

Figures show nation bursting out of Recession

By ROBERT FURLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, bursting out of the long recession, is speeding ahead at a 6.6 percent annual rate in the still-unfinished second quarter, government figures indicated today.

The Commerce Department's "flash estimate" of growth in inflation-adjusted, or real, gross national product showed American business expanding at the fastest pace since the 7.9 percent annual rate for the first quarter of 1981.

Commenting in advance of today's figures, one private economist referred to the second quarter as "a real barn burner." And Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said he expected "further vigorous economic growth this summer."

The new report also slightly revised first-quarter figures, now estimating a still-modest 2.6 percent increase at an annual rate rather than the 2.5 percent estimated one month ago.

In addition, the report said U.S. corporations' profits rose 1.1 percent before taxes and dipped 4.4 percent after taxes in the first quarter rather than rising 1.4 percent and falling 4.6 percent, respectively, as earlier estimated.

Inflation, as measured by the broad-based GNP implicit price deflator, was 5.5 percent, instead of the earlier estimated 5.7 percent, in the first quarter.

Synanon gives up its attempt to settle down in old factory

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

The Synanon Distribution Network is no longer "actively" using an abandoned bra factory in Pampa that was donated to the group last October, according to a report this morning in the Amarillo Daily News.

Bra maker Form - O - Uth, a Sears company headquartered in McAllen, donated its abandoned Pampa building to the distribution network, a creation of Synanon Church founder Charles "Chuck" Dederich, last October 15.

The newspaper reported today that an unnamed Synanon spokesman at the group's Badger, Calif., headquarters said, "We still own the building, but it's not being actively used."

After the story of Synanon's move into Pampa was reported in The Pampa News October 24, numerous attempts to reach local Synanon spokesman Bob Salkins have been unsuccessful. Visits to the group's Pampa building at Marie Street and Kingsmill Avenue found no one there. Calls to the group's Houston headquarters have been referred to a Synanon lawyer at Badger. The lawyer has failed to return calls.

The Form - O - Uth board of directors donated the 70,000-square-foot metal building to the group. Form - O - Uth Vice President Harry Woods denied his company is owned by Sears when he was asked earlier about the gift to the Synanon network. He said at the time that the group founded by Dederich, who pleaded no-contest to murder conspiracy, "is one of the finest organizations in the country, to my way of thinking."

After Salkins announced Synanon's move into the former Pampa bra factory, he said the building would be used to store surplus commodities that Synanon would donate to charitable organizations.

But local charities in both Pampa and Amarillo, including the Salvation Army and Meals on Wheels program, rejected Synanon's offer of help. Local group spokesmen said they didn't want to associate with Synanon.

Salkins, a former heroin addict, told The Pampa News last October that the Synanon Distribution Network is the "brainchild" of Dederich. He said his group receives free surplus or rejected commodities from large manufacturers, and distributes the goods to needy organizations.

Dederich founded Synanon, a program to rehabilitate dope addicts and drunks, in 1958 in a California garage. The program evolved from that start into several communes and a complete alternative lifestyle for anyone who wanted to join the controversial movement.

In 1978, Dederich and two Synanon members were sentenced on conspiracy to commit murder charges for a rattlesnake attack on a Los Angeles lawyer who won a lawsuit against Synanon.

According to reports in Time, Newsweek, and Reader's Digest Magazines and other sources, the group at one time also formed "gou squad" of Imperial Marines to harass and intimidate group defectors, critics and members of the news media.

Demonstrators dispersed at pope rally

By THOMAS W. NETTER

WROCLAW, Poland (AP) — Police routed demonstrators in the southwestern city of Wroclaw today, hours after Pope John Paul II blessed the "thirst for justice" of Poland's workers and their struggle for rights.

After the pope spoke at the Wroclaw hippodrome, several hundred young people marched through the city center, where they were intercepted by helmeted riot police backed by a water cannon.

A line of police vehicles, sirens wailing, spilled riot troops in front of the line of marchers as a helicopter circled overhead barking orders to "go home peacefully."

As the helmeted police jumped from their vehicles, people watching from high-rise apartments showered them with verbal abuse, shouting "Gestapo" and whistling derisively.

The marchers dispersed peacefully, but a heavy concentration of police remained in the area.

The encounter came as the pontiff visited the Wroclaw cathedral. In his sermon at the hippodrome, the pope said, "I would like to preserve this just hunger and thirst of the great multitudes of my compatriots from all that would distort and weaken it."

"This cannot be destroyed or suppressed," the pope told worshippers from Wroclaw, capital of Lower Silesia and a stronghold of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation.

The pontiff's political comments have angered the Polish authorities, who agreed to the papal visit after the nation's powerful Roman Catholic church said it would be strictly religious.

One million people — according to the official Interpress news agency — jammed the Hippodrome horserace track under a baking sun to hear the pontiff on the sixth day of his eight-day Polish homecoming.

John Paul, celebrating Mass Monday in another Solidarity stronghold, Katowice, urged Poland's Communist leaders to negotiate with the independent trade union movement, not drive it underground.

He said the only solution to the nation's political and economic problems was "through a true dialogue between authorities and society."

His words boomed out over an audience of 1.5 million at an airfield.

"Long live the pope!" the crowd shouted and cheered back.

The pontiff's call for "true dialogue" echoed similar appeals from Solidarity, and its leader Lech Walesa. The government of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski also uses the word "dialogue" — but it refers to the new, government-dominated trade unions it has licensed in Solidarity's place.

There was still no firm word when Walesa would meet the pope. The two men last met at the Vatican, in January 1981.

Earlier on Monday, the pope visited Poznan, where police killed scores of workers in the riots of 1956. The pontiff said he wanted to "kneel ... and pay homage" to the dead.

Fired up by the pope's words, several hundred demonstrators marched away from his Mass toward a monument to the workers.

Police detained one of the chanting protesters and confiscated the banners of others, dispersing the marchers.

It was the second time police intervened in an anti-government demonstration since the pontiff began his eight-day Polish visit last Thursday.

Police have avoided taking action in several other marches, including one of 50,000 people in Warsaw — the largest since martial law was imposed in December 1981.

However, several of the faithful at Katowice said they had been searched by some of the hundreds of police and special army officers who lined the routes to the Mass.

Blood drive set in memory of blood disease victim who turned down help

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

A blood drive in memory of Pampa resident Ray Clark will be held Friday at the Pampa Nursing Center. Technicians from the Coffee Blood Bank will be at the nursing center starting at 10 a.m. to receive donations.

Ray Clark, 34, was a hemophiliac. That is, his bloodstream lacked an important part: the part that causes the blood to clot. He died June 17; in part, because he was too proud to accept help from his father any longer, and the state had cut off his disability and Medicaid, his stepmother, Beverly Clark, said Monday. He did not have the money to check into the local hospital to receive the plasma and "factor 8" treatments necessary to sustain his life, she said.

Leon Ray Clark was born in Paducah, Texas, on September 15, 1947. He was a member of the Missionary Baptist Church in Paducah. He had lived in Pampa since 1974. He died in Northwest Hospital in Amarillo, June 17.

Hemophilia is an inherited disease. Ray was born with it, and had lived his life in almost constant pain, his stepmother said. She said he had received countless transfusions in his life.

"We never had a blood drive for him," Clark said. She said if people will give their blood in his memory, they can't in some way pay back all that he used and there will be blood there for the next one who needs it.

In addition to his stepmother, survivors include his father, Melvin L. Clark of Pampa; mother Alta Rae Clark of Paducah; three sisters, Mary Daniels, Twala Ward Busby and LaDonna Ward Alderson, all of Pampa; and two brothers, Doug Ward and Rusty Ward, both of Pampa.

Floods threaten West

By The Associated Press

Riverbank dwellers and business owners today fought to hold back the fast-rising Colorado River, which was swollen to record levels by water released from bulging reservoirs in the mountains.

About 300 people in Grand Junction, Colo., were "packing their stuff" and preparing to evacuate following warnings that a nearby earthen dike was threatened, officials said.

Hundreds of miles downstream, residents in the Parker Strip recreational area of Arizona and California stacked sandbags or moved mobile homes to higher ground in preparation for the snow-fed waters.

The residents were hoping to stay ahead of the Colorado River, which rose nearly 2 feet on the first of three days of planned water releases from dams between Arizona, Nevada and California.

"People are sandbagging, putting up retaining walls, putting plastic sheeting on embankments, using every conceivable trick," said George Pond, fire chief for the Colorado River region in San Bernardino.

Federal officials were forced to lift floodgates at three dams early Monday because their reservoirs were filled to

Cop crime suspect commits suicide

DIMMITT, Texas (AP) — A police officer who drove his patrol car into an oncoming car and critically injured two people in an apparent failed suicide attempt took his life with a single shot to the heart, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety officials said Vaughn Allan Maddox, 30, was trying to kill himself when he drove into the oncoming vehicle on U.S. 385 near here early Monday morning. Maddox then shot himself through the heart with a .38 caliber pistol.

DPS spokesman David Wells in Austin said Maddox left a note inside his patrol car, but Wells would not divulge the contents.

An autopsy conducted in Amarillo indicated Maddox died through a bullet wound to the heart.

Two people in the other car, Robert Young Jr., 47, of Midland, and his nephew Michael Stephenson, 13, of Clayton, N.M. were taken to Lubbock

Methodist Hospital, where they were listed in critical condition. Young's wife, Jean 45, was treated for minor injuries and released.

According to the DPS, Maddox had been currently under investigation for burglary in Dimmitt.

Maddox, a former policeman in Plainview, Odessa and Dumas had been on the Dimmitt city police force for three months, according to Dimmitt police chief Don Franklin.

He was suspended from the Dumas police force on Dec. 18, 1981, following an arson investigation into eight Dumas fires. He had been with the Dumas police force for six weeks at the time of the suspension.

According to the DPS, he had discovered three of the fires and had apparently arrived early enough to prevent extensive damage. All eight fires took place during the early morning hours while Maddox was working the midnight shift.

Dederich also ordered both male and female followers to shave their heads, ordered men to get vasectomies, pregnant women to get abortions, and after he took a new partner, ordered them to swap mates, according to the national magazines.

After his no-contest plea in the rattlesnake attack, Dederich was ordered to take no active role in Synanon.

The unnamed Synanon spokesman denied to the Amarillo newspaper the reports about the controversial orders Dederich gave to his followers in the 1970s.

economic policies, but the administration and its defenders said the downturn was the inevitable result of the policies of Reagan's predecessor, Jimmy Carter.

Today's report on GNP covers the entire economy, attempting to measure or estimate the nation's entire second-quarter output of goods and services and comparing it to the first quarter.

Other, narrower reports have also been encouraging in recent weeks, including Monday's Commerce figures showing Americans' personal income rising 1.2 percent in May — the biggest one-month gain in nearly three years.

And personal consumption spending rose 1.4 percent, the most since August 1981, that report said.

Allen Sinai, a senior vice president with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said, "What these figures are telling us is that we are having a real barn-burner of a second quarter."

the brim by record snowmelt and heavy spring rains.

The San Bernardino (Calif.) Sun reported that U.S. District Judge Manuel Real in Los Angeles late Monday issued an order limiting the amount of water that can be released into the river by the Bureau of Reclamation. But Harlan Moore, a spokesman for the bureau, said the flow could not be reduced.

"Snow is melting and we have a limited time to get rid of it," Moore said.

Hoover Dam, east of Las Vegas, Nev., is the northernmost of the three dams. Davis Dam is about 60 miles to the south near where the three states converge. Parker Dam is another 60 miles below that.

The spring rains and runoff were creating scattered flooding across the West, from Canton, S.D., to Southern California.

Mesa County Sheriff Dick Williams urged the evacuation of the Connected Lakes area of Grand Junction after the U.S. Geological Survey warned that the Colorado was expected to rise at least a half-foot overnight. Williams said he expected the river to climb an additional 2 feet by next week.

The residents were warned to move because an earthen dike separating their homes from the river was crumbling. Concern over the same dike forced a one-day evacuation three weeks ago.

"We have not issued any orders to move out. There have been a few who have moved out, but most are watching the river," the sheriff said. "They're packing their stuff, being ready."

The Parker Strip, a 14-mile area of mostly summer homes between the Parker Dam and the community of Parker, Ariz., is expected to bear the brunt of the flooding, the worst along the Colorado River in more than 40 years, officials said.

On the California side, the Colorado River was 2 feet higher than normal and ripping away private docks, flooding campgrounds and destroying retaining walls, said George Pond, a spokesman for the San Bernardino County Fire Department.

condone illegal or immoral activities of any sort.

"The Synanon Church abhors and discourages sexual promiscuity. The Synanon Church does not permit, demand or encourage in any way the exchange of mates or spouses for transient sexual promiscuity or intercourse," the unnamed Synanon lawyer told the Amarillo newspaper.

Far-out jelly beans enjoyed by shuttle crew

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's astronauts popped some presidential jelly beans today, snaring them in mid-mouth as the candy floated weightless from a bag marked: "Compliments of the White House."

Narrating a video show of the between-meals snack, Commander Robert Crippen reported the five-member crew had received the bag of beans from President Reagan during a recent lunch at the White House.

"He supplied us with some of his favorite candies," Crippen said, as the beans floated from the plastic bag. Pilot Rick Hauck and mission specialist Sally Ride and John Fabian each snared one of the delicacies with a quick snap of the lips.

Birthday cake for a special dog

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Tess is a very special "person" and she will be celebrating her second birthday Friday.

Tess is a "Leader Dog". Her partner, Dorothy Allen, of Pampa is blind, but Tess makes it possible for Dorothy to "go just about anywhere."

Dorothy said the neighbor kids are helping her give Tess a birthday party, complete with a big cake.

Tess and the neighbor children "just love to play together and they wanted to do something special for her." Dorothy said even though her leader dog loves to play, when she is in her harness, she is "all business."

Having Tess means Dorothy can do some of the things she wasn't able to do in the past, such as continue her education. She wants to teach blind and handicapped children, but must master two more grades of braille before she can attend other classes.

Dorothy learned about the Leader Dog School in Rochester, Mich., operated by Lions International members of Michigan, by talking to the Commission for the Blind in Amarillo, she said. Ed Juenger, sight conservation chairman of the Noon Lions Club, recommended to club members Dorothy be sent to Rochester to train with and receive a "Leader Dog," similar to a seeing-eye dog.

Dorothy and Tess met one another and trained as a team from November 24 until December 16 last year.

"I used to walk into phone poles because I didn't see them," she said. Now she can go just about anywhere with Tess at her side, she says.

Dorothy says she wants people to know how well Tess has worked out because there are other blind people who could benefit from having a "Leader Dog," if they only knew about them.

Astronauts conducting space drug experiments

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — An orbiting drug factory that produces pure protein compounds to relieve pain and suffering could evolve within the decade from a machine that's undergoing tests on the shuttle.

The machine, called the Continuous Flow Electrophoresis System, has twice before been operated aboard shuttle spacecraft and experts say results of the tests exceeded their expectations.

Officials of the sponsoring companies say they are now within two years of producing a "breakthrough" drug for treatment of a disease caused by a deficiency of some particular protein, such as a hormone or enzyme.

David Richman of McDonnell Douglas Corp., one of two companies sponsoring the experiment, said tests of the CFES on the fourth and sixth flights of the shuttle showed that it could purify proteins four times better than is possible on Earth and at an efficiency 700 times better.

"The objectives of the third flight (the current mission) are to verify those production conditions," he said. The current model of the machine will fly on three more shuttle flights, ending the series next summer.

If the tests prove the design, said Richman, then McDonnell Douglas and its partner, Johnson & Johnson, will install a larger machine in the cargo bay of the spacecraft in 1985. Drugs produced from that machine could be used for clinical trials, he said.

Richman refused to say what type of drug is being developed, but he said that with a fully operating factory in space, the process could produce as many as 15 valuable pharmaceuticals now impossible to make on Earth.

The CFES uses the absence of gravity to extract nearly pure proteins from a stream of samples. A number of diseases or conditions are caused by a shortage of certain proteins. Diabetes, for example, is caused by a poor production of insulin, a type of protein. Dwarfism is caused by a shortage of a type of protein, the growth hormone.

"In addition to those replacement proteins, we are also looking at the possibility of separating the cells which produce specific proteins," said Richman. "These cells then could be surgically implanted in the body to take over the function of a diseased organ."

Use of all of these types of natural proteins now, he said, is "limited by our ability to separate them" from the useless proteins where they are found.

The machine is based on the fact that most useful proteins carry a negative charge of electricity. This electrical charge is used to pull the protein cells out of the sample.

A flow of fluid containing the sample is passed through the machine. On one side of the flow is a positive electrical charge. On the other side is a negative charge. As the sample flows past, the target proteins are attracted to one side and separated out.

On Earth, gravity distorts this process and researchers are able to get only a small amount of the proteins and with only marginal purity.

Starting with the eighth shuttle flight, the companies will try producing a limited amount of the drug for clinical trials on Earth.

If these are successful, McDonnell Douglas and Johnson & Johnson will fly a 5,000 pound machine in 1985. This will produce enough product for extensive clinical testing.

Later, the companies plan machines that could be free-flying satellites. They would be left in orbit by the shuttle and work automatically. The shuttle would return to remove the finished drug and recharge the device for more production.

Eventually, if the system is successful, said Richman, the companies could place an even larger machine aboard a manned space station, such as those proposed by NASA. This device could work continuously, in the weightless environment of outer space, to make drugs to help people on Earth.

Michener stands up for 'blue northerners'

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Author James Michener says everyone who writes a book about Texas "tangles with a blue northerner" yet the state's major research book — the Handbook of Texas — does not include anything on the weather phenomenon.

Michener appeared at a Capitol news conference Monday to support a decision to expand the handbook from three volumes to six.

He was introduced by Dr. L. Tuffly Ellis, director of the Texas State Historical Association, as one of 35 advisory editors for the revised edition of the handbook, due out in 1995.

Michener said Indians at Indianola and Cabeza de Vaca at Galveston ran into "blue northerners," and he said, "It is a phenomenon that really ought to be treated."

Michener said a norther can drop temperatures 40-50 degrees in one day, a phenomenon he had never witnessed in his home state of Pennsylvania.

"It's a unique kind of Texas experience and ought to be noted," Michener said.

Michener, who is writing a book about Texas to be published for the state's sesquicentennial in 1986, said he had agreed to help revise the handbook, which he called a "miniature encyclopedia" unlike any publication in any other state.

"No state has a publication of this magnitude and this merit," Michener said.

Ellis said researchers would use University of Texas computers in compiling a permanent record so their work "will never have to be done again."

The original two-volume handbook, which was conceived by the late historian Walter Prescott Webb, was published in 1962 after 10 years of work. A third volume of over 1,100 pages was added in 1977, and the proposed revised edition was started in September 1981.

Ellis estimated the cost at $1.5 million, which is being raised by a group of Texans.

Its publication in 1995 would coincide with the 150th anniversary of the annexation of Texas to the United States. Michener said the current Texas handbook "is almost out-dated and merits the most careful revision, and that is what it will get."

Michener, a visiting scholar at UT-Austin, said he uses the handbook "literally every day of the year."

"One of the reasons I was attracted to Texas was this body of material which was available," Michener said.

In Brief

WASHINGTON — House and Senate negotiators have agreed on a compromise $859 billion budget for 1984, including multibillion-dollar increases in taxes and domestic spending that President Reagan says he is looking forward to vetoing.

WARSAW, Poland — After an impassioned plea for workers' rights in his troubled homeland, Pope John Paul II spends another day Tuesday in Poland's industrial heartland.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Challenger's astronauts, halfway through a "spectacular flight," turn their attention today to a sophisticated pharmaceutical experiment that could eventually produce a new drug for treating disease.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy is bursting out of the long recession, with recovery apparently gaining momentum after three dismal years of business ups and downs, new government figures are indicating.

Three hundred people flee their homes near the Colorado River at Grand Junction, Colo., when rising waters threatened an earthen dike, while in Arizona, scores of people sandbagged their homes as the floodgates on the Hoover Dam were opened to dump water from melting mountain snow.

WASHINGTON — Striking the newest blow for on-the-job equality of the sexes, the Supreme Court says U.S. employers cannot offer male workers family medical plans that don't stack up to those available to female employees.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's military prosecutor absolves the political and militia leadership of the Christian Phalange party of responsibility for the September massacre of hundreds of Palestinians in two refugee camps.

CHATHAM, Va. — Marcia Cates, a 42-year-old woman whose body temperature can fluctuate from chills to fever without her being aware of it, has become a living laboratory for researchers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Her rare problem is providing NASA with data on body temperature extremes that may be applied to space shuttle astronauts.

Experts testify

Minority students source of future scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic and black children, a significant portion of the school-age population in a number of states including Texas, may provide one of the best pools from which to draw the nation's future scientists and mathematicians, according to recent congressional testimony.

Existence of this pool was portrayed as one of the few bright spots in an otherwise ominous national educational picture, which has sparked a new debate over how to produce the engineers and scientists America needs to compete with foreign countries, particularly Japan.

Dr. William W. Turnbull, former president of the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J., told the Joint Economic Committee last week that, nationwide, population trends would result in a steady decline in the number of high school students.

"We are headed for a drought of new talent — a steady drop in the numbers of young people we must count on to develop the expertise we need for the future," Turnbull told a hearing called by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to explore the problems of educating future scientists.

"These trends point to a shrinking labor force in which people with highly developed skills will be at a premium, underscoring our need to make the most of the talent resources available to us," Turnbull said.

However, Turnbull said the decline would be most severe in the number of high school students from white, middle-class families, traditionally the greatest source of graduates.

"There will be little or no decline in the number of children from 'the historically disadvantaged subgroups whose birthrates are higher,'" he said.

However, traditionally, such children have been least likely to continue in school and receive a high school diploma, especially in academic fields, Turnbull said.

While more than 30 percent of white children receive diplomas with "academic" concentrations, as opposed to vocational or more general fields, only 20 percent of black and 10 percent of Hispanic or American Indian children do, Turnbull said.

But he said the national decline in the number of high school students "may create a climate unusually favorable" to persuading minority students, their parents and educators "that much larger numbers of these young people should continue in school, especially in quantitative academic fields."

"Their present underrepresentation is an educational and social tragedy," said Turnbull. "We are likely soon to see that it is also an economic threat both to educational institutions that are short of students and to corporations that are short of well-educated entry-level people."

In Texas, Hispanics and blacks comprise more than 43 percent of the students in Texas' public schools, according to the Texas Education Agency, students who might be expected to take special advantage of the growing nationwide demand for trained scientists and technicians.

But at the hearing, educators from Texas echoed warnings heard in other states, that there are not enough qualified teachers to teach the math and science courses so desperately needed for all students, white, black and Hispanic.

Barbara O'Neal, president of the Texas State Teachers

Association, told Bentsen that Texas would experience a shortage of about 4,300 qualified teachers each year for the rest of this decade.

Further, she said, many positions are "being filled by inadequately trained teachers," teachers who because of shortages are given emergency teaching permits to conduct courses which they are not regularly certified to teach.

"It is clear that the shortage of teachers — not to mention equipment and other resources — is now acute in the area of math and science," she said.

"But all the available evidence indicates that the problem confronting public education and, therefore, this nation, is much broader than that," she said.

Her sentiments were echoed by Betty Pyle, president of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

"We do have some very serious problems in public education, and if we are to prevent social and economic deterioration of our nation, we cannot wait any longer to resolve these compelling issues," she said.

Ramada Inn fire still undetermined

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fire officials say laboratory tests failed to pinpoint what started the fire at the Ramada Inn here that killed five people and injured 34.

Tests at a federal laboratory in San Francisco found no trace of accelerants in six samples taken from the hotel and tests on a seventh sample were inconclusive, said Fire Marshal Don Peacock.

Officially, he said, the cause of the fire is still undetermined. But he said there were a number of "suspicious" aspects in the blaze.

"We can't say it was arson because we haven't ruled out all accidental sources. What we're looking for is motive... we still got questions we haven't answered," he said.

He said fire investigators are being slowed in their efforts to determine the cause of the Ramada Inn fire because of additional "suspicious" fires at another Fort Worth hotel and at a hospital.

He said a two-alarm fire Sunday at the Hyatt Regency and two smaller blazes at the John Peter Smith hospital "have slowed the Ramada Inn investigation and increased the workload on a weary staff of six fire investigators."

Arson Captain W.E. Duncan said "there appears to be no connection" between the Ramada blaze and the other fires.

Sunday's fire at the Hyatt was confined to a maid's closet on the sixth floor and was extinguished in a few minutes.

Committee hearings set on special session bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas taxpayers have a chance Wednesday to say what they think about the two subjects assigned the special legislative session called by Gov. Mark White.

Committees in both the House and Senate have already set public hearings Wednesday afternoon on bills concerning brucellosis control and continuation of the Texas Employment Commission.

The session, which House Speaker Gib Lewis has estimated will last a week to 10 days "at the most," opens at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Proposed legislative measures were filed Monday in the Senate and House to cover both the subjects.

Senators will meet at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday in their usual pre-session caucus, behind closed doors, to pick a president pro tempore, or assistant presiding officer.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, an announced candidate for U.S. Senate in 1984, is the present assistant presiding officer, elected at the end of the 68th Legislature's regular session on May 30. It is expected he will be renominated for the special session.

After the expected brief opening ceremonies and introduction of bills, Senate and House committees have scheduled public hearings at 2 p.m. on bills covered by White's session call.

Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, has prefiled a bill on continuation of the Texas Employment Commission in the Senate, and Reps. Lloyd Criss, D-Galveston, and Bob Leonard, R-Fort Worth, in the House.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, has a bill in the Senate on revised brucellosis controls. A similar bill was introduced in the House by Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne.

"This issue needs to be resolved to reassure TEC employees, Texas businesses and the unemployed," Criss said Monday. "We don't know how the U.S. Department of Labor will react if TEC is allowed to die. They have very clear statutory authority to declare our state out of compliance with federal law. If that happens, federal employer taxes will increase 437 percent, from about $56 per employee to $245 per employee."

Quick committee action on either or both of the bills could bring on House or Senate debate before the end of the week.

Slain inmate was to testify against alleged accomplice

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — The shooting death of a Death Row inmate killed after stabbing a law officer during an escape attempt will not damage the state's case against his alleged accomplice, a prosecutor said.

Joe Dugas, 37, staggered about eight feet and died outside a grocery store after the scuffle Monday, police chief Bill Smith said. Officials said Dugas was being returned to a Huntsville prison unit after being questioned by prosecutors in Beaumont.

Smith said Russell Landry, an investigator for the Jefferson County district attorney's office, shot Dugas twice with a .357-caliber Magnum pistol.

Dugas and Linda May Burnett were convicted and sentenced to death in the July 1978 kidnapping and slaying of 2-year-old Jason Phillips of Woodward, Okla. The child was visiting his grandparents in Winnie, about 30 miles from Beaumont.

The boy's body was found in a shallow grave with his parents, Elmer and Martha Phillips, and his grandparents, Bishop and Esther Phillips.

Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath said he had planned to subpoena Dugas to testify against Ms. Burnett, whose 1979 conviction was overturned. Her trial begins in San Antonio July 18.

Prosecutors have said they intend to try Ms. Burnett in the death of Martha Phillips in the San Antonio trial.

McGrath said Dugas' death will not damage his case against Ms. Burnett.

"The prosecution has ample evidence to convict Burnett again with or without Dugas," he said.

Smith said Landry had stopped to use a grocery store's restroom about 10:45 a.m. and intended to put Dugas in the front seat with driver Pat Hayes.

Dugas, who used a key to free one hand from the cuffs he was wearing, leaped from the back seat of the car when Landry opened the door to let him out, Smith said.

Dugas stabbed Landry once with a spike and tried to snatch the lawman's service revolver, Smith said. But Landry grabbed the gun and killed him.

Landry was in stable but guarded condition after a 1½-hour operation to repair a cut in his liver, said Ann McLain, spokeswoman for St. Elizabeth Hospital.

McGrath said Jefferson County Sheriff Dick Culbertson was trying to learn where Dugas got the spike and the L-shaped key.

The prosecutor said Dugas was in high spirits during questioning Monday.

"You would have thought he was at a tennis match or golf tournament," McGrath said. "He talked from the time he came into the office until the time he left."

White breaks vow on new taxes...

Gov. Mark White has started gumming the tax bullet he once said he would not bite. And apparently he likes its taste.

This week the governor began an ambitious television commercial campaign to sell his "sin tax" plan for raising teachers' salaries. In the commercial, White urges voters to tell their legislators to "put our children's education above alcohol and cigarettes."

Such sentiment makes the tax hike sound noble. But White, despite his worthwhile desire to raise the base pay for the state's teachers by 24 percent, wants more than just a higher tax on booze and smokes. White wants to raise taxes on video games, computer software, gasohol and utilities sold to industry as well.

It seems at least incongruously selective to ask the state's drinkers and smokers to foot the bill for better teacher wages, but it seems absolutely ludicrous to seek tax hikes in the other areas.

White has adopted the historical attitude of progressive politics: If a new industry can look forward to growing sales, it's best to lay the tax on early. With video games, particularly arcade games, White has tapped a market he cannot dent.

Software sales, computer marketeers say, will soon outstrip hardware sales as computers permeate the home and office. Tax revenue from these two markets cannot help but grow without White's helping hand. And increased taxes may wound the small entrepreneur.

Higher taxes on gasohol are equally reprehensible. If White wanted to encourage conservation of oil, the state's most valuable natural resource, the last thing he would do is put a burden on an up-and-coming energy alternative. If he thinks an increase in the price of gasohol will spur oil production in this state, he needs to read up on the law of supply and demand. The tax wouldn't help add a drop to the barrel.

Increasing taxes on utilities used by industry won't help Texas' economic base. Texas Instruments might consider moving to Arkansas, where the juice to run its equipment is a little cheaper and, as in most states, tax-free.

White should consider whom he's touching: those of us who drink, smoke, use computers, occasionally play a video game or work for companies so strapped our jobs are in danger.

He should also remember last year's campaign promise not to raise taxes. The voters will remember his promise in 1986. You can be sure of that.

Poetry of Stevens defies verbal taxidermy

By PAUL GREENBERG

FORT SCOTT, Kansas - In the Cover - to Cover Bookshop across from the old fort itself, now a National Historic Park, there lay a book of Wallace Stevens's poems. Not the better for wear, the volume had been consigned to a little pile of unclassified leftovers. Set stiffly apart from the phalanxes of Harlequin Romances and rows of detective novels, it was a copy of The Palm at the End of the Mind. "The palm at the end of the mind - Beyond the last thought, rises - In the bronze decor..." His lines were still pleasing, the pages decorated by a student's underlinings and marginal notes, not unlike the Venus de Milo painted. The last time I met Mr. Stevens, he was being interpreted to graduate students at Columbia University.

At his worst, Wallace Stevens requires interpretation, or at least a few footnotes and a French dictionary. What saved him from being a T. S. Eliot, a poet who provided his own footnotes and profited much from graduate schools, was a sense of humor - a self-consciousness about his airs. At Columbia twenty years ago, Wallace Stevens was introduced by Professor Richard Chase, a fine scholar of Herman Melville's very different work - an old man in a dry month on a drier campus. It was enough to make one conclude that poetry should never be taught to the young, at least not in the fashion then favored by academics, which was to pry and prod till the hidden structure was revealed and any illusions disassembled. Poetry explained that way is no longer poetry but in kind of verbal taxidermy.

It would be better just to read the lines and then let those with the requisite experience or imagination discover the poetry themselves. And if they cannot, be content to wait for a decade or two till the words make the right sense, or the right nonsense. Surely Wallace Stevens, who was almost obsessed with the difference between the poem and the thing it describes, could not have approved of academic intercessors. He barely approved of poets themselves, and always suspected that, instead of presenting reality, they only substituted themselves for it.

At his best, Mr. Stevens is a 1940ish Emily Dickinson, diluted only by the demands of his century, his sophistication, and his insurance business in Hartford. Otherwise, he has the same piquant consciousness, the same playfulness in describing what is most serious. His is a modern sensibility yet, rare enough in a modern, unpretentious.

Now Wallace Stevens had shown up at Fort Scott, that old refuge for invalids. It was used as an Army hospital during the Civil War. That was long after General Stephen Watts Kearny had passed through in 1846 with 1,700 horsemen on his way to raid Santa Fe in what was Mexico at the time. Many a Southern officer knew Fort Scott well then. Later, some would try to retake it early in the War Between the States. It remained secure enough to serve as a hospital for the Union wounded. In those days before the germ theory was taken seriously, one doctor was known for honing his surgical knife on his leather boots, another for wetting the surgical thread with his saliva before closing wounds. If the patients weren't deathly ill before reaching Fort Scott, they could expect to be afterward. This volume of Wallace Stevens wasn't in very good shape itself; even the price tag was torn. "The price tag is torn," said the nice clerk at the Cover - to - Cover. "I'll charge you 75 cents, if that's fair."

"More than fair," I said, ransoming a poet cheap. Even Wallace Stevens at less than his best would be welcome company in blank Kansas. His eye for color, his ear for simple rhymes and rhythms ("Things as they are - are changed upon the blue guitar"), would enliven the trip. Even his pretensions and affectations would be welcome under this endless prairie sky, shimmering like a vast glass bowl overturned on emptiness. ("Day is desire and night is sleep. - There are no shadows anywhere. - The earth, for us, is flat and bare. There are no shadows. Poetry - Exceeding music must take the place - Of empty heaven and its hymns...")

At his medium, Wallace Stevens is a comfort, like a traveler who has known lonely roads before. In a motel room that looks out on an empty highway, meriting not a glance from the occasional passing car, he speaks of journeying:

If knowledge and the things known are one
So that to know a man is to be
That man, to know a place is to be
That place, and it seems to come to that;
And if to know one man is to know all
And if one's sense of a single spot
Is what one knows of the universe,
Then the knowledge is the only life.

The only sun of the only day,
The only access to true ease,
The deep comfort of the world and fate.
There is a human loneliness,
A part of space and solitude
In which knowledge cannot be denied,
In which nothing of knowledge fails,
The luminous companion, the hand,
The fortifying arm, the profound
Response, the completely answering voice.
That which is more than anything else
The right within us and about us,
Joined, the triumphant vigor, felt,
The inner direction on which we depend,
That which keeps us the little that we are,
The aid of greatness to be and the force.
My wife, noting my absorption, asks if I will read her a stanza. Eyes still glazed from the day's drive, I begin:
"There is a human loneliness..."

"There is a human loneliness?" she asks sleepily.
"Yes," I say, and continue editing aloud:
There is a human loneliness,
A part of space and company,
In which burlesque cannot be denied,
In which nothing of humor fails,
The quizzical companion, the hand,
The comforting trip, the shallow
Response, the completely questioning voice,
That which is less than anything else
The wry within us and about us,
Joined, the Marx Brothers' vigor, felt,
The outer direction on which we depend,
That which keeps us the little that we are...

It makes a different and not infernal sense that way. And laughter wells up. It was Melville who said it: A smile's the surest response to anything that puzzles. So there is a connection between Herman Melville and Wallace Stevens after all. Professor Chase would have been pleased. Fort Scott, with its coarse linen and bedpans, its surgical equipment a hundred years old and older, its instruments that have outlasted flesh and blood... is suddenly overtaken. The confederacy has overrun it at last, a confederacy of dunes.

Wars are won with bread, and not with bullets

By OSCAR COOLEY

Americans fear Soviet Russia. Have they reason to? "Russia now has the largest surface and submarine navy in the world," said Dear Ralph M. Ghormley, speaking in Cleveland, Memorial Day. The huge Soviet navy, airforce and army are not merely for defense but are designed to rule the oceans. "Even a cursory study of modern Russia history shows that the Russians have been doggedly marching down the road to totalitarianism and conquest since Lenin.

A totalitarian government is one that grants neither recognition nor tolerance to practices of differing opinion.

Thus the U.S. and the USSR are now at war, ideologically, for in the U.S. no one party or opinion rules. All are free to hold and express their own opinions and to form rival parties, the one in majority ruling, while in Soviet Russia only one party, the Communist, is allowed. The Soviet ideology tolerates only the Communist party, while the U.S. follows the principle of "live and let live."

It follows that we Americans want all countries to set up and support their own form of government, while the Soviets want every people to embrace only Communism. Hence, the Soviets support revolutionary groups in every country and help them with arms and other means to gain control of their land and to establish a government on the Soviet model.

The Russians succeeded in doing this in North Vietnam and in Cuba. They are trying now to bring it about in Afghanistan and El Salvador, Nicaragua having already fallen victim. They dominate Syria but have run into a doughy foe in the neighboring country, Israel.

The U.S. is Moscow's main ideological enemy. Their forces have not attacked us because we are too powerful. They hope to get us, as well as all countries, large and small, eventually, for that is the Marxist book.

However, here they confront not merely physical power but a philosophy of life that makes us formidable, and that is the philosophy of freedom. On it is based the freedom of economic enterprise. Every individual is free to choose his own way of making a living. He can hire out at will, or he can set up any business he chooses and seek to make a maximum profit.

Over the years, American entrepreneurs have invested large amounts of capital, both from abroad and from their own savings, in their land, which Nature endowed with rich resources. Coupling this with abundant labor, they have out-produced the world. This is capitalism. The U.S. is strong because it is capitalistic.

In the Soviet economy, on the other hand, one is not free as an individual to seek maximum production and profit, but must follow orders from the central political organization. The Soviet individual is wholly regimented. The result in terms of production is not impressive.

Russia has vast tracts of land suited to growing grain. In Czarist days, Russia was the largest exporter of grain. Now, under the Marxist dogma, it is the world's largest importer of grain, according to Marshall Goldman in his book, "USSR in Crisis." Much of that imported grain comes from capitalist U.S., which has an over-abundance.

Agriculture, Russia's natural strong suit, has been neglected and sabotaged by Moscow, which is interested only in industry. But the basic industries of Soviet Russia are not doing too well. Even steel production, Goldman points out, has begun to decline. Without sufficient steel, how will the Soviets equip their vast army?

Americans need not fear Soviet Russia so long as she clings to Communism and we to Capitalism. Free men have always outproduced serfs. Bread, not bullets, wins wars.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, June 21, the 172nd day of 1983. There are 193 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 21, 1788, the U.S. Constitution went into effect as New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it.

On this date:

In 1898, the first U.S. troops landed in Cuba during the Spanish-American War.

In 1945, Japanese forces on Okinawa surrendered to the United States during World War II.

In 1970, the Indochina war erupted on a dozen fronts in the heaviest fighting since the Vietnam conflict spread to Cambodia two months earlier.

Reaching compromise

Domenici, R - N.M., just before Monday afternoon's session of the House - Senate budget conferees on Capitol Hill. Compromise budget ready for votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators have agreed on a compromise $859 billion budget for 1984, including multibillion-dollar increases in taxes and domestic spending that President Reagan says he is looking forward to vetoing.

The spending blueprint now goes back to the House and Senate amid concerns that Reagan's opposition and bickering in both chambers will sink the plan, making it impossible for Congress to adopt a budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Under the compromise adopted by voice vote Monday night, taxes would be increased by $73 billion over three years: $12 billion in 1984, $15 billion in 1985 and $46 billion in 1986.

Reagan already has ruled out any tax increases until 1986.

The plan also offers an estimated $15 billion more for domestic programs than Reagan wants.

Two men shoot motorists

WINSLOW, Ariz. (AP) — Two armed men blocked an interstate highway today, forcing some motorists to turn around and shooting at others, hitting one woman in the back and a man in the chin, authorities said.

The two gunmen, whose identities were not immediately released, were arrested and taken to the Coconino County Jail in Flagstaff, sheriff's Sgt. Jack Judd said. Authorities were searching for two other men.

One of the victims was in critical condition, authorities said.

Four cars were struck by gunfire in the incident along Interstate 40 about 18 miles west of here. The shootings began around 5:30 a.m.

State Department of Public Safety officers said the two men stood on the roadway and allowed some motorists to pass, made others turn back and shot at others.

The department initially said at least five people were shot, but the Coconino County sheriff's office said later only two people had been wounded.

That figure does not include up to another $7.5 billion set aside for a so-called "contingency fund" for recession relief legislation such as a new jobs bill and mortgage foreclosure relief — measures which have not yet been authorized by Congress.

The compromise budget carries a maximum deficit of $179 billion, if all the contingency money is spent.

Meanwhile, the compromise calls for $268.6 billion in new military spending authority — about a 5 percent increase after inflation. Reagan had asked for a 10 percent boost.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said the measure had a "reasonably good" chance of passage.

"I don't say it's going to be a cakewalk. In fact, it will be very hard to do, but I feel it's a good product," he added.

Other provisions include a 4 percent pay hike for federal employees, although the raise would be delayed three months, taking effect Jan. 1, 1984. Reagan asked Congress to approve a pay freeze for one year.

Also, the budget calls for Congress to approve cuts in Medicare totaling $400 million in 1984 and $1.7 billion over three years. There also is, however, a provision recommending against any cut in benefits or increase in patient costs.

In the House, Republicans are expected to be virtually unanimous in their opposition to the compromise. The burden would be on House Democrats to pass it. But party leaders are concerned that some liberals will oppose the package because domestic spending has been scaled back while military spending has been increased, compared to the original House proposal.

And in the Senate, where the original budget passed by only one vote, there also is concern that the changes and Reagan's opposition will cause a majority to shift against the compromise.

Supreme Court rules family health plans must be equal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking the latest blow for on-the-job equality of the sexes, the Supreme Court says employers cannot offer male workers family medical plans that don't stack up to those available to female employees.

A decision announced by the court Monday does not mean employers are legally obligated to extend the same pregnancy benefits to employees' wives as those extended to women on the payroll.

But some employers may now come under added pressure to do so.

The court said a 1978 federal law, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, prohibits a boss from giving "married male employees a benefit package for their dependents that is less inclusive than the dependency coverage provided to married female employees."

Nothing in the decision, however, bars employers from limiting pregnancy benefits for employee's wives if, at the same time, they impose the same overall limits on coverage extended to employees' husbands.

For example, an employer legally could limit all hospitalization benefits for employee spouses to 50 percent of the total bill and pay all hospital costs for employees. That would mean a female employee hospitalized to have a baby would get twice as much financial help as male employee's wife hospitalized for the same reason.

That's not why John McNulty, a Virginia shipyard employee, complained that he was the target of sex discrimination. His company's medical plan limited benefits for pregnant spouses, but featured no similar limits for other conditions for which employees' spouses might require medical attention.

McNulty said he meant his family's total benefit package was not as good as those enjoyed by the families of his female co-workers.

The Supreme Court agreed, and said that's against the law.

The ruling could cost employers billions.

"On a national scale, I don't think there is any question the decision could cost hundreds of millions of dollars each year," said Cynthia Wicker, a lawyer for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Whatever the cost, the decision was praised by feminist organizations and civil rights groups.

"We're extremely pleased by this clear victory for equality in the workplace," said Judith Schaeffer, a lawyer who helped represent the Washington-based Women's Legal Defense Fund in the case.

In other matters Monday the court:

—Agreed to decide whether private citizens can file lawsuits prodding the federal government into denying or rescinding tax breaks for racially discriminatory schools. The court will use cases from Memphis, Tenn., and elsewhere to follow up its decision last month that the IRS may withhold tax exemptions for such private schools.

—Ruled by a 6-3 vote that police routinely may use trained dogs to sniff airport luggage in efforts to detect illegal drugs.

—Ruled unanimously that police do not need search warrants to check the contents of containers in the possession of people arrested and about to be jailed.

Congressional service not a full-time job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is serving in Congress a full-time job? It is but it shouldn't be, claims Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who argues the job description should be scaled down to read "part-time work."

Baker told the Senate recently the founding fathers never intended service in Congress to be anything other than part time.

Congress was set up as a collection of working citizen-legislators, "an aggregation of farmers, doctors, lawyers, businessmen and whatever it may be," Baker reminded colleagues.

Lawmakers should be free to spend more time in their home states and work at other professions if they want, he argued.

"I think my dad was absolutely right when he said years ago that the downfall of the Republic would be measured from the day they air-conditioned the Capitol, because that is the time when we started staying here all day long," he added.

Baker raised the issue as the Senate struggled to set its own salary.

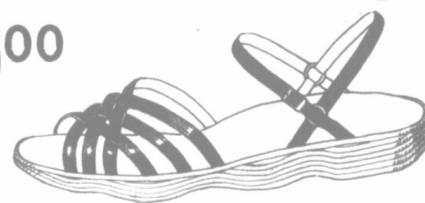

In the end, senators voted to boost their own annual salaries from $60,662 to $69,800 and to allow themselves to keep earning unlimited income from speeches and articles until next January, when a cap of 30 percent of their salaries would be imposed on such honoraria.

Baker, who has announced he will not seek re-election, had advocated lower salaries, and no limits on outside income. Under the present system, lawmakers are little more than "elected bureaucrats," he complained.

Garage sales on rise

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Judging from the proliferation of ads for garage sales, house sales and flea markets, any weekend during the weather months will find large numbers of Americans outdoors — either buying or selling household effects and collectibles.

According to Ralph and Terry Kovel, a husband-and-wife team who have made a living and lecturing career out of their penchant for attending such events, the number of second-hand sales has increased more than tenfold since they began going to and writing about them 33 years ago.

"I'll bet I could find 20 or more house sales to go to every weekend just in our suburban area," said Terry Kovel recently at her home Shaker Heights, Ohio.

Devotees of such events already know that local newspapers and giveaway shopper publications carry ads for such sales. What people may not know is that regional publications devoted to antiques and collectibles list some of the larger flea markets, as well. Most areas of the country have publications such as the "Ohio Antique Review" and the "Tri-State Trader Weekly" which serves Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, according to the Kovels whose "Collectors' Source Book" provides information on these publications, as well as their subjects of interest to collectors.

There are differences among the various types of sales. A flea market, for example, is generally held in a large public space, such as a shopping mall or supermarket parking lot, and includes a number of vendors, each with a separate booth or table. Garage, yard and tag sales (so-called because all the merchandise is tagged beforehand) seem to offer the widest mix of quality, ranging from items where the merchandise is little more than junk to good used things.

House or farm sales held when a household is being dispersed seem to offer the best surprises. Ralph Kovel said. Although sometimes an antique dealer has been called in prior to the sale and has walked off with the best things, the buyer often gets a crack at the entire contents of the house.

The Kovels have attended thousands of second-hand sales around the country and say the chances of finding a great buy at one of them are excellent. After all, they note, the pieces found in the finest antique stores had to come from somewhere.

To find a bargain, a shopper has to be knowledgeable enough to recognize one, so the Kovels recommend would-be shoppers do some research by reading about collectibles and antiques in general and by educating themselves in museums and fine antique shops.

"Most good dealers will be happy to tell you what they know about a piece you admire," said Mrs. Kovel. Remember, though, that the rule of "buyer beware" always applies, especially at flea markets and house sales where the seller may misinform through lack of knowledge.

Though both the general public and dealers appear to be better informed today, the idea that it's no longer possible to pick up a good bargain is not accurate.

The Kovels point out that nobody is an expert in everything. Often items that are not currently in style will be undervalued locally. In Westport, Conn., where the country look is very popular and commands a premium price, the Kovels recently found an ornate French porcelain inkwell and an early 20th-century signed Roycrofters lamp, both of which were significantly underpriced.

One of their favorite stories concerns the "reproduction" 18th-century American chair

Designer Shelley Weiss turns an ordinary tabletop dramatic by showing off three fine ceramic vases on a hand-woven runner. She follows the soft "Shaker" lines characterizing the furniture in the wall paper and baskets.

Create table top drama

Because of its central location, a dining room's focal point is the centerpiece on the table. And despite the traditional feeling that fresh flowers look best there, it's simply not feasible to have them available for table dressing on a day to day basis.

Dried arrangements are fine, but they look unseasonally "tacky" when it's not autumn. Silk flowers today are more beautiful than ever because of the infinite variety available, and practical in the new polyester washable silk-like fabrics.

An exciting new twist in decorating comes from designer Shelley Weiss, who suggests using the dining table to display objects ordinarily showcased elsewhere in the home.

Weiss practices what she preaches, in the photo above.

she chooses three large white ceramic vases on a hand-woven runner. The impact is great, but not overpowering.

Furniture in the room is ash wood executed in clean, "Shaker" lines.

Weiss echoes the casual-contemporary look of the furniture with basketry, artwork and sculpture that complements the wavy-patterned wallpaper and fabric balloon shades repeat the softness of the rounded ends of the bar-server-deck, table and chairs.

"Enjoy the beautiful things you've accumulated," says Weiss. Put them centerstage for table-top drama!

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be handicapped. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals, call for in-depth consultation in Layman's terms.

HORIZON

Dear Horizon Customer:

As a consequence of the recent price increases announced by the Industry's raw materials suppliers, we are obliged to raise our carpet prices effective with all shipments made on or after July 18, 1983.

The depressed economic environment prevalent in the carpet business during the past two years has had the effect of eroding the prices of nylon and other synthetic fibers. These increases should restore the level of profitability to fiber producers. In the wake of the announced 15% nylon fiber increase, virtually all others in the mill supply sector have also raised prices on such items as carpet backings, latex, spinning, twisting, heat-setting, etc.

We fervently hope that these increases will stabilize a long while. Business shows very positive signs for a healthy level, and we look forward to an upturn for our Industry.

A new price sheet will be sent to you in the interim, please apply the new prices by style to your current pricing.

As we emerge from the long recession and business begins to expand, we find ourselves once again facing escalating costs in raw materials and labor.

During the recessionary period considerable pressure remained on prices which kept them unrealistically low.

Recently announced increases in fiber prices, combined with increases in other raw materials and labor costs, make it necessary for us to seek relief in the form of increased prices.

Therefore, effective with shipments of carpet on or after July 1, 1983, new prices on all of our carpet qualities will be in effect. The new prices will reflect an approximate 10% increase, on average, over current prices.

Within the next ten days you will be receiving specific pricing information by fabric.

bought for under $500 at Renninger's Flea Market, outside Reading, Pa. Although Renninger's is one of the largest flea markets in the country and those selling there are considered very knowledgeable, the seller made a mistake with this chair. It later sold for about $100,000 at auction in New York as the original 18th-century piece that it was.

As a rule in local non-professional sales, the useful objects such as furniture and sets of dishes will go for the highest prices since there is a great deal of competition for them. Collectibles such as bookends, silverplate or pottery may be easier to find since there is less competition.

The Kovels say there are regional differences in tastes which affect prices. Large furniture pieces are more expensive in the South where there are more big homes. Oak furniture is more reasonable in the Midwest than on either coast; oriental items are popular all over, but are especially so on the West Coast.

For many, attending a weekend sale appears to be a recreational activity. Parents bring the children and enjoy the outdoors and camaraderie of the occasion, as the Kovels did while their three children were growing — ("The Kovels' Collectors' Source Book" is published by Crown.)

Brucellosis is human disease

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Mary Lane doesn't help out on the farm anymore, and that is the reason she sides with federal officials who have threatened to quarantine Texas breeder cattle if the state fails to adopt stricter brucellosis controls.

Mrs. Lane, 43, caught undulant fever — the human form of brucellosis — in 1979 when she petted infected cattle at a farm near the small Lamar County ranch she and her husband operated part time.

"If the opponents of brucellosis control ever see it in a member of their family, they will change their attitude," she said.

"I got up one morning and couldn't walk. It took a year to get to where I didn't walk with a limp," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Mrs. Lane said she wrote Gov. Mark White urging him to call a special session to bring Texas' brucellosis control standards in line with those of the federal government. White, facing a federal quarantine of Texas breeder cattle, since has called a special session that includes the brucellosis issue.

She said her early symptoms included a fever of 106 degrees, severe headaches and temporary loss of feeling in her legs.

She was hospitalized while doctors tried to figure out what was wrong with her, and Mrs. Lane says she suffers recurrences because doctors were slow to diagnose the disease.

"Mine's come back four times in four years ... I can tell when it's coming on. There's a real uncomfortable feeling, I have sweats and can no longer lift things," she said. "All I can do is go home and go to bed."

"I have to live with it the rest of my life. It's a very expensive thing, besides the discomfort. And I can't help my husband on the farm."

A doctor familiar with Mrs. Lane's case and State Health Department physicians say her symptoms were more severe than those of the typical brucellosis sufferer.

The usual symptoms are low-grade, persistent fever, weakness and a general feeling of listlessness.

In Texas, 27 cases of undulant fever were reported in 1982, 45 in 1981 and 28 in 1980, said Dr. Charles E. Webb, chief of the health department's epidemiology division.

"Probably most cases of brucellosis are not reported to us ... Physicians in cities report better than those in rural areas, and most of these cases are predominantly in rural areas," Webb said.

In urban areas, those exposed to the disease primarily are packing plant employees who come in contact with organs of infected cattle, which legally may be slaughtered for meat.

"Virtually everybody who goes to work in an abattoir (packing plant) can expect to have brucellosis at some time," Webb said.

So far this year, 13 undulant fever cases have been reported in Texas. Dr. Foy McCasland, chief of the health department's veterinary division, said 10 or 12 were in the Houston area in the last three months.

"The cases were traced to unpasteurized cheese coming out of Mexico," he said.

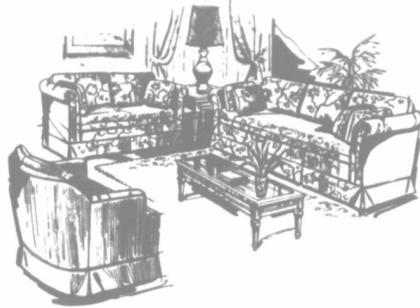

Before antibiotics came into common use, some undulant fever cases were fatal, he added.

"You can catch it by petting the animals. Of course your primary method of getting it is by ingesting it or through broken skin ... The brucella bacteria will survive in the ground or in water," McCasland said.

Dear Abby

Mother's poem brings memories to daughter

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You can imagine my surprise and great joy when I read your column in the Los Angeles Times and saw the poem entitled, "The World Is Mine." It was written by my mother, Dot Aaron, some 35 years ago.

Through the years we have heard from so many people around the country who have found inspiration from it, as did "Marti" from Aurora, Colo., who sent it to you asking who wrote it. It has been a long time since I have seen it in print, and you can't imagine how deeply touched I am to know that my mother's words continue to live on. She was a super, multi-talented lady who passed away in 1969 — much too young, and with so much more to do.

I am newly widowed at age 53 and have recently moved to California from St. Louis. Thank you for printing my mother's poem. It meant so much to me.

SUZANNE AARON MATHES

DEAR SUZANNE: Aha! Your letter is the conclusive verification I had hoped for. To date I have heard from readers in nearly every state (and Canada, too) informing me that Dot Aaron had written that lovely poem many years ago. And shame on those few who themselves claimed authorship.

DEAR ABBY: I have been doing a lot of reading lately and I just found out that my husband is no bargain (in bed, I mean). We've been married for 11 years, and I never thought I had anything to complain about until I read up on how other men performed.

According to some of these sex surveys, my husband is at the bottom of the list, and I feel cheated.

I wonder how many other women feel the same?

CHEATED IN YPSILANTI

DEAR CHEATED: Don't believe everything you read. If you've never had anything to complain about, you weren't "cheated."

Sex surveys can be tricky. I suspect that more people lie about their sex lives than the combined total of those who lie about their age and weight.

DEAR ABBY: I have this friend — an older woman, widowed and living alone — who embarrasses me no end when we dine out together in a restaurant.

Before we leave, she empties the contents of the breadbasket into a plastic bag, taking all the remaining bread, rolls, crackers and breadsticks. If there's a dab of butter left, she has a little container for that, too. She also takes all the little packets of artificial sweetener.

I told her it wasn't proper to take all that stuff, and she said she was told that, according to law, once food is placed on the table it can't be served to anyone else, so she might as well take it with her.

It that true?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Ask the waiter, waitress, hostess or restaurant manager what the policy is with regard to what customers may take home.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ANYONE WHO LOVES TO LAUGH: Get George Burns' book, "How to Live to Be 100 — or More: The Ultimate Diet, Sex and Exercise Book" (Putnam). It's the perfect gift for someone who could use a lift right now.

...

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

1.5 million acres to be distributed to peasants

MEXICO CITY (AP) — About 1.5 million acres of idle lands will be distributed during the next six years to 20,000 peasants as part of an administration effort to improve Mexico's decades-old agrarian reform program, Agrarian Reform Secretary Luis Martinez Villacana says.

Another 125,000 landless peasants will be settled in existing "ejidos" — centuries-old Indian cooperative farms — to give them work along with the necessary government aid to help these cooperatives become more productive.

In an interview with the newspaper Excelsior published here Monday, Villacana said the effort is part of a National Development Plan that President Miguel de la Madrid launched earlier this year to pull Mexico out of its worst recession in half a century.

Villacana said most of the land to be distributed belongs to the government or are cattle ranches whose permits have elapsed. But he said some private farms which are not being worked by current owners are also included.

Under agrarian reform laws dating back to the 1930s, cattle ranches are allowed to have larger spreads than farms and are not subject to expropriation — provided they maintain a valid permit from the Department of Agrarian Reform, devote their ranches only to cattle raising, and meet a number of conditions to keep up production and efficiency.

Villacana said land-title disputes also cause constant problems and promised these will be regularized before the de la Madrid administration ends its six-year term in office Dec. 1, 1988.

He said that of the 249.6 million acres of big estates expropriated since the 1910-1917 Revolution and distributed to peasants, approximately 74 million acres have no valid land titles, even though the peasants have been working them for generations, causing constant disputes with former owners.

Villacana said these, too, will be regularized. Mexico's agricultural production has been constantly declining over the past ten years because of these problems — especially with in the "ejidos," which consist of tiny parcels, sometimes worked jointly by a dozen families.

Villacana said the new land earmarked for distribution will not go to individual peasants, but used to form big and more efficient cooperatives so as not to foment the creation of more minifarms. He gave no details.

The low production, together with a high national birth rate and a terrific drought this year is forcing the government to import billions of dollars of grain and other foods at a time when the country is nearly broke.

Mexico was plunged into a severe recession early last year when world prices of oil, silver, coffee and other major exports dropped sharply, in the middle of an ambitious industrial development effort.

As a result, the country has been barely able to pay interest on its huge $83 (b) billion foreign debt and has had to devalue its peso currency from 26 to 150 to the U.S. dollar, cut government spending sharply and adopt other stringent austerity measures.

Books by Texas novelist selling themselves

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Novelist James Crumley, likened by some critics to Raymond Chandler, says the book business is no longer the domain of gentlemen.

Book publishing bears the taint usually associated with the automotive industry and fast-food chains: Quality control is at a minimum, while maximum emphasis is on hype, the University of Texas-El Paso creative writing teacher said.

Crumley also has squabbled with editors about book endings and watched while his publishing house promoted best-selling diet books, leaving his acclaimed detective stories to sell themselves.

"Unless (publishing houses) see a blockbuster, they don't do anything for a book," he said. Fortunately, Crumley's books do a respectable job of selling themselves.

His newly released "Dancing Bear" appears headed for a third printing and is a Book-of-the-Month Club alternate. As a detective novelist, Crumley also has developed a cult following.

Among what Crumley refers to as the "rock 'n' roll" critics, his books have likened him to genre greats such as Dashiell Hammett, Raymond Chandler and Ross MacDonald.

Rolling Stone magazine loves him, Heavy Metal magazine plans to interview him, and in off-beat, out-of-the-way bookstores, his novels sell as well as Valentine's Day cards.

His work hasn't gone unnoticed in Hollywood. United Artists owns the screen rights to an earlier novel, and the rights to his third novel, "The Last Good Kiss," have been bought by Warren Beatty, who directed and starred in "Reds."

Writing seems a peculiar pursuit for someone born in Three Rivers, Texas. Crumley spent most of his childhood in South Texas and also lived for five years in Deming, N.M.

A stint at Georgia Tech taught him that he wasn't cut out to be either a Southerner or an aeronautical engineer, so he graduated with a history degree from Texas A&I.

He went into the Army, then spent two years at the Indian remains not displayed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Human remains from an exhibit at the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History were removed at the request of an organization of American Indians opposed to the display of Indian remains, museum officials said.

The museum agreed Saturday to remove the skull and bones from the two displays after meeting with representatives of the American Indians Against Desecration, officials said.

A 1,000-year-old skull of a woman was removed Saturday and a pre-Columbian skull and fragments of vertebrae were taken off display Monday after non-Indian bones were found to replace them, said Pat Norris, the museum's history curator.

After the decision to remove the bones was announced, the Indian group performed a ceremony at each display, blowing smoke from sage into the cases, Norris said.

The display contained a skull and several vertebrae fragments arranged in a recreated burial site with various pre-Columbian artifacts, Norris said.

University of Iowa. "When I got to Iowa, it was like going to heaven. Suddenly it was OK to be a writer," he said.

His first year he spent writing and rewriting short stories. By his second year, he was midway through his first novel, "One to Count Cadence."

Since leaving Iowa, Crumley's career has been a succession of teaching jobs and spells at the typewriter. His first book was an attempt to explain Army service and Vietnam. He spent one summer in Mexico working on that novel and reading Raymond Chandler.

That's where he decided to write a detective book. His second novel, "The Wrong Case," started him on the detective genre and was followed by "The Last Good Kiss."

Sales from the three books brought Crumley a comfortable sum, but he says it's odd that he made more money selling the film rights.

When, and if, his books are made into movies, Crumley will have no control over the quality of the finished product. While that doesn't delight him, it doesn't particularly disturb him, either.

"You hope for the best but you have to look at it in some mature way," Crumley says. "Mostly, I am to the point in life where... I just want the money."

His new book, "Dancing Bear," is an action-packed novel about a private investigator-turned-security guard, Milo Milodragovitch.

Massacre perpetrators not identified in report

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — In a report based on a nine-month investigation, Lebanon's military prosecutor fails to identify the killers who massacred hundreds of Palestinians last fall at the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps.

Prosecutor Assad Germanos, in a report submitted Monday to President Amin Gemayel, recommended no prosecutions for the time being and said the Israeli army bore legal responsibility for the massacre because its forces surrounded the two south Beirut camps during the Sept. 16-18 slaughter.

The report said "armed elements not from the Israeli camp participated" in the massacre and implied the killers may have been members of the militia of Maj. Saad Haddad, a right-wing Christian allied with Israel, based in south Lebanon on the border with Israel.

"Perhaps they (the killers) are from the border element or from among those who suffered from Palestinian excesses in previous years," the report said.

Germanos said the leadership of Gemayel's Christian Phalange Party was not responsible for the massacre.

An Israeli judicial commission that investigated the massacre last February said Phalange militiamen carried out the killings. It also said Defense Minister Ariel Sharon bore "personal responsibility" for allowing the militiamen into the camps.

Survivors of the massacre told reporters at the time the killers were members of the Phalange militia.

Germanos maintained previously that his investigation would not be a coverup, but sources close to the investigation predicted repeatedly that the final report would not blame any specific group.

"Since no line could be drawn to separate between military operations and individual acts that led to the massacre, we recommend a delay in judicial prosecutions for the time being, pending the definition of the competent judicial authorities," the report said.

Germanos was apparently referring to the killing of guerrillas as a "military operation" and the slaughter of women, children and civilian men as "individual acts."

Unlike Israel, where the massacre inquiry provoked an emotional self-examination and led to Sharon's removal as defense minister, Lebanon had no public outcry for an investigation.

Germanos said in his report that 460 people died in the massacre, the highest confirmed death toll reported by the government.

Now, Bell Interstate WATS is everybody's business, no matter how large or small.

Pay only for what you use. Or pay only for WATS you use.

Either way, businesses no longer have to pay for a long block of interstate calling time whether they use it or not. Now you only pay the low Interstate WATS rate for the time your business actually uses.

Who, WATS, when, where, why? The "who" is any size business, and anyone in your company that uses Long Distance on the job. It's also anyone who could be selling and handling customers on the phone instead of spending time and money traveling around.

WATS is the best way to: qualify sales prospects, service your clients after the sale, follow up on current accounts, save on time and travel handling smaller accounts and collecting overdue accounts.

"When" is anytime, 24-hours a day. As you use more Interstate WATS, rates go down. And during evenings, nights, and weekends, rates are even lower.

"Where"? It's all available, right here, from your Southwestern Bell Sales Representative, ready to help you tailor WATS to your special needs.

And "why" is because WATS is competitively priced to save you on Long Distance charges. It's a highly cost-effective business tool that can help make every penny count. And that's profitability!

Nelson wins Open title

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — It would be easy to lose Larry Nelson in a crowd. No trouble at all.

He is 5-foot-9, 155 pounds, a soft-spoken, slight man, 35-years-old and fighting a receding hairline. He looks like your next-door neighbor.

Except for one thing. Your next-door neighbor isn't the reigning United States Open Golf Tournament king.

Larry Nelson is.

Nelson captured one of golf's most treasured crowns, shooting a 4-under-par 67 for the rain-delayed final 18 holes at the Oakmont Country Club to finish at 280, one stroke ahead of defending champion Tom Watson.

It was not as easy as it sounds.

Nelson needed a spectacular 62-foot putt to take the lead, then survived a bogey on his final hole of the day when Watson obligingly also bogeyed No. 17.

After a torrential rain storm suspended the tournament's last round action Sunday, the two men went into their final holes Monday tied for the lead at 4-under. Watson was putting at No. 14, Nelson teeing off at No. 16 when play resumed.

"When I went to the practice tee, I knew the distance (228 yards on the par-3 16th) and I would have to hit a 4-wood," Nelson said. "I hit a few more than usual."

Still, his drive didn't seem to leave him in particularly good shape.

"I hit to the left of the green," he said. He was some 60 feet away from the cup. "Not an easy putt," decided Nelson.

The 16th at Oakmont is something of a roller-coaster hole. "There are three terraces and I was on the top one," Nelson explained.

"They're all downhill, with little left and right breaks. It's the fastest green on the course."

Nelson, not one to challenge the course, figured he'd play the hole conservatively.

"I wasn't thinking about anything except getting close enough to the hole to make the next putt," he said. "You can't make it from 60 feet."

Nelson putted and the ball started its roller coaster ride toward the hole.

"Close to the hole, it started slowing down, but it had the right speed over the last rise," said Nelson.

As the ball slid smoothly over the grass, Nelson's caddy, Russ Craver, shouted "Break! Break!"

The putt obeyed, dropping softly into the hole as both Craver and Nelson did a little dance.

"I couldn't just stand there and wait," explained Nelson. "You don't hit many of those."

Armed with the lead, Nelson very nearly gave it back. After paring No. 17, he ran into trouble with a bogey on the 18th hole. It left him at 280, 4-under, for the tournament. Now, Watson, who had played par golf on 14-15-16, controlled his own fate.

"I was through," said Nelson. "It was up to him. I had finished 72 holes 4-under. If he's 5-under, he beats me. Four-under, we tie. Three-under, I win."

Nelson figured there was nothing he could do but sit back and wait. But he didn't have to wait long, because on 17, Watson found problems of his own. His second shot landed in a bunker on the right side of the green.

Optimist baseball roundup

Defense fell apart on most losing teams, as the winners hammered out scores of runs to start off the Pampa Little League City Tournament Saturday.

The offensive fireworks included a grand slam wallop by Mark Wood, as Duncan trounced Keyes 17-4. Mark Aderholt was the winner; Matt Brock suffered the loss.

In other games, Citizens thrashed Dunlap in a football-style score of 27-3.

Chase won a close one over Cabot 8-7. Kevin McKnight homered for Cabot; Jason Garren put one over the fence for Chase.

One Bull topped O.C.A.W. 12-2.

100,000 Parts whipped Celanese, 13-3. Brandon Knutson was the winner; Matt Walsh took the loss.

Rotary pulled out a victory over Glow Valve on David Doucette's two-RBI single in the bottom of the seventh. Terry Rogers took the win; Chris Hoganson suffered the loss.

Dean's creamed Moose 21-7. Coby Harris got the win; J.J. Jones was credited with the loss.

Dixie whipped Wilmart, 17-7. The winner was Robert Hines; the loser was Cannon Allen.

Pirates down Plainview, 7-3

Al Ferguson's tape measure home run in the second inning propelled the Pampa Pirates past the Plainview Astros, 7-3, Sunday at Harvester Field.

Ferguson led the Pirate hitters with a homer, double and three RBIs. Robbie Harris added two doubles and two RBIs while Danny Guerra recorded two hits to push his season total to eleven hits in four games.

Alan Stuart pitched no-hit ball through five innings and ended up with a four-hitter to extend his mound record to 3-0 with a lowly 1.06 ERA. He got relief help from Carl Cady in the ninth to clinch the victory.

The Pirates take their 4-0 record to Dumas next Sunday at 2 p.m. to face the Colts.

Pampa's next home game will be July 10 against the Pampa youngsters.

Amarillo Doll House

In other games Sunday in the Amarillo Adult Amateur League, the Potter-Randall County A's walloped the Amarillo Diablos, 23-1. VFW Squeeze Players defeated The Dollhouse Dragons, 14-5, and the Payless Auto Hawks ripped Amarillo Rojas, 21-3.

Allen Stuart finishes off one of nine Plainview Astros via the strikeout route in Pampa's 7-3 victory Sunday.

Pampa youngsters fare well in Amarillo Open

AMARILLO — Pampa's player-coach Stacey Foster took his second Amarillo Open title in three years Sunday, and the coach's players scored well in the junior division of the tournament.

In the girls doubles for 14-year-olds, the Pampa team of Andrea Adcock and Kathryn Farris made it to the tournament final. The Pampa players took second place, losing the final match to the King-Kirchoff team, 6-4, 7-5.

In boys singles for 16-year-olds, Pampa's Sali Mohan made it to semi-final play, before dropping a match to Michael King, 6-3, 6-2.

Pampa pair set meet records

Wendall Palmer and Randy Slaybaugh were both razor-sharp at a Master's Track and Field Meet last weekend at Mason.

Palmer, who was Slaybaugh's track coach at Pampa High School, won a whopping seven gold medals in the 51 and over division. And all were meet records.

Palmer won the shot (42-7), discus (151-3), javelin (126-6), long jump (15-7), triple jump (29-11), high jump (5-1) and hammer throw (115-0).

Just three weeks ago Palmer set national records in the discus at a Master's meet in El Dorado. He broke the existing high school record when he tossed the 1.6 kilogram discus 156-11. His 142-4 toss with the 2.0 kilogram discus set a Master's record.

Slaybaugh, who is attending Angelo State on a track scholarship, set two meet records in the Open Division. He won the shot (44-7) and discus (127-2) with record tosses, while also winning the hammer throw. Slaybaugh placed third in the long jump with a 19-4 leap.

Other side of recession

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You know the economy is improving when Paul Volcker gets renominated Federal Reserve chairman and the head of a savings organization says his industry is "well on the road to recovery."

It wasn't long ago when Volcker was being denigrated as the architect of recession and unemployment, and savings and loan associations were pleading for legislative or any other kind of aid.

But thinking has shifted in recent months, and Volcker is called steady, reliable and the best choice to lead the economic recovery.

The shift came with the big shift in interest rates. Volcker took most of the flak without complaint when the prime interest rate hit 21.5 percent in December.

Now that interest rates are down, he absorbs the accolades although he probably was just one of many factors involved in the decline.

The savings and loan people — who a year ago claimed suffocation under high interest rates and unfair competition, blaming Volcker's Federal Reserve for some of their condition — sound ecstatic now.

They still jump if you approach from behind and yell "rising interest rates," but they have regained enough business and confidence to concede "we're well on the road toward recovery."

Leonard Shane, who heads a $1.5 billion savings and loan in Huntington Beach, Calif., as well as being chairman of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, said just that the other day. But he didn't shout it, going instead to Whitefield, N.H., to say his piece.

Lower interest rates have reduced savings costs and helped offset the squeeze on earnings from those old, low-rate mortgages that sensible homeowners won't retire. Once again lenders are making money on new mortgages.

In addition, the new insured money market accounts have brought in $43.4 billion since the associations were cleared to sell them in December. In the 21 months before December the associations had a net deposit outflow of $43.7 billion, because they couldn't compete with money market mutual funds.

Jack Carlson, executive vice president and chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, comments that "the recovery that began during the first quarter of this year has gained momentum during the second quarter." Jack Lavery, Merrill Lynch's chief economist, remarks that "the economy's tone of acceleration was manifest again in the most recent indicators."

Housing starts, domestic new car sales and installment credit outstanding all are higher, showing the still-pressed consumer was doing his best to push things along. For their part, producers pushed industrial production in May to the sixth straight monthly advance.

All this looks very good, but there are complications. Interest rates remain high, and as a consequence the dollar remains too strong compared to other currencies.

News in briefs

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Justice Department may ask the U.S. Supreme Court to lift a lower court order which prevents the government from requiring men seeking college financial aid to say if they have registered for the draft.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Donald D. Alsop refused to lift the injunction he imposed Friday against the federal requirement. The U.S. Justice Department had asked that the injunction be stayed.

Neil Koslowe, Justice Department special litigation counsel, said the high court may be asked to stay Alsop's order, but such a move would first have to be approved by the U.S. solicitor general.

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — A railway engineer charged with recklessly handling hazardous materials when a chemical-laden train derailed, exploded and burned could face 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted on the felony charge.

E. Peyton Robertson Jr., 42, was indicted Monday by the Livingston Parish grand jury. The brakeman and the woman clerk who was at the controls when 43 cars jumped the track on Sept. 28, 1982, were not charged.

About 2,700 people were ordered from their homes for nearly two weeks because of the fires and explosions that erupted after the derailment.

Workers found one body, that of 9-year-old Patrick Oliver, about half a mile downstream from where the children were having a picnic Sunday, sheriff's spokesman Gene Smith said.

The discovery was made at 3:15 p.m. Monday, about two hours before searchers found the bodies of 9-year-old Carrie S. Henry and Anthony Duhart, 12, where the river spills into the Intracoastal Waterway, the unidentified spokesman said.

All four children come from Simonton in Fort Bend County, southwest of Houston.

A fifth child, 14-year-old Charlotte Henry, of Houston, almost drowned trying to save a sister but was rescued by family members. She was at Ben Taub Hospital in good condition.

"She was swimming and saw her sister drowning and tried to go out and save her and that was the last she remembers," Coast Guard spokesman John Dec said.

The apparent drownings occurred during a Father's Day picnic. While swimming, the children apparently were carried away by the turbulent water at the mouth of the San Bernard River.

"That's a very dangerous place," said Sgt. David Miles of the Brazoria County Sheriff's Department. "You got the Gulf current and the river current, and it's very deep. People don't have no business swimming there."

A spokesman said signs normally are posted in the area to warn swimmers of the dangerous currents, but sometimes the signs are removed.

Coast Guard and sheriff's officers began searching for the children Sunday morning, using boats, four-wheel-drive vehicles and a helicopter, Smith said.

More than an hour before sheriff's officers found the first body, the Coast Guard had suspended its search for the children, Dec said.

Searchers find bodies of three children

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — Searchers have found the bodies of three children who drowned while swimming in dangerous waters near the mouth of a southeast Texas river, sheriff's officials say.

Officers with the Brazoria County sheriff's office and a Coast Guard team were to resume their search of the San Bernard River today in hopes of finding the body of 13-year-old Darrin Duhart, said a sheriff's spokeswoman who asked her name not be used.

A fifth child, 14-year-old Charlotte Henry, of Houston, almost drowned trying to save a sister but was rescued by family members. She was at Ben Taub Hospital in good condition.

"She was swimming and saw her sister drowning and tried to go out and save her and that was the last she remembers," Coast Guard spokesman John Dec said.

Three shuttle astronauts flew combat missions in Vietnam

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — There may be a few war stories exchanged during quiet moments of the seventh flight of the space shuttle. Three of the crewmates are Vietnam veterans with 266 air combat missions among them.

Frederick H. Hauck, John M. Fabian and Norman E. Thagard all did tours in Vietnam, each in a different branch of the service.

Hauck, Challenger's pilot, is a Navy captain who had 114 combat missions over Vietnam during 1969 and 1970.

He flew an A-6 attack aircraft from the decks of the USS Coral Sea and earned nine air medals and a Navy Commendation Medal.

The Navy has been a part of his life as long as he can remember. His father was a Navy captain and the 42-year-old Hauck has spent half his life in the service.

Hauck was commissioned after graduating as a Navy ROTC student from Tufts University. He served 20 months on shipboard and then went back to school, under Navy sponsorship, to earn a master's degree in nuclear engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

After earning his wings and serving in Vietnam, Hauck was tapped for the Naval test pilot school. He served a third tour aboard ship, this time the USS Enterprise, before his selection in 1978 as a NASA astronaut.

Hauck is married to the former Dolly Bowman of Washington, D.C. and they have two children.

He spends some of his spare time tinkering with a 1951 Ford pickup truck that has been in the family for years. He and his son, Stephen, recently reconditioned the vintage vehicle.

Stephen will continue the family Navy tradition — he graduated from high school last month and will attend Tufts on a Navy ROTC scholarship.

Fabian served his Vietnam tour as pilot of a KC-135, a flying service station that refuels aircraft aloft. He flew 90 combat missions.

A native of Goosecreek, Texas, Fabian grew up in Pullman, Wash., and holds a doctorate in aeronautics and astronautics from the University of Washington.

His father, Felix M. Fabian Sr., is a retired professor of criminology and the astronaut expects there's a teaching job in his own future.

"I went into university teaching at the Air Force Academy when I got my degree," he said. "I enjoy teaching and one of these days, I'll probably end up back in teaching and out of the astronaut corps."

Unlike most astronauts, Fabian hopes to fly only twice, but would be content "if I fly once and fly well."

Fabian was commissioned into the Air Force out of college and is now a colonel. Although he has logged almost 10,000 hours in jets during 20 years of flying, Fabian said engineering is what attracts him most.

"I'm not one of those people who gets great joy diving in and out of clouds," he said. "That doesn't turn me on."

"Engineering, technical things, are my first love, before flying," he said.

Fabian, 44, is married to the former Donna Kay Buboltz. They met as students at the University of Washington and have two children.

For Thagard, space flight is just one in a series of career pursuits.

He earned a master's degree in engineering at Florida State University, but left school to become a Marine pilot.

After flying 163 combat missions in Vietnam, he returned to school and became a physician. Thagard was in the final stages of earning certification as an internist when he learned NASA was looking for astronauts.

In 1978 he was selected in the class that includes Hauck, Fabian and Sally K. Ride, his crewmates on the current flight. The doctor was added to the Challenger crew for a special study of space sickness, a motion illness that has affected many of the shuttle astronauts.

Military pilots generally avoid doctors since the physicians have the power to keep pilots from flying. Thagard is both a pilot and a doctor and, he says, is "on both sides of the fence."

"I resent the slurs at doctors," he said. "On the other hand, every time I have some medical problem, I'm a little suspect of my own doctors."

Thagard, 39, is scheduled to make a second space flight next year as part of the scientific team for the second flight of Spacelab.

Wanted: no-good, thirsty plants

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A mesquite tree provides welcome shade from a scorching summer sun, but its foliage can be deadly for livestock and its thirst has made it one of the "most wanted" of the Texas water rustlers.

The Texas Water Resources Institute has put out a "wanted poster" on plants such as mesquite and saltcedar that it says consume 37 percent of the rain that falls on Texas each year — more than is used by all the state's cities and industries combined.

The institute's bimonthly publication, Texas Water Resources, said water-wasting plants cover more than 85 million acres in Texas, and by far the worst offenders are saltcedar along streams and reservoirs and mesquite on rangeland.

Other offenders, the institute said, include huisache, retama, juniper, live oak, shin oak, cactus, post oak, elm, whitebrush, persimmon, sassafras, Macartney rose, blackjack oak, yaupon and sagebrush.

"Because of the 56 million acres it covers in Texas, mesquite usually heads the 'most wanted' list of Texas water rustlers," the publication says. "Mesquite provides shade for livestock, but it causes serious digestive disturbances and even death when horses and cattle eat too many mesquite beans."

Mesquite uses a dual-root system to thrive where most plants struggle to survive, the institute said. Its taproot often penetrates the soil for 16 feet or more while its extensive lateral roots spread as much as 50 feet from its trunk.

Presently, the institute said, more than 75 percent of the 100 million acres of Texas rangelands produce less than half their potential. It added that botanists have found that grasses generally require one-third to one-half less water than woody vegetation.

Saltcedar, the institute said, "forms an almost continuous band of vegetation along both sides of many Texas rivers and streams," consuming large quantities of water and choking riverbeds with vegetation and sediment.

A saltcedar study by three Texas A&M University range scientists showed that in a 30-year period, saltcedar covered 57 percent of the original Brazos River channel between Seymour and the river's confluence with the Clear Fork River.

Scientist W.H. Blackburn said removing one acre of saltcedar would save two to three acre-feet of water. An acre-foot is 325,851 gallons.

Other water experts estimate that more than 10 million acre-feet of water could be saved each year by a well-planned and well-managed brush control program. Such a program, the institute said, "would involve eradication of mesquite and saltcedar in 70 percent of all medium and densely infested areas in the state."

According to the institute, scientists caution that any control program must consider the effects that a change in vegetation would have on wildlife and the aesthetic values in the area as well as the effects on water supply.

"Certainly some of the brush-infested areas are valuable in their present natural condition for the wildlife habitat they provide, for their contribution to the natural beauty of the countryside, and for their recreational value," the institute said. "Replacing a large percentage of brush with desirable grasses, however, would benefit the state economically."

Institute director Jack Runkles said, "We've got to have a way of letting the public know you lose a certain amount of water from green cover. We want them to realize they have a choice in the types of plants they have on their land. They need to realize you can have plants that serve purposes other than drinking water."
