U.S. confronting Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the administration wants to keep its enemies in Central America confused, it deserves high marks for its performance this past week.

The Sandinista government of Nicaragua, in particular, must be wondering what to make of the mix of olive branches and gunboat diplomacy served up by the White House and the State Department

As part of the administration's effort to push the Sandinistas toward more moderate policies, officials announced plans for a large-scale, extended U.S. military presence near the Honduran border with Nicaragua. Defense Department officials also announced U.S. naval forces would conduct routine exercises in the Pacific and Atlantic oceans on either side of Nicaragua.

Administration sources revealed Saturday that the Pentagon has dusted the training of Saivadoran troops that includes as one possibility a doubling of U.S. advisers, now limited to 55, and sent it to the White House.

There were reports the fleet movements and military exercises were designed to give the president the option of ordering a military quarantine of Nicaragua. Coupled with those movements was

U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick's tacit call on Tuesday for the ouster of the Sandinista government and President Reagan's statement on Thursday that it would be "extremely difficult" to achieve peace in Central America so long as the Sandinistas remained in power.

But there was a different message on Wednesday when the State Department and the White House appeared to break somewhat from the policy of uniform hostility toward Nicaragua's leftist leadership was praised by administration spokesmen as a "positive step" in that it acknowledges "the need to address external support for insurgencies and terrorist groups.

The administration found hope in the Nicaraguan statement because, until then, the Sandinistas had seemed to argue that the only problem of consequence in Central America was the U.S.-backed insurgency against the Managua government.

Now the Nicaraguans for the first time are showing interest in dealing with what, for the United States, is the core issue in Central America -Nicaragua's alleged support for the Salvadoran rebels

The day after the administration's expression of interest in the Nicaraguan proposal, special U.S. envoy Richard Stone set out on another peace mission to the Central American region, his third since being sworn in

More U.S. military advisers for Salvador suggested by Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has revived and sent to the White House options for stepped-up training of Salvadoran troops that include as one possibility a doubling of U.S. military advisers to that country. administration sources said Saturday.

The options also were said to include a slight loosening of the restrictions currently binding those advisers.

The United States currently observes a self-imposed limit of 55 military advisers in El Salvador at any one time In addition, U.S. medics are helping to upgrade Salvadoran military medical services, and 100 U.S. troops are training some 2,400 Salvadorans in

One source, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name, noted that the Pentagon for two years had been pondering various scenarios to increase the effectiveness of U.S. training of the Salvadoran military for its fight against anti-government guerrillas.

The new administration concentration on Central America brought the list of options to the front burner and led to its resubmission to the White House, he said. "The idea has been advanced recently. Nothing has been settled," he said. "There are options, and some go has high as doubling. Another source, who also requested anonymity, said he did not know if the options paper had yet been presented to President Reagan The disclosures came on a day when by the possibility of a naval blockade of Nicaragua Administration officials denied that a blockade was planned. Edwards last week toured embattled Central American countries.

policies, said he was deeply disturbed

Another recommendation was said to call for permitting U.S. advisers to accompany their charges "into the country," instead of tying them to cities and important military

Currently, U.S. troops may not go into combat with Salvadorans or even into areas where they are likely to be fired upon. The source made no suggestion that the advisers would be permitted to accompany Salvadoran units on combat missions

Iranian troops capture Iraqi fort

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian forces drove 11 miles into northern Iraq Saturday, capturing the major Haj Omran garrison and 30 other posts and killing or wounding 3,600 Iraqi soldiers, the Tehran command said. The offensive extended the battlefront to the Kurdish mountains bordering Turkey.

Tehran radio said Iranian forces were advancing from captured mountain peaks "to liberate Iraq from the claws' of President Saddam Hussein An Iraqi armed forces communique issued in Baghdad said fighting was "fierce." and claimed Iranian losses 'amounted to well over 600 killed and a large number of wounded.

In support of the ground forces, Iraqi planes and helicopters were "scoring direct and effective hits and inflicting massive losses on enemy personnel and vehicles," said the communique

It said an Iranian fighter plane was shot down, and many Iranian soldiers and civilians were defecting

Western reporters were barred from the front, and there was no independent confirmation of the conflicting claims.

Iraq invaded Iran 35 months ago in an attempt to capture the Iranian east coast of the Shatt al-Arab estuary and succeeded in capturing a hugh swath of border territory. But the tide of battle began turning earlier this year with a series of Iranian counter-offensives and thrusts across the Iraqi border.

The Haj Omran garrison, 31/2 miles inside Iraq and "the most important objective" of the new offensive, fell to the advancing Iranian forces after a day-long battle, said an Iranian

broadcast by Baghdad radio

However, the overall Iranian objective appeared to be to rid the region of Iraqi-supported Kurdish rebels who have been battling the Tehran government for autonomy. Another likely objective might be to stretch the already overextended Iraqi forces and to attempt to push deeper into Iraq down the Rowanduz Valley toward the Kirkuk oilfields.

military communique carried by Iran's

Islamic Republic News Agency

Among the successes claimed by Iranian communiques was the downing of two Iraqi aircraft in dogfights and the capture of 7,794-foot Mount King, which Iraq used as an artillery base to shell Piranshar and other Iranian towns and villages across the border.

The fighting was more than 150 miles north of the previous northernmost sector of the 300-mile battlefront and about 40 miles south of the Turkish frontier.

and Lee Wainscott were determined. They weren't going to let a run-in with would-be bank robbers and a broken leg stop them.

The former Miss Castillo and Wainscott exchanged wedding vows Saturday in a Houston hospital, just one day after Miss Castillo suffered a broken leg when her car collided with a getaway car containing two armed men fleeing a bungled robbery.

"It was just like it was going to be except Linda had to be in a horizontal position," said her new husband about an hour after the wedding. "We had planned a small, informal wedding

About 10 people crowded into the hospital room to witness the ceremony, Wainscott said Wainscott, 31, a lease broker for an

It's so hot they're stealing air conditioners;

By EDWARD MILLER

Associated Press Writer The Midwest and South were baked by a heat wave for the 15th consecutive day Saturday, pushing the nationwide death toll to 87 and causing emergency shelters and shopping malls to fill with people seeking cool surroundings. "People seem to be enjoying our air conditioning, which we have kept on full blast throughout this hot spell," said spokesman Dan Burns of Northlake Mall near Atlanta, which was mobbed Saturday. The heat caused a rash of air conditioner thefts in Louisville, Ky., and prompted some Georgia horse trainers to turn on fans The latest deaths reported Saturday were six in Louisville, Ky., four in Chicago, and three each in St. Louis, Ohio and Four elderly residents of a Chicago nursing home died after the building's air conditioning system failed in Friday's 100-degree temperatures, and deputy health commissioner Phillip Davis said it was "a reasonable assumption" that the deaths were heat-related.

Houston bank.

Three people were found dead in their beds Saturday at the Center for Human Development and a fourth died shortly after City Health Department investigators arrived, according to William Ware, chief aide to Mayor Harold Washington

Ware said three other patients in the 225-bed facility were hospitalized and "critically ill," and about 200 patients were evacuated from the home.

St. Louis was punished by a fifth day of temperatures above 100 degrees Saturday. The deaths of two elderly women and an elderly man there and the deaths of four more elderly people Friday night in East St. Louis, Ill., pushed the metropolitan

In Dayton, Ohio, officials at St. Efizabeth's Hospital said a man who lived at the downtown YMCA - which has no air conditioning — died after his body temperature rose to 108. Two other old people with apparent heat stroke and cardiac arrest also died, one in Dayton and one in Columbus, officials

The heat wave is the worst since 1980, when nearly 1,300 deaths were attributed to high temperatures, most of them in Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

St. Louis and St. Louis County remained under a heat emergency Saturday and 18 air-conditioned resting spots dubbed "cooling-off centers" - stayed open around the clock.

The Rev. Larry Rice of the New Life Evangelistic Center in St. Louis said he had about 700 more electric fans to distribute. He already has given away more than 1,000 fans. The St. Louis Rabbinical Association started a drive to buy fans and air conditioners to be distributed by city relief officials.

at the rate of about 200 a day, causing water pressure to plunge in some St. Louis neighborhoods.

In Georgia, where the heat wave has claimed 11 lives, highs hit 100 again Saturday. Electricity demand surged so much that the Georgia Power Co. did what most utilities do in winter - instituted emergency bill-paying plans to stretch out Showers and thunderstorms hit Iowa and Nebraska early Saturday, piling hail 4 inches deep near Bushnell, Neb. But when the sun came up, the states continued to swelter.

The heat wave touched off a crime wave - in all conditioners - in Louisville. Police said thieves have made off with seven window air conditioners from homes and churches

Kentucky Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins declared a state of emergency in Louisville late Friday at the request of Mayor Harvey Sloane, who said hospitals were running out of space for heat victims.

Thirty-eight people were treated for heat-related illnesses at St. Louis hospitals Friday night and Saturday. Youngsters trying to cool off continued to open fire hydrants

Higher interest rates coming?

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Reserve Board's fresh monetary policy guidelines, which caused some confusion when announced last week, are sparking differences of opinion ng economists trying to sort out their impact on the economy.

"He's very cleverly evasive," says private economist Robert Gough of ederal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who revealed the new guidelines during two days of ngressional hearings last week.

That has left economists divided over whether the Federal Reserve's actions will lead to higher or lower interest rates in the coming months.

Thomas Thomson, chief economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank, thinks short-term interest rates "will stay where they are for a month or two." And, he says, there's a one-in-three chance they may be lower by the end of the year.

"We are nearing the end of upward pressures on interest rates," said Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University in Atlanta. But Martin Feldstein, the president's chief economic adviser, said, "Further increases in interest rates may continue in the months ahead. Feldstein, who called the federal reserve's moderately restraining actions appropriate, added in testimony to the Senate Banking Committee:

Reagan issues national life-saving appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan issued whose own baby has died in an accident or is sadly a nationwide radio appeal Saturday to save the life of Ashley Bailey, the 11-month-old Texas girl who is awaiting a liver transplant.

"All 11 pounds of her are in critical condition at the University of Minnsota Hospital in Minneapolis," Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast, which was taped in advance. "She is now fed intravenously and has two or three weeks to live unless she receives a liver transplant."

Ashley's mother, 19-year-old Annette Bailey Gossett of Clyde, said after hearing the president's message: "It was great, it was really great. I can't believe it. We felt like crying - everybody in the Saying she hoped the White House appeal will finally bring the liver Ashley needs, Mrs. Gossett added: "No way will we give up. We've come this far. We can't give up."

Her husband, Greg, and other family members listened to the president with her in Minneapolis. Reagan said he learned of Ashley's plight in May from U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford.

"What she needed then and needs now is a donor. Time is running out. I'm issuing a plea to the nation to find Ashley a donor. Once one is found an Air Force jet is standing ready in case immediate commercial transportation is not available," he

"I urge any of you who know of a possible liver donor for Ashley to call the Living Bank in Houston at 800-528-2971."

Reagan called Mrs. Gossett during a visit to Minneapolis and called her again recently, said Jamie Clayton, a Stenholm spokeswoman.

In his second call, "the president said, 'I'd like to do something for you but I don't know what to do," Ms. Clayton said. She said Mrs. Gossett told Reagan, "Mr. President, I'd like to let the people know that my baby is dying."

Ashley has biliary artresia, an incurable disease that hardens the liver. She has been hospitalized during the nation wide search for a donor.

Reagan noted in his radio talk that "there are many other children like Ashley ... Right here in the White House we have an electrician, Stuart Thomas, whose daughter, Candi, another 11-month-old girl, is waiting for a transplant."

Reagan said two other children needing liver transplants had died this week because organ donors could not be found in time. He identified the children as 9-month-old Courtney Davis of Beaumont, Texas, and Michelle Heckard, an 11-year-old girl from Shenandoah Heights, Pa

He said the helicopter squadron at Andrews Air Force Base, just outside Washington, has been alerted to transport Candi and her mother to Pittsburgh, Pa., as soon as a suitable liver is found. Reagan urged all Americans to fill out donor cards, signifying that in case of death they are willing to donate body organs for transplants.

"America has faced shortages in the past of everything from nylons during World War II to oil in the 1970s, but modern medical science has provided us with a new shortage, a shortage of living organs — livers, hearts, lungs, eyes, kidneys,' he said

Earlier this month, thousands of mailgrams were sent out to hospitals around the country in an effort to locate a liver donor for Ashley.

Linda Bailey, Ashley's grandmother, said Friday that the child had reached a "small plateau" in her condition, which had been deteriorating.

Mrs. Bailey said "although she has lost a little more weight and still won't eat, it looks like she's stopped sliding downhill for now."

"I know that Ashley is reaching people," Mrs. Bailey said, "and I'm sure all of the attention has brought in more donor organs. I want every single one of them to be used, I want all the children and adults who need them to get one. And sooner or later one's got to come along for Ashley."

Bell asks for split of record rate hike case

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell has asked the Public Utility Commission to consider its record $1.7 billion rate hike request in two separate cases, one mainly related to charges for long-distance access under a federal divestiture order.

Bell filed the request Friday along with a supplemental report requested by a PUC hearing examiner who had called the information filed with the original request "deficient."

The phone company asked the PUC to divide the rate request into one case containing the $753 million Bell says it needs for long-distance access, and another comprised of the $991 million in additional charges Bell says it needs to have for local service, service connections and directory

CAN WE UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE ALIKE?

A lot of people would answer this question in the negative. And they also imply that it makes no difference whether we understand the Bible alike or not. In other words, we can all be saved even in our diversities and

The apostle Paul says, "Wherefore be ye not foolish, but understand what the will of the Lord is" (Ephesians 5:17). Also, "---whereby, when ye read, ye can perceive my understanding in the mystery of Christ;" (Ephesians 3:4). Would the Lord exhort and admonish us to do something which we are unable to do? I think not. God exhorted Israel to 'reason" with Him in order to the cleansing of their sins (Isaiah 1:18). The reasoning was in order to understand God and, thus Israel would respond in repentance.

The same is true today with us. Jesus told His disciples. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:19-20). Would Jesus have emphasized strict adherence to His teaching if it would make no difference whether we understood it or obeyed it? Further, if we can-not all understand the Bible alike, then Jesus was praying for an impossibility when He prayed that all believers might be one (John 17:20-21).

Yes, we can all understand the Bible alike IF we are interested, first, last and always, in learning and doing God's will instead of furthering and enhancing human doc-

Gipper gypped

Remember the three - for - one tax deal of 1982? Ronald Reagan, pressured by Congress to "do something about the deficit," reluctantly agreed to support a record of $98 billion in new taxes over three years - but was promised in return that the boys on the Hill would trim a whopping $280 billion in spending.

Congress still has one budget cycle and part of another to go, but to date its performance has been poor. Of the $280 billion in cuts sought, only $47 billion have been achieved, according to figures supplied by the House Budget Committee.

Predictably, the lawmakers are doing better in some areas than in others. For example, of $7.8 billion in defense cuts scheduled for 1983, $8.6 billion were achieved. Savings of $14.3 billion in reduced payments on the national debt also have been achieved - but thanks to the Federal Reserve's decision to ease down interest rates, not to any real cutting by Congress.

On the social side of the ledger, performance has been dismal. Of $35 billion in cuts from discretionary social programs, Congress has made $100 million, or less than 1 percent. Of $31 billion in entitlement trims, $5.7 billion approved. Of $26 billion in federal pay savings, $4.5

All of which caused the president to wonder aloud recently how it is that Congress can continue to bellyache about the "Reagan deficits." The real wonder is that the president expected Congress to keep its word in the first place. The Gipper was gypped on this deal. He will keep that fact in mind, one hopes, as the battle of the federal

Casualties overlooked for non-nùclear power

Seven coal miners were killed in an explosion in a mine shaft near McClure, Va., on June 22. This was the worst mining accident in Virginia in 25 years.

The news coverage accorded to such a tragedy in the coal fields is a point at issue with the Atomic Industrial Forum, a public information organization financed by the nuclear industry. The AIF complains that the news media often pay more attention to the risks associated with nuclear power than they do to the actual deaths and distribution of energy from other sources.

To make its point, the AIF passes along a list of major energy - related fatal accidents in 1982 that might have escaped attention amid news about the perils of nuclear power. Here is the list, including the number of persons killed in each accident:

Jan. 17, freighter rammed gas pipeline in Mosel River (5 dead); Jan. 21, coal mine explosion in Kentucky (7 dead); Jan. 21, oil line explosion in Mexico (8 dead); Feb. 15, oil rig sank off Newfoundland (84 dead); March 25, coal pile collapsed at Calcutta (18 dead); April 5, coal mine explosion in Poland (15 dead); April 7, collision between tanker truck and bus in San Francisco (7 dead); May 10, coal mine explosion in Yugoslavia (39 dead): June 18, coal mine accident in Poland (10 dead); Oct. 6, hydroelectric dam collapse in Libya (200 dead); Oct. 6, coal mine tunnel collapse in Poland (6 dead); Mid -October, oil refinery explosion at Port Arthur (5 dead); Nov. 2, tanker collision in Afghanistan (1,100 dead); Nov. 3. coal mine explosion in Japan (5 dead); Nov. 29, coal mine explosion in Poland (18 dead), and Dec. 21, oil fired power station explosion in Venezuela (145 dead.)

That adds up to a death toll of 1,662 for the year. The AIF would make the point, of course, that this compares with an extraordinary safety record in the nuclear power industry. There has never been a fatal accident in the operation of commercial nuclear power

Compare the national news media's coverage of the energy - related disastors listed above and their coverage of the Three - Mile Island nuclear mishap in March 1979. The 1,662 lives that were sacrificed to satisfy the world's demand for energy last year drew scant attention from the national news media, except as one day stories if the pictures were good. Three Mile Island drew swarms of reporters spreading fear and half truths. Looking back, their performance was embarrassing. Radiation released into the atmosphere threatened no one. In fact, levels near the plant shortly after the mishap were lower than levels occurring naturally in other areas of the world. The biggest strike against nuclear power seems to be our natural fear of the unknown, in this case fed by the national news media. The AIF reminds us that our attention is continually being directed toward the risks of nuclear power when there is no reason to be more concerned about the safety standards in the coal, oil and gas industries

"FIRE!"

Is U.S. losing trump card?

By OSCAR COOLEY

The U.S. is great, not because of geographic size, nor of the numbers of wealth of her people, but because of one basic characteristic: her freedom

Many people from all countries have migrated here to enjoy America's freedom. (Or have we retained our freedom because those people who cherish freedom most have migrated here?) Certain of our freedoms antedate most of the immigration - I am thinking of speech. press, religion - but others are just as fundamental. There is the freedom to move. This was taken for granted by the founding fathers. They could settle on the Atlantic coast or they could join a wagon train, crack the whip over the oxen and be on their way through the Alleghenies. Ever since, Americans have moved about at will among the states, never thinking of asking anyone's permission.

From all reports, one does not do that in Soviet Russia. Freedom of enterprise, which means the freedom to choose your own occupation and to enter any kind of legitimate business you prefer. You are free to succeed in your enterprise, or to fail, but whichever occurs you must

John D. Rockefeller chose the oil business and he succeeded hugely. A host of others have exercised the same freedom - and failed. They did not leave even their names.

Freedom of enterprise can also be called the freedom to help oneself. Self - help is an American fundamental. You help your neighbor - yes, and he helps you, but you do not sit back and wait for his help. You yourself are responsible for getting the job done.

Compare this with the current, all too common practice of living off unemployment compensation, plus food stamps, while you wait for the government or some private employer to offer a job at a kind of work you know and at a wage rate commensurate with what you got on your last job.

It cannot be said too often: Labor is like a commodity. In a free market there is always a sale for it if both buyer and seller are flexible and willing to bargain. If the seller insists on too high a price, it may remain unsold a long time. One wonders if the U.S. will retain its reputation for freedom and self - helpfulness. Pick up any newspaper and note how many articles there are about something that is being done by the government - national, state, or local to solve people's problems.

The more government help people get, the less they feel it is necessary or worthwhile to help themselves. Government help discourages self - help.

Note also what a clamor for "protection" is being made — protection from those nasty little Japanese automobiles that have outsold Detroit; protection for the poor little U.S. Steel Corporation, Republic, etc., from Japan Steel, British Steel and other foreign steel companies that are underselling us. This all seems a rather strange role for the "land of the free

Freedom of trade, foreign and domestic, is a part of free enterprise. If it is good for individuals to be free to go into ness, it surely is good for them to be free to sell wherever they can find a market. To legislate high tariffs and low import quotas on certain goods is to discriminate against other goods which we would normally export in a free international market. Such laws, designed to benefit industry A, hurt industries B, C, D. If we would sell corn abroad, we must buy steel abroad, assuming steel is cheaper there than here

Free trade case has to be restated

By OSCAR COOLEY

That world trade - by which I mean free trade between all peoples - makes for world peace, maximum production and progress, has been stated and restated by economists for centuries. Yet, every now and then shackles on trade are imposed, and people who are assumed to be well educated call for increased "protection" against foreign - made goods.

After World War II, Japan rapidly rebuilt her wrecked cities and industries. One of her outstanding products was the small size, economical automobile which she made at so little cost that she could bring them across the Pacific and sell them like hot cakes in the U.S.

Our auto manufacturers protested at this competition, and the Japanese, ever ready to oblige, agreed early in 1981 to limit their sales of cars in the U.S. to 1,680,000 for two years. Last February they agreed to extend this limitation for anther year.

But on June 30, Sosuke Uno. Japan's international trade minister, announced that Japan would not restrict her export of cars for a fourth year. So, get ready. Detroit, for a flood of Toyota's etc., to come down the road beginning next ourselves a part of the human drama, than we have to deal

Workers, ever ready to beg the government to support wages in some way, demanded that the Japanese "voluntarily" restrain their exports for that fourth year.

William Bywater, president of the union of electrical and machine workers, said that Uno's announcement should bring home to Reagan and Congress the fact that the U.S. is "in a trade war.

Foreign autos are not the only good that is about to run over us. Steel, a basic commodity which Americans have long produced in volume, is coming in from abroad heavily Harking to the wishes of the steel companies and the steel workers' union. Washington has imposed sharp restrictions on imports of steel, much to the discomfort of British and German steel makers.

Then there is the domestic - content hill, which would require a certain percentage of the parts of a product sold here to have been made here.

It is not trade that we are against, say the protesters against - imports, but "unfair trade." By this they mean trade that is facilitated by aid, tax forgiveness, or subsidies of some kind, given by the governments of the countries which are selling goods. Apparentely, if the producers of those goods did not receive these aids they could not afford to transport and sell them here.

The U.S. government gives similar aid and succor to American exporters which enable them to export profitably. Everybody, it seems, is doing it.

This is the sad part of the whole matter: everybody is doing it. The world is pretending there is truth in an ancient error: protectionism. Import quotas are being reduced. import taxes increased. Japan resents our restrictions on her goods, but she imposes high tariff walls against ours.

Don't people as consumers want more goods? How can it be said that Americans are injured by, need protection against, foreign - made goods?

According to Floyd Sackett, the affable manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, success means helping someone or doing something nice for people

Sackett is a warm, sincere and fun kind of guy to be around. He is a very interesting man with a variety of experience under his belt.

He once was a minister, before changing his career to become a school teacher. Sackett said, "I started college in 1959 to become a minister but, after a while I decided that I'd rather work with children so I wanted to become a teacher.

He continued, "I had to go to college to obtain my teaching certificate, when I achived my certificate I started teaching as a part - time teacher.

In reply to a question concerning any possible feeling he might have similar to that of a minister, Sackett explained, "I think ministry is a commitment to some people. Some ministers got out and took jobs helping people, some people are in it for personal gain. I think that everyone who helps his fellow man is a minister in some way.

"If feeling like a minister means working with people I guess I do still feel like a minister."

Sackett served the Pampa school system a teacher at Pampa Junior High during 1959 - 1965. He then moved to a higher postion as assistant principal at Robert E. Lee Junior

"I enjoyed working with the students and watching them succeed," Sackett said, continuing "students need to meet success everyday. By success I mean in doing something nice or in helping someone. When a student learns to meet success he or will succeed.'

Sackett went on to serve as principal at Baker Elementary School during 1969 - 1983. Explaining he had achived a goal in life, Sackett noted "I wanted to go higher in the educational field but I would have had to move in order to do

The Pampa native explained, "I had lived in Pampa all my life except for when I was in college and I didn't want to

Sackett then became the manager of the Pampa Chamber

Sackett, who has often been referred to by his friends as a workaholic, observed "All my life I have worked, work is all

Two years ago Sackett had a heart attack due to working a grueling 16 hours or more per day. Recalling the illness, Sackett said, "I was sitting at home one night and when I stood up I felt dizzy, as if I had indigestion.

"So my wife called the doctor and the doctor told me to come down to the hospital. I told them I felt fine after I had a nap. The next day I felt terrible and I called the doctor again and when I arrived at the hospital, the doctor checked me over and told me I had a heart attack.

Sackett continued, "The doctor treated me and I was released after the doctor felt I would get over it, I didn't,' Sackett remarked as he leaned back recalling the event.

"So I was taken to Amarillo and a doctor checked me out and the next morning I woke up and found out I had a triple by - pass surgery performed on me," Sackett said as he

He quickly added with a chuckle, "The next time I feel that I have indigestion, I'm going to the doctor quick.

Sackett is a man who can take on almost any job. A man with with job experience that varies from being a clerk in a grocery store to chamber manager. He keeps busy day in and day out and says he loves every bit of it.

When Sackett isn't busy with the work he enjoys, he usually relaxes with a game of golf or with his woodworking hobby. "My dad was a carpetner and every since I was small I've been interested in woodworking," Sackett said, continuing, "I usually spend time in my shop or just relaxing at home with my wife.

Sackett noted he enjoyed working with children.

Sackett predicts that in 20 years Pampa will have the benefits and opportunities of a metropolitan area. "We are in a area that will see a lot of growth for several reasons," he said, explaining "the climate for one, and the cost of living is below average, we are more productive in other areas because we have fewer labor unions than other cities."

Pampa is the second largest city in the Panhandle and will be at least 40,000 in population, Sackett predicted. He said he feels Pampa will be a city of citizens that will take care of themselves rather than the government taking care of the Discussing changes he had made in his lifestyle as a result of his heart attack, the Chamber manager remarked, "Well, I use to be a perfectionist, but my attitude towards that had to change. I try not to keep the pressure on me all the time and I keep myself in phyiscal condition.

"The hardest thing I have to do is remain flexible and keep my mind on two or three things at one time" said, Sackett. He also added, "I feel our (Pampa) chamber is respected by the people of Pampa through the years." He said "I Sackett observed, "The people in Pampa have treated me fanastic, and I feel someday I want to give it back because they are so good to me.'

Sackett discussed the problems facing Texans today. "One of the biggest problems in the Texas Panhandle is the lack of water. We're going to have to face this situation with other Lack of recreation facilities for everyone not just for

When asked if he were given a chance to start life over again, what a justments would he have made, Sackett stated "I have often thought of living my life over again — I don't think I would change a thing. Traders, who began the week preoccupied with fears that rising interest rates would send stocks tumbling beneath recent lows, ended the week speculating on whether the market would break out to new heights.

Fire chief's inability to read results in dispute over his qualifications

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) -Bob Swaney became chief Saturday of a volunteer fire company after 20 years as a fireman, five years as deputy chief and a bitter dispute over his qualifications - because he cannot read or write.

The members of the Old Lyme South End Fire Department elected Swaney as their chief last month by a vote of 20 to 18. But before he took office, the fire company's executive board suspended him for 30 days, setting off a public debate involving questions of public safety and modern firefighting.

"This has not been a vendetta against Bob Swaney," said the president of the volunteers, Andrew Schultz. "He is a good man and a good fireman.

And Swaney, 37, whose suspension ended Saturday, won the backing of town officials despite the objections of many fire company leaders.

"Some people think he shouldn't be chief because he can't read or write." said Selectman Charles Kiernan. "The thing that annoyed me more than anything is that Bob is a very qualified person. Just because he can't read and write is no reason why he can't be chief.

Swaney has spent two decades years as a firefighter and five years as the department's deputy chief. He is assistant foreman of the public works department of Old Lyme, a coastal town about 40 miles east of New Haven whose population of 6,000 swells to 16,000 in the

"I never expected it to hit me like this," he said. "It's like having your legs cut off." One of his opponents is Peter Terenzi, 25, a certified state fire marshal.

"We didn't feel he was capable of handling the job." said Terenzi, part of a younger group of firefighters which has been modernizing the department.

AUSTIN (AP) - The grand jurors - branded "runaways" by some - say they took the matter into their own hands because the district attorney seemed reluctant to prosecute. But the district attorney says they were, in effect, glory-grabbers who grew tired of mundane "street crime" es and wanted something more "juicy."

The case involved Austin City Attorney Albert DeLaRosa, indicted June 28 on charges of collecting city travel expenses for his wife. It blew a wide gap between Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle and grand jurors.

"The entire process is based on trust and honor," said Earle. "There's no law that says the grand jury and the DA have to agree. Trust broke down, and that is really unfortunate.

The 12 grand jurors were near the end of their three-month term when they indicted DeLaRosa. It was an unusual move because Earle's office was not pushing for the indictment.

Grand jurors rarely act on a case that's not brought to them

"We certainly weren't like other grand juries," said Rodney Montague, an insurance man. "We were just about half through our term before it dawned on us that we were just a

Earle said the jurors seemed to have more than justice on their mind. They wanted immediate - perhaps premature -

"They appeared to be more interested in indicting DeLaRosa themselves than with his being indicted," Earle

As hundreds of cases rolled in, the grand jurors wondered why they were reading articles about DeLaRosa's expense accounts in the Austin American-Statesman, but not hearing anything about them behind closed doors.

So they investigated and indicted DeLaRosa on three felony and two misdemeanor counts alleging he charged the city for travel expenses incurred by his wife. Earle, after realizing the jury was intent on pursuing the case, assigned an assistant district attorney to help it.

The indictments were not specific, but the American-Statesman reported the charges stemmed from New York and Washington trips in which DeLaRosa charged the city about $490 for his wife's expenses.

A state judge later threw out the indictments, saying they were too vague, and Earle says another grand jury will review Surrenden Hill Olm, a lawyer and grand juror, said the district attorney's office was not helpful.

"We just kind of got the runaround about it. We got no answers," said Mrs. Olm, adding that Earle refused to issue subpoenaes requested by the panel. "That's when all the devil

Montague said, "I don't think the DA ever intended to investigate DeLaRosa."

The conflict was fueled by an unrelated case involving city water department maintainance man John Smith, who had previously been indicted for stealing about 10 gallons of city gasoline. The indictment came back to the grand jury room for "A city employee accused of stealing 10 gallons of gas? It raised concerns," said grand juror Catherine Navarro, a state employee. "Albert's expense account had been making the paper for days and days, and we weren't hearing a thing about it' from the district attorney.

Grand juror Marion Marshall, also a state employee, said, "It came down to (the fact that) you had a guy indicted for stealing 10 gallons of gas. We had a couple of other persons who were given an opportunity to repay the city (and not face charges). This person wasn't. It doesn't seem fair.''

Montague said, ''That poor guy at the other end of the strata of society, they didn't offer him whether he wanted to return

DeLaRosa had reimbursed the city after a city investigation showed improper expense claims. He also was suspended but was paid as a consultant in certain matters.

He resigned July 18. Earle said the Smith case went back to the grand jury because there was new information. The grand jurors refused

Earle attributes the whole incident to "an unfortunate misunderstanding" that he says left grand jurors believing there was no investigation of DeLaRosa. "We weren't through with our investigation," he said, adding that he had planned to prosecute the case when he had all the information he wanted. "It was not a question of whether there was a case against DeLaRosa or not. It was a case of when that case was ready to be presented.' But the grand jurors were hungry for action, according to Earle, who said their primary function is "to keep the furnace of the criminal justice system stoked with indicted cases."

'Some people who come into positions of power feel a mandate to use that power to reshape institutions in line with their own images," said Earle.

"At least some of them were wondering why they were even bothering to meet because they weren't getting any important cases. They were dissatisfied with the mundane nature of most of the work of the criminal justice system, which consists mostly of street crimes. They wanted some juicy cases."

For several of the first-time grand jurors it was an eye-opening look behind the closed doors. "I really never had thought about it," Montague said of the system in which grand jurors decide which cases should be tried. "I would have figured it was just a rubber stamp body."

Now he's proud of what his grand jury did. "I think we probably shook up city hall because of the sorry, sloppy way they have their checks and balances" on expense accounts, he said.

Mrs. Olm rejects the "runaway" tag. "That's the last thing we did - was run away from our responsibilities and obligations as we saw them," she said.

Town hopes to bring people back downtown

Associated Press Writer TAYLOR, Texas (AP) - It doesn't take a stranger here long to suspect that downtown Taylor is not the bustling retail center it once was. Many buildings are vacant. Boards cover many windows.

But for long-time residents, the deterioration has been so gradual that - until recently - they came to accept it as a fact of life.

"The biggest hurdle was admitting we've got a problem." said Margaret Massey, director of the locally created Project Main Street

Once it cleared that hurdle, Taylor citizens went into action. They're using fresh paint and low-interest renovation loans in hopes of bringing Main Street back to life and restoring some of its turn-of-the-century buildings.

The quality and craftsmanship in these old buildings cannot be duplicated," said Miss

The town's two banks and two savings and loan associations have put together a $100,000 lending pool to offer 6 percent. 10-year loans to merchants up to $10,000 each, for the purpose of fixing up old buildings, and bigger loans at conventional rates are encouraged for major restorations.

Miss Massey said Taylor applied for assistance through the National Main Street Center in Washington, D.C., and its Texas branch, but lost out to nearby Georgetown

"But that doesn't stop Taylor from doing it on its on," she said. So a group of citizens approached the City Council with the idea, and the project was launched last month. The idea is to make downtown the cultural and financial center once again A committee of 12 citizens will review applications for the low-interest loans to make sure the money is not used to "modernize" or "cover-up" existing buildings. The emphasis is on preservation and quality. Miss Massey said the city is banking on an assumption that a lot of people will foresake the shopping centers on the town's fringes that she said have "no character" and come back to a renovated downtown.

The town also hopes that as its downtown comes back to life, professional people will use some of Main Street's second-floor space, now mostly vacant, as offices.

"Downtown has chosen not to compete until now. Citizen involvement has been incredible," she said. "The feeling is we'd better preserve the character and country image of Taylor before someone else comes in and does it for us."

At present, most residents do their shopping on the 'strip" north of town where there is a discount store and several smaller shops, or they drive to Austin, about 30 miles away. Miss Massey calls it "retail leakage," and at present, she does not blame shoppers for abandoning downtown. "There's not one men's clothing store in downtown Taylor right new," she said. She said Taylor claims to be the "barbecue capital of Texas," but Main Street needs a restaurant that stays open at night, so people won't have to drive somewhere

'We want to stop the money that is earned in Taylor from being spent in Austin. Recruiting new businesses is a key goal for us."

Bringing old companies back is another goal. TaylorBanc Savings, which was established here in 1885. as Taylor Savings and Loan. is moving back to Main Street from the "strip" in hopes of leading others to do the same. "We thought this move would be a good way to improve the community and help bring out the past," said chairman John Selman. He said there were a lot of skeptics, especially among Taylor's old-timers, about the Main Street Project.

"We'll show people what can be done," said Selman, whose company is spending $500,000 to restore the century-old Ira A. Prewitt Hardware Co. building, a two-story Victorian brick structure with pressed tin columns and arched second floor windows. The Prewitts closed their hardware store and retired a few years ago, vacant ever since

"A lot of building owners aren't aware of what they may have," said Miss Massey. "It doesn't occur to them to reinvest in the property.

Lawyers form international firm to aid Americans in foreign jails

in jail is bad enough, but being an American in a foreign jail poses added problems, sometimes including torture. For that reason, a group of lawyers have formed the International Legal Defense

By MICHAEL RODDY Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Richard Stein, 37, says the best thing his attorneys did for him was to get him jailed in the United States. It meant he got out of a South American prison where, he says, he was subjected to torture and deprivation.

"I don't think people have an awareness of the complications and how destructive it can become" if they are jailed overseas, says Stein, recently paroled after serving 39 months of a 10-year sentence for a drug conviction. The former swimming and tennis instructor from California credits the International Legal Defense Counsel of Philadelphia with arranging his transfer from Peru's Lurigancho prison, outside Lima, to a federal prison in the United States.

'There was a time when I didn't expect to get out of Lurigancho," Stein says. "I recall it as a horrifying experience. I'm very glad to be out and I have sympathy for those who remain.

ILDC, founded in the 1970s was created to deal with such cases of Americans jailed in foreign countries.

"We're basically into human rights work but we haven't been able to figure out how to run it as a non-profit group," says ILDC excutive director Robert Pisani. "We don't have any foundation money. I don't think the sympathy level is there, given all the other problems.

There are about 1,650 Americans imprisoned in foreign jails on any given day, according to the State Department. Roy Davis. chief of the arrest division of the State Department's account, but says such experiences are not unusual.

"In certain countries the physical conditions are very primitive," he says. "Another shock is the legal systems that are often very different from our own, and the language barriers," Davis says. "For prisoners faced with this, it can add However, the State imprisoned abroad, Davis "We cannot demand that a person be released from jail just because he is a U.S. citizen," he says.

There are only six nations Peru, Canada, Bolivia, Mexico, Panama and Turkey that have prison transfer treaties in effect with the United States, according to the ILDC's Dick Atkins

Under terms of the treaties. prisoners can be sent back to their native countries to serve out their sentences. They cannot then appeal their convictions, but they are eligible for parole.

Such limitations gave birth the ILDC. It is the successor to a group of concerned parents whose children were jailed in South America on drug charges.

But Pisani is quick to point out that getting Americans

EDITOR'S NOTE — Being Bureau of Consular Affairs, out of jams in drug cases a jail is bad enough, but could not confirm Stein's abroad is not all that the organization is about, nor even half its work.

Among the people who have sought ILDC's help are an American businessman jailed in Mexico because he did not know failing to live up to a business contract is a criminal offense there, and a decorated American Vietnam War veteran jailed in England on a gun charge. It's hard to generate sympathy when you say somebody is busted for pot or cocaine," Pisani says. Everyone thinks that until it's your son in jail in Saudi Arabia. But people do the same things abroad they do

"The most common offenses are immigration violations. Other things like drunk and disorderly conduct seem like nothing but that can get you busted in parts of Africa and the Middle East." The ILDC tries to arrange legal representation for Americans overseas, to serve as a conduit for necessary legal documents that must be obtained in the United States, and to help ensure that the prisoner is well treated and is kept in contact with his family, Pisani says.

For their work, the seven ILDC attorneys may charge fees ranging from $500 to $10,000, but they all maintain private practices to support work free of charge when the case seems important months of his time. The added wrinkle to. Stein's case, in addition to the 10-year sentence, was that he'd been fined $125,000. The transfer treaty contains no provisions covering fines, imon says.

He says his search for the Peruvian official who could spring Stein from Lurigancho took him from the marbled halls of the capitol to the shabby offices of the local judge who'd sentenced him.

"Anything you can think of. we did down there," he says. 'We saw the minister of justice, the police officials, the president of the Supreme Court, but we couldn't get the piece of paper to let the guy

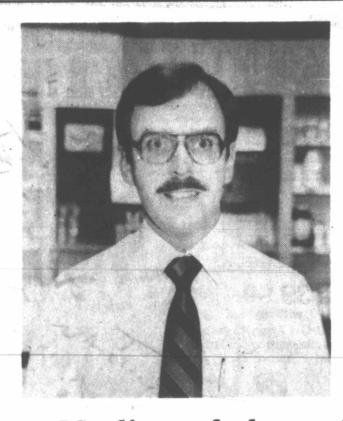

With a September, 1982, deadline approaching for what probably would be the only prisoner transfer of the year, Simon says the last resort was to offer the Peruvian government letters of credit from banks assuring that Stein's fine would be paid in full. By that time, the letters were not just for Stein, but also for two other. imprisoned Americans.
Despite the complications and difficulties, Simon says the outcome was worth the

Federal relief amounts to millions

By BILL CRIDER

Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Every time a flood or some other calamity strikes, politicians scramble in an effort to have the luckless place named a federal disaster area.

An official designation by the President immediately triggers a gush of federal money

In direct aid, the flood in south Louisiana led to about $11 million being handed out in programs delievered to the individual," said Tom Creaghan, programs manager for the State Office of Emergency Preparedness in Baton Rouge

He said not all the figures are in for the direct aid that has and will go to the public sector through various programs. As for the holiday flooding in the Alexandria area and in northeast corner of the state, Creaghan estimated that direct aid totaled about $7 million - with $5 million going to individuals and $2 million to public groups. 'Those are very rough estimates. It takes a while to get it all totaled up." he said. And those figures don't include loan money handed out by various federal agencies.

In times of emergencies, disaster field offices are opened to make it easier for individuals and local governmental units to apply for federal assistance.

We still have a disaster field center open in Pontchatoula but the one in Alexandria is closed now. But that doesn't mean people or public bodies can't still get help if they need it or

He said his office is still working with parishes on public damage assestments and there is an incoming 800 WATS number that persons or public officials can call for information or assistance

Consider the cash outlay on two floods in Louisiana during this exceptionally wet year. This still incomplete count was logged by the Federal Emergency Management

The first flood, mainly around Monroe, was designated a disaster area on Jan. 11. Federal benefits shaped up like this: -Small Business Administration loans, 108 for a total of $1.46 million

-SBA home loans, 287 for a total of $2.65 million

sears

-Farm Home Administration loans, 200 totaling $2.6

-Emergency conservation for farmers, $30,000 -Disaster unemployment payments, 100 for a total of

-Individual and family grants, 1,251 for a total of $2 million. -Temporary housing for 582.

There also were flood insurance payments, 700 claims for a total of $15 million. However, such payments are not an extra benefit that comes with being designated a disaster area. Incomplete federal figures on the flooding around Slidell, designated a disaster area on April 20, included

-Small Business Administration loans, 110 for a total of $2.3

-SBA home loans, 1,117 for a total of $18.3 million. -Farm Home loans, 16 for $1.4 million.

-Disaster unemployment $112,000.

-Individual and family grants, 2,000 for a total of $2 million. -Temporary housing for 1,842.

The federal flood insurance payoff was 16,000 claims totaling $100 million

Armistice signed 30 years ago

Associated Press Writer

SEOUL. South Korea (AP) - "I'd like to see both sides get together and work something out."

That's Sgt. Leonard C. Wright, a 23-year-old American soldier, talking about South and North Korea and an armistice that was signed seven years before he was born. The chances

The Armistice Agreement reached on July 27, 1953, brought an end to the fighting in the three-year Korean War, but left the peninsula divided roughly along a line that has separated the South and North since the end of World War II. There was and is no peace. Tentative efforts at unification made in the 1970s, and more recent calls from Seoul, have gotten nowhere.

Today, large military forces hold positions on each side of a 21/2-mile-wide demilitarized zone established by the armistice. North Korean regulars number about 750,000, those of South Korea something over 600,000. About 40,000 American military personnel are stationed here.

Wright, from Williamsport, Pa., stands at one of two guard posts manned by U.S. troops inside the DMZ. The post looks over Kaesong, the site in North Korea where the armistice talks started, and the truce village of Panmunjom, where the accord was signed and where the Armistice Commission still Troops of the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division, the only sizable American ground unit left in Korea, also patrol inside the DMZ. They operate only in a narrow corridor that leads to Panmunjom, however. The rest of the 151-mile-long zone is the responsibility of the South Koreans, forces far different from those in the field on June 25, 1950, when North Korean troops, led by Soviet-made tanks, struck south.

Fighting raged up and down the peninsula, and Seoul changed hands three times. So-called Chinese People's volunteers came in on the side of North Korea, and the Chinese still sit on the Communist side of the table at Panmunion. Twenty-one countries came to the aid of South Korea under the banner of the United Nations, 16 of them in combat roles.

When the armistice ended the carnage, an estimated 2,407,000 people had been killed or maimed.

It took 255 meetings over two years and 17 days to reach the agreement, and since then the Communist side has accused the U.N. Command of 327,982 armistice violations. The Command has acknowledged 107. North Korea has been charged with 75,939 violations, and has admitted two.

Rather than a truce zone providing a peaceful buffer, the DMZ has become a strip of armed hostility. Several hundred - probably around 300 - South Korean military and a like number of North Koreans have been killed in DMZ clashes and incidents since the armistice. Forty-nine Americans have died there during that time. At the 418th plenary meeting of the Armistice Commission in May, U.S. Rear Adm. James G. Storms-III, chief U.N. Command delegate, declared the zone itself is a primary source of tension and urged that it be truly

U.N. Command has always been led by an American. At present it is Gen. Robert W. Sennewald, a native of St. Louis, Mo., who also serves as commander of the Combined Forces Command, U.S. Forces Korea, and the U.S. 8th Army.

Sennewald says that when the armistice was signed "no one envisaged the truce would become the longest in modern military history." He describes the Combined Forces Command of Korean and U.S. troops as the mainstay of the defense of South Korea, and says its mission is to deter attack and fight if necessary.

The Korean military has become more independent as it has become stronger, but the relationship between officers andmen of the two countries generally is considered good. especially when differences in culture and historical background are taken into account. The South Korean president. Chun Doo-hwan, is a former career army officer and retired general who came to power in a turbulent period in 1900 with key military backing.

The overall South Korea-U.S. relationship also is considered good. Ambassador Richard L. Walker, former professor at the University of South Carolina, says there are no major problems or issues between Washington and Seoul. Strains, surfaced under President Jimmy Carter, who put emphasis on human rights concerns and at one time began a withdrawal of American ground forces. Things smoothed again, however, with the change of administration in Washington.

There have been occasional anti-American overtones in . dissident activity, but no significant calls of Yankee go home. An important factor in the Korean-American relationship has been this country's industrial rise, starting with a high-growth, export-oriented economic policy in 1962 under the late President Park Chung-hee. Last year, Korean exports to the United States totaled $6.2 billion, while U.S. imports stood at $5.9 billion. Worldwide, Korean exports rose from $54.2 million in 1962 to $21 billion in 1982. In 1953, South Korea's gross national product was put at $1.35 billion. In 1982, it was at $66.2

Although its economic strength has grown, political breathing space is rigidly curtailed.

Under Chun's rule, martial law ended in January 1981, and a new National Assembly was elected in March of that year. A 36-year-old curfew was lifted in January 1982, restrictions on overseas travel and student dress codes were eased. Still, the government remains sensitive, if not fearful, to any criticism

With the powerful military apparently still behind Chun. some recent political stirrings were not seen as a major threat - at least for now. They showed, however, that opposition. sentiment exists.

South Korea's present constitution provides that a president shall serve only one seven-year term, and Chun repeatedly has pledged that he will step down in 1988 to give this country its first peaceful transfer of power.

Preparation, or the lack of it, for such change could determine the nation's political course

AUSTIN (AP) - Two big changes are coming this fall in the administration and regulation of Texas' parks and wildlife but the average hunter or fisherman, or park visitor, most likely will not notice them for some time.

A new state law puts all 254 counties under regulatory control of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission. At present, the shots are called in a lot of counties by the

Judge orders parents of US-born children to leave country this fall

SAN DIEGO (AP) - An immigration judge has ordered the parents of two U.S.-born children to leave the country by November, saying they had failed to prove deportation would create extreme hardship

Francisco and Eugenia Maria Alcantar, who came here from Mexico illegally in the early 1970s, now must decide what to do with their children, Francisco, 6 and Angelita, 4. "We feel terrible," Alcantar said Thursday outside court.

"But we will continue to fight." Mrs. Alcantar, speaking in Spanish, refused to answer questions by the government attorney on whether she would leave the children to live in this country with friends or

"I would continue fighting," she said. "I haven't thought of the possibility of leaving my children."

Immigration Judge John C. Williams said he was convinced the Alcantars were nice, hardworking, law-abiding individuals and reponsible members of the community. But, he said, they failed to prove that going back to Mexico would create hardship or deprive the children of education and health care.

Keep proper records

By TOM BYRD

I trust that at this point everyone is aware of the necessity of professional advice when it comes to taxes. Likewise, in order to state, territory or possession properly apply our tax laws to your investments, it is vital that you keep proper records. These points seem so fundamental, I almost hesitate to note them. However, in my years of financial practice I have been amazed at the number of people who do not keep complete records of their investments. So, point number one, get good professional tax counseling and point number two, have complete records to furnish your tax advisor. You will

Now, lets begin our discussion of holding down taxes on our investment income. Did you know there is a certain type of bond whose interest comes to you tax exempt? That's correct - the interest is exempt from Federal income tax. Also, if these bonds are issued within the taxpayers' state they are frequently exempt from state and city income taxes. This is extremely important to those investors who live in high tax states or cities

These tax - exempt bonds are commonly called MUNICIPAL BONDS. The term "municipal bonds" is generally understood to include bonds, issued by a of the U.S., or by any municipality, political subdivision (including cities. counties or parishes, school districts and special districts for fire prevention, water. sewer, irrigation and other purposes) or public agency or instrumentality (such as confusing but actually municipal bonds are issued to obtain funds to construct. repair or improve facilities such as schools, streets. highways, bridges, and water and sewer works. You see, all these projects have to do with the public good. Since they are normally paid for with public funds it stands to reason that the smaller interest that the borrower has to pay for use of the money. the less the overall cost of the project (since interest paid is part of the cost). The result is a benefit for the general public who will ultimately pay for the project

They were required to produce evidence that many U.S. citizens subjected to the same standards could not prove. Two fellow workers testified that Alcantar was indispensible at his job for the Global Electric Works in National City, which repairs motors and generators for fishing boats They said Alcantar had mastered English and provided a service that not too many U.S. workers could do. # Costs are going up for agriculture producers

By BOB FICK

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - A dwindling number of American .arms and soaring interest costs for many of those remaining increased the average expenses for U.S. producers last year by nearly percent, the Agriculture Department says. Owerall, U.S. farm production expenses dropped seven-tenths of a percentage point from 1981 to 1982.

slipping to $130.9 billion. But the smaller outlays by fewer producers for feed. machinery, fuel, fertilizer and general farm than offset by increased consensus among farm payments, farm income from spending on livestock, wages. contract labor and expecially interest on farm debt

The result was an average farm production bill of $54,643 last year compared to $54.218 a year earlier. Interest payments on real estate and operating loans commanded more than a dollar of every $10 spent.

The general farm credit situation, marked by increasing foreclosures and forced farm auctions, has prompted many rural members of Congress to call for more federal help.

But Agriculture Secretary improvements were more John Block said there was leaders meeting earlier this month at his "agricultural summit" that more credit for producers would not solve the problems facing the depressed farm economy.

In contrast to expenses. cash receipts for livestock and crop farmers last year totaled $144 billion, and net farm income plunged to $20.4 billion, nearly $5 billion less than in 1981. Net income also includes government support

Rising interest costs plagued every category of farm last year but one. - anywhere from 3 to 12 percent

Operators of farmers with annual commodity sales of between $2.500 and $10,000 saw average interest payments in 1982 decline from the year before. They dropped $4 dollars to $1.298.

The rest saw average interest expenses jumped according to the report. depending on size, and the small part-time farmer selling less than $2,500 a year recorded a 38 percent increase in interest costs last

As usual, the nation's largest farmers - those with sales in excess of $40,000 a year - incurred the bulk of production expenditures at $111.5 billion last year. That's up from $109.3 billion in 1981, but the per farm average fell as the number of operations in that sales category increased

Although those farms account for only about a third of all farms in the United States, they produce more than three-quarters of the commodities.

Average production expenses on the biggest farms - those with sales over $200,000 a year - dropped from $519.400 in 1981 to $496,200 last year, but the, interest share rose 8 percent.

A smaller decline was. posted on farmers with sales between $100,000 and $200,000.

We have seen quite a few insects infest our andscape plants.

Pine tip moth damage is very evident in hany pines. Examination of damaged tips indicates most are mature larvae or pupae An insecticide application at this time would not be very effective. Wait until you find empty pupae cases before making your next insecticide application Orthene has been providing excellent control of this pest Bagworms are bountiful! Considerable defoliation has already been caused by this best. Apply control measures now before they get much larger and become more difficult to kill. Thorough coverage of the infested plant is required to effectively control bagworms. To help assure this coverage, add a little surfactant to the spray mixture.

I've received numerous calls concerning the black, blistered leaves of cottonwood. The dåmage is caused by a leaf miner. It's too late to control this pest. The damage has been done and the insect has left the leaves. Next year begin to check your cottonwoods in early June and spray with Cygon or Meta systox - R when you first see leaf miner activity.

TOMATO PROBLEMS Gardners are encountering several tomato problems which are discussed as follows: BLOSSOM · END · ROT — This rot first shows on the bottom of the tomato appearing as a large dry, brown or black sunken area. It affects both green and ripening tomatoes and is caused primarily by a fluctuating moisture supply. It is likely to appear on the earliest tomato fruits of the season. Blossom - end rot often starts when the plants are putting on quick growth, but suddenly get hit by a hot. dry spell. The plants suffer an inability to absorb adequate moisture which brings on the occurrence of Blossom - End - Rot.

BLOSSOM DROP — Blossom drop plagues Texas gardeners during both cool and hot conditions. In some years, many of the early season blossoms simply fail to set and fall off. This is caused by cool nighttime temperatures below 55 F. If this isn't bad enough, once the temperatures get above 75 F. at night in combination with temperatures above 92 F. during the day, most tomato varieties drop their bloom. This is the reason it is difficult to get large - fruited tomato varieties to set under midsummer conditions in most areas of Texas Small - fruited varieties, such as Small Fry or Red Cherry. have the abilitiv to set under relatively cool temperatures as well as high temperatures and should be planted in every garden in Texas to insure both early as well as mid season fruit set. Other varieties recommended are Spring Giant, Big Set and Jackpot

SUNSCALD - This occurs when green or ripening tomatoes get too much exposure to the hot Texas sun. At first, a whitish patch appears on the side of the tomato facing the sun. Very often, it gets larger as the fruit ripens and becomes grayish - white in color. To guard against sun - scald, be careful not to overprune plants and remove the protective foilage Growing tomatoes in cages is an excellent way to avoid most problems associated with sunscald.

SUMMER OFTEN MEANS LAWN PROBLEMS

Along with hot temperatures, mid summer in Texas may bring special lawn problems - drought, weeds, insects and disease.

These lawn problems can cause concerns for homeowners unless accurate diagnosis and proper treatment takes place before they

Dry spots, thin turf and weeds can result from improper watering, fertilizing and mowing practices. Follow recommended cultural practices before applying a chemical to correct lawn problems.

Drought stress most often occurs in mid summer and shows up as wilted, discolored turf. Adjust watering schedules to wet the soil to a depth of four to six inches, and water only when grass shows symptoms of moisture

Also, raise mowing heights one - half inch to improve drougth tolerance in mid -

Lack of nitrogen or iron often creates a lawn problem. Grass with a nitrogen deficiency may have a pale color and be heavily infested with weeds. A light application of a nitrogen fertilizer will improve the lawn's appearance

Grass leaves that have yellow stripes parallel to the leaf margins may be deficient in iron. A foliar application of iron sulfate at six ounces per 1.000 square feet will usually solve this problem

Leaf spot diseases are generally a problem when lawns are under stress and increase with high temperatures, drought, heavy shade and close mowing. While proper mowing and watering will reduce these fungicides may be required to prevent serious damage

White grubs feed heavily on lawns during mid - summer, and their damage resembles drought injury. If turf does not respond to applications of water, suspect grubs.

White grubs can be controlled with inesecticides. Drenching the lawn after an insecticide is applied for grub control, since grub feed in the soil

Is there a highly nutritious range grass that will increase yeilds and still persist through many years of tough weather in the Southern Great Plains? Drs. H. V. Eck. USDA soil scientist from the Research Laboratory at Bushland, and Phillip Sims, USDA range scientist from the Southern Plains Range Research Station, Wooward, Okla., found that vellow bluestem and Caucasian bluestem filled the bill. These two grasses persisted in areas that were planted 36 years ago. They produced almost twice as much forage as native species and had high levels of protein and minerals. The researchers said good cattle gains would be achieved with the two grasses without supplement in the spring and early summer. In late summer and winter, salt and two pounds per day of cotton seed cake would be needed for maximum gains.

Side oats grama was another species that persisted and invaded into areas planted to other grasses. Caucasian bluestem also invaded the entire area around where it was planted.

The two scientists located a grass planting made in May, 1942, by the Soil Conservation Service in the Rita Blanca National Grassland in Dallam County. Texas. The site for the 36 year old plantings was on Conlen loam soil. Rainfall is 18 inches annually, the growing season is 185 days and the elevation is 4200

There were 25 grass species planted in sudan grass stubble on 15 by 200 foot plots. The first rains came two months later, in early June. The plots were grazed in the summer from 1943 to 1954. After that, the plots were cross fenced so that half was grazed and the other half was left ungrazed. The researchers made evaluations of forage production and quality in 1978 and 1979, when grazing was restricted from all areas. In addition to the three grasses mentioned above, crested wheatgrass, western wheatgrass, sand bluestem, galleta, blue grama, buffalograss, giant reedgrass, Canada wildrye, Russian wildrye, weeping lovegrass, sand lovegrass, Indian ricegrass, blue panic. switchgrass. little bluestem, plains bristlegrass, Indian grass, alkali sacaton, prairie dropseed, sand dropseed, needle and thread, and green needlegrass were planted.

Of the 25 grasses planted, only 5 had sufficient cover of a single species to be recognized as established stands. They were yellow bluestem. Caucasian bluestem, western wheatgrass, sideoats grama, and galleta. The ungrazed yellow bluestem plot produced the highest standing crop of 2000 pounds per acre. Caucasian bluestem had the second best yield of 1780 pounds per acre. The planted species produced over 90 percent of the total yields on these plots. Total production on ungrazed western wheatgrass, sideoats grama, and galleta plots was 1070, 1260, and 1350 pounds per acre, respectively. The planted species produced 27, 47, and 53 percent of the total yields on these plots. Invading grasses and other plants accounted for the remainder of the yields. Considering all species, ungrazed plots yielded 1420 pounds per acre and grazed areas averaged 870 pounds per Galleta and blue grama had thicker stand on the grazed than on the ungrazed areas.

Protein, minerals and digestibility were highest in the spring and decreased as the season progressed for the high yielding grasses. Species with the highest content of crude protein. phosphorus, calcium, and magnesium, respectively, were western wheatgrass, galleta. Caucasian bluestem, and yello bluestem. Caucasian bluestem had the lowest content of protein. phosphorus and magnesium. On the other hand, western wheatgrass had the lowest content of

The researchers said the levels of protein and minerals we igh for all species. They concluded ... two pounds per day of cottonseed that salt and cake in the late summer and winter were the only supplements needed to produce good gains.

Ranchers that want to plant a persistent high yielding grass should choose either Caucasian or yellow bluestem. Eck said. "These two grasses produce almost twice as much as most other grasses commonly planted in the Southern Great Olympics held recently in Baton Rouge, La. Mark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd McMinn, won a silver medal by placing second in the frisbee distance throw. He also placed seventh in the softball throw.

Mark represented Pampa and the Top Of Texas Region 16 in the special olympics. He competed against 4,300 athletes from all 50 states and 50 foreign countries while over 120,000 watched the events.

Mark Cobb of Claude also competed, winning a gold medal in the high jump and placing fourth in the 50-meter dash

Dignitaries also turned out, including Miss Texas, Miss Louisiana, Senator Edward Kennedy, Pat Lawford, Ethel Kennedy, John Schneider, Debbie Boone, James Drury and Eunice Kennedy Shriver. The Shriver family created the foundation that supports Special Olympics.

Mark became involved in a whirlwind of activities during the week-long competition while making new friends every day.

"He was so busy I barely got to see him. said Mrs. McMinn, who accompanied her son

Mark was picked to join the 100-member the State Special Olympics Committee by the PISD school system. He underwent two days of training and orientation in Houston before

"I wish the high school coaches could have gone to the special olympics," Mark said. "I want them to know we've got the guts to do things like this.

Contestants can't have more than a 70 IQ to compete in the special olympics, but being physically handicapped means they just have to try harder, Mrs. McMinn said.

A prime example was in the 50-meter dash, which was won by a legless boy. He ran on his hands by swinging his body forward. "Mark told him he was the best gold medal winner in the boys' division," Mrs. McMinn

The special olympics youngsters were treating like dignitaries themselves when they arrived in Baton Rouge.

The three busicads of youngsters were led into the city by the Sheriff's Posse of San Antonio carrying both the Texas and Special Olympics flags.

"It was a great experience that both Marks will remember for a long time," Mrs.

'El Sid' no Valenzuela except by reputation

By RANDALL HACKLEY ssociated Press Writer EL PASO, Texas (AP) Sid Fernandez has a pat answer to persisting comparisons between himself and Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Fernando Valenzuela. "It's an honor to be mpared to Fernando," the 20-year-old San Antonio Dodgers lefthander said. "But we're not the same. We have different pitching

On first glance, however, the two appear from the same mold. Valenzuela, also a lefty, is portly. Fernandez is a hulking 6-1, 220 pounds, and has been known — as has Fernando - to put weight on in his midsection.

After nearly every pitch. they ritually hitch up their pants with a tug of their Dodger belts. Others think Fernandez, like Valenzuela, is another successful Dodger pitching find from Mexico. Fernandez, though, is Hawaiian-born, and three-quarters Portuguese. His family is leagues, Fernandez has little trouble making himself

His fastball, for example, whistles across the plate in the 90 mph-plus range, fast enough to be the Texas League strikeout leader with 137 Ks in 104 innings of work. He fanned 7 of the 15 batters he faced Wednesday in the Texas League All-Star game. and was named Most Valuable Player.

But unlike Valenzuela, "El Sid" — as baseball pundits call him - hasn't the screwball that propelled Valenzuela to the ranks of baseball's finest contemporary pitchers. Fernandez's out pitch is his fastball, he has a change-up, and he added a curve to his repertoire this spring.

After a shaky start earlier this season — he lasted two-thirds of an inning against the Midland Cubs his 2.59 ERA in a league known for hitters is the best among starters and second in the Texas League.

And while Valenzuela Fernandez said cooly. speaks little English after think I'm ready for the bigs, three seasons in the big or at least now I wouldn't be with the majors' lowest ERA, haven't rushed the big lefty.

After being signed in the June 1981 free agent draft out of Hawaii's Kaiser High School — about 15 minutes from downtown Honolulu -Fernandez was sent to the rookie league in Butte, Mont. 'You ever been to Butte?" he asks, shaking his head.

He stopped next in the Florida State League at Vero Beach, where The Sporting News cast him as "the next Fernando." Heady stuff for a teen-ager? "No," he said matter-of-factly.

Fernandez rose to the Class AAA Albuquerque Dodgers for a half-season last year, but this spring was surprised when he was sent to San Antonio for Class AA work. "I kind of thought I'd be in Albuquerque, but this is all right. I get a lot of innings Control sometimes is a problem. He has 71 walks in his 104 innings of work, too many by big league #### standards. His shoulder like Valenzuela, he has "I enormous shoulders and strong thighs — also has troubled him on occasions.

"I haven't talked to (General Manager) George Young or the coach," said Taylor. "This is just something I've got to do.

Pampa to remain home of Tri-State tourney

Will the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament ever be moved from the Pampa Country Club course again?

Tri-State Association secretary Otis Nace of Pampa doesn't think so.

"It's going to be here permanently," Nace said. "It would take a vote by the entire membership of the country club to move it. "It can't be voted out by the board of directors again.

The annual seniors tourne which opens here Tuesday for a four-day run, had been moved to the Amarillo Country Club in 1981. The board of directors had voted 4-3 in favor of the move. However, the tournament was recalled to Pampa by popular demand last year Next year will be the 50th anniversary of our tournament." Nace said. "We want it to be in Pampa. The tournament had its beginning in 1935 at the Amarillo Country Club before being moved to Pampa for a 10-year stay. The tournament went back to Amarillo Country Club, then to Borger's Huber Course in 1967, where it stayed for three years before returning to Pampa in 1970.

This year the tournament will be bigger than ever before. There will be 176 entries, instead of the usual 160 teeing off Tuesday morning.

Players in the championship flight, determined by Tuesday's qualifying round, will play 72 holes of stroke play. After 36 holes the flight will be divided, a section of players forming the President's flight. All other flights of 16 players will be scheduled for match play Wednesday and Thursday.

The four semi-finalists will play 18 holes of stroke play Friday to determine the winner and runnerup of their respective flight.

U.S. NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS SAYS: "HEAT DETECTORS HAVE PROBABLY SAVED MORE LIVES AND PROPERTY THAN ANY OTHER FIRE DETECTION DEVICE".

At the recent National Fire Protection Association Annual Meeting in Anaheim, CA, Mr. Richard W. Bukowski U.S. National Bureau of Standards, Center for Fire Research, delivered some of the most significant official statements on residential fire detectors ever issued, in our judgment, by the United States Government.

Among other things, Mr. Bukowski said: "Heat detectors, in one form or another, are the oldest and probably most widely used of all detection devices. Likewise, heat detectors have probably saved more lives and property than any other fire detection device. They're generally the simplest in design and, therefore, the most reliable over a long period of

In addition, Mr. Bukowski stated:"The real answer is that we must use all types of detection to their greatest advantage in a complementary fashion such that each type of detection principle provides protection for the situations where the other types are not as effective or cannot be used for other reasons. It's only by the wise use of a combination of detection that we can maximize the protection of life and property. After all, isn't that what we're really trying to do?"

It means the only way to provide complete and sure fire-warning protection is by using both smoke detectors and heat detectors, by using completely non-electrical devices in addition to the electrical devices and by combining long-lived reliability with timely response.

If one is not going to have a fire, it is a total waste of money to install even one detector. But, if one is going to have a fire, he had better have complete and sure fire-warning protection. At the present state-of-the-art, there is no other way to accomplish this except with a 'combination" system of smoke detectors guarding the approaches to the bedrooms and mechanically-owered heat detectors in the other major rooms.

Will veteran quarterback
Danny White beat back the challenge of upstart Gary

'This is my 11th camp and I've never seen one quite like this one," said tight end Billy Joe DuPree, the resident team philosopher playing his final season. "This one tops them all in overall furor."

This is supposed to be a serious training camp.

He loves the underdog role of bringing home a winner when experts see a crumbling in the Dallas dynasty

"When you get kicked the old character comes out if you've got any," Landry says. "I like challenges. The hardest thing to do is motivate from the top."

DuPree predicts Landry will prevail. "There is a possibilty it (the turmoil) coud bring us all together," DuPree says.

Johnson agrees. "In adversity, you find that players tend to cling to each other," Johnson says

He points out that controversy is not new to the

We've always had controversy of some kind and we've always risen from it, Johnson says.
Asked if he could be mischievously.

''Certainly,'' he said.
''However, Tom doesn't have a policy between the goal lines yet. When the time is ripe you never know what I might do if I have an explosion of energy.

Story by Dee Dee Laramore Photos by Bruce Lee Smith

"I've never seen any place like Pampa for garage sales," said Barbara Marshall, who moved here two years ago. She should know. She attends every garage sale she can. She had stopped by this particular sale while on her way home from work as a local restaurant manager.

On this particular day, more than 50 sales were listed in the paper's classified advertising section under "Garage Sales." Tempting claims included "lots of great bargains," or "Fourteen Family Yard Sale" or "too much to list," or "9 a.m. til?"

And if all the ads were true, you could find clothing of all sizes, a welder, tools, bicycles, a wedding dress, toys, washing machines, furniture, air conditioners, telephones, televisions, a trash compactor, collectibles, chain saws, dishes, a 56-gallon propane tank, stereos, a microwave, "weed eater" and even a pickup truck.

Marshall particularly likes to pick up paperback novels and toys as little gifts for her nieces and nephews. She also found one of the first recliners and footstools ever made. She paid $12 for the set, and has since learned they're worth at least $300. One of her friends, an antique dealer, found valuable McCoy vases on sale for a quarter each.

Jackie McMinn was manning the garage sale put on by her and her daughter. Donna Henson. They had old records — duplicates of one's in Mrs. McMinn's husband's extensive record collection, record players, tricycles and all types of knick - knacks. The first night of their sale was extremely successful, she said but the day we visited was a bit slower.

said, but the day we visited was a bit slower.

Mrs. McMinn said she likes to collect antique dishes which she finds at garage sales occasionally. She looks for depression glass. "It's so cheap, it's unreal," she said.

"Clothes are selling better at garage sales than they used to," she added "Used to, you couldn't give clothes away."

She also had about 30 comic books for sale. She sold all of them for 20 cents each. And they weren't even old copies.

Shirley Ledford, accompanied by her daughter Amy, looks for children's clothes among other things at garage sales. She said she doesn't see why she should pay "uptown" prices for clothes the children will outgrow in such a short time. She looks for clothes that are stylish and in good condition, "like uptown stuff.

"Then if I get tired of it, I sell it in my garage sale," she adds.

Alvadee Fleming was giving her first garage sale. "I'm getting rid of stuff I've had for years," she explained. She had sold some furniture, trailer mirrors and costume jewelry. The jewelry was selling so well, she said, that she upped the price on the items. Then they sold even better.

"One lady told me that the higher you put the prices the better they buy them," Mrs. Fleming said. "I guess she was right."

Mrs. Fleming had the following advice for persons giving their first garage sales. "Get the ad in the paper sooner." She had put the ad in for the day of the sale, and her customers weren't coming in until after the paper had come out in the afternoon, except for the few who had happened to drive by and see the sale.

Mrs. Joe Martin is a veteran at putting on garage sales. In front of her garage was a large sign saying "GARAGE SALE." She had been working on this particular sale for three months "and it still wasn't ready.

Mrs. Martin says that she puts cheap prices on the items she really wants to sell. She sets higher prices on those things that she doesn't really care if they sell or not

Marshall said she is most attracted by sales that look organized. "If the garage sale is organized, I'll stop and take a look — if things are laid out neatly, pre - marked, on tables. If it looks like everything was thrown out on the front yard, I won't bother to stop," she explained.

There's a lucrative aspect of putting on a garage sale for both the buyer and the seller. Buyers find things they need for a cheap price. Sellers get rid of things they don't need and make money at the same time.

Fred and Betty Osbin found out the benefits on their first garage sale. They hadn't even been to a garage sale before. But their minds were changed after they made more than $500 in less than one day.

Like Margie Ruff said, "I've got everything from rags to riches." Well, one person's rags could be riches to another and garage sales could be the best way to get the two together.

This whimsical little fiem is really addits had prechable on up of some plants expression.

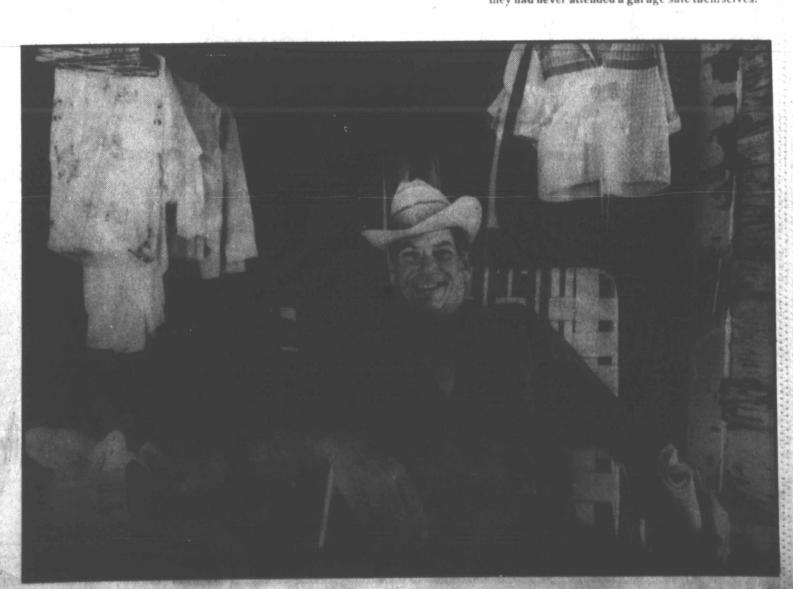

Fred Osbin leans back in a lawn chair as he waits for customers in his first attempt at putting on a garage sale. He and his wife, Betty, along with three other families, combined unwanted items for a large sale. Ironically, they had never attended a garage sale themselves.

PAMPA NEWS Sunday, July 24, 1983 17

Barbara Ann Kinney, 3, feels the coolness of a lawn chair against her cheek as she pauses in her play at her great grandmother's yard sale recently. She's the great - granddaughter of Margie and Shelby Ruff. Mrs. Ruff claims she has everything in her sale "from rags to riches" and she has the best advertising by having her sale face the "busiest street in the world," East Browning.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died suddenly three years ago. I grieved endlessly for him, and have done only the necessary marketing, usually taking my dog with me. Only recently I realized I was very lonely.

Last week as I came out of the market into the parking lot, a stranger walking his dog on a leash struck up a conversation with me about my dog, who'd been barking in my car. I was quite taken by this man's looks and manner, but I was so insecure and surprised that I left

However, I've been back every evening at 6 p.m. (the time I saw him) and I've left a card on the bulletin board at the market. I have even driven up and down the nearby streets hoping to see him.

Nels Walberg had the house built by C. T. McCarthy, a Pampa carpenter, in 1908 for Walberg and his four motherless children. Total cost - about $1,500.

Jail cell romances DALLAS, Pa. (AP) - This is an unusual love story, unmatched by Barbara Cartland or other writers of romances. It is a story that begins in Dallas - Pennsylvania, not

Texas - at the State Correctional Institution. For the third time in six months, this prison in Luzerne County was the site of a wedding. That fact alone is not unusual - Dallas' Acting Warden Joseph M. Ryan says he sees at least one wedding at the prison every month. But whenCarol Hoffman, 27, of Reading, married

Albert G. Reppert recently, the bride was the third sister from her family to tie the knot with an inmate at Dallas Her sister, Betty Warman. 21, married Roy Warman, also known as Frank J. Scathorelli Jr., on Nov. 22, 1982. And Carol's older sister married an inmate two weeks after Betty Warman was wed. The three sisters, who hail from a family of 16 children, each have a husband who resides in Cell Block E. They met their husbands during a picnic at Dallas in June 1982. They were invited to the picnic by their brother, who is serving time at Dallas for an arson conviction. He and the oldest sister asked not to be identified.

Hydroculture-new for plants

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Lifestyles Editor

Janice Hoffer of Pampa has been using hydroculture to grow her plants for less than a year, but she says she's sold on this idea that's becoming increasingly popular across the nation.

She was introduced to hydroculture by her daughter in Canada. Then she met a woman in Montana who got her started using the concept.

As far as she knows, Hoffer says, she and a woman in Houston are the only persons actively involved in hydroculture in Texas. A place near Lubbock grows vegetables using hydroponics, she says, but that is a somewhat different concept from hydroculture.

Hydroculture, actually, is growing plants using water, rocks and plant food — no dirt. A simple plan that she says "makes black thumbs green.

The rocks used for hydroculture aren't your average pebbles you pick up in the driveway. They are mined in Germany, Hoffer says, then fired in a kiln to about 1200 degrees centigrade. The rocks are amazingly light and porous. They help bring the water up from the bottom of the pot to surround the root system with moisture and nutrients without drowning it. This is called capillary action.

Only a half inch of water remains in the pot at all times, Hoffer says. The plant is placed in a pot with slits along the bottom, the root system surrounded by the special rocks. This part is then placed into another pot with the half - inch of water. A special plant food is added to the plant twice a year once every six months.

Hoffer says she has yet to find a plant that won't grow with this method. She's tried jungle plants - who thrive in the extra humidity provided by the moist rocks, succulents, cacti, African violets and most common houseplants.

'Anything I've transplanted has done beautifully," she adds. Hoffer recommends that soil plants be one foot or less tall to transplant. Older, taller plants have a hard time recovering from the shock of changing from a soil environment to the airy, rock one.

.To transplant, she takes the plants from the soil and washes the dirt from the roots, gently brushing every bit of soil from the root system with a soft brush. Then she repots with the rock, water and plant food system. After a shock period that lasts from 10 to 14 days, the plants "go to town," she says.

Many people are afraid of going to hydroculture from the soil method, Hoffer says. "They tell me 'I'm afraid it won't work for me," she says. "And I say, 'Sure it will if you do what Hoffer says caring for these plants like all plants consists of keeping them watered and fed, and placing them in the correct light, either high, medium or low, and protecting them from cold or hot extremes and drafts. Advantages of hydroculture in plant care include a special gauge that tells when the plant needs water and feeding - so you won't forget when you fed the plant six months ago. Hydroculture plants have fewer diseases and pests than soil plants, Hoffer says. Many plant diseases are carried through the soil or result from decaying soil, she says. About the only problems she has is with airborne pests such as mealy bugs Actually, she's only had one incident of mealy bugs that was quickly controlled by cutting the plant back, soaking the roots in alcohol and boiling the rocks. She hasn't had any spider

One of the largest problems in the Panhandle is this country's extremely hard water. Hoffer says many times when the plant tips turn brown, hard water is the culprit.

... Snow, ice and rain water are not recommended for plants, however, she says. Lukewarm water, un - softened is best, she said. "You wouldn't like an ice - cold bath - and neither do plants," she explains.

Watering times vary according to the plant, she says. "Some of them are heavy drinkers" and need to be watered once a week. Most of the others do not need watering as often. Hydroculture in its current form began in Germany and was brought to the United States about 10 years ago, Hoffer says. Ancient Greeks were known to have experimented with the water and rock form of growing plants, however.

"I always ask people, 'What's your name and what's your favorite plant.' But to tell you the truth, I change from day to day. That gives me a good reason to cuddle and talk with different ones," Hoffer says, smiling. "Plants are like people to me. They really thrive with a little TLC."

Janice Hoffer seems to be in her element method involving rocks, water and food as she surrounds herself with some of the plants she grows using hydroculture - a

Planning ahead key to good camping

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

Camping, when done right, is an ideal way to escape the pressures of everyday living. Cooking outdoors, sleeping under the stars, and enjoying the wonders of nature can all be rewarding experiences - provided you are prepared with the proper equipment, food and supplies. Planning is the key to good camping. Campers should consider all of the activities to be included in the camping trip and prepared accordingly.

When packing clothes, consider the temperature extremes you will have to endure. Even if you plan to travel in warm weather, take a warm jacket and a few pairs of wool socks as well as long - sleeved shirts and long loose pants. Sleeves and pant legs can be rolled up on hot days, and rolled down for protection from sun and brush

Other necessities include a sturdy pair of shoes, a raincoat and a hat to prevent direct exposure to the sun. Don't plan to sleep in the clothes you wear during the day. They will retain body moisture and will feel cold and clammy at night.

Remember to take personal supplies and basic necessities such as soap, toothbrush, toothpaste, toilet paper, mirror, and shaving gear. Include a first aid kit and insect repellent. Plastic bags are useful for storing dirty clothes until they can be washed. Don't forget laundry products for campsite or coin operated laundering.

Water and sanitary facilities are generally available at most camping areas. But having some conveniences of your own are an added plus.

An idea for providing a supply of water for washing hands at your location is to make a water jug from an empty plastic bottle and a piece of rope. A large bleach bottle with a handle is ideal. Rinse the bottle thoroughly and punch a hole opposite the handle and near the bottom of the jug. Thread the rope through the handle tying it securely so that both ends of the rope are free. Tie one end to a tree branch and use the other end to hang a nylon sock or bag containing a bar of soap. Then fill the jug with water and secure the cap tightly. Turn the water on by unscrewing the cap until a steady stream comes out through the punched hole. Plug the hole between washings by using a small cork or golf tee.

sleeping bag. A canvas tarp, a piece of heavy plastic or newspaper will all work well. An air mattress or foam pad will further increase your comfort, separating your body from uneven ground.

How much kitchen equipment you take on a camping trip will depend on your own needs. The basics fall in five categories: cooking equipment, fuel tools, eating utensils, cleaning supplies, and storage facilities.

Cooking equipment should include pots, pans, can opener, mixing spoons, spatula, hot pads and an asbestos glove for working around the fire. If you plan to cook over a wood fire, bring an ax or hatchet and a bow saw. Shovels, a sharp knife and newspaper also come in handy!

Eating supplies should include bowls, cups, plates, glasses, flatware, napkins, and perhaps a vinyl tablecloth. Using disposables make clean up easier. Even if you elect to pack

You can save cleaning time and keep pots attractive if you rub some liquid detergent over their exteriors before using. This procedure prevents pots from turning black over an open flame. When you have finished cooking, wipe pot exteriors with a damp cloth. You will find that the detergent serves as a protective shield between the bottom of the pot and the soot from the fire.

Proper planning insures a comfortable camping experience, and it also makes it possible to clean up with ease. Cleanliness is an important part of a camper's life, and good, experienced campers consider themselves honor - bound to pick up litter in a campsite no matter who left it behind.

Drive-in theaters' popularity is waning

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — The obituary of the drive-in theater industry is not ready to be written but, according to some, there is a growing illness that may not have a cure.

Following World War II, these massive outdoor showplaces sprang up all over the landscape, usually just far enough out of town to be accessible while giving the feeling that a carload of people were going someplace when they set out to reach one.

The smallest of them needed several acres to accommodate the parking spots, the standards for the speakers and heaters, the ever - present gaudy refreshment stand and, of course, the screen which rose several stories above everything else in Gasoline was cheap, compared to today's prices. So people could, and did, make their way to what they called, variously, 'passion pit,'' "balcony in the boonies," "poorman's palace" and a welter of other nicknames.

It was a relatively cheap and enjoyable way for a whole family or a carload of friends to spend the entire evening.

run features along with cartoons, newsreels and previews of major threat to drive -ins. coming attractions, just like their counterparts under roofs. And they even conducted those popular giveaways and game shows at the intermissions.

But there was one other aspect that they had as an advantage over the standard theaters. People could attend without getting as well - dressed as the custom then demanded for going downtown to an in - house theater.

Gone now are all the little extras. There are no more carhops waiting to serve the viewers, no newsreels or giveaways, and the schedule has been cut back, in most cases to two or three weekend days at the majority of the under - the - stars

Mike Delfino, owner of the Circle Drive - In on the Scranton -Carbondale Highway, says drive - ins can't compete with the movie houses for first - run features. Although Delfino doesn't foresee a shutdown of his operation, he admits, "Everything

The drive - ins had it all going for them. They showed first - has its price." With that, Delfino hit upon what is probably the

In recent years, the sylvan settings of most of these places have become increasingly open to individual homebuilders. developers and other businesses. Space for building within the established cities either is running out or is totally unavailable. That puts the pressure on the outlying areas, and the price offerings for such pieces of land that now contain the open - air theaters are rising almost daily

Frank Scavo, operator of the Oak Hill Drive - In in Moosic, says his business is not what it was in the past, but adds that his operation isn't anywhere near the point where he would abandon it.

At least two of the Scranton - area "ozoners," as the movie trade papers like to call drive - ins, have kept the wolf from the door to some extent by opening their places to flea markets on one or two days a week. All the theater owners point out that they rely heavily on younger people as their audience.

"It's a place," one of them said. "where they can meet and be together without parental eyes on them. That doesn't mean we operate a lovers' lane. It just means that the kids can be. for a couple of hours, away from the social pressures they may have in a theater."

So the rage for drive - ins that prevailed during the late 1940s through the '50s and '60s has cooled. And as all the outdoor theater managers readily acknowledge, television has been

Company store's closing a tragedy

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (AP) - Another company store, where thousands of coal miners bought milk and television sets.

wristwatches and campers, rang up debts in bad times and paid them off in good times, quietly passed away this summer.

For manager George Leake, and for everybody who furnished his home and set his table with goods purchased here, the passing of Island Creek Store No. 1, like the passing of dozens of company stores over the years, is a small tragedy.

There was nothing you couldn't buy at a company store

Cliffhanger is cottage industry

AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) - When last we looked in on "Dynasty," Krystle had walked out on Blake and she and Alexis were trapped in a burning cabin.

Sounds like disaster, but don't bet on it. The ABC prime-time soap opera, like its arch rival, CBS' "Dallas," has turned the cliffhanger into a cottage industry.

That both Krystle Carrington and Alexis Carrington Colby will beat the heat is a sure thing. That the unknown arsonist who set the cabin fire will eventually be exposed you can count on. John Forsythe, who stars as the rich and powerful Blake Carrington, is also certain that Blake and Krystle will get back together. "You think I'm going to give her up?" asks Forsythe, raising one thick black eyebrow. "I'll fight for her. "You'll notice that with all of Blake Carrington's shenanigans he's still a man of integrity. He's a collector of things. His diadem, the jewel of his collection is Krystle. He's never looked at another woman. He regards their marriage as a sacred thing. With all his personal complications he's never looked at another woman. He's going to fight for her.'

Forsythe laughs suddenly. He says, "I think the cliffhanger is that I set the fire. What an easy way to dispose of a wife and an ex-wife.

"Dynasty" made its debut in January 1981 and staked its claim in "Dallas" territory: a continuing, larger-than-life story about wealth and power and the quest for power. "Dynasty" has been closing in since then on "Dallas." The ABC show ended the season as the fifth highest-ranked series, while "Dallas" was second.

Carrington is tough and dynamic, but he is no villain, as is the outrageous J.R. Ewing of "Dallas." The other characters (with the exception of Krystle) supply enough villainy to fill a serpentorium.

"Blake has changed remarkably since we came on the air," says Forsythe. "A lot of it is my doing, a lot is the realization on their part that we should go another way. I never wanted to be the J.R. of the show. I figured it was better to make Blake more human, a man with blacks and whites. I fought for that and we finally came to that decision. It gives him more

Forsythe is just back from filming an episode of "The Love Boat" in the People's Republic of China. Other than the "Love Boat" role, Forsythe says he has little time for activities, such as his splendid performance as the corrupt judge in 'And Justice for All

What little time he has goes to his series "World of Survival," which just completed its 12th year on the air.

He says, "I've had a lot of opportunities for movies, but the schedule just hasn't worked out. I don't want to be in a movie just to be in a movie. I think a lot of television stars have made the mistake of jumping into the first thing that comes along.

"Here I am playing one of the most interesting and challenging roles on television, so why should I take an

"Hee Haw!" began on CBS in June 1969 as a cornball sequel to "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In." CBS dropped the show in 1971, but it immediately went into syndication and continues to pull respectable ratings.

Little has changed on "Hee Haw!" from the time it was first shown. There are still segments featuring Archie Campbell's barbershop. Goober Lindsey's gas station and Clark's Empty Arms

"The key is simplicity." says Campbell, who's been with the show since the beginning as a performer and writer. "The whole world is seeking simplicity something you don't have to worry about

The Grand Ole Opry, a live country music show, has been presented for 58 years.

The aerobic dancing segment features Misty Rowe, Gunella Hutton, Diana Goodman and Victoria nostalgic echo, but often the audience is on its feet for what remains of that 1950s "doo-wop" vocal group, the Platters. Tony Williams, whose trong, tenor voice led the strong, tenor voice led the quintet to fame with such ballads as "Only You,"

"Twilight Time" and "Smoke
Gets in Your Eyes," is still performing, after leaving to pursue a solo career in 1960.

From 1954, when they recorded "Tell the World" for the old Federal label, until 1960, when "Red Sails in the Sunset" and "To Each His Own" climbed the charts, the Platters had four No. 1 hits on the pop charts and 16 gold records - all on the Mercury

What should have been a life of ease and celebrity for Williams, turned out to be more than two decades of relative obscurity, punctuated by personal problems and legal battles stemming from what he says were a string of broken

No longer twilight time for Tony Williams promises, bad contracts and ost royalties from records.

"You have to be a little bitter because of some of those things that happen," the 55-year-old Williams said before a recent appearance in this Mediterr playground. "Yeah, little bitter."

Still, he says his voice is still good. "In a way, it's better. Before, I didn't know what I was singing. Now I do. It's got more of myself in it."

The original Platters were bass Herb Reed; second tenor David Lynch, who died of cancer in 1981; and baritone Alex Hodge. Hodge was later replaced by Paul Robi, and after a few records, a 15-year-old singer named Zola Taylor was added to lend a different sound to the group.

Williams' effort as a single' artist, backed up by the now largely forgotten Kingtones, never got off the ground. He blames himself for trying to grab too much of stage time.

'I guess maybe I got a little bit of a big head," he says. Now Williams, whose only real fame stems from his days as one of the five Platters, cannot always evoke the group when he bills his act because of legal disputes over who owns the

At the movies: 'Class

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer "CLASS" is the surprise hit of the summer, a comedy that delivers more than it promises. The situation is not new: Mature woman introduces boy to sex. But the complication is different: Mature woman happens, by coincidence, to be mother of the boy's best friend and roommate. Most of the action takes place at an Illinois prep school where a shy scholarship student (Andrew McCarthy) and a prematurely cynical son of the rich (Rob Lowe) become buddies and engage in the customary school pranks. The dialogue written by Jim Kouf and David Greenwalt captures the preppie scene. and the crisp direction by Lewis John Carlino ("The Great Santini") is ideal. McCarthy and Lowe are perfect as the friends turned enemies. Jacqueline Bisset, who had sex in a jet lavatory in "Rich and Famous," now tries it in a see-through elevator. She is utterly convincing, as is Cliff Robertson as her macho husband. Rated R for language and sexual content.
