Francis's lawyer charged in 1977 capital murder payoff

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Writer

AMARILLO — A prominent Amarillo lawyer arranged the contract killing of Pampa native Kevin Francis's business partner back in 1977, according to a capital-murder indictment returned by a grand jury here Thursday afternoon.

Attorney James Durham Jr., 42, a former associate of District Attorney Danny Hill, confidant to former District Attorney Tom Curtis, and a man previously appointed by an Amarillo district judge to investigate alleged political corruption in Potter County, is charged with capital murder.

Durham was freed on $100,000 bond Thursday evening after his wife pleaded to District Judge Ed Nobles that her husband is terminally ill.

The capital-murder indictment charges that Durham lined up and paid off the husband-and-wife hit team that butchered Francis's partner in a downtown Amarillo clothing store, Frank Potts, 49, was hacked and stabbed 28 times inside Barney's Factory Direct Men's Clothing store, 701 S. Polk, on Oct. 8, 1977.

Potts's convicted killers, George and Bedale Hicks, are former clients of Durham. Durham had represented Bedale Hicks in a malpractice lawsuit.

The Hickses are serving 99-year prison terms for Potts's murder.

Durham also previously represented Kevin Francis, 33, a graduate of Pampa High School who at one time owned and operated clothing stores in Pampa and Amarillo.

The indictment alleges Durham is the link between Francis and the contract killers.

After Durham's indictment Thursday, Hill, who once shared a law office with the lawyer, asked Nobles to disqualify him from prosecuting the case and asked the judge to appoint a special prosecutor. Nobles did not rule on the motion.

The motive for Potts's murder, according to prosecutors, was a $175,000 insurance policy naming Francis as beneficiary. The partners' Amarillo clothing store was a financial failure, according to testimony during Francis's earlier trial for the murder.

Francis was convicted in March 1980 of solicitation of capital murder for Potts's death. That conviction was recently overturned by the 7th Court of Appeals, which ruled the trial judge made a technical error in instructions to Francis's jury. A new trial on the solicitation charge is pending, but Francis since has been re-indicted on a straight charge of capital murder. Trial for Francis on that charge is also pending.

During Francis's 1980 trial, two witnesses testified Durham was the possible bag man for Potts's murder. Bedale Hicks's cousin, Jerry Don "Pookie" Gipson, said his relatives told him Durham paid them to kill Potts. John Payne, a business acquaintance of Francis, also said Francis once told him Durham was a man who could arrange a murder.

After the testimony, Durham told a reporter for the Amarillo Daily News he had no idea why the witnesses would identify him in connection with the stabbing death.

"I never paid George Hicks a penny to do any job. I didn't put a dime in Hicks's pocket.

"I am not a crook.

"I don't know why Kevin Francis would use my name that way because I had no connection with any contract killing, real or imagined.

"Francis was talking when he should have been thinking. His mouth was running, but his brain was disengaged," Durham told the reporter.

Until Thursday, Durham was never charged in connection with the contract killing, though his financial records were subpoenaed and he testified before the grand jury investigating the murder in 1979.

A loan officer at the Amarillo National Bank said Durham cosigned a $2,379 note for George Hicks to buy a used Cadillac.

Durham told the Amarillo reporter he signed the note for the presently convicted killer because the Hickses needed help. He said it is not uncommon for a lawyer to loan money to a client in a lawsuit for pending damages.

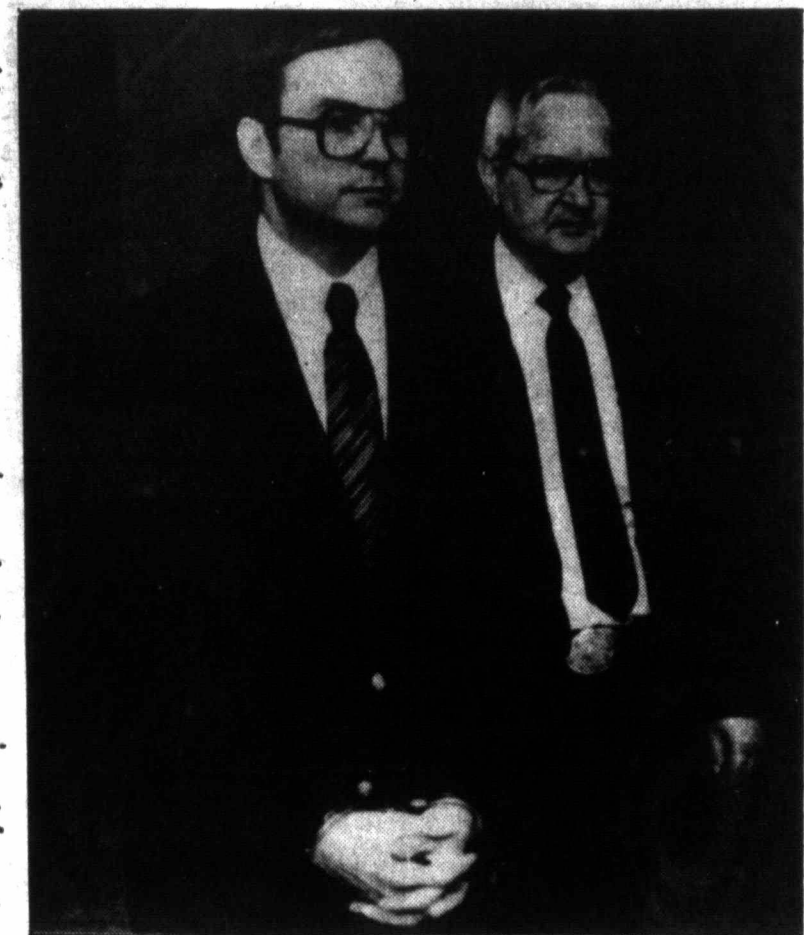

The loan officer, Robert Green, said Hicks's Cadillac was later repossessed.

"Would it make sense for me to cosign a note for him and then instruct the bank to repossess?" Durham asked the Amarillo reporter.

In 1974, the lawyer now accused of capital murder was appointed to an independent panel investigating the Potter County Sheriff's handling of an attempted jailbreak.

In 1977, the same year Potts was murdered, Amarillo District Judge George Dowlen appointed Durham to head up a panel investigating alleged corruption at the Potter County Courthouse, later known as "Pottergate."

Arson suspected

Pampa fireman Harry Patten, left, and Fire Chief Paul Jones battle a fire in the garage of a vacant house at 541 S. Gray late Thursday night. The house, owned by Heliodoro Silva, 1113 Huff Road, received heavy damage to the whole structure from the fire which was reported at 9:45 p.m. Three units of the Pampa Fire Department responded and spent more than an hour bringing the fire under control. Silva said he lost furniture and appliances which were in the house. "There was no electricity on in the house. How could it have started?" Silva asked. The fire rekindled early today but was quickly controlled. Pampa police and fire department officials were investigating the possibility of arson this morning. (Staff photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

Looters big problem in hurricane-hit Galveston

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — National Guard troops carrying shotguns and rifles patrolled this storm-battered island city early today, helping enforce a strict nighttime curfew imposed to discourage looting in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia.

At least five people died in the season's first Atlantic hurricane, which crashed into the Texas' upper Gulf Coast with 115-mph winds and a 12-foot storm tide Thursday, ripping through homes, businesses and trees from here through Houston, 50 miles inland.

A sixth victim was killed in Dallas in a wind-related traffic accident as remnants of Alicia lashed that area with thunderstorms Thursday afternoon, 14 hours after the hurricane moved ashore.

Stunned coastal residents surveyed the damage Thursday afternoon as the storm subsided. Many among an estimated 42,000 who left in fear came back home. Officials said the clean-up will take weeks.

"Even those of us who are Houston natives can't remember anything like this," said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, 37.

She said the biggest problem today was a lack of fresh water because electric pumps were without power. Residents were urged to conserve water and boil tap water before drinking it.

In Galveston, thousands of residents spent a second night huddled in homes without electricity.

Alicia's screaming winds demolished many homes on the island, defaced hotels, uprooted trees, and sent debris slashing and tearing at the historic island's buildings like shrapnel.

Hundreds of homes throughout the stricken area were flooded. The storm surge flooded both highways leading to the mainland, completely isolating Galveston for a time.

Chamber will teach teachers on the free enterprise system

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa public school teachers will be learning about the free enterprise system as part of their in-service training activities at a half-day symposium at Pampa High School on Aug. 25.

The Free Enterprise Symposium will be presented as a result of Pampa Chamber of Commerce and school district activities which began two years ago, according to Brent Stephens, co-chairman of the CoC Free Enterprise Committee.

Phillips Petroleum Co. will be sponsoring the training to help teachers learn elements of the free enterprise system for instruction in the Pampa public school system.

"Texas will be giving more emphasis to free enterprise curriculum in schools in the next three to five years," Stephens said, "so Pampa wants to get off to a head start."

Phillips will provide "some of the most exciting free enterprise instructors in the nation" to conduct the workshop sessions, Stevens said. The oil company will send nine instructors to discuss the economic system for the symposium.

Keynote speaker will be Flo Messel of Bartlesville, Okla. "She's one of the more famous free enterprise speakers in the nation," Stephens said. She presents a straightforward and very educational discussion of the free enterprise system in the United States, he added.

The symposium, strictly for public school teachers, will begin at 8 a.m. with coffee and doughnuts. A general assembly will begin at 8:30 a.m. for introductions, endorsement by school officials, and a review of the workshop format. Ms. Messel will provide the keynote address during the general session.

Workshop sessions will be conducted from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Topics for two of the workshops are "Interaction of Free Enterprise and the Government" and "Business Responsibilities to the Public."

The other workshop session will be used to present a booklet on the free enterprise system to teachers in kindergarten through the fifth grade. Teachers will use the booklet in the coming school year to instruct students in elements of the economic system, Stephens said.

The booklet, published as a coloring book, has been prepared by members of the CoC Free Enterprise Committee and the marketing and distributive education classes of Pampa High School. It has been printed and distributed at no cost to the Pampa school system, Stephens said.

Teachers will use the booklet to introduce students to elements of the free enterprise system. It is hoped that parents will help the students with the booklet "and maybe learn something about free enterprise, too," Stephens said.

Students using the booklet will also have a chance to win a bicycle on Nov. 1. Students may complete a puzzle at the end of the booklet and enter a drawing for bicycles donated by Alco Discount Store and K-Mart Discount Store. One bike will be given to a student in kindergarten through second grade, and another one will be given to a student from third through fifth grade. The drawing will be held at the Chamber of Commerce office.

After the workshop sessions, the teachers will meet in another general session to view a film, "Man's Material Welfare," on free enterprise provided by Amway. Amway has a Free Enterprise Institute which provides films and literature on the economic systems. Some of the literature will be given out at the symposium, including a booklet entitled "The American Free Enterprise System: An Endangered Species."

Phillips also sponsors a "very strong" free enterprise program, Stephens said. They provide films and brochures to various groups and organizations and offer instructors for use by businesses, organizations, and other groups.

When floodwaters receded, the highways were left littered with broken limbs and other debris.
Expensive yachts were left piled in heaps like children's toys.
Four of the dead were crushed by falling trees. One man drowned. Several other victims were hurt in the storm, but amazingly, there were no serious injuries.
"I've stayed through hurricanes before, but no more," vowed Milton Carter, 44, of Galveston. "This is the worst I've ever seen."
The storm spawned about a dozen tornadoes in the Galveston-Houston area as it slammed ashore. Later, Alicia was downgraded to a tropical storm and rolled north toward Dallas with heavy rains.
By early today, remnants of the storm were centered near Fort Worth, its violent power spent.
Houston Lighting & Power officials estimated 330,000 homes in southeastern Texas remained without electric power late Thursday.
"It's the worst damage we've ever had," said spokesman Graham Painter. The storm ripped down hundreds of electric power lines, setting at least 10 homes on fire, and Painter said it would take at least a week to restore all power.
Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said damage left by Alicia could run "in the billions," but an insurance industry spokesman in Austin said any damage estimate this soon would be "irresponsible."
President Reagan directed all federal resources be used to help residents cope with the damage.
"We deeply sympathize with the people of Galveston and South Texas," he said.
Texas Gov. Mark White asked the president to declare six counties that were in the path of Alicia a disaster area, and scheduled a helicopter flight over the stricken area later today.

Durham's work with District Attorney Curtis and subsequent grand juries resulted in the indictments and trials of several Potter County officials. Former Potter County Attorney Kerry Knorrp and former Potter County Commissioner Bob Hicks were eventually convicted of felony theft charges and expelled from office.
Those convictions were later thrown out on appeals.
Curtis also tried Potter County Sheriff T.L. Baker in a removal suit for official misconduct. Baker was defended by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes and was acquitted. Chief Deputy Don Smith was also charged in connection with the department's alleged responsibility for allowing a homosexual rape in the county jail. He was also cleared of all allegations.
Curtis refused to pursue the investigation into Potts's murder. Though the murder occurred in 1977, the indictments against the Hickses and Francis weren't returned until 1978.
The grand jury that returned the indictments investigated the killing on its own initiative, which is allowed by Texas law. Potts's widow, Polly, asked the jurors to investigate her husband's murder.
The grand jury ordered Curtis out of its chambers when Potts's death was investigated. Curtis refused to leave, and he was forcibly removed from the room by sheriff's deputies. The jurors also asked a security team from the

Perryton will raise its taxes

By SHERILL McLEAREN
Pampa News Correspondent

PERRYTON - The Perryton City Council has approved a budget of $5,717,000 requiring a tax increase and higher service fees to foot the bill.
The action was taken Tuesday night at a meeting which also included a public hearing on use of federal revenue sharing funds. If the funds come through as expected, the council will put the city's entire $65,000 allotment into street maintenance.
The new budget will result in a 9.5 cent increase in the tax rate, which will jump from the present 43 cents to 52.5 cents per $100 valuation. The increase contrasts with a 3 cent cut in taxes last year.
The council also hiked sanitation fees for both residential and commercial services by 10 percent and voted to raise water and sewer rates 7 percent to finance bonded indebtedness incurred by voter approval of a bond referendum in the spring of 1982.
The increase in the tax rate is necessary, the council explained, because of a decrease in sales tax revenues and in police and court fines. Sales tax revenues are down by $300,000 and fines by $159,000. Overall general revenues have decreased by $700,000 from projections.

The tax increase is expected to generate $118,000. The hike in utility rates is expected to bring in an additional $24,000, with a 7 percent rise in water and sewer charges adding additional general revenues of $83,000.
The budget approved by the council includes $2,588,000 for the general operating budget and $3,364,250 for utility operations.
The city expects the changes to raise $2.7 million for general operations and $3.56 million in utility revenues. If the expected revenues come in, there should be a surplus of $87,430 in the general budget at the end of the 1984 year.
Following is a breakdown of planned budget expenses: governmental, $37,000; administration, $175,000; fire and ambulance, $256,580; police, $438,470; engineering, $103,940; city maintenance shop, $121,680; parks and recreation, $158,920; city golf course, $136,950; sanitation department, $228,200; and street maintenance, $376,340.

The city came out with a deficit of $2,840,000 for last year. This includes $2,683,000 in bond indebtedness and $176,000 in floating debt. Deficit figures do not include judgments resulting in losses from lawsuits and similar actions.
The deficits are a result of the approval of the bond election in 1982. Not issued yet are $1 million in bonds executed for the town water plan and $700,000 in bonds for gas distribution repairs.
Council members took no action on proposed increases in the cost of building permits and building inspections. The members will expect a recommendation on the proposal from city officials at the September meeting.
Members voted to annex two blocks of the Swingle-Cutter Addition on the southeast edge of the city.

Clements Barber Shop, 310 S. Cuyler, will offer the haircuts for charity. For an appointment, call 665-1231.

"We've never done anything quite like this before, and just knowing that every haircut means more money for a good cause will make both the stylists and our customers feel good about the whole thing," said an organizer for Roffler Industries.
The company has recently established a nationwide identification with United Cerebral Palsy by becoming one of the newest national sponsors of the health agency's "Weekend with the Stars" telethon, which will air January 14 and 15.

Skellytown lowers its fiscal '84 tax rate

SKELLYTOWN - The Skellytown City Council approved the fiscal 1984 budget, lowered the tax rate, and raised some charges for water service at the regular meeting this week.
Mayor Tom Spence and the council approved a new Skellytown budget totaling $114,981. The tax rate was set at 45 cents per $100 valuation, down from 50 cents for the current year.
Penalties for late payment of water bills and the charges to restore service cut off for non-payment were raised.
The council said if a customer's water meter has been pulled out, the charge to have it re-installed will be $25. If a meter is shut off for non-payment, the turn-on charge will be $10 during business hours between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. The charge to restore service after 4 p.m. will be $15, the council decided. The members said that failure to receive a water bill won't be accepted as an excuse for not paying.

In other action, the council asked councilman Wayne Pogue to check out two used motor graders owned by Carson County to see whether they're still working. The council said it may use revenue-sharing funds to buy one of the used graders if it works.
The Skellytown council also approved payment of the July bills during the meeting this week.

Anyone unhappy with the replacement can ask for their money back by calling 665-2216.
The show will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday, and all proceeds go to help the Kidney Foundation.

Fruge invents way to save cobalt from waste

A Celanese scientist recently discovered a way to save a valuable substance that was previously being wasted during a chemical reaction.
James D. Fruge, of 1229 Christine, the laboratory group leader at the Celanese Pampa Plant, was granted a U.S. patent for his discovery.
Fruge found a way to save valuable cobalt that was previously being wasted during its use in a chemical reaction. Cobalt compounds are used as catalysts in hydrocarbon oxidation reactions. With continued use, the cobalt catalyst becomes deactivated and must be replaced. Working at the Celanese plant, Fruge discovered a way to save the previously-wasted cobalt for reuse.
Fruge is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin. He received a bachelor's degree in chemistry in 1974. After graduation, he went to work for the Celanese Fibers Marketing Company in Charlotte, N.C. He transferred to the Celanese Pampa Plant in 1978.

GALVESTON, Texas - National Guard troops patrol this storm-battered island city enforcing a nighttime curfew imposed to discourage looting in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia. At least six people died in the season's first Atlantic hurricane, which is now a tropical storm heading north toward Dallas.
GALVESTON, Texas - Linda Miller and four friends threw a hurricane party on the west end of Galveston while Hurricane Alicia roared ashore. "We rode it out here for the hell of it. The house shook and rumbled and felt like it would crumble at any minute. It was like an Astroworld ride that never ended."
ATHENS, Greece - Christina Onassis' summer vacation on her private island has been marred this year by a tax dispute with Greece's Socialist government that could cost her more than $40 million in inheritance duties.
WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration's solution to the impasse involving a Soviet diplomat's son was coordinated in virtually every detail with the Soviet Embassy. And it raised questions about whether U.S. officials were more anxious to learn the boy's true feelings or find a way to end the dispute.
MOSCOW - President Yuri V. Andropov uses a meeting with nine Democratic senators to offer a ban on anti-satellite weapons, but the senators were skeptical and took the opportunity to object firmly to Soviet foreign and domestic policy.

Sleeping in an evacuated hotel

By JAMES R. KING Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Guests at the downtown Hyatt Regency hotel had to step over broken glass and other debris and get past hotel employees urging everyone to stay out of their rooms Thursday morning as Hurricane Alicia crashed through town. Hotel workers feared more of the high-rise structure's huge plate glass windows would shatter and endanger guests in their rooms. Most guests heeded their warnings and remained in lounge areas downstairs or left town. But I had not slept for more than 24 hours, and I had about six hours to kill before I had to return to the Associated Press bureau a few blocks away. Hotel workers permitted me to get past them and go to my 19th floor room after I told them I just wanted "to get something."

I had told the hotel guard I came to my room to get something, and that was not a lie — I came to get a few hours of sleep. It was 7:45 a.m. I crawled between the sheets and closed my eyes. Sleep came quickly. But it didn't last long. About an hour later, I was waked up by a banging at my door. "Sir! You'll have to leave," a man's voice shouted. "I'm not leaving," I shouted back from my bed, angry at the intrusion. "All right," the man's voice said. He left. I went back to sleep. About an hour after that, another banging on the door. "Sir, if you're going to stay, you'll have to sign a disclaimer." Sleepily, I came to the door and signed a document that I did not even read. It had words like "hold harmless" and "indemnify" and apparently released the Hyatt Regency of any liability, which sounded fair enough to me. I went back to sleep. About two hours later someone with a pass key banged on my door, reached in and turned the lights on without explanation, and left. By then it was 1 p.m. I got dressed and walked down 19 floors to the lobby. I asked the desk clerk for a room on a lower floor so I wouldn't have so far to climb, but was told there would be no room changing until the evacuation order is lifted.

Hit by Alicia's punch, Houston will take a long time to recover

HOUSTON (AP) — People in the nation's fifth largest city were warned to boil tap water before drinking it today because of a lack of water pressure in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia. Police patrols guarded against looters during the predawn hours in a downtown area littered with broken glass, twisted metal and other debris. About 330,000 homes in the Houston area remained without electricity after Alicia hit the city with winds of up to 94 mph, tearing down hundreds of power lines. The gales sent windowpanes and signboards spinning Thursday through the skyscraper-lined downtown. The Houston Police Department beefed up its patrols downtown Thursday night after arresting 40 accused looters, said Police Chief Lee Brown. Mayor Kathy Whitmire, who said the storm was the worst she had ever seen in her native city, said the "most serious problem" Houston faced today was the lack of fresh water. "Much of the city is without water" because the electricity failed at a city water treatment plant, she said, advising that residents with water boil it before drinking. The mayor planned to tour the city for storm damage by helicopter later today with Gov. Mark White, who has asked President Reagan to declare a six-county area that includes Houston a disaster area to make it eligible for federal relief funds. A Houston Lighting & Power spokesman said it would be at least a week before power is restored to all residents. The hurricane dealt the power company its "worst damage ever," said HL&P's Graham Painter. Roaring off the tepid waters of the Gulf of Mexico, Alicia killed at least six people, including two in Houston. The winds, whistling through the skyscrapers, sent newsracks, glass, plywood panels and tree limbs flying down major arteries. Alicia ripped off the skylight at the Hyatt Regency hotel and punched out windows in the downtown's sleek, glass-clad business towers. "I'm extremely worried about the downtown, especially the office buildings where windows are gone and the rain and wind have gotten inside," said Mrs. Whitmire after touring the central business district. "Even those of us who are Houston natives can't remember anything like this," she added. At least 10 residential fires were blamed on Alicia, and 11 Houston firefighters were injured when they inhaled chemicals.

Storm merrymaker: Like an Astroworld ride, never ended

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — While the eye of Hurricane Alicia passed by only a few miles away, Linda Miller and four friends threw a hurricane party on the west end of Galveston, the area that was battered the worst by the season's first Atlantic storm. "We rode it out here for the hell of it," Miss Miller said. "The house shook and rumbled and felt like it would crumble at any minute. It was like an Astroworld ride that never ended." All around the wooden house on stilts, other homes were shattering and flying in pieces with the wind. A trailer across the street exploded and showered a fence line with insulation and furniture. Another home nearby was lifted from its cradle of pilings and tumbled end over end for 150 feet before it cracked like an eggshell. But the party went on, and all five survived without injury. In fact, no hurricane-related deaths had been reported in Galveston as of Thursday night. Just up the beach from Miss Miller's party, Fred Wise, 40, owner of the Gulf Stream Stables, had an unusual problem early Thursday — 40 horses were roaming free in the midst of a hurricane. Wise said more than a mile of his fence was ripped down by water and wind, and he spent a restless night worrying about his horses. In the wet early dawn, he wound his way through fallen tree limbs to his field and found none of his horses received even the slightest injury. "They got into a salt cedar break, turned their tails to the wind, and not a single one got a scratch," said Wise. "The horses did better than we did," said Wise. "I lost two trailers and the windows out of my house." A tack trailer was turned over, and $5,000 worth of saddles were strewn across the field and soaked in water. Wise assembled a crew and built a corral during the day to hold the 40 horses. Further on down the beach, people were red-in-the-face angry and stood shouting with clenched fists at T-shirt-clad police officers who listened stoically. The Jamaica Beach police shut down a road and forbade Jamaica Beach residents to return to their homes. Most of the residents had fled to Houston before the approach of the storm, and for hours Thursday were not permitted to return to Jamaica Beach. Fred Diamond Jr., a truck salesman, stood out on the highway with friends cursing the police. "I can see with binoculars that I still have a roof," he said, "but the house next door is gone." Eventually, Galveston police arrived to break up the traffic jam and persuaded Jamaica Beach Police Chief John R. Gardner to allow residents who could identify themselves into the area. Newsmen and sightseers were excluded. "There's a real health hazard down there," said Gardner. "There's no power, the water is polluted, and there are rattlesnakes everywhere." Gardner said about half of the plush homes in Jamaica Beach received major damage. As observed from the road, some were gaping open to the weather, the wind wafting through curtains and bedsprads. Gardner said a handful of people stayed through the

Tafoya ordered to jail

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Eugene Tafoya has been sentenced to the maximum six years in prison for tax fraud after reading a rambling 40-minute statement that included his contention that his former employer, ex-CIA agent Edwin Wilson, had recently plotted to kill him. Tafoya, 48, was convicted last month on charges he failed to report to the federal government at least $88,000 drawn in 1980 and 1981 by performing covert activities for Wilson. U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle assessed the sentence Thursday, but did not rule on a request by the Canadian government to extradite Tafoya to face charges filed in a 1979 car bombing. The judge also did not rule on a motion seeking to revoke the former Green Beret's indigency status. Tafoya must complete the federal sentence before beginning to serve the two years he received for the 1980 shooting of a dissident Libyan student in Fort Collins, Colo. In asking for leniency, Tafoya said the FBI had just informed him that he was on the "not-so-famous list" of people Wilson is charged with plotting to kill. Wilson has been convicted of smuggling arms and tons of explosives to Libya. He also is accused of trying to hire assassins to kill two federal prosecutors that handled his case, witnesses who testified against him, and his ex-wife. Several witnesses testified at Tafoya's tax trial that Wilson hired Tafoya — at the request and expense of the Libyan government — to shoot the Colorado student.

Tafoya, who worked in Wilson's Libyan operation, has testified he thought he was on a CIA mission when he pumped two bullets into the student's head. "After realizing I was duped by people who misused their credentials, I returned home to get my life in order," he told the judge Thursday. "My only motive was to be of service to my country." Tafoya said he "honorably and faithfully" fought for the United States during the Korean and Vietnam wars. He also offered the judge a copy of a "House Intelligence Committee memo that I made" that he said was "of strategic value to the United States." The one-page memo was sealed at Tafoya's request. Prison would be difficult for him, he said, because he is afflicted with asthma, degenerative arthritis and heart disease. Tafoya's wife, Betty Jo, was tried with her husband last month and acquitted of the tax charges. The federal indictment had accused the couple of vastly underreporting their income on their 1980 and 1981 tax returns. They listed a total of about $14,000 for both years. Tafoya testified that the thousands of dollars in cash he received from Wilson were reimbursement for his expenses — not income. Wilson promised him, but never paid him, an annual salary of $50,000, he said. Suttle recommended that Tafoya be incarcerated at the medium-security federal prison at La Tuna, Texas, which is near his home in El Paso.

Lawyers seek ex-player's release

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state judge was to be asked today to free Linwood Hamilton on bond while the former Southern University football player appeals his felony conviction for attempted forcible rape. Hamilton, 22, of Easton, Pa., and four other players stood trial earlier this month. Each was charged with aggravated rape, which carries a mandatory punishment of life imprisonment. Hamilton now faces up to 20 years' imprisonment for his sexual involvement with a 25-year-old mother of two at a downtown hotel after last November's Bayou Classic game in which Southern defeated archrival Grambling State University. During a week-long trial, the 25-year-old New Iberia housewife complained the five forced her into a hotel room and took turns raping her on the morning the big game. The players admitted having sexual relations with the woman, but insisted she was an eager partner who chided them for poor performance. Hamilton, a noseguard who is no longer eligible, was the only player convicted of anything. Until today's hearing before District Judge Dennis Waldron, Hamilton had been held without bond in the Orleans Parish Community Corrections Center. Punter Kim Davis and wide receiver Earnest Bell were acquitted and a jury said it could not agree about the involvement of quarterback Herman Coleman Jr. and cornerback Thomas E. Hudson.

U.N. praises laundered news

Sometimes the United Nations bureaucracy does something so patently scandalous and revealing that commentary is almost superfluous.

A couple of weeks back, Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar released an official U.N. document a report from the U.N. Committee on Information titled "Public Perceptions of the U.N. System."

The report had been kicking around the bureaucracy since last November, but de Cuellar apparently had reservations about some of its conclusions. We are not sure whether he's courageous or foolhardy.

The 12-page report, prepared by information chiefs of different U.N. agencies, whined that "influential sectors of the mass media in developed countries have pictured the U.N. system as an irrelevant, inefficient and swollen bureaucracy" and publicized "grossly inaccurate charges of financial ineptitude."

By contrast, the report said, the media in the Soviet Union and other communist countries reported regularly and supportively on activities of the world body. No specifics were provided to back up any of the contentions.

Specifies or not, the attitude is clear, and little commentary is necessary.

What is to be said about information chiefs who complain when reporters aren't content with writing puff stories?

What can be said about people doing irrelevant things who bridle at having their noses rubbed in the truth?

What can be said about information chiefs who prefer the coverage of a press owned and controlled by totalitarian governments to a press with a modicum of independence?

Can there be much doubt that if the U.N. information chiefs thought they could get away with imposing their new project, the New World Information Order (whereby dictatorial governments would have their "right" to censor news coverage concerning "their" countries), on Western news organizations, they would do it in a trice?

Finally, if the assertions about the reverence accorded U.N. activities in a press controlled by totalitarian governments are true, what does this tell us about the value of the U.N. activities to people who prefer to be free?

Secretary General de Cuellar may be a gutsy guy who's willing to operate in the open and reveal the innermost thoughts of his information chiefs for all the world to see. Or, he may have been at the U.N. so long that he's lost touch with reality and doesn't know how damaging and revealing this document really is.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Aug. 19, the 231st day of 1983. There are 134 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On August 19th, 1812, the U.S. frigate Constitution — also known as Old Ironsides — defeated a British frigate in the North Atlantic during the War of 1812.

On this date:

In 1692, five women and a clergyman were executed in Salem, Mass., after being accused of witchcraft.

In 1934, a German plebiscite approved the vesting of sole executive power in Adolf Hitler as Fuehrer.

In 1955, the worst flood in the history of the northeast U.S. took 200 lives in Connecticut and nine other states.

In 1960, a three-man court in Moscow convicted American U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers of espionage and sentenced him to 30 years in prison.

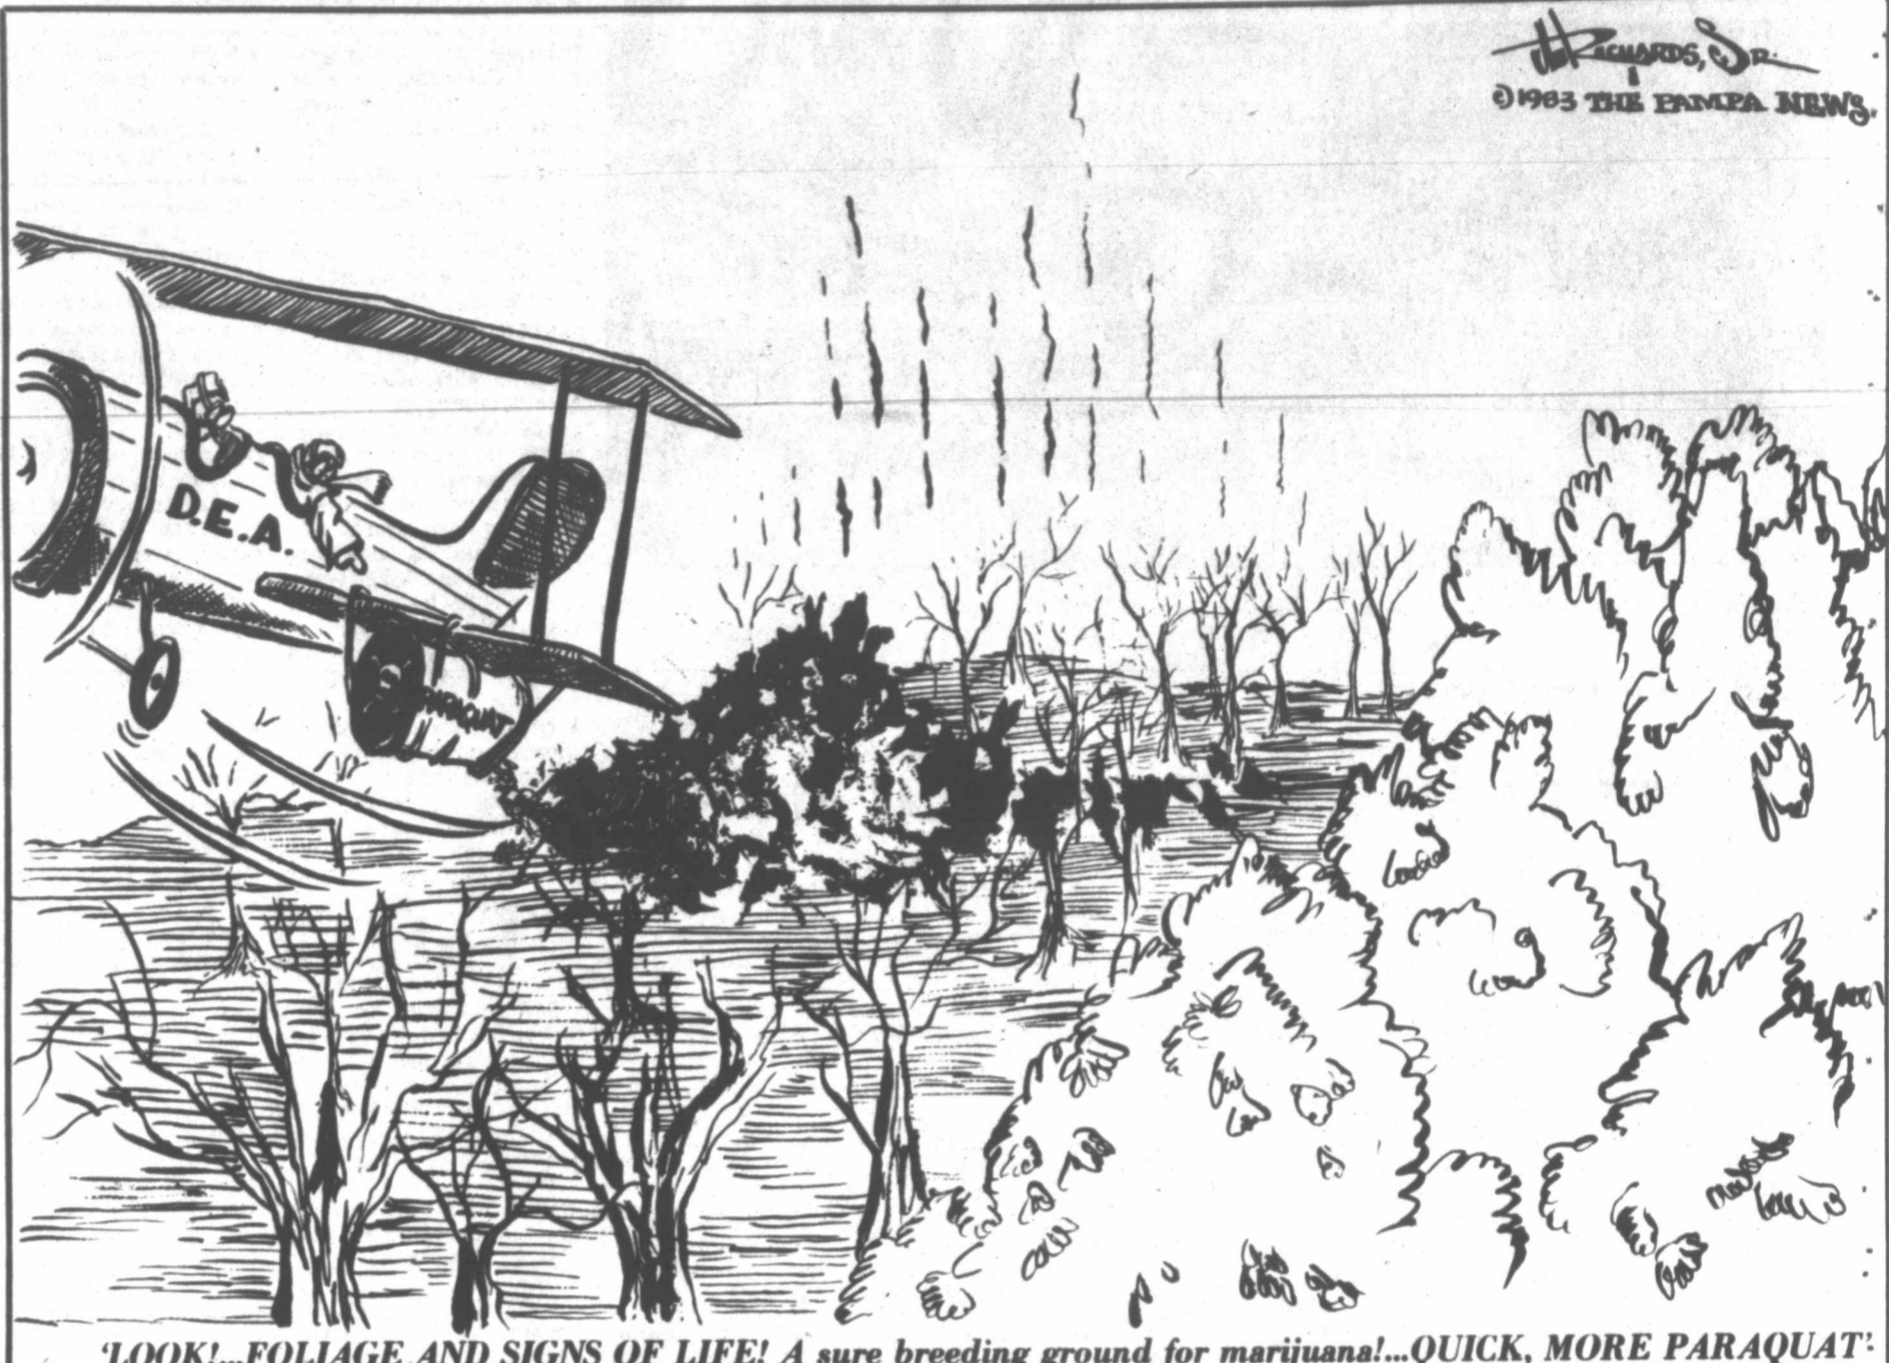

Ten years ago: George Papadopoulos took the oath as president of Greece and lifted martial law.

Five years ago: A federal judge in Chicago set bond at $1 million cash for William Kampiles, who was charged with delivering top secret defense material to the Soviet Union.

Freedom is America's gift to man

By OSCAR COOLEY

The Statue of Liberty in New York harbor is to have some repairs. In fact, it is to have $30 million worth. To build it cost less than half a million, and it must have been well built to stand there, welcoming the immigrant, for 97 years.

The statue was the idea of French people and was sculpted in France by Frederic Auguste Bartholdi. It was shipped here in 214 boxes and was reassembled by Americans on a pedestal of about the same height and cost. After nearly a century of exposure to the salt air and stiff winds of New York bay, the copper sheeting, iron ribs and rivets, have corroded. The arm, which in the words of Emma Lazarus "lifts her lamp beside the golden door," has to be rebuilt. The work, starting in September, must be finished in time to celebrate Miss Liberty's 100th year in 1986.

The statue, 305 feet high, does not invite people to come to America to get rich but, in Lazarus' words, to "breathe free." Freedom, not wealth, is America's great gift to mankind.

This truth needs to be stressed, for the U.S. is famous for its wealth. Americans are free to make all the money they can — and some of them have been very good at it. The money-making of Americans has been concentrated upon and discussed so much that an observer might conclude that this country was settled purely as a place to make the "almighty dollar" but that is not the case.

True, establish freedom in any land and the people there will use that freedom first to make a living, and then a better and better living. Freedom includes the opportunity to produce and consume, and also save. But freedom is far more than economic opportunity. It is that condition which prevails throughout a society by which each individual exercises free choice in all matters which do not interfere with his neighbor's freedom.

Freedom is precious for its own sake, not because it is wealth-producing. Do you enjoy being free? Of course you do; every normal person does. No one likes to be pushed around.

Do you like to have friends and neighbors? Again the answer is yes. Every normal human likes society — within reason. No one would enjoy being the only human being on the planet Earth. However, society necessitates rules which protect everyone alike. Call them "government." These rules deny the individual complete freedom, which would be anarchy.

The big question, never fully answered, is: how much government shall we have? To what extent shall we curb freedom?

England in the 1770's had curbed individual freedom so much and was so determined to force these curbs on the American colonists that the latter — who had come here largely to escape that very thing — rebelled and set up a nation of their own. Freedom was the issue.

Today, there is a great danger that Americans will forget the value of freedom and will allow it to be suffocated by laws and taxes — by excessive government, that is.

The mistake of Karl Marx was that he put production and wealth ahead of freedom. Will modern Americans make the same mistake? Whether the U.S. is richer than Soviet Russia is not important. Whether it is more devoted to freedom and determined to preserve it is the 64-dollar question.

The Statue of Liberty is a symbol of America's foremost ideal. It is good it is to be renewed. It is time, too, that the ideal for which it stands be renewed and that again Liberty "lift her lamp beside the golden door."

Stress can kill at an early age

By PAUL HARVEY

My research files are pretty well organized — except one. It's a file I tend myself: a single drawer — shelf in my office desk.

Any day that some person of prominence is in trouble — perhaps a public official exposed for misfeasance — I slip his name into that special file.

Experience says that very soon his or her name will be in the news again as he or she is stricken with some physical illness.

The file is overflowing. Let's examine some of these "case histories."

New Hampshire's Governor Hugh Gallen was defeated for a third term as Governor, promptly contracted "a blood infection," died.

Comic Jerry Lewis, after divorce and bankruptcy, required a double-heart bypass.

British carmaker Colin Chapman, under vigorous criticism by stockholders, died of a heart attack at 54.

Al Bloomingdale, disgraced by his secretly "kept woman," lived less than a month.

Bear Bryant, retired from football, lasted less than 28 days.

The Tampa Bay ship's captain who rammed his ship into the Sunshine Skyway Bridge, within six months developed Multiple Sclerosis.

Research at the Universities of Colorado and Denver affirm that "inability to cope with stress may weaken the body's immune system" altogether as surely as AIDS does.

Chicago's Cardinal Cody, under investigation for diverting church money to a woman, lived less than a year.

Dr. Thomas Hackett, Chief of Psychiatry at Massachusetts General, says, "There are now more than enough studies to demonstrate that people who worry or are stressful have an increased risk of developing a disease."

For many years doctors have considered the word "stress" too unscientific, for one reason because the word was ill-defined.

Today the physiology of stress is defined to the degree that we can measure the biochemical results of even subtle psychological influences.

Stated simply, "a man is likely to catch cold when his mother-in-law comes to visit."

Less simply, among tuberculosis victims the onset of the disease generally follows a cluster of disruptive events.

The University of North Carolina studied 225 doctors who had been tested 25 years earlier when they were 25 year old medical students.

Those who, at age 25, were "high in hostility" subsequently had significantly higher rates of heart disease: "were six times more likely to die by fifty."

Next: Increasing evidence that the absence of stress promotes mental health.

Let's have a race up in space

By ART BUCHWALD

The NASA public relations people were sitting around the conference table at headquarters the other day.

"Okay, we shot a woman up into space, and we got more attention from the American people than we did in all previous shuttle flights. But what do we do for an encore?"

"Send up an all-known crew. We could call the shuttle 'Charley's Angel.'"

"Why don't we send up a dog like Lassie?"

"What will Lassie do on a shuttle trip?"

"We could pretend the ship is having a reentry problem, and we'll send Lassie out in a space suit to repair it. I'll bet our TV ratings would go sky high."

"It's not a bad idea, but I don't think Houston Control will go for it. Look, we all know the space program will only be continued if the American people consider it a good show. We have to come up with something that will glue them to their sets for the entire five days."

"Maybe we could make it into a sports event?"

"How do we do that?"

"Suppose we challenged the Soviets to a race in space. You know, like the Indianapolis 500. The race would start from lift off and the shuttle that completes 80 orbits around the earth and lands first will win the cup."

"Now we're cooking. We could make the space program into a spectator sport. The whole world would be watching it."

"Will the Russians compete?"

"Sure they will. The Soviet people are losing as much interest in their space shots as Americans are losing in ours. Besides, both sides always talk about the race for space, but we've never really had one."

"We could do what they do at Indianapolis and sell advertising on the sides of the shuttle. Every contractor who had anything to do with the program would want his name plastered on the ship."

"The astronauts could wear crocodiles on their uniforms, and hats with the name of the fuel company on the visor."

"Don't forget television. The networks would bid higher for this race than they did for the 1984 Olympics."

"They would want their own announcer inside the shuttle to tell the people what was going on."

"So we'll let Howard Cosell go along."

"What does Howard Cosell know about space racing?"

"Have you ever heard Howard cover a sport that he didn't know everything about?"

"Okay, but how do we keep the Russians from cheating?"

"We send up an international team of racing stewards in a space lab to keep tabs on the shuttles. They'll be stationed over Switzerland to count the laps. A team of American astronauts will be in the Soviet ground control station, and a team of Soviet astronauts will be at Cape Kennedy, to make sure they both lift off at the same time."

"What about the landing? There won't be any excitement if the Soviet shuttle lands in Siberia, and our shuttle lands at Cocos Beach."

"We could have the finish line at the Paris Air Show, with American and Soviet leaders in attendance to cheer their shuttles on."

"It's a helluva idea. Let's call up the Soviet space people and challenge them."

The call was made.

The U.S. public affairs chief talked for an hour and then hung up.

"What did they say?"

"They agreed to everything with one exception."

"What's that?"

"They said, 'Nyet' to Howard Cosell."

Texas hurricane damage surveyed by federal government investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials have already begun assessing hurricane damage in Texas as part of the process of deciding whether to declare parts of the state a disaster area in the wake of hurricane Alicia.

Bob Blair, a spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which recommends to the president whether such a declaration should be made, said late Thursday that the agency was in the "very, very early stages of damage assessment."

He said Air Force planes had been taking photographs of areas hit by the hurricane but that damage surveyors had not yet been able to fly over the areas because of high winds.

"In a situation like this...it's difficult to get around to assess the damage," said Blair. He also said that "it's difficult to evaluate flood damage by air."

However, Blair said "that should not delay us" in making a recommendation to the president on a disaster declaration.

For an area to qualify for such a declaration, damage must be of such a magnitude as to be "beyond the capability of the state and local governments" to respond, said Blair.

He said that about half the state requests for such declarations are turned down.

Blair said that such a declaration would make hurricane-ravaged areas of Texas eligible for a various forms special federal aid, ranging from temporary housing for the homeless to funds for repair of public facilities.

Under the program, 75 percent of the cost of repairing or restoring public facilities would be paid by the federal government and 25 percent by state and local governments, he said.

Disaster assistance centers would be established to make available in one place the resources of federal, state and volunteer agencies that process disaster aid, he said.

The centers offer counseling, advice and assistance in processing aid requests to "start the process of pulling their lives together again," said Blair.

Grants of up to $5,000 would be available for people not covered by regular disaster programs, Blair said.

If a family were homeless, and waiting for a loan to repair its house, "if they cannot afford a place to live, we'll put them up someplace," Blair said.

"The whole law is intended to help a community get back on its feet, to recover from a disaster," Blair said.

Army may aid police at copper strike site

MORENCI, Ariz. (AP) — Hundreds of police officers and military troops will set up camp inside the gates of the Phelps Dodge Corp. here Friday as they brace for the possibility of renewed violence in a seven-week-old copper strike, state officials said Thursday.

And in their evening briefing, state police and National Guard officials for the first time cited a slim possibility of using Military Police units on the front lines to back up some 424 state troopers and dozens of sheriff's deputies.

"The possibility of using MPs on line duty is remote," said Alan Schmidt, a spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety.

DPS Director Ralph Milstead said the MPs would be used primarily to protect the Guard's support troops and so that strikers won't feel "capable of overwhelming us."

It was that fear of being overwhelmed that led Phelps Dodge to agree to a 10-day shutdown here on Aug. 9, as a far thinner line of state police and deputies faced an estimated 1,000 protestors armed with chains and baseball bats.

The company agreed to halt operations and stop hiring new workers until noon Friday, but has not said whether it will try to re-open after noon.

Milstead said he expected to find out the company's plans around 10 a.m. Friday, but indicated that he would leave it up to Phelps Dodge to disclose them at a later news conference.

"I wouldn't comment on any advance knowledge," he said. "I'm not sure Phelps Dodge has made up their mind."

Schmidt, Milstead and Guard Capt. Joe Gacioc said the DPS contingent, up to 160 MPs and up to 165 other National Guard troops would head for the Phelps Dodge mine, mill and smelter Friday morning from the Greenlee County Airport, where the Guard set up camp on Thursday.

They declined to say when they would make their move, citing security considerations.

About 130 vehicles, including 87 from the guard, will be used in the caravan Schmidt said. Reporters saw at least four armored personnel carriers at a Guard armoury in nearby Safford, but it was not known whether they would be included in the caravan. Six Guard and DPS helicopters also were standing by, Schmidt said.

The operation, the largest in DPS history, involves almost half the state police agency's 950 commissioned officers, Schmidt and Milstead said. Narcotics, liquor-control and organized crime agents were pulled off their normal beats and ordered into uniform, while sheriff's deputies and city police forces throughout the state took over some DPS highway patrol duties.

Deputy sheriff's from two neighboring counties also are reinforcing the small contingent that tiny Greenlee County has available here, Schmidt and Milstead said.

They said line officers were under standing orders not to use deadly force except to protect their lives or other lives.

"I do not expect any problems," Milstead said. "I really don't."

Milstead said he thought the 10-day shutdown "has done a lot of good" because it brought representatives of 13 striking unions and Phelps Dodge back to the bargaining table under the auspices of a federal mediator, even if no progress was reported in the first several days of renewed talks, which are in recess until Saturday.

He declined to say what role, if any, Gov. Bruce Babbitt had in planning the joint operation which Milstead commands.

The Guard camped out Thursday night at a highway junction about 10 miles south of Morenci, while the briefing was held in Safford, about 20 miles further away.

Gacioc, a public relations man in civilian life for the Salt River Project, said the Guard would concentrate on support, including medical help and transportation.

Union leaders were critical of the activation of the Guard units but said they were urging their members to remain calm.

Pope thumbed ride to Vatican

PALESTRINA, Italy (AP) — Papal aides say Pope John Paul II hitch-hiked a ride from a local bus driver five years ago so he would not miss the Vatican conclave where he was named pontiff.

The Pope returned here Thursday and thanked Candido Nardi, 48, shaking his hand and chatting with him before delivering a homily in the town square.

Papal aides said the pope, then Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, Poland, was visiting a shrine run by Polish priests in the Italian town of Capranica on the morning of Oct. 15, 1978, several hours before he was to be locked up with other cardinals for a papal conclave at the Vatican.

But he missed the bus that would have taken him to Palestrina for an express bus to Rome. Clad in a cardinal's cassock, he walked to the main road just outside Capranica and flagged down Nardi's bus.

Nardi, who was driving to Palestrina from another town, covered the 12 miles of mountain roads in 17 minutes, arriving in Palestrina in time for his passenger to make the connection to Rome, 23 miles to the northwest.

Andrei Berezhkov going home: 'Say hi to Mick Jagger for me'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrei Berezhkov, the 16-year-old son of a senior Soviet diplomat, is flying home to Moscow after denying he ever begged President Reagan for asylum. His last words on American soil: "Say hi to Mick Jagger for me."

The teen-ager's departure ended a week-long diplomatic standoff between the two superpowers marked by exchanges of accusations and demands.

The impasse was resolved Thursday in an elaborately orchestrated operation involving senior U.S. and Soviet Embassy officials with the participation of major American news organizations.

First behind the walls of the Soviet residential compound in Northwest Washington, then in a waiting room at Dulles International Airport in suburban Virginia, Andrei Berezhkov denied to reporters that he had written the president and The New York Times to plea: "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country. I want to stay here."

On Thursday he twice declared: "I want to go home and not stay here."

Those words untied the diplomatic knot.

They met the criteria set by the State Department that the teen-ager be permitted to express for himself what he wanted his future to be.

And they cleared the way for the boy and his parents, Valentin and Valeriya Berezhkov, to board a Trans World Airlines jet for Paris en route to Moscow.

The plane took off at 7:09 p.m. EDT, almost a week to the hour of the State Department's announcement that the youth was believed to have written a letter to the president asking to remain in the United States and that the department was insisting on a personal interview with him "to ascertain the young man's intentions."

But on Thursday the department backed off and agreed to a pair of stage-managed news conferences — one of them free of Soviet controls — and said it would be satisfied by the results.

And when the Soviet teen-ager, in the presence of two senior U.S. officials, had made his final statement at the airport to reporters for The Associated Press, United Press International and The Washington Post, the department said the Berezhkovs could go.

"He stated clearly and firmly that he wished to return to the Soviet Union with his parents," the department said in a written statement.

"Having heard him state his wish to return home with his parents in a situation where he could make a choice, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs Richard Burt and Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights Elliott Abrams made the determination that he was voluntarily departing the United States," the department said.

As he walked to the door, reporters asked Andrei what he wanted to do with the rest of his life.

To become an actor, he replied.

And where would he like to learn that profession, in Moscow or America?

"In Moscow," he said.

And then, allowing himself a small smile, he said, "Say hi to Mick Jagger for me."

Jagger is the lead singer of the rock music group, the "The Rolling Stones," which has been widely popular with teen-agers in the United States and abroad for more than a decade.

Earlier, at the Soviet compound, the youth's father, First Secretary Valentin Berezhkov, 67, acknowledged his son had taken the family car and was reported to the police as missing from the family apartment in suburban Bethesda, Md., for more than 10 hours on Aug. 10.

That was the day before President Reagan and The New York Times received a handwritten letter signed "Andy Berezhkov" asking to remain in the United States.

Both the youth and the elder Berezhkov, responding to questions by correspondents from NBC television news, the Times and Hearst newspapers, denied the letter was authentic.

"I didn't write it, the tousle-haired teen-ager said.

Explaining at the airport why he had stayed away from home until 2:30 a.m. Andrei said, "I just wanted to drive around the city."

"I never thought that this would be interpreted as my intention of staying here," the youth told reporters at the embassy compound. "I ask the American authorities to leave me alone and let me go home."

At the airport he denied he was speaking under duress.

"I don't feel I am under any pressure," he said. "I say what I feel and do what I want to do."

When the senior Berezhkov was asked if he would have objected if the boy had wanted to stay, he replied: "Grown-ups only have the privilege of emigration, not children."

The elder Berezhkov, the embassy's liaison officer with the USA-Canada Institute in the Soviet Union, said he has "no doubt" he will work in the institute on his return.

When asked whether his son can expect punishment for any embarrassment caused the Soviet Union by his escapade and the resulting publicity, he replied, "Certainly not."

Questions remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's solution to the diplomatic impasse involving a Soviet diplomat's son who allegedly wanted to stay in the United States was coordinated in virtually every detail with the Soviet Embassy here.

But it raised questions about whether U.S. officials were more anxious to learn the Soviet teen-ager's true feelings or to find a way to end the week-long dispute before it became a major new thorn in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Andrei Berezhkov, 16, left Washington for Moscow Thursday night with his mother and his father, Valentin Berezhkov, a first secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

In the end, the Soviets prevailed in their refusal to let U.S. officials talk with Berezhkov. The State Department finally relented after demanding all week that officials interview the teen-ager to be sure he was returning to Moscow of his own free will.

U.S. officials agreed instead to be satisfied with Berezhkov's answers to questions put by a few American reporters at carefully orchestrated news conferences at the Soviet diplomatic compound and at Dulles International Airport.

At both press conferences, the teen-ager was flanked by Soviet Embassy officials and his parents. While State Department officials insisted they could still stop him if they weren't satisfied with his answers, there seemed virtually no chance that would happen, and it didn't.

Berezhkov denied he had written letters to President Reagan and the New York

Mattox grand jury probe to continue

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle says a grand jury investigation of Attorney General Jim Mattox will continue for "a few more weeks."

"It will be over when it's over," he told reporters.

The grand jury met Thursday without hearing any witnesses. Earle would not say if the panel discussed Mattox.

For several weeks the grand jury has been investigating Mattox's 1982 campaign finance records, an alleged threat to a private law firm over a personal dispute, and other allegations of misconduct.

Mattox has said he has done nothing illegal and even if he were guilty of everything alleged, it would amount to nothing more than misdemeanor offenses calling for fines.

The grand jury began a study last week of telephone records and other documents surrendered by Mattox after being subpoenaed.

He said Sam Boyd, a Seattle bank official previously subpoenaed, probably would testify before the grand jury next week.

Reagan uses politically volatile term

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan dusted off the phrase "sphere of influence" last week to portray the relationship between France and its former African colonies, he chose a politically volatile term first used in the 19th century as competing colonial empires carved up the map of the world.

It is a description that conjures up "The Great Game," when Great Britain and imperial Russia vied for influence and strategic leeway in Afghanistan, as well as colonial armies clashing over territorial ambitions in Africa, not far from the current war in Chad.

Chad, a landlocked former French colony, is being battered by rebel forces supported by the armor and warplanes of Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya, whom the United States accuses of harboring imperial ambitions in Africa.

Reagan told a news conference last Friday he does not intend to send American combat forces to Chad to oppose Khadafy's plans.

Chad, he explained, "is not our primary sphere of influence, it is that of France."

For weeks U.S. officials have been trying to persuade the French government to "take the lead" in Chad because of France's historic, cultural and linguistic ties to the region.

But Reagan's use of "sphere of influence" to describe those ties raised hackles and eyebrows, in part because France's Socialist government under President Francois Mitterrand has resisted being drawn into France's traditional role as a military gendarme imposing stability in its former African possessions. "Americans have been rather allergic to these kind of terms because they imply something about the balance of power that Americans haven't liked," said Helmut Sonnenfeldt, a former State Department official in the Nixon and Ford administrations who is now at the Brookings Institution here.

"It is not a politically healthy term in this country," he said. "The confusion arises over the fact that whereas great powers have special interests, (it is debatable) as to whether they should be allowed to have exclusive interests."

Sonnenfeldt speaks from experience. In 1975, a news leak of remarks attributed to Sonnenfeldt at a meeting of U.S. ambassadors in Europe portrayed him as accepting a permanent Soviet sphere of influence in Eastern Europe.

The quoted remarks created a political furor extending into the 1976 presidential campaign. Sonnenfeldt says he was misquoted as accepting a fixed and unchallenged Soviet sphere, declaring that was "almost the opposite of what I had been saying."

In the last century, spheres of influence expanded, retracted and collided with the ebb and flow of empires.

President James Monroe did not use the term when he issued the Monroe Doctrine in 1823, but the meaning was clear: The United States, with the support of Great Britain, considered the Western Hemisphere closed to future European colonization.

American diplomats, anxious not to offend U.S. neighbors, avoid using the phrase to describe continuing special U.S. interests in Latin America.

Nevertheless, the most recent chapter in the long history of those interests is being written by the Reagan administration as it strives to curb what it maintains are Soviet-inspired and supplied insurgencies in such countries as El Salvador.

Some experts, Sonnenfeldt included, see a parallel between Col. Khadafy's purported reach towards the Sudan and Egypt and a 1898 clash between Britain and France at the headwaters of the Nile River.

The French government sent an expedition to Fashoda in the Sudan, about 1,000 miles from the current fighting in Chad, to dam the Nile and use French control of vital water supplies as a lever to dislodge Britain from Egypt.

But the ploy failed and the small French force withdrew in the face of superior British resources. France later renounced all claims of access to the Nile Valley.

"It was one of the great crises in the years before World War I and the situation is not dissimilar to the present concerns about what Khadafy might be up to now," Sonnenfeldt said.

World War II established new spheres of influence with the elimination of Germany and Japan as military powers, the dismantling of colonial empires and the advent of the United States and the Soviet Union as superpowers.

Skeptical on weapons offer, criticize Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov used a meeting with nine Democratic senators to propose a ban on anti-satellite weapons, but the Americans were skeptical and took the opportunity to object firmly to his foreign and domestic policies.

Delegation leader Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island said the "only degree of optimism" came from Andropov's proposal to "dismantle" existing anti-satellite weapons and ban development of new ones.

In Washington, the State Department said the United States will study "any serious Soviet proposal on space arms control."

Alan Romberg, the deputy department spokesman, said President Reagan said that the United States and equitable space arms control measures that would ban or otherwise limit testing and deployment of specific weapons should those measures be compatible with U.S. national security.

Thursday's session was the first time a U.S. government delegation met Andropov since Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz talked with the newly appointed Communist Party leader for 30 minutes just before the funeral of his predecessor Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Democratic senators: Dale Bumpers, Arkansas; Patrick Leahy, Vermont; Howard Metzenbaum, Ohio; Donald W. Riegle Jr., Michigan; Paul Sarbanes, Maryland; James Sasser, Tennessee, and Dennis DeConcini, Arizona.

Pell told a news conference he believed Andropov agreed to receive the senators because he is annoyed that the Senate has not ratified the SALT II treaty and because there are "signs of very, very modest improvements" in U.S.-Soviet relations.

He apparently was referring to the recent U.S.-Soviet grain deal, and the compromise at the Madrid Security Conference.

However, the official news agency Tass said Andropov told the senators U.S.-Soviet relations are "tense virtually in every field" and Pell said it would be premature to talk of a "thaw HEALTH. Pell said he spoke "vigorously... What he really needs to do is his job in his mind and it seemed absolutely first class."

Tass, which announced the Soviet anti-satellite-weapons moratorium offer as a "flash," quoted Andropov as telling the senators "the U.S.S.R. is prepared ... to agree on the elimination of the existing anti-satellite systems and the prohibition of the development of new ones."

A return to 'darn'

By George R. Plagenz

The community theater in my neighborhood is presenting "Ah, Wilderness" this month. I am predicting it will be the hit of the season. If it plays in a summer theater near you, don't fail to see it.

People like you and me, who complain so much about not being able to see any worthwhile plays or movies anymore unless we want to be subjected to vulgar language, will have nobody but ourselves to blame if we miss this wonderful play by Eugene O'Neill.

In many ways, "Ah, Wilderness" is like Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." They both take us back to a simpler — and some would say happier — time.

Both are pervaded — as the program notes for "Ah, Wilderness" say — "by mellow sunshine and fond recall." By happy memories and wishful dreams. And by love.

As Nat Miller and his wife Essie look out the window at their love-struck son Richard on the porch gazing up at the moon, Nat says, "There he is — like a statue of Love's Young Dream."

Then his mood momentarily changes to one of nostalgic melancholy. He quotes from the Rubaiyat, "Ah, that spring should vanish with the rose, that youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close."

But he recovers quickly as he looks at his wife and says, "Well, spring isn't everything, is it, Essie? There's a lot to be said for autumn. That's got beauty too. And winter — if you're together."

And the curtain falls. If you go to see "Ah, Wilderness" you will hear repeatedly a four-letter word I bet you haven't heard in a long time. Darn.

It's hard to believe but darn was once considered a swear word.

There is a comedy skit on an old Victrola record called "Uncle Josh and Aunt Nancy Put Up the Kitchen Stove."

He wants to go fishing, she wants him to put up the stove — which meant, in those days, connecting the stovepipe from the stove to the air vent in the wall. Finally Uncle Josh says, "All right, if somebody will help me, I'll put up the darned old stove."

Aunt Nancy replies, "I'll help you but you needn't swear about it."

A column of mine on swearing a while back drew more mail than any other column I have written in a year. My favorite letter was from a woman whose address ("Hitching Post Farms") indicates she is a horsewoman.

She said, "I am a poker-playing, cigarette-smoking, active churchwoman (Episcopalian) and I, unfortunately, do say hell and damn occasionally — but deliver me from filth."

She recalled bringing home two books from the library — one listed on the New York Times best-seller list and another written by Jimmy Breslin. "After about 20 pages of each, I returned the books," she said. "If they had a message, I couldn't wade through the garbage to get to it."

Those people may be right who say they can't find anything awfully wrong with swearing. It's not harmful like cheating.

But can't the decline of standards and the virtual disappearance of taste in our society be traced to this habit of ours to accept anything as long as there is "nothing awfully wrong" with it?

The fact that there is "nothing awfully wrong" with a thing doesn't mean it is elevating and until we are more concerned than we are with elevating our speech and our actions, civilization will continue to decline.

Man's greatest modern need, said Harry Gaze in his book, "How to Live Forever," is a thoroughly vital, life-giving vocabulary. He felt that wholesome words improve the cells of the body with vibrant power.

Isn't one of the troubles with swearing, that it adds nothing — not even emphasis or shock any longer?

If you want to get somebody's attention today, you will have to use a four-letter word like darn. It's a four-letter word, furthermore, with a touch of breeding and class. You can imagine a boy on the playing fields of Eton or Harrow remarking, "I say, old boy, darn good shot."

Whether it is sufficiently expressive to give you any satisfaction when you hit your thumb with a hammer is something else.

But there are no smashed thumbs in "Ah, Wilderness!" Just good feelings. It's "our kind of play." Darn good.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

a little BIG NOW

We all get a thrill out of seeing our children put on our hats or shoes. Obviously they don't fit now, but some day he, or she will grow to fit them. At the same time imagine that they are trying on our lives. Would they fit? ... or do you live the type of life that you would want them to grow to. Live a life of worship of the Lord.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Dear Abby

Husband's gift to wife is a sure bet to please

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22nd wedding anniversary coming up, and he asked me what I wanted. I asked him how much he planned to spend, and he said about $500.

I told him I couldn't think of anything I wanted, but I owed my bookie about that much and if he cleaned up my bill, I'd consider it a nice present.

He agreed, and that's what he gave me.

My question: What do I tell people who ask me what my husband gave me for my anniversary?

LIKES THE HORSES

DEAR LIKES: Tell them he paid off your bookie. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: Denny and I lived together for a year, then we had a falling out and he left for a few weeks. Denny is 23 and I am 28. While we were apart, Denny took up with "Marcie," who is 22, then he came back to me saying he still loves me, but he also loves Marcie. She is pregnant by him, and he is going to marry her. They both moved in with me and we get along great. There is no jealousy between Marcie and me. Denny still loves me and wants me to have a baby by him. He wants to marry me, too, and if that's the only way to keep him, I am agreeable. I know this sounds weird, but we three are very happy together. (We even sleep together.)

Do you think our sharing arrangement will work? Do you think we are weird? Are there any states besides Utah that allow multiple marriages?

SHARING IN SYRACUSE

DEAR SHARING: There are no states — including Utah — that permit multiple marriages. Do I think your sharing arrangement will work? I don't know. Do I think you're weird? Yes.

DEAR ABBY: Which is correct: "The bride walked up the aisle" or "The bride walked down the aisle"?

MADE A BET

DEAR MADE: I'm inclined to believe that the bride walks down the aisle. After the ceremony, she walks (or runs) up the aisle.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for the young man in jail who chose to get his high school diploma:

Hurrah for you! But don't settle for a high school diploma. Many prisons offer courses that can prepare you for work on the outside, so take advantage of them. Don't be just another "ex-con" when you get out.

My husband is an instructor at the prison in Vacaville, Calif., so I know something about the programs offered there. Not only can inmates earn a high school diploma, they can also learn clerical skills, electronics, lens grinding, horticulture and auto mechanics. They can become dental technicians, nursing assistants, X-ray technicians and cooks, as well as expert craftsmen in wood, jewelry, leather, pottery and ceramics.

Don't let one mistake ruin your life. Learn from it. Study hard, and good luck.

TV showcases kids available for adoption

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Once a week, Charlotte television anchorman Bill Walker puts on his tennis shoes or a pair of rollerskates and takes a Charlotte child out to have some fun.

But the fun has a serious purpose. The outing is filmed by WSOC-TV and featured on the station's "Carolina's Child," a program designed to find people willing to adopt older or handicapped children.

More than 50 children have been featured on "Carolina's Child" since it began in September 1981. About 51 percent of the children have been adopted.

"It's a good feeling to think you had something to do with bringing together a child and a loving family," said Walker, managing editor of WSOC-TV. "It's definitely worth any time it takes."

WSOC is one of a number of television stations in Raleigh, High Point, Wilmington and Charlotte that have programs like "Carolina's Child." Several South Carolina stations also have such features and a Columbia, S.C., newspaper, The State, has a feature called "A Child Is Hoping."

In all the cities, the county social services department choose the children who will appear on the shows. Social workers talk over the show with the child, then send along necessary information to the television station.

"We would not put a child on a show if he didn't want it," said Betty Levin, with the N.C. Division of Social Services. "The child has to understand what it's all about and want to do it. We certainly don't push them."

Most of the programs are funded by local grants and staffed by volunteers.

"Carolina's Child" has been filmed at zoos, in ice cream parlors and parks — places where children feel free to be themselves.

For example, an 8-year-old Charlotte boy was featured on the program last February taking a ride in WSOC-TV's helicopter, Chopper 9. Another program showed a 6-year-old boy mixing up chocolate candy with his hands as the song "The Candy Man" played in the background.

"We try to find out something about the child before we decide where to shoot the program," Walker said. "We try to put the child at ease, to make him feel like he can talk and have a good time. Sometimes it isn't easy and it doesn't come out quite like we wish it would, but they're always appealing."

WGHP-TV in High Point features children from all over the state and Virginia on its "Wednesday's Child" program. Sixty percent of the children featured on the show have been adopted since the program first aired 1½ years ago.

"It's a very special time for me, the time I spend with those kids," said Carol Kline, who produces and hosts the program. "Most of them desperately want a family of their own."

Most of the children on "Wednesday's Child" are 6 years old or older and mentally or physically handicapped. If a child is not adopted after his first appearance, the station follows up with a second chance and third chance show, if the child wants it. The station also runs "success stories" on children who are adopted.

Social services departments in some states have spoken out against the TV features, saying the children are being advertised and exploited. But hosts of the programs in North Carolina say social services officials have been pleased with the results of the programs.

"We were approached by the social services people," Walker said. "We feature children with special problems, older children, children that in general are more difficult to find families for, and social services was happy that we wanted to do something."

Pelican haven

Anaho Island, the only island in Pyramid Lake, Nev., is the home of the largest colony of strictly off limits to all visitors. (AP Laserphoto)

Nevada island is pyramid home of pelicans

EDITOR'S NOTE — The white pelicans are squawking water birds with a 10-foot wing span. Multiply that by some 7,000 or 8,000 and add some cormorants, gulls, vultures and herons and you have an idea of Pyramid Lake, Nev., home of the largest colony of pelicans in North America.

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG

Associated Press Writer
PYRAMID LAKE, Nev. (AP) — From the highest point on the only island in this former inland sea, a human being can turn 360 degrees some days without seeing a trace of his species.

Hills covered with sagebrush surround deep turquoise water. Strange tufa formations haunt the shoreline. Only a green patch of trees on the lake's west shore betrays the presence of people — the Paiute Indians who have lived here for hundreds of years.

Still, it's far from lonely on the top of Anaho Island. A raucous clatter drifts up from a greasewood patch at the base of the island, its source the largest colony of pelicans in North America. Their home on this unlikely desert lake is the Anaho Island

National Wildlife Refuge, where wildlife experts are keeping a watchful eye on the American white pelican's progress.

Ed Loth and Gary Herron sit on the island's crest with telescopes, trying to count the flapping, squawking mass of birds below. They are among a handful of people ever to have set foot on the island, which is kept strictly off limits to visitors.

Herron, a biologist with the Nevada Department of Wildlife, points pelicans roosting on a wide, sloping apron of land leading down to the lake — some 1,000 birds, the telescope showed.

Hundreds of pelicans, their distinctive beaks silhouetted against the sharp blue sky, circled the island for a half-hour before landing at their nesting sites.

While in the air, the birds engaged in spectacular aerial acrobatics, swooping, soaring, floating on cushions of air.

"These are the birds that have been out feeding," explains Loth, a biologist with the Stillwater National Wildlife Refuge in nearby Fallon. "Now they're coming back in and they'll probably feed the young while the other parents go out."

Loth's count reveals a total of 5,290 adult pelicans and 2,425 young scattered among several colonies on the island. In addition, there are 1,490 double-crested cormorants, several thousand California gulls, turkey vultures, great blue herons, and other birds.

The pelican count is up for the third year in a row, raising hope that the once-ravaged Anaho colony may be rebounding. But experts — mindful that the birds' survival is dependent on a capricious mix of water, fish and solitude — remain cautious.

The American white pelican can be found nesting during the spring and summer throughout the Great Basin, with principal colonies at Pyramid Lake, the Great Salt Lake in Utah, Tule Lake in Northern California and Chase Lake in North Dakota.

In the winter, the birds head south to the Gulf of Mexico and the Southern California coast.

With a wingspan of nearly 10 feet, the American white pelican is "about the largest water bird you'll find in North America," according to biologist John Anderson.

The pelicans were making their home at Anaho Island when settlement began in the river valleys of northwest Nevada in the last half of the 19th century. The first known study of the birds in 1903 showed 3,000 nests, or about 6,000 adult birds.

Two important events took place in the decade after that first study. In 1906, a dam and system of irrigation canals were built upstream of Pyramid Lake as part of the federal Newlands Project. The intent was to help settlers cultivate parched ground to the east of the lake. The effect was to reduce the level of Pyramid Lake by nearly 90 feet in 75 years.

Then, in 1913, President Woodrow Wilson set aside Anaho Island as a preserve for breeding of white pelicans and other birds.

The wisdom of the Newlands Project is still debated in Nevada. The diversion of Truckee River water from its path to Pyramid Lake turned barren desert into bountiful farmland. But the Paiute Indians, whose reservation includes Pyramid Lake, say it also threatened to make barren their bountiful lake.

The declining lake level nearly wiped out the native Cu-ui fish and Lahontan cutthroat trout, the basis of the Paiute economy. Both were reintroduced and with modern management are starting to thrive again.

And two consecutive years of well-above-average rainfall have brought the lake level up nearly 15 feet.

Still, there is concern. A U.S. Supreme Court ruling in June reaffirmed the right of Truckee River ranchers to divert water headed to Pyramid Lake. And another succession of drought years could undo the progress of two wet seasons.

All this is crucial to the Musician popular through decades

By JACK BERTRAM
Valley Morning Star

LA PALOMA, Texas (AP) — In true pioneer fashion, Narciso Martinez came to the Rio Grande Valley on the back of a burro. His neighbors kid with him now, he says, pointing out how he "used to ride on donkeys, but now (he) rides on planes."

It is a fitting evolution, for Martinez, born in Reynosa in 1911, has ascended from the most humble of origins to the status of national treasure.

The instrument of his flight is the accordion, a three-row button model that dates back to the 1940s and is the successor to the two-row button instrument with which he started.

The music is conjunto (known as Musica Norteno in Mexico), a form so simple that it almost defies description, polka and redova (two step) beats that remain as basic as the cultures from which it sprang and from which it borrows.

According to David Hisbrook, writing in the current issue of Texas Monthly magazine, conjunto is "the music of the Tejano working class; the equivalent in American society is the country music of the '40s and '50s" and Martinez is "the acknowledged father of conjunto."

Writes music historian and film and record producer Chris Strachwitz:

"...perhaps the single most influential player of the accordion in South Texas for several generations ... Narciso Martinez is one of the founding fathers of our Music Nortena."

In June of this year, Martinez — along with 17 other innovators in their respective musical fields — was honored with a $5,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

He was flown to Washington, D.C., to perform at the Smithsonian Institute's annual Festival of American Folklife.

Likewise, he was a featured performer at the Frontier Folklife Festival in St. Louis, another prestigious gathering of the masters of folk art.

The most flattering part of his success, says Martinez, is the fact that he is still asked to play in "my style" — and his discovery that a crowd of people as sophisticated as one might expect to find in the nation's capital is moved to dance as easily as those in Valley neighborhood gatherings of a half-century past.

Self taught, Martinez developed his appealingly sharp, snappy style performing at the impromptu get-togethers of farm workers in the La Paloma-San Benito area in the late '20s.

An older brother owned an accordion, but young Narciso was to call the instrument his own by the age of 17.

"Honestly, I don't even know how it all got started," says Martinez, who will be 72 in October.

Most vivid are the memories of poverty.

"Those were hard times," he says. "There were eight in our family and we all had to work."

The family was so poor, he says, that at times there was "no soap for the women to wash" clothes.

"There wasn't any electricity; there wasn't any radio," says Martinez, whose exposure to music, other than the neighborhood parties, was in the fields.

He would, he says, learn new songs by memorizing the tunes he heard the field hands whistle while they worked.

The great respite from hard labor was the neighborhood party.

After all the family necessities, groceries and clothing and the like, were provided for, "money was set aside" for the parties, says Martinez.

The tradition was 5 cents a dance, and Martinez remembers well he would save nickels from his labors in the cotton fields to buy dances from the young ladies of the community.

Tradition also held that of each dime earned, the women would keep 5 cents and give the other "nickel to the musician in payment for his services.

Thus, to play a style of music that would urge the dancers to their feet was financially rewarding for the musician.

Martinez prides himself on the fact that he could earn as much as $10 a weekend playing his accordion at community gatherings.

Word of Martinez' popularity spread, and in 1936 the accordion aficionado was urged by Valley furniture store owner Enrique Valentin to record.

"When people are shopping for homeowners insurance, I'm usually their last stop..."

If you're shopping, find out if I can save you money. Come in, or give me a call.

Border bar was once frequented by famous

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Stars such as Clark Gable and John Wayne once crossed the Rio Grande to drink at Juarez's Kentucky Club, a roaring Mexican bar that aficionados claim is the most famous sipping site on the U.S.-Mexico border.

Gable, an Army captain at the time, visited the Kentucky Club during World War II, taking time from his Fort Bliss duties in nearby El Paso to drink tequila and Mexican beer at the 80-foot-long mahogany bar and listen to the jukebox tunes of Glenn Miller.

"Gable was a wonderful guy, just wonderful," Kentucky Club owner Francisco Montez said. "My, those were the days. All of Juarez was a fair."

Back then, Fort Bliss soldiers and minor league baseball players from Phoenix to El Paso flooded the bar, named by the sports-loving Montez for the Kentucky Derby horse race.

An unknown minor league baseball player named Billy Martin, author Tom Wolfe and former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey dropped in to sample local beers, bet on horse races and size up the Mexican nightlife two blocks inside the border on Avenida Juarez.

Wayne would hang his hat in the club when filming Western movies south of the border in Durango.

The club, opened in 1933, is festooned with the century-old, six-arch mahogany bar, mirrors, Mexican chandeliers and a blue-tile gutter filled with water at the foot of the bar for spitters and smokers.

About 60 can sit in five booths and at the bar. Standing-room-only crowds from the old bullfights and boxing matches in Juarez sometimes forced patrons into the street.

Ringed the walls are photos of prominent boxers — such as Jack Johnson and Gene Tunney — and minor league ball players, many of whom frequented the bar when the Juarez Indios — then owned by Montez — belonged to the American Association in the 1940s and '50s. A young Billy Martin peeks out beneath the bill of a Tucson uniform cap.

"I've known Billy since he was a boy," Montez said.

By L.D. STRATE
Altus, Okla., Pampa's foe in tonight's scrimmage, will again be in the embryonic stages. The Bulldogs will be without size, experience and longtime coach Dave Brown.

Brown, who had been head coach at Altus High for the past seven years, is now an assistant at Norman, Okla. Brown had been an Altus coach for 17 years.

"He had some pressure to resign," said Keith Floyd, sports editor of the Altus Times-Democrat. "You don't stay long if you don't win here."

Brown's replacement is Davis Cole, who had a successful coaching stint at Marlow, Okla.

Altus won only two games last season and the future looks bleak. Their two junior high teams haven't had a winning season in the past three years.

Altus is picked to finish last in the four-team Southern Conference.

Despite the dour outlook, the Bulldogs have a bonafide all-state candidate in tailback Glen Townsend. He rushed for over 1,000 yards last season and led the team in touchdowns despite moving from his natural position to quarterback early in the season.

The scrimmage begins at 6:30 p.m. with the junior varsity game. The varsity follows at 7:30 p.m.

Collin Bray, 13-year-old grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wheeler of White Deer, is a member of a Houston little league baseball team that is currently involved in regional competition in Florida.

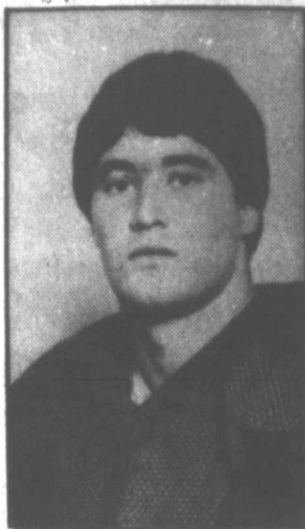

Collin's team has won two games and are scheduled to play a Florida team next. The finals will be played Saturday with the winner advancing to the area finals in Michigan.

The New York Giants could be the surprise team in the National Football League this season.

Quarterback Phil Simms returns after being out with injuries while Rod Carpenter and Butch Woolfolk could develop into the best 1-2 running punch in football.

The big question will be if the defensive line can hold up. They really have no outstanding players there.

The linebacking corps is one of the best with Lawrence Taylor, Harry Carson, Brad Van Pelt and Brian Kelley.

Steve McDougall

Pampa sophomore Steve McDougall is making a strong bid to start at split end for Tulsa University this season.

McDougall was redshirted last year after lettering as a freshman. He was among the most dependable receivers in spring practice according to the TU football guide, and led the Hurricanes in receptions with two for 50 yards in the spring game.

His main competition for a starting job is Keith Estes, a senior who started five games at flanker last year.

When McDougall was playing for the Harvesters, he made the all-district team twice and was the area's top receiver.

McDougall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Denny McDougall.

Texas Tech's Danny Buzzard of Pampa is listed as a question mark going into the 1983 season. He missed all of spring practice due to a bout with mononucleosis and was dropped to the second team.

However, look for the 250-pound offensive lineman to end his college career with a strong finish.

He started five games at offensive tackle last season, including the last four.

Buzzard had cracked the starting lineup as a junior when he was hit by injuries. He played in all eleven games as a sophomore.

Like McDougall, Buzzard had an outstanding high school career. He was instrumental in leading the Harvesters to a 7-3 record as a senior. He was an All-Region tackle and was a two-way all-district performer.

Buzzard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Buzzard.

Far West Football Preview

Three-team dogfight expected in Pac-10 Conference

The Associated Press
Defending champion UCLA, Washington and Arizona State are expected to fight it out for the Pacific-10 Conference football title this fall, with two other potentially powerful teams — Southern Cal and Arizona — out of it even before the season starts.

Traditionally strong Southern Cal, which appears to have another talented group of players, and Arizona, making considerable improvement in recent years, both are on NCAA probation and ineligible for the championship or postseason play this year.

Last season, the conference boosted three of the top 10 teams in the nation in the final poll, and balance was the byword of the Pac-10 title race. This season shapes up as more of the same.

Although they figure to be the frontrunners for the crown, UCLA, Washington and Arizona State all lost a number of seniors from their 1982 squads due to graduation. UCLA finished No. 5 in the final rankings, Arizona State No. 6 and Washington No. 7.

The Cougars of Washington State upset Washington in the season's finale and Arizona upended Arizona State in their traditional clash to leave UCLA with the conference title.

Washington went on to edge Maryland 21-20 in the Aloha Bowl while ASU downed Oklahoma 32-21 in the Fiesta Bowl.

While there will be a number of new faces in the Pac-10 teams' lineups, experienced quarterbacks abound in the pass-oriented league, with seven of the 10 clubs retaining their 1982 starters.

Among the three quarterbacks who have departed, however, are two of the best — Stanford's John Elway and UCLA's Tom Ramsey. Elway completed his collegiate career and became No. 1 in the National Football League draft after setting conference and NCAA passing records.

UCLA must replace Ramsey, who shared the Pac-10 player-of-the-year honors with Elway and led the Bruins to a 24-14 Rose Bowl victory over Michigan before joining Los Angeles of the United States Football League.

The other new quarterback this fall will be at Washington State, which must find a successor to Clete Casper.

Among the returning quarterbacks this season are Tom Tunnicliffe of Arizona and Todd Hons of Arizona State, each of whom threw for more than 2,000 yards last year. Others back are Gale Gilbert of California, Sean Salibury of Southern California, Steve Pelluer of Washington, Jeff Seay of Oregon State and Mike Jorgensen of Oregon.

UCLA lost Ramsey and a corps of fine receivers among the those who completed eligibility — 27 lettermen, 13 of them three-year regulars. Aying to replace Ramsey are senior Rick Neusel and junior Steve Bono. Returning for the Bruins is free safety Don Rogers, who was co-player-of-the-game in the Rose Bowl.

Coach Don James at Washington also faces rebuilding his Huskies, who were ranked No. 1 nationally for a part of last season and the only club to beat UCLA.

Returning standouts include quarterback Pelluer, tailback Jacques Robinson, guard Rick Mallory, middle guard Dean Browning, defensive tackle Ron Holmes, and linebacker Tim Member.

Arizona State lost most of its entire starting offensive backfield back — Hons, sophomore tailback Darryl Clack and senior fullback Dwaine "Tex" Wright.

In his second season at California, Coach Joe Kapp has a premier tight end in Davis Lewis, and Kapp rates Ron Rivera as perhaps the finest linebacker in the nation.

At Stanford, Coach Paul Wiggan observes, "People assume that just because John Elway was a '10' that we're going to go from 10 to zero now that he's gone. That isn't true. We think of it more like going from a 10 to maybe a seven or an eight. Steve Cottrell has backed up John and Gregg Topp has been playing better than we expected."

At Oregon, Coach Rich Brooks is buoyed by the return of talented running back Kevin Willhite, who missed all of last season. Oregon State Coach Joe Avezano has seven offensive starters returning, including fullback Bayce Ogesby and guard Rick Meggers. And Washington State Coach Jim Walden rates his club's chances very high.

Saying he thought Arizona might be the best in the conference, Walden added: "The second-best team with the most people returning who have proven they can go out and win football games, the team with what it takes to win a Pac-10 championship... is Washington State."

Baylor has untested talent

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff listens to predictions of a second-division finish for his Bears and smiles.

"Nobody gives us much of a chance," he says. "Of course, the experts have done that to us before."

Teaff has brought the Bears Southwest Conference football championships in 1974 and 1980 on years that started out like this one.

He has a lot of talent but it's mostly untested, particularly at the vital quarterback position. If it were a horse race, the Bears would be listed as 25-to-1 shots behind Texas, Southern Methodist, Arkansas, Houston, and Texas A&M.

The last time Baylor was picked sixth in the conference the Bears finished sixth in the nation.

The Bears will trot out a brand new offense and a new defense this year in the season opener against high-scoring Brigham Young on Sept. 10.

Teaff moved to the I Formation so he could put swift Alfred Anderson at tailback.

The Bears will unveil a 4-4 defense or wide tackle six, if you prefer, which was used sparingly but with some success last season.

Teaff also has had to revamp his staff because he lost four assistants.

"We're a team in transition in both the personnel and coaching standpoints," said Teaff. "It should be an interesting season."

A player who could make things very interesting for Teaff is quarterback Cody Carlson, who is a freshman in eligibility because he was hurt last season.

"He could be the best we've ever had around here," said Teaff. "Tom Muecke could be a great one, too."

"Cody is a better passer than Tom and Tom is a better runner than Cody but neither one is a slouch at either one," said Teaff. "They're both capable of becoming All-Southwest Conference quarterbacks."

Pampa wins vb opener

Pampa opened its volleyball season Thursday night with a 15-7, 15-5 win over Hereford in McNeely Fieldhouse.

New head coach Phil Hall said Stacy Brown and Diana Simmons led the hitting attack, while Lisa Crayton and Miss Simmons played strong backcourt games.

Pampa returns to action today in the 12-team Lubbock Tournament. The Lady Harvesters open with El Paso Austin.

Pampa is defending District I-4A champions.

Kendall lists lineup for tonight's scrimmage

The Pampa Harvesters are looking forward with relish to tonight's scrimmage with Altus, Okla. after seemingly endless blocking drills, wind sprints and calisthenics, not once, but twice daily.

"They're a little tired of it," said Pampa coach John Kendall. "We've had about 20 two-a-days now and the kids are ready to scrimmage somebody."

Kendall has his lineup set for the 7:30 p.m. scrimmage at Harvester Stadium, but every player on the roster will see action.

"We're going to be alternating quite regularly," Kendall said. "We want to take a look at everybody."

Pampa's lineup to start off the scrimmage is as follows:
Offense: Tight End-Dennis Kuempel; Split End-Greg Brown; Center-Steve Seely; Guards-Travis Adams and Bill Fritz; Tackles-Lyle Van Buskirk and Ricky Stout; Quarterback-Devin Cross; Fullback-Brian Kotara; Tailback-Danny Sebastian; Swingback-David Hinkle or Ricky Smith

Defense: Noseguard-Tyrone Evans; Tackles-Dan Birkes and Cleve Deason; Ends-Swasey Brainard and Kip Hutto; Linebackers-Dennis Kuempel and Eugene Smith; Cornerbacks-Tony Santacruz and Brian Kotara; Safeties-Jeff Steward and Ricky Poole.

"Altus is a lot like us," Kendall said. "They run out of the I-formation and use the same defensive front. It should be a pretty evenly-matched scrimmage."

Altus has a new head coach in Davis Cole.

"He coached at Marlow, Okla. and he was very successful there," Kendall added.

There will be a junior varsity scrimmage at 6:30 p.m.

Cardinals stop red-hot Astros

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Andy Van Slyke of St. Louis said he wasn't looking to hit the ball over the wall. Philadelphia's Bo Diaz said he wasn't expecting to hit the ball — period.

Each got a 10th-inning pitch he liked and each pounced on it. Van Slyke's home run giving the Cardinals a 4-1 victory over Houston, Diaz's homer boosting the Phillies past San Diego 4-2.

In the rest of the National League, Cincinnati edged Pittsburgh 6-5. Chicago blanked Atlanta 3-0 and San Francisco defeated Montreal 5-3. New York's game at Los Angeles was rained out.

In the only American League action, the Kansas City Royals concluded their 5-1 victory over the New York Yankees in the Pine Tar game suspended July 24 following George Brett's controversial home run. Van Slyke, said he was just trying to get on base when he drilled his liner to right field. "I was really busting my tail going around first," he said.

"When I heard the crowd roar as I reached second base, I thought that I did it...I try not to pressure myself. I don't consider myself to be a pure power hitter."

Van Slyke also singled, tripled and walked, scoring each time. His triple preceded Willie McGee's single that tied it 4-4 in the eighth inning.

The loss was only the third in 12 games for the Astros and prevented them from gaining ground on Atlanta in the NL West. The third-place Astros trail by seven games.

Phillies 4, Padres 2
Diaz said that with two outs, a runner on first and a 3-0 count, he expected to take a pitch from Gary Lucas, perhaps to draw a walk. But third base coach Dave Bristol was wig-wagging different signals.

"It was kind of confusing to see the hit-and-run sign in that situation," said Diaz. So he decided to check the dugout. "I kept looking in and (coach) Bobby Wine and (manager) Paul Owens were going. 'Yes, yes.'"

"We were going like this, telling him to swing at it," Owens said, swinging an imaginary bat. So Diaz swung his real one and crashed Lucas' next pitch into the left-field bleachers to snap the Padres' four-game winning streak.

The Phillies' other runs came on Joe Morgan's sacrifice fly and RBI single.

Scramble

Royals win pine tar contest

NEW YORK (AP) — After 26 days of protests, lawsuits, acrimony, a threatened forfeit and never-ending oratory, the great pine tar soap opera finally reached its conclusion... but not before one last-gasp protest by the New York Yankees.

Anticipating that the Yankees would have something up their sleeve in the form of a counter-protest at Thursday's completion of the suspended game, American League President Lee MacPhail was one step ahead of them and armed his umpires with an affidavit that they produced right there on the field.

And then Dan Quisenberry retired the Yankees in order to complete the ninth inning of a game that began on July 24 and "ended" when George Brett's two-run homer with two out in the top of the ninth that gave the Royals a 5-4 lead was nullified by a quartet of umpires who ruled he had too much pine tar on his bat and sent the Yankees home as apparent 4-3 winners.

MacPhail overruled the umpires a few days later and ordered the game to be resumed Thursday despite countless beefs from the Yankees. After the Yankees fanned the flames a little longer, it turned into a 12-minute anticlimax and a 5-4 triumph for the Royals.

The Yankees took the field with left-handed Don Mattingly at second base — Bert Campaneris, the July 24 second baseman, is injured and Mattingly was scheduled to be the first New York batter and — so as not to waste a possible pinch hitter or pinch runner — pitcher Ron Guidry in center field, replacing Jerry Humphrey, who has been traded to Houston.

Before the first pitch, George Frazier stepped off the mound and threw to first, appealing that Brett had not touched the base on July 24 when running out his home run.

Umpire Tim McClelland gave the safe sign, but McClelland never saw Brett touch the bag because these

White to start Saturday night when Cowboys host Steelers

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, who has been experimenting with a handful of new faces in his starting lineup, says he plans to go with his regulars when the Pittsburgh Steelers come to town Saturday.

Backup quarterback Gary Hogeboom had pressed Danny White for the starting job, but Landry said White will start the 8 p.m. national televised game here with the rest of the regulars and play the entire first half.

Steeler coach Chuck Noll, who also plans to start most of his veterans, will be forced to go with a backup at quarterback again this week because of the injured Terry Bradshaw. Cliff Stoudt will start and play most of the game, Noll says.

Reserve Mark Malone was ineffective in a 22-13 loss to the New York Giants last week, fumbling twice and throwing an interception as the Steelers suffered their first pre-season defeat.

Running back Curtis Brown, who was obtained Wednesday in a trade with Buffalo, also will see action, Noll said.

Bradshaw still hasn't begun practicing with the rest of the team because of off-season elbow surgery and it is becoming increasingly doubtful that he will be ready for the Sept. 4 season opener against the Denver Broncos. "I'm ready to play, mentally and physically," Bradshaw said Thursday. "I'm just not throwing the ball a lot yet. But if I could get some practice, I wouldn't even need to play next week (in the Steelers' final pre-season game against the Philadelphia Eagles) to be ready for Denver."

Landry said Thursday he was pleased with the 10 backups he started in a 30-7 win over the Los Angeles Rams Monday.

"Using different players has helped the competitive atmosphere," Landry said. "I think it's improved the whole lineup."

Landry still has two positions open on the team — strong safety and outside linebacker.

Benny Barnes will start at strong safety, and Dexter Clinkscales is challenging him for the job, but he is questionable for the Pittsburgh game because of a sore knee. Another possibility for the job, says Landry, is free agent Bill Bates of Tennessee.

"He's seriously challenging," Landry said. "He played well against Los Angeles in the nickel, short yardage and goal line. He didn't make many mistakes."

Joe Cribbs and Roosevelt Leaks. "We've liked him for a long time," Noll said. "And, he was available."

Jets edge Bengals in overtime

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals usually prosper through the pass.

On Thursday night, they buried themselves by it, with New York Jets kicker Pat Leahy tossing the last shovel of dirt.

Bengal quarterbacks were intercepted three times, with the last one setting up Leahy's 31-yard field goal in overtime that gave the Jets a 20-17 victory in a nationally televised National Football League exhibition game.

"We wound up killing ourselves throwing the ball," Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg said.

The Jets, who boosted their exhibition record to 2-1, tied the score in the fourth quarter behind backup quarterback Pat Ryan. He engineered a 55-yard scoring drive, tossing an 8-yard touchdown pass to rookie Mike Harmon with just over six minutes to play.

After a Cincinnati fumble, Ryan then drove the Jets 43 yards to the Bengals' 28. But with 44 seconds to play, Leahy missed his second straight field-goal attempt, this one from 45 yards out.

"I was very upset at myself," Leahy said. "But that was a long one."

The second Jet interception of the game nearly gave him a shot at a shorter one. Backup quarterback Turk Schonert threw downfield on
