus was fired from the police force after his arrest, Baumann said Monday.

Baumann said police seized about 200 tapes from Titus' home on Sunday. He called the materials "hard-core."

The chief of detectives had been under investigation for about three weeks, Baumann said.

City Judge Charles Neblett said he informed Titus of his rights and the complaint against him, which included selling obscene material, possession of stolen goods and possession of a dangerous drug.

Baumann said Titus was released from the Nueces County Jail Sunday after posting bond of $1,500 on the pornography complaint and $1,000 on the other two complaints.

Baumann said police who raided Titus' home also found an "elaborate" microphone reported stolen by the National Crime Information Agency, and some pills.

Titus had been acting police chief until Baumann, a former Corpus Christi policeman, was hired recently.

Baumann said Titus was arrested Sunday night while on duty at the Port Aransas Police Department.

"He was fired from the police department upon his arrest Sunday night," Baumann said.

Baumann said the Port Aransas police department was continuing an investigation in the case. He said last Friday the 40-member police department called in a special undercover officer who allegedly bought tapes containing previews of $9,000 in films the undercover officer was negotiating to buy from Titus.

Baumann said the undercover officer also alleged that Titus was planning a September trip to Amsterdam to buy some "kiddie" porn.

Titus joined the police department two years ago after serving as a deputy constable for several years.

Titus and his former boss, Constable Ben Cash, attracted national attention in 1977 when they set off for Central America in search of Iowa Park grain dealer Bobby Johnson, who had disappeared from a pleasure boat at Port Aransas.

The pair went to the country of Belize in search of Johnson. Titus made two trips to look for Johnson, who was later arrested in Idaho.

When Johnson was arrested, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said he had never gone south. Instead, according to the FBI, Johnson headed immediately to the Northwest.

Johnson was sentenced in 1979 to 17 years in federal prison after pleading guilty to interstate transportation of stolen property, about $2 million in grain.

On the last trip to Belize, Titus came back with a motor home he said had been linked to Johnson.

We should listen to Alexander...

When Alexander Solzhenitsyn talks, people listen. The exiled Russian writer, chronicler of the human soul under communism spoke out against those who are protesting deployment of American nuclear weapons.

While Solzhenitsyn is one of many well-known figures who have made their views known on the anti-nuclear movement in the West, his words deserve special attention. He may not always be right, but he commands a certain moral authority.

Solzhenitsyn has written passionately and from personal experience on today's most conspicuously totalitarian regime, perhaps the most complete tyranny that has ever afflicted this sad old world. His experience in the Gulag affirmed his faith in the sanctity of individual man and his ability, his moral duty, to distinguish good from evil.

He has compiled a long and distinguished literary career, including the 1970 Nobel Prize. In his three-volume "The Gulag Archipelago" and his short work, "A Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich," he painted for us a relentless canvas of the despair suffered in Siberian work camps under the Soviet regime. After spending eight years himself at penal labor for his opposition to the Communist system, Solzhenitsyn is as qualified as anyone to condemn the Soviet Union as a threat to civilization.

Nuclear protesters in America and Western Europe are against any kind of struggle at all. They just want to give up altogether. They feel their carefree existence will go on forever," Solzhenitsyn told reporters.

"They believe Bertrand Russell that it is better to be Red than dead. But here, even Bertrand Russell was mentally lacking. He saw an alternative where there is none, because to be Red means to become dead gradually."

Unilateral disarmament campaigners have their eyes bound," he said, and lack any concept of "absolute good and evil."

Solzhenitsyn's words provide a sobering balance to the proclamations of U.S. Catholic bishops. The bishops condemned U.S. nuclear policy as "immoral." They devoted scores of pages to the "immorality" of a free nation defending itself with nuclear weapons, but said little about the immorality of a Soviet government that systematically kills citizens who challenge it.

It is one of the ironies of our time that the most fearsome weapons devised by man should be considered necessary to maintain freedom. That circumstance can hardly make anybody feel comfortable, and leads to moral ambiguities few care to confront. It is important, however, to confront them fearlessly and with a clear knowledge of the forces that operate in today's world.

Solzhenitsyn and the bishops have helped us to clarify our thinking, but neither can be accepted on the basis of authority alone. Individual people need to accept the responsibility of thinking this one through for themselves.

Capital punishment makes no sense

By OSCAR COOLEY

Whenever a person is put to death - seldom in the U.S. - the question of capital punishment arises. The people - you and I - have deliberately taken a human life, and it is a disturbing thought.

If putting a convicted murderer to death dissuades even one person from killing another, I would be for it, but dissuasive effect has never been, nor can it ever be, proven.

After an execution has been carried out, one human being, the convicted one, has unmistakably been killed. This one can be proven. It has been reported in the press, the whole gruesome process has been described and photographed. It is sure.

On the other hand, a death prevented by dissuasion is invisible and uncertain. It is purely hypothetical. There may be one, 100, or none. Society commits a deliberate killing on the theory that this kind of punishment has the effect of preventing at least one other killing in the future.

Clearly, it is illogical to exchange a sure death for a hypothetical one.

One may argue that the killer who we strap into the electric chair is a low-quality character, a ne'er-do-well, a notorious scamp, and that the person who falls victim to a murderer is often of very high quality, perhaps an individual of distinction.

But this does not satisfy. Somehow we sense that all men are human, that reputations often are inaccurate and may be unjust. A farmer can look over his herd of cattle, decide which are the inferior ones, fatten them and send them to the butcher, but shall we do that with our fellowmen? The oneness of humanity cannot be denied. It is a cornerstone of our law.

Lacking logic, advocates of capital punishment are moved by emotion. "We must rid ourselves of this beast who has murdered his own grandmother, this killer who has assassinated the President. Righteous indignation at what the prisoner in the dock has done and the desire to "get even," to get revenge, is the usual motive. This is emotional; one may question whether a human life should hang upon people's emotions.

Emotions cool with time. Perhaps it is well that there is delay, in some cases for years, between the time a crime is committed and the time when the penalty is fixed and carried out.

The common alternative for capital punishment is imprisonment for life. This is expensive for the taxpayer. Prisons must be well constructed. The guards must be experienced and reliable, and it takes substantial salaries to hire people possessing both experience and reliability, especially to do a job that is both dangerous and disagreeable.

Today, prisons are palaces beside the dungeons in which offenders in the past were incarcerated. The inmates are kept warm, comfortably clothed, and well fed. Lifers may be our guests for years.

All this is far more costly than the disposal of offenders by summary execution. The American people bear this cost for the same reason they have in large degree outlawed capital punishment: humanity.

Almost every state now faces the need to build new prisons, the existing ones are overflowing. This should not be looked upon as a hardship, or as a sign of increasing criminality, but rather as testimony to the degree of objectivity with which the voters, the courts and the penal authorities deal with the problem of anti-social behaviour.

Will we win the computer race?

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The U.S. is in danger of experiencing another Sputnik-type technological shock by the end of this decade. This time around the shock will be in the computer field, not space, and the threat will come from Japan, not the Soviet Union.

Little attention has been devoted to it in the U.S., but Japan is embarked on a crash program to achieve computer supremacy. It hopes to gain world leadership in computers and information processing.

The Japanese "fifth generation computer project" aims at development of systems that approach a human level of intelligence.

Technology Review, published by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, states that the Japanese program has been under-publicized and underestimated in the U.S. It asserts that "Losses to the U.S. computer industry in the 1990s could be greater and more precipitous than those already experienced by industries such as automobiles and consumer electronics."

The goals of the Japanese project include translation by machine from Japanese to English and the processing of information conversationally, so that data and problems can be given to the computer in speech and the computer's response can be made the same way.

Fortunately, a group of American firms have joined together in an attempt to match the Japanese effort, though one wonders whether the effort is too little and too late. Ten U.S. companies have committed $30 million - a paltry sum - to form Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., headed by retired Admiral Bobby Inman, former deputy director of the CIA.

MCT is a token project as compared to the Japanese crash program, which has been underway for several years. Technology Review reports that $1 billion has been earmarked for the Japanese effort, and the bulk of that will be supplied by the government of Japan. No taxpayer funds will be available to MCT. Moreover, there is a real danger that the MCT consortium will run into trouble with the anti-trust division of the Justice Department. The Japanese don't have anything like American anti-trust laws. On the contrary, Japanese business and government work as partners in selecting and funding business and technological projects.

The MCT project deserves sympathetic attention and support from American business, government officials and the public. The stakes are enormous. Americans imagine that they have an undisputed lead in computer science and engineering. This isn't so. The U.S. faces a formidable rival in Japan.

With older American industries already in deep trouble because of the success of Japan in capturing a large share of U.S. markets, American can't afford to lose the computer race to its trade adversary across the Pacific.

High court: 'Nine prima donnas'

By PAUL HARVEY

Historically, members of the Supreme Court carefully avoid publicly criticizing one another.

Now, along with other abandoned properties, here goes that one.

Justice Harry Blackmun at the University of Kansas opened the door of that sanctum sanctorum to reveal what he calls "nine prima donnas."

He says justices tend to categorize themselves. For example, one always takes the warden's side in prisoner cases. One is consistently friendly to school boards. One tends to side with pornographers.

Justice Blackmun says most of the work of the court is grim, controversial, competitive; that this court of last resort would never be able to reach some decisions without some members compromising what they believe.

Chief Justice Warren Burger has conceded that the Supreme Court has even exceeded its constitutional bounds by changing the meanings of such phrases as "due process" and "equal protection."

When it comes to equitable justice for everyone, what we call "equal rights under the law regardless..."; that certainly implies that the courts should be colorblind.

Yet, the High Court is presently under pressure from within and without by a few who insist "equal rights" is not good enough.

Let's just imagine that a Supreme Court justice has some higher ambition - perhaps to be president or vice president.

While his or her legal opinions are supposed never to be influenced by political considerations, is it not inevitable?

Any such jurist will want his judicial record to reflect favorably on him or her personally.

So, where justice should, of course, be colorblind, it's not. Justice Harry Blackmun, in the 1978 California versus Bakke case, declared, "In order to get beyond racism, we must first take account of race."

In the same case, Justice Thurgood Marshall wrote, "It is because of a legacy of unequal treatment that we must now permit the institutions of this society to give consideration to race in making decisions."

Obviously, some High Court justices believe that justice should not be colorblind.

Such opinions open a door which civil rights activists have sought to keep closed.

For if the Lady with the Scales is allowed to peek past her blindfold - under any circumstances - she will be able to look both ways.

Then the sinister forces of racism, white and black, will be sanctioned by our courts.

Whatever that is, it's not progress.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, June 28, the 179th day of 1983. There are 186 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 28, 1914, Austrian Archduke Ferdinand and his wife were assassinated in what is now Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, by a Bosnian revolutionary, triggering World War I.

On this date:

In 1778, at the Revolutionary War Battle of Monmouth, N.J., the aid given the colonials by Molly Pitcher made her a heroine in American history.

In 1838, Britain's Queen Victoria was crowned.

In 1919, the Versailles Treaty ending World War I was signed in France.

In 1942, the British 8th Army retreated from the Germans to El Alamein during World War II.

Ten years ago: James Schlesinger was confirmed by the Senate as secretary of defense, succeeding former Attorney General Elliot Richardson.

Five years ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that college admission programs that give special preference to minorities are constitutional, but that a University of California medical school must admit Allan Bakke, a white man, because its admission program was not flexible enough.

One year ago: A special prosecutor announced that there was no evidence linking Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan with any crime during the time he was executive of a New Jersey construction company.

At extradition hearing

Witnesses say

Smith injected Belushi with drugs

TORONTO (AP) — A prosecutor says authorities have eyewitness testimony that Cathy Evelyn Smith, the singer charged with murder in the death of comedian John Belushi, injected him with drugs a dozen times in the days before he died.

Ary Coomaraswamy, a Canadian government attorney, also said Monday at Ms. Smith's extradition hearing in York County Court that her own statements to reporters about Belushi's final days would be used as corroborating evidence at her trial.

Coomaraswamy offered affidavits from 27 witnesses as support for the U.S. request to have Ms. Smith sent to California to stand trial.

But her lawyer, Brian Greenspan, urged Judge Stephen Borins not to accept the documents unless he also orders the witnesses produced for cross-examination.

After most of Monday's session was taken up by constitutional arguments on the cross-examination issue, Borins asked both sides to return to court this afternoon for more discussion.

The judge said he would rule on the affidavits Thursday, and told reporters the documents would not be available publicly pending his decision.

If the judge accepts Greenspan's argument, the extradition hearing would have to be rescheduled to allow witnesses to personally testify. If he agrees with the prosecutor, the hearing could proceed to the key issues — whether the case against Ms. Smith is strong enough and whether or alleged actions would be a crime under Canadian law.

Belushi, 33, was one of the stars of NBC-TV's Saturday Night Live, then starred in such movie comedies as "Animal House" and "The Blues Brothers."

He was found dead of a cocaine and heroin overdose on March 5, 1982, in a bungalow at the Chateau Marmont hotel in Hollywood.

Coomaraswamy, who opened the extradition hearing by summarizing the contents of the stack of affidavits, said a man and woman identified as Leslie Marks and Nelson Lyon testified that they saw Ms. Smith inject Belushi with drugs 12 times from March 1-4.

The prosecutor said the documents he presented showed that Belushi had no history of using heroin or injecting any drug before March 1982. Ms. Smith, however, had been treated for drug abuse and police had twice before found syringes in her possession, he said.

After Belushi's death, police questioned Ms. Smith but "treated the matter as an accidental overdose and closed the investigation," Coomaraswamy said.

The case was re-opened after a National Enquirer article — titled "I Killed Belushi" — quoted Ms. Smith as saying she administered "speedballs" of cocaine and heroin to Belushi the night of his death, including one dose she is quoted as calling the "coup de grace."

Through her attorney, Ms. Smith later retracted the comments, saying she was under the influence of drugs and alcohol when she was interviewed.

Anti-abortion vote is near

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate neared a historic vote on an anti-abortion constitutional amendment today with sponsors conceding defeat is likely but saying it "will let people know who is pro-life and who is pro-abortion."

The amendment, which was to come to a vote in late afternoon, would permit Congress and the states to write legislation regulating or banning abortions.

President Reagan was working the telephones in an attempt to sway wavering senators. "There are about 10 senators who have not made up their minds," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who was leading the backers of the amendment. "He has let them know he feels deeply about this."

Hatch conceded the amendment would probably fall short of the two-thirds majority needed but said the vote was only the first of many on the issue.

"It's unlikely for any constitutional amendment to pass the first time it comes up," he said. "This is just debate number one. The issue is not going to go away."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., won a commitment from Majority Leader Howard Baker for a vote later this year on his proposal to outlaw abortions by statute. He is one of those who has been unenthusiastic about Hatch's amendment.

"The votes are not here for a constitutional amendment, especially this one," Helms said in a conversation with Baker during the debate. "I have some problems myself with this constitutional amendment."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., principal opponent of the amendment, said it was being advanced because its backers "do not like the morality of the (Supreme Court) decision. It offends their personal or religious or other deeply held views. They want to impose their morality on others who do not share those deeply held views," he said.

"A woman's right to make childbearing decisions is part of her right to bodily integrity," Packwood said. "Without that freedom there cannot be any equality for women."

The debate and vote are the first on a constitutional amendment to come before the Senate since the 1973 Supreme Court decision, Roe vs. Wade. The court in that case said women are entitled to have abortions if they wish because of the constitutionally protected right to privacy.

Hatch said there are between 1.6 million and 2 million abortions in the United States each year and only 3 percent of those are necessary to save the life of the mother.

FCC is preparing to deregulate commercial TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, buttressed by a court decision upholding its deregulation of the radio industry, is preparing to propose the same step for commercial TV stations at a meeting this week.

The proposal, a long-planned initiative by FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler, has been added to the commission's agenda for a meeting on Wednesday. If ultimately approved after public comment, the proposal would free the nation's roughly 850 commercial TV stations of licensing guidelines that:

— Specify minimum percentages of air time for news, information and local programming;

— Specify a maximum percentage of air time for commercials;

— Require TV station executives to conduct formal, detailed interviews of local officials and residents to "ascertain" the needs and interests of the local audience.

— And require strict logging of all programming that is actually aired.

"The proposal directly tracks the radio deregulation order," said one FCC official who asked not to be named. "There are no major differences."

The FCC made the changes for radio stations in 1981. Its decision was upheld May 10 by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

The commission's standards for news and commercials are used by the agency's staff in processing license renewal applications.

The programming standard specifies that at least 10 percent of a station's programming should be "non-entertainment."

Fowler has long maintained the agency's licensing guidelines constitute an improper infringement on broadcasters' First Amendment rights; that competition is growing in the video industry to the point that consumers can find whatever type of programming they want.

Is dioxin the most toxic substance known?

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
 Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Dioxin is often called the most toxic substance known to man, and a wealth of scientific research suggests that it can indeed be unhealthy, painful and perhaps deadly.

But there is no proof it has killed any human being.

Yet the word itself — dioxin — hits many people like the plague did in the 14th century.

Dioxin has been found at Love Canal in New York and Times Beach in Missouri, and those neighborhoods were evacuated. Veterans are suing over genetic damage they claim was caused by the dioxin contained in Agent Orange sprayed over Vietnam.

But one chemical manufacturer says dioxins can be found just about anywhere as a result of combustion.

And the American Medical Association said there is no imminent danger to the public, contending "hysterical misreporting" has made dioxins the target of a "witch hunt."

While much has been misunderstood about dioxin, including its name, a 1980 Environmental Protection Agency report documented strong evidence on the adverse health effects of exposure to humans.

The 371-page report, which used several hundred studies including many on workers exposed to dioxin in industrial situations, said immediate effects can be burning sensations in the eyes, nose, and throat; headaches; itching, swelling and redness of the face; dizziness; nausea and vomiting.

The report said exposure to the most toxic form of dioxin — 2,3,7,8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin (2,3,7,8-TCDD) — has been associated in these industrial situations with liver damage, emotional disorders, sensitivity to light, increased risk of artery degeneration, an often disfiguring and persistent dermatologic disorder called chloracne, involuntary rapid movement of the eyeball, hormonal imbalances, deterioration of immune systems and pains in the joints.

A 1976 industrial explosion in Seveso, Italy, sprayed dioxin over a wide area. While there has been much debate about the effects on the public from that explosion, studies of workers there revealed cases of chloracne, liver disease and high blood pressure. One study said 79 of 160 workers involved in the cleanup showed chromosomal abnormalities.

There is also increasing evidence of an association between occupational exposure to dioxins and a "rare form of tumor called soft tissue sarcoma," Dr. Paul Wiesner, an assistant director of the national Centers for Disease Control, said last week when reacting to the AMA statement.

While there is no proof that exposure to 2,3,7,8-TCDD has killed anyone, there is at least scientific evidence suggesting it may have contributed to fatal sicknesses.

According to the EPA report, four hospitalized babies died after being washed more than three times with a solution of 3 percent hexachlorophene, which can contain trace amounts of dioxin as an unwanted byproduct. Autopsies revealed brain damage in each case.

Eleven years ago in France, 41 children died and hundreds became ill after being exposed to talc powder containing hexachlorophene.

And while workers exposed during a dioxin accident in Czechoslovakia showed a variety of expected symptoms, two of them died from lung cancer and one from severe atherosclerosis, hypertension and diabetes, researchers said.

But none of the deaths has been conclusively linked to dioxin exposure.

"There will probably never be a definitive test where we will say 'Ah ha, the smoking gun,'" said Don Barnes, the EPA's top dioxin expert. "It will be a sifting of the accumulated evidence."

According to Barnes: "Science never proves. The case just becomes stronger and stronger on the weight of the evidence. You can still find people who say smoking is not harmful."

There has been widespread misunderstanding about the toxic substance, with terms like dioxin, Agent Orange and 2,3,7,8-TCDD often being used interchangeably.

A dioxin is any of a family of compounds known chemically as dibenzo-p-dioxins. There are hundreds of them, each different from the other. Some are believed to be fairly innocuous. They are colorless, crystalline solids at room temperature, known for their chemical stability, and are virtually insoluble in water.

No one tries to make dioxins. They are unwanted byproducts — impurities — in commercial chemical manufacturing processes, most often in the making of pesticides, herbicides and wood preservatives. Even then, certain conditions, such as high heat, are necessary.

Some dioxins contain chlorine atoms and these the so-called chlorinated dioxins, pose the most serious threat, scientists say. There are possibly 75 of them, including 2,3,7,8-TCDD.

"On a molecular basis, 2,3,7,8-TCDD is perhaps the most poisonous synthetic chemical," said the authors of the EPA report. Only three bacteria — botulinum, tetanus and diphtheria — produce more potent poisons, they wrote.

The phrase "most toxic substance known to man" comes from 2,3,7,8-TCDD's extreme, deadly effects on guinea pigs.

Interest revived in ancient pottery type

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

One thought about our increasingly technical society being discussed today is that as a reaction to an overload of technology in the workplace, people crave "high touch" cultural objects.

If this theory has validity, perhaps it can help explain why there seems to be a growing interest in highly textured, earthy decoration. An example of the fascination which the primitive holds for some individuals may be seen in the ceramics field where there is a growth of interest in rough pottery made by ancient methods.

It is true mainstream ceramic art objects are more formal and ornate than they used to be and often employ pastel colors not found in nature. However, a significant minority of collectors and ceramic artists are attracted to more traditional forms and methods.

For example, native American Indian pottery — which is now considered highly collectible and commands enormous prices relative to the past — is fired in primitive outdoor pits which have remained the same for centuries.

Another instance of the fascination with the primitive has been the steady growth of interest in wood-fired ceramics.

The technique of wood-firing is an ancient one used in many cultures. But American potters seem to have been influenced mainly by a study of traditional Japanese pottery. A feature of some, but not all, wood-fired ceramics is that they are unglazed. Their surface coloration and decoration is made by the wood-ash and the fire.

The pottery reacts to the fire in an unpredictable way and factors such as where it is placed in the kiln, length of firing, type of clay used, type of wood fuel and accident determine the end result.

Recently, the first national conference in wood-firing techniques and esthetics was held at Peters Valley Craft Center in Layton, N.J. The center, which offers courses in a variety of crafts, is one of the few in the Northeast with its own wood-fired kiln.

The kiln is a long slender tunnel that has been built into the side of a hill in what is called the Anagama style (The word is Japanese and is translated as "hole kiln.")

According to Malcolm Wright, chairman of the conference and a potter who uses this method in his own kiln, an explosion of interest in wood-firing has occurred within the last 10 years, even though some Americans were using the technique before that.

A recent survey of existing wood-fired kilns in the United States turned up 86 examples in 36 states. About 25 of the kilns are of the Anagama type. Wright theorized that 50 or more kilns remained undiscovered and so were not included in the survey conducted by The Studio Potter Magazine.

Jack Troy, a potter who teaches ceramics at Juniata College in Pennsylvania, noted that potters were seeking an alternative fuel to run their kilns in place of electricity, oil and gas.

It soon became clear that savings would be more imaginary than real for most, except in rural wooded areas, since many kilns required huge amounts of wood. The difficulty of finding, cutting and storing the wood and the ash and smoke residue has made wood-firing unworkable in most cities.

Though the cost of running an Anagama can be staggering (one participant estimated that each firing of his kiln costs him $5,000 for wood and labor), those who have been "bitten" persist.

The Peters Valley kiln is fired three times a year, in conjunction with three yearly programs led by Japanese-born kiln master Katsuyuki Sakazume, who came from Japan to supervise construction of the kiln in 1980 and has remained to teach.

Paul Chaleff, a potter from Pine Plains, N.Y., who has been using this method since 1976 after learning it in Japan, seemed to be voicing the majority view when he said he valued wood firing and ash glazing for the timeless quality they imparted to his pots.

Andrew Pekarik, a historian, not a potter, and curator of the Mary Burke Collection of oriental ceramics in New York, explained the mystique behind the growing popularity of wood-fired ceramics and, by extension, behind other primitive art forms.

He pointed out that the technique has been around for centuries, but has only recently caught on with potters and a small public.

"We are moving into a period of desire for this type of work because of its symbolic potential," he said. Nowadays, the viewer, too, wants to be an artist. He wants to feel he can find something, look at it, and give it a meaning beyond itself by the quality of his viewing, according to Pekarik.

From the viewer's point of view, the abstract and random patterning and coloring of a piece make it possible to continue to discover new meanings in the pot. The act of selection then

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in-depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Dear Abby

Sexual myths produce one very real baby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Today my doctor destroyed two myths that I had always thought were facts:

1. A nursing mother cannot get pregnant.
2. A woman cannot get pregnant unless the male has an orgasm.

My doctor said that these two old wives tales, handed down from generation to generation, are responsible for an untold number of unplanned pregnancies.

Abby, please tell your readers that a nursing mother can become pregnant and that the fluid secreted by the male during foreplay is just as impregnating as the fluid released during orgasm. A man doesn't have to have an orgasm to get a woman pregnant!

My son was only 2 months old when I became pregnant again. I honestly believed that because I was a nursing mother I was doubly protected.

Your column reaches so many people, Abby, that if you print this, it may keep someone else from relying on these myths as a form of birth control. Thank you.

TWO BABIES IN 11 MONTHS

DEAR TWO: Thank you for a helpful letter that should do away with two misconceptions — no pun intended.

DEAR ABBY: I don't care how much flak you get for suggesting that the Johnsons should thank God their problem is so insignificant. (They complained that their son didn't give them enough respect because he addressed his letters to "The Johnsons" instead of to "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson.")

You did right to tell them about some of the tragic letters you had received that day. It could help put their petty little problem into its proper perspective.

I am reminded of something I heard many years ago that is appropriate to this situation: "I complained because I had no shoes until I met a man who had no feet."

NO COMPLAINTS IN BOSTON

DEAR NO COMPLAINTS: Thanks, friend. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my parents, who live in another state, came for a visit, and I have been upset since they left.

I have two children, a daughter, 18, and a son, 13. Lately they have been playing little games with each other. They try to see who can give the other one the biggest hickey. They also wrestle each other on the bed quite a bit.

My mother was appalled and said I had better do something quick since this type of behavior is not normal between a brother and sister. I never thought a thing about it until my mother got so "appalled" and put those terrible thoughts in my head. I just thought it was a part of growing up, and, after all, this is a new generation.

Nevertheless I am now upset. Please give me your opinion. We both read your column.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Many brothers and sisters roughhouse in the spirit of playfulness during adolescence. But at 18, your daughter is a young woman, and as such she would be well-advised to skip the hickies and wrestling on the bed with her kid brother.

Trooper warns teens about drunk driving

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

SOLOM, Iowa (AP) — State trooper Mike Gilbert snaps high school students right out of daydreams-made- especially -for - assemblies with statements like "the reason teen-agers drink and drive is because adults do it."

Trooper Gilbert, a straight-talking 33-year-old, says the only way he is going to get the message across to today's youngsters that drunken driving isn't "neat or funny" is to "talk realistically about drinking."

Today's youngsters, he says, will not even stay awake if an authority figure plans to tell them that they should not drink and should not want to drink.

"I can guess what a typical conversation about me sounds like," he says to high school students gathered in school gymnasiums and auditoriums across Iowa. "Where do they keep coming up with these turkeys who talk about the evils of booze and drugs? This time they pulled out all the stops — they got a cop," he mimics in a whining, teen-age voice.

Suddenly there are signs of life from the 450 students who gathered recently at Solon

Community School, in north-central Iowa. The students applaud and begin to listen.

Gilbert is affiliated with a national group based in Wayland, Mass., called S.A.D.D., Students Against Driving Drunk. The private group, founded by Wayland school teacher Robert Anastas, is only one year old but claims to have spread its cause to 150,000 students in states nationwide. S.A.D.D. is an anti-drunk-driving group and does not dwell on the evils of alcohol itself.

"I drink," Gilbert tells the students flatly. "I drink and I enjoy drinking and I have no intention of quitting. And sometimes I drink too much, but I never go out and butcher another human being; I don't hurt anybody."

Gilbert, whose full-time assignment from the Iowa State Patrol is to address students on drinking and driving, also sets the mechanism in motion for students to form S.A.D.D. chapters at their school. Inductees sign pledges that read: "We believe in the S.A.D.D. goal to eliminate the drunk driver and save lives and pledge not to drink and drive, or to let a friend drink and drive. If we can dream it — it can be done."

Gilbert tells the students he believes in

"teen-agers and in the power they hold and their ability to change the world."

Alcohol is not only a drug, but a deadly one, Gilbert says. Someone in this nation dies every 21 minutes from an accident involving alcohol. Alcohol is also the No. 1 killer of teen-agers, he adds.

Gilbert says a "stupid, crazy, insane sickness" has swept across this nation, convincing teen-agers that it's "cool" to suggest "one for the road" or "funny" to put a drunken friend behind the wheel.

"Stop thinking it's funny and start thinking it's people. Remember our motto, friends don't let friends drive drunk."

During a "stretch period" in Gilbert's talk, pamphlets on Iowa's tough new drunk driving laws are offered to students, as well as a document called "a contract between parent and teen-ager. The S.A.D.D. drinking-driving contract."

When signed by a teen and a parent, the "contract" requires the youngster to call home for safe transportation and no hassle if he or she has had too much to drink. The parent must also sign a section agreeing to call for help — even if it means calling the child, Gilbert explains — if he or she is in an intoxicated state.

Special devices aid poor vision problems

By GENE SCHROEDER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The 10-year-old boy had trouble reading the blackboard at school even though he sat in the front row.

An attorney, 64, who practiced out of his home, faced involuntary retirement because he couldn't read legal small type and was totally dependent on his secretary.

The 34-year-old music teacher's blurred vision was giving her problems in reading sheet music.

Man, woman and child — young and old alike — all suffered from impaired vision, an affliction shared by as many as 11 million Americans, according to the National Institutes of Health.

But through the use of optical and other aids, the pupil, the lawyer and the music teacher all were able to improve their vision.

One of the unfortunate aspects of the situation, says an award-winning optometrist who specializes in low vision, is that "only about 10 percent of those who could possibly be helped are getting help."

Impaired vision can result from a wide variety of causes. Dr. Charles S. Hollander, director of New York's Sight Improvement Center, said in an interview. Among these are diabetes, glaucoma, retinal deterioration and corneal disorders.

"Some persons with congenital eye disease have reduced vision from birth," the doctor explains. "Others may experience visual impairment late in life due to injury or disease."

Hollander says relatively few of the partially sighted are aware that 80 percent can get improvement from the use of a variety of optical aids such as clip-on telescopes, magnifiers and such non-optical devices as visors, filters, lamps and reading slits.

"Such aids are not a cure, however," Hollander emphasizes. "Their main purpose is to supplement their vision or improve the remaining sight they have."

Frequently, psychology plays an important role.

"Let's assume your mother is living with you and has deteriorating sight," Hollander says. "You bring her in for an examination, and say 'If you can just get her to read or watch TV for 10 minutes a day, I'd be happy.'"

"But the parent turns around and says, 'Why should I bother? They go shopping for me. They cook for me. I don't have to do anything...'"

"This is where psychology enters the picture — the patient has to be motivated."

Hollander, who received a biological achievement award in college and the Bausch & Lomb Achievement Award for contact lenses, says he always has a relative or friend of the patient watching when he does an eye examination.

"The relative or the person the patient is living with usually is amazed to see what the patient is still capable of doing," the doctor says. "The patient may be groping around the house, and asking assistance going from the bathroom to the bedroom, yet in the examination can read all the headlines on a newspaper."

Blindness is defined as a total lack of vision, but 85 percent of those classified as legally blind actually have some usable sight, Hollander points out.

"Most low-vision persons can improve and better utilize their sight with help," he says.

As a public service, Hollander has prepared a pamphlet, "Patient's Guide to Vision Rehabilitation for the Partially Sighted," which he offers at no cost.

One of the most unusual devices described in the pamphlet is the reverse telescope. By reversing a telescope, the patient perceives a miniaturized world, allowing more object space to be focused on the usable part of the eye, he explains. Its major use is for people who have lost side vision.

Other patients with a need to see distant objects may be fitted for regular clip-on telescopes which slip over the rim of their glasses.

Yet still another system uses regular prescription lenses in a pair of glasses, but a miniature telescope is mounted slightly above center. The user can walk looking through his regular eye glass prescription, and when a distant object requires viewing in detail, the person lowers his head and directs his eyes into the telescope portion.

Closed-circuit television in which the image is enlarged electronically and reproduced on a standard screen also can be utilized, Hollander says. This allows a normal reading distance and the magnification of the image can be changed by a zoom lens attached to the camera.

But to help properly, special telescopic glasses must be made by prescription based on an examination of the patient.

"These devices are not something you can pick up at the local five-and-dime," Hollander says.

(Dr. Hollander's pamphlet is available from Sight Improvement Center, Inc., 25 West 43rd St., New York, NY 10036.)

New addition

CHADDSFORD, Pa. (AP) — The Brandywine River Museum says it will build a new $3 million addition to provide more space for its growing collection of American art and illustration.

A section of the three-level structure is to be devoted to the art of Andrew Wyeth.

Network evangelizes Hispanics nationwide

By KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — About six million Spanish-speaking Americans across the country switch on their televisions each week to watch the problems of the Hispanic community dealt with from a "realistic" Christian perspective.

They mail checks and thank-you letters to a program that examines family problems, injustice, drugs, gangs and other issues. The program tackles the subjects in a variety of ways: a documentary, emotional testimonials, a related song and an inspirational talk by the priest-host.

Called "Nuestra Familia" — or "Our Family" — the show is filmed on location nationwide by the Hispanic Telecommunications Network, a non-profit corporation based in San Antonio.

HTN is 1-year-old and growing, fueled by the drive and know-how of president and founder Alan Medrano, an over-30 executive born to a family of migrant farmworkers.

"People watch our show because they want to know about life and meaning and what they're all about," Medrano said. "So many shows try to give religion sugar-coated with entertainment."

"Part of our message is 'It's not enough to watch a television show,'" he said. "This is a beginning. You can't just tune in Sunday morning."

Another purpose of the show, he said, is to provide "a means of cultural and religious self-expression" for Hispanics.

"Nuestra Familia," paid for by several Catholic religious groups, is beamed by satellite to more than 200 U.S. cities via the Spanish International Network.

"One of the biggest problems we have in the Hispanic community," Medrano said, "is lack of communications between groups — Cubans, Puerto Ricans and so on."

"That's why it's good that we're in San Antonio," he said. "If we were in New York, we'd be considered too Puerto Rican. We really work to be useful and relevant to our entire audience."

Much of HTN's 11-person staff left this month on a filming tour through the Midwest, after logging a total of 20,000 miles on both coasts last year.

Marshall McLuhan once wrote that the medium is the message. In HTN's case, the show is the showcase — not its host.

Father Alberto Vargas, at the helm of "Nuestra Familia" its entire first year, will be replaced during the program's second season, Medrano said.

"We're trying to get rid of the personality cult syndrome that so many of the religious shows are dependent on," Medrano said. "This is a show about anyone's life. It doesn't depend on anyone to make it work."

The matter of soliciting money is a sensitive issue for Medrano, who grimaces slightly when the question is raised.

He's terribly conscious, he said, of the public's jaded view toward the hard-sell money appeals of many religion shows that feature hosts who drive Cadillacs and sport diamond rings.

"We never ask for money on television," Medrano said. "We believe the market is so saturated with a negative view toward religion because of those money requests that we try to stay as far away from that as possible."

Appeals for funds are directed only at viewers who write the program or make long-distance calls at their own expense to ask for one of the free books offered at the end of "Nuestra Familia," Medrano said.

A newsletter sent to many of the 20,000 people who have contacted the show also asks for support, he said.

Down the road a few months, HTN plans several new projects, and the network conceivably could sprout a profit-making arm in four to five years, Medrano said.

One current labor of love, he said, is a half-hour documentary on migrant farmworkers that HTN has been asked to produce for the CBS television network.

The successful formula for "Nuestra Familia," Medrano said, won't be altered.

"People are searching for meaning," Medrano said. "I'm convinced of it. The objective is to let them feel this is their show. And it is."

Expensive injections prevented dwarfism

By JUDY LANGLEY
Shreveport Journal
SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Seven years, hundreds of injections, dozens of round-trips from Shreveport to St. Louis and 25 inches later, David Lawrence leads what most people would call a typical teen-age life.

He could have lived his life standing only 3 feet 5 inches tall, with all the inherent problems that accompany hypopituitary dwarfism.

But he participated in an experimental growth hormone program and achieved unimagined success.

The story began 12 years ago. From age 6 to 11, David did not grow even a fraction of an inch. His parents, David Sr. and Diane Lawrence, had been worried about their son's lack of growth, but they were reassured by their family physician that he was a slow grower and would grow in spurts. Not being "doctor hoppers," the Lawrences said, they accepted the medical opinion.

When David showed no growth by age 10, they decided to do something. They learned about a research program at LSU Medical Center. Extensive testing indicated that David possessed somatropin, the chemical which causes the body to grow, but he did not have growth hormones produced by the pituitary gland. These hormones act as a catalyst to stimulate somatropin to cause growth.

Luckily for David, his condition did not include any of the other maladies which can accompany hypopituitary dwarfism — leukemia, kidney problems or diabetes, for example. And David's body was perfectly shaped.

Because of the absence of such problems, he was accepted into the St. Louis program to take growth hormones. Since the program was still experimental, the Lawrences had to assume liability in case negative effects occurred. They were willing to risk that chance.

Mrs. Lawrence said, and by that time David was highly sensitive about his predicament.

Growth hormones for David and others like him come from the pituitary glands of deceased organ donors at research centers. According to Lawrence, it takes 1 1/2 to 2 glands to produce enough hormones for three to seven shots, depending on needed strength for the patient.

Youngsters in the program, at that time, were allowed to remain until they reached age 18 or a height of 5 feet. Too many others needed the hormones from scarce glands to permit patients to continue beyond that age or height.

Once, for eight months, when David was 15 and had reached the desired height, he was suspended from the program. But as soon as glands became available, he was put back on hormones because he was one of the truly phenomenal growth successes, his mother said.

Initially, he grew 1 inch in four months and 3 inches in the first year. After the suspension, it took nearly eight months for the hormones to start him growing again.

Today he is 5 feet 6 inches tall and has the potential to grow another 2 inches. Because he is 18, his parents must now pay for the needed hormones. A three-week supply is $600. They also have been paying transportation costs the last seven years for a 15-minute checkup every four months in St. Louis.

The Lawrences feel they were in the "right place at the right time" for David and his particular problem. The extract had been tested and was fairly safe to use. Even so, those with hypopituitary dwarfism and no abnormalities can now buy synthetic hormones on the market in unlimited supplies.

Unfortunately for David, synthetic hormones cannot replace human hormones.

nor can animal hormones be used. He must continue to use hormones from human pituitaries, and since they are scarce, they are expensive.

Because David's growth was so remarkable, the national television show "Hour Magazine" invited the Lawrences and their doctor to explain the disease to TV audiences.

Mrs. Lawrence said she was elated by the experience.

David was nonchalant. His experience is something he'd like to put behind him, but he agreed in order to give the parents of other children with the affliction hope that some problems can be corrected or alleviated.

On the show, David was asked if his life had changed, and he replied, "I'm more self-assured."

Connors upset by Curren

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It has been a surprising Wimbledon Tennis Championships from the start. And the surprises keep coming.
 It's been a Wimbledon full of sunshine for the most part, with only one day's play held up by rain. That contrasts completely with last year, when daily downpours put the tournament at one point more than 200 matches behind.
 It's been a surprising Wimbledon for the "old folks" — 39-year-old Billie Jean King, making her second straight trip to the women's quarter-finals, and 37-year-old Virginia Wade, Britain's last winner here in 1977 and its last hope this year.

And it's been a surprising Wimbledon for the 1974 champions — Chris Evert Lloyd and Jimmy Connors. Not a happy Wimbledon — just a surprising one.
 "I am surprised that Connors was beaten," said John McEnroe, now strongly favored to capture his second Wimbledon crown. "But it does not make my path any easier, whatsoever."
 While Connors, the defending men's champion and the No. 1 seed, was falling to the rocket-serving Kevin Curren of South Africa 6-3, 6-7, 6-3, 7-6 Monday, McEnroe moved into the quarters with a hard-fought 7-5, 7-6, 7-6 victory over Bill Scanlon.
 Women's quarter-finals today sent Wade against South Africa's Yvonne

Vermaak, King against giant-killer Kathy Jordan, top-seeded Martina Navratilova against Jennifer Mundel of South Africa and No. 3 Andrea Jaeger against No. 11 Barbara Potter.
 In Monday's matches, played in autumn-like weather, seeded players fell like leaves on a September morn.
 Besides Connors, No. 13 Brian Gottfried was among the losers in men's play.
 Women's seeds to tumble were No. 7 Wendy Turnbull, No. 8 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 12 Virginia Ruzici of Romania, No. 15 Kathy Rinaldi and No. 16 Claudia Kohde of West Germany.

Angels' Kison two-hits Rangers to snap win streak

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bruce Kison came back Monday night. And along with him returned the California Angels.
 Making his first start following a one-month stint on the disabled list with back spasms, Kison held the Texas Rangers to two hits through seven innings to start the Angels to an 8-0 win.
 California was firmly entrenched atop the American League West when Kison made his last appearance on May 27, but since had gone 13-14.
 But Kison's effort thrust the Angels back into a tie for the division lead with Texas, which had a six-game win streak snapped.
 "He (Kison) surprised me and certainly pleased me."

California catcher Bob Boone said. "He went about it like he'd never been out. Nothing seemed to bother him."
 "You can't pitch better than Kison did for as long as he did," said Angel manager John McNamara.
 Kison allowed a one-out double in the first to Mickey Rivers and held the Rangers hitless following George Wright's leadoff single in the second.
 Because of lingering concern over his back, Kison worked under a limit of 90 pitches.
 "I was aware of that, so I wasn't trying to go as long as I could, only as best as I could," said Kison, 7-1 following his sixth straight win. "I surprised myself a little bit. I just tried to stay within myself and pick up where I'd left off. Mechanically, that isn't really that easy."

 Kison and reliever Luis Sanchez, who retired all six men he faced over the final two innings, had it much easier than Rick Hunnicutt. Hunnicutt, 10-4, was chased in the fifth inning and saw his five-game winning streak end and his league-leading ERA grow from 1.45 to 1.61.
 "It was bound to end some day," said Hunnicutt. "I didn't have anything out there. It was a struggle all the way."
 California took a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI single by Ron Jackson, who totaled three singles and added a fourth-inning unearned run on Boone's sacrifice fly.

Lowrey sixth in team roping

Pampan Lee Lowrey finished sixth in team roping in the Texas High School Rodeo held in Seguin June 20 through 25.
 Lowrey, the only member of the Pampa High School Rodeo Club who went to the state competition, and his partner, Mike Farrell of Memphis, finished sixth among 72 teams entered.
 The Pampa team's top performer this year also competed in the state finals in bareback and saddle bronc riding and calf roping. Among 60 entries, Lowrey was 14th in bareback for the first go-round.

Titan downs Borger, 10-8

Charles Wuest had two singles and a solo homer to highlight Titan Specialties 10-8 win over Borger in Big League baseball action Sunday night.
 Trace Robbins had two singles and a triple, while Rick Baird had a single and triple to contribute to Titan's 15-hit attack.
 Devin Cross, now 4-0, was the winning pitcher. Cross was the loser.
 Titan is tied with Energy Agri for first place with a 5-1 record.

Pampa golfers win at Panhandle

Linnie Schneider and Mackey Scott of Pampa shot a 140 to capture the Panhandle Country Club Ladies Golf Invitational this past weekend.
 Mrs. Schneider and Mrs. Scott won by nine strokes over Lorene Grisham and Helen Sharp of Panhandle.
 Ava Warren and Eva Kitchens of Pampa trailed the leaders by only one stroke after Saturday's first round, but they dropped out of contention Sunday.
 Cathy Crawford and Judy Simpson of Pampa fired a 184 to win the third flight.
 Vi Dunham and Beth Heiskell of Pampa placed third in the first flight.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

Take a hard look at investment proposals which will be brought to you this coming year by persons who truly have your best interests at heart. You could be put onto something profitable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Assume a more active role today in a joint venture if it appears to be faltering. You are better equipped than your associates to give it momentum. Cancer predictions for the year ahead are now ready. Romance, luck, earnings, career, travel and much more are discussed. Send $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Send an additional $2 for the NEW Astro-Graph Matchmaker wheel and booklet. Reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If you are prepared to reveal without bias, all the facts today, friends could help you solve a problem for which you've been unable to find the answer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You won't be greedy today nor will you be looking for a handout, but those with whom you deal will know you expect compensation for services rendered.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
There's a possibility you could coast today unless involved in something which has elements of friendly competition. Winning will be fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Conditions will take a turn for the better today in two situations which have caused you concern lately. Although unrelated, they may begin to dovetail.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Your reasoning powers are quite astute today. This is fortunate because your ideas and words will carry a lot of weight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Your chances for getting the types of terms you desire in financial or business matters today are better than usual. Stick to your guns.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Where your personal ambitions are concerned you are likely to fare better if you take the long-range view rather than settle for quick fixes.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Secrecy enhances your chances for success with new ideas you may visualize today. Work them out first. Unveil them later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Matters you negotiate on a one-to-one basis today could turn into something far grander than initial signals indicate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Conditions could shift in your favor today to make it possible for you to fulfill two ambitious objectives you've been hoping to finalize.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Creative concepts you envision can be accomplished at this time, especially if you surround yourself with talented, resourceful people.

Learning to shoot

An unidentified U.S. military advisor talks with Honduran troops Monday during shooting practice with M-16 rifles at the rifle range of the new Regional Military Training Center, 200 miles northeast of Tequigalpa, Honduras. The center is being readied for the arrival of Salvadoran soldiers being sent here for special training. (AP Laserphoto)

Files from Reagan campaign officials studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyers are forwarding papers to the Justice Department from the files of the President Reagan's campaign officials that could be the missing briefing materials prepared for Jimmy Carter's campaign debate against Reagan.

"We have found some materials but it's not a briefing book at such," said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes. He said he expected the search for the briefing book to continue.

Speakes also said a briefing book he asked former Carter aides to send to the White House on Monday was being studied by Reagan aides to determine if it was the same as briefing materials they supplied to Reagan during the campaign.

Patrick Caddell, Carter's pollster during the 1980 campaign, provided a black book with a cover letter saying it was the only issue-related briefing material "prepared for and sent to President Carter for that debate."

Caddell also noted that the loose-leaf book, about 3 inches thick, very closely resembled a description of the book given by White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III.

Within hours after the White House received the book, Speakes issued a written statement saying those involved believe it was a "more sensitive" document than the one Reagan aides had during the campaign.

Speakes said that David R. Gergen, assistant to the president for communications, David Stockman, budget director, and Baker had reviewed the Caddell book and concluded it probably wasn't the same one they used to help Reagan prepare for his showdown against Carter.

"Further, the Carter briefing book includes strategic and tactical information that they specifically do not recall having seen: more focused debating points, recommended 'key lines' and 'first hand accounts,' 'questions to ask' in rebuttal, recommended 'challenges,' etc.," said

Speakes. Speakes said the Justice Department was "monitoring the development of information" on the subject. He said Reagan had asked the department to pursue its monitoring "vigorously."

Justice Department officials refused to comment on the matter.

Meanwhile, former Carter campaign director Robert Strauss met Monday with former White House press secretary Jody Powell, Caddell and others to decide what to do about the entire episode.

After their meeting, Strauss, Powell and Caddell separately suggested that a special prosecutor be appointed to investigate since no one acknowledges knowing how Carter's briefing book ended up in the hands of Reagan campaign officials.

Additionally, Caddell said it was "predictable" that after seeing the real Carter briefing book that White House aides would maintain it was not actually the book they had seen nearly three years ago.

US embassy hit by gunfire, rocket misses

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The U.S. Embassy was sprayed with gunfire by assailants in two passing vehicles, just after a rocket fired at the building hit a nearby tree and exploded, a U.S. official said.

Embassy spokesman Donald Hamilton said the rocket, fired from the southwest toward the embassy Monday night, exploded when it hit a tree about 40 yards from the embassy wall.

If the rocket hadn't hit the tree two limbs, about 15 to 20 feet off the ground, "it probably would have hit the embassy," Hamilton said.

He said embassy officials originally thought the explosion had been caused by a bomb but on further investigation determined it was a rocket.

Hamilton said bullets shattered windows of a second-floor office on the southwest corner of the building. Shots were fired from automatic and non-automatic weapons before and after the explosion of the rocket, he said.

There were no reports of injuries in the attack, which occurred at 9:25 p.m. EDT, Hamilton said.

Witnesses said guards at the embassy apparently returned fire but Hamilton denied this.

Salvadoran national guardsmen arrived at the scene in armored cars after the attack to reinforce security at the embassy, witnesses said.

The embassy is located in a residential district of San Salvador but is surrounded by fortress-like concrete walls and is heavily guarded.

The embassy had not been attacked for more than a year, Hamilton said.

The attack occurred just over a month after Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger, deputy chief of U.S.

military advisers in El Salvador, was killed by gunmen at a university campus in San Salvador. One of the leftist guerrilla groups fighting the government claimed responsibility for the May 23 killing.

In another development, bodies of 15 Salvadoran soldiers were delivered to a funeral home here Monday night and a military spokesman said most were from the San Martin-Suchitoto area just north of the capital, the scene of recent heavy fighting.

The military spokesman, Lt. Col. Ricardo Cienfuegos, said some of the soldiers had been executed.

The funeral director, who did not want his name used, said some appeared to have powder burns on their faces, indicating they had been shot at close range. Others, he said, appeared to have been killed in battle.

NASA hoping luck with weather holds for shuttle return

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space agency's luck with the weather, abysmal last week when the space shuttle was rained out of a Florida landing, improved radically to push the ship's return home two days ahead of schedule, officials said.

Officials were hoping the new luck held today to let the Boeing 747 ferrying the Challenger make the trip to Cape Canaveral in a single day, spokesman Les Reinertson said Monday night.

A scout plane was to fly 30 minutes ahead of the jet carrying Challenger on its trip today, Reinertson said. A two-hour refueling stop was scheduled at Sheppard Air Force Base near Wichita Falls, Texas.

"Although officials would like to make the trip in one day, we will be watching Southeast weather carefully to determine if another stop will be necessary," Reinertson said.

Reinertson credited the weather, a lack of equipment problems and "superb ground crew work" for helping to recover much of the time lost when rain in the Southeast forced Challenger to land in the California desert rather than in Florida, as had been scheduled.

Challenger landed at Edwards last Friday. Officials said the West Coast landing could delay the next shuttle mission by as much as eight days unless some of the time could be made up by an accelerated turnaround.

The next mission, Flight Eight, now is scheduled for mid-August, but actually the launch date is expected to slip later into the month.

Meanwhile, the Flight

Seven astronauts met with their boss Monday at the Johnson Space Center in the first day of a scheduled 4½-day debriefing.

Flight Commander Robert Crippen and his crewmates, including Sally Ride, America's first woman in space, met Monday for nine hours with George Abbey, the director of flight crew operations.

Crippen, Ms. Ride and astronauts Frederick Hauck, John Fabian and Norman Thagard, spent six days in orbit on a nearly flawless mission.

They launched two satellites, released and recovered from orbit a free-flying experiment package, and conducted a number of experiments.

Their nearly trouble-free flight prompted NASA to schedule less than a week of debriefing, in contrast to about three weeks for each of the previous American space flights.

The astronauts may follow the debriefing with as much as two months of personal appearances across the country. Offers and invitations are pouring in, officials said, particularly for Ms. Ride.

More than 40 official invitations have been received and more than half of those are asking specifically for her, a spokesman said.

NASA spokesman John Lawrence said there have been scores of commercial offerings — from posters to films — made to the space agency for Ms. Ride. At least three television producers, including Norman Lear, have made film offers, he said.

"Everybody wants to negotiate a deal to do the Sally Ride story for movies or television," said Lawrence.

He noted, however, that she is prohibited from participating in commercial ventures as long as she remains an astronaut.

"She says she doesn't have any intention of leaving the agency now," said Lawrence. "She hasn't even asked to see the letters (containing the offers). She just wants to fly into space again."

Another spokesman, John MacLeish, said NASA's standards of conduct forbid

Christian Democrats are seriously weakened in Italy

ROME (AP) — Italy's long-dominant Christian Democrats had their worst showing ever in a general election and now face the prospect of losing the premier's post in a new center-left coalition government.

The Communists, despite pollster's predictions of substantial loss, held their own in balloting Sunday and Monday. They finished in second place, close behind the Christian Democrats, but lacked enough strength to put together a left-wing coalition.

The Socialist had small gains, while on the right, the neo-fascist party did surprisingly well.

Both the Christian Democrats and the Socialists refuse to invite the Communist Party into a government coalition, and another center-left coalition was expected to be formed — Italy's 44th government since World War II.

Italian commentators blamed the Christian Democrats' poor performance on a large protest vote, lack of traditional support from the Roman Catholic Church, economic malaise and a long string of scandals.

A record number of Italians — 16 percent — rejected all the candidates. They either didn't vote or turned in ballots that were blank or marked with caustic comments.

In the last days of the campaign, the Communists renewed charges that some Christian Democrats were involved with underworld gangs in southern Italy.

It was the first time in the history of the 37-year-old republic that the Christian Democrats got less than one-third of the national vote.

Leaders of all major center-left parties said the only way to assure political stability was to fashion a five-party coalition of the Christian Democrats, Socialists and three small centrist parties — the Republicans, Social Democrats and Liberals.

The five parties basically support the United States and NATO, and no major foreign policy changes are expected.

Political analysts said disenchanted Christian Democrats deserted their party in droves, either supporting another party, boycotting the election or casting blank ballots.

In a typical newspaper reaction, a headline in Bologna's Il Resto del Carlino said: "Collapse of the Christian Democrats — A Victory for Protest."

The Socialists — who forced elections a year ahead of schedule — posted only a modest gain, falling short of the desired 15 percent goal they hoped would give them a shot at the premier's post in Italy's 44th postwar cabinet.

JACKIE GLEASON

Names in the news

BOSTON (AP) — Joan Kennedy makes another appearance with the Boston Pops Orchestra in Symphony Hall tonight, narrating "A Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra."

Mrs. Kennedy, awaiting final court action in her divorce from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, has appeared with the orchestra in Symphony Hall and at its summer home in Tanglewood, but tonight she will be making her debut with Pops conductor John Williams.

"A Young Person's Guide," an introduction to the various musical instruments used in a symphony orchestra, was written in 1945 by British composer Benjamin Britten.

The Pops news office said many members of the Kennedy family will attend the concert, including Mrs. Kennedy's three children.

MIAMI (AP) — Entertainer Jackie Gleason left behind two uniforms that made him famous when he moved out of a north Dade County mansion, and they'll be hung up on an auction block Saturday.

"They were hanging in a closet," says Erwin Flesler, who moved into the place a dozen years ago.

Gleason, now 67, wore the two blue and gray uniforms when he portrayed bus driver Ralph Kramden in "The Honeymooners" on television in the 1950s and '60s, when Gleason lived in the mansion.

A fan club of the old show is hoping to pick up the uniforms. "Getting these uniforms will be a historic event for our organization," says Peter Cresenti, co-founder of the Long Island-based Royal Association for the Longevity and Preservation of the Honeymooners. Its acronym is RALPH.

Cresenti says the organization hopes to make an offer for the uniforms before the auction gets under way. If that doesn't work, a representative may attend the event, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Eddie Murphy is unlikely to be "Trading Places" with anyone after signing a five-film contract with Paramount Pictures.

Murphy, 22, appeared regularly on television's "Saturday Night Live" and now finds himself much in demand for the big screen.

Besides "Trading Places," another Murphy movie, "48 Hours," also has done well at the box office.

The contract was announced Monday by Frank G. Mancuso, president of the Paramount division of Gulf and Western. The dollar amount was not disclosed.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — L. Ron Hubbard, founder of the Church of Scientology and subject of a controversy over whether he is dead or alive, will have a library established to house his literary output, including a recent science fiction work "Battlefield Earth."

Norman Starkey, executive director of Author Services Inc., said Monday that a site for the library has been tentatively chosen in Los Angeles but declined to give details. Starkey's firm is Hubbard's literary representative.

Starkey said plans call for the library to house letters, manuscripts, personal memorabilia, copies of short stories and articles and editions of Hubbard's books.

Cataloging of all of Hubbard's work is under way, he said.

On June 13, Riverside Superior Court Judge David Hennigan dismissed a claim by Hubbard's son that his father was either dead or mentally incompetent.

The judge, ruling in a probate case, said he was swayed by a written declaration from Hubbard declaring that the 72-year-old author was in seclusion "of my own choosing" and that threats had been made on his life.

The document contained Hubbard's signature and fingerprints.

Hubbard's son, Ronald DeWolf, had asked to be appointed trustee of his father's financial affairs.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford's is doing "just fine" recuperating at Eisenhower Medical Center after urological surgery last week.

Ford, 66, was expected to be released within four to five days of the elective surgery last Thursday, but there was no word Monday when he would leave the hospital.

"He's doing just fine," a member of the hospital's security force, who asked not to be identified, said Monday.

News briefs

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government says it will build a $333 million airport to help defend the Falkland Islands.

The lack of a major runway left the South Atlantic colony vulnerable to Argentine invaders who occupied the islands April 2, 1982. A British task force sailed 8,000 miles to retake the islands in a 74-day war that killed 255 Britons and 712 Argentines.

Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine told the House of Commons on Monday that work on the airfield will begin this fall and the main runway should be ready by April 1985. The airfield will be suitable for military and civilian wide-bodied aircraft and will be located about 25 miles southwest of the capital, Stanley.

Britain maintains a 4,000-strong garrison on the islands to protect the 1,800 residents. Argentina claims sovereignty over the islands, which are 250 miles off the Argentine coast, and has not declared a formal end to hostilities.

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Several thousand people demonstrated in downtown Madrid against the Socialist government's proposal to partially decriminalize abortion.

Municipal police estimated that 6,000 people demonstrated Monday outside a soccer stadium, carrying banners and chanting anti-government slogans.

The lower house of Spain's Parliament soon will debate a draft law introduced by the government on the partial decriminalization of abortion.

The law would allow abortion if the mother's life is in danger, if the fetus is deformed or in cases of rape.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kerosene heater manufacturers are making efforts to improve their product's safety and shouldn't be subject to mandatory standards, according to the staff of the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The improvement of voluntary standards and the development of new ones is preferable to imposing mandatory government product safety regulations, the staff recommended in a report issued Monday.

The report included a recommendation from staff scientists that the industry develop an emergency device to shut off the heaters if the flame flares up. The report also urged manufacturers to develop a way to prevent users from setting the wick so low that hazardous chemicals are emitted.

CHICAGO (AP) — The

Reagan administration is moving to terminate desegregation funds to local boards, the chief desegregation counsel for the Chicago Board of Education has charged.

Robert Howard said Monday the Chicago school system spent $57 million on its desegregation plan in fiscal 1982, while federal assistance has been slightly under $2 million each year.

Howard's charges came on the heels of a federal judge's order barring the U.S. Department of Education from spending $12.5 million in desegregation funds while he decides whether the money should go to Chicago schools. The board contends federal officials reneged on a funding promise made in a 1980 consent decree to settle a desegregation suit.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Missouri is "emerging as a national leader in the management of hazardous waste problems," says Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who has signed a bill that will charge fees to companies that handle dangerous substances.

Under the measure approved Monday, all companies that generate hazardous waste will pay an annual tax of $8 per employee. Haulers will pay $2 per ton, and those who put hazardous waste in landfills will be taxed $25 per ton.

Ex-soldier is helping veterans to cope

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A World War II soldier left for dead in the snows of France is using his talent and time — much of his time — to help combat veterans from three wars cope with whatever torments them.

Dr. Merrill Lipton was 19 and fresh from the sidewalks of New York when a 155mm artillery shell burst in the air in Alsace-Lorraine and blew holes in his body and head just after New Year's 1945.

A comrade thinking he was a goner threw a blanket over his body. Later, he was told, he tried to rise with blood gushing out of his eyes, ears, nose and head and fell back into the snow. He was covered up again. He remembered nothing for five days, but during that time he was hauled out on a stretcher on the deck of a light tank.

Today, he is an associate professor of psychiatry at Texas A&M University's College of Medicine and a staff psychiatrist at the Olin E. Teague Veterans Center.

His special interest is post-combat stress or, in medical terms, post-traumatic stress disorder.

Harold Smedley, a counselor who helps veterans collect benefits, says Lipton is so dedicated and effective that he will recommend him for a national award from the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"I've looked for someone like him for years," said Smedley, an employee of the Texas Veterans Affairs Commission.

Even though most public attention has focused on the mental problems of Vietnam veterans, Lipton and Dr. William Schaffer, a 20-year Air Force veteran from Fairfield, Conn., have extended psychiatric group sessions to World War II and Korean War veterans.

One 1½-hour session each week is for the older veterans, one for the younger. The median age for the older veterans is 61½. They come from as far away as Brownwood and Marble Falls, and their job backgrounds range from pipefitter and store owner to clergyman.

Until recently, Lipton said in a recent interview, wartime stress was called the "Vietnam syndrome." Older veterans were merely described as having combat fatigue. Lipton said that even his psychiatric training in the 1950s taught him that combat disorders were considered the result of cowardice "or a previously existing weakness or mental defect."

"The traditional attitudes were that if you had a 'nervous problem,' you were crazy," said Lipton. "And in my generation, nobody admitted to fear. Only in the last few years have people felt it chic to say, 'Boy, you really get scared.' It's the John Wayne syndrome."

"Man does what needs doing, and he doesn't have fear."

"And a man that does show fear," said Schaffer — "is not much of a man," interrupted Lipton.

"My generation didn't seek psychiatric help," said Lipton, "and when they did it was in terms of 'I'm nervous. I can't sleep. I've got anxiety. I'm depressed,' but it didn't qualify itself as a distinct diagnosis with specific features."

"If a man was 'normal,' he wouldn't have combat fatigue — if he was a 'man.'"

Times have changed. "A common saying we hear in the group is that a man who says he wasn't afraid is a liar," said Schaffer.

Lipton and Schaffer started their first discussion group in November 1981. The veterans, some of whom were POWs who had existed under "horrendous" conditions, were people whose lives had fallen apart. They could not function.

"Most of the people we see are people who have had successful lives in terms of raising a family, having businesses or professions, whatever," said Lipton. "However, at some point, their symptoms start to increase."

Smedley recalls men in his office who are so depressed that "they stutter or cry. ... They are unable to think. They can't keep a train of thought. They have problems with simple things."

Schaffer, a social worker with a doctorate in education, said, "We always meet in the afternoon. The basic question is, 'Today did anyone bring a problem with them?' That's how it starts."

There have been quick dropouts, including one Dallas-area man who left after 15 minutes, but most stay with the program until they are better, Lipton said.

"We encourage people to leave the past behind, because the past that comes back is usually dead," Lipton said. "The more time you spend thinking about it during the day, the more chance you're going to have nightmares that night about it."

Asked how they measured progress among the group members, Schaffer said, "Seeing people go back to work, seeing fewer visits to the heart specialist, seeing weight changes, complexion changes, attitudinal changes."

"Just general comfort," added Lipton. "Less tenseness... the ability to sleep more comfortably." Said Smedley, "At first, what Dr. Lipton was doing in helping men with their illnesses was probably frowned upon as spending too much time with too few people, but he kept prodding."

"By word of mouth, I think it's just known by the veterans that the group will help them, that there are people who care about them," he said.

Developer to purchase 30 acres of Ireland

DALLAS (AP) — When James Delaney joined the Ancient Order of Hibernians four years ago, he began to develop a sense of his heritage and a sensitivity for his ancestral homeland he never had before.

Now, the San Antonio real estate developer has agreed to pay $60,000 for a 30-acre piece of "the old sod," a historic Irish battlefield where he wants to build a symbol of peace and unity for the divided nation.

"I'd like to erect a monument or museum on the property someday as a symbol of peaceful reconciliation between the two cultures of Ireland," the millionaire said in a telephone interview.

"I've been notified that my offer has been accepted, but the title hasn't passed to me yet," he said Sunday. "There's a cumbersome legal process that has to be completed, since the land is being sold to a foreign owner."

The plot cost $60,000 — slightly more than 40,000 pounds, Delaney said.

Delaney is one of six North American directors for the Hibernian order, the oldest and largest Irish Catholic organization in the United States. Membership in that group is what sparked his concern for Ireland.

"My interest and active participation in things like this really began about two years ago, and stem from my membership in the AOH," he said. "We're very cognizant of the situation in Ireland and concerned about doing what we can."

Ireland is split between the Catholic-dominated Irish Republic and mostly Protestant Northern Ireland. Violence still flares between the two factions.

It was at the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 that the Protestant King William of Orange defeated Roman Catholic King James of Scotland. Protestants in Northern Ireland still commemorate the result as a symbolic victory.

Delaney, a devout and practicing Catholic, hopes his ownership of hallowed Protestant ground might help reconcile the two factions.

"I'm fully aware of the history of the site ... and dedicated to peaceful reconciliation of the 32-county Ireland," he said.
