An even dozen sleepy-eyed members of the Pampa Junior Chamber of Commerce were on hand at 7 a.m. today in Johnson's Cafe for a meeting with Tommy Cook, of Baytown, Texas JayCee president, and Gwyn Vaughn of Tulsa, regional JayCee vice president. Cook and Vaughn were here at such an hour because Cook and Vaughn could not meet the Pampans at any other time. The pair was in McLean Tuesday night having landed earlier in the day on an abandoned strip of U. S. Hwy. 96 about a mile out of town.

This morning Cook and Vaughn were slated to go to Amarillo and tonight to Panhandle. Their Pampa stop was part of a week-long jaunt to JayCee clubs in the Panhandle area.

Cook, with an eye toward this weekend's JayCee bi-regional convention in Loveland, said that two of the main JayCee objectives should be "pushing extensions" and "external projects." "The more members, the more energy, the more power and the more activity there is" in a JayCee club, Cook said, pointing out that there is a potential Texas JayCee membership of 700,000. (At present there are 12,000 JayCees in Texas.) Vaughn insisted that there were

Wheat Producers Gain Instruction

Instructions in procedure for the 1954 wheat acreage measurement program were given Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation officials from nine counties in this area in the County courtroom. Roy Veal, state representative from College Station, and W. H. Seale, Amarillo, district officer, were here to give instructions to some 25 ASC officials. Miss Evelyn Mason, manager of the Pampa office, said that the meeting was held to give officials of the nine counties technical instructions in the measurement program. She added that she expects the measurement activities to begin in about a month.

Heritage Group Picks Next Book

And the next meeting is slated for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 1 in the Pampa Public Library according to Mrs. Dorothy Statton, Adult Education program secretary.

Decision was made Tuesday night at a board of directors meeting. At the same time there was a discussion of a meeting of the directors for the program over the Panhandle and Plains area, slated Thursday and Friday in Lubbock. Several Pampans are expected to attend.

The way the program works, Mrs. Statton said, is that now the Pampa board book choice is presented to the Ford Foundation's Lubbock area office. The Foundation pays the book bill and after the classes are over the books are turned over to the Pampa library.

Mrs. Jack Foster was in charge of Tuesday night's meeting. On the Pampa board are Dr. Raymond Hampton, Dr. Douglas E. Nelson, Clifford Braly, John Harnly and Mrs. Statton. Mrs. Lillian Snow, librarian, is advisor for the group.

Lt. Smith Named CO of Guard Unit

The Pampa unit of the National Guard today had a new roster of officers.

The change of command which came VOG (on verbal orders of the commanding general) took place Tuesday night at the same time an inventory was conducted by Capt. Grady Roberts, of the inspector general's office in Austin.

Maj. Doc A. Stewart, executive officer of the 474th Field Battalion (Observation), is the new battalion commander, according to Capt. Charles L. Robinson, commanding officer of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, who was upped to battalion executive officer.

Second Lt. Robert A. Smith, battery communications officer (and hence battery executive officer), is the new commander of the Pampa battery. Smith's old job will be vacant till a qualified person is found, Robinson said.

Capt. O. B. Frank, Shamrock, battery commander, was made plans and training officer. And Second Lt. Bobby Purcell, Shamrock, executive officer of the battery, was promoted to battery commanding officer.

The whole change of command was begun by the retirement of Lt. Col. James T. Clark of Pampa, the battalion commander.

The inventory was completed between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. Tuesday and the post-party transfer effected, Robinson said.

Parr Denies He Carried Pistol

ALICE, Tex., Jan. 20 —UP—George Parr, millionaire political boss and former sheriff, has denied he was carrying a pistol at an opposition political meeting.

"I had a pair of binoculars," Parr said Tuesday night when asked about the alleged offense which led to a brief but bloody fist fight with three Texas Rangers.

Parr was late to a scheduled appearance in Jim Wells county court Monday and the Rangers were sent to find him. Before he went to court, Parr and his nephew Archer Parr, who succeeded him as Duval county sheriff, became embroiled with the state officers.

George Parr's car was twisted by a Ranger side, radio technician Carl Putnam, until it bled, and Archer Parr's glasses were knocked off.

But the Duval sheriff said neither he nor his uncle planned to press the matter.

"I'd just as soon forget about the whole thing," Archer Parr said. "It's all over as far as we are concerned."

He said they had no plans to bring the matter before the Jim Wells grand jury, which was scheduled to meet Wednesday.

Raeburn Norris, 79th judicial district attorney, said, however, the matter probably would be discussed by the grand jurors. "When you get 12 grand jurors together they usually discuss everything that's happening in the county," Norris said.

George Parr, after his ear was twisted, pleaded not guilty to the pistol-carrying charge and asked for a jury trial. He said he only watched the meeting of the Freedom party from an automobile.

Barn Is Ready For Stock Show

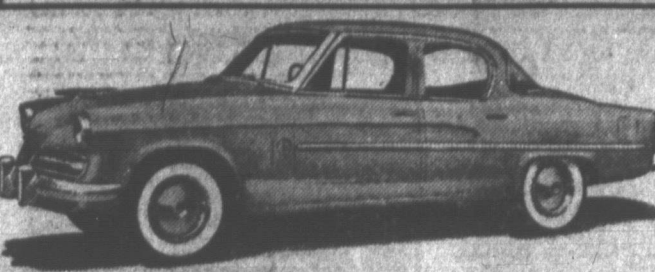

The Gray County dual-purpose barn in Recreation Park is "completed enough now so that they can go ahead and use it," Paul Camp, representative of West-Tex Construction Company of Pampa and Berger, made that statement late this morning adding that "we're really waiting for now is for the city to turn the gas on."

The roof is on, the heaters are hung, all is in readiness, he continued, for the Top o' Texas Fat Stock Show which will begin being moved in Saturday agricultural officials said this morning. Sunday will be weighing-in day. And the big show comes Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

With a ton of it I did my clothes are washed. I can do other housework while I'm washing. That's where I save the time that lets me enjoy my family.

Growth Of Farms

Until comparatively recently, as history is measured, the techniques of farming had not changed essentially in centuries.

The change that has taken place in a generation or two fully deserve the term revolutionary.

These aids are of many kinds, and they reach into every conceivable facet of the agricultural scheme of things.

Federal and state governments offer very extensive services to the farmer, on matters of both national and local application.

The soil conservation districts, organized and administered by farmers themselves, have done a great and absolutely necessary work.

Finally, certain industries have made tremendous contributions to better farming in all its ramifications.

Another is the farm equipment industry. The role of the tractor and of the other machines in the agricultural revolution can hardly be exaggerated.

Shopping In France

A great many of us, for lack of experience elsewhere, don't adequately realize how lucky we are to live in a country whose economic system is based on free competition.

The Saturday Evening Post recently printed an article by Ernest O. Hauser, entitled "The French Are in a Jam," which all Americans could read with profit.

Next time you go shopping, remember that — and count your blessings!

BETTER JOBS

By R. C. HOLES

like Recommends Extension

Of The "Social Security" Fraud

President Eisenhower in his recent message to Congress on the so-called "social security" shows that he has no conception of the moral ideals on which this country was formed.

Self-Reliant

As Dr. Orval Watts has pointed out:

"When no one was held responsible for his own welfare, few persons felt especially responsible for anybody.

President Eisenhower in his message says:

"The human problems of individual citizens are a proper and important concern of our government."

That is not true if we use the philosophy set forth in the Declaration of Independence as a guide of what the purpose of government is.

What Eisenhower doesn't see is:

Eisenhower says: "To help individuals provide for their security — to reduce both the fear and the incidence of destitution to the minimum — to promote the confidence of every individual in the future — these are proper aims of all levels of government, including the federal government."

That is completely throwing the American way of life out of the window. That is adopting a collectivist, socialist, and only way that the government can save its face for awhile is to go into printing money and bonds used as money.

It is of course true that a few of the older people will get something by that they haven't paid for, but by the time the youngsters get old enough to benefit from it the pensions they get will be made worthless by inflation.

Children Will Not Pay Our Debts

When Jefferson was in Paris he wrote to Madison as to whether Madison's opinion on the children were legally responsible for the debts contracted for by their parents.

Anyone who thinks that "social security" will be security for the younger people simply has not read history.

It is very hard indeed to tell how men like Eisenhower differ in their philosophy of government from Roosevelt or Stalin, or any dictator.

Proof Of The Pudding

National Whirligig... Democrats In Both Houses Of Congress Seem To Be Divided

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — The congressional Democrats' failure to adopt a formal anti-Eisenhower program at recent caucuses is not due to any generous desire to give the President a sufficient time to develop a year's probatory period is sufficient for that purpose.

The personal and political scars left by two such contentious and pugnaious figures as Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman have not been healed.

As a rule the out-of-power party finds a basis for unity and agreement. Forgetting grievances and the ordained leaders of their party are forsaking Roosevelt-Truman ideals.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STILL 'LIKE IKE'

"LIKE IKE" — A group of Southern, possibly 10 in the Senate and 30 in the House, still "like Ike," who carried their states, and have no use for the Lehman-Roosevelt coalition. They generally approve the President's middle-of-the-road program, although differing from him on details.

They are opposing him on certain principles. Sen. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, for instance, will try to block any increase in the public debt on an involuntary basis under violence, as is the plan of Eisenhower's for increasing the fraud "social security," is not being done for the benefit of the citizens as claimed, but to make it easier to perpetuate the politicians in power.

It is very hard indeed to tell how men like Eisenhower differ in their philosophy of government from Roosevelt or Stalin, or any dictator.

The Nation's Press

INSULATING SURPLUSES (The Wall Street Journal)

The nature of the farm problem which President Eisenhower first in his message to Congress is first how to keep the present huge surpluses from depressing prices, and secondly how to prevent a renewal of such surpluses.

Consider the existing surpluses. At the moment the Government holds some 800 million bushels of wheat alone, half under loan and half owned outright.

How the market will react to this is problematical. The fact is that the supplies exist. They cannot be hidden from those who will buy and sell these commodities.

Out of My Mind and Off My Chest: I dislike the lack of dignity in the so-called "cute" birth announcements.

I like the name Wolfgang and if I could rename myself it would be Dirk Wolfgang. I like hamburger steak better than the best sirloin or T-bones, Eton collars on youngsters, almost any watercolor, the sound of automobile tires on wet pavements.

By EDWIN J. JORDAN, M. D.

As the seasons roll around, the nature of some of the questions sent to this column change. Today's first one which comes much more often in cold weather.

Please tell me what causes me to have a great deal of static electricity? Is there any physical cause and what can I do about it?

There does not seem to be any physical reason why some people show more static electrical phenomena than others.

My nose, which is long to begin with, is getting purple lines and red blotches on it.

The condition described could be a skin disorder, or at least in part an allergic reaction.

I understand that hemorrhoids will be cured only by surgery, but I want to know if they will come back a certain time after the operation?

Is it true that blue-eyed parents can only have blue-eyed children?

Blue eyes are considered to be a recessive characteristic, hereditarily speaking. This is determined by what are known as genes, and it is true that two blue-eyed parents will have only blue-eyed children, though this does not follow for brown-eyed parents.

When a broken hip has healed properly, is it customary to leave the pin in place or to remove it in due time?

When a pin has been used in order to aid in the treatment of a broken hip, it would usually be left in place and not be removed.

NOTE ON QUESTIONS Dr. Jordan is unable to answer directly individual questions from readers. However, once a week, in this "Q & A" column, he will answer the most interesting and the most frequently asked questions received during the week.

"Behavior Patterns," "Sex Training" Studied By Parent Education Members

Parent Education members answered roll call at their meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Homer Johnson, 1230 Hamilton, with amusing remarks of their children. Mrs. Julian Key gave the Council of Clubs report and reminded members that the number of votes in the local election determined the number of delegates allowed on the presidential convention district. A letter of acceptance for the club's entry to the Beta Sigma Phi table-setting contest was read. Also during the business meeting, presided over by president, Mrs. Rex Rose, they planned to hold a bridge tournament Feb. 25, in the Holy Souls Parish. Proceeds from the tournament will be used to provide new books for Pampa's new library.

Mrs. Gene Patterson, chairman of the project committee, has charged the plans and said that refreshment will be served during the afternoon and that tickets will be purchased from members.

Mrs. George Snell gave a "Behavior Profile," outlining behavior traits of the various age groups to "give the parents a sense of direction." "In general," she said, "girls can be expected to be more advanced and more interested at an early age than boys. The child at one year needs a guiding hand to help him walk. Place a dozen cubes in front of him and he picks up one at a time and drops it to pick up another and so on. He likes an audience and repeats a performance that he has learned. At two years the child can run without falling, turn the pages of a book singly and pull on a garment. The first five years are all years of preparation. Children of this age love romping and rough play and expend his emotions by dancing, clapping and expansive laughter. He has a robust sense of "mine," but very weak sense of "thine." Don't give up hope however because he can smile at praise and hang his head in disgrace. At three he has himself pretty well in hand. He likes to make a choice and is more sure of himself. The age is approaching when he leaves his mother and contraries and realizes a new sense of social demands. The four year old is bursting with motor activity and bubbling with mental activity. He talks big and has a great imagination. He tells tall tales, brags, threatens and alibis, but these passing traits shouldn't be taken too seriously. He is very interested in becoming five years old.

"The next five years are the middle years," Mrs. Snell continued. "By five he is stamped with individuality. He is on friendly terms with his environment. A new development of restlessness appears. He is a homebody because it is there that he receives recognition and awards for his achievements. Six is an unsettled rather difficult year but at seven the child is quiet and more pleasant. We must respect his feelings and understand the importance of his private mental activities. At eight he is growing up—and is more of a person by adult standards. He is less brooding and more rapid in response to his problems. At nine your child is apt to do more things on his own initiative and he does not relish interruptions. A ten-year-old is not to risk your displeasure. Answer your child's questions casually and in their order." Mrs. Whitney concluded, "and you will win the confidence of your child as well as a healthy attitude on his part towards sex." Mrs. Whitney's material was taken from the book, "Telling Your Child About Sex," by James T. Hymes.

Doubting Wife Must Realize Marriage Forever Changes

By RUTH MILLETT
Can a marriage that has gone to the very brink of divorce ever be the same again?

when it came to the final test neither of you really wanted a divorce.

That is the question raised by a wife who writes: "My husband and I were on the verge of getting a divorce when we came to our senses and decided to forget the past and stay together. I love my husband and I honestly believe that he loves me. Do you think that our marriage will ever again be the way it used to be, before we agreed on divorce?"

Of course, it won't be the same. And the real threat to your happiness is in thinking it might be. For if you do, you'll be disappointed.

Can also find of the impossible, and being disappointed when you don't achieve it, except the fact that any human relationship—even marriage—is forever changing.

If you will do that you won't go measuring today's happiness against yesterday's or fret because you can't get back something that has been lost.

You'll be able to take pride in the fact that you and your husband did have the good sense to stay together. And you'll gain security from the knowledge that

Convalescing Children Will Stay Put More Readily With Toys And Cutouts

By KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

How to keep a convalescent child quiet in bed as per the doctor's orders has grayed many a mother's head. Including my own.

Knowing our wintertime you of colds, flu, fevers and you-name-it ailments is high in spite of super-conscientious precautions. I'm always open to ideas and suggestions for something to occupy the patient while I tend to necessary household duties.

After the crisis passes and the little patient starts complaining about the restrictions of bed rest, you must tax your ingenuity to find time-passing entertainment.

These suggestions I've gathered from friends and personal experience may work for you, too.

Plan definite play periods with the convalescent. Usually late morning and late afternoon are busy times when a child particularly needs adult consolation. I try to do necessary housework immediately after breakfast when the patient, fresh from sleep, can entertain herself.

To start her off on a morning project, you must provide a flat working surface. You can improvise a bedtable from a cardboard carton turned upside down and with space cut out on the sides for little legs.

A paper bag taped to one side will help corral paper scraps. You can also fold a newspaper to make a pocket for crayons.

Assemble a box or basket of play material. Basic ingredients are scissors, crayons, pencil string, cellophane tape, construction paper. Your children may be old enough or careful enough to be trusted with water paints and a paste pot.

Raid the household for such materials as left-over fabric scraps, empty paper bags, bits of yarn, bottle tops, buttons, old greeting cards and magazines discarded clean food cartons, and so on.

Using these odds and ends, encourage the child to make Valentine greetings or to tape up a picture on construction paper or cardboard. Or make a "funny people" scrapbook from sections of cutouts of heads, legs, arms, animals and such.

One six-year-old I know was delighted with her "picture," which she made by putting a man's head on a cow's body.

Older Women Aren't Lonely Who Practice Doing Things For Others

By RUTH MILLETT

As an older woman, living alone, she could have been overlooked in her neighborhood, made up mostly of young couples leading busy lives.

But in a year's time she has become one of the most important persons in the neighborhood.

Right away she made friends with the children who promptly told their parents about the nice lady down the street who always had time to talk to them and usually invited them in for a cookie.

It wasn't long before the "nice lady" had discovered that several of the little girls in the neighborhood wanted to learn to sew, but that their mothers were too busy to teach them. The older woman needed to feel useful and lonely, even in a neighborhood of young couples, if she will look about her and see all the possibilities for making friends and making her life useful.

The lonely older women are the ones who think, "Nobody ever does anything for me" — not the ones who ask themselves, "What can I do for somebody else?"

The children's mothers found out they could learn from the nice lady, too. For she seemed to have a greener thumb than any of her younger neighbors and was as generous with sharing her flowers as with sharing her cookies.

And every once in a while when a mother got in a jam and needed someone to stay with her children while she ran an errand, the nice lady seemed pleased to be asked to help out.

So in a short time the nice lady had become a real part of her neighborhood — liked, admired and needed.

The older woman needs to feel useful and lonely, even in a neighborhood of young couples, if she will look about her and see all the possibilities for making friends and making her life useful.

SOCIAL CALENDAR Good Looks Take Time And Effort

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

In the process of acquiring an air of grown-up grooming, teen-agers, don't overlook such niceties as hair and gloves.

It is laugh-provoking to see teen-agers halterless, gloveless, even without stockings, but with their faces heavily made up.

Less time with make-up and more spent selecting appropriate accessories would be far more effective in one's campaign to achieve grown-up status.

Careful dressing is the hallmark of the lady. So up your maturity rating gracefully by acquiring the accessory habit. It is one way to help you avoid the awkward-age tag.

Just for fun, you might start a collection of hats or gloves that are a bit different. But don't go overboard; there are many hats around these days that are too daff to be in good taste.

For dates, a perky little hat and dainty gloves are perfect. Since teen-agers are not known for their addition to these garments, you will be employing a discreet method of attracting attention. And you can be certain the response will be favorable.

Incidentally, wearing gloves can be overdone. Long, black formal gloves, for instance, do not go with the type of formal gown you should be wearing. But the white gloves in soft leather will go with any dressy costume.

And when wearing a hat, don't forget that you have it on. Remember it before getting up to dance in a public place.

Results Awaited In Hall Of Fame Vote

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—UP—Bill Terry and Bill Dickey were the best bets to be elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame Wednesday.

Senior members of the Baseball Writers' Association already have voted on candidates for the official shrine at Cooperstown, N.Y., and the results of their balloting will be announced at Commissioner Ford Frick's office Wednesday.

Outfielder Al Simmons of the Athletics and pitcher Dizzy Dean of the Cardinals were voted into the Hall of Fame last year. Terry, former Giant first baseman, and Dickey, considered the Yankees' all-time standout catcher, fell only a few votes short of being elected.

Close behind Terry and Dickey in the 1953 balloting was Walter (Reddy) Maraville, one-time Boston Braves shortstop who died earlier this month.

Although only Simmons and Dean were elected last year, there is a possibility that as many as four of five players may be elected this time due to a change in the voting set-up.

Writers were instructed to vote for players in the game from 1925 through 1944. Each writer can vote for as many as 10 players and those players whose names appear on three-quarters of the ballots automatically are elected. Since the writers can vote for only about two-thirds as many players as they have in the past, the more limited field could produce more members in the Hall of Fame.

Even though Dickey, Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees and Ted Lyons, recently hired as a pitching coach by Brooklyn, have not been out of baseball five years, special exceptions were made for them since each polled more than 100 votes last year. There is even a chance that DiMaggio and Lyons might be elected in the current voting.

The new rules do not prevent the election of old-timers who were active before 1925, according to Paul Kerr, secretary of the Hall of Fame.

"A special old-timers committee has been set up to take care of those fellows," Kerr said. "This committee met last summer and named executive Ed Harrow, Umpires Tommy Connolly and Bill Klein, and old timers Harry Wright and Bobby Wallace to the Hall of Fame."

The old-timers committee will meet every two years.

Yankees Sign First Sacker

By UNITED PRESS
There'll be the usual mob at first base for the Yankees this spring. That was guaranteed Wednesday when the world champions signed rookie Bill Skowron and announced that he would be a candidate for the first base job along with Joe Collins and Eddie Robinson, recently acquired from the Athletics.

The 23-year-old Skowron, former Purdue University star, batted .318 for Kansas City last year and, although he is still technically assigned to that club, he will go south with the Yankees.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, announced the signing of southpaw Ken Lehman, holder of a 13-9 record with Montreal last season, and reserve first baseman Wayne Belardi, who batted .259 in 66 games with Brooklyn.

Outfielder Mel Clark of the Phillies, who batted .298 in 60 games in 1953, agreed to terms but Earl Torgerson, Gran Hamner and Jim Konstanty continued to balk at club terms. Clark was the eighth Philadelphia player to sign his contract for '54.

The White Sox signed Rogers Hornsby, deposed Cincinnati manager, for service as a hitting instructor at their pre-season training camp which will open at Hollywood, Fla. March 1. In addition, the White Sox signed rookie outfielder Ed White and pitcher John Thompson. White hit .380 at Memphis while Thompson won 10 and lost four for Baltimore.

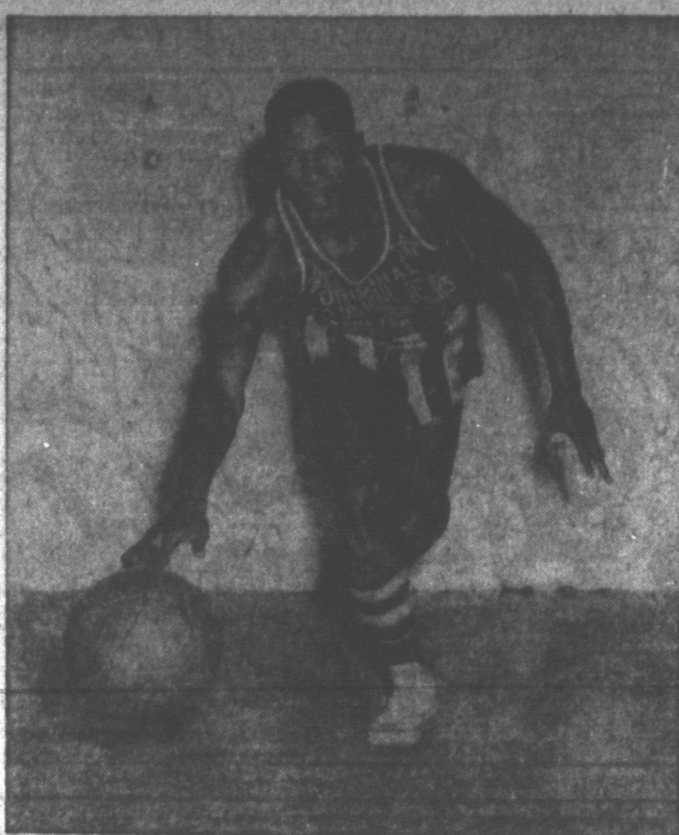

Cleveland signed Gale Wade, 24-year-old outfielder who batted .314 for Fort Worth. Wade, an ex-Dodger farm hand, came to the Indians in the same deal which brought them first baseman Rocky Nelson.

Purdue Coaches To Be Dallas Speakers

World-Circling Globetrotters Came Into Being During 1927

Basketball's world-circling Harlem Globetrotters will be in Pampa next Wednesday night, appearing at the Harvester fieldhouse.

Tickets for the Kiwanis Club sponsored appearance are now on sale and can be purchased at Ad-dington's Western Store, 119 S. Cuyler, any day during the week, or in the lobbies of the Combs-Worley and Hughes buildings next Saturday morning.

When Abe Saperstein first envisioned his Globetrotters basketball team, and started them playing in 1927, he dreamed of the days when they would embark on global jaunts befitting their name.

The Globetrotters — and Saperstein — made good with a bang.

At first trips into Canada and Mexico were interspersed with the travels all over the United States. In 1948 came the first of a series of sensational tours, this one a swing around the Hawaiian Islands. Also repeated in 1947, and the globe-trotting was on in earnest.

During the 1949-50 season the Trotters went to Havana, Cuba and won an international cup tournament with three straight victories. A few weeks later they were off on their first invasion of Europe and North Africa, a spectacular safari that saw them score 72 victories against a single defeat and earn the title of "America's Ambassadors of Good Will."

The next year saw a repetition of the Cuba feat, the playing and winning of 14 games in five days in Alaska and continued sweeps of ten games in Alaska, 45 in South America, one in Panama on the way back and 92 on a second annual visit to Europe and North Africa.

That was only a warmup for what was to come the next season, 1951-52. The international part of the season's activities began with a sweep of 17 games in Mexico and 33 more in South America. Followed then the first basketball Around-the-World tour, a 25-year

Pickings Will Be Slim For Player Draft, Coach States

DETROIT, Jan. 20—UP—Russ Thomas, assistant coach of the champion Detroit Lions, predicted Wednesday "pickings will be slim" in the National Football League player draft next week because of the return of the one-platoon system in college football.

"There just aren't as many good players around this year," Thomas lamented. "Some of the boys who would have been defensive stand-outs couldn't make the grade because they were lacking in offensive ability. And the same was true for good offensive prospects who were too weak on defense."

He said "I've talked with representatives of several other pro teams and they all agree this will be a lean year in the draft."

Thomas has been busy since the end of the football season scanning the long list of draft eligibles for players the Lions would like to add to Philadelphia next Wednesday.

"The list isn't too impressive," Thomas said. "We need a fullback. But there are only three or four who rate much consideration. I'd say Neil Worden of Notre Dame, Bobby Epps of Pittsburgh and Ralph Felton of Maryland would be the best prospects. Usually, there are two or three times that many promising fullbacks."

Because Detroit's regular season record was second best in the NFL, the Lions won't get a crack at a fullback until after 11 players have been "tagged" by other teams.

"If we can get a good fullback and an end or two we'll figure we've done all right," Thomas said, pointing out that the Lions still have most of the key players who have carried the team to two straight NFL championships.

Saperstein dream fulfilled. Games — 106 of them and all won by the Trotters — were played in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Greece, Lebanon, Egypt and North Africa, Thailand, Japan, China, Philippines and Hawaii.

And then last summer, came the Trotters' fourth annual tour of Europe, North Africa and the Near East — a 35,000-mile affair during which the Negro wonders played and won 81 games in 14 countries before royalty and diplomats. In some respects it was the most spectacular trip of all. In addition to countries visited on previous tours, Austria and Denmark were added to their list.

Joanne Bruni Is Tourney Favorite

LAREDO, Jan. 20—UP—Joanne Bruni, 13-year-old star playing on her home course, was favored in the women's division as play began Wednesday in the fourth annual International Amateur golf tournament.

In the men's division the favorite's role was shared by Wes Ellis Jr. of San Antonio, and Rex Baxter Jr. and Tommy Cruise, both of the University of Houston.

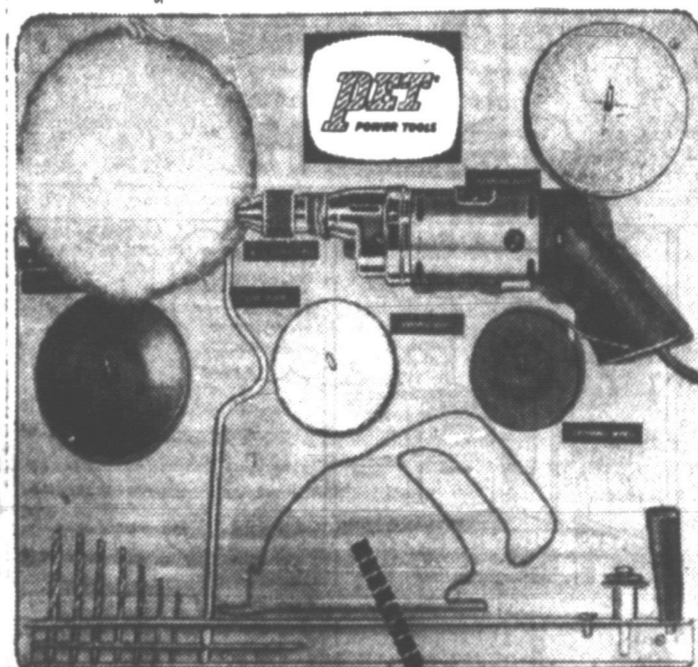

Miss Bruni drew the favorite's role both because of her ability as well as the absence of Dianne Garrett of Houston, who was kept away by her studies.

Other men rated highly for the 72-hole test included defending champion Lonnie Wendland of McAllen, Pepe Palacios of Laredo, the Monterrey champion, and Syl Falak, a top Mexican amateur.

Government To End Case On Ex-Red

EL PASO, Jan. 20 —UP—The government planned to wind up Wednesday its case against Clinton Jencks, 35-year-old official of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union (Ind.), who is charged with filing a false anti-Communist affidavit. Prosecutors said their final witness was John P. Thompson, a printer from Myrtle Creek, Ore., who identified a copy of a union newspaper in which an editorial signed by Jencks said the affidavit required by the Taft-Hartley law were "phony."

Russians Consider Doctors' Release An Important Move

EDITOR'S NOTE: Shortly before Generalissimo Josef Stalin died, a group of Russia's most prominent doctors were accused of plotting against the lives of Soviet leaders. Their arrests touched off what threatened to become a Communist program of anti-Semitism. One of the first major acts of the new Red regime was the release of the doctors and disclosure that their arrests had been ordered on faked evidence. In the following dispatch, the third of five, United Press staff correspondent Henry Shapiro, dean of the foreign press corps in Moscow, tells why many Russians regard this the most important development since Stalin's death.

By HENRY SHAPIRO United Press Staff Correspondent If you ask an intellectual and politically minded Russian what he considers the most important development in Russia since Stalin's death, he will probably tell you the release of the doctors. The newspaper dealt with the possible expulsion of the Mine-Mill union from the CIO (later carried out), and Jencks signed an editorial which urged Mine-Mill members to resist CIO demands that allegedly Red-tinged leaders be fired. The editorial used the phrase: "Phony affidavits of non-Communist affiliation required under the Taft-Hartley law."

Another closing witness for the government was James Terrassa, a former member of the Bayard local, who said Jencks urged Mine-Mill members to read the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, since it was "the only paper that has the truth."

death, he is likely to point to the "case of the nine doctors." For the doctors' case dramatized the end of an era and the beginning of a "new deal" in more than one sense: 1. The government made one of the most deadly admissions of criminal misadministration of justice ever recorded. It told the world that confessions of guilt were extracted by illegal means, including pressure and torture. Of the total of 15 exonerated doctors, two apparently did not withstand the "impermissible methods of investigation."

2. The harsh language condemning the security authorities appeared to confirm the government's pledge, made over Stalin's body, that people need no longer fear arbitrary police action and unlawful arrest. 3. The feeling of terror that had gripped large sections of the Jewish population, and possibly other ethnic minorities, when the doctors were arrested, vanished almost overnight. At time of the arrests, the official communiqué had named only nine doctors, six of whom were Jewish. The rest of the names published upon the release showed the Jews were in the minority. Here was an apparent attempt by the new regime to repair the damage caused by the first communiqué which had been carefully and successfully designed to convey the idea of a "Jewish conspiracy."

Strange rumors persistently swept the country between 1949 and 1952. They began with the arrest of the leaders of the Jewish anti-fascist committee, noted writers and actors, simultaneously with the closing of all Jewish language institutions. They ended with the arrest of minor MVD officials, followed by Beria's own fall. The whispering campaign against Jews in the intellectual professions began in 1948 with the drive against "rootless cosmopolitans" in the theatre, literature and music. Frightened bureaucrats began to expel Jews from the faculties of universities by using one pretext or another, usually the need to economize. The real "witch-hunt" was set off when the "murderers in white" were uncovered. While the entire medical profession was being discredited, someone obviously was trying to make it sound like a "Jewish conspiracy." In a country as highly centralized as the Soviet Union, there must have been central direction for such a campaign. Then it stops. As if by miracle, the campaign against doctors, Jewish nationalists and the "influences of alien ideologies," ended with Stalin's death. The "new deal" was on. Why the plot? The post-Stalin communiqué on the doctors indicated no motivation. Some foreign observers in Moscow thought they recognized Stalin's literary style in the violent Pravda editorial under the title "Base Spies and Murderers Behind the Mask of the Medical Professions." It seemed to me irrelevant whether Stalin wrote, edited or wrote the article. He certainly read it and must have approved it. I put my questions to most of the Western observers. One plausible version I heard attributed to Beria a long and deep-laid, cunning and diabolical scheme to build up himself and his MVD for eventual seizure of power. When, after the war, Russia emerged victorious and the strongest power in Europe, Stalin, more inflexible than ever, began to rely increasingly on his lieutenants. In security matters, Beria had the sole and final authority. Since a world without enemies was unnatural to Stalin, it was up to Beria to produce enemies. There were of course the rising "Anglo-American imperialists" but domestic enemies were closer and more plausible. The classical enemies, the old bourgeoisie, the Kulaks, the Trotskyites were gone. They had been liquidated. But "rootless cosmopolitans," were at hand, some of them Jews with Zionist sympathies and cousins in America. Here was a ready-made scapegoat for Beria. Appropriate.
