Robbery, beating trial starts today

By JEFF LANGLEY Senior Writer

WHEELER - One of three people charged with an armed robbery that netted $56,000 worth of jewelry and included the savage beating of an elderly Wheeler shopkeeper is on trial here today in 31st District Court.

Lester Doug Williams, 22, an auto mechanic, is on trial for the June 29, 1981 armed robbery at the Culture Shop in Williams, of Lebanon, Mo., was arrested in Spearman last June 23, almost two years after the robbery and brutal beating. Williams's ex - wife, Linda Barber, was arrested in Spearman the next day and is also charged with the armed robbery. A third suspect in the case, an unidentified man, remains at large, according to a spokeswoman at the Wheeler County Sheriff's office. Authorities said the third suspect was last believed to be somewhere in Nebraska.

The arrests in the two - year - old case followed a tip from someone in the Hansford County Jail at Spearman, Wheeler Chief Deputy Lonnie Miller said previously. Miller and Texas Ranger Bill Baten of Pampa have handled the investigation

Jury selection in Williams's trial began this morning in the district court of Judge Grainger McIlhany.

During the robbery at the Culture Shop, Mrs. Roxy Hanks was severely beaten and later hospitalized. Hanks's attackers escaped from the shop with jewelry worth $56,000. according to the investigators.

She risked death to give birth

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) - Jeri DeMille knew that having a baby could hasten her own death from cystic fibrosis, but the 23-year-old woman says she wanted to do something for her husband - and "I didn't want to leave him alone," Mrs. DeMille said of her husband, Mark, after she gave birth to a 6-pound, 11-ounce boy at St. Joseph Hospital in Orange. "Then, when the baby was born. I realized I'd done it for myself, too.... I wanted a reminder that I was here.

Mrs. DeMille, who lives in Palm pesert, gave birth to Cameron Lee DeMille on Aug. 3, one day after her third wedding anniversary. The new mother was released from the hospital Friday.

Chances are 1 in 50 that the infant, who appears healthy, will carry the disease, said Dr. Ralph Rucker, chairman of the neonatal department at Children's Hospital of Orange County, adjacent to St. Joseph.

Mrs. DeMille, back home Monday in Palm Desert 100 miles east of Los Angeles, said so far she has shown no effects from her pregnancy or 13-hour labor.

"As far as I know, going by my lung X-rays and everything, there's no changes," she said "I know the doctors expected a lot worse. Everybody's pretty amazed.

She said she was exhausted but "that's normal for anybody." Her mother flew out from the family home in British Columbia to help take care of the baby, she said.

At age 14, Mrs. DeMille was diagnosed as having cystic fibrosis, a hereditary disease in which the lungs, tiver and pancreas secrete large amounts of thick mucus that can clog the lungs and interfere with breathing and digestion.

Many victims die of lung disease The cause of cystic fibrosis is not known and there is no cure, although drugs can be used to fight resulting

Most victims die before age 20, and 15 percent of those few who do give birth die within six months, according to records of the National Cystic Fibrosis Foundation Another 12 percent die within two years. Rucker said statistics for most of Southern California show no prior birth to a cystic fibrosis patient.

Mrs. DeMille, who received prenatal treatment in the cystic fibrosis clinic at Children's Hospital, said she knows the exertion of having

She described her husband as "really understanding" and said, "One thing he always told me was he never felt he had the right to tell me that I couldn't have a baby. He loved me enough to let me do it and I loved

The hardest part, she said, is knowing she probably won't live to see her baby grow up

Weird weather has fatal side-effects

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO

Unusual weather patterns that hurled storms, floods and record-breaking heat at the nation are now being blamed for more suffering: rattlesnake bites, surfing accidents, death-dealing mosquitoes, hay fever and even the plague. Dry weather coaxed rattlers out of the Rockies and damp heat made a perfect breeding ground for encephalitis-carrying mosquitoes in the East. Storms and high tides changed the shape of beaches in California, sending surfers crashing into newly formed sandbars, resulting in broken backs. And wet, cool weather in New Mexico fostered plague-carrying rodents. El Nino, a recurring phenomenon involving Pacific sea temperatures, currents and trade winds, has been blamed for the unusual weather. Long known to South American fishermen, El Nino refers to the Christ child, because it usually occurs around Christmas time. This year, the child stayed until July, spreading unseasonal rains, killing heat and storms across

Meteorologists declared the 1983 edition of El Nino dead last month, but the aftermath continues

In the East, hay fever sufferers will face higher pollen counts and a longer season of wheezing sneezing and

"People are really going to get it around Labor Day." said Walter Jinotti, a medical technologist at Middlesex General Hospital in New Brunswick, N.J., and president of the National Association of Allergies. "In an average year, you'll get three weeks of irritating pollen levels and it'll peak at 150. This year, the irritation should go on longer and the count will peak at 200.

The bad news is blamed on a moist spring which encouraged a large crop of pollen-producing ragweed.

Spinal injuries, including broken necks, are more common this year along the California coast, as surfers deal with the weather-altered coastline.

'We've started to see kids running out into the water and doing a shallow surface dive and hitting the bottom," said Dr. John Skinner, 52, an internist at Newport Beach, Calif. "I

Officials speculated the unusually wet, cool spring produced ideal conditions for rodents that carry plague-bearing fleas.

The 1983 plague death rate, including the 13-year-old boy who perished Monday, is lower than in recent years - about 12.5 percent compared with the average 16 percent of all cases — because of prompt diagnosis, Mann said.

Another kind of pestilence, Eastern equine encephalitis, killed a man in a Boston hospital Thursday and authorities were spraying swamps to wipe out mosquitoes which carry

The rare brain infection also has killed one horse in Massachusetts, two in New Jersey and four in New York state this year, health officials said.

The risk of humans being infected is only about one in 10 million, but two consecutive wet springs preceded by mild winters have permitted the virus to spread, health officials said. Recent dry spells may be helping to control the

"Dryness has dramatically reduced the number of mosquitoes, compared to what we were catching in June, said Herbert Maxfield, supervisor of the encephalitis field station in Lakeville. "I think the danger has been reduced."

Dry, hot weather has been no help in Montana, where rattlesnake bites are becoming more common as the reptiles come down from the mouttains and into more populated areas, following mice who search the lower areas for food

The snakes are likely to be around for the next few weeks. until cooler autumn weather arrives, said Vince Vannone of the Fish, Wildlife and Parks Department. Three people in really love to surf, and I have seen a lot of (spinal) cases in the Helena area have been bitten recently, officials said

Clements will speak here tonight

*The Fort Worth man who started a crime prevention organization 20 years before anyone else declared he is running for president of the United States of America on a visit to Pampa last week. , But first, he says, he needs $10,000 from Pampans for his crime prevention league. Louis Calvin Browning announced his candidacy Friday in Pampa.

His avowed plan is "to turn the attention of our great country back to God and our first love, our children, our youth, the blooming flowers. Browning says he is the first black to declare his candidacy for the presidential elections next year. 'We must safeguard our greatest asset our Fouth. against crime and drugs," said the 75-year-old founder of Youth Crime Prevention League, Inc.

However, Browning, who is well-known in Pampa as a crusader for the well-being of blacks and young people, needs money before he can start his official campaign.

, He is trying to raise $250,000 to build a state and national headquarters building for the League in Fort Worth. Of the $250,000, Browning is asking Pampa for $10,000. He said all of the money collected will go towards construction of the Youth Crime Prevention League's headquarters. After that he will ask for donations for his presidential campaign, he said.

Browning says he has been working out of his home for the past 25 years. The proposed building would serve as a convention center where delegates and counselors for the league will have a place to meet. He believes well-trained young people can best relate to their peers, in a "youth to youth" example for good

Browning outlined his plans for bringing unity and harmony to the White House. When he becomes

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Several Texas cities braced for Tropical Storm Alicia, which forecasters said could drift ashore along the upper Gulf coast or in far South Texas. According to probability tables issued this morning by the National Hurricane Center in Miami, there was a 19 percent chance that the center of the storm would pass within 65 miles of Galveston or Port O'Connor by Friday. Port O'Connor is about 110 miles southwest of Galveston

Odds that the storm would hit Port Arthur, near the Louisiana border, were 15 percent, and 16 percent that it would strike Brownsville in the Rio Grande Valley. Chances that it would hit Corpus Christi were put at 6 percent

At 5 a.m., Alicia was centered near latitude 27.0 north, longitude 2.5 west, or about 300 miles east of Corpus Christi. Alicia, the first named storm of the season, was packing winds up to 45 mph this morning and moving west at about 6

The highest probability of landfall by a hurricane or tropical storm at this distance from shore would be 20

Conditions were favorable for the storm to strengthen, forecasters said. It will become the season's first hurricane, if its winds reach 74 mph.

mph, said officials at the National Hurricane Center.

"We would not be surprised at all if it did." said hurricane forecaster Bob Sheets. "(Wind speeds) are not that far away, it's only 24 miles per hour below hurricane stage right

Some civil defense officials said they were beginning to make preparations for the storm this morning.

"We're tracking it very carefully," said Peggy Wiseman, a spokeswoman for the city of Galveston. "We are asking that people who live in the low-lying areas make plans in case they have to move.

Bill Hennings, assistant city manager of Corpus Christi, said officials there would probably begin putting up flood gates this afternoon.

"We're just at the point of checking supplies and getting personnel assignments in order." Hennings said.

'We probably will wait take any other action until noon or so. If it continues as it has the last 12 hours we'll launch our usual hurricane preparation program. It looks like there will be plenty of time to make the preparations.

Bob LeBlanc, director of civil defense for Port Arthur, said officials there would not decide until this afternoon whether to begin making preparations for the storm "At this point, we're just on standby," LeBlanc said.

'We're watching the situation. And by this afternoon we'll make some decisions about what to do.' An offshore marine forecast called for 45 to 60 mile-per-hour winds within a 100-mile radius of the storm

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) -Scientists are trying to figure out whether any of granny's home remedies soothe fingers burned by chili after a round of roasting the pungent pods.

We were kind of shopping around, trying to see what -works," said Dr. William Troutman, director of the University of New Mexico Poison, Drug Information and Medical Crisis Center.

"The bulk of chili burn calls come in the fall" when the harvest comes in and people begin roasting the vegetable. he said.

Green chili harvesting in New Mexico is under way. Red chili gathering begins about Oct. 1.

Chili pepper pungency is determined by the amount of capsaicin, an alkaloid that burns people with sensitive . People who have roasted chili pods sometimes have fire in their eyes — and mouth and nose - with a touch from their contaminated hands. "Fortunately, most of the ·burns are confined to the hands, though occasionally there are some eye burns, Troutman said. "So far, the burns are more painful than . destructive.

"Certainly, pain can take away the enjoyment of (roasting) chili," he said. "'It's an occupational, or recreational, hazard for most people in the state."

In 1982, 67 people contacted the poison center with chili burns, Troutman said.

"We think that although we shad 67 cases last year, we fully suspect that we have hundreds more that we haven't heard about," he

The center sought suggestions last year on how to deal with chili burns, and scientists are evaluating the proposed remedies. Troutman said.

Suggestions included dousing hands with cold water and smearing egetable oil or mayonnaise on affected areas, he said.

"The first thing we recommend (is to) immerse your hands in cold water; hether anything else works better, we don't know."

Faulty cooler blamed for women's deaths

two elderly women whose bodies were found in separate units of a retirement complex here could be attributed to temperatures of more than 100 degrees and a malfunctioning

The official cause of their deaths probably will not be determined until the completion of autopsies scheduled today, said a spokesman for the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

Police said the windows of both apartments were closed and the doors were locked. They said Violet Carver, 76, and Oma Yost, 80, both semi-bedridden, apparently died of heat

"They died of nothing more than pure heat prostration," said Sgt. A.R. Brooks. "When we went inside (apartment) 206, it was like a furnace, like a heat blast. It had to be 110, Their bodies were discovered shortly after noon Monday when a private nurse found Mrs. Yost in apartment No. 206. Firefighters who checked other units in the complex then found Mrs. Carver's body in apartment No. 202. "It was very hot inside those apartments," said Don B. Kirby, medical examiner's field agent. "Heat stroke is certainly one of the things we will be looking at. It probably got up to 115 degrees" inside the apartments. One investigator said it appeared that the two women died sometime Sunday afternoon.

Both police and elderly residents of the 43-unit Cornerstone Retirement Village said that neither the owner of the complex nor its manager had made a concerted effort to make all the residents aware of the air conditioning problem. The air conditioner went unrepaired for three

Some residents said they were unaware of a problem until their apartments began heating up at mid-morning last Friday. The high temperature for Dallas was 100 on Friday, 99 on Saturday, 99 on Sunday and 101 on Monday.

After the air conditioning failed, some residents opened their front windows and were using fans. Many lived in constant fear of burglars and had "shut themselves up," said police Cpl. J.K. Hull.

Officials said they could not determine how high that temperatures may have risen in the apartments over the weekend. But field agents from the medical examiner's office said measurements taken 45 minutes after the doors had been opened showed the temperature in Mrs. Yost's apartment at 97 degrees and in Mrs. Carver's at 90.

"To me, this borders on almost being total negligence." Brooks said. "These people (the owner and manager) knew there was nothing but old people on fixed incomes living here. I couldn't last 15 or 20 minutes in these apartments with them shut up."

Gene Slivka, The owner of the complex, arrived at the complex about an hour after the police. He said the repairs on the air conditioner were being made as quickly as possible, and that he had depended upon his manager to nform the tenants of the difficulty.

"These women have been my friends for years," Slivka said. "Mrs. Yost was in another building I owned and came over here when I bought this one seven or eight years ago. These are personal friends of mine. These aren't just tenants."

Police said they would await the results of autopsies to determine if any criminal investigation is warranted. The first body was discovered when a home health care nurse, Sara Govender, let herself into Mrs. Yost's apartment with a key to change the dressings on ulcers that had developed on the woman's legs, police said. The nurse found Mrs. Yost's body on the floor of her second-floor bedroom. Ms. Govender contacted police. The body of Mrs. Carver was found on a bedroom floor of her second-floor apartment.

Some residents had found other lodgings after the air

Curb that car appetite...

The remarkable recent turnaround in the American automobile industry may help quiet, we can only hope, the protectionist appetite.

More likely, as the presidential election year gets nearer, enthusiasm for protectionist legislation will be renewed, especially as the bidding for the votes - and campaign resources - of organized labor begins in earnest

When that happens, we expect to see renewed interest in Congress in "local content legislation," a particular favorite of the United Auto Workers which would require foreign car manufacturers to either produce more cars in the U.S. or to use a certain percentage of U.S. - made •parts in cars they intend to sell here.

Various forms of "domestic content legislation," winch have been introduced in the current session of Congress, would also limit the number of cars U.S. automobile companies can import for sale here.

"Domestic content legislation" may be a bit more politically palatable than restrictive tariffs or outright import bans, in a country at least nominally committed to free internation trade, but the effects tend to be the same: the legislation would cut the number of imports and create some new jobs in the domestic auto industry.

But, as a new study by the Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates of Philadelphia suggets. "domestic content legislation" would also likely eliminate many more jobs in related industries than it would create in the auto industry, and would steeply inflate car prices for American consumers. As the opening salvo in what could also develop into a protectionist trade war, pitting the U.S. especially against Japan, say Wharton researchers, the legislation could also have adverse effects on the world economy.

'Domestic content legislation," like other protectionist legislation aimed at reducing the impact on U.S. car sales, is mis - aimed, the Wharton study points out. The U.S. auto industry's severe losses in recent years were caused more by internal economic factors skyrocketing interest rates, lower family income, sharply increased gas prices - than by competetion from imports.

The increased share of the U.S. market taken by imports, in other words, was the result, not the cause, of U.S. automakers' problems. As some of those factors have been reversed or mitigated, the study notes, American car sales have rebounded.

The Wharton researchers believe that "domestic content legislation" would not result in foreign car makers moving production to the U.S. to comply with domestic content requirements, because the costs of production here would still far outweigh the potential return on investment.

Moving production here would force foreign manufacturers to boost their car prices. The more likely result would be that foreign car makers would simply reduce their imports, or increase the proportion of higher priced cars they export.

The result of all this, the Wharton study predicts. would be a 10 percent increase in average car prices by 1990, soley due to the domestic content requirements. The increase could be greater, the study says, based on what happened in 1981 - 82, when voluntary Japanese limits on imports accounted for a 17 percent increase in the average price of a car. The drop in imports would, the Wharton study forecasts, create some new employment in the U.S. industry, as imported car sales are replaced by sales imported car sales are replaced by sales of U.S. cars. The study forecasts that as many as 39,000 jobs would be gained in 1986, rising to 84,000 by 1991. And that is only if increased U.S. car sales exactly match predicted decreases in import sales, which the Wharton study suggests is unlikely because of the increase in car prices. But the sharp drop in imports would also be accompanied by significant job losses with foreign car retail outlets and within the port and transportation industries associated with handling imported cars. The potential losses in these related industries could be more than 88,000 by 1991, more than offsetting even the most optimistic expected gains in the U.S. auto industry.

The Wharton economists also suggest that "domestic conent legislation" could only be viewed by nations like Japan as an attempt to improve the U.S. economy at the expense of the Japanese economy. Retatiation in other markets where the U.S. exports - agricultural commodities, for example - could cause further U.S. employment losses.

In the long run, Wharton economists conclude, "domestic content legislation" could be the opening salvo in a potentially devastating international trade

Long and short, the legislation is bad medicine for the American economy, for both consumers and workers.

Mansfield: A rare one in Tokyo

By DON GRAFF

TOKYO (NEA) - Mike Mansfield is a rare one. He has been U.S. ambassador to Japan for six years, a long run in that line of work. More, he is a Carter appointee carried over by the Reagan administration. There aren't many of those around these days. Making an exception to a rule in Mansfield's case may quite possibly be one of the most successful foreign policy moves the administration has to its credit to date.

His stature in Japan can only be described as towering. He is valued here not only as a major American political figure. but as a friend of Japan. He knows the country, understands its problems and can be as effective in making the Japanese case in Washington as he is presenting his own country's in

The transition from one administration has not been without some changes in operating procedures at the embassy in Tokyo. Mansfield used to telephone Jimmy Carter when the situation called for direct contact between the man on the spot and the man in charge.

Not so with Ronald Reagan. He does not, for one thing, Mansfied says, know the incumbent that well.

But a change in the channel has not affected the Mansfield style of communication. He still is listened to in Washington.

It hasn't hurt any that all the secretaries at State with whom he has worked - from Cyrus Vance to George Shultz have been old friends his days as a power on Capitol Hill.

He is as dedicated as ever to his job. and as convinced as ever that the Japanese - American connection is reciprocal. "The most important bilateral relationship in the world is that between our two countries. bar none," he says as he has many times before.

The next country, he believes, will be "the century of the Pacific," and will be largely shaped by the Japanese American tie in the durability of which both countries have a vital stake.

There are contributions both can make to that end. Mansfield maintains friendly but firm pressure on the Tokyo government to open up Japan's trade. As the primary beneficiary of the world system. Japan ought to do so. And it must do so if protectionist legislation is to be headed off in

His concern here is for the ultimate consequences to the American economy more than for the immediate damage to the Japanese. Protectionism in the cause of saving jobs raises prices for domestic consumers, encourages inflation and in the end costs jobs in a fettered economy.

His friendly persistence is also an important influence on the shaping of Japan's defense policies, particularly military spending

Mansfield is fond of camparing Japan and his native . Montana, whose territories are roughly equal. But where fewer than a million Montanans have plenty of room to spread out, 120 million Japanese must share these islands. And where Montana has mineral resources in abundance, Japan's only important resource is its people. He speaks bluntly and always to the point. And on the record. The decided long ago that when he started saying things he did not want attributed, he would stop talking.

He has had three careers now - as an academician, member of Congress for three decades and as the envoy of the most powerful nation in the world in quite possibly its most important diplomatic post. At least that's how he sees Does he give any thought to packing it in? "Not for a minute.

Tokyo must assume a greater share of the common burden and must continue the gradual budget increases of recent years. The ceiling of 1 percent - still not reached - of the Japanese GNP committed to defense he points out, is not a static figure, as often misunderstand in the U.S., but al constantly expanding figure based on an expanding economy. Further, there are the contributions Japan makes that do not appear in the budget, such as the bases provided rent - free to American forces

Debt, idlen'ss are curse of the Third World

By OSCAR COOLEY

World economic historians will look back at 1983 as a critical year, the year we thought we were rising out of the recession of 1982, but weren't quite sure.

The U.S. in 1983 is better off than most countries. Our 20 percent inflation rate has dropped substantially, our unemployment rate less so. Our 1983 crops in most areas are abundant. By contrast, much of the developing world is in great economic trouble.

Consider two of the largest countries: Brazil and Mexico. Their populations are increasing more rapidly than their productions. Their governments, committed to the modern role of doing everything for everybody, have borrowed heavily abroad and now cannot pay off their debt. Mexico shook the banking world a year ago when it announced it could not make the payments due on its debt. Brazil would be in as bad shape if it had not recently got another loan of $411 and Venezuela are in similar trouble The developing, or Third World, countries all are afflicted with one common disease: debt. As they grown and develop, million from the International Monetary Fund. Argentina

they need capital. The more advanced countries, in both Europe and North America, have it and so they, both goverments and banks, have loaned billions to their needy neighbors. The latter now owe the western banks and governments some $700 billions, at least a third of it to the Neither the debtors nor the creditors can be blamed. They could not foresee the jump in the Third World's growth rate, nor the hike in the price of petroleum, nor the weakness in prices of their crops that they sell to us and hope to pay their debts with, nor the extraordinary increase in interest rates. All of these events, occurring in the last 3 years, have put the Third World in a bind.

Some see their salvation in the International Monetary Fund, set up years ago to supply emergency credit to those countries that need it, but the IMF is not big enough to finance all of these big and interesting new nations. So, some are calling for a new "Super - IMF" to pull the world through

To meet the immediate emergency, it is proposed that the wealthy Uncle Sam kick at ther $8.4 billion into the IMF so that it can lend more freely to the Third World debtors.

Before any of these steps are taken, the U.S. Europe, the IMF all are saying emphatically that the poorer nations must stop inflating their currencies. Running off more paper money on the printing presses does no good. It just makes life desperately hard for the people of those countries, for to double the money supply tends to couble market prices. In effect it robs each consumer of half his spending money. He then as a worker demands a doubling of his wages, and this is impossible for his employer.

'Quit your inflationary policies." says the IMF, "if you expect more credit from us." "IMF, get out!" scream the wage - earners of Sao Paulo, where the Brazilian authorities are having their hands full holding the people in check.

Debt...inflation .. unemployment - they add up to war as the eople of the Third World look for scapegoats on which to

When the war is within a country, as in the case of El Salvador, it is called a revolution. When it between two countries - Libya and Chad, for example - it may be a uabble over a boundary. If it involved an area hallowed by igious history, such as Palestine, it is a crusade. Whatever it is called, it probably would not occur if it were not for idleness. The devil finds mischief for idle hands The happiest people of the Third World are the most primitive ones: those who are not aware there has been aworldwide industrial revolution. Idled, they go fishing, hunt birds, and plant yams as their grandfathers did. Unhappiest are those who sit and wait for their production line to start moving again. It probably won't. There has been a change.

MOSCOW (AP) -Communist Party leader Yuri V. Andropov, criticizing the "half-measures" of the past, is urging skeptical party veterans to back his plan to revamp the sluggish Soviet economy by rewarding good workers and giving factory managers more leeway.

He told a gathering of conservative party oldtimers Monday that the country's leaders should be dissatisfied with the current pace of economic development.

SUCHITOTO, El Salvador (AP) - A three-month-long mnesty program has aided ngry peasants who wanted to leave rebel-held areas, but failed to reach many of those it was meant to help — leftist guerrillas battling the

Supporters of the program which ended Monday said it concluded too soon, leaving hundreds more peasants on their isolated farms with little hope of relocation and no choice but to give food and other support to the rebels. Policarpo Escobar, a 33-year-old itinerant farmer. was among those who took .advantage of the program to escape his impoverished native village of Guadalupe with his wife and six children. "There was no food, no salt, no soap, no water," said Escobar The village, 28 miles northeast of San Salvador and a few miles from this refugee center near the rebel-held ·Guazapa volcano, was swept up in the movement to topple the U.S.-backed rightist government three years ago. Since then, Escobar said. guerrillas operating from nearby camps insisted on food in exchange for protection from marauding troops who sometimes killed

The amnesty law, the project of President Alvaro Magana, began May 15 and was seen as the carrot in a -carrot-and-stick approach to ending 46 months of civil war. The stick was an aggressive army sweep of guerrilla-held

An estimated 544 people took advantage of the amnesty program, the government said. During the same period, some 549 political prisoners were freed from Salvadoran jails in a gesture of goodwill. The mayor of Suchitoto. Jose Matias Cotto, said he and other mayors have urged the Constituent Assembly to extend the program. "For now the program has been successful, but there are hundreds more in the hills who want to turn themselves in," he said. Despite government claims to the contrary, it is widely believed that few of those who asked for amnesty were veteran guerrilla fighters. Nearly all were hungry peasants who claimed they were coerced into working with the rebels. One U.S. military adviser who spoke on condition that he not be further identified described the amnesty beneficiaries as "dumb farmboys" who had been recruited as guerrilla

Mom has message: Cocaine kills...

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last Feb. 12, my dear friend, Beverly, called to tell me that Kurt, her 25-year-old son, had died of an overdose of cocaine. I was shocked!

At Kurt's funeral, the minister read a letter that Beverly had written and asked him to read at the service.

I have Beverly's permission to send it to you, Abby, because in her words, "If it saves just one life, it will be

KURT'S GODMOTHER

DEAR READERS: Here's Beverly's letter (in part):

"All of us share a terrible grief, and now I want to share my feelings with you:

"Kurt died of an overdose of cocaine. At first I couldn't even say those words, but now I want to say them over and over again so you, his friends, will not forget them. Since Kurt's death, almost all of you have said to me, 'If there is anything I can do for you, please let me know.

"All right, I am letting you know what you can do, not only for me, but for yourselves. Please take care of your precious bodies and make a solemn promise that what happened to Kurt will never happen to you.

Since this happened to Kurt, many of you have told me that you have used cocaine, but you won't use it anymore I am not only asking you - I am begging you to stop! It's too late for Kurt, but it's not too late for you.

"Don't hurt yourself. Don't hurt your family. Don't hurt your friends. We all loved Kurt so much we don't want to believe this nightmare. But it is true. It happened!

"If Kurt's death can save just one of you, he will not

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon and have made arrangements to have our wedding ceremony videotaped.

I don't want to risk having our expensive video ruined by crying babies and unpredictable toddlers, so I have tried to make sure there will be no small children at the ceremony. That doesn't mean I don't like kids. I love them. But not at my wedding.

This is my wedding, my expense and my choice, so l wrote "No children, please," on all the invitations addressed to those with small children. Now I'm getting response cards back from these people with the names of their children written in!

Abby, what gives them the right to bring their children when I have asked them not to? Our church has no nursery. I checked.

What can be done to keep the kids out? UPSET IN UPLAND, CALIF.

DEAR UPSET: Short of posting guards at the door to prevent anyone from smuggling a child in. nothing can be done.

To ignore your request is inexcusably rude. Discuss this with your clergyman.

Some folk remedies can kill you

By CAM ROSSIE

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) Mexican-Americans are taking such deadly poisons as lead, mercury or laundry bluing as folk remedies to treat an illness unique to their culture, says a professor studying the health threat.

Dr. Bob Trotter, associate professor of anthropology at Edinburg's Pan American University, is surveying Mexican-Americans in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona to learn more about the illness and its remedies.

Trotter said more than 105 treatments are known for 'empacho," a blockage of the intestine caused by a ball of undigested food in the stomach. It is not found in medical texts, he said.

Trotter described the illness as a "culture-bound syndrome" because it is found in one culture but not others. It is believed to be caused by such things as eating uncooked food like tortillas, eating bananas late at night or being forced to eat sorething one doesn't like, he

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) Cornhuskera have won or - Nebraska and Oklahoma, which have dominated the Big Eight in football for the past decade, figure to run 1-2 again this year, leaving the rest of the conference in their dust once again.

In the past two seasons, Nebraska has taken sole possession of the championship, and with its championships. In that same entire starting backfield period, Nebraska's intact the Huskers are a big favorite to make it three in a row. Few experts seem to think anybody has much chance to unseat the Huskers except Oklahoma.

Quarterback Turner Gill is 17-1 in games he has started for the Huskers."He's so quick, it's like he was shot out of a gun," noted one opposing coach. "We knew he threw it well because of his statistics . . but it's hard to get ready

Coaches critical of drug statistics

Associated Press Writer

It has become an uncomfortable routine in the daily itinerary of a National Football League head coach. First the game questions...then the drug questions...then the denials.

Coach Bill Walsh of the San Francisco 49ers couldn't rehash his team's 17-15 victory with the media Sunday without acknowledging comments attributed to unnamed NFL sources in a published report that as many as 50 percent of NFL players were using cocaine.

Walsh labled the copyright story in Sunday's New York Daily News as "pure unadulterated sensationalism" following the game with the New England Patriots at Candlestick Park. The Daily News story quoted league sources as saying that the 50 percent use cocaine on social occasions and that 20 percent are chemically dependent on the drug. "If there's any NFL employee involved (as a source for the allegations). he's a disgrace to himself and to the league,' said Walsh, whose team was cited by the published report as one of the league's worst offenders, along with the Dallas Cowbovs

The Daily News also reported that NFL security was aware of 34 cases of drug use on the Cowboys. The 49ers may have even a higher number, the story said, citing its sources. "I don't believe those statements." Coach Tom Landry said

"The common statistic is that 10 percent of the population are chemically abusive," noted Mike Lynn, general manager of the Minnesota Vikings. "We're certainly part of that and probably higher but nowhere near 50 percent. It doesn't surprise me that someone would say it because of all that has come to the public's attention. A host of drug-related football stories have come to the public's attention in recent weeks. Last month four players -Ross Browner and Pete Johnson of the Cincinnati Bengals. E.J. Junior of the St. Louis Cardinals and Greg Stemrick of the New Orleans Saints - were suspended through the first four regular season games by Commissioner Pete Rozelle for involvement with cocaine. Last Wednesday cornerback Tony Peters of the defending Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins was charged with conspiring to distribute cocaine in a $115,000 deal.

Other players mentioned in recent non-related drug stories included Rich Upchurch of the Denver Broncos, Clarence Harmon of the Washington Redskins and recently-retired Lemar Parrish Last year, revelations surfaced regarding admitted coacine use by George Rogers and former NFL player Don Reese

Then came Sunday's newspaper story. It was impossible for those whose livelihood depends on the growing popularity of pro football to ignore the allegations.

'There's been so much publicity about the subject, it doesn't surprise me that someone would say it. But I don't believe it," Lynn said. "We've done extensive work for the past five years on our team and the percentages are nowhere near that.

Quoting one unnamed source, the Daily News reported. "On the average, there are about 10 players on a team that are hardcore. The numbers are higher than many people would

Youth files suit on 'pine tar' game

NEW YORK (AP) - A 14-year-old boy who attended the 'pine-tar game'' between the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals has filed suit to gain free admission to the completion of the game, saying the $2.50 admission for the final inning is unfair.

Lawrence F. Morrison, a Yankee fan who wants to be a lawyer someday, filed his first lawsuit Monday. He and his father, lawyer Arthur Morrison, obtained a show-cause order from Manhattan's State Supreme Court Justice Stanley Parness, directing team representatives to appear for a court

The July 24 game was suspended in the ninth inning after umpires called Kansas City's George Brett out because his home run — that had reversed a Yankee lead — was hit with a so yards (in a 38-16 victory) bat covered with excessive pine tar. Pine tar is used to improve a batter's grip.

American League President Lee MacPhail later overruled the umpires, reinstated Brett's home run and ordered that the game, with Kansas City ahead 5-4, be completed.

Cowboys crush Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys dominated Los Angeles 30-7, yet a rookie from Dallas who plays for the Rams drew the most attention.

For as Gary Hogeboom and Danny White of the Cowboys controlled the airways Monday night in the National Football League preseason game, the leading rusher was Eric Dickerson, the 1982 All-American from SMU.

Hogeboom, in his fourth season with Dallas and starting his first game as a pro, sent the Cowboys off to a 10-0 first quarter lead.

He completed nine of 13 passes for 106 vards and had a 17-yard scoring pass to Doug

White, the regular starter, came on to hit 9 of 14 for 98 yards and Glenn Carano hit four of

The Rams offense sputtered and might have died if it weren't for the 218-pound Dickerson who gained 67 yards on 14 carries to lead all rushers. He did, however, fumble at the Dallas six when the Rams' offense had its best scoring chance.

At the end, the only Los Angeles touchdown was contributed by LeRoy Irvin, who intercepted a White pass and ran it back 80

Former Ram, Rafael Septien, kicked field goals of 25, 36 and 50.

After the game, even talk in the Dallas dressing room was of Dickerson

"He is going to be one of the best," said winning coach Tom Landry. "He could make the difference for Los Angeles. He could change things for them.'

Star running back Tony Dorsett of the Cowboys, said, "Dickerson is going to be a good one, and he should not get discouraged because he is not starting. Take it from someone who was in the same spot seven years ago

Although the second man picked overall in the NFL draft had played briefly against San Diego in the opening preseason game, he suffered a bruised back on his second rush.

Veteran Jewerl Thomas is listed as the starter at halfback with the fast and powerful rookie from SMU his backup.

After the Dallas tussle, Dickerson commented, "I feel this was my first pro game under my belt. I have the potential to break a long run and that's what the fans like "Everything worked against us," Slocum said. "We had a bad opponent to start with because no one had any respect for Boston College. They threw for 300 or on us in the first game and everyone just went berserk over that.

"Later on in the year, they threw for 540 against Penn State and they win the national championship. By then no one says anything about it. But early in the year it was that we were awful.

As a matter of fact, the Aggies were bad, Slocum agreed. But they intend to get better this season with a new 3-4 defense and shifting from the split backs offensive to the I formation.

The entire offensive backfield is gone but after watching John Mazur from the defensive side. Slocum thinks the Aggies have a premier quarterback at the

"I think he will be one of the best quarterbacks A&M has ever had, the best one since Edd Hargett," Slocum said. 'He's made a great adjustment. I hope he gets off to a good start.'

Mazur is a transfer from Southern Cal where Slocum was a defensive coordinator in 1981. He will replace Bryan Dausin was the lone graduation loss among the starting offensive line.

Slocum says the 3-4 alignment is better suited to the Aggies' talents.

"We didn't have many more linebacker-type guys,' Slocum said

Time running out on Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) Time is running out for the Texas Rangers, who have kept alive their fading hopes of still being in a pennant race next month

The Rangers fell seven games behind Chicago Monday night after a 6-4 loss to the Balitmore Orioles, who have now won three in a row and remain on top of the American League East.

"We're running out of our alloted losses," said first baseman Pete O'Brien, whose three-run homer went for naught in the loss.

'We've got to win 10 or 11 ballgames on this homestand, regardless of who it's against," said O'Brien. "We kind of have our backs to the wall. Texas is now 2-2 in the 13-game homestand, meaning the Rangers would have to win eight of nine against Baltimore, Chicago and Detroit to reach 10 wins. Monday night, the damage

Four of his nine homeruns and 11 of his 39 runs batted in this season have come against Texas.

'Every ballplayer has a certain team he does well against," Lowenstein said. "This year I've certainly done well against the Rangers."

x supporter won contract with his help

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Southern University changed the secifications on a bid for artificial turf and awarded the $1.3 illion contract to a political supporter of Attorney General Im Mattox after Mattox called a school official, The Dallas orning News reported.

Three university officials told the newspaper they changed he specifications on a bid they had accepted in March after the attorney general challenged the specifications.

Mattox called university legal counsel Theadore Andrews d "apparently raised questions as to whether we had schaved improperly in awarding the contract," said TSU President Leonard Spearman.

The newspaper, in a copyright story Sunday, said the contract was switched from a St. Louis manufacturer to SuperTurf International Inc., a Garland-based company whose president, N.W. Paschal, is a longtime Mattox supporter and who once was a client of Mattox's former law

Paschal contributed $5,000 to Mattox's campaign for attorney general last October and his company was represented by Mattox's former law firm last year in a major lawsuit, the News said

Mattox was unavailable for comment after repeated calls and Paschal was out of the country, said J.F. Whitworth, SuperTurf's financial officer. Whitworth added that he was not aware of any problems involving the TSU bid Spearman and other university officials said Mattox ended they had not accepted the lowest bid for artificial thletic turf. But, they said, Mattox did not complain when the SuperTurf bid later was accepted, even though it was $64,000 higher than the lowest bid.

TSU regent Howard D. Kirven of Dallas, who also is chairman of the university building committee, said Mattox's conversation with Andrews "didn't affect my decision, but I wasn't comfortable with it." Andrews confirmed that Mattox called him to discuss legal problems relating to the turf contract.

He said he received "more than one" telephone call from Mattox's office following up the bid, but that none of the subsequent calls was from Mattox himself.

The TSU officials said they were unaware of Mattox's former involvement with SuperTurf at the time of the phone

Last year, SuperTurf lost to Monsanto Co. on a bid for resurfacing Texas Stadium and sued Monsanto. the City of Irving and the Texas Stadium board. SuperTurf was represented by the law firm Crowder & Mattox, while Mattox still was associated with it. The lawsuit since has been dismissed by agreement of both sides.

On March 1, TSU officials authorized a joint bid of $1.392 million from Crawley Construction Co. and Northeast Houston Construction Co. for an artificial surface on the school's health and physical fitness field. The bid was for installation of Monsanto's AstroTurf, which was preferred by the university building committee.

Crawley had submitted proposals for two other surfaces. SuperTurf and All-Pro, both of which were lower in price than AstroTurf.

Dr. Joshua Hill, vice president for administrative services and personnel, said university officials wanted AstroTurf for its durability and for consistency, because it is the turf used on two other fields used by TSU.

Kirven said it is legal to specify a brand name or "one equal to it" in bids. But contracts often allow contractors to substitute higher-quality or less expensive materials. Andrews said that after the AstroTurf bid was accepted,

Mattox called. "There was something concerning him," Andrews said. "It did pertain to (our) not taking the low bid."

The regents decided to review the competitors' products and on May 4, TSU's consulting engineers revised the bid specifications to qualify SuperTurf and All-Pro turf.

"They told us they reopened it because of the pressure they received from Austin." said Barry Faulkner, president of the All-Pro company that ultimately submitted the lowest

All-Pro's bid was eliminated because of the company's lack of installation experience and AstroTurf was ruled out because of price. That left only SuperTurf, which by then was favored by the coaches, university officials said.

Plague claims life of N.M.

RATON, N.M. (AP) - A 13-year-old boy died Monday of bubonic plague, the third plague death in the state this year. and a medical official called it "probably the most severe case" he has ever seen:

New Mexico has had a record 24 cases of the disease this State epidemiologist Dr. Jonathan Mann said the boy became ill early Sunday and was admitted Sunday evening to a Raton hospital, where doctors immediately suspected bubonic plague and began treatment.

"The tragedy was that the boy became ill only a short time before he was brought to medical attention, and that although the diagnosis was made at the earliest possible moment and medical treatment was very prompt and aggressive ... the disease overwhelmed him," Mann said. He said the boy, from Eagle Nest, had no signs of plague pneumonia and therefore there is no concern about person-to-person spread of the disease. Plague generally is transmitted by the bite of infected fleas, but can be transmitted from person to person when a victim develops the pneumonic stage. But in this case, he said, "from a medical perspective everything was done as one would like it to be done. That is a testimony to the overwhelming nature of his case, which is unusual in a plague case."
