U.S. troops battle Cuban force

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — American troops besieged the last of Grenada's stubborn defenders at a prison on the embattled Caribbean island today. The U.S. death toll rose to eight, and dozens of Cubans were reported killed in the invasion's first two days.

The prime minister of Barbados, one of the invasion's staunchest supporters, said elections for a new Grenadian government would be held within three months.

By early today, 375 American residents or tourists had been evacuated from the tiny island and flown to Charleston, S.C.

A Cuban force was "holding the high ground" around the island's Richmond Hill prison, where at least several dozen political prisoners were detained, a Pentagon source said in Washington.

"It's a matter of figuring out how to take them in a way that causes the fewest casualties possible, both to them and us," said this source, who insisted on anonymity.

Pentagon sources said today the number of U.S. servicemen killed in the invasion had risen to eight. Eight others were listed as missing, and 39 were reported wounded. A total of about 2,800 Marines and Army troops are on the island.

Various reports indicate at least 42 Cubans have been killed. The death toll among Grenadians remained unknown. State-owned Barbados radio said that "very few Grenadian soldiers have been captured."

Prime Minister Tom Adams of Barbados, one of six Caribbean nations that called for the invasion, said in a broadcast late Wednesday that the "military intervention" had been successfully completed.

"An interim government will soon be appointed," Adams said. It will take about three months to set up computerized registration for the elections, he said, "and three months or less after that we will expect the interim administration to hand over to an elected government."

President Reagan had cited the safety of some 1,000 Americans on Grenada as one of the main reasons for launching the invasion Tuesday. His other reasons were to restore order after Marxist military leaders seized power and to bring democracy.

"I don't think there's a more beautiful sight than being back in the United States or seeing the (Army) Rangers... to save us," said Jean Joel, of Albany, N.Y., a student at St. George's University Medical School in Grenada. She had just landed at Charleston Air Force Base.

Officials in Washington said about 500 Americans had asked to be evacuated and would be flown out within the next few days. Most of the evacuees landed in Charleston, while a few stopped in Barbados, 110 miles northeast of Grenada.

Accounts of the invasion were impossible to verify first-hand because foreign reporters remained barred from Grenada. Three reporters who reached Grenada by boat on Wednesday were "picked up in the midst of heavy fighting and evacuated," said Army Lt. Col. Lee DeLorne, a Pentagon spokesman.

Reporters from Western nations were expelled from Grenada last week, and none was allowed to accompany the invading forces.

In Barbados, an Associated Press reporter and three photographers were detained Wednesday by police who realized they were watching ammunition being loaded onto transport planes. Three of the newsmen were stripped to their underwear and searched, and their film was confiscated.

Reagan to tell America about foreign actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — While a U.S.-dominated invasion force on Grenada quells remaining resistance by Cuban and Grenadian fighters, President Reagan is preparing to tell the American people "why we're doing what we are" in the Caribbean island nation and in Lebanon.

Scattered fighting continued on the island late Wednesday against what Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger called "diminishing Cuban resistance."

Less than two days after the 2,800 U.S. Marines and Army paratroopers, assisted by small contingents from nearby Caribbean nations, landed on Grenada, Weinberger was able to declare that all American students at two medical school campuses on the island were safe.

Assuring the safety of about 1,000 Americans on the island, many of them medical students, was cited by Reagan as a principal reason for sending troops into Grenada.

The first contingent of evacuees from the island — 69 Americans and one British civilian — landed at Charleston, S.C., and individuals praised the action of U.S. troops.

"I've been a dove all my life," said Jeff Geller of Woodbridge, N.Y., "and I just can't believe how well those Rangers came down and saved us."

With journalists prevented by military commanders from going to Grenada, all information on the fighting came from government officials and radio contact with American residents.

Weinberger said six members of the invasion force were killed, eight were missing and 33 wounded.

He said about 20 Cubans were wounded and that he had no figure on the number killed. Barbados radio reports said at least 30 Cubans were killed in fighting at one of Grenada's two airports.

The president planned to discuss the situations in Grenada and Lebanon in a nationally broadcast speech at 8 p.m. EDT.

Deputy White House press secretary Pete Rousset said the president wanted to "put things in perspective so people understand why we're doing what we are."

The invasion of Grenada occurred about 48 hours after terrorist bombing attacks in Beirut killed more than 200 U.S. Marines and Navy sailors and more than 50 French troops in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

Skellytown child stable after ingesting gasoline

SKELLYTOWN — A 2-year-old Skellytown girl was listed in stable condition this morning in the Intensive Care Unit at Coronado Community Hospital following an incident early Wednesday afternoon in which she had apparently ingested gasoline.

Jim Wise, member of the volunteer Skellytown Ambulance Service, reported Carla Newman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Albert Newman, 801 Lindberg, Skellytown, was unconscious when ambulance personnel arrived at the home about 1 p.m. yesterday.

The young girl had turned blue and was in convulsions, Wise reported.

Exact circumstances were unknown, but Wise said it appeared she had been eating a doughnut that had somehow been splashed with gasoline.

Ambulance personnel Wise, Bill Daves and Gary Larkin, all of Skellytown, rushed her to CCH. They called the Pampa Police Department on a Code 3 for extreme emergency. Pampa police accompanied the Skellytown ambulance as it entered Pampa and blocked intersections for the drive to the hospital.

The girl was placed in the ICU and treated for gasoline ingestion, Wise reported. He said hospital personnel told him today that stomach tubes were removed about 6 a.m. today.

He expressed appreciation to the PPD for their assistance in getting the girl to the hospital. "They really helped us," he said.

"We're just happy we could save her," he added.

Pampa native withdraws appeal

Kevin Francis accepts sentence

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

AMARILLO — Pampa native Kevin Francis apparently decided he prefers to accept a 40-year prison term and a 1980 conviction for asking to have his business partner killed, rather than face a potential death penalty in a new trial for capital murder.

Francis, 33, withdrew his appeal of a March 1980 conviction for "solicitation of capital murder," and accepted the prison sentence he was given after that conviction, according to his lawyer and a clerk for the 7th Court of Appeals at Amarillo.

The Court of Appeals had previously overturned Francis's conviction and ordered a new trial. The court ruled the judge at Francis's 1980 trial in Amarillo made a technical error during final instructions to the jury. The Pampa native was then reindicted on a straight charge of capital murder, a crime that carries the mandatory sentences of life in prison or death.

Lubbock Attorney Travis Shelton said today his client accepted the earlier conviction and sentence as part of a plea-bargain agreement with the state. The motion to withdraw the appeal was filed Tuesday and announced Wednesday. According to Appeals Court Clerk Peggy Culp, Francis can never appeal the conviction again.

According to reports, Francis has agreed to testify against his former lawyer, prominent Amarillo attorney Jim Durham.

Durham was indicted by an Amarillo grand jury Aug. 18 and charged as the man who arranged for Francis the 1977 murder of Francis's business partner, Frank Potts, 49.

George and Bedale Hicks, also former clients of Durham, have been convicted for Potts's killing in a downtown Amarillo clothing store Oct. 8, 1977. The Hickses hacked and stabbed Potts 28 times with a knife. The husband-and-wife death team each received 99-year terms for committing the bloody murder.

The stabbing death occurred inside Barney's Factory Direct Men's Clothing Store, 701 S. Polk. Francis and Potts were partners in the clothing store.

Testimony during Francis's 1980 trial indicated the motive for the slaying was a $175,000 insurance policy on Potts that named Francis the beneficiary. The testimony presented by the state pointed out that the business was failing at the time of the murder.

Durham, 42, was also charged in connection with Potts's death. He was charged as the "bagman," charged as the middleman who worked between Francis and the two murderers to set up Potts's butchering.

69th District Court Judge Bill Sheehan of Dumas, specially appointed to hear Durham's case in an Amarillo court, dismissed the capital-murder indictment against the lawyer October 21. Sheehan quashed the indictment because of a rule of "proportionality," saying prosecutors were asking for a more severe penalty for Durham than for the other three defendants convicted for Potts's murder. He also threw it out because Amarillo District Attorney Danny Hill disqualified himself from prosecuting Durham. Hill said he shouldn't prosecute the lawyer because they once worked for the same law firm. In throwing out the indictment, Judge Sheehan ruled Hill, if he wouldn't prosecute the case, should not have presented evidence to the grand jury that resulted in Durham's indictment.

Special Prosecutor appointed to the Durham case, Douglas Mulder, has said he will try and reindict Durham for capital murder. The case is being presented to a 181st District Court grand jury today, according to a spokeswoman for Hill.

Francis grew up here and graduated from Pampa High School. In addition to clothing stores in Amarillo, the Pampa native also owned and operated a store here, Kevin Francis Clothiers.

Events leave Congress stunned

WASHINGTON (AP) — "It's surrealistic," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., of the three days that saw the death of more than 200 Marines in Lebanon and a U.S. invasion of Grenada.

Since last weekend, there has been an atmosphere of stunned surprise and incredulity on Capitol Hill over events in the Middle East and the Caribbean.

"Where is the next war?" was a common wisecrack heard in the halls of the House and Senate.

"This is Wednesday and we must be in Grenada, or Nicaragua or Lebanon or God knows where tomorrow," said Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. "If we follow the reasoning of some of my colleagues, we may well be cheering on American forces in dozens of countries all over the world."

Similarly, Rep. William R. Ratchford, D-Conn., said, "Every time we wake up, we are committing ourselves somewhere else in the world."

Even as House members and senators sought information about progress of the fighting in Grenada, there was business as usual on the floor of both houses of Congress.

In the Senate, the issue was the Clinch River Breeder Reactor. In the House, the nuts and bolts of how much the Pentagon should spend for Air Force planes and Army tanks.

But off the floor, senators and House members struggled on how to react publicly to the involvement of the United States in two foreign wars.

Support or criticism of President Reagan's policies in Lebanon and the Caribbean generally fell along party lines, but not always.

In an unusual alignment, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., a liberal Democrat from Massachusetts, agreed with conservative Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., that the Marine command failed to adequately prepare for possible terrorist attacks against the military headquarters in Beirut.

"It was a military blunder of a tragic nature," said O'Neill.

"What we need are physical barriers to vehicles so this kind of attack won't be repeated," said Humphrey.

O'Neill made an emotional patriotic appeal for the need to back the American forces during a closed meeting of House Democrats Wednesday. "I think the speaker made the most passionate speech I've heard in seven years in Congress," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass.

Lefors city council expected to set new property tax rate

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - The Lefors city council will meet at 7 p.m. today in the Lefors Civic Center to set a new property tax rate of 30 cents per $100 valuation, a hike of about 275 percent above the current effective tax rate.

The new rate is 22 cents less than the council had initially proposed in earlier meetings in an effort to increase city revenue for improvements in city services and street maintenance.

Council members in September had discussed raising the tax rate to 52 cents per $100 to increase city tax revenue to about $36,000 from last year's collection of about $12,000. Following a series of public meetings culminating in a public hearing last Thursday, the council decided to drop the proposed increase to only 30 cents this year.

At the hearing Mayor Ben White acknowledged receipt of a petition bearing signatures of 145 citizens opposed to the original proposed increase of about 480 percent. Councilmen decided they could accept a lower tax rate this year and fit the budget to the income.

Last year's tax rate was 16 cents. Increased property valuations from the Gray County Appraisal District set the effective tax rate at 10.9 cents this fiscal year. That rate, allowing for deductions for exemptions to citizens over age 65 and for values of new improvements, would have generated only about $7,700 in property tax revenue.

Councilmen wanted to raise $36,000 in tax revenue to increase street maintenance operations, improve city dump services and hire more city employees toward the development of the city.

The new proposed tax rate will generate about $21,000 in property tax revenue, based on adjusted total taxable property valuations of $7,045,953.

In previous public meetings and hearings, most residents attending the meetings generally supported an increased tax rate, but many felt a 480 percent hike was too much to ask for in one year.

The city receives additional revenue from utility services and sales tax collections, but councilmen indicated additional property tax revenue was needed to improve city services.

In previous meetings and discussions with councilmen, many residents have indicated they would volunteer labor and equipment to help with street maintenance operations.

Public meetings on discussion of the increased tax rate have drawn between 40 and 60 citizens from the town of about 800 residents during the last two months.

1,300-mile pipeline planned

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) - A 1,300-mile pipeline carrying 300,000 barrels of heavy crude oil daily from California offshore wells to Texas will cut across southwestern New Mexico, officials say.

The pipeline will cost $605 million to build, a spokesman for All American Pipeline Co. said Wednesday.

Plans call for the steel pipeline to course 150 miles through New Mexico. Construction is to begin next summer and the pipeline is to be completed by early 1986, said Ron Hinn, project manager.

The pipeline is to run east from the Arizona border near Steens, then carve a path in Hidalgo County and snake through Grant and Luna counties and into Dona Ana County.

The pipeline will tunnel under four lanes of Interstate 10 east of Lordsburg and west of Deming, Hinn said.

Holes will be bored under I-10 and all other roadways the pipeline will cross so traffic will not be disrupted, he said.

The pipeline will cross the Texas border south of Las Cruces, continuing toward its destination at McCamey, Texas, near Midland, Texas, Hinn said.

At that point, it will connect with an existing pipeline to take the oil to Gulf Coast refineries in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi. The pipeline will originate near Santa Barbara, Calif.

"This is the first major (oil) pipeline to be built in a few years and it ranks as one of the major pipelines in the country," Hinn said.

Once open, it is expected to be used daily for 30-35 years, which is the life of the known oil reserves in the offshore area, he said.

In New Mexico, All American will be required to obtain right of way easements over 91 miles of private land, 38 miles of state property held in trust by the state Land Office and 30 miles of U.S. Bureau of Land Management property.

All American considered three major reasons before planning the pipeline, Hinn said.

California refineries are not equipped to handle the type of crude oil coming from the offshore wells, he said.

"It has a heavy metal content and high sulphur content. They're only equipped to handle light crude," Hinn said.

Seagoing tankers carrying the oil to the Gulf Coast would have to enter Santa Barbara Channel, and that raises fears among state officials and the local community that the tankers could foul the water, he said.

There also is no west to east crude oil pipeline, Hinn said.

"This is the most direct route and it is within an existing corridor set aside for other pipelines and utilities," he said.

Chrysler complains

FTC will make Ford prove its cars are really built better

DETROIT (AP) - The U.S. Federal Trade Commission has asked Ford Motor Co. to document advertising claims that its cars are built better than those of Chrysler Corp. or General Motors Corp., a Ford spokesman says.

The inquiry began after Chrysler complained to the FTC and the major television networks about the Ford claims, according to a spokesman for Chrysler's legal department who also was quoted in the Detroit Free Press.

Ford will comply fully with an FTC request that it provide consumer surveys, in-plant quality audits and confidential information about warranty costs, which the spokesman said would back Ford's advertising claims.

The Ford Division has made the claims on national television and in some print advertising since the 1984 model year began last month. In the advertising, Ford claims new car owners say the quality of its cars is 36 percent better than that of Chrysler cars and 10 percent better than that of GM's, citing its own survey of 14,000 owners of Ford cars and competing models three months after they bought their cars.

Ford refused to give Chrysler a copy of the survey on which the claims were based, said the Chrysler spokesman, who was not identified. Chrysler subsequently complained to the FTC and networks and also launched advertising responding to Ford's claims, the spokesman said.

GM also has launched an advertising campaign based on buyer satisfaction with its cars but does not mention competing automakers. A GM spokesman, however, said Ford and Chrysler are the campaign's implied targets.

FTC officials would not confirm that they were probing the Ford advertisements. However, the Ford spokesman, who also was not identified, said the FTC letter asking Ford to substantiate its claims came from the agency's Cleveland regional office. He also said Ford would provide the documentation by the end of month.

"I suppose we're responsible for that," the Chrysler spokesman said of the FTC action. "Even if the data is 100 percent correct, it doesn't back up this claim. We feel ... it doesn't show what they're using it for -- a general claim of quality."

'Commander Zero' quits rebels fighting Sandinista government

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) - Nicaraguan guerrilla leader Eden Pastora has reportedly quit a rebel group fighting to overthrow his country's leftist Sandinista government, claiming a co-leader is trying to kill him.

Rebel sources, who talked on condition they not be identified, said Pastora quit the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance because he felt political chief Alfonso Robelo was plotting to kill him. The sources said Pastora - a former Sandinista hero known as "Commander Zero" - will continue fighting in southern Nicaragua with the 3,700 rebels he claims to have.

Alliance leaders met in San Jose on Wednesday but said only that they planned to issue a statement today.

In another development, leftist guerrillas in Guatemala freed the sisters of Chief of Government Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores and former President Efraim Rios Montt.

Both women were hospitalized for checkups, but relatives said they were in good condition when freed

Wednesday night by the Rebel Armed Forces, one of four guerrilla groups fighting for power.

Mrs. Mejia de Velasco, 54, the widowed mother of four children and sister of the current head of state, was kidnapped Sept. 10. Mrs. Rios de Rivas, 37, was five months pregnant when abducted June 29.

Mejia Victores replaced Rios Montt in a palace coup Aug. 9 to take over the rightist military government.

Youth suffers gunshot wound

A Pampa teenager was shot once in the hip Wednesday night at the Busy Bee Lounge, 410 W. Maple.

Robert Whiteside, 17, 1049 Varnon Dr., was standing next to the cafe-bar's Ms. Pac Man machine when he was shot with an unknown caliber gun, police said. Whiteside and bar patrons told police they didn't see who shot the Pampa teenager, officers said today.

The youth was involved in a fight at the bar about 8:35 p.m. Wednesday,

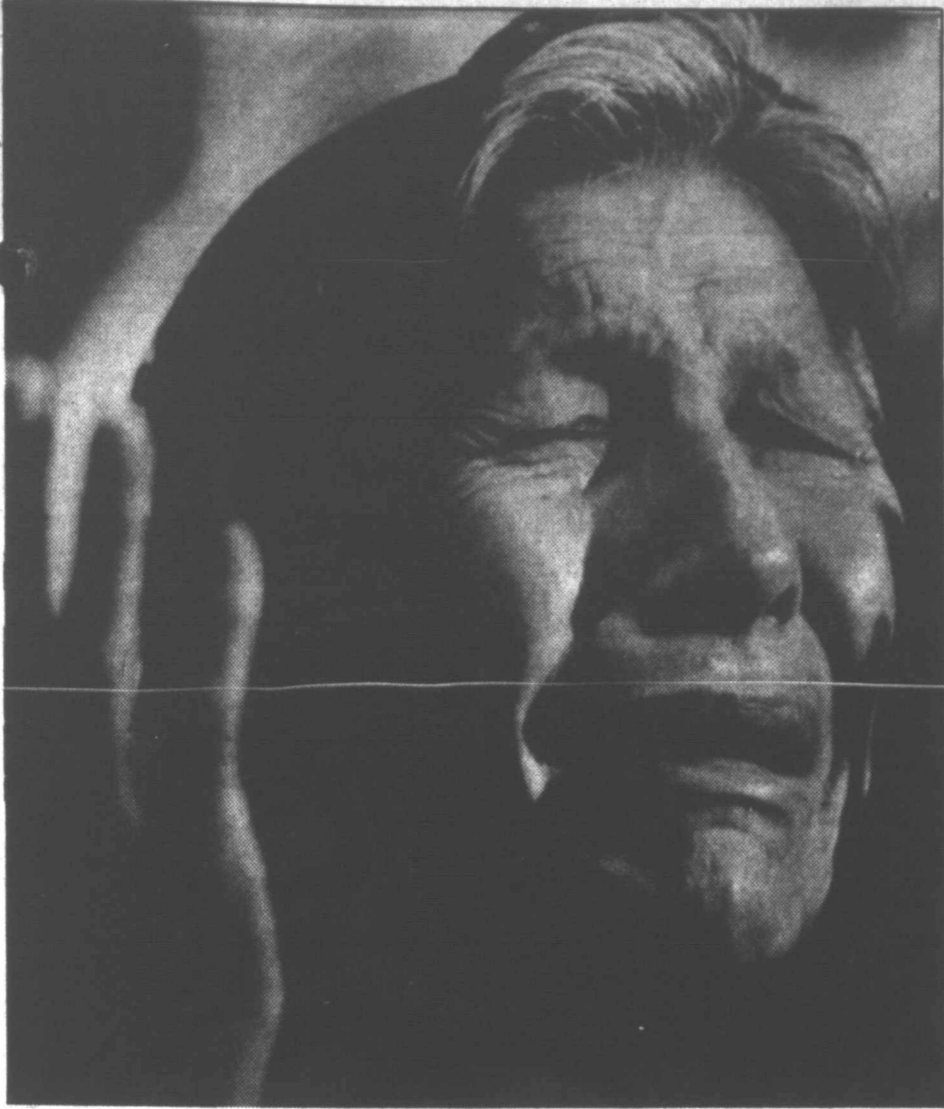

The women were freed after their families complied with a rebel demand for publication in local newspapers of anti-government statements.

In a television interview, Honduran armed forces chief Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez said senior commanders from El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras started meeting Wednesday afternoon and would continue through today.

Whiteside was taken to Coronado Community Hospital, where he was treated for the gunshot wound and released.

Police have made no arrests in connection with the shooting.

about a half hour before he was shot, according to police. Whiteside was shot about 9 p.m.; the people he was fighting with earlier were at the bar when he was shot; and the teenager and bar patrons told officers they don't know who shot him, according to police.

'Sexism' remark irks Ma Bell attorney

AUSTIN (AP) — A Southwestern Bell lawyer says he was personally insulted by a critic to the telephone company's $1.36 billion rate hike request who accused Bell of "sexism" in the way it makes charitable donations.

"My clients are appalled at what we view as the sexism in giving," Consumers Union lawyer Carol Barger said Wednesday. She complained that Bell gave $33,545 to boys' organizations and only $2,000 to girls' groups in the year that ended in March.

Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence said her comments "raise a hackle on my neck" and added, during a recess in the rate hearing, that he took her statement as a personal insult.

Lawrence said he was a member of the national board of directors of Camp Fire Girls, and told reporters he has been interested in supporting girls' organizations since before his mentally retarded daughter joined a Camp Fire Girl program for retarded girls in Dallas.

Hearings on the record-high rate request began Monday before a Public Utility Commission administrative law judge Monday and were recessed Wednesday until Nov. 3 at 10 a.m.

Bell says it needs the biggest-ever rate hike because of anticipated lost revenues after Jan. 1, when it must break away from its parent firm,

AT&T, and stand as an independent company.

Critics focused Wednesday on donations. The telephone company's rate hike request includes $894,000 in charitable contributions that the company wants to recover from ratepayers. State law allows utilities to recover donations and advertising up to 0.3 percent of gross revenues.

Southwestern Bell Vice President Paul Roth defended the donations as "part of being a good citizen in the community."

But telephone customers "don't like that you do it without their consent," said Ms. Barger. She also said phone customers don't like Bell's donations in areas where Bell doesn't do business — such as Irving, Garland, Carrollton and Killeen.

"I don't know that ratepayers are concerned about the penny a month that's applied to their bill," Roth responded.

Roth said the difference between contributions to male and female groups could result from male organizations' being more aggressive in seeking contributions.

Lawrence said female organizations have "a history of almost like they are ashamed to come ask business for money."

There were also geographical differences in Bell's donations, Ms. Barger complained. She said the company's gifts to Austin groups were 17 times larger than the donations to Laredo organizations.

In another exchange with Ms. Barger, Roth said this year's rate hike includes the $800,000 Bell spent on last year's rate case. State law allows utility companies to recover "reasonable costs" incurred in seeking higher rates.

He said this year's case will cost even more, and includes $41,000 the company paid for testimony from former presidential adviser Alfred Kahn. At a September hearing on the impact of the AT&T break-up, Kahn said consumers must pay for the "luxury" of telephone service.

Jim Boyle, public utility counsel, pressed Roth for details on Bell's plans to ask for approval of local measured service — an option that would allow customers to pay for local calls based on time of day, duration and distance of call.

The commission has twice rejected local measured service. A recent survey commissioned by Bell shows some customer interest in a measured service option. Roth said the company's "intent" is to ask for PUC approval of the option "before too long."

"I have not lost my interest in local measured service at all," he said. "I just haven't figured out how to get it sold yet."

Dallasite left his fate in God's hands

DALLAS (AP) — The third Texas serviceman known to have been killed in the Beirut bombing said in a letter to his family that he was praying he would leave Lebanon safely by Thanksgiving and was placing his fate in God's hands.

The letter from Army Spec. 4 Marcus E. Coleman, 19, arrived at his mother's home here this week.

"You get closer and closer to going home and then you don't make it. I'm getting closer and closer and I don't know whether I'm going to make it. I pray every night I do. I'm leaving it in God's hands," the soldier's mother, Dorothy Coleman, quoted the letter as saying.

Mrs. Coleman heard of her son's death after her son's letter arrived Monday. Coleman had been listed as missing since Sunday's attack on the American compound near the Beirut airport.

"We're holding up," Coleman's sister, Vickie, said. "Mother was already prepared when they told her he was missing Monday. I guess we all were prepared, but we still had hope."

Coleman was the first Army soldier from Texas known to have been killed in the Beirut bombing. More than 200 servicemen perished when a suicide bomber drove a truck loaded with explosives into the American command post.

The families of two other Texas servicemen also learned of their sons' deaths this week. The El Campo family of Lance Cpl. John Douglas Ceasar and the Austin family of Pvt. 1st Class Tim McMahon of Austin, both Marines, learned their son's were victims of the blast.

Military officials have reported four servicemen as missing in action, Texas family members have said.

In West Orange, Barbara Estes was notified Wednesday that her son, Marine Lance Cpl. Danny Estes, 19, is listed as missing.

Mrs. Estes said Tuesday she had continually watched television, hoping to catch a glimpse of her son, who was sent to Beirut in April. She said Estes visited his family before shipping out to the Middle East.

Mrs. Estes said she told her son, "I don't care if they court martial you, if they start shooting at you, you run like hell."

She said that he joked in a recent letter, "I never knew I could run so fast."

"But I knew he wouldn't run, she said.

Marines also told Rosa Bland of Arlington that her son, Marine Pfc. Stephen "Tex" Bland, was missing in the bombing.

And the families of Marine Lance Cpl. David Brown, 19, of Conroe; and Lance Cpl. Michael Fulton of Fort Worth were also notified of their missing status.

EPA warned Texas may go to court

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas is "giving serious consideration" to a lawsuit that would stop EPA approval of burning of toxic wastes off the Texas coast, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday.

"The proposed burning has aroused concerned citizens in the Rio Grande Valley and elsewhere along the coast, who fear that clouds of toxic fumes or dangerous drifting liquids from a spill could reach shore from the site," Mattox said in a letter to EPA chief William Ruckelshaus. "There also is concern about sensitive marine life in the gulf."

Mattox's telegram said EPA failed to adopt specific procedures and standards for ocean incineration of dangerous wastes before it tentatively approved last week a permit for Chemical Waste Management Inc. to operate two incinerator ships out of Port Isabel.

"You should be aware," Mattox told Ruckelshaus, "that out of concern for fairness to the many groups and individuals interested in this controversial waste disposal method, I am giving serious consideration to filing a lawsuit on behalf of the state of Texas, seeking a halt to the permitting proceedings pending proper adoption of criteria."

Merging support contracts to free NASA executives, official reports

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials at the Johnson Space Center say that 16 contracts to support space shuttle operations will be consolidated into one pact in an effort to save money and free NASA workers for research and development work.

The center, which employs 3,396 government civil service workers and 5,676 contract employees, will let the single contract for 1986, spokesman Steve Nesbitt said Wednesday.

"It simplifies the number of people the government has to deal with," Nesbitt said. "It focuses responsibility and makes keeping track of the work a little bit easier."

Nesbitt said the change will reduce the number of executives of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration who are needed to oversee work done for the space shuttle.

"We're not an operational agency. We need to put ourselves in the position of handling routine operations in a simple way," he said. "This will free our people to research and development, which is what NASA does best."

Nesbitt said it was not clear how much money the consolidation would save, but officials called it "considerable." Nesbitt said no final decision had been made concerning exactly which jobs will be involved.

"The objective of the new contract is to develop a more efficient and cost-effective approach to shuttle operations as the flight rate increases and as operations become more routine," JSC Director Gerald D. Griffin said.

"We're going to award a major contract in 1986 which will consolidate space transportation system operational support activities, currently performed by about 16 different contractors, as well as some routine functions currently performed by civil service staff," he said.

Among operations affected by the consolidation will be maintenance and operation of the mission control center, the shuttle simulator, the shuttle avionics integration laboratory and the shuttle computing complex, he said. Other areas affected will be flight planning and direct mission support.

Space Center officials are planning to meet in early November with those companies likely to be affected by the consolidation, spokesman Dave Alter said.

A similar consolidation took place recently at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, he said.

"They've been analyzing ways to cut back expenditures," Alter said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A new wrinkle in pork barrels

Pork-barrel water projects are nothing new in Congress, but the House of Representatives came up with a new wrinkle the other day.

It approved a bill appropriating $120 million to begin construction of 43 projects, such as flood-control dams, barge locks and harbor improvements. What distinguishes the bill from the usual run of water development measures is that it provides money for about half the projects before they even have been authorized.

One house member, Rep. Silvio Conte, R - Mass., considered the bill so loaded with pork-barrel projects that he put on a pig's face-mask and commented that "congressmen have their nostrils right in the trough and they're slurping it up for their districts at the expense of all the taxpayers."

The normal procedure is for an authorization committee to determine whether a project has merit. If deemed worthwhile, a bill authorizing the project and setting spending limitations, but containing no money, is brought up for a vote before the House or the Senate, as the case may be. If authorized, a separate bill is prepared later to appropriate construction money, depending on the availability of funds; not every project authorized is funded.

Of the 43 projects for which money was voted in the House bill, 20 have never gone through the authorization process.

Moreover, the $120 million that would be appropriated is almost triple the $46 million set aside in the budget this year for water projects. And the $20 million is only the first installment. Ultimately the projects contained in the bill will cost an estimated $4.4 billion.

The appropriation also is premature because the House has not acted yet on legislation initiated by the Reagan administration that would require local and state governments and private users of federally built facilities to share part of the construction costs.

Any way you look at it, the House got the cart before the horse in hurrying through the pork-barrel appropriation bill. If the bill lands on the president's desk, it ought to be a candidate for a veto.

'60s not an era to be esteemed

Do I scent on the wind yet another dust cloud of nostalgia, bearing straight down on us? Is American culture about to start wallowing in tender memories of the '60s? If so, heaven help us.

This much is plain: a lot of retrospection is going on. Public television is re-examining the Vietnam War: which I would have supposed to be the least-likely departure point for a nostalgia trip. The 20th anniversary of the Kennedy assassination approaches, and network television is duly gearing for the occasion.

Meanwhile, at the recent New York Festival, movies about the '60s or their residue, were everywhere in evidence. As Reuters' correspondent reported: "Remarks by the film makers whose movies were shown at the festival revealed a nostalgia for the lost idealism of the '60s and a fear that America was heading for another Vietnam-style involvement, possibly in Central America."

It was inevitable. Once a decade, or an era, has run its course, backward the wistful eye starts to rove.

The day I knew the '60s were dead was the day, about 1971, when I read that the college campuses were going wild over Buffalo Bob and Pinky Lee, those heavyweights of '50s television. The age was tired of "idealism." It wanted comfort and steadiness, the supposed attributes of the '50s.

Anyway, here come the '60s. We should brace ourselves. For the protagonists of this fall's big movie, "The Big Chill," the '60s were bathed in innocence and idealism. The characters have patched up uneasy truces with the '80s. Ah, but the old days, in which to be young was very heaven!

Except that nothing was very heavenly about the '60s - defined as 1945-74. It was the worst decade in American history, not exceeding the poverty-stricken 1930s. There were material advances; more common were the moral and philosophical retreats.

The '60s commenced with the collectivist explosion known as the Great Society. Federal, state, and local spending, which took 155 years to reach the $100-million level, soared between 1965 and the present day from $200 million to $1.2 trillion.

Government became a presence in every area of endeavor. So did remorseless inflation.

A corresponding explosion of rhetorical nonsense occurred during the '60s. The pregnant philosophers of the day were angry campus radicals, on whose words, incredibly enough, hung adults from all walks of life - college presidents, sociologists, theologians, U.S. senators. The quintessential 1960's pronouncement, I have always thought, was reported by John R. Coyne in his account of the Berkeley riots, "The Kumquat Statement." As a Berkeley building, set afire by student protesters, burned to the ground, a faculty member mused thoughtfully: "They're trying to tell us something."

Indeed they were. The message that the '60s idealists wished to convey was that their country was a noisome dictatorship run by the corporate elite. From which condition, however, America (so the protesters like spell it) would be delivered by The Kids.

The Kids, self-anointed saviors as they were, urged various courses: in Vietnam, capitulation to the Viet Cong; at home, people's socialism and do - it yourself morality. Much of this program, regrettably, got enacted.

As the tide of nostalgia washes over us, let it be remembered that '60s "idealism" was profoundly anti-American. A lot of this anti-Americanism, to be sure, was of the merely fashionable variety. As the fashions changed, it died down.

Yet the mark of the '60s is on us now. The pacifism and neutralism of the era live on in calls for America to disarm and quit opposing Soviet designs. The moral legacy of the '60s is, broadly speaking, the widespread disdain for norms and standards of any kind; narrowly speaking, it is drugs and illiterate high school graduates and disintegrating families.

Happily, nostalgia is as much fad as anything else. The '50s fad didn't turn back the clock of the '70s. No more, I trust, will any '60s fad transform the '80s.

But of course you judge a society partly by what it esteems. A society that, even in retrospect, esteems the '60s is a society you have greatly to wonder about.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1983. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Oct. 27, 1858 - 125 years ago - the 28th president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City.

On this date:

In 1880, on his 22nd birthday, Theodore Roosevelt married Alice Lee.

In 1904, the first rapid transit subway, the IRT, opened in New York City.

In 1920, the League of Nations moved its headquarters from London to Geneva, Switzerland.

And, in 1938, DuPont announced the invention of nylon.

Ten years ago: A United Nations peacekeeping force arrived in Cairo, Egypt, to attempt to set up a lasting cease-fire between Israeli and Arab forces.

Five years ago: Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

One year ago: Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev told military leaders in Moscow that the United States was threatening to push the world into a nuclear war.

Today's birthdays: Producer Fred DeCordova is 73 years old. Actress Nanette Fabray is 63.

Thought for today: "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." - President Abraham Lincoln

Rebelling against peace, quiet

September 20 of this year 100,000 Filipinos rampaged through the streets of Manila shouting "Revolution! Revolution!" Theirs was no "revolution."

Before daybreak there were a dozen dead and hundreds wounded on the bloody streets.

But theirs was no revolution. These were not hungry people who sought to storm the Palace. Manila, comparatively, is prosperous.

These, ostensibly protesting the Marcos regime had nobody better to offer.

But political incendiaries in their midst - using the assassination of Aquino as their excuse - rallied a mob.

It's easy anywhere - especially in the so-called Third World - to rally a mob.

Let me tell you how easy.

Any fourth - string, bush-league evangelist can announce a religious rally in Jakarta or Seoul and a flood tide of half a million will converge.

Most will not know his name, will not understand his language, but for the eternally bored it is "something to do," it is "someplace to be."

Evangelists used to credit "a miracle of the Lord."

Some, if only by implication, would credit their own personal magnetism.

Until it was discovered that anybody can do it; that most anybody can attract a crowd in those nations of abundant ennui.

Or mobilize a demonstration.

Or incite a riot.

Colonialism - one nation seeking to rule another - failed because it is so easy for people who are unhappy, frustrated, bored...

And we all periodically are unhappy, frustrated, bored...

It is so easy to focus resentment on "outside" rules.

In nations now independent of foreign domination, any such restiveness must be taken out on the incumbent government - whichever.

I count forty nations presently at war with themselves - and the assortment of justification - ancient hatreds, religious differences, tribal rivalries - all boil down mostly to abject, chronic public boredom.

Periodic elections let off some steam but demonstrating is more fun. Even when it gets bloody.

The communists make the most of this. Americans must at least recognize it - before we exhaust our resources trying to enforce peace and quiet in places already rebelling against too much peace and quiet.

Glenn upstaged by Mondale

NEW YORK (NEA) - It began, almost unnoticed, here in New York State in late September. By early October, however, it had spread rapidly, first to Maine and then to Iowa, Florida, Massachusetts and elsewhere.

Although that sounds like an epidemic of a dreaded contagious disease, it's actually just a rhetorical battle between the two leading contenders for next year's Democratic presidential nomination.

The escalating verbal duel can be traced to a question posed by New York Gov. Mario M. Cuomo, a Democrat, to former Vice President Walter F. Mondale at an obscure political forum in Rochester, N.Y., on Sept. 29.

When Cuomo asked how Mondale's positions on the issues differed from those embraced by Sen. John H. Glenn Jr., D - Ohio, Mondale broke the unofficial truce that all of the Democratic presidential aspirants had honored since the campaign began earlier this year.

Mondale said he thought Glenn was wrong in his early support of President Reagan's economic program, his backing of the B-1 bomber program and his opposition to the SALT II arms control agreement.

Cuomo - who two weeks later endorsed Mondale - responded by praising Mondale for his willingness "to take on this aura of celebrity and celluloid images" - a comment which could only be interpreted as a thinly disguised swipe at Glenn.

Glenn didn't respond to that criticism, but Mondale continued to goad him. At a statewide Democratic conference in Augusta, Maine, on Oct. 1, only two days later, the former vice president proclaimed himself to be "a real Democrat" because "I never supported Reaganomics, I opposed it all the way."

By the time the two men met here in New York City for an Oct. 6 issues forum with the other five Democratic contenders, Glenn was seething with anger. "It was reported in the paper," he noted, "that I was somehow a celluloid candidate."

Summarizing his military service, his pioneering role in the federal government's space program and his subsequent career in the business world, Glenn added pointedly: "I don't limit my experience to inside the beltway of Washington."

The target of that barbed remark undoubtedly was Mondale, who has lived in Washington for almost two decades, serving as a member of the Senate from 1964 to 1976 and as vice president from 1977 to 1981.

The two men again addressed the same audience only two days later, at an Oct. 8 Democratic dinner in Des Moines, Iowa - and Mondale again offered indirect, yet unmistakable criticism of Glenn's support for "Reaganomics."

In Mid-October, Glenn escalated his counter-attack during a campaign appearance in Melbourne, Fla., and at another candidates' forum in Boston. On both occasions, he sought to revive memories of President Jimmy Carter's unpopular policies and link them to Mondale, who was Carter's vice president.

Defending his vote for Reagan's economic program as an alternative to "the disastrous, failed policies" of the Carter-Mondale administration, Glenn derided Mondale's criticism of his position: "It's a little like the first mate of the Titanic criticizing someone for going for a lifeboat."

Glenn may well need a lifeboat before the feud subsides, because he has not fared well in the exchange of unpleasanties. Mondale has succeeded in keeping the focus of the debate on Glenn's record rather than his own - and the senator has thus been constantly on the defensive in recent weeks.

Even more significant is the timing of the debate, which occurred - not entirely by coincidence - immediately prior to the release of "The Right Stuff," a highly publicized motion picture which Glenn hopes to subtly exploit because it celebrates the success of the country's first astronauts in general, and in particular, his mission in space.

At a time when he ought to be positioned to capitalize on the film as a vehicle to launch his presidential campaign skyward by reminding voters of his status as a national hero, Glenn finds himself mired in the mud, trading potshots with Mondale and looking very much like a conventional politician.

Man left note saying

Killings were a 'spiritual act'

GILMER, Texas (AP) — Police here say they have been unable to question a 37-year-old local hotel owner who remains in intensive care at a Marshall hospital, charged with four counts of murder in the deaths of his family.

Gandabiv M. Patel, the owner of a small stucco hotel in this East Texas town, wrote authorities a rambling note calling the slaying of his family of four "a spiritual act" to call attention to President Reagan's criticism of the Soviet Union, police said.

A state trooper said Patel shot himself as the trooper approached Patel's car, parked in a roadside park near Marshall, Tuesday night.

Patel remains hospitalized in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Marshall Memorial Hospital with a single gunshot wound to the abdomen, said hospital evening supervisor Georgia Anderson.

Patel "was unable to talk with police officers at this time due to the extent of the injury," said a police dispatcher who declined to be identified. "When he is well enough, he will be moved to a hospital in Gilmer or Longview."

The dispatcher said a Gilmer police officer was stationed around the clock at the hospital ICU.

Friends said Patel emigrated from India about 13 years ago and settled in Gilmer in 1979. He was the target of an intensive manhunt after his wife and three children were found fatally shot in the family's second-floor suite.

Gilmer police said all four were shot either late Monday or early Tuesday as they lay sleeping on their backs.

Autopsies were completed Wednesday in Longview on the bodies of Patel's wife, Bhikhibev, 35; the couple's two daughters, Jayaben, 9, and Shila, 6; and their son, Jayesh, 2. But police Lt. James DeCuir said the results were not yet available.

DeCuir said he could not comment on the one-page, handwritten note found in Patel's green 1975 station wagon because it was considered important evidence.

"Part of the note refers to a spiritual act. You have short captions but we are still withholding most of it," said DeCuir. "What I have done was the only best way out, to let the truth come out." Patel had scrawled on an envelope containing the letter, the Longview News-Journal reported.

DeCuir said a motive for the shootings was contained in the letter. He also said authorities "strongly believe" that the gun Patel had with him was the same .38-caliber revolver used in the slayings.

Patel had been withdrawn recently and was apparently depressed, said friends.

Gilmer Police Chief Bill Wells said Patel had tried recently to sell the 35-room hotel he had purchased in 1979, which until last summer had been the only hotel in this town of 5,200. A larger motel was opened a few months ago closer to Interstate 20.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Rex Aiken said he spotted Patel in his parked car about 40 miles west of Gilmer six hours after police found the bodies in the Uphur House Hotel at about 3:18 p.m. Tuesday.

Patel was apparently hiding in his station wagon, which was parked at a roadside park on U.S. Highway 80 about seven miles east of Marshall, Aiken said.

"I approached the car, and when I got about 20 feet from it, he sat up in the driver's seat," said Aiken. "I holiered for him several times to get out of the car but he didn't."

"He leaned over to one side, and that is when his gun went off," said Aiken. "He sat back up and looked at me and unlocked the door. I opened it and he fell out, wounded. He probably had the gun in his pants and had to lean over to get it out. He was probably bringing it up to shoot me."

The victims, who were in their nightclothes, appeared to have been lying in bed when they were shot, DeCuir said. Mrs. Patel's body had been moved against a door to the apartment, he said.

DeCuir said Patel's wallet and more than $1,000, along with spent cartridges, were recovered from the room. He said police believe the family was shot eight to 10 hours before their bodies were discovered.

Henry Odum, a part-time night watchman at the hotel, said he discovered the bodies in a bedroom of their apartment.

Family learns of son's missing status

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Less than 30 minutes before a powerful bomb exploded, Marine Lance Cpl. Steven "Tex" Bland completed a tour of duty as a guard outside the four-story Marine compound at the Beirut airport, his mother was told.

"They said he could have gone in for a shower or a cup of coffee," Rosa Bland of Arlington said Wednesday.

The bomb leveled the Marine headquarters Sunday, killing more than 200 men. Scores more were reported missing and presumed dead in the rubble.

The soldier's wife, Ruthann Bland, learned early Wednesday that her husband had been officially labeled as missing. She called her mother-in-law, who confirmed the missing-in-action status through the Pentagon.

Bland is one of four servicemen who, Texas relatives have been told, are missing in action.

The younger Mrs. Bland said she believes the "missing" tag means her husband is dead.

A Marine lieutenant and chaplain visited the couple's home outside Camp Lejeune in eastern North Carolina and informed her that Bland had not been found.

"They basically told me he was dead," a sobbing Mrs. Bland told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "The lieutenant said he'd be back. ... I'm still waiting. I don't know what to do. They're pretty sure he was in the building."

Rosa Bland said she had heard nothing more and had not given up hope.

With her Wednesday afternoon was Barbara Madera, a neighbor whose son, Staff Sgt. George Steven Kelly, also is among the missing from the bombing.

Mrs. Madera said she has heard nothing about her son, who she believes was stationed on a ship in the harbor bordering Beirut at the time of the explosion.

"We just want to know where our boys are. It's this waiting that's so awful," Mrs. Madera said.

In Fort Worth, the Donald Fulton family was awakened at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday by two Marines who informed them that their son, Lance Cpl. Michael Scott Fulton, was missing from the bombing.

The Marines tried to instill hope that her son is still alive, Bessie Fulton said.

"But where can he be? There's not too many places you can lose a Marine over there. If he was still alive, he'd let us know," she told the Star-Telegram.

Fulton, 21, nicknamed "Lucky Mike" by his Marine comrades, had been assigned to the third floor of the four-story Marine headquarters building at the Beirut airport, she said.

Fulton joined the Marines in 1980 after graduating from Diamond Hill-Jarvis High School in Fort Worth. He was scheduled to return home from the Lebanese assignment in mid-December, his mother said.

An older sister, Julie Morrill, said although her mother is trying to find hope in the fact that he's classified as missing, not dead, her father is not as optimistic.

"My dad was in the service and he kind of knows what that means," she said.

Also listed as missing by Marine officials is Lance Cpl. David Brown, 19, of Conroe.

Brown had been in Beirut since May, said his sister, Patsy Brown. She said that Marine officials came to the home of Brown's parents in Conroe at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday to report that he was missing in action.

Brown's mother described her son as an eager Marine, who dropped out of Conroe High to join the service.

She said the family is doing "a lot of praying."

In addition, Lance Cpl. Danny Estes, 19, whose mother lives in West Orange, has been reported as missing.

Man helps police find wife's body

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who told police he saw a dog carrying a human head now says he accidentally killed his 17-year-old wife during an argument, then became frightened and buried her body in a field, police said.

The woman's headless body was found under a pile of brush and tree branches Wednesday after the man led police to the field. Authorities were searching today for the head, which they said was apparently severed by stray dogs.

The 30-year-old man was in custody for further questioning. Police Homicide Detective Carl Kent said the man admitted he pushed his wife out the front door of their second-story apartment in north Houston during an argument Oct. 19.

When he realized his wife was dead, the man became frightened and carried her body to a nearby field and covered it, Kent said. Two days later, the man reported his wife was missing.

Kent said the man at first told police he was washing his truck Wednesday morning when he spotted a small dog carrying a human head. He notified the apartment manager, Jeannie Smith, who called police.

The man and a police officer walked to the field and found the body.

"He (the husband) let out the most blood curdling scream I had ever heard," Ms. Smith said.

"The man was shaking," when the police officer said the body was a female, Ms. Smith said.

Bush replaces Reagan for visit to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — The day after inspecting the bomb-devastated Marine camp in Beirut, Vice President George Bush was due in Dallas today to substitute for President Reagan at a $1,000-a-plate Republican fundraiser.

The dinner was billed as a "Salute to President Reagan." Former Republican Gov. Bill Clements, the chairman of tonight's dinner, said $1.4 million in tickets had been sold before administration officials announced Tuesday that the president would be unable to attend "because of the press of recent events."

Texas GOP chairman George Strake said, "Texas Republicans are greatly honored that the vice president and our fellow Texan has been able to adjust his schedule and be with us."

Clements said about 10 percent of the proceeds will go to the state party and the remainder will be put into the 1984 Reagan campaign in Texas.

First on Bush's Texas itinerary today was a morning address at Texas Christian University.

Strake said there would be a reception followed by the dinner at Dallas' Registry Hotel. More than 1,200 are expected to attend.

After the GOP dinner, Bush is scheduled to fly to Houston, where he will speak Friday morning at a Forum breakfast.

Gilbert & Sullivan story beautifully done

By BILL HALEY
Guest Reviewer

William Schwenck Gilbert, 19th century London attorney, turned operatic librettist and Arthur Sullivan, also of London collaborated on 13 operettas which sent the theater-going world of their day into a tizzy and endowed the English language with two favorite quotations: "Let the punishment fit the crime," and "Here's a fine how do you do."

Described in turn as burlesque and satire, these musicals, by any name, have simply got to be the funniest that ever hit the stage. Curiously, their poetic rhythms and accompanying music are often funnier than the text.

For instance, in H.M.S. Pinafore, the captain and First Lord of the Admiralty, sings, "I never use a great big D..." "What never?" he is asked.

"No, Never!" the captain replies. "What, never?" he is asked again. "Hardly ever," the captain admits.

The opening night for the Mikado in May, 1885, was described by a London newspaper as a continuous roar of laughter from beginning to end.

A pastiche of all the operettas was presented in M. K. Brown Auditorium, Tuesday, Oct. 25, by a group of 14 singer-actors and musicians who perform under the caption, "Here's a How De Do—The Story of Gilbert and Sullivan."

Their show consisted of excerpts from the operas, often fragmented, intertwined with real life incidents involving Gilbert, Sullivan, D'oyly Carte—their producer, Lillian Russell and others.

The program was performed on a lovely portable stage equipped with a valance and a red velvet curtain which operated most efficiently.

Appropriately, the actors were dressed in the manner of the day—men wearing cutaways and the pretty ladies in beautifully bustled gowns. The songs and dance routines were all presented in excellent style and taste.

The technique of presentation was, as an example, to say "Let us run through this scene from Princess Ida," or to lift an aria from its opera and use it to describe a situation such as the death of Sullivan's mother.

The production was most attractively staged, beautiful to look at and to listen to but, for some reason, the belly laughs weren't there. In my opinion, "Here's a How De Do" could have been a little crazier.

Dear Abby Those who pay their way can also play their way By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I want to congratulate the 16-year-old Iowa girl who didn't think it was fair for the fellow to always treat the girl. She said she had a job and could pay her own way, but her friends and parents thought she was crazy—the boy should always pay.

She is not "crazy"—she is smart. I am a senior citizen and have always felt that boys obligated girls by paying their way, then they expected sexual favors in return. (Maybe not all, but about 98 percent did.)

I say the girl should pay her own way, and if the boy makes romantic overtures, she is free to do what she wants, depending on the way she feels about him, because she won't owe him anything.

WISCONSIN GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Another Wisconsinite shares your view:

DEAR ABBY: When I first started to date about 15 years ago, I was one of those rare girls who insisted on paying for myself. I got some strange looks, but that's the only way I felt comfortable.

My reason was twofold. First, I felt if a man treated me, I would owe him something, and that something could mean sex. Second, I believe male-female relationships should be mutual.

One of the few men I dated told me he appreciated my independent attitude. We're married now, and still share all the expenses.

IT'S WORKING IN EDGERTON, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: My mother was terminally ill, so we decided to keep her home in familiar surroundings instead of having her live out her last months in a hospital.

This decision necessitated constant care, night and day, changing bed linen several times a day, and trying to make Mother as comfortable as possible. This was exhausting enough, but worse yet were friends, neighbors and relatives who felt the need to visit from 7:30 a.m. until 11 p.m.

I had to stop whatever I was doing to prepare coffee for these visitors, make sure they didn't stay too long and answer the telephone, which rang at least 50 times a day—people wanting to know how Mother was.

My husband finally put a "No Visitors" sign on our front door, which did no good because everyone thought the sign didn't apply to him.

Abby, please ask your readers to be more considerate of dying relatives and their families, and not drop in at all hours expecting conversation and coffee.

EXHAUSTED IN NEW YORK

DEAR EXHAUSTED: The "inconsiderate" visitors who need to heed this message will think it doesn't apply to them, so it's up to those caring for the very sick person to meet the visitors at the door with a firm but gentle, "I'm sorry, but this is not a good time to visit." And put a muffler on your telephone.

CONFIDENTIAL TO AMBITIOUS IN CONNECTICUT: There are two ways to get money: Marry it or earn it. Actually, there is only ONE way, because if you marry it, you will earn it.

Thick tricks

Here's a homemade recipe for a hair gel that works just as well as the ones you can buy. Mix one cup of water with one tablespoon milk; comb a small amount into hair and set. Or combine one tablespoon plain gelatin with one cup of boiling water; apply and set. Another great way to add volume to your hair is with hairspray. Hold up sections of your hair with a brush, then spray as they fall. Or spray a bit on your brush and gently run it through hair. Hairspray on the brush you use to blow dry helps keep waves where you want them.

Amarillo's library honors area authors

AMARILLO — Friends of the Amarillo Library have located 19 authors from seven Panhandle towns to honor at the 15th annual Book and Author Dinner Nov. 12, 7 p.m. at the Hilton Inn of Amarillo. Reservations are being accepted at the Central Library business office.

The authors, co-authors, editors and compilers to be honored have published books during the last year. A special feature this year is an autograph reception for the authors in the garden area at the Hilton Inn starting at 6:30 p.m. the evening of the dinner.

Dr. Iben Browning of Sandia Park, N.M., author and scientific consultant will be the dinner speaker. Dr. Browning has written three books on climate, science and the future. He has written about three dozen scientific papers and holds 66 patents. He is a consultant to business and government in the fields of bioengineering, biological problems, climate, computers, environmental

Loose Marbles

Hooray for the "Noodge"

By LISA PATMAN

Marty Beim of New York City has come up with a revolutionary idea, the "Noodge" stress. This wonderful invention is aimed at those of us who are a bit reluctant to rise in the morning.

Marty's mattress will gently shake you awake at the proper time. If you haven't stumbled out of bed within the next five minutes, the shakes will leave the gentle cycle and begin to move towards violence. If that doesn't get you up, the Noodge will unceremoniously dump you out of bed — just like Mom used to.

I think Marty is inspired, a truly farsighted man. But let's hope that he doesn't stop with his mattress. Think of the other possibilities Mary could offer us. Wouldn't it be terrific, for instance, to have a fork that would refuse to spear another bite unless you quit chewing with your mouth open. Or how about a self-powered hankie that would force the sniveler to, well, stop sniveling.

Or a checkbook that wouldn't let go of its checks unless you had enough money in the bank. Perhaps a credit card that wouldn't charge when it knew that the bill collector was a regular visitor at your home. Personally, I could use a pair of slacks that would convince me that the extra piece of pie really will show up on my thighs. And a car stereo system that would play numbers like "Watch the Road," "Don't Pass On a Hill," and "Your Foot's a Little Heavy, Ease Off the Gas."

It would also be swell to have a television set which would turn itself off at the proper bedtime, leftovers that would self-destruct before they turned green, and automatic washers that were really automatic. There could be smoke detectors that would tattle on you if you sneaked a puff after promising to quit, booze that would give you a hangover before you overimbibed, and centerfolds that would cover themselves when ogled by underage adolescents.

Once Marty conquers these items, surely he will perfect the clean-eared child, to whom sarcasm is a mystery, and rudeness a nightmare. Come to think of it, if he can clean up a kid, think what he could do for all of us tired, grumpy grown-ups.

Marty has a big job ahead of him, so I hope he'll hop out of his Noodge and get crackin'. There are a lot of us desperate people waiting for him.

Eva Hawley, Pampa Realtor, recently won a trip to Las Vegas at the area Realtor's convention in Amarillo.

The education committee of the Amarillo Board of Realtors hosted the convention at the Amarillo Civic Center. Dr. Heartsill Wilson of Denver presented the keynote address. Seven other speakers and 80 exhibitors were also included at the convention.

Pampa Realtors attending the convention included Cheryl Berzanskis, Norma Shackelford, Sandra Schuneman, Exie Vantine, Eva Hawley, Ruby Allen, Mike Ward, Judy Taylor, Neva Weeks, Twila Fisher, Clare Dunn, Judie Edwards, Beula Cox, Norma Halder, Lillith Brinard and Dena Whisler.

Four Pampa members won door prizes with Hawley winning the main prize of the trip to Las Vegas.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

This coming year you will be in a good achievement cycle. However, in your personal relationships you must be careful not to lord your successes over others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
You could be caught in a situation today where your pride is wounded. However, instead of making a big issue of it bite the bullet and shrug it off. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign. Mail an additional $2 for your Scorpio Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Do not try to palm your responsibilities off on others today. It could end up causing you additional complications. Be duty-conscious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Your investigative instincts which you usually rely upon may be temporarily out of order today. Be careful not to be taken in by someone deceptive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Normally you're agreeable and easygoing, but today there's a chance the opposite might be true and you'll rub others the wrong way.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
There's a possibility you could be in a negative frame of mind today, where you'll resent not only doing things for others but for yourself as well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Counting on factors which are not visible or presently in the palm of your hands is like betting in the blind today. Be aware of the odds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Constantly be on guard in important one-to-one relationships today, especially if you're dealing with persons who previously caused you problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Coworkers require kid-glove treatment today. Be very careful of your comments and make a special effort not to participate in any pettiness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Take pains to be extra-prudent today in managing your resources. Carelessness could lead to the types of mistakes which may be very costly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Flexing your muscles in order to get others to do your bidding today could backfire. Instead of using any form of intimidation, try saying "please."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Be wary today of being a faultfinder who looks for the negative rather than the positive side of things. Seek problems and you'll find them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
A friend of long standing may make unreasonable demands of you today. If you feel they're not justified, let him or her know it.

Supreme Court to rule on football TV ruckus

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer The U.S. Supreme Court will decide the issue of college football television controls...

Oklahoma and the University of Georgia Athletic Association, football television contracts could become the exclusive property of each individual school.

The SWC under the direction of Commissioner Fred Jacoby is already working behind the scenes to prepare for such an eventuality.

schools making their own deals. "We've got all kinds of variables here," Jacoby said.

Methodist collided last Saturday, CBS forked over a cool $1.2 million.

When the Longhorns hook it up with the Aggies, ABC will ante up another $1.2 million with Texas collecting another $273,333.

Um-kumph!

Tigers quench thirst for Gators

By Major Amos B. Hoople Peerless Prophet

Egad, friends, you are in for a real treat this Saturday. No less than eight of the college football super powers collide head on for glory, conference crowns and major bowl assignments.

to be the Orange Bowl foe of the Big Eight rep on Jan. 2. This should be a great aerial show with West Virginia's QB Jeff "Hoos" Hostetler, a talented senior with a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

boil Rice, 30-13, and TCU to slide past Houston, 17-14. On the Big Eight front, Nebraska will keep it going as it whips Kansas State 28-14.

24-21. On the independent front, the awesome Brigham Young Cougars, with masterful All-America QB Steve Young at the controls, will roll over the Utah State Aggies 42-20.

Let's take the University of Texas, for example. When the regular season ends for the Longhorns on ABC-TV Nov. 26 against the Texas Aggies, the school will have netted a cool $948,553 in television appearances this year.

AND, the 'Horns join the Aggies in collecting a $125,000 "inconvenience" fee from ABC for moving their scheduled Thanksgiving Day clash to a Saturday.

Pensacola Open tees off today

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — While the attention may be centered on Fuzzy Zoeller's attempt to gain golf's No. 1 money-winning spot in the Pensacola Open this week, a much more intense struggle will be taking place in the lower ranks.

Some of the veterans — such as Melnyk and Armstrong — said they will become part-time performers if they don't make it. Some of the others already have filed entries for the Tour School.

War without reporters-for safety or secrecy?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle of Grenada has put the American press at war with the Pentagon. Reporters fume that they are being denied access to the scene of action in a way that didn't happen in the Revolutionary War and hasn't happened since.

"Safety is the only reason you're not being allowed in there," Larry Speakes, deputy presidential press secretary, told newsmen during a stormy session in the White House press room Wednesday.

But Jack Landau, director of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, said, "That's a phony-baloney excuse to keep them out."

He said reporters have always covered war with the understanding that it was risky, and if they got hurt they couldn't blame the government for giving them access to the battlefield.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he hoped the restrictions can be lifted soon, perhaps today.

He said the decision was made by the commanders at the scene.

But some news executives doubted that the safety of journalists was the reason none were allowed to accompany invading American troops.

Three American newsmen, traveling by chartered boat, did manage to reach Grenada. They were put under house arrest by the Grenadians, somehow managed to get to the scene of a firefight and were escorted away Wednesday by the U.S. military — taken to the decks of the USS Guam, a Marine vessel, according to a Pentagon spokesman.

The three — Ed Cody of the Washington Post, Don Bohning of the Miami Herald and Bernard Diederick of Time magazine — were "picked up in the midst of heavy fighting and evacuated for their own safety," Army Lt. Col. Lee DeLorne said.

Cody's boss, Howard Simons, managing editor of the Washington Post, said, "The best information we have — and I have no first-hand knowledge — is that he was pushed off the island. I'm sure he was screaming and kicking the whole way."

Four others — identified as Claude Urraca, a Time photographer based in El Salvador; Morris Thompson of Newsday; Greg Chamberlain of the Financial Times of London; and Hugh O'Shaughnessy of the Guardian of Manchester, England — reached the island in the same group, but their whereabouts were unknown.

The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press said its research shows such total restrictions on press access to the scene of battle is unprecedented in the history of American warfare, starting with the Revolutionary War.

Landau said that the Pentagon at least should have taken along a pool of reporters, selected by lot to represent all the press.

Richard S. Salant, president of the National News Council, sent a telegram to President Reagan saying it was "unconscionable that American troops should be involved in a shooting war while the press is totally barred from direct coverage of the combat zone."

"We would just like to have reporters and photographers in Grenada, and we don't," said Paul Varian, foreign editor for United Press International.
