Big Contrast

In a recent editorial the Chattanooga News Free Press drew a sharp contrast between two ways of expanding electric power production.

One is the way the Tennessee Valley Authority, which is a socialized business, does it. It goes to Congress and asks for money which has been paid into the public treasury by all the taxpayers of the nation. And, of course, TVA and those who must look to it for power service, are 100 per cent dependent on Congress, and are directly affected by changing congressional attitudes and policies and personalities.

The other way is demonstrated by private enterprise. As an example, the News Free Press cited a Southern utility which has just announced plans for a construction program which will cost more than $100,000,000 over a three-year period. The money will be raised by the sale of stocks and bonds — in other words, by the voluntary investment of savings of individuals and organizations with faith in this utility's future. Interest and dividends will be paid on those securities. And the utility will also pay heavy taxes to all units of governments on the increased revenues and business that will result from the expansion program. In concluding its editorial, the paper observed that all the people of the region will benefit from the program "and it will not cost them or the citizens of other states of the Union one cent in tax money. And that is a pretty good way to take care of increased power needs. It is the free enterprise way, It is the traditional American way."

Any practical and needed electric power project anywhere, no matter how large, can and will be undertaken by tax-paying private enterprise, if it is given the chance and freed of the old threat of socialism.

Oil In Your Life

How many oil products do you use in the course of your daily living?

It's safe to say that very few people could give anything resembling an adequate answer to that deceptively simple question. Most would list gasoline, lubricants, perhaps furnace oil, and a few other such obvious products and then stop. But the fact is that many hundreds of articles which are universally consumed stem in one way or another from oil.

Plastics, for instance, contain petroleum derivatives and the plastics category includes a huge array of items ranging from shower curtains to dishes and toys. Oil is the source of all manner of cleaners, waxes, soaps and paints. It is one of the raw materials that goes into the manufacture of lotions, beauty creams, lipsticks and other cosmetics. It is found in the family medicine cabinet, in the form of synthetic drugs, vitamin pills and various medicines. In a manner of speaking you even "wear oil" for, chemically transformed, it is an important element in the production of some of the most popular present-day fabrics, including nylons. You "read oil" too printing inks are made from it.

This list could be continued almost indefinitely. It wasn't long ago as time is measured that only a handful of oil products existed, and the principal ones were grease and kerosene. Oil has literally transformed the

The House

"If any of our lady readers have been guilty of referring to themselves as "just a housewife," we suggest they take heed to what a Memphis judge recently told a woman juror who modestly described herself in those words.

Said the judge: "You said, 'Just a housewife'—as if it were an unimportant career. I don't like the term, 'just a housewife, and I don't like attorneys or anyone to refer to housewives in that manner. Why, housewives have a big, important job. And it's a full-time job, too, beause they're kept busy all the time."

Women shouldn't use that too modest phrase—ever. They should say "I'm a housewife" with pride in their voices and heads held high.

Ask any group of girls, of any age, what they want to do when they grow up. The majority will answer that they want to marry and have a family. That is the number one career for women.

The modern girl may say that she wants to work awhile before marriage or she may even say she wouldn't mind working awhile after marriage, but she will usually admit that at the end of the rainbow she sees a house, a husband, and children.

So when she finally is established in the career of her choosing why shouldn't she be proud? Why shouldn't she important? Why should she ever feel compelled to "just" before the term "a housewife?"

Door-to-door salesmen have a term we like. When they ng the bell they don't ask to speak to the housewife. hey ask to speak to the "lady of the house." Perhaps hat is how the housewife should think of herself-as "the ady of the house."

What Does Liberty Or Freedom Really Mean?

When I use the word liberty or freedom I use it to mean the more we approach perfect liberty the liberty is the solution to our prob-lems, just as Frederic Bastiat also believed. In his essay "The Law,"

What Is Being Taught? Our children, however, are being taught in compulsory, state schools that we can have too much liberty - that individuals must give up some liberty in order to promote justice. This means, of course, that the citizens must go to some government agency to determine what liberty is and how much of it they can have. This gives certain groups power and control over other individuals which is completely contrary to the concepts of the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Indepen-

Since the youth of the land is being taught that we can have too much liberty, we should come to some definite understanding as to what we mean when we use the word liberty.

Now let's see what some students of liberty meant when they used the word:

That means that each man has a monopoly on his own life and no right to interfere with any other person's monopoly on his own life. Liberty means that no one has a right to initiate force against any other individual.

It seems to me that the rules or the principles set down in the Declaration of Independence are the only means of promoting of a truly libertarian government. True Libertarian

Death Of Sir Ernest Webb In London Big Loss To Freedom

News has reached me from London, England, of the recent passing of Sir Ernest Benn, at the age of 78. This news hit me with a personal impact, and brought to mind many memories and occasioned many reflections.

When I went to Great Britain in 1949 to make a first-hand sudy of what happens to a people's freedom and to a people's economy under a Socialist government, one of the organizations that was most helpful to me was the Society for Individual Freedom, Sir Ernest was the founder of this organization and was the head of it at the time I was there. He was a kindly and lovable man.

The Society for Individual Freedom, more than any other organization, kept the fire of individual liberty burning brightly in British hearts all during the Socialist regime — and Sir Ernest was the man who lit the fire.

It is difficult for those of us in this country who believe in the free enterprise system to realise the obstacles Britons of like mind had to contend with as socialism took over in their country and as it held the welfare of the people in its frasp for six years following the end of the Second World War.

In the first place, of course, was the apathy of the very ones who should have fought most flercely to maintain free enterprise in Great Britain, In fact, this apathy was what permitted the Socialists to take over. If the believers in free enterprise had adequately supported the organizations representing the voice of free enterprise in Great Britain, and if they had stood their ground as all believers in free enterprise had adequately supported the organizations representing the voice of free enterprise in Great Britain, and if they had stood their ground as all believers in freedom must if they are to retain freedom the likelihood of socialism getting control would have been much diminished.

In the second place, the Socialist government did come into office—and as a result it became almost a crime to own property, to make a profit, to believe in the right of the individual to govern his own affairs. The state became There was tremendous bustle in the house. The telephone had rung longer counted. The economy of Great Britain became a "planned economy," conducted by a small group of men who assumed unto the house. The telephone had rung the night before and the appointment had been made. They were tobe there at 10 o'clock, promptly, the group old huilding and the support of the group old huilding and the support of the group of the support themselves the knowledge of knowing what was better for the people than the people knew what was best for themselves.

PHS Cagers 13 Strong, Off To Austin

By BUCK FRANCIS

Pampa News Sports Editor

With a "Get a Coyote" their chief cry, Pampa's Hustlin' Harvesters departed this morning for Austin where they'll defend the State Class 4A championship this weekend.

The Harvesters, 13 strong, will meet the Wichita Falls Coyotes and it was this team that the Green and Golders were more concerned with as they left via chartered bus at 8:30 a.m. today.

The Pampans have been established favorites to down Wichita Falls but as they have done all season, Coach McNeelys' boys aren't taking their foe lightly, which in this case is Wichita Falls.

The Harvesters were scheduled to drive to Denton today and will work out in the North Texas State gym upon arrival in Austin Wednesday. If Gregory Gym is unavailable, then the Green and Golders will work out in another gym in Austin, possibly the Et. Edwards College gym.

The Harvesters will be quartered at the Mount Vernon Courts during their Austin stay.

Pampa will meet Wichita Falls in the first Class 4A game at 7:30 p.m. Friday. It will be followed by the other 4A semi-final tilt between Crozier Tech of Dallas and Milby of Houston at 8:50.

Both the Harvester-Wichita Falls and the Crozier Tech-Milby games will be carried by Radio Station KPDN.
