

Pampa refuses public access to police records

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

The City of Pampa has officially refused to allow public access to its police department's radio log, arrest records and jail roster in a letter sent to the Texas attorney general's office this week.

The letter, which contained a request for an attorney general's decision on the public's right to information in the police department, came as the official reply to a written request by The Pampa News for public access to these records.

The Texas attorney general's office said this morning a determination would be made in the next four to six weeks.

Police have refused to release the names of all the people they arrest and jail here, and after denying The Pampa News' written request for the names and other daily police information, the police and city officials asked the attorney general if they are legally bound to release them.

Pampa City Attorney Don Lane denied the newspaper's request for the police records and asked Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox for an Open Records decision in a letter dated June 17.

"The Russian KGB might have their own rules about it, but in the United States of America, it's (a record of who is in jail) public information. We are entitled to know who they arrest and charge with a crime and who they have locked up in the slam," said Pampa News Managing Editor Anthony Randles when a copy of Lane's letter was received Tuesday.

"And by 'We,' I mean the public, not just the newspaper. Frankly, I'm disappointed I always thought the Pampa Police Department would act more responsibly about the release of public information.

"I am confident that the answer they receive from the attorney general will clear up the problem," Randles added. The newspaper was notified by certified mail Tuesday that its request for records was denied.

The newspaper formally asked for the records in a letter dated June 10 to Police Chief J.J. Ryzman.

Earlier this month, Randles asked Ryzman to provide reporters routine, daily access to "any record commonly called a show-up or arrest sheet, which is a chronological listing of all persons arrested during a 24-hour period. The listing should include arrestee's name, race, age, address, the place of arrest, the names of the arresting officers and the charge or charges against each suspect."

"Further, we ask that your department provide routine access to the Pampa Police Department's 'radio log' or 'radio cards' or whatever name is used to describe the police department's records of all calls answered by police in a 24-hour period. The radio records should contain the time a call was answered, a brief description of the nature or reason for the call and its location.

"Further, we ask for routine, daily access to a 'jail roster' or whatever name is used for the police records of all prisoners in custody in the Pampa city jail," said Randles' letter to Ryzman.

Former Texas Attorney General John Hill ruled in 1976 that the names and other information about people arrested by police are public records under the Texas Open Records Act. Hill made his ruling in Open Records Decision No. 127.

But Lane and Ryzman denied the newspaper's request for the arrest information previously ruled on by Hill.

"By copy of this letter we are advising The Pampa News of the denial of the request and of the submission of

Two U.S. reporters killed in Honduras

By FREDDY CUEVAS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Two American journalists were killed by artillery fire while driving on an isolated road along the Honduras-Nicaragua border, the State Department said today. Honduras blamed Nicaraguan soldiers for the attack.

Honduran Foreign Minister Edgardo Paz Barnica said the bodies of Dial Torgerson, Los Angeles Times bureau chief for Mexico and Central America, and free-lance photographer Richard Cross, on assignment for U.S. News & World Report, were being brought by car to the capital and would arrive today after an eight-hour drive.

Anita Stockman, a State Department spokeswoman in Washington, confirmed today that Torgerson and Cross were killed Tuesday evening.

Heavy rifle fire along the the Nicaraguan border prevented Honduran troops from recovering the bodies immediately, but they did so after nightfall, Paz Barnica said. He said the information from the border zone, 75 miles south of Tegucigalpa, came from a "definitive report from military intelligence."

Paz Barnica said Torgerson, Cross and their Honduran driver, who he identified as 27-year-old Jose Herrera, were killed around 5 p.m. EDT Tuesday by anti-tank gunfire from Nicaraguan troops across the border. However, the Los Angeles Times said it had been told by Honduran officials that the driver may have survived.

The Honduran government sent an immediate protest note to Nicaragua.

Paz Barnica said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

He said an anti-tank shell shattered the rented automobile Cross and Torgerson were riding in on a stretch of dirt road a few yards from the Nicaraguan border.

The road is between the villages of Cifuentes and Las Trojas, which are about 75 miles east of Tegucigalpa but 218 miles by car because of the winding mountainous road to the isolated region.

Earlier, a Foreign Ministry communique said William McWhirter of Time magazine was also killed, but Paz Barnica said that initial report was a mistake. McWhirter had been in Honduras but flew to Miami on Monday night.

The communique said British journalists Susan Morgan of The Economist and Steve Kate of the British Broadcasting Corp. and a number of other foreign journalists "were in grave danger in the border area" but gave no details.

The ruling leftist Sandinistas in Nicaragua have been threatening war with Honduras since January, when Honduras-based rebels intensified cross border raids. They accuse the Honduran government and the Reagan administration of arming and training the rebels in an effort to overthrow the three-man Sandinista junta.

Paz Barnica handed a protest note to the Nicaraguan charge d'affaires, Carlos Sequeira. It referred to "the brutality and cold blood evidenced by the regular Nicaraguan army in this criminal attack that not only constitutes a flagrant violation of our territory and a new and grave violation of Honduran sovereignty but also an unqualifiable attempt against human life."

"The Honduran government holds the Government of Managua responsible for whatever incident that may occur as a consequence of the constant harassment by the Sandinista army against the territory and population of Honduras," the note warned.

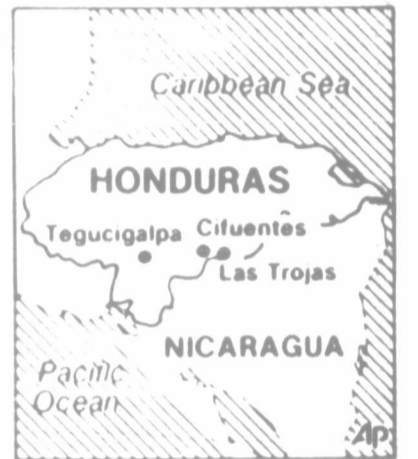

Torgerson was born April 19, 1928, in Southport, N.C., and graduated from the University of Southern California in 1951. He joined the Los Angeles Times in 1967 as a reporter and worked in Nairobi, Kenya, from 1974 to 1976, when he was transferred to Jerusalem. He was named bureau chief for Mexico and Central America in March 1981.

He also worked from 1946-52 as a reporter for the San Fernando Valley Times in the Los Angeles area, and in the Los Angeles bureau of The Associated Press from 1955-1966.

Torgerson was married twice and his second wife, Lynda Schuster, heads the Mexico City bureau of the Wall Street Journal.

William F. Thomas, editor of the Los Angeles Times, said Torgerson "worked for the Times for 16 years and never turned in less than a first rate performance. He was an experienced professional and a good personal friend, and he'll be sorely missed by us and by all who knew him."

Cross, 31, was born in Kansas City, and worked through the photo agency Black Star for a number of publications, including Newsweek. He was a free-lancer for The Associated Press during the 1978-79 revolution during which the Sandinistas overthrew strongman-President Anastasio Somoza, and made many friends then among the Sandinistas.

He lived in Mexico City and was due to marry his fiancée, a Salvadoran, in August. He was one of a few journalists who traveled with a Sandinista delegation to Havana in 1979 for a meeting with President Fidel Castro.

Les Tanzer, U.S. News & World Report's managing editor, said Cross went to Honduras last weekend to take pictures of Honduras-based Nicaraguan rebels. He said Cross also planned to go to Puerto Castilla, on the Caribbean coast, where about 120 U.S. Special Forces "Green Berets" are establishing a base to train Salvadoran soldiers.

Pampa youngsters improve their overall skills, tests show

By JULIA CLARK
Staff Writer

Children in the Pampa schools scored higher overall than they did before in statewide achievement tests, the school board was told Tuesday, but didn't do as well in some specific areas within the different categories.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the board of trustees of the Pampa Independent School District agreed to spend $85,038.25 for an in-house computer system during the next five years, with an additional $7,046.16 allocated for annual maintenance.

The trustees accepted the bids of International Business Machines Corporation (IBM) and Region XVI Education Service Center for the in-house computer system. IBM was awarded their bid of $68,038.25 for the computer hardware and Region XVI was awarded their bid of $17,000 for software.

In his report to the board, Jerry Harrison, PISD business manager, said the combination of IBM and Region XVI's bids were the next lowest bids.

"We have used the data processing services of Region XVI ESC for several years and have considerable experience with IBM equipment," Harrison said. By choosing these two bidders, Region XVI ESC will be able to provide backup support to the PISD computer system, and these bids offer the lowest annual maintenance costs and the lowest costs for any additional programming that might be needed, he said.

The board also awarded bids for window blinds to Clear Images of Amarillo in the amount of $25,871 and accepted bids for food and related items for the 1983-84 school year.

John English, assistant superintendent of schools, reported the results of Texas Assessment of Basic Skills Testing Program (TAB) for 1982-83. The results of the testing showed an over-all improvement in the "basic three" in the past three years. English reported, however, in some areas the students didn't do quite as well as before, according to the scores.

The tests are given annually to third, fifth and ninth graders to measure individual student achievement in the basic skills: reading, writing and mathematics.

The TAB is a minimum competency test to see if the student is mastering these subjects, English said. Through the testing program, the teachers and administrators are able to judge whether the current teaching methods and philosophies are working, he said. English also said the goals for achievement are raised each year, with the hope that eventually all students will master all of the basic skills.

In other business the board designated radio station KGRO as the official radio station for the 1983-84 school year, accepted the due bills and invoices and gave consideration to the budget report.

Board member, Jerry Carlson was selected as the delegate to the Texas Association of School Boards convention in San Antonio in September. Mary Braswell is the alternate delegate.

Agreeing with the purchasing agent Paul Boswell's recommendation, the board rejected all prior bids for the FM radio equipment and instructed him to seek new bids based on new specifications.

Pending receipt of complete facts and figures, the board took under advisement the request by Charles Buzzard of the Gray County Appraisal District to remove personal vehicles from the tax rolls.

After an executive session, the board accepted the resignations and leaves of absence of six district employees and hired 12 new teachers, coaches and other employees.

Teacher resignations include: Earletha Moore - Pampa Middle School special education; Ricky Say - Mann special education; Deborah Martinak - PMS sixth and seventh grade history; Karen Whitson - Baker first grade; and Jackie Stephens - Lamar physical education.

A leave of absence for Sharon Carter, a second-grade teacher at Mann Elementary School, was approved.

Teachers approved by the board for employment were: Eldon Cornelison - Pampa High School coach - mathematics; Marcella M. Diller - gifted and talented secondary facilitator; Mary Angeline Hoover - Mann fourth grade; Beverly G. Morlan - PMS coach and P.E.; Damon M. Motley - PHS vocational agriculture; Harold A. Murray - Lamar fifth grade; Julie S. Murray - Mann second grade; Albert L. Nichols - PHS girls' basketball coach and biology; Thomas G. Pollock - PHS coach and history; John E. Pond - PHS vocational agriculture; Myra "Sue" Pond - PMS English and speech; and Norma J. Self - Austin second grade.

Judge orders innocent pleas for man who claims he killed 100 women

MONTAGUE, Texas (AP) — Investigators are checking unsolved killings in Texas and other states following a former mental patient's claim that he killed about 100 women.

A judge ordered innocent pleas for Henry Lee Lucas, 46, who was arraigned Tuesday on a murder charge in the killing of Kate Rich, 80, of Ringgold, and on a weapons charge.

Montague County District Attorney Jack McGaughey said Lucas has made statements regarding about seven deaths in Texas.

"It's just speculation until we begin to confirm them," said McGaughey.

When State District Judge Frank Douthitt, who presided over Tuesday's arraignment, cautioned Lucas that murder is a serious crime, the defendant replied, "I had about 100 of them."

Lucas then asked, "Will I still be able to go on helping finding bodies?"

Lucas was arrested June 11 on a weapons charge. On Thursday, law enforcement officials, with Lucas' help, unearthed what they believed to be Mrs. Rich's remains near Ringgold.

Mrs. Rich has been missing for more than nine months, authorities said.

Bone fragments were found in a stove in Stoneburg, where Lucas was living, investigators said.

Skeletal remains, which may be those of a 15-year-old girl named Becky or a Denton runaway, were unearthed in Denton County Thursday night, McGaughey said.

The judge asked Lucas whether he was mentally competent to stand trial.

"There's about 100 women out there that says different," said Lucas. "I would say yes, I think so. I am guilty of it."

Lucas, who has a fifth grade education, said he had been held in an Ionia, Mich. state hospital for the criminally insane for six years. He also said he spent three weeks in a Princeton, W. Va. mental institution.

"I keep asking for help... I know it ain't normal for a person just to go out and kill a girl that won't have sex with them," Lucas said. "They turned me loose and told me to go back home, they said 'you are alright.'"

According to the weapons indictment, Lucas was convicted of stabbing his mother to death in March 1960 in Lenawee County, Mich.

"Are 'arrest reports' in the nature of offense reports and - or a 'register of persons arrested' maintained by the police department of the city of Pampa open to the public under the provisions of Article 6252 - 17a, V.A.T.S.?" Lane's letter asks Mattox's Opinion Committee.

The city attorney's letter also asks Mattox for an opinion on whether the police radio and jail records are public information.

A spokeswoman for the Austin Opinions Committee, Susan Garrison, previously said the requested information about persons arrested is public record by way of Hill's 1976 ruling on the Open Records Act. However, she said no ruling about the release of police radio logs and jail rosters has been made by a Texas Attorney General.

Under Texas's Open Records Act, Texas attorneys general have wide said incidents of drunk arrests when the person arrested is a "prominent" citizen, jail escapes, prisoners injured by police, brawl police had with local "bikers" and others were omitted from daily police reports for at least the past year.

"We're just going to wait on the AG's opinion before we make any comment," Ryzman said late Tuesday.

"I always tried to cooperate with you people. Whatever the attorney general says, that's fine with me. As long as we have a good legal decision, we'll go along with it," the chief said.

The newspaper asked for the specific records after Publisher Louise Fletcher and Randles announced May 27 the paper would stop printing all police - issued information.

That day, The Pampa News discontinued its daily features, "Police Report" and "Minor Accidents," which appeared in the paper for more than 25 years. Also, the managers said the newspaper staff will not pick up and report any police - issued information, including the Crime Stoppers report and the Officer of the Month story.

The editor earlier said the newspaper dropped the released police reports because they were incomplete. Randles

Judge rejects whiplash injury award for rubbernecking Texan

By JOHN NOLAN

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A federal judge has rejected a jury's award of $25,000 to a Texas man who sued a motel chain claiming he injured his neck after walking in on a "skimpy clad" woman in a motel room.

U.S. District Judge E. Gordon West ordered a new trial of the claim by James L. Hardy Jr. against Days Inns of America, Inc., a motel chain based in Atlanta, Ga. West, a visiting judge from Louisiana who heard the trial in Chattanooga, ruled that the evidence presented to the jury didn't support its April 5 verdict in favor of Hardy.

Tom Wyatt, the Chattanooga lawyer who represented Hardy, said Tuesday he intends to appeal West's ruling to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio. Wyatt said he was preparing a letter Tuesday to inform Hardy, who lives in Nederland, Texas, that his $25,000 jury verdict had been wiped out.

"My comment is that I thought the jury was correct in its reasoning and Judge West's decision that the jury verdict was unenforceable was incorrect," Wyatt said. "We do intend to appeal."

West ruled that to find a defendant liable for negligence, the plaintiff must prove that the harm which befalls the plaintiff is a foreseeable result of the defendant's negligence.

"The evidence presented in this case did not sufficiently

Shuttle astronauts play 'catch' with a West German satellite

HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — American astronauts dropped a West German satellite into free-floating orbit today and began chase-and-capture maneuvers to prove the shuttle's usefulness in repairing or retrieving crippled spacecraft.

In a day-long celestial ballet, mission specialists John Fabian and Sally K. Ride used the 50-foot-long arm to lift the Shuttle Pallet Satellite (SPAS) into space, recapture it, and restore it for Friday's return to Florida.

Fabian, working from control panels on the shuttle flight deck, sent the robot arm to pick up the scientific satellite and release it into space.

"That SPAS is a nice flying little vehicle," said shuttle commander Robert Crippen as the craft moved away from Challenger 180 miles above Earth.

Crippen and Rick Hauck were flying rendezvous with the SPAS from 1,000 feet away. Cameras aboard the satellite provided Mission Control what a flight director called "a real birds-eye view from space."

The tests are a major milestone in the use of the shuttle as a working vehicle. The ability to pluck an object from orbit will be crucial when shuttles are sent aloft for satellite repair missions.

The first such mission is set for April 1984, on the shuttle's 13th mission, when Crippen will head a team of astronauts to repair the Solar Maximum Satellite that failed after three fuses blew on its control system soon after launch in 1980. The plan is for Crippen's crew to bring the satellite into the cargo bay, replace the control system and return the satellite to space.

For today's test, NASA's seventh shuttle crew arose an hour early — about 10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday — to go to the 3,300 pound SPAS. "The team is refueled and rarin' to test," a controller told commander Crippen.

Crippen, who'll guide Challenger to its first Florida landing, peered down on rain-swept Cape Canaveral Tuesday and asked how the weather was shaping up for the 6:53 a.m. EDT Friday touchdown.

Denver elects first Hispanic mayor

By S.J. GUFFEY

DENVER (AP) — Young people cruised the streets shouting "Chicano Power!" after the election of Federico Pena as the Mile High City's first new mayor in 14 years and its first Hispanic mayor ever.

With all 390 precincts reporting in Tuesday's non-partisan election, Pena had 79,453 votes, or 51.4 percent, to former district attorney and fellow Democrat Dale Tooley's 75,043 votes, or 48.6 percent.

Election Commissioner F.J. Serafini noted the 71.4 percent voter turnout was the heaviest for any Denver election.

"I feel wonderful," grinned the 36-year-old Pena after the victory that made him Denver's first Hispanic mayor.

Tooley, 49, and 73-year-old incumbent Mayor Bill McNichols — who was defeated in the May 17 primary — both showed up at Pena's victory celebration soon after the votes were totaled.

Several thousand supporters crowded into Currigan Hall to cheer Pena, while on Denver's historic Larimer Street, young people cruised their cars slowly, shouting "Chicano Power!"

Pena, who takes office July 1, said the civility he and Tooley had shown had "created a new standard in politics."

The campaign also showed, Pena said, that "Denver is not Chicago. Race was never an issue, and the people of Denver must be proud of that."

"We're still looking at it for Friday, hoping it will clear out," said Mission Control. "We're not real sure yet."

"OK, maybe we can stay till Saturday," said Crippen. "Or Sunday," added Ms. Ride. In the event of bad weather, the shuttle could orbit at least until Sunday, or it could be landed at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

SPAS carries six scientific experiments for the West German government, two for the European Space Agency and three NASA cameras. The satellite's German manufacturer bartered with the American space agency and got a bargain; by allowing NASA to use the satellite for deployment and retrieval practice, the United States is picking up $9 million of the $13 million development, production and launch costs. The SPAS is designed to be used on five flights.

A computer on the satellite overheated Tuesday after the SPAS had been operating seven experiments more than 24 hours in sunlight. Crippen turned the shuttle belly-up — placing the cargo in the cold shadows, but that overchilled one of the instruments. He then was directed to point Challenger toward Earth — a position in which it alternates between daylight and darkness.

The position changes worked, but barely. The decision on whether to let the satellite operate independently in space was "a very close one," said a NASA spokesman. He said temperatures aboard the craft hit 101 degrees, just one degree below "red line."

In Brief

KRAKOW, Poland — Protesters chant "Solidarity" as they greet Pope John Paul II's return to his home diocese. And a government spokesman rebukes the pontiff for his stirring defense of the outlawed Solidarity trade union.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Groups of Czechoslovak youths disrupt a "Peace and Life" rally with shouts of "We want freedom!" and then about 300 gather in a downtown square where they were attacked by club-wielding police.

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices, rising at a modest 2.1 percent annual rate in the first four months of the year, are likely to maintain that easy pace in the next few months, according to economists both inside and out of government.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — For the first time in the history of space flight an astronaut crew will release a satellite into orbit today, allow it to fly free, then snatch it back for the trip home to Earth.

WASHINGTON — A task force of governors, educators and business executives, warning that "a real emergency is upon us," today called for sweeping reforms in public education "to raise both the floor and ceiling of achievement in America."

WENDOVER, Utah — A massive briny lake has formed on the white salt flats of the western Utah desert, a throwback to the vast inland sea that was prehistoric Lake Bonneville.

WASHINGTON — Do children have an easier time than their parents learning to ride a bicycle, master a foreign language, drive a car, play a piano or win a video game? Rupert Sheldrake, a lanky English biologist with curly hair and quiet manner, thinks so. And he thinks he knows why.

LEONIA, N.J. — A mail campaign seeking tuition-paying students for the Leonia public schools has netted some new pupils, and a storm of criticism from educators in neighboring towns who say raids on their classrooms are unethical and insulting.

Brucellosis, TEC special session underway

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers had six days notice to return the capitol and will have just $15 million to spend during the special session called to consider brucellosis control and extending the life of the Texas Employment Commission.

Some lawmakers were on summer vacation when Gov. Mark White called the special session and had to cut short their holiday to get back to Austin by today.

The session is expected to last a week to 10 days. Sen. Tati Santiesteban, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, scheduled a committee hearing today on brucellosis — a cattle disease — and predicted a bill would be ready for a Senate vote by Thursday.

"I said last Friday, when the governor called the special session, that we would hear the bill 'virtually immediately' after the session begins," said Santiesteban, D-El Paso. "We are still on that timetable. If we act quickly, the threat of a quarantine can be lifted by the end of the week."

After the Legislature failed to pass a brucellosis bill, the U.S. Department of Agriculture threatened a quarantine of Texas cattle, but decided last week to give Texas at least 30 days to resolve the differences between state and federal regulations.

Brucellosis, commonly known as Bangs disease, is a highly contagious disease that centers in the reproductive organs of cattle and causes abortions, weakened calves, sterility and partial loss of milk production. It also causes undulant fever in humans.

A bill by Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, would give the Texas Animal Health Commission authority to adopt rules to comply with the federal program for testing and vaccinating livestock.

The bill passed the House on April 26 and was tentatively approved in the Senate, but Glasgow fell one vote short of suspending the rules for final passage three days before the session ended.

Also left over from the 140-day session that ended May 30 was a bill that would continue the TEC, a state agency which helps unemployed people find work and gives benefits to those who cannot get jobs.

A bill to extend the TEC to 1995 under Texas' Sunset law died in the House after the Senate added an amendment that would have set up a TEC department to handle job discrimination complaints.

House TEC sponsor Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, blamed Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, for failure to pass the bill because Doggett had pushed the amendment.

"It's a shame the state can't make Doggett reimburse it for the $300,000 a special session will cost," Criss said.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Tuesday that he and Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, had filed a bill that omits the proposed Human Rights Commission within the TEC.

"We have received a letter from the U.S. Department of Labor stating clearly that federal funds now provided for TEC cannot be used for funding a Human Rights Commission," Blake said in a statement. "State funds would have to be committed; therefore, the Human Rights Commission, I believe, should be kept as a separate issue in its own right."

White has said he would add a third item to the legislative agenda, a $16 million appropriation for Texas Southern University at Houston. The Senate Finance Committee scheduled a hearing today, and the House Appropriations Committee posted a Saturday hearing.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told White on Wednesday that the special session would have approximately $15.5 million to spend.

Bullock already has said the state can cover the cost of the $30.9 billion two-year state budget approved by the recent Legislature. It goes into effect Sept. 1.

New flag for museum

A new American flag, which has flown over the U.S. Capitol, will soon fly on the flagpole at the Roberts County Museum in Miami. The flag was obtained by U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower and was presented to Miami's

Change in fire code approved

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Acting in the wake of a fire that killed five people and injured 34, the City Council has endorsed a fire code change mandating smoke detectors in all Fort Worth hotels, motels and apartments.

Tuesday's action came several hours after a guest at the Ramada Inn Central told fire officials that an unidentified couple had reported smelling something burning before the discovery of the fire at the motel June 14.

Officials also said Tuesday that they may never know exactly how the fire started, although arson is suspected.

The council directed the city staff to immediately begin work on a retroactive smoke detector requirement.

The hotel fire left the council "no choice" but to make detectors mandatory as soon as possible, said Councilman Bert Williams.

The proposed change would require detectors in apartments and in guest rooms of all motels and hotels, regardless of when they were built.

Currently, city code only requires detectors in buildings and homes constructed after 1976, when a code revision first made smoke detectors a requirement.

The two-story Ramada wing that was gutted June 14 was built before 1976 and had no smoke detectors, fire officials said.

George Walker, of Huntington Beach, Calif., a guest at the hotel, said he talked with a couple at the hotel that reported smelling something burning two hours before the fire was reported, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Walker told the Star-Telegram that he talked with a man and a woman while being treated for cuts and bruises sustained during a jump from a second-story window.

"They said they smelled something peculiar. They said it was a really bad smell, a peculiar, bad smell," possibly something burning, Walker said. He said the couple told him the smell had a chemical odor and "was almost nauseating."

Investigators would try to determine the couple's identity, said arson Lt. Bob Frazier.

Arson Capt. W.E. Durkin said Tuesday that investigators may never know exactly how the fire started, but he said he strongly suspects that it was intentionally set.

While tests performed on burned carpeting showed no flammable liquids were used, Dunkin said the plastic and paper that the carpets were wrapped in may have helped the fire to spread quickly.

The carpets were awaiting installation at the time of the fire.

No money for lawman; volunteer needed

GRAFORD, Texas (AP) — With only 495 residents, Graford is not a big town. But city residents say it's big enough to need a marshal even though Mayor Audrey Altum says it simply cannot afford one.

School board member Harry Sain claims some residents, aware that no one is minding the store, are running wild, breaking windows and drag racing along the town's main street.

Crime in this community 60 miles west of Fort Worth, he said, is up.

"The bulk of the crime is from people who live here," he said. "They're locals. They know they can get away with just about anything since there is no law enforcement."

Sain obtained in March about 100 signatures on a petition and gave it to the city council. It asks they hire a marshal.

"We have no law enforcement whatsoever," Sain said. "We have a big drug problem, but we have other crime, too, such as thievery, vandalism and speeding."

Mrs. Altum said the only way Graford is going to get a marshal is if someone volunteers for the job. The city's budget, she said, is already stretched trying to pay for a new water system.

"What we're looking at is a salary, a car, radar, the whole bit," she said. "We simply cannot afford that."

"What it boils down to," she said, "is that this city's law enforcement depends on if we get someone to volunteer."

Sain is also complaining that Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin, who is supposed to be protecting Graford, is not doing the job since Graford does not have a full-time deputy.

"We felt like the sheriff wasn't giving us any protection because the other towns in the county had a deputy and we didn't," Sain said. "The sheriff said he had been protecting us and we were just unaware of it, but we knew better than that."

Turpin said he doesn't understand Sain's complaint. Graford, he claims, is protected by his deputies just like any other town in the county.

"There is a deputy assigned to the area," he said. "The county is divided into six areas, and there is a deputy assigned to each one. I don't know why they think that they get less protection than anyone else."

Singer arrested for attacking officer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The district attorney's office has rejected assault charges prepared by the sheriff's department against country singer Moe Bandy.

Bandy was accused of attacking a deputy patrolman who came to his house after finding the singer's daughter running down the road, hysterically crying.

The patrolman, Roland H. Aylesworth, contends Bandy's wife gave him permission to enter the home.

The district attorney's office, however, told Bexar County Sheriff Joe Neaves on Tuesday that Aylesworth "had no reason to be in the house."

Bandy has refused comment on his Thursday arrest, but scheduled a press conference for this afternoon.

His attorney, Stanley Bernstein, said Tuesday that Bandy's wife "absolutely did not" give Aylesworth permission to enter the house.

"She told him just the opposite," Bernstein said.

He did not deny Bandy scuffled with Aylesworth.

"There was a fight," Bernstein said. "It's hard to say who started it. He didn't attack the deputy."

Aylesworth, who was treated and released for minor injuries after the fight, said he was rounding up loose cattle when he noticed Bandy's daughter waving her arms at him.

"She had small abrasions on her face and arms and she said her parents were fighting and hurting each other," he said. He also said she was "terrified and afraid to go home."

Bandy's wife, he said, was "messy and soiled" and standing outside the house in the rain when he arrived.

Gone is the old clickety-clack

Last Sunday, syndicated columnist Bob Greene lamented the disappearance of typewriters from newsrooms. They've been replaced by video display terminals, on which this piece is being written.

Greene correctly pointed out that time was when a writer's personality could be partially determined by observing his typing. That's not really possible with a VDT. And Greene is right that people don't lean on VDTs (they're too expensive to risk damage). He might have added that in years past an irascible editor, as deadline approached, could take the story from a reporter paragraph by paragraph simply by ripping lines off the paper as the story was being written.

This all becomes pertinent because of last week's passing of an era in Cortland, N.Y. On May 11, Smith Corona produced its last manual typewriter, writing the final chapter to domestic production of the portable manual typewriter.

In truth, the VDT is much more pleasant to work with than a typewriter - copy can be processed more quickly and cleanly.

But the manual typewriter has a love - hate charm. It will, at the close of business letters, for instance, commit an irreversible error. It could, when universally used in newsrooms, grind up copy paper by the ream, searching for a simple lead. It could stare a writer down at 2 a.m. Such was its authority.

VDTs are easy - going, promiscuous machines. You had to marry a typewriter - fight with it, smooth things over, wax jealous, get comfortable, develop a mutual understanding over the long haul. How do you explain something like that to a kid who has grown up with a DELETE button?

Shorts

Ever wonder how spokesmen for higher taxes usually seem to get away with labeling their proposals as "practical"? We've developed a fascinating inversion of morality when seizing money from people who've earned it is considered practical and letting them keep some of it is considered idealistic.

Well, federal urban renewal projects may have generally been a disaster for the poor, but they're proving a boon to some people. An eight-story Design Center has just opened in Washington, D.C., on property that had formerly been federal urban renewal land that had reverted to the District of Columbia government. The developers bought it from the D.C. government at $20 a square foot at a time when other prime Washington property was going for up to $500 a square foot. The new owners? R. Sargent Shriver and Stephen Smith (both brothers - in - law of Sen. Teddy), three Kennedy sisters and Ethel Kennedy. Who said this wasn't still the land of opportunists - er, opportunity?

Who are the really heavy - hitting special interests spending money lobbying in Washington these days? During the last three months of 1982 the biggest spender was Common Cause, pouring $442,537 into congressional persuasion. Number 2 was Handgun Control, Inc., which spent $358,443. Number 3 was the American Petroleum Institute at $222,415. Fourth and fifth were the Sierra Club ($212,052) and the American Postal Workers Union, AFL - CIO ($178,927). There are anomalies in the laws requiring disclosure of spending for lobbying, but the trend seems clear. Four of the top five spenders were groups explicitly seeking more regulation or higher federal spending.

Remember all the talk about how the movement to repeal withholding on savings was being manipulated by the big, bad, free - spending bankers? For starters, most of the really big banks joined the pro - withholding cabal. And in the last six months of 1982, immediately following the passage of the withholding law, the American Bankers Association spent $28,633 on lobbying, less than half the $69,281 spent by the Gay Rights National Lobby. The bankers undoubtedly spent more this year, for which figures are not yet available, but they look like pikers during the crank - up - the - campaign period. Maybe it's more a case of the interests of bankers, for once, coinciding with the interests of the vast majority of the people.

England's latest Tale of Two Parties...

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

LONDON (NEA) - When I first visited London in 1954, I was a mere sprig of a lad and active in the Young Republican organization. So it occurred to me to look up our opposite numbers, the Young Conservatives, and indulge in a bit of what Stephen Potter was later to call "hands - across - the - seamanship."

I found them, logically enough, at Conservative Party headquarters in an elderly building on Victoria Street, and I must say they responded with all appropriate hospitality. I was introduced, for one thing, to my first English pub, being taken there for lunch.

I do remember, though, having it made clear to me by the Young Conservatives that I mustn't get any exaggerated ideas about how much our two parties had in common. Those were the days of Dwight Eisenhower's first term, and you might suppose that British Conservatives - even young ones - would feel reasonably close in spirit to that notably moderate administration.

Not at all. I was given to understand, politely but clearly, that British Conservatives felt no great kinship for the Republican Party in the U.S. On the contrary, it was made plain, my hosts regarded the GOP as hopelessly antediluvian. British conservatism was well to the left of us, and quite content to be so.

To be sure, chance had thrown me in with the liberal wing of the Conservative Party, which at that point happened to control its youth arm. Winston Churchill was still prime minister, and I doubt that his private opinion of the welfare state was higher than mine. But I can't help wondering where my young hosts of long ago are now, and what they would have to say about the two parties today.

In Washington sits a Republican president who has hung in the Cabinet Room a portrait, not of Dwight Eisenhower, but of Calvin Coolidge. And in London there is thundering down the road to apparent triumphant re - election a Conservative prime minister - and a woman at that - who is proud to be considered practically Ronald Reagan's political clone.

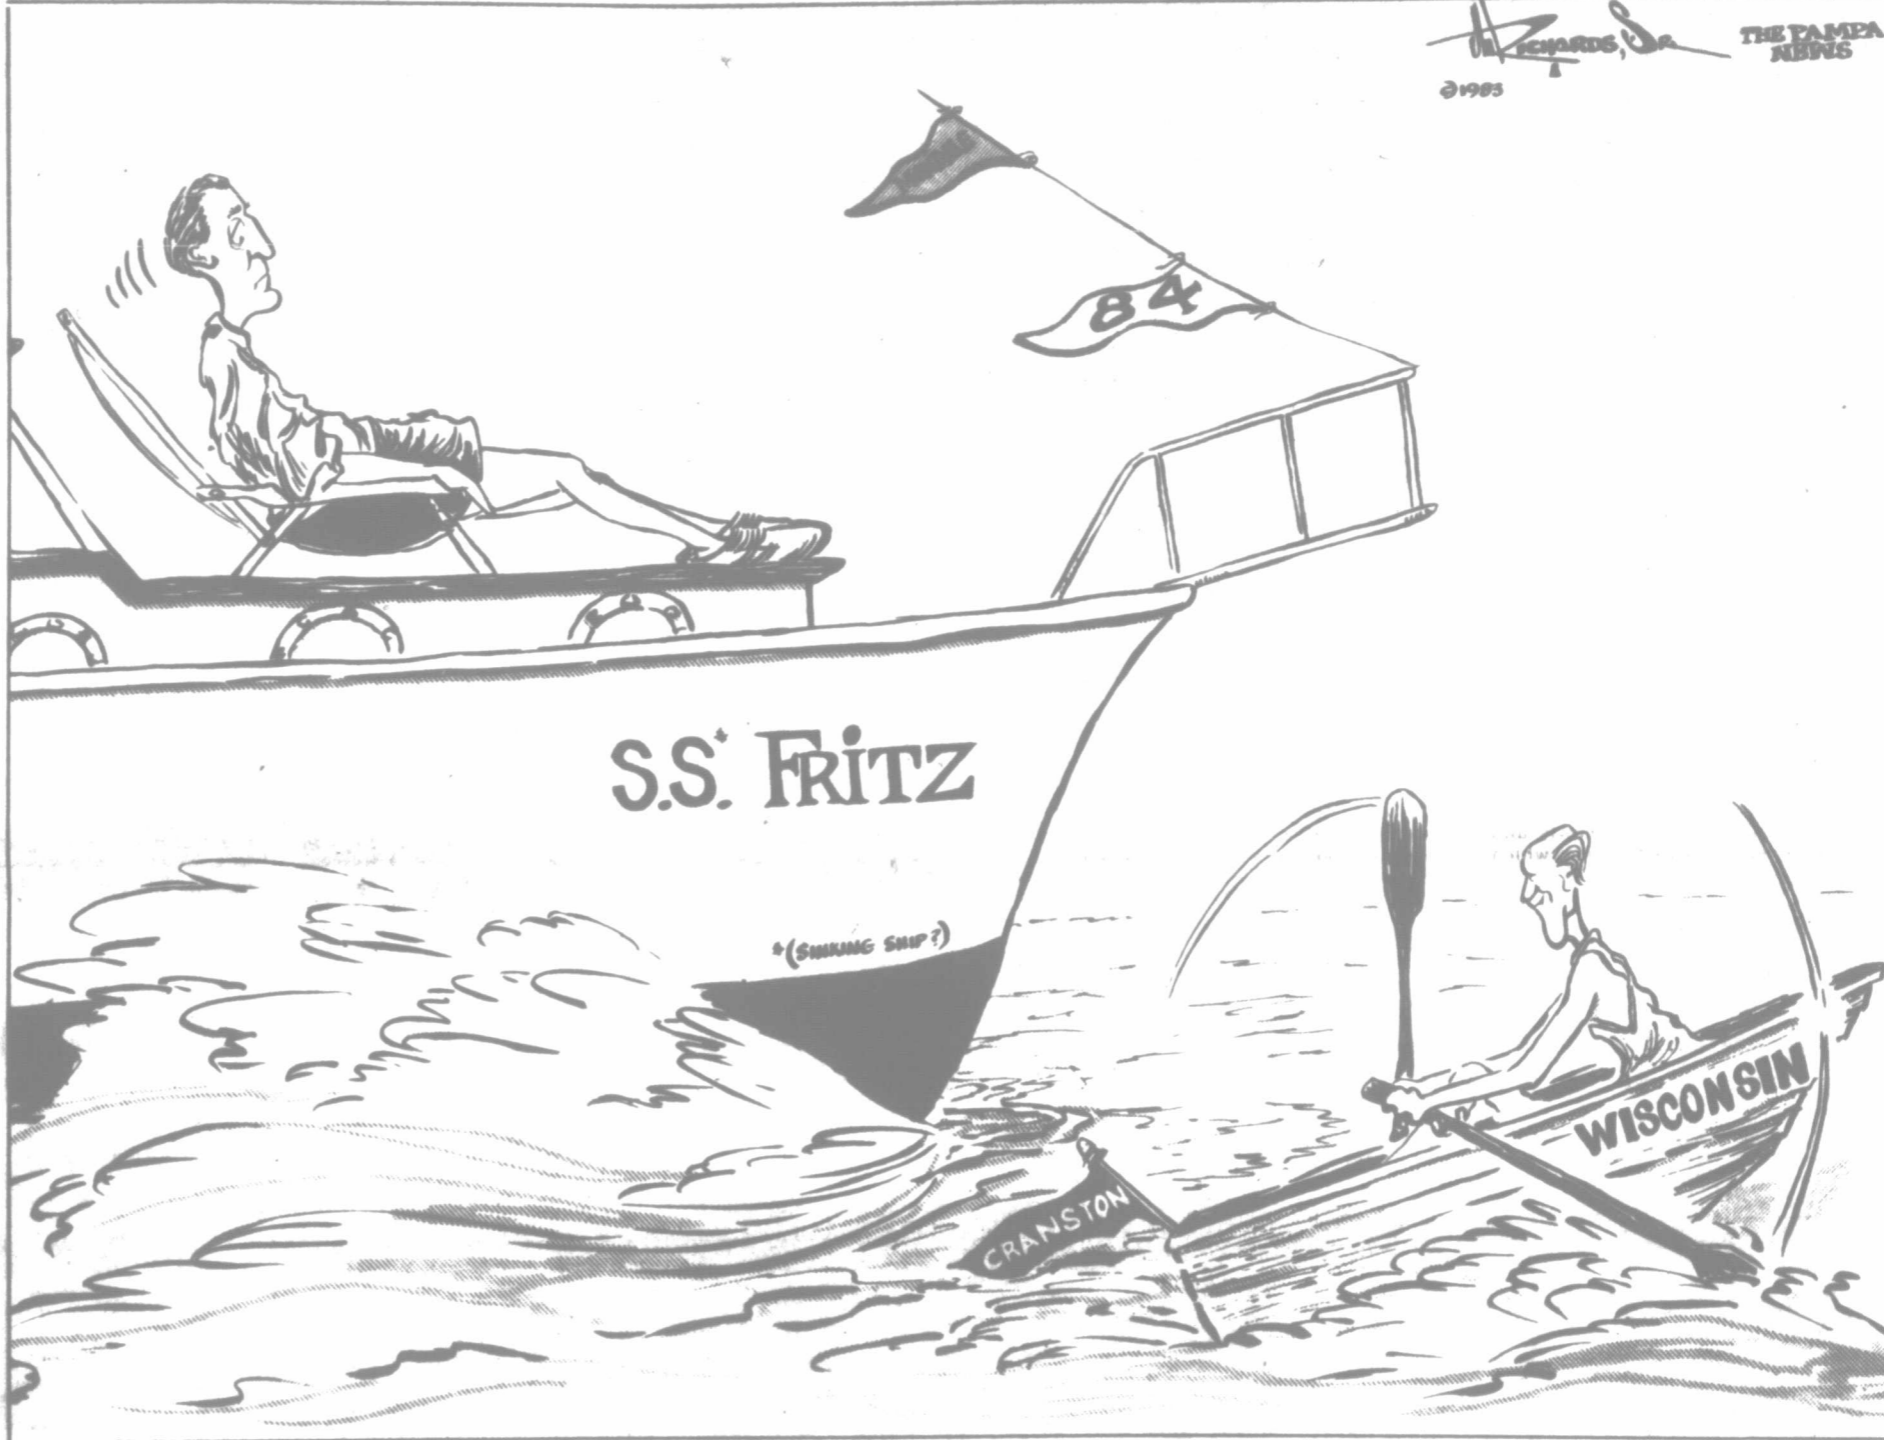

In both parties the relatively liberal elements, or "wets" as they are called in Britain (a term I suggest we Republicans might import, to apply to the likes of Senators Charles Mathias and Mark Hatfield), have been chased far up the road. Nelson Rockefeller, who symbolized the subspecies in the U.S., has left us for still better things; and Edward Heath, the former prime minister from whom Margaret Thatcher seized the leadership of the Conservative Party, has been relegated to grumpy impotence on the sidelines.

And the view is practically as good, from a conservative standpoint, when one contemplates the political scene in the free world's two strongest economic powers (after the U.S.). In West Germany, Helmut Kohl, a Christian Democrat, has just taken over the government from Social Democrat Helmut Schmidt, and in Japan, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is cementing his power as leader of the dominant Liberal Party (which, despite its name, is distinctly conservative). Analogies can be dangerous, but certainly there is every reason for Reagan and Thatcher to feel comfortable with such allies.

It is the liberal and leftist forces in all four countries that are in trouble - especially in Britain, where the Labor Party, drifting steadily leftward out of power, has finally torn itself in two. We have nothing in the U.S. quite like what now remains of the Labor Party: a shrill, leftist remnant of what was once a serious alternative to the Conservatives. The new alliance of the Liberal Party and the so - called Social Democrats (breakway Laborites who couldn't stand their party's leftward tilt) is perhaps most analogous to the Democratic Party in the U.S., and may well become, in time, the official opposition, though it may do poorly in this first general election.

Someday this year or next, a Young Social Democrat from Britain may visit the U.S. and drop in at the Democratic Party's headquarters in Washington to pay transatlantic respects to the Young Democrats. It will be poetic justice if he (or she) is told, gently but firmly, not to get any big ideas about party similarities. Our Democrats, it should be explained to the visitor, are in no mood to go that far.

Here's cities who work on teenage unemployment

By DON GRAFF

Here's a seasonal question for you: What don't New York and Houston, on one hand, and, on the other, Cleveland and Seattle have in common?

Don't waste any more time on an answer. We'll give it to you: an equally effective response by private business to massive unemployment among American teen - agers.

As measured by the availability of summer jobs for the large numbers of teen-agers looking for work during the school-vacation months, New York and Houston scored highest in a Conference Board study of corporate efforts in 14 major cities last year. They produced almost 16,000 and some 3,000 jobs respectively out of the 14 - city total of more than 30,000.

The other two cities, joined by Detroit and Pittsburgh, were at the bottom of the list. Coordinated corporate campaigns in all four failed to place a single teen - ager in a private-sector job.

Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, Omaha, Richmond and San Francisco also participated in the survey. New York, which turned in the best job-finding performance, also had the highest youth unemployment rate, 28.5 percent. Seattle, at 25.1 percent, was close behind. At the low end of the scale were Miami, 7.6 percent, and San Francisco, 8.6 percent.

The Conference Board's analysts, in a just released report on the survey, draw a number of conclusions.

The most encouraging is that there is a "growing awareness on the part of corporate management that summer youth unemployment remains a issue serious enough to warrant concerted...approaches." This is reflected in a significant shift under way among private businesses, from going it alone toward working with each other and community organizations in organized summer jobs programs. But the others are mostly bad news.

Altogether, corporate programs in the 10 cities did register some success found summer work for 30,906 young people and funded jobs for other 2,258 in public - service activities. The effort, however, made the merest dent youth unemployment. Close to 2 million were looking for work. And that, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, understates the problem because it omits large numbers of discouraged teen-agers who have given up looking.

Further, most of the jobs were for the minimum wage ($3.35 an hour), for only eight weeks and frequently less than 40 hour per week, involved unskilled tasks and offered no training opportunities.

The discouraging bottom line of the study is that, whatever they may be saying in Washington about miracles waiting to be accomplished by volunteerism, the private-sector effort by itself cannot solve the problem of youth unemployment. At best, it is evidence of good faith, the aforementioned awareness that "substantial resources - money, time and people - are needed to solve pressing social issues."

Understand, now, we're discussing a small part of the national job-making effort, that part that is entirely in the hand of private enterprise. Not included are the government programs, particularly the much criticized CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act), due to be replaced Oct. 1 by the Job Partnership Training Act. Last year Congress funded some 683,000 jobs for eligible teen-agers. A much bigger dent, but the even larger challenge remains.

Well, all of this deals with last year. Does any of it matter now?

Consider a more recent news item. The latest unemployment figures, for May, were released the other day and show that while teen-agers joblessness has eased off a bit with the figure for the entire labor force, it is still at almost a quarter of the age group - 23.4 percent, compared with the national figure of 10.1 percent. For black teen-agers, the outlook is twice as bleak - 48.2 percent jobless.

Of the 11.2 million Americans unemployed at the beginning of the summer of 1983, some 1.9 million are teen-agers.

What do you think?

Solidarity salute

Two million people attend mass

KRAKOW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass today before more than 2 million people, the biggest crowd yet on his Polish pilgrimage, as Solidarity leader Lech Walesa prepared to come to Krakow to meet with the pontiff.

Scores of Solidarity banners rose from the vast throng as John Paul concluded his homily. Then tens of thousands of hands were lifted in the independent labor union's V-for-victory salute.

"Jesus Christ, shepherd of people... I beg you for victory," said the pontiff. He was answered by chants of "long live the pope," echoing across the open field.

Walesa, accompanied by his wife Danuta and four sons, was to fly to Krakow today from his home in the Baltic seaport of Gdansk, in northern Poland. The audience for the leader of the banned union was expected Thursday — the last day of the pope's visit — somewhere in southern Poland near Krakow.

Poland's Communist rulers reluctantly agreed to sanction a "strictly private" audience with Walesa, who they call a "former leader of a former trade union."

John Paul, in white vestments trimmed with gold, spoke slowly and with emotion to the vast throng, which poured into this city throughout the night. Trekking to Blonie parade ground, an open meadow in the center of this ancient seat of Polish kings, the faithful sang patriotic hymns and chanted, "long live the pope."

In Krakow, the pontiff's arrival shared the front page of the local Communist Party with an article on the 71st anniversary of Lenin's visit to the city in 1912.

In an extraordinary comment from the officially atheistic party, a newspaper editorial referred to the pontiff as "a great statesman and patriot."

Since he arrived in Poland June 16 for an eight-day pilgrimage, the pope has staunchly defended the rights of workers and criticized Warsaw's military leaders, who outlawed the Solidarity trade union and locked up many of its leaders under martial law, which was declared in December 1981.

Despite government warnings that good behavior during the pope's visit could lead to the complete lifting of martial law, the people have reacted to the pope's praise of Solidarity with uninhibited displays of support for the union, including protest marches.

Jerzy Urban, spokesman for Poland's Communist government, stepped up his criticism of papal remarks Tuesday, saying "We did not rent him the country."

In a cautiously worded newspaper interview, Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski alluded to the pope when he criticized educators who feed young

Poles "myths, legends and half-truths."

A Vatican statement, apparently issued in response, denied the pope's remarks were of a "political nature" and blamed the international media for that interpretation.

The pope's last scheduled day in Poland is Thursday, when, according to a spokesman for Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, the pontiff will meet the union activist in Krakow. The spokesman, Jozef Borowczak, said Walesa was given a three-day leave from his job at the Gdansk shipyard where Solidarity was born in August 1980.

As the pope arrived in Krakow Tuesday night, the city where, as Karol Wojtyla, he was parish priest and rose to become archbishop, thousands of people along his motorcade route chanted "Solidarity" and "Long live the pope."

Later, 50,000 people massed below the pope's window at the archbishop's residence, pleading with the pontiff to come out and greet them.

When John Paul appeared, 100,000 hands shot up, fingers signifying "V" for victory, the favorite sign of Solidarity supporters.

Bid to attract tuition-paying students stirring up a tempest

LEONIA, N.J. (AP) — A mail campaign to draw wealthy, tuition-paying students to Leonia public schools has angered educators in neighboring towns, who say the plan will upset the racial balance of their schools.

But school officials who designed the plan say it should bring money into the Leonia district, helping offset the loss of state aid when enrollments declined.

"We did not see ourselves as pirates," said Johanna Meskill, president of the Leonia board of education. "We may have to do some fence-mending with our neighboring districts, but it was not our intention to lure their students."

Instead, the effort was aimed at parents in wealthy northern New Jersey enclaves who otherwise would send their children to private schools.

"Compared to private schools, we offer a very good education at a lesser cost," Mrs. Meskill said Tuesday.

"If you've got a good product, why not sell it," said Superintendent Charles Murphy. "We've always accepted outside students. It's just the advertising that's different."

Last month, Murphy wrote parents in predominantly white, affluent sections of Englewood, Cliffside Park and Englewood Cliffs, inviting them to consider enrolling their children in a school system that sends 75 percent of its students to college, with many attending Ivy League schools.

Administrators in the targeted districts, which would lose state aid for every student who drops out, complained that public schools should not compete for students. And they said they resented Leonia's claims of academic superiority.

The Outcry has been particularly sharp in Englewood and Englewood Cliffs, where authorities are trying to maintain a racial balance at Dwight Morrow High School, which is 66 percent black in a community where about half of all white students go to private school. A 1980 U.S. housing census noted that 53.3 percent of Englewood and 88.9 percent of Englewood Cliffs are white.

Leonia school officials said the tuition for out-of-town students — ranging from $1,300 to $4,000 — costs about $2,000 to $4,000 less than at some of the region's prestigious private schools.

Cranston ignores minor nuisances

By DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I never notice drafts, smoke or dust," Alan Cranston once said. "If you do that, you're not concentrating."

Cranston's current project, capturing the Democratic nomination for president in 1984, will tax even his powers of concentration.

The California senator has made impressive strides since entering the race, notably by handing front-runner Walter Mondale an embarrassing defeat in a Wisconsin straw vote.

His victory in the nonbinding poll at the state Democratic convention in Milwaukee June 10 helped him gain recognition, and he says it has helped in fund-raising.

"I have never found it quite so easy to phone people and not be told that they are out to lunch," he told reporters last week.

Cranston also won a straw vote at his home-state Democratic convention earlier this year, came in an unexpected second to former Vice President Mondale in a similar poll in Massachusetts and won an Alabama Young Democrats poll in a slim turnout last weekend.

But his supporters concede none of this will necessarily mean a thing when the straw votes give way to delegate votes next year.

"It's wonderful, it's sweet, we won, but it didn't even give us one delegate," said Victor Kamber, a consultant to the Cranston campaign, after the Wisconsin poll.

Cranston's surge obviously stung Mondale, prompting him to announce he would give "first priority" to a nuclear weapons freeze, the issue Cranston has built his campaign around. But Mondale still remains the clear front-runner.

The Californian's new strength probably had more of an effect on the other two leading candidates — damaging Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado and giving an unearned boost to Sen. John Glenn of Ohio.

Cranston told reporters he sees Mondale, Glenn and himself as the "three top contenders now" but does not expect anyone to drop out of the race before next year.

Kamber, when asked how seriously Hart had been hurt, said, "A lot. He has a continuing credibility problem."

Kamber also conceded that Cranston and his supporters have their work cut out to "keep demonstrating that we are real."

The doubts of some Democrats that Cranston is "real" — that is, that he has the stuff to wrest the White House from the Republicans — continue to dog his campaign. That's where the benefit to Glenn comes in.

Lake covers Bonneville Salt Flats

Under this lake which for a while was the second largest in Utah lies the Bonneville Speedway. The lake with no name wasn't here last year and may not be here next

New briny lake on salt flats is a throwback to prehistoric Bonneville

WENDOVER, Utah (AP) — A huge, briny lake has formed on the white salt flats of western Utah, a throwback to the inland sea that was prehistoric Lake Bonneville, but scientists don't know how deep it is or how long it will last.

The lake is one of two new bodies of water created on the bed of the ancient lake after 18 months of heavy rain and snowfall in Utah. Geologists and long-time desert residents say they've never seen anything like it.

"I've been here 23 years and have never seen water like this in the desert," Richard Dixon, owner of the Bonneville Speedway Museum in Wendover, said recently.

The new lake has no name. It wasn't there last year and may not be there next year. It stretches into one of the West's most isolated areas and its exact size and depth are unknown.

Although heavy in salt content, the lake does support life

Minute brine shrimp, which also thrive in the highly saline waters of the Great Salt Lake to the east, paddle about in its steel-gray waters.

The lake, which laps against Interstate 80 about five miles east of this city on the Utah-Nevada border, is in an area where patches of standing water are common in the spring before evaporating in the summer heat, leaving a hard and virtually level salt plain.

But National Weather Service satellite photos this spring showed the new body of water stretching across the level salt beds in roughly a right triangle, its longest side about 25 miles.

In a May 23 satellite photo, the lake appeared larger than Utah Lake, a 25-mile long, 10-mile wide freshwater lake near Provo, 40 miles south of Salt Lake City.

That would make it Utah's second largest body of water, behind the 55-mile-long Great Salt Lake.

"The lake is something new for us," said J. Wallace Gwynn, of the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

A hundred miles to the south, water also stands two to three feet deep on 80 percent of the Sevier Dry Lake bed.

In a normal spring, up to a foot of water might cover the 20-mile by 5-mile bed before evaporating. But this year, water may remain all summer, Gwynn said.

Both Sevier Dry Lake and the new, nameless lake are on the floor of Lake Bonneville, which covered most of Utah and parts of Idaho and Nevada 20,000 years ago.

Great Salt Lake and Utah Lake are remnants of the vast ancient inland sea.

Creative thinking goes into taxes

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Since the days of the Greeks and Romans, and quite likely long before, some of mankind's most creative thinking, deepest indignation and liveliest oratory has been about taxes.

It probably always will be so, because there seems to be no prospect on the horizon that will relieve mankind of the desire to tinker with taxes, to the deep irritation of those who pay them.

"We're all fleeced," complained taxpayer Lucilius in 129 B.C., and his comment has been repeated in every society since then, no matter what good the taxes might have done.

The latest innovations involve the consumption tax and the flat tax, each as controversial as anything else you have heard about taxes, and each now ready to break into the lives of ordinary people.

Briefly, the simplest of the flat-rate tax proposals is that all people would pay the same rate on taxable income, while the consumption tax proposal would put a levy on what you spent. They would replace income taxes.

Well, you say, if they replace income taxes they couldn't be all wrong, and you may be right. But income taxes, lest you forget, are only one form of taxation. Man's creativity in taxes knows no bounds, and millions of Americans now pay a dozen other taxes, in addition to those on income.

They pay sales taxes, of course, and those taxes have been tending higher of late because state and municipal governments are running short of funds, and some of those governments have been prevented from raising real estate taxes.

One thing leads to another when a governmental unit is thinking of how to raise revenue, and so you have the excise tax, which is a sales tax of sorts applied mainly to large items, such as automobiles.

You pay taxes on your wages, to finance Social Security and unemployment compensation. And you may pay user taxes if you use sewers, water supplies, bridges and highways, and if you fish or hunt. As you see, you cannot run away from taxes; those who have tried generally report back that it isn't worth it.

Most of us pay severance taxes too, since such taxes become incorporated in the price of oil, gas and timber that are removed or severed from their natural environments. And we pay property taxes according to the value of what we own.

Arrests break 'hooker hangout'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A "hooker hangout" has been broken up at an El Paso truckstop with the arrests of eight people, including two suspected prostitutes and an alleged pimp, police say.

The undercover operation netted the arrests of eight suspects at Petro's Truckstop off Interstate 10 just east of this city of 480,000, El Paso Det. Freddie Bonilla said Tuesday.

Arrested on prostitution charges were Rachel Copeland, 28, of Menton, Calif., and Theresa Bryant, 19, of Tampa, Fla. Ronald Carr, 23, also of Menton, was arrested on charges of promotion of prostitution in connection with Ms. Copeland, Bonilla said. Each is being held in lieu of $1,500 bond.

Truckstop owners recently had complained about an increase in sex and drug trafficking at the truckstop, police said.

"(Truckstop officials) told us there were hookers all over the place," Sgt. Gary Gabbert said.

Two killed in head-on crash

COMSTOCK, Texas (AP)

Two people were killed and three injured when a car drifted into the wrong lane and hit another vehicle head-on just outside this Southwest Texas town, authorities say.

The vehicles collided about 7:40 a.m. Tuesday on U.S. Highway 90, according to Sgt. D. Smith of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Dead at the scene were Dawn Glitsch, 39, and her 13-year-old son Darren, both of Norman, Okla.

The three injured people were taken to Val Verde County Memorial Hospital in nearby Del Rio.

William Glenn Glitsch, 50, was listed in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions, and Jamie Glitsch was in fair condition with only minor injuries.

The driver of the second car, 32-year-old Mildred Dunn Smith of Comstock, was in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions.

Westward ho, for the Smithsonian Institution?

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Malcolm Martin has a recurring nightmare.

In it, the urbane senior partner in one of the largest St. Louis law firms gazes across the Mississippi from the Gateway Arch toward the impoverished Illinois city of East St. Louis.

And there he sees a smoking, malodorous coal gasification plant. Or an amusement park with garishly lighted ferris wheels and roller coasters. Nothing like that has been built there yet. But there has been talk.

"Aesthetically, it would be a disaster," pronounces Martin, one of the city elders who helped to create the giant arch that sweeps dramatically across the St. Louis skyline and helped spark downtown rejuvenation.

But Martin has a plan to banish his nightmare and already has won support for it from Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Where darkened railyards once stood at the river's edge — some still do — Simon proposes to construct "one of the great museums of the country."

A $5 million museum? "What I have in mind would be much more than that," says Simon, who has enlisted backing from 78-year-old Rep. Melvin Price of East St. Louis.

Just as important, Simon has had help from Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill. The Appropriations subcommittee chairman from Chicago tucked $100,000 in this year's Interior Department money bill for a study of whether to build a giant museum of immigration and ethnic heritage in East St. Louis.

In specific, the study would determine if it should be built by the Smithsonian Institution, the mainly Washington-bound complex of museums that includes the popular Air and Space Museum and the National Gallery, with its masterpieces of painting and sculpture.

The Smithsonian, which does have a small museum in New York, has remained tactfully neutral toward Simon's proposal.

"The regents have not traditionally favored out-of-town locations," Deputy Director Phillip Samuel Hughes says. "They think the Smithsonian, by and large, should be here in town."

"Of course, the Senate will have something to say on this," he adds about the $100,000 appropriation, which appears likely to pass the House. Will the Smithsonian oppose it in the Senate? "I think our position would be pretty neutral on that matter... It isn't something we have sought."

But Simon insists the Smithsonian should saddle up and head for the Gateway to the West, as the arch is known.

"We should not have all the cultural concentration in the Washington area," he says. "I support what we have here, but we must realize that Washington is way off at one end of the country."

Backers of the plan agree that the museum should be modeled in some ways on the impressive Museum of Anthropology in Mexico City. After that, the many cultures motif leaves the door open for almost anything.

Martin says Polish immigration exhibits would attract Chicagoans. Nearby Cahokia Mounds State Park would add an American Indian theme, he says.

"Immigration or Emigration? I thought it was a 'wagons west' sort of theme," Hughes says. Simon says the Afro-American museum already established in predominantly black East St. Louis by dancer-choreographer Katherine Dunham could tie in somehow.

Acknowledged nervously by fans of the idea is the poverty and crime problems that would surround the East St. Louis Smithsonian. Says

Simon: "Part of reviving the area, it seems to me, is not to create more jails. This is part of a constructive answer."

"We're 14 blocks from the nearest habitation," Martin says.

Meanwhile, Martin and 14 allies have kicked in funds to enable their nonprofit Gateway Center of Metropolitan St. Louis Inc. to buy 50 acres that contained an old Illinois Central Gulf yard whose tracks were pried up by a federal rail relocation project. He won't quote the price tag but says it was "up in the hundreds of thousands."

Martin estimates 150 acres more will be needed. But already his group has raised a 1,650-square-foot American flag over their property, which, having received tax deductions for their contributions, they are eager to donate to the Smithsonian for the museum.

And now that the flag is aloft, Martin is seeking funds to erect a "world class" fountain on the site similar to the Jette d'Eau in Geneva that shoots water 450 feet into the air. Its East St. Louis cousin would erupt to a height half that of the 630-foot arch. But even at that scale it would cost $1 million to build and up to $100,000 a year to operate, he says.

"This is the kind of thing that will attract people," Martin says in visionary tones. "This is the kind of thing that will attract the Smithsonian."

Joker in the new law

CONROE, Texas (AP) — State Rep. Rodney Tow knew the state Senate inadvertently left a 1-cent local sales tax in his bill to create a Montgomery County Flood Control District, but did not tell his fellow lawmakers until the bill was signed into law, he said.

"I knew if I said anything they would take it (the sales tax) out, and I felt that would betray my constituency," said Tow, D-Conroe. "So I just let it go through and said I hoped we'd find the funding somehow."

Tow told Montgomery County commissioners he will ask an attorney general to rule whether the sales-tax provision is legal, although he is "99 percent sure" the attorney general will uphold the legality of the provision.

Gov. Mark White signed the bill into law June 17. If the sales-tax provision is deemed legal, Montgomery County voters still must approve forming a flood-control district and implementing the sales tax. No local election will be held if the funding cannot be obtained.

The flood control district would encompass all of Montgomery County, and the sales tax would be used to finance establishment and operation of the district.

Giving credit where credit is overdue

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Like most junk mail, the offer of a new kind of credit card and a "$5,000 line of credit" made no sense at all.

"Pay off all your debts at once," the accompanying letter urged, "and get a fresh start in your fiscal life."

Now why should I want to do that? I have grown to love my creditors. I owe them a lot. Only my creditors are sincerely interested in my welfare. Only my creditors really want me to succeed in life. Only my creditors have a vested interest in my health and well being.

Close family relations and long-time friends fall by time's wayside. They rarely write, seldom keep in touch by telephone. Even the Christmas cards dwindle down to a precious few.

My creditors are always there, faithful in their professional fashion.

They worry when I go off on a long trip. They fret if my career turns sour. They are genuinely concerned if my house catches fire or if there is water in the basement. They want me to drive safely, eat and drink moderately, get lots of exercise and keep those payments coming in.

When I'm feeling lonely, rejected, inadequate, my spirits suddenly soar at the thought of someone sitting there in a swivel chair near the massive steel vault door with fingers steepled together wondering how old Hugh is hacking it today. My creditors are caring, greed-oriented professionals, who would be genuinely jolted if misfortune befell me.

The insurance agent's nervous smile, the undertaker's measuring stare, my doctor's sighing shrugs don't warm my heart's cockles like an overdue reminder from the friendly chaps down at the bank. They have an interest in me and I in them that is almost biblical and covered by the federal banking laws.

"Neither a borrower nor a lender be," Polonius told his son Laertes, "for loan oft loses both itself and friend, and borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry." But then this windy old bore never had a friend at Chase Manhattan, reckoned not with government loans to students and had little idea how a little benign borrowing can dull the cutting edge of wifery.

For credit lines, I prefer to take my text from that wily Frenchman Francois Rabelais: "croyez que chose divine est prester; debvoir est vertu heroique." For those like me who do not have the benefits of a bilingual Swiss bank account, this translates to: "Believe me, it is a godlike thing to lend; to owe is a heroic virtue."

Every day in a heroic way I make gods of my creditors.

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem petty to some, but it bothers me a great deal.

My name is "Barbara" — not "Barb" or "Barbie" — and "Barbara" is the way I want to be addressed. I suppose the problem is that I do not hesitate to tell those who call me "Barb" or "Barbie" that I prefer to be called "Barbara."

I have a friend who tells me that when I insist on being called "Barbara," I come off as haughty and arrogant, which drives people (especially men) away. She says I should try to overcome this "psychological hang-up" because it creates a negative impression.

I can't help it. I hate being called "Barbie" — or worse yet, "Barb" — so why should I put up with it?

I can't hang a sign around my neck. What do you think? CALL ME BARBARA

DEAR BARBARA: It's perfectly all right to let people know that you prefer to be called "Barbara," but do so diplomatically (without "barbs"). And if someone should slip, don't make a big deal out of it. A rose by any other name is still fraught with thorns.

DEAR ABBY: For my wife's 40th birthday, the girls in her office gave her a sleepshirt with Tom Selleck's face on it.

She thought it was a terrific gift, but I told her no way would I sleep with Tom Selleck, so if she wanted to sleep with him she could forget me.

She thought I was kidding, but when she realized I was serious she stuck "Tom" away in a drawer, but she's still sulking about it.

Care to comment?

JOE IN CLOVIS, N.M.

DEAR JOE: Don't get mad — get even. Find a sleepshirt with Morgan Fairchild's face on it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 62 and retired, I'm 55 and still work outside the home. Whenever I start making plans (once a year) to visit my parents for 10 days, he starts the old routine, complaining about headaches, stomach pains, etc. Then he sulks and acts hurt until I feel so guilty I hate to leave him.

In our 38 years of marriage, every time we have visited my parents together it has been a disaster. He does not get along with them, and they have never cared much for him. He doesn't even want to visit his own parents or our children who live in another state. He hates to travel and says if they want to see him, they can come here.

He keeps telling me that I am the only person who means anything to him and he thinks I should feel the same about him. I can't make him understand that I am not choosing my parents over him, I just need to see them once a year — especially now that they're elderly.

Please give me some encouraging advice, Abby.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: You have no reason to feel guilty. Your husband is not incapacitated, nor is he "ill." He sounds like a spoiled, selfish child.

If this has been going on for 38 years, he's not apt to change, so if you are really plagued with guilt for leaving him, counseling could help you overcome these inappropriate feelings. A local mental health clinic offers this confidential help. Fees are based upon ability to pay.

DEAR ABBY: We are an elderly married couple and lately have been receiving mail from our son addressed "The Johnsons" (name changed) instead of "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson."

We feel that this shows a lack of respect for his father and mother. He should address the letters "Mr. and Mrs. Johnson." "The Johnsons" may be all right for friends, but not for his mother and father.

Are we wrong for feeling this way? Thank you.

MR. AND MRS. H. JOHNSON

DEAR MR. AND MRS. JOHNSON: Do you realize how lucky you are to have no bigger problems than this? Please let me tell you: In my mail today I heard from an elderly couple who are now raising four grandchildren, all under 10, because both parents were killed in a hotel fire away from home.

I heard from at least 20 Michigan family men who have not worked in over a year. I heard from a 24-year-old woman who after three miscarriages had an infant, healthy and happy until she suddenly became a victim of crib death. Another letter from a 12-year-old girl who just learned she was pregnant!

And you are worried about the lack of respect shown to you because of the way your son addresses your letters?

You ought to thank God you have a son who is able to write, and cares enough about you to do so.

Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Party pasta-shrimp summer salad

PASTA-SHRIMP salad goes a long way on summer menu.

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Pasta salads are to the summer born. However, it took many years for most of us to get beyond the standard macaroni salad we learned to love at family picnics.

Combinations of fish, meat, fruits and vegetables and pasta plus a variety of dressings turn this easy-to-make dish into something special.

A seafood combo includes pasta shells, shrimp, peas, and celery. It's 400 calories per serving.

PARTY PASTA-SHRIMP SALAD

- 1 pound small macaroni shells
- 1 to 6 quarts boiling water
- 2 cups frozen peas, thawed

- 3/4 cup chopped celery (optional)
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh dill
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon dry mustard

Gradually add macaroni shells and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water, drain again.

While macaroni is cooking, combine shrimp, peas, celery, if desired, and dill in large bowl, set aside. In a jar or bowl, blend together oil, lemon juice and seasonings. Pour over shrimp mixture. Add cooled shells and toss to coat well. Cover and chill until serving time. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 8 servings.

FOOD

Nectarines: beyond dessert

Nectarines, soon to move into their peak season, combine well with meats, poultry and vegetables for taste-piquing dishes. Their use goes beyond that of a dessert treat.

While nectarines are juicy and ripe this season, try them in a noodle dish. It's easy to do and full of nutrients.

NOODLES NECTARINE

- 8 ounces egg noodles
- 2 quarts boiling salted water
- 2 fresh nectarines
- 1/4 cup margarine

- or butter
- 1 tablespoon chicken-seasoned stock base
- 1/4 cup slivered almonds, roasted
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese, if desired

Cook noodles in rapidly boiling salted water until tender. Slice nectarines.

Drain noodles and return to saucepan. Place over very low heat, add butter and chicken stock base; toss with fork until butter is melted. Add almonds and nectarines; toss to mix well. Spoon into a serving dish or platter. Sprinkle with grated cheese, if desired. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 to 6 servings.

Refreshing apple snow

An attractive fruit dessert with a chilled, refreshing topping satisfies the American sweet tooth. The latter, at times, seems to be running out of control. Look at the number of cake, cookie and sweet shops opening throughout the country. And these do not include the special bake shops in supermarkets that do a booming business.

An apple snow concoction relies upon natural fruit flavoring plus a touch of vanilla for its sweetness. Serve alone or with fresh fruit in season.

APPLE SNOW

- 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup apple juice
- 1 1/2 cups unsweetened applesauce
- 1/4 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 2 egg whites
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Soften gelatin in 1/4 cup apple juice. Heat remaining apple juice to boiling. Remove from heat. Stir in softened gelatin; continue stirring until completely dissolved. Stir in applesauce and lemon peel. Chill until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally. Transfer to large mixing bowl. Add egg whites and vanilla. Beat at high speed until light and fluffy and mixture begins to hold shape, about 5 to 7 minutes. Spoon into a 1 1/2-quart serving dish. Chill until firm. Serve with fresh berries, as desired. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 8 servings.

Lies still plague business

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

Almost a year ago Proctor & Gamble (P&G) officials filed suit against seven people for circulating "false and malicious" statements about the company and calling for a boycott of P&G products.

An eighth lawsuit, filed in April of this year, is still pending against Michael Hamlett of Pensacola, Fla., a high-ranking Amway product distributor.

The defendants were reportedly telling others and distributing literature which said that P&G supported satanism and that its trademark, a moon and stars, is a symbol of satanism or devil worship.

At the time the suits were filed, July 20, the company officials were receiving as many as 15,000 calls a month about the rumors, said Linda Ulrey, company spokesman of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Recently P&G attorneys dropped seven of the lawsuits after the defendants signed consent forms saying they will no longer spread such statements, Ulrey said.

Many of the rumors were traced to persons associated with Amway Products, she said. "But that is not to reflect on Amway. Just some of the high ranking distributors came across the information (found in the rumors) and used them for their reasons."

No money was exchanged although an unnamed amount for damages was asked for in the original suits.

"Our primary purpose was to make people stop these rumors," Ulrey explained. "I don't know what their personal motives were, but I think they obviously believed what they were saying at the time."

The rumors described as "totally false" by Ulrey, still "crop up" around the country, she said, but not in the numbers that were battled by the company last summer.

Although sales of Proctor & Gamble products were not noticeably affected, she added, the company still spent much time and expense dispelling the rumors.

"They had no major effect on sales, more of a distraction to the business," she said. "We were spending time on the rumors rather than doing things that would further the business."

The Proctor & Gamble symbol was originally used in 1851 to identify crates of Star Candles, an early P&G product, as they were shipped down the Ohio River. The symbol evolved into a cluster of 13 stars, representing the 13 original states, and a man-in-the-moon profile, a popular fancy of the time.

"We registered the moon and stars symbol with the U.S. Patent Office in 1882," Ulrey said. "Our moon and stars trademark represents only P&G and has no other connection. Any resemblance with any other symbol is purely coincidental."

Stories about an P&G executive appearing on a talk show are also totally false, company officials say. Producers for programs mentioned in connection with the rumor have confirmed no one from P&G has ever appeared on their shows.

To substantiate this statement, Ulrey mailed copies of letters to The Pampa News from the producers of ABC's 20-20, The Merv Griffin Show, CBS's 60 Minutes and the Phil Donahue Show all saying that no company official had been a guest on their respective programs.

Also, company officials say neither the Unification Church nor the Reverend Moon holds shares in P&G.

1.  This crude cross, painted by a wharf hand on a wooden box of Star brand candles around 1851, was the beginning of the "Moon and Stars."
2.  In time, the cross developed into this encircled star—still merely part of the rivermen's shipping "sign language."
3.  The first standard trademark adopted by the Company was this roughly drawn crescent enclosing 13 stars.
4.  The 1882 model "Moon and Stars" had been refined to this point, and registered in the U.S. Patent Office.
5.  By 1902, our trademark, still basically the same, displayed some of the gingerbread frolics typical of the turn-of-the-century.
6.  Around 1920 the trademark became more simplistic still, however, there was no fundamental change from the original design.
7.  Finally, in 1930, a sculptor was commissioned by P&G to design today's authorized version of the famous "Moon and Stars."

History Wall to be dedicated Saturday

A dedication ceremony and unveiling of the History Wall, the latest addition to the White Deer Land Museum here, is planned Saturday, June 25, at 2 p.m. at the museum, 116 S. Cuyler.

The History Wall presents a comparative view of events occurring in Gray County, the United States and the world. Historians for the project included JoAnn Jones, Jane Steele and museum staff members. Jan Ragsdale painted the mural, and commentator is William J. Ragsdale.

Dedication of the wall is expected to be brief, with time following for a visit of other parts of the museum.

Songwriter gives positive outlook

NEW YORK (AP)—"What I'm trying to do is give kids a positive outlook on life through music," says Stephen Star, whose records deal with such subjects as prejudice, drug abuse and peer pressure.

"But I'm not lecturing at all. They're really fun albums," he adds of the two—one rock and one country—he has already produced in the Rainbows and Stars series, with a third album in the works.

The songs, aimed at youngsters from 4 to 14, are sung by professionals with band backup. The kids enjoy humming along with the music and absorb the message without realizing it, he explains, pointing out, for example, that the word "prejudice" is never even mentioned in a song which says, in part:

"I know I'm different by myself, I don't need to hear it from somebody else; I spend my time all alone; Why do those people need to throw stones?"

Among the themes of the 20 songs already recorded, for which Star has written the music and the lyrics, are friendship, feelings, discovery, patriotism, respect, happiness, studying and self-esteem. The music, he says, is "the kind children want to hear, and the lyrics are the kind they need to hear and their parents want them to hear."

"No one is really addressing kids," the bearded, 30-year-old resident of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said in an interview. "They need to know about their own worth, to feel good about themselves. I want kids to know there's reality in life but that they can also follow their dreams."

"I've found music is a universal language," says Star, who has been playing drums and singing since he was 12. "When I was in the Air Force stationed in Spain, I was in a band with three Spaniards who spoke no English. I sang and they played and we got along great."

It was while he was in the military that Star, who majored in sociology and psychology at Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music in Winchester, Va., served as a drug and alcohol counselor and human relations mediator.

"I saw the problems," he remembers. "I thought, isn't it sad all the neuroses adults have because nobody took care of them when they were kids. I myself came from a bad background. My family has a history of drugs and alcohol and separation and divorce. That's the whole reason I'm in this."

Star, who is married but has no children, regularly goes around with a tape recorder and interviews kids in playgrounds, shopping centers, wherever they gather, to find out what troubles them.

"One of the things I found out is that a best friend moving away can be a major problem." And that aspect of a child's life became the subject of a song.

When young people have a feeling of their own worth, they won't be open to peer pressure, believes Star, who puts it this way in a song:

"I've got 20 years ahead of me; When it comes to the future I hold the key; It's up to me the life I lead; The things I want versus the things I need; I thank God that I'm alive; To be my best I will strive; My life is more than what I see on TV; And what I do is really up to me."

Jam and jellies class planned for Thursday

"Easy Jams and Jellies," the second of the free Easy Living Programs sponsored by the Gray County Extension office, is to begin at 2 p.m., Thursday, June 23, at the Energas Flame Room, featuring Irene Keating, Potter County extension agent, as speaker.

Keating plans to discuss preparation techniques for jams and jellies, testing for good jell, and making sugar free jams and jellies. She will also answer questions and bring some good recipes for homemade jams and jellies.

The program is open to the public.

Grocery store chain to help Olympic team

Safeway Stores, Inc., has been named an official sponsor of the United States Olympic team. Officials announced they will also provide food products for American athletes at the Olympic complex in Colorado Springs through 1984.

"Although other governments fund their Olympic entrants, the U. S. team is supported entirely by contributions from foundations, corporations and individuals. We are proud to be able to contribute food and money to our Olympic athletes," said Forrest Woolery, vice president and division manager.

For each half gallon of Lucerne ice cream sold through 1984, Safeway will donate to the Olympic team.

Safeway and Alcoa are also repeating last year's successful "Turn Aluminum into Gold" can recycling program. For each pound of aluminum beverage cans recycled at Safeway during June, Alcoa will donate to the Olympic team. Last year this joint effort raised $310,000.

Groundball Scramble

Bobby Grich (4) and Tim Foli of the California Angels both scramble for a ball and threw Bell out in the fifth inning, but grounder off the bat of Buddy Bell of the Texas Rangers. Grich snagged the ball and the Rangers won, 3-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Rangers win, 3-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Doug Rader likes what he sees in the starting lineup of the Texas Rangers.

His counterpart, California Manager John McNamara, wishes he could see his starting lineup on the field at the same time.

Rader's Rangers won a 3-2 decision over the injury-riddled Angels Tuesday night with Larr Parrish's bat, which produced a home run and two RBIs.

"I've never seen Parrish swing the bat like this. Never," said Rader. "I've never seen him hit with such strength."

McNamara's Angels not only lost the game, but also lost Reggie Jackson for three to five days with bruised ribs.

"I'm a little sore. There's no break. There's no fracture. It's just a pretty good bruise," said Jackson after returning to the stadium from Arlington Memorial Hospital.

"I've got to play it by ear. I'd say I'll probably be out three to five days. That's better than three to five weeks."

Jackson crashed into a fence while chasing a foul pop-up and was carried from the field on a stretcher.

Jackson joins Rick Burleson, Rod Carew, Doug DeCinces, Juan Beniquez, Bruce Kison and Geoff Zahn as injured Angels.

"I'd just like to put the lineup we projected in spring training on the field for 10 days and see what would happen," said McNamara.

"I've never had this many injuries (on a ballclub) at one time," he said.

Parrish, who began the game with a .285 batting average, missed eight games with an ankle injury but returned to right field Monday night.

In his last two games, he's had seven hits in nine at-bats and two home runs. Tuesday night, he collected his 12th homer, eighth game-winning RBI and his 31st and 32nd RBIs.

"This is definitely my best streak because I'm getting more hits," Parrish said. "Before, I was hitting the ball hard but I was only hitting about .260."

George Wright and Wayne Tolleson both extended their hitting streaks to 13 games.

Play day results

LaVonna Dalton and Lennie Schneider of Pampa had the low net score of 80 during a Panhandle Women's Play Day Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club.

Joyce Brown and Maxine Orsmy of Phillips tied for second at 66.

Huber Golf Course won the Play Day with a 586 while Pampa Country Club placed third at 593.

Lowrey, Ferrel lead area cowboys in state rodeo

SEGUIN—Pampa's Lee Lowrey teamed with Memphis' Mike Ferrel in the team roping event Monday night to take the lead among Panhandle-area rodeo performers in the Texas High School Rodeo Association state finals.

Lowrey and Ferrel are second overall with a time of 11.762 seconds, led only by Trey Pope of Austin and Danny Bermea of Hondo who were clocked at 9.783.

The rodeo is scheduled to continue through Saturday.

Three Canadian performers placed Tuesday night.

They were Daylin Hash, steer wrestling, 28.525, 16th; Larry Longhofer, steer wrestling, 30.311, 17th, and Danny Johnson, tie-down calf roping, 12.064, 11th.

Each performer will have two attempts in his respective events before Saturday night's scheduled finals. The two scores will be averaged together and the performers with the top 10 averages in each event will qualify for the finals.

The top four finishers in each event will advance to the National Finals Rodeo in Douglas, Wyo. next month.

King prepared for Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — When Billie Jean King captured her first Wimbledon title in 1961, Jimmy Connors was just 9 years old and Chris Evert-Lloyd two years younger.

Connors, now 30, is attempting to defend his All-England Lawn Tennis Championships title here on the fabled grass courts, while the 28-year-old Lloyd is going after her fourth consecutive Grand Slam tournament crown.

King, meanwhile, is still following her serve to the net, putting away volleys and many of her younger opponents as she tries to increase her Wimbledon record of titles to 21.

"Chris and Martina (Navratilova, the defending women's champion) have earned the right to be the favorites here, but I know I have prepared myself as best I can," said King, a winner on opening day. "In fact, I was ready to play last week."

Last year, King delighted the crowds — many of whom were around to see her collect the women's doubles title in 1961 — as she reached the semifinals before being ousted by Lloyd.

The woman who replaced King as queen of tennis, Lloyd still is wary of the "Old Lady" of the tour.

"I think she is a threat on grass," said Lloyd. "They say she is in better shape and a good frame of mind."

"I think she could do some damage. But she's in my quarter (of the draw), so I hope not. But her game is suited for grass."

Like King, Connors has returned to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs. He first won here in 1974, then gained his second title last year.

"I have to work harder now that I am older," Connors said. "It takes two hours of hard work to discipline myself instead of one hour. I am working harder, but I enjoy it more."

All three were to play second-round matches today. King taking on Beth Herr. Lloyd meeting Marcela Mesker of the Netherlands and Connors playing Wally Masur of Australia.

Lloyd and Navratilova breezed past their opening-round foes, Lloyd taking just 55 minutes and Navratilova an astounding 32 minutes.

Second seeded, Lloyd stopped fellow American Alycia Moulton 6-2, 6-1. The top-seeded Navratilova, who has lost just four matches since the beginning of 1982, crushed South African Beverly Mould 6-1, 6-0.

Fourth-seeded Tracy Austin was Tuesday's major casualty, never taking the court. The two-time U.S. Open champion withdrew prior to her first-round match because of a pulled back muscle.

Another seed, No. 6 Bettina Bunge of West Germany, was upset by Christiane Jolissaint of Switzerland 3-6, 7-6, 11-9.

Houston snaps losing streak

HOUSTON (AP) — When Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott gets his rhythm, he's hard to stop.

"I have a high regard for Scott as a pitcher and a person," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "When he gets on a roll and gets his rhythm, he's like a freight train."

Scott, 3-3, allowed only six hits Tuesday night as the Astros shut out the Braves 5-0 in a National League game at the Astrodome and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Scott, who came to the Astros in an early season trade with the New York Mets, used good control, a sinking fastball and three double plays to secure the victory.

"This was my best game with the Astros result-wise," Scott said. "I got a lot of ground balls and on Astroturf that makes a lot of difference in getting double plays. My velocity was good and my fastball was dropping and forcing them to hit ground balls."

Houston Manager Bob Lillis agreed with Scott. "This was definitely his best effort as an Astro," Lillis said.
