

Thousands flee, Barry ignores Texas coast

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — The season's second Atlantic hurricane spared Texas a second lashing, but it drove thousands of Texans from beachfront homes and hotels during an exodus one official called "more of a drill than anything else."

"All those people left and all we got here was some mild rain," said Port Isabel police dispatcher Tammy Streif. "Now they're all coming back."

Hurricane Barry's 80 mph winds battered the tiny village of El Mezquital about 65 miles southeast of Brownsville Sunday, and then hit the village of Santa Teresa.

Mexican National Guard spokesman Manuel Leon Lopez said there were no reports of deaths or injuries although the hurricane destroyed some homes in El Mezquital, a village of about 400, and damaged others in Santa Teresa.

Enrique Hubbard, the Mexican consul in Brownsville, said late Sunday that Mexican officials also still were waiting for reports from Jimenez and Soto la Marina, two small towns he said were located on the southern and strongest edge of the hurricane as it moved ashore.

A team of Mexican officials, nurses and rescue workers surveyed the storm area Sunday and then returned to Matamoros, Mexico, with 10 people whose homes were destroyed by Barry. Another team was scheduled to return today, checking first on the villages of La Media Luna and La Posa, which officials said are inhabited by about 10 to 20 people.

"We haven't explored the total area yet. But it appears there are no injuries and no deaths," said Rear Adm. Francisco Murillo Osuna, commander of the Mexican naval district at Matamoros.

Barry became a hurricane before dawn Sunday, was downgraded to a tropical depression Sunday night and spun itself out on the brushy slopes east of Monterrey, Mexico.

It struck just 10 days after Hurricane Alicia hit the Texas coast at Galveston, killing 21 people and causing more than $1 billion damage.

Many of the thousands fleeing the Texas coast in anticipation of Barry took refuge in shelters in Harlingen, Brownsville, San Benito, Santa Rosa and Los Fresnos that quickly closed after the threat dissipated Sunday morning.

"This is my fourth hurricane and it's probably been more of a drill than anything else," said Bill Dorris, chairman of the Brownsville chapter of the Red Cross.

"You know, two or three weeks ago, we had a rain here that was approximately three to four inches and nobody got excited," he said. "Possibly because of Alicia, everybody got excited this time."

But coastal officials reported no major damage from Barry in Texas and said no injuries had been noted.

Even low-lying areas that often flood during severe thunderstorms were not threatened by the rains dumped by the remnants of Barry, said Joseph Wanja in the Brownsville office of the National Weather Service.

Tourists began moving back into their resort hotels near here Sunday afternoon, and residents in this coastal city started prying the boards off their windows.

Authorities had urged people in Port Isabel and South Padre Island to evacuate Saturday night, when it appeared Barry could savage the Texas coast.

About 4,000 people heeded the warning and cleared out, according to Port Isabel Police Chief Lorenzo Rosales.

"I sent my own family to McAllen," about 75 miles inland, he said.

Hotel officials, despite the loss in revenues, urged guests to leave most of the gleaming glass-towered resort facilities that dot this popular vacation spot.

"We felt it was better to be safe," said Sim Clinton, front desk clerk at the Hilton Resort hotel. "Quite a few people are coming back, but, of course, some just went on home."

The Stuyvesant, a 400-foot dredge, was the only vessel that elected to remain in the storm-tossed Gulf of Mexico, according to Coast Guard spokesman Victor Battin.

The Stuyvesant's 20-member crew radioed that they had little trouble with the 20-foot waves that battered the vessel's sides, Battin said.

Marine casualty

The first U.S. Marine to be killed in action in Lebanon — part of the Multi-National Peacekeeping forces — is carried on a stretcher by his friends to a helicopter for transportation to the hospital ship offshore in the eastern Mediterranean. He was not identified pending notification of his next of kin in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

Two marines killed in Beirut, troops ordered to return fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem shelling killed two Marines in Beirut today, the first combat deaths of U.S. troops in Lebanon, and the Marine contingent silenced the Shiite militia batteries with 40 minutes of artillery, mortar and helicopter gunship fire.

Six other Marines were wounded and a Marine Cobra helicopter took four rounds of small arms fire during the second day of fighting between the Lebanese Army and the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems that again spilled over onto Marine positions around Beirut's international airport.

Police reported 14 Lebanese killed and more than 100 wounded, including 34 government troops Sunday and Monday.

The official Radio Lebanon said the government ordered the army to halt all operations against the militiamen at 12:30 p.m. so Amal leaders would release all captured soldiers and armored personnel carriers.

Witnesses said militiamen shouting "Allah Akbar" (God is great) captured 24 soldiers in two armored personnel carriers after a two-hour battle in a Moslem neighborhood.

Another witness said Beirut's main police headquarters in Moslem west Beirut was ringed by Amal militiamen, and five army armored personnel carriers were on fire around it.

Maj. Bob Jordan, a Marine spokesman, said the Amal shelling killed one Marine at his post and wounded seven, and one of the wounded men died an hour later.

Jordan said the Marines began returning fire with howitzers, mortars and Cobra helicopters "at approximately 11:55 a.m. on the numerous concerned positions that had been firing on the Marines."

"The Marines continued to fire for approximately 40 minutes and have effectively suppressed rockets and mortars that were firing on us," he said.

Jordan said the authorization to shoot back was given by Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, 45, of St. Louis, commander of the 1,200-man Marine contingent based at the airport in southern Beirut.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe of San Francisco said a rocket-propelled grenade exploded near a Marine position at the airport at 7 a.m. He said one rocket tore through the fence around the Marines' basketball court, another landed across the highway from the Marine headquarters and a third crashed just east of the Marine maintenance area.

AP correspondent Scheherazade Faramarzi reported from the Marine base that shelling escalated shortly before midday with an average of six to eight rounds crashing in and around the airport each minute.

AP photographer Don Mell, who was at the Marines' sector, said he saw a mortar shell hit Alpha Company position beside an airport runway. He said Marine vehicles took the casualties to Marine headquarters at the airport, where they were evacuated by helicopter to the U.S. Navy squadron off the Beirut coast.

He said the Marines were on "Condition One," their highest state of alert, holed up in foxholes and bunkers.

The latest incident brings to three the number of Marines killed and 15 injured since the peacekeeping contingent first arrived in Lebanon 11 months ago. A Marine was killed when he stepped on a landmine last year.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., President Reagan expressed "profound sorrow" over the death of the two Marines.

The president, vacationing at his mountaintop ranch, was awakened with news of the Marine deaths by William P. Clark, his national security advisor.

Administration sources said the Lebanese government committed three Lebanese brigades to the battle against the Shiites.

Meanwhile, Lebanon's presidential palace was shelled as gunbattles and artillery exchanges flared throughout Beirut.

There was no immediate word on damage to the palace, which is about 500 yards from U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon's residence. Rival Christian and Druse militias were exchanging artillery fire in mountains near the palace — an area where the Lebanese army hopes to assert control when Israeli troops move out as part of a redeployment.

The Lebanese army imposed a curfew on Beirut's southern neighborhoods and sent in troops to battle the militiamen.

Shiite militiamen armed with Soviet-made AK-47 rifles and rocket propelled grenades swarmed into the mid-city "Green Line" dividing Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors.

Begin delays resignation decision until Tuesday

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin promised a final decision by Tuesday morning on his resignation, and political leaders said after meeting with him that they viewed the delay as a sign he might change his mind about stepping down.

"It leaves an opening for additional consideration," said Yigal Cohen, a member of Begin's Likud Bloc coalition in the Parliament.

Begin's spokesman, Uri Porat, said the delay indicated there was still a chance Begin would change his mind.

The 70-year-old prime minister told his Cabinet on Sunday he decided to resign, but gave his colleagues 24 hours to try to change his mind about going to President Chaim Herzog to tender his resignation.

The additional delay today stretched the political drama which had people throughout Israel sitting by radios listening to live broadcasts from outside Begin's office.

Avraham Shapira, chairman of the coalition, said an election was possible and mentioned November as a likely date. Israel Radio described Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir as the leading candidate to succeed Begin.

"Everyone in the coalition urged him from the bottom of their hearts to delay his decision. Tonight or tomorrow morning, with God's help, he will give a final answer," Shapira said.

Israel Radio said Begin did not speak much during the meeting with ministers and coalition party chiefs, but insisted the decision was strictly personal and was not the fault of anybody in his unwieldy, fractious Cabinet.

It said Begin also did not agree with Health Minister Eliezer Shostak who said Begin perhaps feared he did not have the physical resources to guide Israel through trying political times.

"No, that isn't the reason," the radio quoted Begin as saying.

Throughout Sunday night and this morning, delegations called on Begin at his house and office to urge him to reconsider.

Shamir, 68, was viewed as the most logical candidate. Defense Minister Moshe Arens, although favored in polls, could not succeed Begin unless new elections were held because he is not a member of Parliament.

Shamir is a Begin comrade from the days when they fought the British and Arabs in an underground war for Israeli independence. He is regarded as more hawkish than Begin, having opposed the 1978 Camp David accords which provided for the return of the Sinai to Egypt.

Begin stunned his political allies and opponents by announcing in a few sentences that he intended to step down after six years in office. He agreed to delay the move at least 24 hours.

Begin, who looked frail and solemn after the Cabinet meeting, has a history of heart trouble but there was no indication he was ill.

Associates said Begin's decision grew out of an accumulation of personal and political burdens. He has been despondent since the death of his wife, Aliza, last November and by continued Israeli casualties in its protracted involvement in Lebanon.

Hijackers threaten to blow up plane

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four Arabic speaking hijackers threatened today to blow up an Air France jetliner and 17 hostages in Tehran or to take to the air again unless France ended its support for the Chad government and stopped selling arms to Iraq. Air France reported.

A spokesman for the French airline in Paris said the hijackers set a new deadline of 6:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. EDT) during negotiations with Iranian authorities and an official from the Lebanese Embassy in the Iranian capital. But the deadline passed without incident and an Air France official said talks were continuing.

Air France said the passengers included three Americans, six French citizens and one Swede, but did not identify them. However, former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's office in Vienna said one was a British U.N. official, Martin Lees of the U.N. Development Program in New York.

There was speculation that Air France counted him among the Americans because his U.N. papers had been issued in New York.

The Air France spokesman reported that the hijackers let two of the hostages, a French doctor and his wife who "apparently were suffering from nervous exhaustion," leave the plane and rest for an hour or two in the airport terminal.

He said the couple "decided to reboard the plane after their rest."

"The morale on the plane is good," the spokesman said. "This morning, drinking water and breakfasts were taken onto the plane along with local newspapers."

But the official Iranian news agency, IRNA, said the pilot told officials of the French Embassy the hijackers were becoming "more tense."

The four armed hijackers commandeered the Boeing 727 on a flight from Vienna to Paris and made several stops in Europe, freeing close to 100 passengers, before forcing the jet to land in Tehran on Sunday and setting a 48-hour deadline for their demands to be met.

Reagan chef learns how

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The White House chef has some hot news for fans of Mexican food — enchiladas with chile are among President and Mrs. Reagan's favorite foods.

In Mexico City for a week-long international conference on Mexican food, White House chef Henry Haller also told reporters Sunday that the president prefers American-style tacos — ground beef, lettuce and tomatoes in a crisp tortilla shell.

Tacos in Mexico are made with a variety of fillings wrapped in a heated, soft corn tortilla.

The chef said Reagan generally prefers simple foods.

Texas phone workers back on their jobs

HOUSTON (AP) — Southwestern Bell officials said the phone company would have a full workforce today to start on the backlog of installations and repair calls that built up during a three-week, nationwide strike by communications workers against AT&T.

Operators and repair workers started back to work on Sunday, said Southwestern Bell spokesman Ken Brasel.

"It's going to be a couple months before everything is back to normal," Brasel said.

"We had about 50 percent of our normal work force outside working today — a whole lot more than we would normally have on Sunday, and everybody will be back tomorrow," Brasel said Sunday.

About 12,000 technicians in Houston and Texas City-Galveston were told by the national union to go back to work on Saturday — a day early — to repair damage caused by Hurricane Alicia. On Friday, a week after the hurricane hit the Texas coast at Galveston, more than 40,000 Bell customers were still without service.

weather

Variable cloudiness with a chance of isolated thunderstorms through Tuesday. Highs today and Tuesday mid to upper 90s. Lows mid to upper 60s. Winds south 5 to 15 mph. Pampa received an official .03 inch of rain during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today. The high Sunday was 98 degrees.

Breakfast available in schools

Students in the Pampa elementary and junior high schools may buy breakfast and lunch each school day this year, according to Deputy Superintendent Paul Boswell.

The prices will vary according to grade-level. Elementary students may buy lunches for $1. Middle school students will pay $1.10 for lunch. Breakfast at the elementary and middle schools will cost 60 cents. High school students may purchase a lunch for $1.20.

Boswell said students from families whose income falls within the income eligibility guidelines may qualify for either free meals or reduced-price meals. Letters were sent to families in the Pampa schools, however anyone with questions about the free or reduced-price meals may call the district administration office at 665-2276.

Job Hunter

Although Kenny Downey has held most of his jobs for more than six months, "it has been more difficult lately," because of lay-offs.

"I didn't miss a day of work," Kenny said. "I like to work - I believe in giving a day's work for a day's pay," said the 27-year-old family man. Kenny is married and has two small daughters.

Kenny worked his way up from a road hand to gang foreman and machine operator on the Burlington Northern Railroad. He was with the railroad for four years.

While living in Colorado, Kenny had a commercial license and hauled freight and grain. He pulled vans and flat beds during his trucking days. He said he could get a Texas commercial license if needed.

"I'm adaptable," Kenny said. "I can pick up real fast on what needs to be done."

He has operated a Gallion crane, D-3 Cat and smaller track vehicles. While he worked road construction, Kenny ran a packer, too.

He says he is something of a diesel mechanic, "if the equipment I'm operating has a problem, I can usually fix it." However, he has no tools of his own.

Kenny has also done framing and finishing in building construction.

Kenny said the fact he's a "straight-forward person" sometimes causes misunderstandings. "If there's a problem, I'll speak up. I want to work for someone who'll appreciate me - I work hard and believe in being treated fairly," he said.

"My worst vice is - I'll drink a beer after work." If you're looking for a sincere, honest man who is willing to give a full day's work for a day's pay, call Kenny at 665-0331 or stop by and see him at 1006 S. Farley Street or call Charles Vance at 665-0938.

Emotional moment

Friends and aides turn out for LBJ's 75th birthday party

STONEWALL, Texas (AP) — The guests were a bit older, the barbecue a bit tougher and the local congressman was a Republican. Nevertheless, it was a birthday party on the grand scale so favored by the late Lyndon Johnson.

"You know, 75's not too old," former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes told a friend at the party.

"That's right. He could have been here," the friend responded.

Johnson's been dead for a decade, but more than 400 of his friends and associates turned out for a Saturday night, invitation-only, 75th birthday barbecue at the late president's ranch.

"This man loved his birthday more than any man I have ever known," former Johnson aide Marvin Watson, now president of Dallas Baptist College, told the crowd.

Lady Bird Johnson accurately pegged the night as "full of memories and full of reunions ... vignettes of the past."

"It's been a beautiful evening, full of warmth and satisfaction and reunions," she said.

The former first lady said it was a time for talk of LBJ's dreams, those accomplished and "some that didn't get quite done."

Among the former LBJ associates, there was time for comparisons of Johnson's foreign policy dilemmas and the nation's current foreign entanglements.

"I don't think he ever regretted anything he did in the Dominican Republic or Southeast Asia," said former LBJ press secretary George Christian, now a political consultant in Austin.

Max Sherman, now dean of the LBJ School of Public Affairs in Austin, said Johnson's tribulations in Vietnam would have left the president "very cautious" about the nation's current course in Central America.

Harry Middleton, a former Johnson aide now serving as director of the LBJ Library, said, "President Johnson was a man who thought you could learn from history. In the minds of LBJ and his advisers, in those early years (of Vietnam), our interests were direct. The perceptions changed after that."

Watson said the Johnson foreign policy, maligned by some in its time, was based on a simple tenet: "...not that we should rule the world, but set an example and be a friend to the other societies."

"Many criticized, millions cheered" Johnson's programs, he said.

It was the criticism of the many that helped persuade Johnson not to seek re-election in 1968. Christian pointed out that LBJ's 1973 death came days after he would have completed the term he did not seek. Middleton said Johnson was "always aware of the short-lived lineage of his family."

Christian said Johnson feared sickness while in office.

"The only thing that bothered him was having a stroke in office and not being able to function. He wasn't afraid of death, but he didn't want to be sick," he said.

In the end, the birthday party was fitting and proper. Cactus Pryor, an Austin entertainer and longtime Johnson family friend, noted the evening was "the way he would have wanted it to be, lots of good friends, lots of good food, by the waters of the Pedernales and under these magnificent oak trees."

It was also made proper by the crowd. Intertwined with the party small talk was political shuffling. U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, and former congressman Bob Krueger — two candidates for the U.S. Senate seat to be vacated by John Tower — mingled intently.

The differences between the 75th birthday party and the ones Johnson lived to see were pointed out by two speakers.

"From your Republican congressman, happy birthday," said U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt.

"You can go back to chewing your barbecue now," said Pryor as the program ended.

Democrats getting hopes up about taking control of Senate in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic partisans, unwilling to bet much on their chances of beating President Reagan in 1984, are sounding increasingly confident of recapturing control of the Senate next year.

Two big reasons for that optimism are the decisions of senior Republican Sens. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee and John Tower of Texas to retire and the Democrats' success in recruiting strong candidates in several states.

The Democrats need to pick up five Senate seats in 1984 to regain the majority they lost in the Reagan landslide of 1980. The current party lineup in the Senate is 54 Republicans and 46 Democrats.

Of the 33 Senate seats being contested in 1984, 19 are held by Republicans and 14 by Democrats.

According to Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., executive director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, the GOP has no ambitious goals for next year.

"We don't have any number bigger than 51," he said. "It is a fight for control."

Two years ago, when there were 20 Democratic seats up and only 13 Republican, the GOP was talking about adding to its majority. But the economy turned bad and only by pulling out a number of close races did the Republicans avoid losing seats.

Brian J. Atwood, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Committee, isn't ready to predict a Democratic sweep in the Senate but said, "We feel very good about it."

And at the AFL-CIO, John Perkins, director of the labor federation's Committee on Political Education, said, "The possibility of the Democrats capturing control of the Senate is greater than controlling the White House at this time."

Labor plans massive efforts in Senate races as well as in the presidential campaign. Reagan has not yet announced whether he will seek reelection.

The states where Democrats are most optimistic about winning GOP seats are Tennessee, Texas, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Hampshire and North Carolina.

Perhaps the closest watched Senate race in 1984 will be in North Carolina where Gov. James Hunt is challenging conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms. With a national following among conservatives, Helms is likely to break all records for raising and spending money. But so far, Hunt, a very popular governor, is running well ahead in the polls.

Masses dedicated to terminally ill cardinal

NEW YORK (AP) — The Archdiocese of New York has ordered all Masses at St. Patrick's Cathedral to be said for Cardinal Terence Cooke, who doctors say has only a few months to live.

The announcement was made Sunday during a sermon delivered by the Rev. Peter Finn at the 10 a.m. high Mass, which was filled to capacity with 2,000 worshippers.

The archdiocese announced Friday the 62-year-old cardinal was dying of acute leukemia complicating a chronic lymphoma condition. The cardinal had no immediate plans to resign or retire, said Finn, the archdiocese's director of communications.

"The cardinal accepts his illness with faith and peace of soul," Finn told the congregation. "He asks simply for the prayers of his brothers and sisters in God's human family, and particularly of the people of the archdiocese and the military vicariate."

Cooke, who has headed the 1.8 million-member archdiocese since 1968, is also military vicar for 2 million Roman Catholics in the armed forces.

No extra pay for federal workers to change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat packers and poultry processors are enthusiastically supporting a decision by the Office of Personnel Management that apparently will force federal inspectors on overtime to change clothes without compensation from the company.

The OPM issued a regulation on Aug. 15 affecting overtime pay of all federal employees, including meat and poultry inspectors. Basically, it said scheduled overtime pay does not apply to "pre-shift or post-shift" activities, such as changing into or out of work clothes.

The Agriculture Department last year proposed a plan that would authorize a worker on overtime to collect an additional 15 minutes a day for cleaning up and changing clothes.

Companies have to pay for federal inspection services performed on an overtime basis, including holidays and weekends.

The American Meat Institute, which is supported by the industry, said the new rule "should result in withdrawal of USDA's proposal to compensate slaughter inspectors for the time they spend in changing clothes."

A similar interpretation was made by another industry group, the National

Broiler Council, which told members in a recent newsletter that USDA officials planned to withdraw the clothes-changing pay proposal that was announced last year.

Meanwhile, the matter is marled in a legal thicket growing from an unfair labor practices charge filed last month by the inspectors' union, which claims USDA violated a collective bargaining agreement by not carrying out the proposal to require the industry to pay for clothes changes.

The department estimated total costs to companies would be about $7.1 million a year.

Corn remains nation's leading cash crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corn was the nation's leading cash crop for the second straight year in 1982, edging ahead of soybeans, says the Agriculture Department.

New figures by the department's Economic Research Service, show that cash receipts from the sale of corn by farmers totaled more than $13.4 billion in 1982, compared to $12.4 billion for soybeans.

Cash receipts in 1981 included $12.8 billion for corn and about $12.3 billion for soybeans, the agency said in a brief report in the latest issue of Agricultural Outlook.

For years, the normal pattern had been for soybeans to exceed corn in cash sales. One reason is that much of the corn crop is fed to livestock by farmers who produce it, while virtually all of the soybeans are sold by producers for processing into meal and oil.

Grimm says

Photos of Titanic are verified

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Adventurer Jack Grimm says he is "terribly excited" by computer-enhanced photos which he says show the propeller of the luxury liner Titanic, resting 15,000 feet below the North Atlantic since 1912.

The multi-millionaire Texas oilman, who also plans to seek the Lost City of Atlantis, says he hopes to bring up millions of dollars in valuables from a safe aboard the Titanic.

"Finder's are keepers in terms of the sea," Grimm said. The liner was billed as "unsinkable" when it made its maiden voyage from England to New York and went down after striking an iceberg. More than 1,500 people died.

Texas Christian University research associate David Koger said a TCU computer made a "pseudo three-dimensional relief picture" from stills taken from a videotape made during the second of the three expeditions Grimm has financed to search for the Titanic.

"I'm terribly excited with the results of Texas Christian University's efforts," said Grimm, "and I'm determined to go back next year for what should be the successful climax of all our work."

The videotape was taken by a camera dragged along the ocean floor during the 1981 voyage.

Grimm said navigational charts compiled on previous expeditions would enable the team to return to the exact site where he believes the Titanic to be resting, on the edge of an ocean canyon.

"We're using the Aluminaut and we'll dive right onto it," Grimm predicted.

The Aluminaut is a submarine which was used in Grimm's first expedition in 1980. An expedition earlier this year was plagued by bad weather and rough seas.

Grimm also has announced plans for an expedition next year to try to find the fabled Lost City of Atlantis which he said was reported by a Soviet scientist to be located at the bottom of the Atlantic about 450 miles west of Gibraltar.

He said the next Titanic expedition would follow next summer.

State becoming serious about quality of nursing homes care

DALLAS (AP) — Top state officials have turned special attention to the state of Texas' nursing homes, and a crackdown in apparent response has resulted in 36 losses of Medicaid certification in the past three months — twice the number for all of 1982.

Medicaid payments have been temporarily withheld for 121 Texas homes since January for less serious violations of state standards. The total for last year was 136.

Inspections by the Texas Department of Health have forced 36 facilities to surrender their certification to participate in Medicaid, the government program that finances nursing home care for the poor. In 1982, 11 homes were decertified in Texas.

"They've done more since June than they did the entire last year. That's about how it shakes out," Dr. Janice Caldwell, associate commissioner for the Texas Department of Human Resources' services to the aged and disabled, told the Dallas Times Herald.

Gov. Mark White has directed the health department to draft rules to penalize repeat offenders, while House Speaker Gib Lewis has created a special committee to study nursing home regulation.

Attorney General Jim Mattox also has criticized what he calls inaction by the health department and personally directed the closing of a Greenville nursing home where inspectors said substandard care may have led to several patients' deaths.

During the first eight months of 1983, a record number of Texas nursing homes — more than 15 percent — have faced serious disciplinary action.

"There do seem to be more decertifications than we've ever seen before," said Austin lawyer Stephen Greenberg, whose law firm represents many of the homes facing disciplinary action. Health Department officials denied that pressure from on high caused the increased enforcement.

"If I knew what was causing this, I'd be in the stock market," said Jerry Bryant, director of the department's quality standards division, which licenses and inspects nursing homes.

Lynn S. McGuirt, the department's associate commissioner for special health services, did concede that the department has made a concerted effort to beef up its regulation of repeat offenders.

"I guess if we were making a conscious effort about anything it would hit in that area because we get extremely frustrated with this on-again, off-again — the fence-sitters that are perpetually in trouble," she said. "We get them up to the barest minimum standards where they do pass inspections and then it's just a matter of a short time before they're in trouble again."

But she said a number of factors, including economic conditions and increased attention from the news media, are largely responsible for the change.

"No one's ordered a crackdown. We're just so much more aware ourselves," she said. "Maybe we are looking harder, but it's a natural thing that's come out of the events of the recent months... I know we're a bunch of bureaucrats, but I don't know anybody that works in this program that doesn't care a great deal."

Ms. McGuirt said some owners who have tried to keep their profit levels up by cutting back on staff and supplies have caused the level of care to deteriorate below state standards.

But Greenberg contends the worst offenders are not being disciplined.

Power to some Houston area residents to be out another week

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. crews have restored power to 97 percent of their customers who lost electricity in Hurricane Alicia, but 25,000 customers still are without power, company officials said.

HL&P restored power to 15,000 customers Sunday, said HL&P spokeswoman Sally Mathis. Power lines still were down in many scattered areas in the Houston area, including spots in western Houston and the Space Center area, she said.

At the height of the storm, which struck Aug. 18, 750,000 HL&P customers were without power.

Ms. Mathis said utility company officials hope to restore power to most of their customers who still are without utilities by Saturday. But in the west end of Galveston, which is not protected from storms by a seawall like the rest of the island, "it will take a long time" for workers to reconstruct electric lines, she said.

Complete telephone line restoration is not expected for three or more weeks to about 40,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. customers who remained without dial tones Sunday, said phone company spokesman Ken Brasel.

"It's going to be a couple of months before everything is back to normal," Brasel said.

"We'll get service back before then, but in effect, we're patching the equipment now," Brasel said. "It will be November before we've rehabilitated the system and replaced the (damaged) cables and poles with new equipment."

Damage to phone lines from Alicia resulted in an early return to work by Texas employees who walked out in the nationwide Communication Workers of America strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. three weeks ago.

Houston area workers were told by the national union to return to work a Saturday, a day before the end of the nationwide walkout was announced early Sunday. Although a tentative agreement was reached with Southwestern Bell last week, union members normally would not go back to work until agreements were reached with the 34 AT&T subsidiaries nationwide.

The returning strikers "will make everything a whole lot easier," Brasel said. Total restoration without all the phone company's workers "would have been an almost impossible task otherwise. We were just treading water. The really tough problems are still there."

On Galveston Island, electrical power has been restored to about 80 percent of HL&P customers, said HL&P spokesman Graham Painter.

But on the island's west end, "very few" people have electricity. The electric system there will "have to be almost rebuilt from scratch as though it never existed," Painter said.

Brasel used the same expression in describing the work that telephone line workers have before them on west Galveston Island.

State officials said Friday that the hurricane had pushed back the shoreline on the west end as much as 100 feet, leaving dozens of houses sitting in the middle of the beach, or even in the water.

Student beating and apathy cause teacher to leave Lufkin schools

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — More than 9,000 Texas teachers will not return to their classrooms this fall. After 16 years in the profession, Louis Killingsworth, like many others, is leaving out of frustration and despair.

The 40-year-old teacher was hospitalized for severe depression after a female student was beaten outside his classroom last Feb. 1 — an incident for which he said he blamed himself.

"She was so badly injured that I didn't recognize her," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "That's when I snapped — when I had to ask another student who she was."

The 17-year-old girl and her male attacker were students in his first-period science class.

Killingsworth said he wept uncontrollably for months. Finally, he ended his career.

"I kept wondering who was going to fly apart next," Killingsworth said. "I just flat began to look at students differently."

He said his students — and their parents — seemed to be apathetic about learning.

"There were times when I would give a test and the majority of the students would fail," he said. "You can't help but wonder as an educator, 'What did I do wrong?' It gets to the point where you throw your hands up and say, 'If the parents and the school board don't care, why should I?'"

A 1982 survey financed by the Texas State Teachers Association found that 37 percent of Texas' public school teachers were "seriously considering" giving up teaching.

Half cited financial reasons, 24 percent blamed their dissatisfaction on stress, and 13 percent cited student-related problems.

Texas education officials say a teacher shortage has forced many schools to hire unqualified teachers under emergency teaching permits. The Texas Education Agency issued 3,886 emergency and special teaching permits during the 1981-82 school year.

"They're just warm bodies filling classrooms," said Annette Coates of the TSTA. "Very few people realize we're sitting on a time bomb. They think there will always be a teacher there when they bring their child to school."

A TEA study predicts Texas schools will be short 4,450 qualified teachers this year. Two-thirds of the shortfall is at the secondary level, with most vacancies in math, science, vocational education, special education and bilingual education.

A shortfall of 150 science teachers is expected in Texas this year, said Richard Swain, associate commissioner for professional development for the TEA.

"We'd be losing even more science teachers if the economy improved," he said. "There are fewer opportunities outside the teaching profession, and that has slowed the attrition rate."

At Lufkin High School, the student responsible for the Feb. 1 beating was convicted of aggravated assault and was sentenced to 90 days at a state correctional institution. School officials say the fight was over books knocked off of a desk.

Galveston fire not caused by downed wire

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Officials investigating a fire that gutted three buildings in a historic downtown block say the blaze was probably caused by electrical problems, not by hurricane-related damage as was originally thought. Fire Chief Hugh O'Donohoe had said after the blaze Friday he thought a power line downed by Hurricane Alicia might have sparked the fire.

But a Houston Lighting and Power Co. spokesman said Sunday that after investigation by the company, it appeared the fire might have been caused by internal electrical problems, not by a storm-felled power line.

"We had electrical repairs in the immediate area of the fire completed a couple days before the fire," said HL&P spokesman Graham Painter.

"We were told there weren't any downed power lines in the immediate vicinity of the fire in the first place," said Galveston Fire Department captain James Combs.

The blaze Friday destroyed the historic Washington Hotel building and two businesses. The hotel had been in the early stages of a $3.5 million restoration.

Painter said an electrical short could have caused the fire.

"But if that indeed is the case, we're convinced it will turn out to be an electrical problem inside one of the buildings, not outside," he said.

Barry's herd

Barry misses luxurious resorts and punishes poor fishing villages

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Barry steered south of Texas' sparkling resorts and whirled instead into poor and tiny Mexican fishing villages with 90 mph winds, destroying some homes but causing no known deaths or injuries.

Barry's center came ashore Sunday in marsh and rangeland about 30 miles southeast of this border city across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas. Its winds battered Puerto El Mezquital and then moved across the Laguna Madre and hit Santa Teresa, said Mexican National Guard Capt. Manuel Leon Lopez.

A team of Mexican officials, nurses and rescue workers said an undetermined number of houses were destroyed or damaged in El Mezquital, a village of about 400.

"We haven't explored the total area yet. But it appears there are no injuries and no deaths," said Rear Adm. Francisco Murillo Osuna, commander of the Mexican naval district at Matamoros.

The second Atlantic hurricane of the season spared Texas a feared second lashing as it kept its strongest winds south of the border and then blew itself out in the brushy slopes east of Monterrey, Mexico. Barry, which became a hurricane before dawn Sunday and was downgraded to a tropical depression Sunday night, made landfall just 10 days after Hurricane Alicia belted Galveston Island and Houston with 115 mph winds, claiming 21 lives and doing more than $1 billion in damage.

Late Sunday night Barry was located about 100 miles southwest of Matamoros, and its strongest winds blew at 35 mph.

Osuna said about 10 people, mostly construction workers at a port under construction in El Mezquital, returned to Matamoros with the survey team because their houses were destroyed.

Another team, he said, will go to the area today, checking first on the tiny villages of La Media Luna and La Posa, which he said were inhabited by about 10 to 20 people.

Lopez said reports from Santa Teresa indicated there had been some damage to houses, but none were destroyed and there were no reports of injuries or deaths.

He said the fishing villages were warned by radio of the advancing storm and that many sought refuge in inland villages.

Mexican officials sent four-wheel-drive vehicles and two 18-wheel commercial trucks to assist in the evacuation.

However, Lopez said many who said they had no place to go stayed in their simply constructed homes while the storm swirled around them.

Enrique Hubbard, the Mexican consul in Brownsville, said late Sunday that Mexican officials also still were waiting for reports from Jimenez and Soto la Marina, two small towns he said were located on the southern and strongest edge of the hurricane as it moved ashore.

A 400-foot-long dredge carrying 20 to 25 crewmen rode out the storm and 20-foot seas about 40 miles southeast of Brownsville and returned to work after the storm passed, said Coast Guard Seaman Victor Battin in Port Isabel.

"It's like a Cadillac hitting a bump in the road," Battin said. "It's big enough to take the punishment."

Thousands of Texans fled their coastal hotels and boarded up their homes and business in anticipation of Barry, which skipped across Florida last week without causing any major damage.

More than 4,000 people fled South Padre Island and about 2,000 left their homes in Harlingen and Port Isabel, said Lauren Chernow, spokeswoman for the state Division of Emergency Management in Austin.

Oil companies also evacuated workers on offshore oil platforms, said Ms. Chernow.

The would-be hurricane refugees crowded into shelters in Harlingen, Brownsville, San Benito, Santa Rosa and Los Fresnos and then returned to the Texas coast as Barry was spinning itself out in Mexico.

South Texas experienced only gusty winds, scattered rain and some beach erosion from a storm surf.

NWS spokesman Joseph Wanja in Brownsville said there were reports of some flooding in low-lying areas of Mexico, but most of the rainfall in South Texas had been light.

"All those people left and all we got here was some mild rain," said Port Isabel police dispatcher Tammy Streif. "Now they're all coming back."

"You know, two or three weeks ago, we had a rain here that was approximately three to four inches and nobody got excited. Possibly because of Alicia, everybody got excited this time," said Bill Dorris, chairman of the Brownsville chapter of the Red Cross.

Exposing others to venereal disease now illegal in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans who know they have gonorrhea or syphilis and expose someone else to their disease are committing a crime as of today, and could get up to one year in jail and be fined $1,000.

The Legislature earlier this year revised state laws governing the reporting and control of venereal diseases and created the new law which makes the offense a Class B misdemeanor. It went into effect today.

Health officials hope the new statute will make patients pay more attention to their physicians' warnings.

Dr. Charles Alexander, an administrator for Houston's venereal disease control program, said patients will be more likely to follow their doctors' instructions and refrain from sexual contacts if they face possible criminal charges for infecting someone else.

Alexander said he foresees few arrests and fewer convictions under the law.

"We might get a flagrant case or two," he said.

Of more wide reaching impact is that blood tests for couples about to be married, designed to prevent syphilis in newborns, no longer will be required.

"Just look on it as a nice wedding present," said Alexander of the tests which can cost a couple $30 to $150.

In 1981, fewer than 1 percent of the diagnosed cases of syphilis were found through premarital blood testing, he said.

Under the new regulation, a mother's blood or that from her baby will be tested within a day of the child's birth.

The state's syphilis rate in 1982 was the highest in the country, at 74.8 cases per 100,000 population. More than 11,000 cases of the disease were reported in the state last year.

Houston led the state in cases of reported syphilis, with 94.3 cases per 100,000 people in 1982. Nearly 2,500 Houston residents had the disease last year, records show.

The gonorrhea rate for Texas was 546 cases per 100,000 population, while the rate for Houston last year was 1,106 per 100,000 people. Almost 28,500 Houston residents had the disease last year.

However, Potter County, with 1,443 cases of gonorrhea per 100,000 population, had the highest rate in the state in 1982.

Take two ads and call me...

The millions of us who use the products daily may be chagrined to know that the Federal Trade Commission believes the makers of Bufferin, Excedrin and Bayer Aspirin may have been exaggerating the relative merits of the products in their advertising.

Ten years after first advancing that startling charge, the FTC has now ordered the drug manufacturers to stop claiming that their products are superior to the others without backing it up with at least two "well-controlled clinical studies" that "the scientific community generally accepts as showing that one product is better," said FTC Commissioner David A. Clanton.

The manufacturers have spent 10 years in expensive and time-consuming efforts to rebut the FTC's charges. And now, having been ordered to change the ads, they expect to appeal the ruling in the courts, assuring even more public pummeling by the guardians of consumers. Does this sound like the response we would expect of greedy scoundrels caught in an egregious act of defrauding the public? The FTC has tried, but failed, to make them run and hide, which would have been the best course for the guilty.

Outright fraud in advertising is troublesome to us all, and not less so to manufacturers who depend on credibility with their customers for long-term success in the market. But few people expect to get pristine, objective evidence in advertisements. We know that whatever "evidence" is advanced is done so to put the advertisers' product in the best light.

"More doctors recommend Bufferin" (one of the claims the FTC found offensive) may get us to try a product once. If the claim is really important to us, we may seek documentation from the manufacturer. If we're not satisfied, we can discontinue using the product. Or we can weigh the advertising claims against our own experience with the product.

In other words, consumers, in their buying patterns, decide just what standard of "scientific evidence" is acceptable.

In the case of non-prescription pain relievers, millions of such "clinical tests" are carried out every day, by millions of customers who would not return to the product if it did not meet their own standards.

Bufferin, Excedrin and Bayer have not achieved their pre-eminent places in the market by hoodwinking a gullible public. Competition among the manufacturers has assured customers of a choice among high-quality, effective products. Advertising freedom is an important part of the competition.

It is difficult to see how we benefit from the "protection" of government agencies such as the FTC when it dictates the content of advertising. In fact, consumers may be expected to lose in the end because of the costs of the manufacturers' having to defend against and comply with such government interference.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Aug. 29, the 241st day of 1983. There are 124 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 29, 1782, nearly 1,100 people drowned when a British man-of-war sank while being repaired in the harbor at Portsmouth, England.

On this date:

In 1533, the last Inca king of Peru, Atahualpa, was strangled on the orders of Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro.

In 1817, the first abolition newspaper in the United States, The Philanthropist, was published in Mount Pleasant, Ohio.

In 1901, temperance crusader Carry Nation swung her hatchet in an attack on a New York saloon owned by former heavyweight boxing champion John L. Sullivan.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur left the Philippines for Japan to accept the Japanese surrender.

Ten years ago: A federal judge ordered President Richard Nixon to surrender White House tapes involving the Watergate case for the judge's private examination — and Nixon said he would appeal the ruling.

Dud has a plan to sell the old brown mare

By SLIM RANGLES

"Larry and me, we figure we can't lose on this deal. No sir..."

When Dud's pickup is parked outside the feed store, he's usually inside...and he was, holding court on the harness repair bench as he fiddled with a broken headstall.

Walt Simmons was trying to do his books and just grunted occasionally at the old horse trader.

Dud ran a hand over two-days' growth of beard and grinned.

"Now the idea came to us when we were over to the horse auction at the county seat last night. It didn't come all of a once, either. No sir. Larry and me we took that old brown mare of mine over to see what we'd get for her...and maybe pick up something for the kids to ride at the same time. Larry likes to hang around a bit...learn something from an old pro. I guess...so I hauled him along.

"Well, sir, here they was...auctioning off registered horses all night long. And it was them registered horses what brought the good money.

"Now I don't mind registered horses. Used to be there was registered Quarter horses and registered Thoroughbreds and Morgans and A-rabs and such as that. Well, times has changed...changed a bunch. Coffee ready? Thanks, I will..."

The old dog, Buster, got up reluctantly and moved arthritically away from the stove.

"Now like I said, it's different now. Now they register darn near everything that has four legs, a tail, and is bigger than a cocker spaniel. You wouldn't believe it, Walt.

"They have registered buckskins, and registered palominos, and registered pintos, for Pete's sake. They'll even register something if it's only half pinto or spotted or whatever. Well, that just saved the dog in half with a brick for me, so we brought the mare home.

"So we're drivin' along, thinking how in the world am I going to get more'n fifty bucks for a plain brown horse...oh, she's a good one, of course...but she is just horse...when Larry says to me...like he was readin' my mind...he says, 'Dud, it's too bad they don't register brown horses, 'cause Old Spook'd be worth something then."

"Larry don't always say much, as you know, but by Harry, he comes up with a good one every now and then."

"So here it is, Walt. I figure to register brown horses. Ever' last blasted one I can find. We'll just get some literature printed up and start our own registry. Call it 'Brown Horses of the World' or something like that.

"Charge a guy ten bucks to register his brown horse, and the horse is worth an easy hundred dollars more at the sale. It's an investment for them, see? We'll just give each horse a little certificate with some froo-froo fancy borders on it, and that's it. All the horse has to do is be brown."

Walt looked up from his paperwork and walked to the coffee pot.

"Dud, did it ever occur to you that registries were set up to keep bloodlines of the best animals in a breed pure? If you go registering every brown horse in the country, do you realize what you'll be doing?"

"Yessir," Dud grinned. "I'll be doing just what ever'body else has been doing in the horse business for the past 15 years."

The churches don't like certain kinds of war

By PAUL GREENBERG

However inconsistent the World Council of Churches may be in its political twists and turns, there is at least one constant in its various pronouncements: A moral myopia that never seems to change.

The Council's just-concluded Assembly denounced the use or even deployment of nuclear weapons as a "crime against humanity." It is always nuclear war that is denounced in such resolutions - not war itself. If the World Council were to condemn war in general it might have to censure the Soviets for their invasion of Afghanistan, which it steadfastly refuses to do.

The World Council has condemned the U.S. for supplying arms to its friends in Central America, but not the Soviet Union for waging war against the Afghans. It explicitly rejected a resolution calling on the Soviet Union to withdraw from Afghanistan in favor of a statement that looked with favor on the Russians' remaining there pending an "overall political settlement," which is just the sort of euphemism for burying freedom that Pravda would use. It should be noted that American delegates voted with those from the Communist bloc for a resolution against supplying arms to the Afghans. That way, the Soviets could have an even easier time imposing their will on another country. Religion, ain't it wonderful?

In its concentration on the wickedness of even deploying nuclear weapons, the World Council skipped breezily over nettlesome questions - like how long the Second World War might have gone if the U.S. had not used them. For example: At the annual observance of Hiroshima's destruction, an aging Japanese professor recalled that he had weighed less than 90 pounds and could scarcely climb a flight of stairs in 1945, when war's end found him in Tokyo. "I couldn't have survived another month," he said. "If the military had its way, we would have fought until all 80 million Japanese were dead. Only the atomic bomb saved me. Not me alone, but many Japanese, ironically speaking, were saved by the atomic bomb." And how many American lives would have been lost if it had been necessary to invade the home islands? The Japanese professor asked to remain anonymous. His is not a fashionable view, but it does indicate the complexity of the questions the World Council of Churches deals with so glibly.

Nor would any assembly of the World Council of Churches be complete without a good word for what was, at least before the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, the world's leading collection of terrorists - the Palestine Liberation Organization. The World Council's resolution on the Middle East called for including the PLO in peace negotiations, though at the moment the PLO's principal factions seem bent on liquidating each other.

The Council's stance should come as no surprise; an ecclesiastical assembly that can ignore aggression in the case of the Soviets should have no trouble condoning terrorism in the PLO's case. At one point, the resolution warns Christians who may still feel guilty about what happened to the Jews of Europe not to let that overly affect their view of the Middle East. As usual, nothing may make it harder for the World Council of Churches to sell its orthodox globalism than the lessons of history.

Busy echoing Soviet propaganda, the World Council did not pause to take up a couple of letters from religious dissenters in the Soviet Union. Perhaps that was to be expected. In 1975, a Russian priest named Gleb Yakunin appealed to the World Council's assembly in Nairobi that year. His letter didn't have much of an effect on the Council, but it was useful as evidence when he was sentenced to five years in a Soviet labor camp. This year a similar appeal was received from a deacon of the Russian Orthodox Church, Vladimir Rusak. The deacon wrote that he did not "deceive myself that there is much likelihood that my letter will be read out loud at one of the Assembly's sessions. It is very difficult for us to reach you, much more difficult than to reach God." It is a striking letter, and should make splendid evidence, too.

The World Council cannot act on such appeals, it is explained, because that would be to interfere in "internal" politics. The Council does not have any such inhibitions about denouncing South Africa's internal policies. The Council's righteous indignation tends to be highly selective, and its approach to the Soviet Union might be summed up as: Speak euphemism to power. Not since Billy Graham took his very guided tour of Moscow have Soviet crimes been so discreetly overlooked. If the World Council of Churches ever put its resolutions to music, the appropriate instruments would be tinkling cymbals and sounding brass.

Can all those Americans associated with the World Council of Churches through their congregations be aware of what drive is being repeated in their name, what brutalities ignored, what crimes condoned? Why, except perhaps to observe an instructive model of Pharisaic hypocrisy, do they put up with it?

The World Council of Churches is a particularly blatant example of today's myopic morality, but it is not exceptional. The same dubious themes and gaping omissions can be spotted in congressional debates, newspaper editorials, and fashions.

Some real hot news for summertime

By PAUL HARVEY

In the Kansas City trial of former television anchorwoman, Christine Craft, the jury was not allowed to hear that her male co-anchor had also been demoted because of "low ratings."

Whatever the other significance of this trial, electronic media "news" has been exposed as the show biz it is.

President Reagan replied, "You're tempting me!" - when a reporter asked whether the debatable brouhaha was not merely "summer theatre."

July and August are dog days for the legion of competing media people in Washington, D.C.

They have to "come up with something" to justify their allotted 60 seconds and with Congress in recess and bureaucrats on vacations it's not easy.

Newsmongers who prefer to sanctify their profession with the aura of a divine calling are reduced to speculation over Roger Mudd's reassignment and George Brett's sticky bat.

Media people, frequently critical of the National Enquirer and the Star become imitators of those tabloids, emphasizing if not exaggerating "miracle cures" and impending ecological disasters.

To keep readers reading and listeners listening, the professional purists compromise their purity. Those who spell "Eye-Witness News" with a capital "I" defer in practice to that which they deplore in principle, "the mountainous molehill."

Especially since Watergate journalism graduates have been taught to look down their noses at tabloids though tabloid journalism may be more honest!

Tabloids do not take themselves seriously; unabashedly they sensationalize.

The purist journalist sensationalizes surreptitiously. Especially during crucial rating periods, he emulates their preoccupation with prostitution, personal hygiene, child molestation.

But he justifies it by attaching righteous significance to the trivial.

Newshandling is not an Evangelical calling; it's show biz. Any presumption otherwise is conspicuous pretense.

Face it, the National Enquirer and the Star and such bring into the reading room a lot of people who otherwise would have no interest in national or world affairs.

Electronic newscasts too frequently tend to bestow a mantle of emotional abstinence on their guru, Edward R. Murrow, which he would never have claimed for himself.

Most new Texas laws become effective today or Thursday

AUSTIN (AP) — Most of the new laws and law changes approved by the regular and special sessions of the 68th Legislature become effective today or Thursday, which is Sept. 1.

However, most Texans will probably not be able to tell any immediate difference. For instance, beginning Thursday, private citizens will no longer be able to buy armor-piercing bullets.

There will be no new taxes to pay, because legislators passed no tax bills.

Some of the major bills that will have widespread public effect — such as increased penalties for DWI or doubling of auto liability insurance — will not be effective until Jan. 1.

Easily the most important measure to take effect next week is the $30.8 billion biennial state spending bill. On Thursday the more than 200 state agencies and departments will begin operating in the 1984-85 biennium. The comptroller has estimated there will be that much state revenue coming in the next two years.

Of the 1,102 bills finally approved by the Legislature and the governor most become effective today, which is 90 days after the May 30 end of the regular session as prescribed by the constitution. Others will be effective Sept. 1, the start of the state's new two-year business period.

About 200 measures that got a two-thirds vote of both houses became effective immediately. Still other laws or law changes go into effect Jan. 1, the start of the calendar year.

If the comptroller's estimate of how much money the state expects to get falls short, the governor likely will have to call a special session to find new sources of revenue, because Texas operates on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Here are some major bills that will become effective this week:

— Operations of the Public Utility Commission will be revised to include a state-paid lawyer to speak for consumers, effective Thursday.

— On Sept. 1, the State Ethics Advisory Commission will be established. The nine-member commission has no investigatory powers, but will issue advisory opinions to state officers, employees and candidates on political contributions, conflicts of interests and other matters. The same law prohibits officeholders from putting political contributions to purely personal use. The secretary of state is authorized, for the first time, to monitor all campaign contribution and expense reports to see if they comply with the law.

— Beginning today, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission will have regulatory powers over all Texas counties. In the past, as many as 71 counties gave commissioners authority to veto any game and fish regulations made by the state agency. The law does not affect migrating waterfowl or shrimp. At the same time the commission will be increased from six to nine members. A $5 saltwater fishing stamp approved by the Legislature was vetoed by the governor.

— On Sept. 1, the attorney general will take over enforcement of state laws concerning child support payments, which has been in the hands of the Department of Human Resources. If voters approve a constitutional change in November, state courts will be able to order up to one-third of a person's wages be held back to pay court-ordered child support. Currently, the constitution prohibits the taking of wages by creditors.

— The Railroad Commission, effective Sept. 1, will be able to impose fines up to $10,000 a day for pollution and safety violations in oil and gas drilling applications. A special $100 fee will be charged applicants for drilling permits for a special fund to plug abandoned wells. Another bill, also effective Thursday, would let the commission prohibit the use of freshwater in waterflood projects.

— Fees charged by more than 20 state agencies will be increased Thursday.

— The Texas Communicable Disease Control Act becomes effective Thursday and will require school authorities, day-care centers and most health professions, as well as physicians, to report all communicable diseases to the Texas Department of Health.

— The "whistle-blower" law takes effect Thursday. It is designed to protect employees who report violations of law within government agencies. Every agency must prominently display a notice of the statute.

— A change in the motor vehicle sales tax is effective Sept. 1. Counties with large collections of the tax must send them to the comptroller daily and weekly instead of monthly.

— On Oct. 1, there will be a new law changing the payment date of sales taxes collected by businessmen. Sales tax returns will be due the 20th of the month instead of the last day, and large taxpayers will report monthly instead of quarterly.

— On Sept. 1, a new law deregulates the transportation of certain agricultural commodities. Products being transported from farms and ranches to the point of first manufacture will be exempt from Railroad Commission regulation, as long as the farmer, rancher or cooperative retains ownership of the commodities.

— Some of the other major bills passed by the Legislature: — The so-called "lemon law", which allows unhappy new car owners to complain to the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission, became effective June 19. The commission can order the manufacturer to pay the consumer for the car or replace it.

— A bill that reduced the amount of interest consumer have to pay on bank credit card purchases went into effect July 1. The law dropped the former minimum 18 percent and 24 percent maximum interest to 14 and 22.

— The much-discussed bill to strengthen laws against driving while intoxicated is effective Jan. 1. The law says a person with a blood-alcohol content of 0.10 is automatically considered drunk. The attorney general ruled last week that the provision was constitutional.

— Another controversial law change taking effect Jan. 1 sets up a conflict-of-interest statute for all county commissioners and city council members, along with all other local officials. Under the measure, any officeholder who would benefit financially from any matter pending before him must publicly disclose the interest and abstain from voting on it.

TDC may have staffing problem

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) —

Texas Department of Corrections officials say they need $25 million in order to comply with a federal court order to hire nearly 800 more guards.

The last session of the Texas Legislature authorized the hiring of 1,000 guards in the next two years to bring the number of TDC guards to about 5,350. But a 1982 federal court order says the prison system must employ 6,125 guards in less than 18 months.

"It looks like they may have a serious problem meeting the January 1985 deadline," said Jim Arnold, budget examiner with the Legislative Budget Board.

Arnold said it is too early to tell whether the TDC will need an emergency appropriation to hire more guards or whether the prison system could hire the additional employees by transferring money from other parts of its $619 million, two-year budget.

The agreement to hire more guards was part of a June 1982 plan approved by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice. Justice, in a lawsuit brought by prison inmates, ordered TDC to eliminate the use of convicts to supervise other convicts.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Sunday that the guard shortage could have been avoided if the Legislature had approved the 1,777 guards the TDC requested.

However, Arnold said the Legislature approved money for the prison staff before seeing a TDC report that recommended the additional guards.

Because of the guard shortage, some guards have had to work extra hours without pay and won't be able to take compensatory time off, officials said.

Prison officials do not know how many guards have had to work extra hours.

Experiment may hasten breakthrough in diabetes research

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists are sending live pancreas cells into orbit aboard Challenger in what they hope will be a major step toward conquering diabetes.

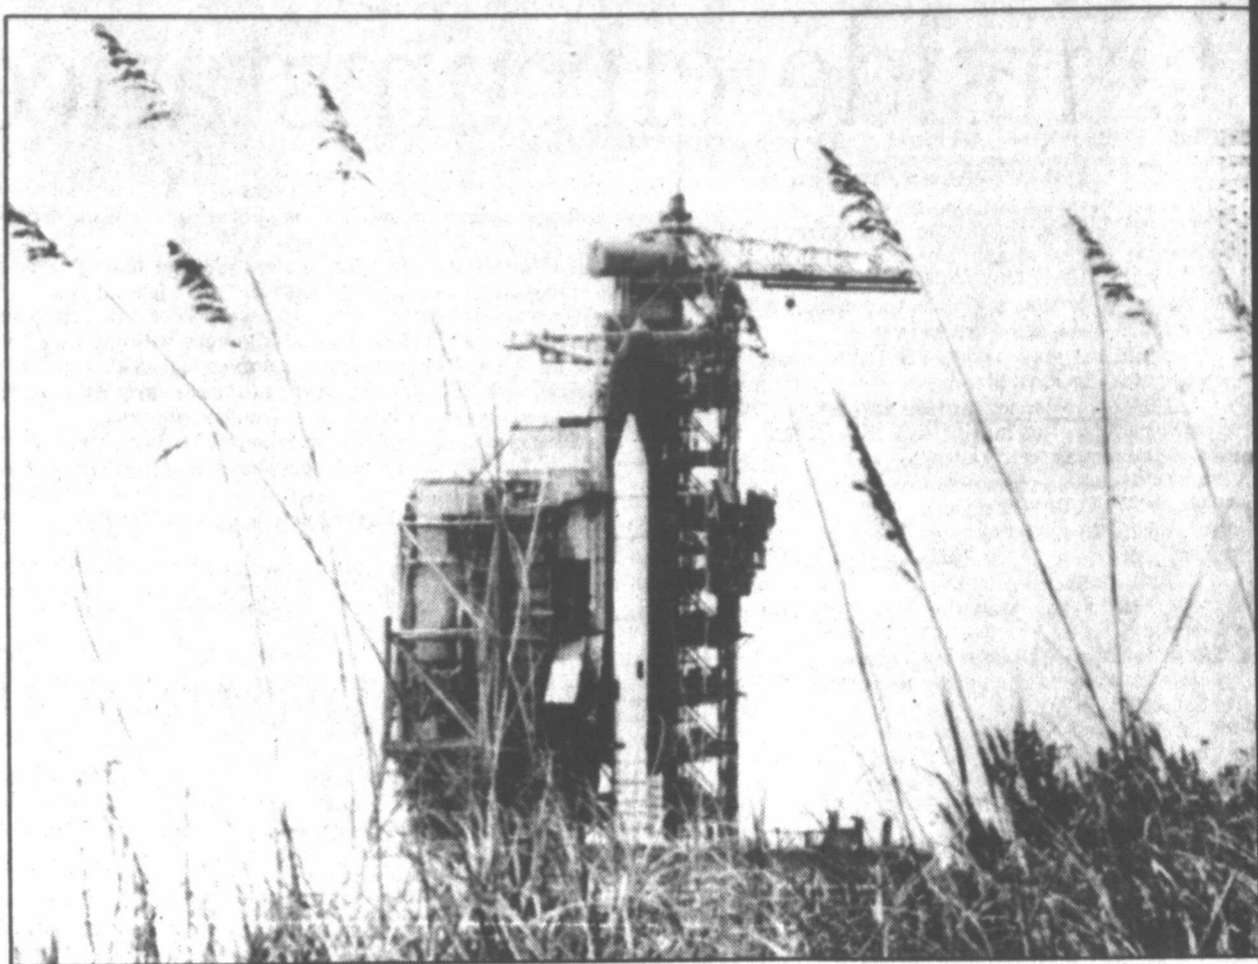

Samples taken from the pancreases of dogs will be passed through a device on board the shuttle that uses electricity and weightlessness to separate types of cells. The device is called the continuous flow electrophoresis system, or CFES.

Dr. David Scharp of the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis said the goal of the project is to extract pure beta cells from the pancreatic samples. Beta cells in the pancreas produce insulin, a hormone that regulates blood sugar levels in the body.

Diabetes, which strikes both young and aged people, develops when the pancreas stops producing enough insulin to process sugar and causes small blood vessels to thicken and close.

There is presently no cure, although victims can control their condition, to some extent, by taking doses of insulin through tablets or injections. But if unchecked the disease can lead to heart disease, kidney failure,

NASA counting down towards fireworks launch early Tuesday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's countdown headed flawlessly today toward what should be the most spectacular launch in the 33-year history of this spaceport — a fiery nocturnal liftoff at 2:15 a.m. EDT Tuesday.

Thousands of people have been migrating into the area, filling hotels and seeking spots along river banks, beaches and highways to watch the first after-dark launching of a space shuttle. If there are no clouds, it should be a dazzler, lighting up the night sky for miles around the Cape and visible at least as a brilliant speck above the horizon for up to 450 miles away, from South Carolina to Cuba.

Conditions should be ideal in the Cape Canaveral area, with launch director Al O'Hara predicting "the best weather we've ever had" for a shuttle blastoff.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration invited 45,000 guests to watch from special viewing sites at the Kennedy Space Center. Among them are several prominent blacks, here for the first flight into space by a black American astronaut, mission specialist Guion Bluford Jr. The list includes comedian Bill Cosby, musician Lionel Hampton and former basketball player Wilt Chamberlain.

Bluford, 40, one of four blacks in NASA's astronaut corps, is an Air Force lieutenant colonel with a doctorate in aerospace engineering. He is flying on the 39th U.S. astronaut flight, the eight by a shuttle and third by Challenger making the trip just two months after Sally Ride rode in the same ship as the first American woman in space.

Commanding the planned six-day flight is Richard Truly, 45, making his second shuttle journey. The other crew members are Daniel Brandenstein, 40, the pilot, and mission specialists Dale Gardner, 34, and Dr. William Thornton, a physician who at 54 is the oldest person ever named to a space flight. Bluford also is a mission specialist.

Because of the unusual departure time, the astronauts have been going to bed each day in the early afternoon and waking before midnight.

Truly and Brandenstein also are to guide Challenger to the first after-dark touchdown in the U.S. astronaut program at 12:23 a.m. Pacific time on Labor Day at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The early-morning liftoff time is dictated by the need for Challenger's crew to release an Indian communications-weather satellite into a precise "keyhole" above the equator within radio range of a tracking station at Hassan, India.

During the flight the astronauts also will test the ability of the shuttle's 50-foot mechanical arm to move heavy payloads, maneuvering a 7,460-pound package around the cargo bay.

Stable Mexican peso defies US traders' expectations

By RANDALL HACKLEY

Associated Press Writer EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Laughed at last winter as one of the world's weakest currencies, the Mexican peso has been the only one to hold its own this year against a muscular United States dollar.

The peso is trading today at 148 to the dollar — 1.4 percent lower than December, when it traded on the free market at 150 to the dollar.

The peso has put in "a marvelous performance to now," said Latin American economist Paul Levy, of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc. in New York.

Levy said the stability of the peso was artificially induced when the government undervalued the peso in December at 150 to the dollar.

Since then, Mexico's 65 percent annual inflation rate has gnawed at the peso, and will cause the peso to fall in value to about 180 to the dollar by year's end, Levy said. He predicted 250 pesos to a dollar within a year.

"For nine months now, the Mexican government has done a lot of things right," El Paso's State National Bank vice president Don Shuffstall said. "I'm just a little short of amazed (at the performance of the peso) because Mexico has a heckuva lot of very serious problems."

Shuffstall said the peso's stability is reflected in the lack of capital flight to Texas, a haven for well-heeled Mexicans seeking safe places for their money.

"We're just not seeing the flight of capital we have in the past," he said. Mexicans fearing tight domestic economic controls in the past have bought resort homes in Vail, Colo., Padre Island, Texas, and Ruidoso, N.M., or land in fast-growing Texas cities like Austin and Houston.

But most Mexicans who had money to send out of the country already have done so, Levy said.

"Mexicans now are sticking with Mexico," international banker Jesus Morales said in Juarez, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from this city of 480,000. "But the peso still has a tough road ahead."

The peso has been supported at least twice this year by its own government in international currency markets, Morales said. There also have been indications the Federal Reserve Bank occasionally intervened to support the peso, he said.

"Obviously, the U.S. and Mexican economies are very different, which leads me to believe someone's in there buying (pesos)," border research analyst Tom Lee said. "There's little going on in Mexico to lead to such stability."

Since 1982's three devaluations, the peso has been stable against a dollar has risen against every other major currency, including the stalwart West German mark. The mark recently hit 2.7 to the dollar, its lowest level in nine years — a 12 percent drop since January.

This year, the dollar also has risen 19 percent against the French franc, 10 percent against the Swiss franc and six percent against the British pound.

The only major currency that almost has held its own this year against the dollar has been the Canadian dollar, which has dropped one percent against the U.S. dollar.

In a nation such as Mexico, which has an $83 million foreign debt, unemployment of at least 35 percent and a currency worth one-sixth its January 1982 value, most applaud the government's recent fiscal performance.

create a cheap peso for export advantage and to foster an image that the currency was stable.

"It was psychological, and it has worked. The printing presses have been turned off."

Mexican experts say the removal of price subsidies on basic food stuffs such as tortillas, the promotion of exports and moderate wage increases for laborers also improved Mexico's long-term prospects.

"Mexico has continued to face down labor, has cut back on subsidies and has been hard-nosed when it needs to be — this government's pragmatism is remarkable," Shuffstall said.

"The Mexican government has played it admirably well," Levy said, praising Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog and President Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado.

Jewels & Gems

by Ken Rheams

Jewelry has been worn since pre-historic times by men and women of all cultures. Why? Usually for ornamentation, but also as a badge of social or official rank, and sometimes as emblems of a religious belief. Today, as ever, jewelry is important for its beauty, its long lasting quality, and the sentiments it represents. In the weeks and months to come, we will discuss some of the historical and modern facts about one of the oldest arts. Why not join us?

The staff of RHEAMS DIAMOND SHOP welcomes you to this column. During the next weeks and months we will be bringing you tips on caring for your jewelry as well as information about our products and services. We will be happy to service you during business hours or by appointment at either of our two locations: 939 So. 2nd, Canadian or 112 W. Foster, Pampa. For information about the way in which we can care for your gems or custom design them, call us at 323-8922 or 665-2831. We are open Mon. to Sat. from 9-5. Mastercard and Visa accepted.

Stones in rings should be checked for security twice a year.

Counselor's Corner

Outside circumstances often lead to anger

By DAVE BRUMMETT, MDiv

Whenever I'm around someone who is angry I want to leave. Because an angry person leaves me feeling fearful and uncomfortable. Something about anger threatens me. Maybe because angry persons are not taking responsibility for their feelings and I'm expected to take over.

Angry persons may have a confused agenda. First, they may be uncertain about themselves. They may have trouble at home. The kids' behavior may be distracting. Their job may be shaky with the job market as it is these days. A handicap may be threatening their well being.

Many extenuating circumstances could have led them to be angry. Dr. W. W. Broadbent says check - in time is a good way of measuring the extent of anger. At check - in a person takes inventory of where he is in life. Like learning to drive, each maneuver is taken with caution and alertness. Once mastered, driving is as easy as breathing. We seldom think about what we're doing.

Occasionally we're jarred into recalling the basics we've omitted. An accident can do that to us, or running off the road for a moment. We have been forced to check - in, to remember what we're doing - this time safely.

Check - in to life helps us observe the present situation accurately. The more aware we are, the better we can handle our controls. Old habits that distract can be interrupted by checking in. Check - ins allow for an opportunity to analyze how we have become and who we are at the moment.

Anger gets us off course sometimes. No one wants to be around us when we're angry. We're usually dissatisfied with ourselves when we're angry. Anger is a secondary feeling resulting from fear, frustration, an emotional or physical hurt, leaving another with the responsibility or burden of handling our own emotions. This is unfair. Each of us has the responsibility of handling and controlling our emotions.

They're used privately and as necessary. We have the same feelings used as we need them, but different from anyone else's.

If I lose a loved one, I become sad. For you to be grieved is unnecessary because I'm the one who feels a loss, not you.

It's okay for you to be happy because our lives are poles apart at this time. I need sadness to cope with my loss. You should be happy because this has nothing to do with your life.

Anger has its time. However, most time spent using anger is wasted. Anger is a momentary feeling, generally.

Let's check - in and look at what we're doing when we're angry. We may be angry because someone rejects our opinion. We may be afraid that another is about to do us wrong. We may use anger to make another defensive so we can have time to assess the situation.

In order for anger not to mar our relationships with others, we may need to take better care of it and check - out how we are relating with other individuals. We need to lower our expectations of others to a level where we will not feel a need for anger and the physical or emotional violence that can follow this emotion.

Give others more freedom to be who they are and give yourself freedom to be who you are. Don't judge nor demand. Blend into your personal sphere and be satisfied with whatever results.

Acceptance is a free gift. I feel accepted by accepting that which you offer - a place in your sphere, the quality and quantity of yourself offered without negotiation, compromise or debate. By accepting your gift, anger is replaced with a good feeling that brings us closer.

When I stop struggling for your approval or with my fear of rejection, I become a self satisfied individual who can live in your presence without anger. Should an angry feeling arise, I'm able to control its intensity and assume responsibility for it. Anger has a place in life or it would not be available to us. Like other emotions, once out of control it can be destructive. Controlled, anger is a useful emotion for understanding relationships from a different direction. Unfortunately it means we need to pay more attention, regroup and live up to our end of the contract we made in the beginning - to be happy, get along together as special, unique individuals.

When angered, check - in to the situation to understand your responsibility and be relieved of this feeling. Check - out your neighbor, mate or lover and identify on a personal level of cooperation and human caring. Leave the expectations in the closet and forget that judgment is a possibility.

Be cheerful. It's a more comforting emotion that is better for happiness than anger. Positive thoughts, positive feelings and positive behavior control anger to the maximum.

Consumer Watch: Shopping to save

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

This summer's heat is expected to boost next year's food prices, but you don't have to pay the bill if you learn how to shop.

Saving money at the supermarket is easy - once you know how, according to Heinz Biesdorf, an economist at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., who has developed a program to teach people how to sharpen their shopping skills.

By following a few rules, Biesdorf says, you can trim your spending by at least 15 percent.

His money - saving program is called "Be A Better Shopper" and includes five basic buying rules:

- Buy when the price is right.
 - When the price is right, buy in quantity for future use.
 - Compare price and size to get the lowest cost per unit.
 - Buy house brands instead of national labels.
 - Shop in at least two competing stores.
- Following the rules takes some planning and effort.

Biesdorf says the place to start is in your own kitchen. Keep records of what you buy and how much you pay. You won't be able to recognize a special unless you know the regular price.

The next step is to get into the habit of checking the newspaper for the regular grocery advertisements and going through them carefully. Compare the items on sale to the items in your records and check off the ones that match. When you have identified the specials, stock up. Suppose, for example, paper towels which usually cost 79 cents a roll are on sale at 49 cents. If you buy a dozen rolls, you'll save $3.60.

You need extra money to take advantage of the specials and Biesdorf admits it's not always easy to find. But he argues that the cash is there - if you look for it - and he says you don't need a lot of money to start with; a few extra dollars will do. Study your shopping list and see if there are any non - essentials you can do without or delay buying. Do you really NEED shoe polish this week? Or window cleaner? Use the money you'd spend on these items to buy the specials.

Dear Abby

Homely woman longs to be just another pretty face

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just returned home from a consultation with my fourth plastic surgeon. I've always been a very homely woman, and my one wish is to be considered "pretty."

Surgeon No. 1 told me to learn to live with it. No. 2 called in his receptionist and told me I'd be prettier if I wore my hair like hers. No. 3 agreed with No. 1. And No. 4 told me that since I was already married, I couldn't have been too ugly.

Abby, I've been to make-up artists, hair stylists and I keep my weight down, but I'm still an ugly woman. I've raised a son and made a good home for my husband. Now I want to do something for myself. Don't tell me that beauty lies in the eye of the beholder. It doesn't. Ask any homely person.

Plastic surgeons have performed miracles with accident victims. Why won't they help me? Not one took the time to show me where improvements could or could not be made. All I get is a bill for telling me I should be satisfied with the way I am. Can you help me?

MISERABLE IN PITTSBURGH

DEAR MISERABLE: If four plastic surgeons refused to accept you as a patient, they all must have concluded that regardless of what they did, they could never please you.

Massive reconstruction surgery is possible. Noses are reshaped, jaws are reconstructed, faces are lifted and peeled, etc. But it would require numerous surgical procedures (which are very costly) after which there is no guarantee that you would consider yourself "pretty."

A competent and caring plastic surgeon would have taken the time and effort to explain this to you.

DEAR ABBY: We live in Hawaii, which is about as close to paradise as a person can get without dying.

Of course, we pay for the privilege, as the cost of living here is the highest of anywhere in the United States. I'm sure a lot of people don't know this. That's why I'm writing.

We have many friends who come from the mainland to visit us, and they have no idea how expensive it is to feed houseguests and drive them around sightseeing.

Is there some way we can let them know this without making enemies out of our friends? Hurry your answer, as we are expecting guests in September, October, November and December.

NOT MILLIONAIRES IN HAWAII

DEAR NOT: Yes. Level with them. If they're good friends, they will offer to pungle up. If they're not, who needs freeloaders? Aloha!

...

DEAR ABBY: Talk about insensitive mothers-in-law, hear this: Twenty-three years ago, shortly after my husband and I were married, he took me to meet his mother for the first time.

Her first words to him were, "Is she pregnant?"

"Of course not," said he.

Says she, "Then why in the world did you marry her?"

Nothing has changed since.

Salvation Army sets $1 million goal for hurricane victims

Texas's Salvation Army has committed $1 million of relief funds to the recovery from Hurricane Alicia in the Houston - Galveston area.

This amount is to be distributed as follows: $500,000 for food, $400,000 for household goods and $100,000 for medical and canteen expenses. Many qualified social workers have been sent to the area to work for the Salvation Army and the federal government in helping clean up from the disaster, according to reports released by Lt. Col. John Mikles, divisional commander for Texas.

Three distribution centers and six canteens have opened in the area. Convoys of trucks are arriving each day with commodities for distribution to victims of the hurricane. In many places, the only water available is provided by Salvation Army workers and the only electricity comes from Salvation Army generators, Mikles said.

Anyone wishing to donate to the Salvation Army Disaster may mail their check to The Salvation Army Disaster, P.O. Box 1458, Pampa, 79065.

Good books for kids

CHICAGO (AP) - Parents who are wondering what books are good for their children to read will find suggestions in reading lists published by the American Library Association and available in many libraries.

"Notable Books for Children" highlights books exhibiting venturesome creativity, including fiction, information, poetry and pictures for children through age 14. The books are among those an expert committee selected because they reflect and encourage children's interest in exemplary ways.

A third suggested reading list features Newbery Medal books.

Nebraska legislature embroiled over junket to South Africa

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Three years ago, a resolution stating Nebraska shouldn't invest money in companies and banks that do business with South Africa was passed by the state Legislature.

Today the issue of "disinvestment" is still a controversy in this conservative Great Plains state, especially after four lawmakers announced they would make a three-week tour of South Africa at the expense of the Pretoria government.

"Education and information are important and the trip is legitimate," said state Sen. John DeCamp, a lawmaker who helped plan the trip and who intends to make the journey, tentatively set for early next month.

"South Africa has some terrible problems and it has made some terrible mistakes...but it also provides the United States with metals we need for our defense industry. It's a trading partner," he said. "We shouldn't act on this or any other issue without first-hand knowledge."

The 1980 divestment resolution was sponsored by Sen. Ernest Chambers, the lone black member of the nation's only one-house, officially non-partisan Legislature. At that time, supporters of the measure said the action could affect approximately $25 million in state investments.

The resolution wasn't binding by law, and the Nebraska Investment Council, which oversees the handling of state trust funds, ignored it. But Chambers didn't, and neither did South Africans.

The Rand Daily Mail, a leading South African newspaper, said in an editorial shortly after the resolution was adopted:

"The South African divestment vote by the Nebraska Senate is ominous... Not only is it the first time an individual American state has taken such action, but Nebraska is a Midwestern and conservative. Its vote could well set a bandwagon rolling with incalculable consequences."

Chambers wouldn't let the issue die. He used every opportunity during legislative debate to criticize the South African government, its treatment of blacks and its official policy of apartheid or racial segregation.

Chambers introduced a new bill this year which, if enacted in 1984, would require the state to rid itself of investments in companies that do business with South Africa.

South Africa didn't ignore that, either. As a result of meetings with South African officials, five lawmakers announced they would visit South Africa with travel expenses paid by their host nation. Chambers has estimated the cost at $25,000, although the legislators have not placed a dollar figure on the trip. "They (the legislators) can't learn anything on a guided tour that hasn't been reported by the legitimate press," Chambers has said. "They will come back singing the praises of apartheid."

Several of the state's major newspapers, including the Omaha World-Herald, have said that if the trip is necessary, it should be paid for by the state, not South Africa.

And at a recent news conference, Gov. Bob Kerrey, a newly elected Democrat in a largely Republican state, said he didn't understand what the trip might accomplish, adding that if he had been invited, he would have declined.

The controversy and a recent confrontation in the Capitol between Chambers and a South African vice-consul led one lawmaker, Sen. Don Wesely, to cancel. Wesely, who has expressed interest in running for Congress, said he feared the trip might diminish public confidence in his integrity.

The less-than-cordial public exchange between Chambers and Pieter J. Schabot, a South African vice-consul for information, occurred while Schabot was briefing the five senators in a Capitol hearing room.

Chambers walked in and told Schabot he might be violating state law by failing to register as a lobbyist, and the five senators might be accepting an illegal "gift" by taking the trip. He has asked the FBI if the lawmakers must register as agents of the South African government.

Schabot said his country was the victim of unbalanced press coverage which stressed its racial problems but ignored its progress.

Chambers, who has declined an offer to visit South Africa, said Schabot was trying to rationalize "a racist regime which has exploited and abused black people."

Schabot noted the history of native Americans who died in wars with white settlers and were confined to reservations. "Examples of racism (in the United States) don't justify racism somewhere else," Chambers said.

The other senators scheduled for the trip, Sens. Glenn Goodrich, Lowell Johnson and Loran Schmit, have said they can judge what they see objectively — regardless of who pays for the trip.

"South Africa isn't a country that you can judge without seeing," said Schabot after his conversation with Chambers. "The cultural differences, the language differences, the history of the country are all things that are complicated and must be studied to be understood."

Suddenly the blood was real: Why Aquino felt he had to return

EDITOR'S NOTE — Arnold Zeitlin covered the martial law imprisonment and military trials of Benigno S. Aquino Jr. while AP bureau chief in Manila from 1973 to 1976. As a member of the Boston AP staff, he covered the Philippine dissident's self-exile from 1980 until Aquino returned to his death in Manila on Aug. 21.

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN Associated Press Writer BOSTON (AP) — For generations, the Philippines and its boisterous politics have contained the ingredients of a colorful comic opera.

With the slaying of dissident Benigno S. Aquino Jr., suddenly the blood on the stage was real.

Aquino, President Ferdinand E. Marcos, and his glamorous wife, Imelda, have been the leading players in a struggle lasting more than a decade.

The conflict between Aquino and the Marcoses had little to do with political or economic ideology. It was over power and simple survival.

That helps explain why Aquino returned in the face of threats that he would be assassinated, executed or jailed.

Aquino, shot to death as he left a plane at Manila airport Aug. 21, said he wanted to return to his homeland from exile in Boston because he detected Marcos' grip on power weakening.

The week before he left for home, Aquino told friends: "We will bring him to his knees, economically."

More significantly, he also believed that if he did not return after three years away, he would be finished in Philippine politics. He had already contacted the Philippine military, suggesting a meeting.

"I have to decide if I am going to be an American," he said at a private luncheon April 5 when he had just about decided to return, "or if I am to be a Filipino."

Nothing was more important to Aquino than his role in Philippine politics.

His wife, Corazon, said the day after he was slain, "I knew when I married him that he never would belong to me."

Aquino met with Mrs. Marcos for four hours May 21 in New York City to tell her his plans. He said it was then he first heard of a plot to assassinate him. He quoted her as saying that, if only to protect itself from accusations, the government would jail him to keep him from an assassin's bullet.

The more Mrs. Marcos exhorted him that day to stay away, he said, the more sure he was that he had made the right decision.

Initially, he believed threats of assassination were a ploy to frighten him. But as he drew closer to departure, Aquino accepted death as a genuine possibility. He grew increasingly meditative. He saw the film "Gandhi" and was deeply impressed.

"I think in the end, he had a death wish," said Dr. Mariano Ezequiel of Andover, a Harvard-trained physician and friend of the Aquino family.

Despite his hope of Marcos' weakening, Aquino predicted a small seminar group April 20 at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology that eventually the military would take full control in the Philippines.

What he never disclosed was that in the manner of the consummate Philippine politician, he had launched an effort to contact the military.

Aquino revealed in confidence earlier this year that he had written quietly to Lt. Col. Erwin Ver suggesting a meeting. Ver is influential; he was No. 1 in the Class of 1970 at the Philippine Military Academy, became the Army's youngest colonel, and is a godson of Mrs. Marcos. He also is an aide to his father, Lt. Gen. Fabian Ver, the armed forces chief of staff. Marcos' longtime bodyguard and the country's most powerful military figure.

Aquino was elated. Even though the letter was somewhat non-committal, it was not a rebuff. He had expected no reply at all. The exile seemed prepared for any deal.

Ministries struggle to survive without their charismatic leader

By KRISTIN GAZLAY Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The ministries of the late Rev. Lester Roloff survived an acrimonious eight-year court battle with the state over the licensing — or lack of it — for his homes for wayward youth.

Now his Peoples' Church is fighting to stay afloat without the charismatic leadership of founder and fund-raiser Roloff, who died in a plane crash almost 10 months ago.

"There's always been a struggle, even when Brother Roloff was here," said realtor Alfred Edge, who took over the church's finances after Roloff's death.

"What we're doing now is just holding on."

On the surface, not much has changed. Roloff's faithful still can tune in his taped messages on about 200 radio stations nationwide, and Edge says as many as 50 calls pour in daily from parents and probation officers seeking to place troubled children in the fundamentalist minister's five Corpus Christi-area homes.

But contributions have steadily dwindled, Edge said, and the ministries' magnetism died with Roloff, who never shied from controversy and claimed to have delivered 250,000 votes to help elect former Gov. Bill Clements in 1978.

"Some people pointed out that it was ironic Brother Roloff died on the very day Mark White knocked Bill Clements out of the governor's office," said Edge, 67. "That may be going too far."

Gov. White, as state attorney general, was Roloff's nemesis in the licensing battle, once referred to by Roloff as "the Christian Alamo."

In April 1981, a state judge finally reversed an earlier opinion and said separation of church and state allowed Roloff to be free from state regulation. Along the way, Brother Roloff spent a few days in jail.

His homes first had attracted attention in 1973 when some youths who "escaped" claimed they had been held against their will, brainwashed and strictly punished for not following Roloff's religious teachings.

"I hope we don't start the battle again," Edge said. "Brother Roloff was pretty much of a scrapper, but he's not here now. We want to be left alone. We can't afford a legal battle. We are just fighting to survive, and we will survive."

Just to be on the safe side, Edge said, Roloff's highly unflattering references to White made during the court skirmishes have been edited out of his broadcast sermons.

"There's no point in starting anything up again," he said.

The Peoples' Church operated on an annual budget of $7.2 million when Roloff was alive, and needs about $5 million a year just to keep things functioning smoothly, Edge said. But not enough money is coming in.

"We need to fine-tune now, cut some things," he said. "We need to be prudent about every penny that comes in and make sure there's no waste."

Roloff Evangelical Enterprises also has put three tracts of land on the market — in Georgia, Tennessee and Zapata, Texas — and is asking a total of about $825,000 for them.

"When Brother Roloff was here, he operated his radio ministry very similar to how a chairman of the board operated. Brother Roloff made the decisions and that was it. There's no way anyone could take his place," Edge said.

The Rev. Charles Crumme, who manages Roloff's Lighthouse home, agreed.

"We faced the financial battle back then and remember, he was our No. 1 fundraiser," Crumme said. "We miss him terribly, but what we do each day, that has not changed."

"Brother Roloff was buried on a Friday and on Monday morning, my phone started ringing like nothing had happened — people saying, 'I have a son I'd like to place in your homes' or 'I have a boy who needs help.' We never, ever considered not carrying on with his work," he said.

About 450 youths, many of them sent by the criminal courts, overflow the five homes and other names are simply added to the ministries' voluminous waiting list, Crumme said.

Roloff, who was 68, and four women associates were killed Nov. 2 when the ministers' private plane crashed in a storm near Normangee in East Texas.

Edge said Roloff lightheartedly had talked of death several weeks earlier and promised to leave a letter with detailed instructions as to the operation of the homes.

"You know, I looked and looked and never could find a letter. He was just too busy to ever do it," said Edge, himself a pilot. "I guess you could say I'm flying in fog without instruments now."

Question: How about woman vice-president?

By EVANS WITT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If 1984 is to be the year of political clout for women in presidential elections, why not a woman for vice president?

That's the question being asked around Washington and elsewhere by some political activists, mostly women themselves.

Because President Reagan has made clear it will be a Reagan-Bush ticket if he runs in 1984, the quiet discussions have focused primarily on a woman vice-presidential choice on the Democratic ticket.

But there is occasional, tentative talk — really just hopeful musing — about Elizabeth Dole for vice president on the GOP side.

For the record, about the only statement politicians will make is that of course a woman could be the vice-presidential nominee.

Since 1972 at least, a woman has always been on the list of potential running mates put together by the presidential candidates — but almost never received serious consideration.

The "gender gap" has changed all that.

Because polls indicate women have a more negative attitude than men toward Reagan, the Democrats attracted millions of women's votes in 1980 and 1982. Thus, how to woo the women's vote is a much-debated point for the 1984 elections.

One way to do that, some argue, is to run more women for office. Reagan came out strongly for that idea in his speech to a GOP women's meeting in San Diego on Friday.

And Sen. Richard Lugar, the Indiana Republican who heads the party's senatorial campaign committee, has pledged to do everything possible to get more GOP women in the Senate as one way to bridge the gender gap.

So why not a woman for vice president?

The hope would be that a woman candidate would attract more of the votes of women than a male contender. But that's not at all certain. And a woman candidate would probably deprive the ticket of votes by those prejudiced against a female in high office.

Then, there is the question of which Democratic woman would fill the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Much to the chagrin of some Democrats, they can't look to the U.S. Senate because no women Democrats hold seats in the upper chamber. Sens. Paula Hawkins of Florida and Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas are both Republicans.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

- (1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

 Important objectives can be attained this coming year, provided you are motivated by valid reasons. If you desire to get ahead, it is merely to outshine others, you may fail.
LIBRA (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to let your guard down in competitive situations today. You could be tripped up by your own optimism. Rate your opposition realistically. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic compatibility or all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to give your zodiac sign. Mail an additional $1 for your Virgo Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of rationalizing or making excuses, 'less up to your mistakes today and try to correct them. Passing the blame will hurt your image.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Joint ventures should be avoided today if the person with whom you're involved can't make a contribution on a par with yours.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Subdue tendencies today which urge you to act against your better judgment. Ignoring the warnings could produce undesirable results.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be doubly sure you have competent assistants today if you are tackling tasks of which you are uncertain. Expert aid can help prevent trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be yourself today instead of trying to make a big impression on someone you recently met. Coming on strong will cost points instead of making them.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let disenchantment with your present circumstances cause you to make unsound moves today. Change for change's sake won't produce advantages.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's important to maintain credibility with your associates. Subdue temptations to exaggerate or embellish the facts.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Normally you don't count your chickens before they're hatched, but today you might bank on things which are not yet realities.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't try to be coy in your one-to-one dealings with others today. If you try to manipulate them, they may end up manipulating you in the long run.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful what you volunteer for today. Others will hold you to your word, and they may pass you hot potatoes that they can't handle.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't inject yourself into groups or cliques today that contain individuals who rub you wrong. There's a possibility either you or they will make waves.

'Drug Games' end

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The IX Pan American Games, imprinted by flunked drug tests, ended in frustration for United States boxers and, thanks in part to long jumper Kathy McMillan and hurdler Roger Kingdom, triumphantly for the troubled track team. The boxers, who came here bragging of taking 11 golds and put seven men in Sunday's finals, had to settle for only two. Louis Howard celebrated his 21st birthday by knocking out Cuba's Jose Aguilar to take the 147-pound title, and 132-pound Pernel "Sweet Pea" Whitaker scored his third straight victory over another Cuban, two-time Olympic champion Angel Herrera. All the U.S. boxers took home medals — two golds, five silvers and four bronzes. Moreover, none of Sunday's losers — Paul Gonzalez, Jerry Page, Dennis Milton, Evander Holyfield and Henry Tillman — lost by worse than a split decision and some losers emerged as potential threats for a gold medal in the 1984 Olympics. The United States ended the Games by breaking its own record for both golds and total medals set in San Juan in 1979. It finished with 137 golds and 283 overall, compared to 126 gold and 268 medals in San Juan. For much of last week, the focus of attention was off the field, on the drug tests that turned up traces of illegal substances in the urine of 16 athletes, one of them an American weightlifter Jeff Michels of Chicago. Fifteen — 11 weightlifters, a cyclist, two track athletes and a fencer — were disqualified. The U.S. track and field squad, decimated by injuries, no-shows and the departure of 11 athletes after they learned of the stringent drug testing here, had its best day of the Games Sunday. It picked up six golds, getting first places from McMillan in the women's long jump and Kingdom in the 110-meter high hurdles and sweeping the men's and women's 400-meter and 1,600-meter relays. Still, the U.S. won only 14 gold medals in 40 events, its worst showing ever in track — the previous low was 17 in 33 events in the first Pan Am Games in 1951.

Price wins $100,000

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Nick Price came to Akron simply trying to get his game in order for a late-season push for an exemption on next year's Professional Golfer's Association tour. As it worked out, it's a problem the young South African doesn't have to worry about for the next 10 years. "That is the most important thing, the title and the exemption," Price said after his closing 67 had secured a four-stroke victory and a wire-to-wire triumph Sunday in the World Series of Golf. "The title and the exemption mean everything. It means so much. So much was on the line," he said. "The money is just frosting on the cake." The money was impressive, $100,000 from the total purse of $500,000. That's almost four times the amount he'd won earlier this year, his rookie season on the American tour. Price won the event despite taking two weeks off. "I was just golfed out," the 26-year-old bachelor said. "I'd won almost $29,000 for the year, and I knew I needed more than that to make the top 125 (money-winners, the qualifying standard for next year's tour). I just took two weeks off, didn't touch a club for 13 days. Just wanted to clear the cobwebs from my mind, clear the bad thoughts. When I came here, winning was the furthest thing from my mind. I just wanted to get my game in order, maybe make some good checks the next two weeks and get the exemption."

with two out in the 11th inning to lead the Reds over St. Louis. Redus hit the first pitch from reliever Bruce Sutter into the left-center field gap. Giants 7, Mets 2 In New York, Darrell Evans drove in three runs, including two with his 27th homer of the season, to lead San Francisco over the Mets. Astros 4, Cubs 2 In Houston, Terry Puhl hit a triple and two singles and Mike Scott won his eighth game in his last nine decisions as the Astros beat Chicago. Scott, 8-4, got off to a rough start, but managed to last 7 1-3 innings, giving up seven hits, striking out five and walking two. After Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first, Puhl got the Astros back in the bottom of the inning. Puhl tripled home the tying run off loser Dickie Noles, 5-8, and Dickie Thon's single gave the Astros a 2-1 lead they never relinquished.

Card of Thanks

To the Homecoming Association Lefors, Texas As days have passed since the reunion, I have wanted to express in some way my great success it was. (and that I speak for all who attended) I would not have missed it. REUNION 1983 July 4th, the date was set. Then plans were soon begun. To contact those both far and near. A reunion, please, all come. Then one by one were registered. Lefors, we'll surely come. Our school, our class, our home, our friends. We will not miss the fun. So many gave their time and love. To make it a success. Our Home Town was a hostess true. You really did your best. The classes gathered here and there. A picture session on. From friends and classmates dear. By evening, with a thousand plus. They surely all are here. The hours of reminiscing. Were going much too soon. Before we knew it Sunday morn. Then barbeque at noon. Then came the time for gathering. In Halls of School so dear. An Assembly which would climax. Our time of being here. "Good-byes and So-Longs" fill the air. The parting of our ways. Each knowing we would treasure. The memories of these days. Muriel Guttrich Callahan Class of 1943

National League roundup

(AP) — As a Sunday player, Rick Monday does pretty well for himself. The Los Angeles Dodgers' little-used outfielder made one of his rare starts Sunday, and made the most of the opportunity with three singles and three RBI in an 8-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. "We beat Philadelphia, a talented club, and can't beat some other clubs we should," observed Monday, unable to explain the Dodgers' uncanny domination of the Phillies this season. The victory in Philadelphia was the Dodgers' 11th in 12 games over the Phillies. It was also their 10th in the past 11 games and kept them a half-game behind Atlanta in the NL West. In other NL action, Atlanta edged Pittsburgh 2-1 in a battle of division leaders; Montreal blanked San Diego 8-0; Cincinnati edged St. Louis 5-4 in 11 innings; San Francisco routed New York 7-2 and Houston stopped Chicago 4-2. Mike Marshall also drove in three runs for the Dodgers, one with his 14th homer, to back left-hander Jerry Reuss, 9-10, who earned his third consecutive victory. Reuss scattered nine hits, struck out five and walked two. Monday singled home a run as Los Angeles took a 2-0 lead in the first inning and singled home two more in the second when the Dodgers made it 4-0 for their eventual winning run.

Braves 2, Pirates 1 In Pittsburgh, Pete Falcone and Terry Forster combined on a six-hitter and Bob Watson drilled a game-winning home run as Atlanta edged the NL East-leading Pirates. After the Braves took a 1-0 lead in the third against loser John Candelaria, 12-8, on Glenn Hubbard's RBI double, Watson made it 2-0 in the fourth with his sixth homer, just before a 36-minute rain delay. The Pirates got their only run in the sixth when Dave Parker doubled and scored on Dale Berra's two-out single. That brought on Forster to replace Falcone, and he worked the final 3 1-3 innings for his 12th save. Expos 8, San Diego 0 In Montreal, Steve Rogers tossed a five-hitter for his NL-leading 16th victory and Al Oliver capped a seven-run seventh inning with his sixth career grand slam as the Expos defeated San Diego. Reds 5, Cardinals 4 In Cincinnati, Gary Redus doubled home the winning run

American League roundup

(AP) — The New York Yankees, searching all season for a good right-handed starting pitcher, got impressive early returns on their latest deal to find the elusive hurler. John Montefusco, acquired from San Diego last week to help during the pennant race, made his American League debut a successful one with six strong innings Sunday in leading the Yankees over the California Angels 7-3. "I wanted to make a good impression to show them they made a good deal," said the pitcher, dealt for two players to be named later. In other American League games, Baltimore trounced Minnesota 11-4, Detroit rallied past Toronto 4-2, Chicago beat Boston 6-2, Texas nipped Kansas City 1-0, Milwaukee downed Oakland 4-2 and Cleveland defeated Seattle 5-2. Montefusco — nicknamed "The Count" — allowed six hits, including solo home runs by Bobby Grich and Bob Boone in the fifth inning, while striking out five and walking one. He was relieved by George Frazier after developing blisters. Frazier went the final three innings for his fifth save. The Yankees began the season loaded with left-handed starters and hoped that either Jay Howell or Doyle Alexander would become a good right-handed starter. Neither Howell nor Alexander was consistent and Alexander was eventually traded to Toronto. The Yankees later acquired right-hander Matt Keough from Oakland, a move that hasn't worked out.

Len Barker joins Braves' rotation

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves don't know how they're going to make room for Len Barker in the starting rotation, but they're going to get the experienced pitcher they need for a pennant drive in there soon. "My plans right now, without talking to Len, are to start him on Wednesday" in place of Pascual Perez, Manager Joe Torre said Sunday night, shortly after the Braves announced they had acquired Barker from the Cleveland Indians for three players to be named later. He said Perez's start would be moved back a day and "I think either (Ken) Dayley or (Pete) Falcone would go to the bullpen." "I don't know a whole lot about Len Barker, but he's been highly touted for a long time," Torre said in an interview. "He throws hard and has the experience we have been looking for." "We've had a couple of young kids carrying the load and (Phil) Niekro has been the only one with experience. The bulk of our starting rotation is very young. I'm just pleased that we were able to pick up an experienced pitcher." Barker, 28, pitched a perfect game against Toronto in 1981 and led the American League in strikeouts in 1980 and 1981. He was 8-13 for Cleveland in 24 games this season with a 5.11 earned run average. He is to be in Atlanta for tonight's game with Chicago. "We have been trying to make a trade for a starting pitcher going back a couple of weeks and had been unsuccessful," Braves Executive Vice President Al Thornwell said Sunday. The Braves starting rotation is made up of veteran knuckleballer Niekro, who earlier this season had a 2-6 record and now is 10-7; rookie Craig McMurtry, 12-8; second-year man Perez, a 1983 All-Star who is 13-5 and in a late-season slump; veteran Falcone, 9-3, signed as free agent this spring; and spot starters Dayley, 4-4, who spent half of last year in the minors, and veteran Rick Camp, 10-9. "The Dodgers had really been putting the heat on us and pitching, if we have an Achilles heel, that's what it was," Thornwell said in an interview.
