

Biologist studies flirting, women start it most

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A subtle nudge beside the video game. A seductive sway to jukebox music. A simple swivel of a bar stool. Such are the ways of flirting, and a biologist studying the phenomenon says women make the first move more than half the time.

"It's not pathological, and it's not voyeurism. It's genuine intellectual interest," said Timothy Perper, explaining how he began a two-year study that has taken him from Manhattan to Philadelphia.

Perper, 44, a former professor at Rutgers University, watched about 2,500 male-female encounters in 50 bars before reaching his conclusions. The study was funded by a $30,000 grant from the Guggenheim Foundation.

Perper said the grant let him do his research with a touch of class.

"We went to respectable places because we wanted to show that flirtations and pickups are in no way restricted to joints," he said.

At a bar in Philadelphia, Perper pointed out a female undergraduate from West Chester University standing next to a young man at a video game.

As they played, she leaned over and "accidentally" bumped into him. He failed to notice.

"Forget it," observed Perper. "That was a crucial escalation point."

From his post in the bar, Perper picks his "focal subjects," using techniques honed in the 1970s when he studied rats. He isolates and documents each step in the sequence of flirtation behavior.

"I learned how to observe watching the rats — to be objective and distant but not alienated. This is not a cold scientific pursuit that treats people like bugs."

During interviews, Perper found males were not as conscious of the signals used to initiate or escalate a flirtation as were women. He also found that men often were slow to respond.

"Women initiate more than half the time," he said in an interview published Thursday in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Perper was watching recently as Alice, an auditor from Texas, and Fred, a data-processing consultant, (not their real names) met in a dimly lit cocktail lounge in Somerset, N.J.

Alice and her sister chose a table next to one occupied by Fred and other men in three-piece suits.

"She's not pretty, but there's not a guy here who can resist her. She chooses, and Fred's been chosen."

Their shoulders touched briefly as he moved his elbow onto the back of her chair. As they exchanged business cards, their hands brushed.

"That's a reach," Perper said excitedly. "He's putting his arm into her body space. Conversation at this point is not about what they're doing. It's about business."

"Fred and I read each other, and for this minute, it was good," said Alice later. "We haven't promised each other anything beyond a dance later on. But dance is body language, a form of communication which may or may not lead to something else."

Smoke rises over city

Large columns of black smoke rise above the capital city of Colombo Friday as rioting continues in isolated parts of the country, although a 5 p.m. to 4 a.m. curfew is in effect. (AP Radiophoto)

11 killed in continued ethnic unrest

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Gunfire erupted before noon today in the crowded bazaar area of Colombo and in other districts of the capital, and 11 people were killed, the government said.

The shooting — which followed nearly a week of ethnic bloodletting — began when unidentified attackers threw a bomb from a rooftop at an army patrol below, the government said in a statement.

It did not say if the bomb exploded or if it injured anyone.

Soldiers then fired at the people who hurled the bomb, killing two of them and injuring a third, the release said. One soldier accidentally shot himself and died later of his wounds.

Tens of thousands fled the downtown area, which was sealed off by soldiers. Reporters who tried to enter were turned back at gunpoint.

Several fleeing the bazaar said they thought the people who attacked the soldiers were Tamil extremists, but this could not be verified.

Security forces also opened fire in several other areas of Colombo at "persons engaged in looting and arson," the statement said.

Thursday night was quiet as soldiers and police enforced a curfew after five days of ethnic violence. Authorities put the overall death toll at 71, unofficial counts at more than 125.

Slaughter and widespread arson earlier this week was directed against Tamils, who make up about 22 percent of Sri Lanka's 15 million people. The riots were sparked by the killing of 13 government soldiers — of the majority Sinhalese population — last Saturday by Tamil extremists seeking an independent state.

High emotions, hot tempers on House floor

WASHINGTON (AP) — On any other day of the year, the deeply carpeted chamber of the House of Representatives is a hallowed hall of dignity where members never refer to one another by name, there is no shouting, and personal attacks are forbidden.

But there are issues which stir deep emotions among politicians, and the rules of polite debate are abandoned.

It happened during the civil rights debates of the 1960s. And some legislators recalled the Vietnam War.

Now comes the intensifying and politically partisan battle over President Reagan's policy of blocking the spread of Marxist governments in Central America.

On and off Thursday night, it appeared that the boxing rules drafted by the Marquess of Queensbury were more fitting than Roberts Rules of Order.

At one point, Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., a Reagan opponent, said he was offended by remarks of some Republicans. He thought they had questioned his patriotism by accusing him of refusing to credit partial success to Reagan's efforts in Nicaragua.

"What we are talking about here is not whether we defend this country, but how," said Obey, plainly angered.

"I think there has been a tendency to assassinate the character of the person making the statement rather than effectively assassinating the argument of the person making the statement," he said.

One target of Obey's complaint, Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., said, "The gentleman attacked me personally."

Walker demanded an apology. Obey refused, saying "I would be surprised if anyone other than the gentleman had made the statement."

The exchange forced the rare use of a rule in which Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. had to decide that what Obey said did not violate the decorum of the House or amount to a personal attack.

While there were moments of humor, (Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., referred to a liberal amendment as having the impact of a "butterfly's hiccup.") two days of debate were mainly filled with deadly serious argument.

Some Democratic House members spoke of the risk of a widening war in Central America, and of young American men dying there.

Some conservative Republicans like Rep. Bill Young, R-Fla., painted a grim picture of the spread of socialist ideology.

Taxpayers stuck for party costs

By SHERILL McLEAREN
Special Correspondent

PERRYTON — Ochiltree County taxpayers threw an expensive lake party over the Fourth of July weekend. Taxpayers picked up a $10,000 tab for a holiday celebration at Lake Fryer, it was learned when commissioners approved county bills this week.

The $10,197 bill approved this week with other county bills totaling $122,053 was for the "holiday payroll" for work at Lake Fryer. County workers were paid double — time to wet down roads around the lake and for picking up trash and other maintenance. While the county lake lovers partied over the Fourth, the county workers collected $10,000 in overtime pay.

Commissioners this week also approved something they never announced they would do, so they had to meet today and do it again. Commissioners' earlier action to ask for bids for a concrete floor under a proposed county livestock pavilion was not listed on this week's meeting agenda. After several citizens' asked about the unannounced action, commissioners decided to hold a special meeting to first rescind, and then approve the bid letting again. Commissioners held the special meeting today.

In other action this week, commissioners:

— voted to hire Perryton contractor C.D. Russell to supervise construction of the new County Exposition Center.

— decided to study the car allowance and mileage paid to county road workers.

— approved putting in a large water meter, which Perryton city crews will install, at the county shop.

— took no action to buy tire — repair equipment.

— approved the deputation and bonding of Deputy Sheriff Jeffrey R. Torgerson.

— announced they will hold a work session on the county budget at 7 p.m. August 17.

— and heard a report from County Judge Howard Stone, who said the federal government will pay 90 percent of the cost of lengthening the runway at the county airport if the county can get the land.

U.S. military moves blamed for House cutoff of covert aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of President Reagan's allies in Congress say recent and planned military moves by the administration probably contributed to House rejection of U.S. undercover aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

With a handful of GOP members joining most of the House's Democratic majority, the lawmakers voted Thursday to call off all secret military and intelligence aid to the Nicaraguan guerrillas by the end of the year.

With Republicans in control of the Senate, there is little chance the measure will reach Reagan's desk, where he would probably veto it anyway.

"It was a free vote," said Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the Republican whip. "They know it really won't go into law."

"We will have to wait and see what the Senate does, but I think it sends a very powerful signal," said Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, the Democratic leader.

Lott said he thought the opponents of administration policy probably picked up two or more Republican votes because of announcements of naval and troop maneuvers in Central America, and the same developments may have "hardened" some Democratic votes against the administration.

Rep. W.C. Young, R-Fla., said, "Probably politically, it would have been better if this legislative debate and the exercise had not come at the same time."

Rep. William Whitehurst, R-Va.,

however, said he did not think the maneuvers had any effect.

The final count was 228-195, but Lott and others said the key to the outcome was an earlier vote of 223-203 against an administration-backed amendment to allow covert aid to continue. The assistance would have stopped only if the president or the Organization of American States certified that Nicaragua had forgone its support to rebels in other Central American countries.

Nine Republicans joined 214 Democrats on that vote. There were 156 Republican votes and 47 Democratic votes for it.

"It was pretty much as we expected on our side," said Lott.

Before the final vote, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger criticized the congressional actions to reporters in Hartford, Conn., saying, "There are many situations in which it is very much to the interests of the United States to have covert actions take place where there has been a proper presidential finding. To say that we can't ever under any circumstances engage in those types of activities ... could conceivably require actions of a different kind that would not be nearly as effective."

Meanwhile, Democratic congressional leaders wrote Reagan calling for "an ongoing system of timely briefings" when future military exercises are planned.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Senate Minority Leader Robert C.

Byrd said they were given no advance notice of the planned deployments in Honduras and off the coast of Central America.

"We deeply regret ... that virtually all of our information has been derived from published reports in the news media," they said.

Republican and Democratic supporters of the president in the House debate echoed his description of the 12,000 Nicaraguan guerrillas as "freedom fighters," but Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., said:

"We are preparing to do a land version of the Bay of Pigs with the thousands of thugs, brigands and thieves that we are proposing to finance."

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., strongly objected to this description, saying, "It's an outrage. Words have meaning, and we ought to keep our language consistent with the facts."

After the debate, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., predicted the Soviets, who the administration says are supplying arms for rebels in Central America, "will conclude that if they hang on ... our will to pursue the war is not great, and they can win something they couldn't win on the battlefield."

The exact date of the proposed cutoff was made a secret to avoid reprisals against the rebels seeking to overthrow the government in Managua.

Aid totaling well over $19 million would be stopped, and replaced with $90 million to be openly dispersed this year.

Police must comply with newspaper request

Attorney General Jim Mattox has ruled on an Open Records dispute over police records between the City of Pampa and The Pampa News and said the Pampa Police Department must release its arrest, radio, and jail records to the public, an Austin spokeswoman for the Opinions Committee said today.

The spokeswoman, who declined to be identified, said Mattox ruled Thursday that Pampa police must release to the newspaper and public their arrest, radio and jail records.

City Attorney Don Lane was notified of the Open Records Decision by phone about 11 this morning.

The ruling says the police must release to the public the names, ages, addresses, social security numbers and charges against the people they arrest. Exempt from disclosure by the ruling are the names of juveniles.

The ruling further says the police must release the information maintained on their radio log, including the time and location of calls police make and the reason for the calls. Exempt from disclosure in the radio records by the ruling is the name of a complainant making the call for police.

Further, the ruling orders police to release their jail records to the public, including the names, ages, addresses, charges and bonding information about people in custody in city jail.

In a telephone interview today, the Austin spokeswoman said the ruling is called Open Records Decision 394 and said the state will print it in the Texas Register sometime next week.

On June 17, The Pampa Police Department and city officials denied the newspaper's written request for "routine, daily access" to the police arrest, radio and city jail records. The newspaper's management made the formal request for the police records in a letter dated June 10.

When it denied The Pampa News's written request, the city asked the attorney general for the ruling as to whether the requested records must be released to the public.

Attorney General John Hill previously ruled in 1976 that the requested arrest records are public and must be released. Opinion Committee spokeswoman Susan Garrison said previously.

However, the ruling by Mattox Thursday is the first specifically about police radio logs and jail rosters. The ruling sets a precedent for news organizations and citizens across the state.

The newspaper made the formal request for the police records after it dropped its daily coverage of the police beat and stopped printing all police-issued information on May 27.

Managing Editor Anthony "Slim" Randles said then that for at least the past year, Pampa police have released only incomplete information about the total number of people they arrest, in some cases omitting drunk - driving arrest reports of "prominent" citizens, jail escapes and others.

Randles said until the newspaper receives the records ordered for release, it would report police activities only by using "other sources."

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman previously denied that the omission of any names from the police "blotter," the prepared report issued to the news media daily, was deliberate.

"We're just going to wait on the AG's opinion before we make any comment," Ryzman said last month.

"I always tried to cooperate with you people. Whatever the attorney general says, that's fine with me. As long as we have a good legal decision, we'll go along with it," the chief said.

Job Hunter

Ronald Dauer, 24, a native-born Pampa resident, says he is willing to work at anything and is willing to relocate.

"Once I start a job, I stay with it until it's done," he said.

Dauer grew up on a farm outside of Pampa and is a 1977 graduate of Pampa High School. He was a farm hand and a ranch hand and says he knows a lot about livestock and has worked for a several area ranchers.

He also has worked at a variety of jobs including oilfield janitor, truck driver, cement worker, pump truck operator and bulk truck operator. Dauer also added, "I drove a truck during wheat harvest."

Dauer is willing to relocate and is willing to work at anything or train.

If you're interested in hiring Dauer, you can contact him at Star Rt. 2, Box 30 or call 685-1868.

Bond lowered for

Joseph Rowsey

Bond for Joseph Wayne Rowsey, charged with aggravated assault, was reduced from $50,000 to $25,000 in 223rd District Court Thursday by agreement between the state, defendant and court, Judge Don Cain said Friday.

Rowsey was charged with aggravated assault following an incident July 10 in which Rowsey allegedly cut the throat of a Pampa woman, Carol Witt.

Rowsey was still being held in the Gray County jail at press time today.

Local unemployment levels off

The latest official figures show Pampa's unemployment rate has leveled off, but still rides well above eight percent and several percentage points above the historical level.

Texas Employment Commission Pampa Manager Charles Vance said Thursday that the unemployment rate in Pampa for the month of May dropped one tenth of one percent, down from April's 8.5 percent to 8.4 percent. The unemployment rate during May for all of Gray County, however, remained unchanged from the previous month at 8.6 percent.

"It stabilized. That's better than having it go the other way," Vance said.

He attributes the rate's slight drop and leveling off for May to an increase in outdoor jobs. Vance said various types of outdoor, seasonal labor jobs, including jobs in construction and agriculture, showed an increase for the month.

Some of the jobs opened during May "might be mowing grass or building fence," the TEC manager said.

"That's good news, a little light on the horizon," Vance said about the latest unemployment figures.

American, Briton are reported held as prisoners in Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thai fishermen freed from a Vietnam prison claim they met a jailed American and Briton apparently seized while hunting for pirate treasure in Vietnamese waters, the U.S. Consulate said today.

A consulate official, who declined to be identified, confirmed an account of the fishermen's story that appeared in the English-language daily The Nation Review.

Vietnam has not officially reported capturing any Westerners of its coast.

One of the fishermen was quoted by the newspaper as saying, "Yes, this is the one we met in Vietnam," after he was shown a photograph of Richard Knight, a Briton last seen in Thailand in early June.

Also reported seen in Vietnamese custody was Frederick Graham, 19, of Belmont, Calif. He has been missing since mid-June when he joined an expedition to search for treasure Knight believed was buried on a Vietnamese coastal island by the 17th century Scottish pirate William Kidd.

Thirteen Thai fishermen were released by the Vietnamese and returned to Thailand last week. Thai fishermen frequently are arrested and jailed by the Vietnamese for allegedly fishing in their territorial waters.

The newspaper quoted Prayat Pathongmai, a trawler skipper, as saying the two Westerners were detained near the Thai group, questioned by the captors and then driven away.

The U.S. Consulate official said he also interviewed the skipper, who was shown several photographs and quickly identified a picture of Graham as an inmate in the Kien Giang prison. The skipper told the consulate official the Westerners were detained with the Thais for 10 or 12 days.

"We were told that they left for either Saigon or Hanoi," the newspaper quoted the skipper as saying. The Thais reportedly were told by a Vietnamese warden that the Westerners were arrested while exploring for oil in Vietnam.

"We had been in jail for a couple of months when they arrived early this month. Their hair was cut shortly after they were arrested," the skipper was quoted as saying.

Knight was last seen June 8 in the Thai sea resort of Pattaya, 75 miles southeast of Bangkok, where he rented a speedboat from a local owner.

The latest police reports indicate he had also rented a fishing boat at a nearby village and set out to sea with another foreigner and two Thais aboard, taking the speedboat in tow.

Prior to the disappearance, Knight had related to a Bangkok-based Australian journalist a plan to uncover treasure he believed was buried on an island off Vietnam's southwestern coast.

Deliberations begin in woman's murder trial

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Jurors deliberating the fate of a young mother accused of murder in the bludgeoning death of her former husband are faced with determining whose voice says "hit him again" on a portion of a tape-recorded slaying.

Witnesses testifying against defendant Sherry Wolf contend the voice saying "Get him up, get him out of here, the front door. Now hit him again" belongs to Mrs. Wolf.

A defense witness says it belongs to Mrs. Wolf's current husband, Paul Wolf.

Mrs. Wolf's attorney, Jim Bates of Edinburg, rested his case in state district court here Thursday afternoon following a half-day debate over the voices on the recording.

Bates acknowledged the jury's decision may hinge on who it believes because, he said, eye-witness testimony against Mrs. Wolf by Glenn Henderson is not corroborated by any other evidence.

But Ted Campagnolo, Cameron County assistant district attorney, contends that Henderson's testimony is corroborated by the tape recording and statements Mrs. Wolf made to Texas Ranger Bruce Casteel.

Casteel testified during the three-days of testimony that Mrs. Wolf, a 21-year-old mother of two, told him before she was indicted that she didn't see Staton the night he was killed.

Both sides have agreed that it is Mrs. Wolf's voice on the beginning of the tape talking with her daughter by Staton.

Prosecutors contend Staton and his fiancée, Leticia Castero, were slain to end court battles over extended visitation rights Staton had been seeking to see his daughter, Melanie, who was 2 1/2 years old at the time.

Henderson, a 19-year-old ninth grade dropout, testified Mrs. Wolf helped plan and carry out Staton's slaying by keeping him occupied so her current husband could sneak up behind Staton and kill him.

Henderson, who said he acted out of friendship when he aided in the killings, is serving a life prison sentence for his guilty plea to Miss Castero's murder.

Wolf, 21, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison April 20 by a state district court jury for Miss Castero's murder. He later pleaded guilty to Staton's slaying.

Staton was bludgeoned to death with a metal bar by Wolf as he sat talking with his daughter at the Wolf home July 16, 1982. Miss Castero, who had been waiting in the car, was then beaten with a hammer and shot.

Jurors listened again Thursday to Staton's tape recording, which captured Staton's voice talking with his daughter, other voices, the sounds of the blows to Staton's head and his final dying moans.

Henderson and Staton's sister-in-law, Margaret Staton, testified that it is Mrs. Wolf's voice on the "hit him again" portion of the tape.

Mrs. Staton and her husband, Gilbert, are attempting to win custody of their niece through the courts.

Annette Bristol-Poth, a doctoral student in linguistics at Texas A&M University, testified that she also listened to the portion of the tape in question.

"I'm saying there's no chance that's her voice," Ms. Bristol-Poth said. "I'm certain it's Paul."

Ms. Bristol-Poth, a distant relative of Mrs. Wolf, and FBI analyst Keith Sponholtz testified, however, that the voices on the tape cannot be scientifically identified because the background noise, which includes an air conditioner, is too loud.

Ms. Bristol-Poth, who played several taped comparisons she made of the Wolfs' voices Thursday, also disagreed with other portions of the state's transcription.

A mini-cassette tape recorder was found taped to Staton's stomach when his body was dragged from a Rio Grande Valley drainage canal three weeks after the murder. Miss Castero's body was found in a separate canal.

Earth slide buries Colombian workers

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — An avalanche of earth, mud and rocks buried and killed at least 120 men heading to work on a dam in the Andes of western Colombia, authorities said today.

Gov. Julio Cesar Sanchez of Cundinamarca state said the huge wall of earth and mud trapped the workers in a mountain pass on the construction site at about 8:30 p.m. Thursday about 90 miles east of Bogota.

He said about 10 men were trapped in an initial slide, and that the others were killed by a second slide that poured down the mountainside while they were trying to rescue their co-workers.

A survivor said most victims were riding on three buses when the landslides hit.

Authorities said the victims included Yugoslav and Italian technicians, and 10 policemen.

Aquilino Martinez Vega, one of the workers who survived, told the radio station Caracol: "I heard a big noise. It was like an explosion. I saw a huge amount of earth and mud falling over us."

"I escaped and hid behind a water pipe. I don't know why I am alive because a huge amount of earth fell on the buses where my friends were."

Ten bodies were recovered by today, and police, troops and civil defense workers were searching for others.

New panel will travel nation exposing crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission investigating organized crime in America wants power to subpoena witnesses and evidence and will hold public hearings throughout the country to "reveal the threat criminal cartels pose to our nation's well-being," says its chairman.

U.S. Circuit Court Judge Irving R. Kaufman of New York was named Thursday by President Reagan to head the 20-member commission, charged with carrying out a three-year investigation.

Reagan said the commission's aim is to "break apart and cripple the organized criminal syndicates that for too long have been tolerated in America." The 73-year-old Kaufman said, "We will recommend strategies and legislation to make the business of organized crime unprofitable."

With Reagan's blessing, Kaufman said the commission will ask Congress for subpoena powers for its work.

Other members of the commission include former Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart; Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee; Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee; Stanford University Law School associate dean Thomas McBride, a former member of the Watergate Special Prosecution Force; and several state and local law enforcement officials.

Attorney General William French Smith compared the commission to the investigations of organized crime in the 1950s by the late Sens. Estes Kefauver and John McClellan.

No schedule has been set for the public hearings that Kaufman said will be held in every region of the country.

"We want to expose to the public this menace," Kaufman said.

Announcing the commission's makeup, Reagan said the panel will undertake "a region-by-region exposure and analysis of organized crime, to measure its influence and impact on American society, and make judicial and legislative recommendations."

Attorney General Smith said organized crime is turning up in the form of prison gangs, motorcycle gangs and drug rings based outside the United States but operating in this country. He said that "Japanese organized crime (is) spreading its tentacles into Hawaii and California and the West Coast."

Webster said he hoped the commission would pay particular attention to organized crime taking over legitimate businesses, using money derived from loan-sharking, gambling, prostitution, narcotics and bribery.

Farmers praise new pact but still worry about grain glut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm organizations and grain-state congressmen welcomed news of a new five-year grain sales pact between the United States and the Soviet Union, but most cautioned that it will do little to move the mountain of grain now depressing prices.

"It's modest, but welcome," said Robert B. Delano, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, noting that U.S. supplies of wheat, corn and feed grains available for overseas sale total 100 million metric tons.

The new agreement to sell the Soviets up to 12 million tons a year through 1988 "is not going to move that mountain very far," Delano said. But he added, "It can't hurt farm income, and might give it a little boost."

Agriculture Secretary John Block and U.S. Trade

Representative William Brock announced Thursday that U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Vienna, Austria, had reached "agreement in principle" on a grain pact to replace the current agreement which expires Sept. 30.

The agreement, to be signed late in August, will require that the Soviets buy at least 9 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, in roughly equal amounts, each year. Another 3 million tons could be purchased without seeking permission, and even more could be bought after consulting with government officials.

The current agreement, signed in 1975, called for minimum purchases of 6 million tons and up to 8 million tons without consultations. Traditionally, the Soviets have bought somewhat more than the specified maximums. They purchased about 14 million tons last year, but have bought barely 6 million tons so far this year.

Agriculture spokesmen said the most beneficial aspect of the new agreement may be its signal that the Soviets once again regard the United States as a reliable source of grain.

U.S. fields once produced 70 percent of Soviet grain import needs, but that level dropped to 20 percent after President Carter in 1980 imposed a partial embargo on grain sales because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"This is a gateway which opens opportunities for us to expand our trade with the Soviets," said Carl Schwensen, director of the National Association of Wheat Growers. He said the terms of the agreement were largely expected and therefore would not have a great immediate impact on market prices.

But the speed with which negotiators reached agreement during their third meeting came as a surprise, he said.

Rep. Pat Roberts, a Republican whose western Kansas district is the nation's largest wheat producer, said the move also "is a breakthrough for ending the use of agriculture as a foreign policy tool."

Work on a new agreement had been delayed for about 16 months by the Reagan administration because of the martial law crackdown in Poland.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who has been pressing for a new grain pact for a year, said: "U.S. farmers could have received no better news."

Mattox files motions, seeks to keep records from grand jury

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox has filed a motion to keep his office files out of the hands of a grand jury investigating his campaign reports and accusations he threatened to put a Houston law firm out of the bond business.

Mattox surrendered the records to a district judge Thursday night after prosecutors threatened to have law officers seize the files and bring the attorney general, in person, before grand jurors.

Prosecutors agreed to Mattox' demand that the documents be kept sealed until a hearing can be held on Mattox' motion to get them back.

A hearing on that issue was set for 2 p.m. Thursday in the court of State District Judge Mace B. Thurman.

The grand jury is looking into a charge that Mattox threatened to put a Houston law firm representing Mobil Oil Corp. out of the bonding business because one of the firm's lawyers was trying to subpoena Mattox' sister.

The attorney general's files were subpoenaed at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, and when they had not been delivered to the grand jury by 4:30, District Attorney Ronnie Earle filed a writ, signed by Thurman, authorizing police to seize the records and bring the attorney general to the courthouse.

"We thought that it was necessary to get the material as soon as possible once we told them what material we wanted," said Earle. "Without accusing anybody of anything, the opportunity would have existed for there to have been a security problem with what we subpoenaed."

The Mattox files subpoenaed include "all telephone records, diaries, notes of calls, recordings of calls, appointment books, desk calendars, travel itineraries, financial vouchers" and other documents, dating back to Jan. 1.

Mattox' personal attorney, Bob Jones, said he would try to get the records back Thursday on grounds "the grand jury does not have the right to intercede in the attorney-client privilege."

Arthur Mitchell, the attorney general's legal counsel, brought a one-foot tall stack of documents to Thurman's courtroom about 7:30 p.m. Grand jurors went home for the night about half an hour later.

Subpoenas were also issued during the day for Mattox' pilot, Edwin Low; Assistant Attorney General Tom Green; Mattox administrative aide Steve Hall, and a secretary from the attorney general's office, Patricia Manly.

Low was ordered to produce "all records and information relating to the use by the attorney general of any airplane owned, rented, leased or otherwise available to the State of Texas."

But the only person from Mattox' office to show up for the grand jury was Hall, who was one of two witnesses to testify Thursday.

Before questioning Hall, grand jurors quizzed Jesse Logan, financial director of the Lower Colorado River Authority. Logan left the secret proceedings without comment, but he apparently was questioned about accusations that Mattox had held up an LCRA bond proposal to retaliate against attorney Thomas McDade of the Houston law firm Fulbright & Jaworski.

McDade told reporters Mattox made the threat to withhold state approval of bond proposals handled by Fulbright & Jaworski because McDade was trying to subpoena Mattox' sister in another case.

The other case is a multimillion-dollar lawsuit filed by South Texas rancher-oil man Clinton Manges, who claims that Mobil owes him for years of oil drilled on his Duval County ranch because of technical lease violations.

The State of Texas has joined Manges in that suit because the state owns some of the mineral rights involved. Mattox is now representing the state in the case, though the state joined Manges in the suit before Mattox became attorney general.

Manges donated $50,000 to Mattox' 1982 campaign, but Mattox says that has nothing to do with his joining the oilman in the fight against Mobil. Mattox said if Manges wins his suit, it could mean $102 million or more for the state.

Many of the documents subpoenaed by the district attorney Thursday have also been subpoenaed by lawyers for Mobil, who have sought to have the judge in the Manges lawsuit, Ruben Garcia of Laredo, taken off the case.

Mattox claims Mobil has leaked unfavorable information to news reporters in an effort to discredit him and to pressure him to get the Laredo judge Mobil doesn't like out of the case.

In a speech to the AFL-CIO convention Thursday, Mattox suggested the union members help him by boycotting Mobil Oil products. The convention delegates responded with cheers.

Attorney general requests labor to launch boycott against Mobil

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox — saying he has been "bruised" in a bitter legal bout with Mobil Oil — has asked Texas union members to consider a boycott of Mobil products.

Mattox told a state AFL-CIO convention Thursday that Mobil had tried every tactic it "could think of" to block his attempt to settle an oil and gas lease dispute, and he added:

"There's something you can do to help me. One tactic I think you've been rather good at — I think we ought to think about, and I wish you'd think about — boycotting Mobil Oil's products."

Nearly 700 convention delegates responded to Mattox's request with applause, cheers, whistles and shouts of "Give 'em hell, Jim!"

Organized labor's boycott list already includes Coors beer, Procter & Gamble products and Magic Chef appliances, among others.

"Jim, there should be no doubt that everyone in this room stands with you," said Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard. "We'll stand with you all the way."

The "give 'em hell" shouts grew louder in Municipal Auditorium, with many of the delegates on their feet yelling and waving their fists.

In New York, Mobil's senior lawyer called Mattox's suggestion "outrageous" and "alarming."

Mobil issued a statement later Thursday in which attorney Charles Hoyt said he knew of no precedent for a state official seeking such sanctions against the multinational corporation, the Dallas Morning News said.

"We were dismayed to learn that the senior law enforcement officer of the State of Texas would consider using this outrageously improper form of retaliation solely because of our willingness to defend vigorously the lawful interests of our shareholders in the courts of Texas," Hoyt said.

Gov. Mark White was asked about Mattox's request, and he told a reporter, "I don't know that public officials should be recommending that sort of thing."

In a related development, a grand jury investigating Mattox' conduct in the Mobil suit subpoenaed him and four of his workers Thursday and demanded office records dating back to Jan. 1. The records were turned over to a court for safekeeping while Mattox fights to keep them from grand jurors.

Mattox, aligned against Mobil in a multimillion-dollar lawsuit filed by South Texas rancher-oilman Clinton Manges, said "it's just a simple fact" that Mobil has produced 11 million barrels of oil on 14,000 acres of state land since 1925 without a lease.

"I don't know what that's worth. At the prices the sold it for, it was worth $102 million," Mattox said. "All we've asked them to do is bring us back 11 million barrels of oil that you've taken from us."

Instead, Mattox told the convention, Mobil had hired investigators and lawyers in Midland, Corpus Christi, Houston, Washington and Laredo, and "There's a simple reason why — it's a whole lot easier for them to hire lawyers than to pay the money they owe the state of Texas."

"And I'll tell you, I'm tired of being pushed around by big oil. I really am," Mattox said.

"Aww-right!" union members shouted.

Manges, a contributor to Mattox's 1982 political campaign, claims Mobil took oil from his Duval County ranch without abiding by provisions in a lease contract. The Texas attorney general's office intervened because the state owns the mineral rights too some of the land.

Now, Mattox says Mobil's lawyers have leaked unfavorable information to the press in an effort to discredit him and to pressure him to get a Laredo judge Mobil doesn't like out of the case.

Judge questions informant's parole revokation

DALLAS (AP) — A judge says a man ordered back to prison after serving as an informant in a major Dallas drug case could be the victim of a bureaucratic struggle between the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles and police.

The informant, known as "Hugo" and "Rabbit" said he will be killed if he is sent back to the Texas Department of Corrections.

"Down there (at the Huntsville prison), no one likes a snitch," the informant told the Dallas Morning News. "You can't make it down there. I know I'm not going to make it out of there alive. It's like I'm sitting on death row. I'm a dead man. I don't have a chance."

The state board revoked his parole Monday, despite testimony on his behalf from five narcotics officers and the state district judge who originally sentenced him to prison on theft and forgery charges.

Dallas police say his aid helped them crack one of the largest drug operations in department history. Police obtained 160 arrest warrants, naming 112 suspects in what Dallas police said was one of their largest and most successful undercover operations.

The board said Hugo violated parole by acting as an informant for a law enforcement agency without proper permission, failing to submit a monthly report to his parole officer, and changing residences without permission.

State District Judge Kelly Loving expressed astonishment at the board's action.

"I'm surprised the parole board would consider it bad to side with the police and send him to the penitentiary. I don't understand it myself. This guy turned in a lot of dope dealers. The citizens are the beneficiaries of it," Loving said.

Although the parole board hadn't given its permission, Loving said he had, in a letter requested by Dallas police. Police said Hugo didn't meet monthly with his parole officer because they feared it might jeopardize the undercover operation if he were seen at the parole office.

The reason his address changed frequently, police said, was because they hid him for his own safety, moving him from hotel to hotel while the operation continued.

Free apartments

Owner gives free rent, depends on God to pay the utility bills

HOUSTON (AP) — Apartment owner Walter F. Rode, following what he says are instructions from heaven, last May opened his complex to the needy and stopped paying the apartment bills because, he said, "God will provide."

The poor showed up. Money for the bills has not.

Sixty-four families now live rent-free in Rode's Severne Apartments, but the electric company has cut off power and a bank is repossessing the complex next Wednesday.

Rode, though, says he still has faith.

"I'm not worried," said the 43-year-old native of Germany. "I walk in the faith of Jesus Christ. God will provide."

Many residents of the complex aren't so sure.

Most are unemployed and tempers were raw this week as the tenants sweltered inside dark apartments without air conditioning. Doors stood open in the two-story complex and some residents sat on steps or under trees around the empty swimming pool, seeking relief from the 90-degree temperatures.

And some of them blame Rode.

"He doesn't want to hear about the problems," said Debbie Inclina. "He's just trying to control everybody. You can compare Mr. Rode to James Jones of the People's Temple."

Nearby residents nodded in agreement.

Rode said the problems are only temporary and the residents are only "worried and confused. They need to have faith."

He added: "They (the bank) will not be able to foreclose and there will be a time when the lights are on and all the bills will be paid. Christians will unite and provide for those who believe."

What Christians will provide, he believes, is $440,000 to pay off the mortgage and all the other debts. That includes $29,000 in back mortgage payments and penalties, a $13,000 water bill, $8,400 for the power company and $1,300 to the gas company. There's also, he said, back mortgage payments on his home in nearby Sugar Land and $24,000 owed on his Mercedes Benz.

Rode said he stopped collecting rent at the apartments after seeing a vision in which God showed him a "mission."

"God spoke to me and told me to transform the whole complex into a home for distressed people," he said. Rode went on television to tell of his plan just after tornadoes had struck the Houston area. A number of homeless families moved into the complex, followed by others who were on welfare or out of work.

Rode issued an appeal to the Christian community, but has received only $150 in food and $40 in cash. He's not discouraged, though, he says.

Residents complain that although Rode doesn't require rent, he has rules that they don't like. These, said the residents, include curfews of 8 p.m. for children and 10 p.m. for adults, no alcoholic beverages and no swearing.

"We're not going to live here much longer," said Debbie Inclina's husband, Luke, a truck driver who was sipping beer in a neighbor's kitchen. "Nobody is going to dictate to me when I have to be in."

Another resident, Judy Becraft, said the rules were necessary because "the kids were running around until 1 and 2 in the morning. They (the rules) were started for their (residents) own good, but they aren't enforced."

Mrs. Becraft, who works in the apartment office as a volunteer, said residents can move in or out freely and all 64 units in the apartment complex are occupied because "God doesn't allow us to evict anybody."

Rode said he was born two days before the beginning of World War II in August, 1939 in what became East Germany. At age six, he said, he watched Russian soldiers shoot his father. At age 18, Rode fled to West Germany and eventually to the United States.

He worked as a welder and saved his money.

Nicaragua's peace plan

With peace proposals now flying almost as thickly in Central America as the bullets, it is a good time to think aloud about just who might really be interested in a "negotiated settlement."

Let us start with the Reagan administration. Its one non-negotiable objective is to prevent the transformation of Central America into a Soviet-Cuban beachhead on the mainland of the Western Hemisphere. Anything short of that, including a socialist but non-interventionist Nicaragua, would almost certainly be acceptable to an administration seriously handicapped by congressional opposition and the absence of a national consensus on U.S. policy in Central America.

The governments of El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras, and Guatemala want an end to Nicaraguan and other Soviet-bloc support for Marxist revolutionaries within their borders.

As for Nicaragua's Sandinista regime, it proclaims a willingness to respect the sovereignty of its neighbors in exchange for a regional agreement of non-intervention and a general de-militarization of Central America.

Note the parallel interests encompassed by each of these positions. Achieving a negotiated settlement in Central America would be child's play were it not for one overriding fact of life: The actions to date of the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua and its Soviet-bloc allies, especially Cuba, belie any genuine willingness to abandon the export of revolution.

Clearly, the barrier to a negotiated settlement in Central America is not any lack of "flexibility" in Washington, Mexico City, Caracas, or anywhere else in the hemisphere outside Havana and Managua.

Which brings us to the "peace proposals" advanced Tuesday by Nicaragua's Daniel Ortega, the hardcore Marxist who speaks most often for the Sandinista junta. Ortega said his government is willing to enter talks on a non-aggression pact between Nicaragua and Honduras, a freeze on all arms shipments to El Salvador, and an end to the use of foreign territory as a base of support for insurgencies in other countries.

The Reagan administration sees hints of conciliation in this language. So too, presumably, will members of the Contadora group and possibly some of the other states in Central America. Certainly there is reason for Washington to test Nicaragua's sincerity with at least some backdoor discussions.

But taking the Daniel Ortegas of this world at their word when they talk of compromises that would preclude the ultimate victory of Marxism requires, at the very least, an enormous leap of faith. Fidel Castro has made a career of betraying such faith for more than 20 years. And no one in Moscow has ever renounced, save as a temporary expedient, the imperative for all Marxist-Leninists to further revolution in every target of opportunity.

Odds are that the seeming conciliation coming from Nicaragua has more to do with the current military and political pressure on the Sandinistas than any desire for true compromise and a lasting negotiated settlement. That being the case, there is every reason to maintain or even increase that pressure.

Marketplace could set rates for credit cards

Texas bankers say they're unhappy about a new state law. It limits the interest they can charge on credit cards and it ties the rate to six-month treasury bills. Currently most credit card rates in Texas are between 16 percent and 17 percent.

Further, the bankers say, the lower rates allowed in Texas are causing some to consider moving their credit card business to Delaware - to the detriment of this state's business climate.

No one wants higher interest rates, and relatively few are going to cry about bankers losing a few pennies here and there - although those pennies add up quickly to considerable sums.

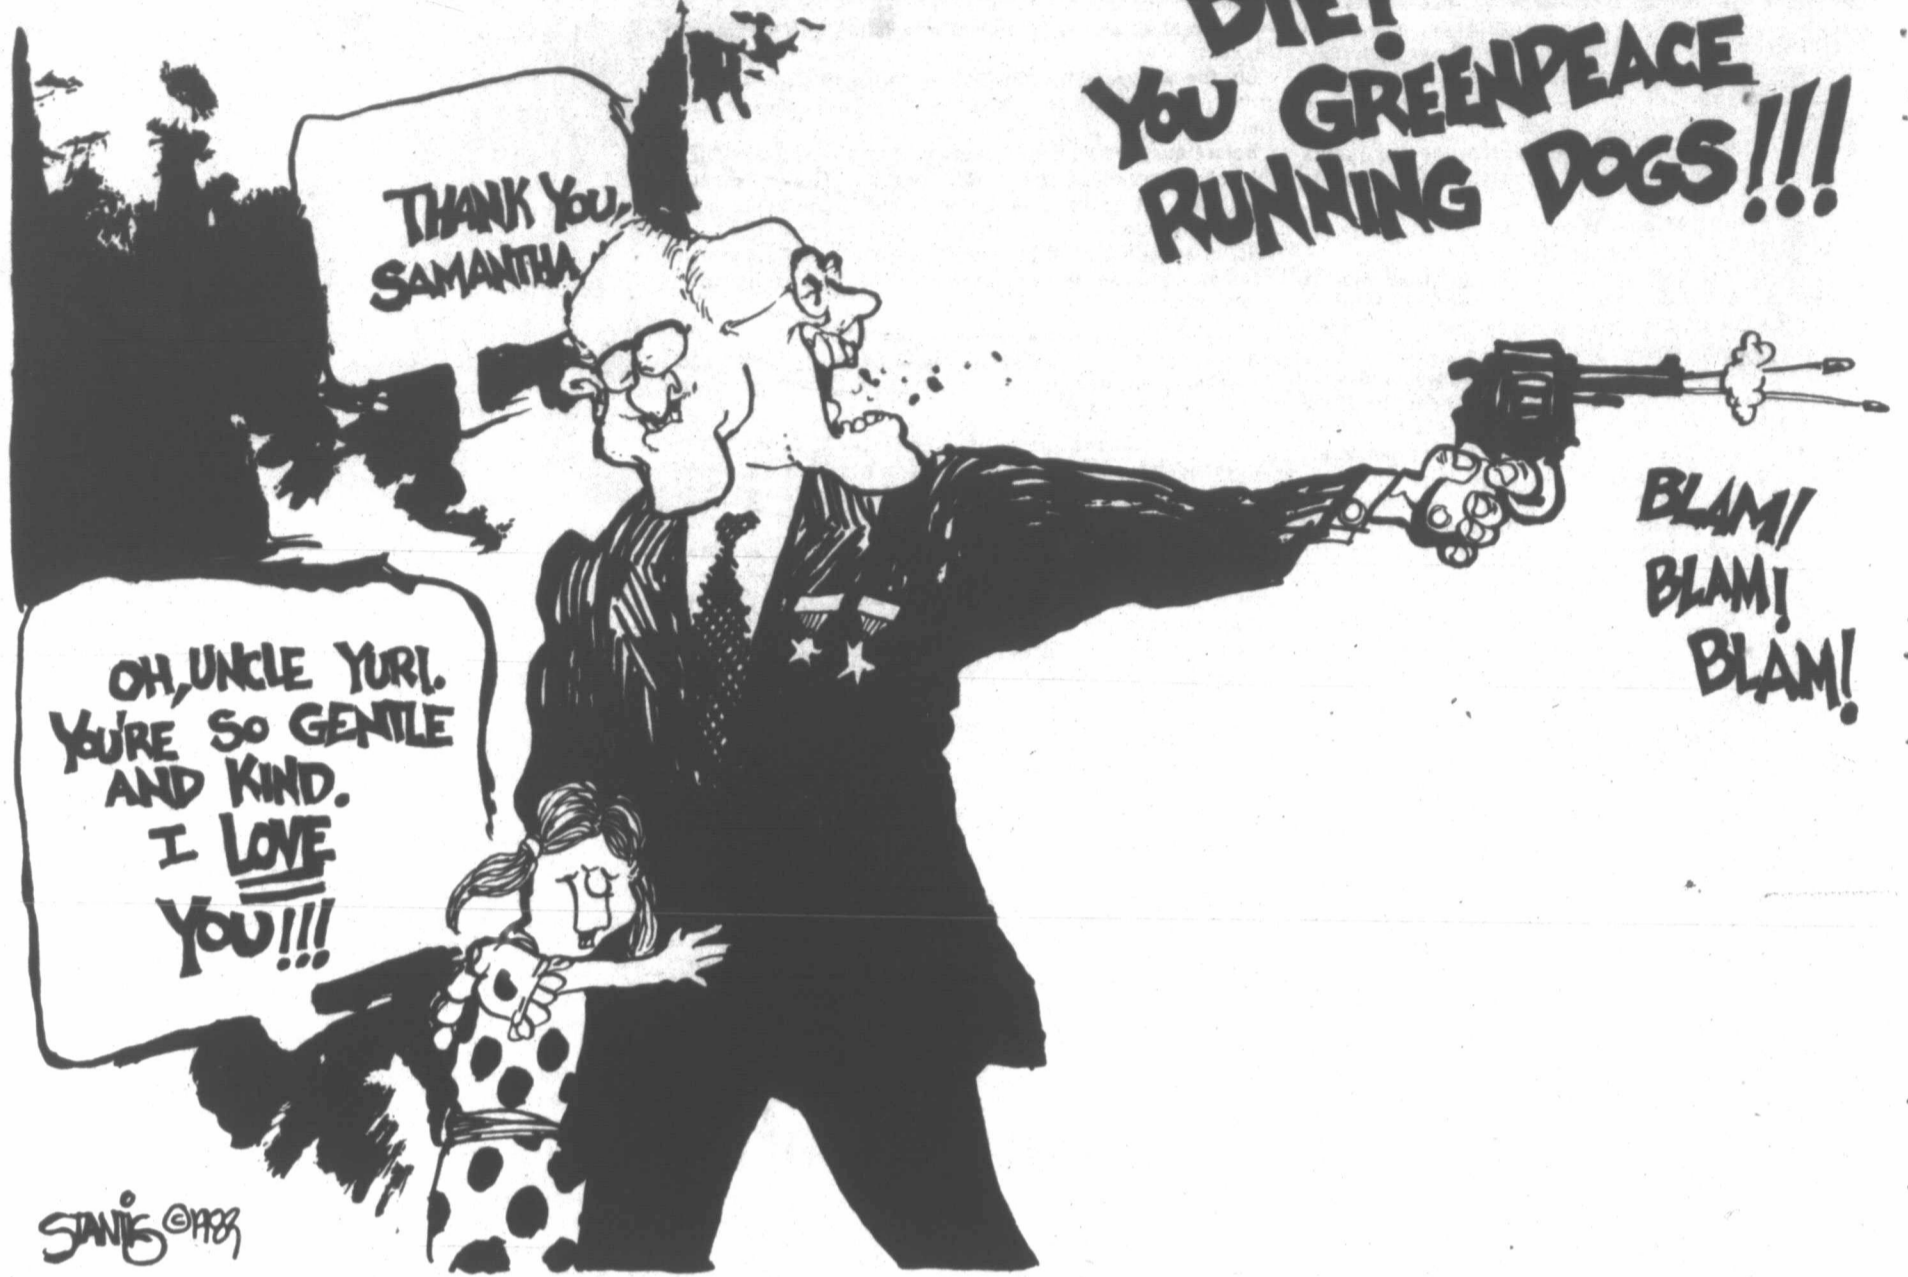

Still, it's a good point that by holding the allowable interest rates artificially low the Legislature has created a situation that places unnecessary restraints on a sector of the state's business establishment. The law apparently is intended to help consumers, but eventually is more likely to make it harder to borrow via credit cards.

The real question to be asked is why set interest limits at all? Surely the free market, with unhampered competition, would give consumers the best available interest rates considering the economic situation at any particular time. Rates would go down at times of plenty of money, up if money is scarce.

During the up-times, legislatures everywhere hasten to raise the allowable rates and later lower them. Borrowers really aren't being served with such political "help-the-voters" nonsense; in fact they're harmed as law-making lags behind reality.

Most Americans like the convenience of credit cards, as they prove daily by using them to the tune of millions of dollars. The banks and other businesses providing the cards and handling countless transactions every month must make a profit. Legislative squeezing of that profit may work on a short-term basis, but can't continue for long.

Rather, the Texas Legislature should provide an example for other states by leaving credit and interest rates to the free market.

Is winning everything?

By PAUL HARVEY

There is a place in Chicago where athletes go when they hurt. Curious, I visited.

For an afternoon I was shaking hands with athletes, many of whose names you'd recognize.

I saw baseball pitchers' ailing shoulders shot with cortisone for the umpteenth time so they could return to the game.

I asked an enormous football defensive lineman, hobbling on ailing knees, "Why?"

He was incredulous. He said, "Paul, I LOVE football!"

I saw a Pony Leaguer getting shots!

I saw guys with braces, trusses, corsets and slings protecting torn ligaments, separated shoulders, pinched neck nerves and pulled muscles and I remembered how Vince Lombardi used to tell his Green Bay Packers, "Winning isn't everything; it is THE ONLY THING!"

"I admired that fighting spirit then."

I don't any more.

John Matuszak has been talked into "one more season." The herniated disc in his spine "feels better" - so his announced retirement did not last even one season. He'll be back on the defensive line for the Raiders this fall.

Bill Walton, on the other hand, refused to take his injured foot back into play with the Trailblazers.

When some of his own teammates insisted, "We all play with pain," he asked, "Why?"

There is an enlightened shift away from the Lombardi philosophy.

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps reminds all his potential players to prepare themselves for something other than basketball.

An infinitesimal few will make the pro's; the average pro career is 3 1/2 years; then what?

If a man is 25 with 50 years yet to live and knows nothing but how to juggle a basketball he's in trouble.

If he's crippled by the game, it's worse.

Robert Shively, sports medicine specialist at Washington University, says, "Athletes who play hurt are not being tough; they're being dumb."

Shively, himself an ex-collegiate wrestler and football player, now treats the walking, running and jumping wounded at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. He says, "Too many kids are imitating their battle-scarred heroes and too many parents encourage it."

There is apparent the first dawn of an awakening perspective. New York State's public school system is experimenting with a program which categorizes student-athletes according to "maturity." Competitors are matched by weight, not age.

Injuries for all sports declined the first year from 32 per 100 to 3 per 100.

Lombardi was right for his time. But surely he, with his respect for human improvement, would expect us eventually to get smarter, also.

A lesson in buying spare parts

By ART BUCHWALD

The Department of Defense's Inspector General has revealed that 15,000 Air Force and Navy spare parts have sky rocketed more than 50 percent from 1980-82. Twenty seven percent of 4,000 items checked had risen more than 500 percent. These were not sophisticated items but things you can buy in any hardware store.

I was skeptical of the figures until I went into a hardware store near the Pentagon for a few household items.

"I would like a two and a half inch bolt," I told the man.

"Is this for yourself or for the Air Force?" the man asked.

"It's for me," I replied. "What's the difference?"

"Well if you were buying it for the Air Force it would cost you $17.59. But since it's for you I can let you have it for 67 cents."

"How come there are two prices?"

"If we charged the Air Force 67 cents they wouldn't believe the bolt was any good. But if they pay $17.59 they feel they're getting something for their money."

"I also need a connector socket."

"For your private use or the Navy's?"

"I'm not sure yet."

"Well please make up your mind. If you're buying it for yourself it will cost you our advertised price of $13.03. But if you're with Navy procurement we'll have to charge you $143.28."

"How come the Navy has to pay so much more for a connector socket?"

"Quality control."

"Won't they wind up with the same one I'm buying?"

"Of course. But whoever heard of the Navy paying wholesale for a connector socket."

"You must like doing business with the armed services."

"We certainly do. This engine bushing which sells for $2.83 to the man on the street costs the military $57.52."

"Don't you feel bad about overcharging the defense people?"

No compensation

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

In wartime, governments of free nations are forced to take action that in peacetime would strike citizens as extra-constitutional. Such was the case with the removal of Japanese-Americans from their homes on the Pacific coast in the period immediately following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor more than four decades ago.

Given the necessity, there is no reason why the U.S. should now compensate surviving internees, as the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians has recommended. The commission, appointed by President Jimmy Carter, has called for $1.5 billion in compensation to surviving internees.

John J. McCloy, President Roosevelt's assistant Secretary of War, has rightly condemned the Commission report, saying that the recommendations "are contrary to the interests of many thousands of American citizens who suffered heavily from the war and who have never been adequately compensated for their sufferings and losses."

Indeed Mr. McCloy, who held high government posts under several administrations, says the commission itself should be investigated for "its character, the manner and conduct of its hearings, and the lobby which stimulated its proceedings." U.S. Rep. Dan Lungren of California, the only member of Congress on the commission, also was the only member to oppose compensation.

Going back into history to provide compensation is a practice that cannot be justified. Would the commission favor compensation for black Americans who suffered cruel injustice or the descendants of Southerners who were exposed to Gen. Sherman's form of total war? Clearly, such matters belong to history.

In any case, the Roosevelt administration's action was justified in the face of an unprecedented national crisis. As Mr. McCloy states, the attack on Pearl Harbor "one of the most serious violations of international law in modern history, constituted full justification for Roosevelt's relocation order." It was approved by the U.S. Supreme Court and Earl Warren, then Governor of California and later the liberal Chief Justice of the U.S.

Young Americans can't begin to understand the very real threat felt by Americans on Dec. 7, 1941. The Japanese struck American territory and destroyed much of the U.S. fleet. Later, they would seize the Aleutian Islands off Alaska. A Japanese submarine would shell a West Coast oil facility. There was very good reason to believe that the imperial Japanese Navy would attack West Coast cities. Had the U.S. aircraft carriers been sunk in the Battle of Midway, such an attack undoubtedly would have taken place. The West Coast was dangerously exposed. The country couldn't afford a major security threat or the possibility of such a threat. It's unfortunate, even tragic, that the relocation had to take place, but the key factor was necessity. No nation ought to apologize for responding to necessity in order to ensure its survival.

Christians protest

A group of Christians protest Thursday near Sidon in southern Lebanon over the Israeli army's order that the Christian Phalange Militia will have to close its bases in areas of southern Lebanon. Syrians vacate Tripoli; Israelis reimpose curfew on West Bank

By The Associated Press
Rival Lebanese militias battled in Tripoli after Syrian forces unexpectedly pulled out, and Israeli troops hastily reimposed a curfew in the occupied West Bank city of Hebron when angry Palestinian Arabs stoned them.
Syria gave no reason for the sudden departure Thursday. But Lebanese police and radio reports suggested the Syrians withdrew to prove their claim that they keep peace in the northern port, where 12 militias are vying for control.
The reports said militiamen started shooting at each other moments after word of the Syrian pullout reached their commanders. There was no word on any casualties.
In Hebron, Israeli troops enforcing a curfew rescinded it briefly on Thursday so residents in the mostly Palestinian city could go shopping. But the troops quickly reimposed the curfew when protesters stoned security patrols.

The Israeli military command ordered the curfew in Hebron and Nablus on Tuesday, after terrorists killed three Palestinian students and wounded 33 at an Arab university in Hebron and escaped.
Palestinians blamed the killings on armed Israeli settlers. Israeli authorities have promised to find the killers, whoever they are.
Israel captured the territory from Jordan in the 1967 Six-Day War. Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government has been encouraging Jewish settlers to move into the West Bank, a policy viewed by many Arabs as a bid to annex the territory and drive the Palestinians out.

Elsewhere, rival Palestine Liberation Organization factions battled Thursday in east Lebanon. Police said they had no casualty estimates.
It was the sixth day of fighting between guerrillas loyal to PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and mutineers who claim he has mismanaged the campaign against Israel and appointed incompetent commanders.
Israel invaded Lebanon 14 months ago and drove Arafat's guerrillas from Beirut last fall. But thousands remain deployed in east Lebanon behind Syrian troops. The Syrians have been in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 civil war and refuse to consider leaving unless the Israelis withdraw unconditionally.
In south Lebanon, thousands of Christian demonstrators burned car tires and tolled church bells Thursday to protest what they called Israel's order expelling Christian Phalange militiamen from three towns. The Israelis said they ordered one Phalange barracks closed because it failed to cooperate with them.

In Washington, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens assured him that Israel's partial pullback from the central mountains to southern Lebanon is not aimed at partitioning that country.
Shultz, meeting with the ministers Thursday, said they told him the pullback is part of an eventual total withdrawal by Israeli forces.

Claim U.S. wants to wreck peace parley

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Nine Latin foreign ministers are meeting today in an attempt to bring peace to Central America, but Nicaragua says the United States wants to derail their effort with menacing war games and battle fleets.
Elsewhere, U.S. special envoy Richard Stone was reported trying to arrange a meeting in Costa Rica with El Salvador leftist insurgents. The U.S. House voted to end covert aid to rightist-led Nicaraguan rebels, and Nicaragua denied President Reagan's claims that Soviet ships are en route to supply it with more weapons.
The foreign ministers from Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama, known as the Contadora Group, organized the Panama City conference, which for the first time includes Nicaragua and four other Central American nations. The Contadora group got its name because of the Central American peace plan it first proposed Jan. 5 during a meeting on the Panamanian island Contadora.
"To some extent, we are here at this meeting with a gun at our head," Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said Thursday as the ministers opened their two-day conference.
Reagan, who has said it would be difficult to negotiate with Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, has ordered 19 warships deployed off Nicaragua's Atlantic and Pacific coasts. He also has ordered exercises involving 3,000 to 4,000 U.S. troops in Honduras.
Reagan has insisted the United States has no plans for military intervention in Central America. But he claims the Sandinistas threaten the region's stability by supporting leftist revolution, building a large army and developing close ties with the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Referring to the U.S. naval deployments, d'Escoto told reporters, "This goes to prove what we have been saying all along. The (United States) is trying to boycott, is trying to run over, is doing everything possible so that the initiative of Contadora fails. You can't ask a country that is suffering from aggression not to arm itself. That's absurd."
Though the ministers did not announce an agenda for the conference, an urgent issue is Nicaragua's threat to wage war with Honduras unless it stops allowing Nicaraguan rebels to use Honduran territory for raids into Nicaragua.
In Washington, the Democratic-controlled House on Thursday approved by 228-195 a cutoff of all secret and military intelligence aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Six Soviet ships unload in Nicaragua
MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Six Soviet bloc ships have unloaded in Nicaragua in the past week, but a top port official said "these ships come loaded with aid for the people of Nicaragua and not arms, as the North American government says." Director of Ports Cesar Delgado said the ships were filled with medicines, grain agricultural machinery and other goods.

Italian anti-Mafia judge killed; underworld blamed for bombing

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — A remote-control car bomb exploded on a Palermo street today, killing an outspoken anti-Mafia judge, his two bodyguards and a concierge. Police said underworld assassins probably were responsible.
The powerful blast outside the judge's apartment house also wounded three policemen, heavily damaged the building and shattered windows in nearby cars and buildings. Police immediately sealed off the street.
Judge Rocco Chinnici, 58, had directed a number of investigations into the Mafia after succeeding another judge killed in an ambush in 1979. He was married and the father of three children.
Chinnici strongly opposed the Mafia. Sicily's powerful criminal society, and had participated in several public forums denouncing the multimillion-dollar heroin trafficking between Sicily and the United States and the recycling of Mafia money into legitimate businesses on the island.

The Carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police, said the bomb was detonated by remote control as Chinnici and his Carabinieri bodyguards were exiting the building lobby to leave in his bullet-proof car.

Premier Amintore Fanfani immediately sent Justice Minister Clelio Darida to Palermo to investigate the assassinations.

Dear Abby

Wife's dead cat costs the earth

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When Liz and I were married, she had a cat named Snowball. No problem. But when Snowball went to that big cat house in the sky, Liz carried on as though she had lost a child.

We gave Snowball a beautiful funeral and buried her in the pet cemetery in a velvet-lined casket the size of a shoebox. The price tag on that, believe it or not, was $2,500.

Two years later we moved from Torrance, Calif., to Pittsfield, Mass., and Liz didn't want to leave Snowball, so she had her dug up and shipped to Massachusetts to be buried. That move cost me $1,200. OK, so now Snowball is in Massachusetts.

I am now being transferred back to California (San Diego this time), and you guessed it, Liz wants to move Snowball again. I don't want to be a meanie, but I am the sole breadwinner in this family, and I have had it with moving dead cats!

Liz says if I won't pay for moving Snowball to San Diego, she'll hock her engagement diamond to pay for it. What do you think?

COMPUTER EXPERT

DEAR EXPERT: Only a true cat lover can understand how another cat lover feels, so don't get your back up. Consider this: Have Snowball's remains cremated and kept in a lovely urn that can be easily transported without further needless expense. You and Liz could enjoy a lovely holiday if you'd just let sleeping cats lie.

...

DEAR ABBY: My father, who is 68, went to the hospital for what was supposed to be minor prostate surgery, but it turned out to be much more serious. The doctor discovered cancer so far gone he closed Dad up.

My mother made the doctor promise he wouldn't tell Dad. Don't you think Dad has a right to know? It will just be a matter of time before he catches on.

We, the children, are trying to persuade Mother to change her mind, but she insists that Dad is better off not knowing. She says, "Ignorance is bliss."

What do you think?

THE CHILDREN

DEAR CHILDREN: There is little "bliss" in ignorance that creates false hope. I think your father should be told in order to attend to any unfinished business.

...

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend moved in with me three months ago. (He's in his early 40s, and I'm in my early 30s.)

He is a salesman and sells products in people's homes. There are times when he comes home as late as midnight — sometimes with makeup and lipstick on his shirt. (I don't wear makeup.)

He swears he does not fool around. Should I believe him? Or should I throw him out?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: No to your first question, and yes to your second.

Parents set the tone for kids playing piano

CHICAGO (AP) — Parents can help their children succeed at the piano by providing the right environment for practicing, according to the National Piano Foundation.

To establish daily practice as a priority, parents should avoid overscheduling their children into too many other extra-curricular activities. The Foundation suggests. They should also experiment with the length of practice sessions: for some children, two or more short daily practice periods can be more effective than one longer session.

These and other tips for parents of young pianists are offered in a free booklet, "How to Help Your Child Succeed at the Piano." It is available by sending a stamped, self-addressed No. 10 envelope to the National Piano Foundation, Dept. A, 230 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., 60601.

Golfers' wives have fun during seniors tournament

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

This week the city has been filled with golfers all competing in the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament at the Pampa Country Club. And with these golfers are their wives, who say they've had fun this week, too.

Tuesday, 48 of the wives competed in the Senior Wives Putting Tournament. Winners were announced by Margaret Lawyer Wednesday at a salad luncheon. First and second-place winners received three and two golf balls, respectively. Third place winners won one ball. Ruth Gormeyer was presented with a ball for the most putts. "But you'll have to ask her how many that was," Lawyer quipped.

Floy Heath was recognized for having attended the golf tournament for 36 years. The Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament will be celebrating its 50th year next year.

First place in the fifth flight was Gwen Beardsly. Second place was Nellie Averitt. Fourth flight winner was Mary Nelson, with Rhonda Short coming in second. In the third flight, Rosemary Heatly won first, and Phyllis Gray, second. Second flight winner was Sis McClendon. DeLores Sharp is second. Winning the first flight was Opal Blackburn. Fay Cunningham came in second.

Jane Gattis emceed the program at the luncheon Wednesday. Sue Higdon played the organ for about 150 women who attended. Rochelle Lacy provided a delightful entertainment first by coming in as "Secondhand Rose," and trading jokes with Gattis before singing the song for the group. Another of her selections included a request by Otis Nace, the Association's secretary, for "Thank God I'm Old," a song from the musical "Barnum!" The women joined Lacy in singing "God Bless America!"

Tuesday and Wednesday wives formed bridge games. Others visited local merchants participating in a treasure hunt while their husbands sweated through the near-100 degree weather on the golf course.

Thursday the women were treated to brunch at the country club followed by a game of Bingo.

Library given

NEW YORK (AP) — Paulette Goddard, the film star, has bequeathed to New York University's Bobst Library the contents of her late husband's personal library.

He was Erick Mria Remarque, the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," and this is the only substantial collection of his work outside his birthplace of Osnabruck in Germany.

Remarque was born in 1898 and drafted into the German Army during World War I where he served on the Western Front and was wounded five times. His experiences were the basis for his now-classic anti-war novel. He continued to write, and his novels continued to sell. During World War II, he escaped to Switzerland.

Lose Marbles Get buried

By LISA PATMAN

Avoid physical exams

The other day I received an advertisement in the mail that offered "Burial Benefits! No Physical Exam Needed!" Funny, but I didn't know you needed an exam to be buried. Oh sure, I realize that the doctor has to look at you, nod his head and say something like, "Yep, she looks like a goner to me. What do you think, Dr. Fred? Do we still have our tee-off time?" But I was ignorant of the fact that a real examination was necessary before you could get covered with sod.

What kind of examination would it be, I wondered. Would they ask you the typical questions, like "Are you an habitual smoker?" "Do you drink alcohol to excess," or "Is there any other insanity in the family?" — the questions that you get when you're getting ready to do something really important, like applying for a credit card.

Or would they ask you more specific puzzles, such as "Are you always this peculiar shade of gray," "Do you normally stop breathing for long periods of time," and "What is this sheet doing covering your face?"

Gosh, it must be tough to try getting buried. I'd like to give all of you dear readers advice about it, but having been buried only for short periods of time, I really don't think of myself as an expert. There was one time, though, when a pile of dangerously unruly dirty clothes waited for me to turn my back, and then they pounced on me. Luckily I was armed with a box of enzyme detergent which came to my rescue in the nick of time. Then there was the occasion when I was tackled by a bunch of vicious teenagers — my own — and beaten to the ground. I was pretty helpless until I managed to display the sign I had been carrying as I picked the house. As soon as they read "Clean Up Your Room!" those kids were off like a shot.

Fortunately in both cases, I was not in need of a deeper burial, so that a cursory investigation was all that was necessary.

Still, that "Burial Benefits! No Physical Exam Needed!" worries me. Maybe they're after a mental examination, one which many of us could never pass, especially if we were frantically in need of a burial. Or perhaps they want an examination of our financial status, one which would certainly irk the more stingy of us, those who really want to take it with us.

But wait a minute, perhaps I read the whole thing wrong. Maybe it means that burial is a benefit when you can't stand up to a physical exam. That's it! Of course! Now it makes sense. There have been many times in my life when I would gleefully have been buried rather than take a physical examination. Like the time I applied for the belly-dancer's job, and they snickered at my stretch marks. Or the occasion when I was interviewed for a position as bag checker at the local supermarket and they turned me down, saying that the bags under my eyes would confuse the other sackers.

I think I'll look into the offer. Possibly they would pay me for a testimonial. "Yes, my friends, a timely burial does benefit. Avoid embarrassing physical exams by being buried right away, before you go to pot. I did, and I'm glad." Or maybe a singing commercial: "Bury me quick on the lone prairie, before the doc can examine me..."

Beat the drum slowly. Lay the sod'er me. I see a new career a-comin' along.

Stress seen as cause of child abuse cases

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — "In a week anyone can become a child abuser," says a Purdue University sociologist who believes it takes only the right set of circumstances to trigger a case of abuse.

"There's a myth that only people who were abused themselves will abuse their children, or that it is a lower-class phenomenon, or even that you have to be mentally ill," says Eean D. Knudsen, associate professor of sociology.

But just put a person into the right setting — add a lot of stress — and Knudsen predicts any normal person could become an abuser.

A father laid off from work, for instance, may be a model parent — until he is jobless and forced to stay at home. As tension increases, so does the potential for first-time child abuse.

Knudsen, who has been researching child-abuse cases in Tippecanoe County, Ind., for more than a decade, observes the frequency of reported cases of suspected abuse or neglect is up, from roughly 30 a year in 1970 to more than 1,100 in 1982.

Does this reflect a nationwide trend? Probably. "There's really no way to estimate the national figures, although reports are around a million a year," says the sociologist. The figures translate into one of every 14 children being abused, most by friends and relatives.

Knudsen believes it's stress in everyday living, from finances to relationships, that causes abuse to cut across the population. "Families don't get much support; they often don't even know their neighbors, and they can't seem to ask for help," Knudsen says.

Knudsen has observed what he calls a "cycle of violence," with two great contributors of modern life being TV and air-conditioning.

"Instead of sitting out on the porch or going to the park after supper, we're isolated from others, prisoners in our own homes," he points out. Worse still, no one is there to check our transgressions against our own kids, he adds.

Among the most frequent abusers, he says, are young, socially isolated parents who move frequently. They have low incomes and little access to help, he suggests.

Knudsen agrees with most theorists that the institutionalized violence in American society contributes to violence in the home. Prisons, for instance, and even schools, condone corporal punishment.

Drivers urged to foil car thieves

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Lock your car and take the key.

That's the easiest way to prevent someone from stealing your car, says an expert in the car security field. Yet nearly 80 percent of the more than 1 million cars stolen each year in this country are easy prey because owners carelessly leave the keys in the ignition or don't lock the door, he notes.

But experienced professionals can make a car vanish, with little chance of getting caught and at considerable profit, adds Donald Baker, director of loss prevention and security at National Car Rental System headquartered in Minneapolis.

"A skilled thief can break into a car in 40 seconds," he warns. Although there are no foolproof methods for preventing a car from being stolen, Baker offers some tips to slow a thief down, which are included in a booklet the company has compiled:

- Lock your car and take the keys with you.
- Never leave your car running unattended to warm it up or even dash into a store.
- Be sure to close all windows tightly.
- Park in well-lit areas, under street lights or in front of a brightly lit building.
- If you park on the street, turn your car wheels sharply to the right or left to prevent towing. For cars with four-wheel drive, pull on the emergency brake, and place the car in "park," which locks all wheels.

—Park in a locked garage whenever possible. If you park on the street every day be sure not to leave the car in the same place. Try to park in the middle of the block to make towing more difficult.

—If you park in a lot, leave only the ignition key with the attendant. Make sure the key numbers do not appear on the key you leave, since thieves can readily duplicate a key.

—Don't leave an extra set of keys in a "secret" hiding place. Thieves usually check the visors, ashtrays, under the floor mats, and fenders.

—Engrave the vehicle identification number in hard-to-find places which will make it easier to identify your car if it is stolen.

—Keep your license and registration with you and not in the car, unless required to do so by state law. Many who have their cars stolen find themselves victims of burglaries as well.

Owners of luxury cars, expensive sports cars and specialty vehicles run a greater risk of having their cars stolen, Baker points out. He suggests that owners consider installing anti-theft devices to prevent theft or at least hinder the thief's ability to enter, start or drive the car away.

Devices range from a noisy alarm that goes off if the doors are opened, to hidden cut-off switches on the ignition or fuel line. A more expensive system usually means better protection. More important is learning how to use such a device and making it an integral part of your driving habits.

Funds lacking to recover old ironclad

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer
MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Without the generosity of corporations to pay the cost of recovery, the Civil War ironclad Tecumseh may stay in a muddy Mobile Bay grave forever.

The battlecry of "raise the Tecumseh!" is really one of "Raise the money," and digging for dollars has not gone well for those who want to haul up the 225-foot Tecumseh.

Recent oil and natural gas exploration in the bay may eventually conflict with the sunken monitor, a heavily armored vessel that sailed out in advance of the Union fleet.

Texaco pulled out of bay exploration near the Tecumseh last year for fear of damaging the historic war relic. Buried in silt and sand in some 40 feet of water, only about six feet of its hull lies above the muddy bay bottom.

"There's just no funding now available in the magnitude that's needed," said Bob Edgington, a Mobile attorney and former state senator who spearheaded the recovery project years ago.

He said the sunken vessel is closely watched to prevent damage to the ship as well as the theft of valuable artifacts.

It has been almost a decade since a consultant's report projected the cost of raising the Tecumseh at $10 million. There have been no recent estimates on what the project would cost now.

The ironclad hit a Confederate mine in the early stages of the Battle of Mobile Bay on Aug. 5, 1864, and sank with 87 of her 109-man crew. None of the bodies was ever recovered.

Historians said Adm. David Glasgow Farragut, commander of the Union fleet, shouted: "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead," after the sinking of his fleet's monitor. The Confederate warships were defeated and the port was closed to the Confederate cause.

The Tecumseh capsized and went down in about 40 feet of water, some 300 yards northwest of historic Fort Morgan at the mouth of the bay. The Tecumseh was the lead ship and was followed by three other monitors, 10 frigates, and three wooden gunboats. Monitors are interesting to historians because they represent the transition from the navy of wood and sail to the more modern navy of steel and steam.

The Smithsonian Institution, which at one time had attempted to recover it, gave up title to the Tecumseh and turned it over to the General Services Administration, which relinquished its ownership to the Alabama Conservation Department.

All of this occurred after divers inspected the vessel in 1967 in the first stages of a recovery effort.

The monitor was commissioned in April 1864. The cost of construction was $637,000, according to records.

Lawrence Oaks, director of the Alabama Historical Commission, said the discussions about the Tecumseh have gone on for "years and years as to the ways to best preserve it."

Oaks was concerned over whether the technology exists to preserve the monitor if it were ever raised. But he said there was a "distinct possibility" it will never be raised "unless we have a well developed articulated strategy."

Edgington said several recovery plans have been proposed, including leaving the vessel in its present location but surrounding it with a cofferdam. The water level would be lowered to a point just above the highest point of the vessel.

Injured birds get loving care

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — They take your bait, steal your fish, stain your boat and bite you on occasion, but to Harry Kelton pelicans are graceful birds innocently tortured and injured by fishermen.

"They are so ugly, they're beautiful," says the 56-year-old mechanical-electrical engineer, who spends his days designing industrial robots and his spare time treating and caring for maimed pelicans.

Aboard his 40-foot houseboat appropriately named "Pelican" and docked at Pelican Harbor, Kelton maintains extensive logs, along with the hundreds of hooks and pieces of fishing line he's removed from the web-footed water birds. Most of the winged creatures he cares for are brown pelicans, an endangered species, that weigh 6-to-8 pounds and have a wingspan of about 5 feet.

Pelicans are injured, Kelton explains, because their only diet is fish, which attracts them to anyone fishing off piers, boats and from shore.

"When you toss a line out, they see the bait and go after it," he adds. But, in taking the bait or grabbing a fish brought to the surface, the pelican also takes the hook.

Severe damage is done when fishermen yank their lines after a pelican has "stolen" their bait or fish. The hook usually tears the large elastic pouch under the bill or, if the bird has swallowed the hook, it causes serious injury to the internal organs.

If the fishing line breaks, what's attached to the hook generally becomes entangled around the bird's wings, legs or neck. Fractures or strangulation usually follow.

Kelton and his wife, Darlene, live within a flyway used by about 200 resident birds from Bird Key just south of here.

"They fly north in the morning and back south to roost in the evening," he says. "When they can't fly, they swim the intracoastal or walk the rocks or roads to get home."

A local veterinarian, who wants to remain anonymous, helps Kelton with the more severe cases.

Wounded birds find their way to the Keltons via various routes. The Florida Marine Patrol brings a few, people who know of the Keltons' charitable work supply some, and area pier operators capture and hold seriously wounded pelicans until the couple pick them up.

Others make their way here on their own, seemingly aware help is available. Over 400 injured birds, including some seagulls and terns, have been treated by Kelton over the past 3 1/2 years.

Feeding his "patients" is increasingly expensive. The Keltons now spend $70 a week for about 140 pounds of Spanish sardines. The Tropical Audubon Society helps pay part of that cost, but the brunt of it falls on this working couple. Besides feeding the birds, there's the cost of bandages, antibiotics and other medical supplies.

Kelton feeds only the birds that are disabled and each gets less than a pound of fish per day although their daily consumption is about 4 pounds when they can get it. When a pelican has recovered, the free meals are discontinued, forcing the bird to fly away and fend for itself.

Mrs. Kelton is as enthusiastic about the pelicans as her husband.

"It's wonderful to take an injured bird and then watch it fly again," she says. "It takes you beyond caring for yourself or wondering what to have for dinner."

Hollywood's 'in' eateries

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In this culinary wonderland where a measure of a star's power is the gourmet restaurant he or she frequents, a few low-profile eateries have been high on the list of celebrities' "in" spots for half a century.

These places, as much a state of mind as Hollywood itself, are the legendary movie studio commissaries. Glitzy or drab, they share the lure of exclusivity which, in show business, transcends all else.

They have catered to act's, princes and prime ministers. Atx;table, munching a salad, may be Burt Reynolds. Over there, with his back to the door, you're likely to see Robert Redford trying not to be seen. On a given day, Raquel Welch, John Travolta and Sylvester Stallone might wander in for a light lunch.

Women's Wear Daily listed our commissary as one of the "in" plaxiff in this country," said 20th Century-Fox spokesman Jerry Greenberg. "But you can't get in unless you're part of the family."

Fox, with its "Shirley Temple Room" and vast mural-covered dining room, had considered opening its commissary to the public at night and on weekends. But the plan was dropped, possibly to preserve the clubby atmosphere. Studio officials wouldn't explain why.

"It was an idea that never got off the ground," Greenberg said. "Now it definitely will not happen."

The "family" of commissary patrons includes actors, writers, directors and thousands of assorted employees of the movie industry. In addition, the Fox commissary remains a favorite spot for charity dinners and political events such as two hosted there by President Reagan.

On most days, each commissary serves up to 2,000 lunches in the main dining rooms and adjoining fast-service cafeterias.

During movie and TV production season, it's often standing-room-only in commissaries at Fox, The Burbank Studios, MGM, Paramount and Walt Disney Studios. Not to mention perhaps the most famous and most ma'e NBC-TV commissary, a perpetual Johnny Carson joke.

Employees of NBC's "The Hungry Peacock" take the jibes in good humor.

"If it gets the laughs, why not?" said manager Gary Bardakji. "Everyone who comes here knows it's not true. We offer more variety than any restaurant around here."

Disney, which has its "Coral Room" at the corner of Mickey Avenue and Dopey Way, adds a cinematic flair to its menu with pictures of Mickey Mouse in a chef's hat and items such as the "Goofyburger." Other commissaries provide more sophisticated settings for business lunches.

"Deals are made here as much as at any other place," said Paramount spokeswoman Marcy Bolotin, who pointed with pride at the silver-and-taupe art deco interior of the new commissary designed as the pet project of studio chiefs Michael Eisner and Barry Diller.

"They wanted something special, to have the top notch commissary in Hollywood, and they accomplished that," said Ms. Bolotin. "It's competitive with any restaurant in the area. It's a big hit."

Fox commissary manager Heinz Koshuta said he's been told his establishment is like a five-star restaurant. "Everything is first class," he said.

These private eateries, subsidized by studios, beganx;. Studio heads devised them for a practical purpose — to keep actors on the lot at lunchtime and ensure they returned to work with full stomachs and clear heads. Commissaries to this day serve no hard liquor.

The only studio currently without an operating commissary is Universal, which surprised the industry by closing its restaurant doors this summer amid rumors of employee discord, financial losses and union troubles. No one at Universal would discuss the turmoil on the record.

For aspiring actors, admission to the commissary dangles as one of the perks of success. For established stars, the commissary is preferable to a public place with autograph hounds on the prowl.

"The theory is that people eating in the commissary will allow the stars their privacy," said Fox's Koshuta. "Everybody looks, and all the heads turn. But there is no hysteria. Travolta was here recently, and nobody bothered him."

Questions of integrity

By George R. Plagenz

Some people darken the door of a church only when they are "hatched, matched and dispatched" — that is, baptized, married and buried.

When I was a minister at King's Chapel in Boston, I got to meet many of these people as they were getting ready for the second of their three visits.

King's Chapel, founded in 1686, is one of the historic churches of our land — and one of the most beautiful. It is not surprising that a lot of young couples would like to be married in such a place.

The problem for me was that a good many who came to be married had no church affiliation and were not interested in establishing any. They simply "wanted to be married in King's Chapel."

Should I marry such couples? That was the question. I never satisfactorily resolved this dilemma. I married some and turned others away.

The principle I wrestled with was this: While it doesn't seem right for a church to refuse its services to anyone who requests them, isn't it worse to allow the church to be "used" by people who have no interest in it except that they "want to be married in church"?

Doesn't this debase the church? Isn't the church respected more when it has standards?

If I felt that by turning these people down I would be helping them from getting married, that would have been another matter perhaps. But they could always be married in a civil ceremony even if every other minister they went to did the same way I did — which was doubtful.

On the other hand, as long as these couples would be married in any case, wouldn't it be better to have them married in church? Whatever their reasons for not belonging to a church up to this time, maybe this could be the turning point in their attitude.

In any event, to have the church turn them down at such a memorable moment in their lives would practically guarantee that the church would never see them again.

There was a story recently about a priest who refused to baptize a baby because of the mother's position on abortion. The mother had stated publicly that she believes women should have the right to choose for themselves whether to have an abortion — although she personally would not be party to such an operation.

Some people have criticized the priest who refused to baptize the baby on the grounds that he was jeopardizing an innocent infant's chances for salvation. Catholics (like many other Christians) believe baptism is necessary to get into heaven.

The priest took the stand that when a child is brought to a Catholic church to be baptized, the parents must agree to bring the child up in the teachings of the Catholic Church. This seems reasonable enough — why would parents bring a child to a Catholic church to be baptized if they didn't want him to be brought up and instructed in the Catholic faith?

One of the teachings of the Church is that abortion can never be allowed. The mother had reservations about this teaching. By refusing to baptize the baby, the priest was simply upholding the integrity of the sacrament.

What about the baby's future in eternity? The parents could have the baby baptized in any other Christian church. Such a baptism would be considered valid by the Catholic Church.

The priest, in other words, was not keeping the child out of heaven — only out of the Catholic Church.

Meanwhile, he had struck a blow, I think, for integrity and standards for the church. That can only be for the good.

Statistics show evangelicals

back Reagan's arms buildup

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

When President Reagan appealed to evangelicals to support arms buildup, their attitudes were uncertain. But now there is statistical evidence that those with opinions about it only back him.

At the same time, a survey finds that they are curiously consistent at one point — favoring a Soviet-U.S. nuclear freeze, which Reagan strongly opposes.

These were among results of a Gallup poll commissioned by the National Association of Evangelicals in the wake of Reagan's appeal to its convention last March to back strengthened defense against the Soviet Union.

The survey found that 74 percent of evangelicals with opinions about it think that chances of war would be increased by falling behind the Soviet Union in nuclear weaponry by continuing the U.S. nuclear buildup.

Evangelicals were also more inclined than the public generally to think the Soviet Union now has a lead over the U.S. in nuclear strength — although about half either felt the sides were about equal or had no opinion.

A third had no opinion about Reagan's handling of nuclear weapons policies but of those with opinions about it, 61 percent approve.

"They're generally with him," says the Rev. Robert P. Man Jr., head of the NAE's public affairs office. "They generally take a peace-through-strength posture."

But he adds that they are also "a bit inconsistent" about it in opposing a nuclear freeze — something Reagan specifically called them to oppose.

Sixty percent of those — 77 percent of those with opinions about it — favor a U.S.-Soviet "immediate verifiable freeze on testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons."

The strong majority of evangelicals supporting it still was as large as that of the general public — 75 percent of the total and 82 percent of those with opinions.

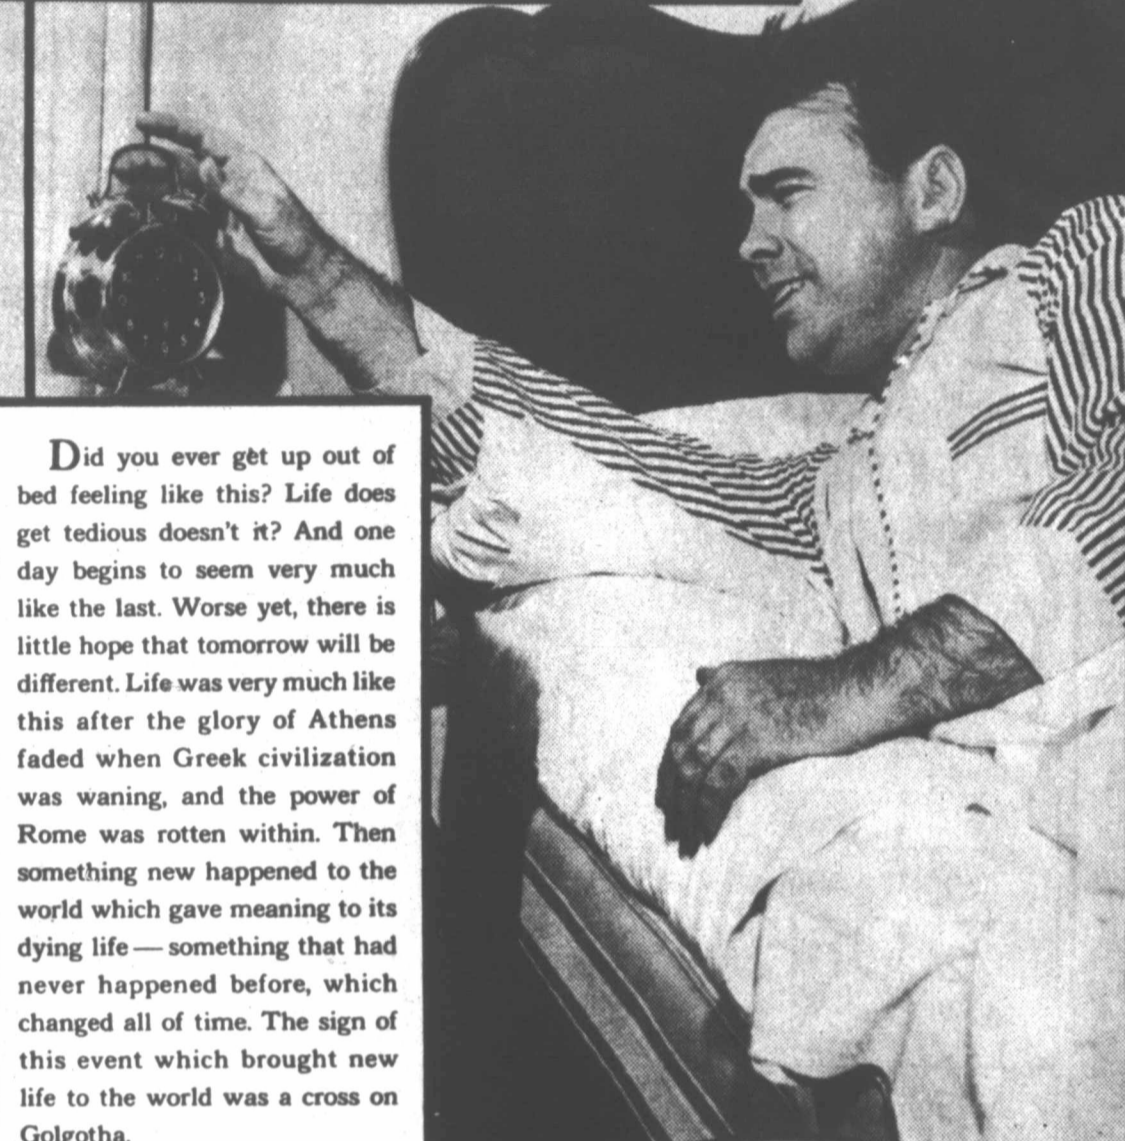

The NAE is made up of 43 relatively small, theologically conservative denominations, plus about 36,000 conservative congregations from other denominations, representing an overall total of 9.5 million evangelicals.

However, previous surveys have indicated there are more than 30 million evangelicals in the country — Christians with certain concepts of doctrine and the Bible and who stress "born-again" conversions to Christ.

The survey involved personal interviews with a representative cross-section of 1,540 adults, 17 percent of them categorized as evangelicals on the basis of background responses — a figure projecting nationally to 28 million.

another dollar

Did you ever get up out of bed feeling like this? Life does get tedious doesn't it? And one day begins to seem very much like the last. Worse yet, there is little hope that tomorrow will be different. Life was very much like this after the glory of Athens faded when Greek civilization was waning, and the power of Rome was rotten within. Then something new happened to the world which gave meaning to its dying life — something that had never happened before, which changed all of time. The sign of this event which brought new life to the world was a cross on Golgotha.

The God whose love is seen at that cross stands ready to give you His love and transform the whole of your days by infusing them with the meaning of eternity. If you will have this gift, trust in Him and live in love with your neighbor.

Is something wrong with your life — an inner restlessness, dissatisfaction? The answer to every human problem comes only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and reassure. Through the church God has committed the provision and proclamation of His forgiveness and redeeming love. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God. Everyone should be in the Church and the Church in everyone!

Beaver sanctuary almost at the end

DOLGEVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — When fat, auburn-haired Nicky is gone, there will be nobody left to swim laps in the indoor pool at Dorothy Richards' house.

Nicky is the last of generations of beavers that have lived in the shingled farmhouse since 1943.

"I don't make friends with the beavers anymore," she says. "Beaver fur's just gotten too popular — and we've had a lot of trouble with trappers and hunters ... though the land's posted."

Mrs. Richards, a slight woman with white, wispy hair, was 89 this spring. For almost 50 years, she has lived in this weather-beaten house surrounded by sparkling creeks, fragrant meadows and hillsides covered with poplar, flowering shadbush, wild cherry and apple trees — the wildlife sanctuary she named Beaversprite.

While Mrs. Richards talks to visitors one afternoon, Nicky climbs out of the concrete pool, shakes her 90-pound, pear-shaped body, waddles up two steps and pulls open the living room door with a soft, dark paw.

"I see you've finally gotten up," says Mrs. Richards from her armchair across the room. "Here, have an apple." The beaver ambles across the wide wooden floorboards, stands with her paws on the woman's knees and accepts a piece of fruit.

After reaching middle age as an urbanite ignorant of wildlife, Mrs. Richards devoted the second half of her life to defending the reputation of beavers and building the 1,200-acre Beaversprite sanctuary, now funded by a private trust.

Beaversprite is set back off rutted dirt roads near the tiny Fulton County village of Dolgeville, in the foothills of the Adirondacks.

In her book, "Beaversprite," Mrs. Richards writes how conservation officers trying to restore the state's depleted beaver population brought the first pair of beavers, later named Samson and Delilah, to the area in 1934. She had never so much as seen a beaver until then.

Enchanted by the way Samson and Delilah quickly transformed a trickle of water into a several-acre pond teeming with waterfowl and marsh creatures, Mrs. Richards began to sit for hours watching them.

Eventually they came to trust her. "I was so impressed by them that I couldn't understand why people were always trying to get rid of beavers," she says. "I became entirely devoted to them. I spent all my free time at the pond."

After eight years of studying the industrious rodents in the wild, she became one of the few people who have been issued state permits to keep beavers in captivity. She started raising them in the basement so she could study their habits more closely.

Despite patrols and warning signs, poachers still threaten the wildlife at the sanctuary. Mrs. Richards angrily recalls how her late husband plunged into icy water to rescue one from a leg-hold trap.

"Beavers are very intelligent," she says. "Anyone who gets to know them really gets hooked. Unfortunately, very few people know them."

American Indian names are popular in East Germany

BERLIN, East Germany (AP) — What's in a name like Winnetou Schmidt?

Likely, an East German child. Winnetou, which means "burning water," has become a hit as a name for East German boys, the state press reported, despite the Communist nation's strict regulations against giving children unusual names.

Winnetou was the hero of Western epics by Karl May, a German writer whose 19th-century novels about the fictitious Apache chief and his paleface friend "Old Shatterhand" are enjoying enormous popularity in East Germany.

May, who died in 1912 at age 70, never visited America, but his fertile imagination provided vivid, if inaccurate, descriptions of life in the Old West and Indian tribal customs. Seventy million of his books have been published in German-speaking countries, making him the most widely read German author.

East German authorities frowned on May for a long time, apparently because the Nazis used his books to illustrate their racial theory that whites and Indians should not mix.

The East-Berlin government relented only this year, allowing the printing of the first Winnetou volume, and the result has been a boom in May books and cases of infants being named after the Indian hero.

Up to now, East German authorities have been very strict on first names, ruling out those which do not clearly indicate the sex of the child, family names such as Larsen (which means the son of Lars), imaginary names or geographic designations.

Foreign first names are allowed, but they must be written in the original version, not as they may sound in German. For example, the use of "Meik" for the English name "Mike" is not permitted.

Two institutes, one in East Berlin and the other in Leipzig, have the final say on whether to sanction or bar an unusual first name submitted by the child's parents.

Local birth registration offices are instructed to seek advice from one of the two institutes if they are faced with a first name which strikes officials as out of the ordinary.

Most East German parents pick conventional names for their offspring, authorities said. Christian and Michael were the most popular names last year for boys, and Nicole and Anja for girls.

Reporting the sudden popularity of Winnetou as a first name, the East German press did not give figures on how many children have been given that name.

Bradley to join San Antonio Gunslingers

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former NFL All-Pro Bill Bradley plans to join San Antonio's United States Football League franchise to evaluate players and possibly do some coaching.

Bradley, who retired from the National Football League in 1978, will have the title of special assistant, according to executive vice president Gil Steinke.

Bradley has been a co-partner in Sports Management Inc., a Philadelphia company that represents professional athletes, since finishing his football career with the St. Louis Cardinals.

He played college ball at the University of Texas, starting at quarterback in 1966 and 1967 and moving to wide receiver and defensive back in 1968.

The San Antonio club, which has submitted the name Gunslingers for final approval from USFL officials, will mark his entry back into pro football.

"I think this franchise has a real good chance," he said. "I'm looking forward to working with the people here and looking for players."

Bradley was an All-Pro free safety with the Philadelphia Eagles from 1971 to 1973, and led the league in interceptions in 1971 and 1972.

He played nine seasons for the Eagles before being traded in 1977 to the Vikings, who released him when he hurt his back during the 1978 preseason.

"I've had five knee operations," Bradley said. "I retired at the right time. I've never had any regrets about getting out when I did."

Bradley has lived in his native Palestine, Texas, the past five years.

"We're real pleased to have a person of Bill's background join us," Steinke said. "He'll be a help in numerous ways. With his experience as a partner in that management thing, he'll be helping with players' contracts."

The Gunslingers plan to begin play next spring.

Phillies bounce back against Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt stepped to the plate in the air-conditioned comfort of the Astrodome and improved the Phillies' environment in Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium with a two-run homer.

Schmidt's eighth-inning smash, his 23rd of the season, lifted Philadelphia to 6-5 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night and gave the Phillies momentum going into the opening game of tonight's home stand against Chicago.

"I hope we'll have the fans on our side instead of them being frustrated like the last time we were there," Schmidt said. "There should be a different environment in Veterans Stadium. The way we played earlier in the year, I'd sit in the stands and boo, too. But we need the fans on our side."

The Phillies' following would have cheered Thursday night's comeback.

The Astros chased Phillie ace Steve Carlton with a three-run seventh inning rally to take a 4-3 lead. Houston got back-to-back doubles by Phil Garner off Carlton and Jose Cruz off reliever Willie Hernandez.

But the Phillies came right back in the eighth when Pete Rose walked to open the inning against reliever Mike LaCoss and Joe Morgan tripled to the left field wall to tie the score.

Schmidt then stepped to the plate and laced a pitch by LaCoss, 4-7, over the right field fence to secure the Phillies' victory for Ron Reed, 5-1.

"The Phillie fans are pretty fickle," Morgan said. "But they are fair. We make our own atmosphere. It's up to us to keep it on our side."

The victory gave the Phillies their first series sweep since early season and it gave Manager Paul Owens a good feeling.

"These were good victories for us," Owens said. "We are trying to put something together and I get a feeling that we are doing it. There is just that feeling of optimism on the bench."

The Phillies took a 2-0 lead in the third inning after Bo Diaz and Ivan De Jesus hit back-to-back singles off starter Bob Knepper and Rose drove them home with a single.

Philadelphia's third run came in the sixth on Gary Matthews' single to right field scoring Morgan, who had walked and stolen second base.

Houston scored one run in the fifth when Bill Doran walked, went to second on George Bjorkman's walk and scored on an error by Carlton. Doran walked again in the eighth and scored the final Astros' run on pinchhitter Denny Walling's triple to right field.

Asked why he didn't change pitchers after LaCoss walked Rose and yielded the triple to Morgan, Astros Manager Bob Lillis said, "Mike had a good chance of getting a ground ball to keep the runner at third base. Unfortunately, it was a long ground ball that went over the fence."

Despite his exit in the seventh inning, Carlton regained the all-time strikeout lead over Houston's Nolan Ryan. Carlton fanned nine Astros Thursday night to increase his career total to 3,597. Ryan has 3,588 strikeouts.

Catcher Darrell Porter of the St. Louis Cardinals was rated a high school All-American as a quarterback at Southeast High in Oklahoma City.

MacPhail overrules umpire's decision on Brett's tar-covered Four-bagger

NEW YORK (AP) — George Brett spoke of the "courage" of American League President Lee MacPhail. Rick Cerone wondered why MacPhail would overrule his umpires. And Joe Brinkman, one of those umpires, hoped the rule in question would be changed.

They were reacting to Thursday's decision by MacPhail to overturn the ruling of the umpires and uphold a protest by the Kansas City Royals, who wanted Brett's two-run, two-out homer in the top of the ninth inning at New York last Sunday restored. The home run gave the Royals a 5-4 lead — until Brinkman and crew ruled Brett's bat was illegal because it had too much pine tar on it.

"I think it showed a lot of courage," said Brett. "He's a native New Yorker and he lives there. I would not have wanted to make that decision. That was a very, very tough decision."

In a long statement read at a news conference Thursday, MacPhail said the fact that Brett had too much pine tar on his bat was not sufficient grounds to nullify a potential game-winning homer.

MacPhail said in the statement that the intent of the rule was to discipline batters using doctored bats "to increase distance potential, but not to treat pine tar excesses in the same manner." The intent, he said, of the pine tar rule was to keep baseballs from getting dirty.

So, the game will be resumed with two out in the top of the ninth inning and the Royals leading 5-4. Instead of the Yankees winning 4-3 through the nullification. They could resume on Aug. 18, an open date for the two clubs, or continue after the season, if it has a bearing on either division title, MacPhail said. If it can't be replayed during the season and is unnecessary at the season's conclusion, Brett's homer still stands, but the game will not count.

Cerone, who was the catcher when Brett blasted Rich Gossage's pitch into the seats, thought the umpires weren't getting a fair shake.

"What makes me feel funny is that the integrity of the umpires is being questioned," said Cerone. "They showed me a lot of character that day and if I was an umpire, I know I'd be making some pretty strong statements right now."

Added Brinkman, the crew chief for the game: "In definitions of an illegally batted ball, it definitely states that any pine tar or any substance beyond the 18 inches will constitute an illegally batted ball," said Brinkman. "Therefore, you have to call the batter out."

He added: "I definitely think it (the rule) should be changed." The ruling knocked the Yankees out of a first-place tie with Baltimore in the American League East. Club owner George Steinbrenner, at his Tampa, Fla., office, called the ruling "ridiculous," adding that if the Yankees should lose the division race MacPhail, a New Yorker, "better start house hunting out in Missouri, close to Kansas City."

The pine tar dispute arose when Yankee Manager Billy Martin pointed out Brett's bat to umpire Tim McClelland.

"Although Manager Martin and his staff should be commended for their alertness," MacPhail said in a statement, "it is the strong conviction of the league that games should be won and lost on the playing field — not through technicalities of the rules."

When McClelland raised his arm to signal that Brett was out, Brett ran full-speed from the dugout, nearly missing a train-wreck collision with the umpire when he was restrained by Brinkman. Also involved in a wild argument were Royals Manager Dick Howser and coach Rocky Colavito.

That prompted Richie Phillips, attorney for the Major League Umpires Association, to say that when the game is resumed, Brett, Howser and Colavito will be ejected "for behavior that followed the conclusion of the game."

"That's something we'll have to consider," MacPhail said, noting that no ejections were mentioned in the umpires' reports to him. McClelland, a rookie umpire, said "I would have liked to have had Mr. MacPhail back our decision. We went right by the rule book."

According to MacPhail, the umpires might have gone by the wrong rule. One rule says a batter is out if his bat is doctored, but "league regulations and bulletins specifically provide that pine tar violations do not fall under the provisions of this rule," MacPhail said.

He said the confusing, antiquated set of rules "should be rewritten and clarified." Baseball's rules committee could consider rewriting the rules during December's Winter Meetings, he said.

Giese remains on top in Tri-State tourney

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor
Bob Giese, the current leader in the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament, feels he has a man-sized task ahead of him going into today's final round at the Pampa Country Club.

True, Giese has a two-stroke lead of 213 after shooting a one under par 70 Thursday, but he's not looking forward to holding off the hot-shooting J. Rowland Ferguson of Dallas for another 18 holes.

"I would just as soon have this last round rained out and I could come back and pick up my trophy Saturday," laughed Giese, a 1979 and 1980 Tri-State winner. "J.R. is playing exceptional golf now. He's just a real fine player."

Ferguson had four birdies for a two-under par 69 Thursday and a three-round total of 215. Today's final

Humm hopes to fit in with Raiders

The Los Angeles Raiders' newest quarterback has had a ho-Humm career in the National Football League. In eight pro seasons he was a perennial backup to, among others, Ken Stabler, Joe Ferguson and Bert Jones.

Hardly the best way to gain exposure.

The odds are even worse this time around for David Humm. He is one of seven — count 'em, seven — quarterbacks wearing black and silver and red jerseys in Santa Rosa, Calif., where the Super Bowl XV champs are working to atone for last year's loss to the New York

Jets in the AFC playoffs.

"They didn't promise me anything, just that they'd take a look," said Humm, who is in his second tour of duty with the Raiders after being dropped by the woeful Baltimore Colts after last season.

But as Humm looked around, he saw Jim Plunkett and Marc Wilson, who are pretty much expected to retain the 1-2 ratings they had for the past two seasons. Also on hand is seven-year veteran Matt Robinson, who saw action with New York, Denver and Buffalo of the AFC before the Raiders picked him up during the offseason.

"There's a lot of guys waiting to see," Humm said, referring to an anticipated decision by NFL owners on whether or not to expand rosters from 45 to 49 players. That decision will dictate whether there will be third-string quarterbacks throughout the league.

Injuries are dictating some shuffling around the NFL. The Chargers lost Chuck Loewen for the season with a ruptured disc in his back, leaving San Diego with a huge gap in the offensive line. Veteran Russ Washington has remained unsigned, reserve Andrew Gissinger is nursing an injury suffered in a mini-camp and Bob Rush was traded during the offseason.

The Washington Redskins' injury list grew with the addition of offensive lineman Mark May, who will miss at least three weeks with a torn triceps in his right arm. Also ailing are safety Greg Williams, tackle Todd Hallstrom, tight end Rick Walker and defensive end Mat Mendenhall.

Sheehan, King tie for lead in U.S. golf open

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — There were only survivors following the opening round of the 31st U.S. Women's Open golf tournament on the hard, baked Cedar Ridge Country Club course.

"I really feel like I survived," said Patty Sheehan, who battled the sun-blistered course to an even-par 71 to tie Betsy King for the lead going into today's second round. "I feel like, thank God it's over and I don't have to play another hole."

The 6,200-yard layout was hard, fast and mean as only 14 women came within two strokes of par. Sixty-five women logged scores of 80 or higher. The average score was 79.

"I don't know. I think the course is fair," said Buddy Phillips, the course pro. "It rewards the good players and penalizes the bad shots."

There weren't many rewards Thursday. Most of the pre-tournament favorites — including JoAnne Carner, Donna Caponi, Kathy Whitworth and Janet Anderson — shot themselves out of contention, and several others scrambled to stay alive in the 103-degree heat.

"The greens were really baked out, and when they're like that you can't be aggressive," said Amy Alcott, a pre-tournament favorite who couldn't negotiate with her putter and was 4-over-par after her first round. "But that's the way the USGA (United States Golf Association) likes it. They don't like for people to come in way under par."

Sheehan, who earlier this year won another of the major tournaments on the women's tour, the LPGA Championship, expressed surprise that her 36-35-71 score would lead the tournament.

But Jan Stephenson, who logged a one-over 72 to stay in the hunt, expected such high scores.

"I said a long time ago that 4- or 6-under would win, but now I think even par will maybe even 4-over will win," she said.

Carner, the leading money-winner on the tour this year with more than $153,000, suffered through a dismal 10-over-par 81 that threatened to cause her to miss the cut for the first time in the 19 Opens she has played.

Whitworth, who has never won the Open in her record 84 tour victories, was nine strokes off the pace after a 39-41-80, while Anderson, the defending Open champion, blew to a 45 on the back nine and came into the clubhouse with an 82.

Caponi, a two-time Open winner, shot a 41 on the front side — including a double-bogey 7 on the fifth hole — en route to a 7-over-par 79.

And Kathy Young, who has never won a tournament in her four years on the tour, recorded a 45 on the front nine and withdrew from the tourney.

King, a 27-year-old pro who has never won on the tour, played the front nine in 36 and the back side in 35.

Beth Daniel, who earlier this week was unsure whether a bad back would prevent her from playing, shot a 74, while Hollis Stacy, another pre-tourney favorite, overcame a 42 on the front side and logged a 78.

Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Community Relations Manager

Optional phone purchase again being emphasized

You may have noticed recently the national advertising reminding customers that they now have the option of buying certain telephones which are currently being leased on a monthly basis.

As you'll recall, this optional sales plan became effective in Texas in March. Should you buy your telephone? The decision is yours. One of the biggest advantages of buying your phone is that you'll eliminate the monthly leasing charge. On the other hand, one of the biggest advantages to leasing is that we'll continue to repair your set for no additional charge.

Telephones which may be purchased include the Standard, Princess® and Trimline® models — both desk and wall units with either rotary or Touch-Tone® dialing — plus certain "functional" sets such as the Action Phone®, TeleHelper® Answer and Record Unit, TeleHelper Speakerphone, Touch-a-matic® S, Touch-a-matic 16 and Touch-a-matic 12 dialer.

In addition to the above listed telephones which are presently in service, the company also has the same type of sets for sale from its inventory. The price of in-inventory phones is higher, though, since those sets are either brand new or completely reconditioned.

All single-line customers in Texas — both residence and business — are eligible to participate in this plan. Because of FCC regulations, party-line customers are not eligible at this time to buy their leased telephones.

Speaking of party-line customers, we received a call the other day from a party-line customer with a question. "Have you folks forgotten about your party-line customers?" he asked.

This customer was concerned — understandably so — about what will happen in the future to party-line phones. We haven't said much about the future of this service in talking about changes coming in our business. We don't have all the answers yet, but this we do know. Party-line customers will not lose their service. We certainly have not forgotten about these customers.

It may be that customers on party-lines will be able to purchase their phones, if they wish. This can't be done now because of the wiring. Or it may be that these customers still will lease their phones.

The point is, though, that party-line customers need not worry about having phone service. One thing you can be certain about. Telephone service will still be available to you.

Incidentally, you may have heard you will be forced to buy your phones after January 1, 1984. That's not true. You may continue to lease your phones, whether they're owned by Southwestern Bell or AT&T.

Remember, if you have a question or comment you'd like to pass along, don't hesitate to let me know. Here's my address.

Nothing said about bikes

Murder trial set to begin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jury selection has been completed and testimony will begin Wednesday in the trial of a woman charged in the 1978 execution-style slayings of four members of a Southeast Texas family.

Linda May Burnett of Nederland was sentenced to death in the slaying of 2-year-old Jason Phillips of Woodward, Okla., but her conviction was overturned by a state appeals court last December.

Mrs. Burnett now faces trial on a capital murder charge in the death of the child's mother, Martha Phillips.

Attorneys took eight days to select the eight-woman, four-man jury that will hear the case here on a change of venue. State District Judge Larry Gist ordered opening arguments to begin Wednesday.

Also convicted in the slayings was Ovide Joe Dugas, who was killed last month when he tried to escape while being transferred from Beaumont back to Death Row in Huntsville.

His death sentence had been upheld on appeal.
