

Watt fails to weather storm; quits as secretary of interior

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Watt, the victim of a mouth that misfired once too often, will give up his job as interior secretary as soon as a replacement can be found by the president and confirmed by the Senate. The search begins today.

Watt gave up an 18-day struggle to hold onto his Cabinet post Sunday but vowed to never abandon his crusade for "spiritual freedom and political liberty."

Standing in a California cow pasture, Watt read his resignation letter to a small band of reporters Sunday, his voice quavering at times. His wife stood at his side, holding the reins of their horses.

President Reagan accepted the resignation "reluctantly" and an aide said the president hoped to nominate a successor in one to two weeks.

"The time has come," Watt said. "It is my view that my usefulness to you in this administration has come to an end."

Reagan praised Watt for the "outstanding" job he had done managing the country's natural resources and said his "dedication to public service and his accomplishments as secretary of the interior will long be remembered."

Neither man in their formal statements mentioned Watt's wisecrack Sept. 21 in a U.S. Chamber of Commerce speech in which he referred to "a black... a woman, two Jews and a cripple" on a coal advisory commission.

But asked whether the controversy over the remark had prompted the resignation, Watt said, "It did accelerate it."

Watt, joking that he wanted to answer reporters' questions from atop his horse so he could get away quickly if necessary, said he felt he had accomplished his objectives as interior secretary and "it's time for us to move on to the next phase of our lives."

Asked what that would be, Watt said, "We will continue our crusade and our efforts to establish spiritual freedom and political liberty in this country, for that is the real battleground."

Watt refused to name a preference for a successor and administration officials said Watt and Reagan did not discuss that topic in a 10-minute telephone conversation Sunday afternoon.

Before talking to Reagan, who was at Camp David, Md., Watt first called presidential counselor Edwin Meese III.

Asked if he or other administration officials had tried to talk Watt out of resigning, Meese said by the time Watt called, the interior secretary had made up his mind. Both the president in his statement and Meese in an interview praised Watt for carrying out Reagan's policies.

"We wanted to support him and keep him in the job," Meese said. "I don't think any Cabinet member has done more than he had toward achieving the president's goals."

Meese said the search for a successor would begin today and he expected Reagan would announce his choice in a week or two. He said the White House hopes the Senate can confirm the nominee before it goes home, probably in late November.

While Meese said no list of possible replacements has been drawn up, speculation in the administration and on Capitol Hill has centered on former Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., who was Reagan's first choice for the job in 1981, former Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, and Interior Undersecretary J.J. Simmons III.

Meese said Watt sounded relieved and "certainly not downbeat" in his telephone conversation. However, a longtime friend, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., described Watt in recent days as "in anguish" as more and more former supporters attacked him and called for his resignation.

Central America committee sets study of region

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A fact-finding commission headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger today begins a week-long series of meetings with leaders in war-torn Central America, but Kissinger says the group won't conduct negotiations.

Kissinger said the commission members, who arrived in Panama City late Sunday night, "are here to study and collect information" and would focus on economic, political and security issues during the six-nation tour. He said all activities of the delegation would be made public.

"The progress and security of Central America are a vital American concern," said Kissinger.

Kissinger and the other members of the Bipartisan Commission on Central America were scheduled to hold a series of meetings today with Panamanian leaders.

The commission was formed in July to help President Reagan formulate a long-term approach to the political and economic problems of Central America. Kissinger said the commission will continue deliberations after it returns to the United States and will submit a final report to Reagan Jan. 10.

Before flying to Panama on Sunday evening, Kissinger said a meeting with Daniel Ortega Saavedra, leader of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, may take place during the tour.

In other developments Sunday in Central America:

— A dozen communist guerrillas kidnapped from his home in Guatemala City the director general of the conservative Prensa Libre, Guatemala's biggest newspaper, a relative of the victim, Pedro Julio Garcia, said.

— The Nicaraguan government said it temporarily will suspend visa extensions because of an increase in rebel attacks along its borders with Honduras and Costa Rica. — The Salvadoran army said its soldiers surprised a rebel column in Morazan province, killing five of the rebels and wounding seven.

Accompanying Kissinger and the commission on the Central American tour are U.N. Ambassador Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., Rep. James Worth, D-Texas, Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., and former Undersecretary of State William D. Rogers.

The commission members joining Kissinger on the trip are: Nicholas Brady, director of Dillon, Read and Co.; Henry Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio, Texas; William P. Clements, former governor of Texas; Carlos F. Diaz-Alejandro, professor of economics at Yale University; Wilson S. Johnson, president of the National Federation of Independent Businesses; San Mateo, Calif.; Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO; John Silber, president of Boston University; Robert S. Strauss, former chairman of the National Democratic Party and President Carter's personal representative for the Mideast talks of 1979-80; and Dr. William B. Walsh, president of Project Hope, a social welfare and health organization.

Two members of the commission, Richard Scammon, head of the Elections Research Center, and Potter Stewart, a retired U.S. Supreme Court justice, did not make the trip.

Defense attorney says

Anderson won't deny killing

From staff and wire reports LIPSCOMB—Michael Anderson, who went on trial today on charges of murder, will not deny he killed Robert Eugene Hall, the defendant's attorney told prospective jurors in an opening statement Monday morning. But, said one Harold Comer, he intends to say Anderson killed Hall because of death threats to Anderson's parents.

Anderson, 26, of Wheeler County, is charged with murdering the 28-year-old Hall of Sayre, Okla., by shooting him four times in the head in what authorities have said they believe was an execution ordered by a drug syndicate.

Comer's opening statement indicated the defense may not dispute that theory by prosecutors. "If this man was compelled to kill another because of a threat to his life or to his family, you must acquit him," Comer said.

"He will not deny killing Robert Hall on Feb. 19, but the evidence will show pressure was applied to him that a reasonable person could not withstand," Comer added.

Later, in questioning prospective jurors, Comer indicated he will attempt to prove Anderson killed Hall because Anderson's parents were threatened with death. The parents, Marvin and Sue Anderson of Sayre, were in the courtroom Monday, along with the defendant's brothers, Richard and Larry Anderson.

Comer asked prospective jurors if they would have trouble following the law that allows acquittal if "the person charged was compelled under threat of imminent death or bodily harm"

Comer and District Attorney Guy Hardin made their opening statements, then selection of jurors started at mid-morning Monday. Hardin's statement lasted less than one minute. He simply told the prospective jurors that Anderson is alleged to have killed Hall by shooting him with a firearm.

Comer also told the jury panel that the state must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

The definition of reasonable doubt is a source of controversy among lawyers, Comer said. Comer said his definition is "substantial, honest misgivings about the defendant's guilty. It's a gut feeling."

Hall's body was found March 2 in a grave behind Anderson's home near Kelton, about 35 miles east of Pampa. Anderson surrendered to police in Lake Charles, La. on March 3. District Attorney Hardin said Anderson fears for his life and has chosen not to post a $25,000 bond for release.

State District Judge Grainger McIlhenny ordered the trial moved to this Panhandle town 70 miles northeast of Pampa. At a pre-trial hearing in June, McIlhenny ruled that much of the evidence discovered during a search of Anderson's home was inadmissible, since the search was conducted without a warrant. The judge ruled that no mention of the body or its discovery will be allowed during the trial. The state is expected to base its case on the testimony of at least one, and possibly two, witnesses to the shooting.

Hall died from four 45-caliber shots to the back of the head.

Authorities claim Anderson was ordered to kill Hall by a drug suspect in custody in Elk City, Okla. Hardin said the man ordered the killings because he feared Hall would testify against him in an upcoming trial.

Authorities in Oklahoma and Texas had battled for jurisdiction, each wanting to prosecute Anderson for the murder, which occurred near the state line. The dispute was resolved April 19.

when Texas Gov. Mark White refused to extradite Anderson.

Authorities say Hall's murder may be related to three similar, unsolved murders in Beckham, Okla. Hall and the three other victims were all shot at close range and dumped in rural areas.

The Beckham area, about 80 miles southeast of Pampa, is thought to be the turf of the "Family."

Barbara McClintock wins Nobel Prize in medicine

81-year-old American chosen for Nobel Prize in medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1983 Nobel Prize in medicine was awarded today to Barbara McClintock, an American whose pioneering research in genetics more than 30 years ago gained recognition only in recent years.

Miss McClintock, an 81-year-old professor emerita, is still active at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, N.Y.

She becomes the third woman to receive a Nobel Prize in medicine. The most recent also was an American, Rosalyn Yalow, who shared the prize in 1977.

Miss McClintock, who will be awarded about $190,000, was cited by the faculty of Sweden's Karolinska Institute "for her discovery of mobile genetic elements."

Born in Hartford, Conn., in 1902, she was honored chiefly for her discovery of genetic elements in corn more than 30 years ago, the awarding panel said. The discovery also had a bearing on research of viruses carrying diseases.

"McClintock's experiments were carried out with great ingenuity and intellectual stringency. They reveal a whole world of previously unknown genetic phenomena," the Karolinska medical faculty explained in its statement accompanying the award.

In 1981, 30 years after making her most important discovery while working alone in a small laboratory, Miss McClintock won the $15,000 Lasker Award, the most prestigious American prize for medical research. She also won an award of $60,000 a year from the MacArthur Foundation.

Miss McClintock has worked since 1941 at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory, a leader in research on cancer and viruses. She has several small rooms to herself where she analyzes samples of maize, or Indian corn.

For many years she raised corn on a small plot of land on the laboratory grounds. She painstakingly crossed one variety of maize with another, and carefully examined the results.

In the late 1940s, she noticed that parts of the leaves on some corn seedlings were losing their color and other parts of the leaves were gaining color. It was an unexpected finding, and something that another researcher might have overlooked or ignored.

The United States has dominated this and other science Nobel categories in the decades after World War II.

N. Korea draws blame Four cabinet ministers killed in bombing

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan, who narrowly escaped a bombing in Burma that killed four Cabinet ministers, blamed North Korea for the attack and returned to Seoul today for emergency meetings with government leaders.

The bombing was "a barbarous crime, unpardonable by the conscience of all mankind," Chun said after returning to his mourning nation, cutting short a planned 18-day, six-nation goodwill tour that began with the Burma visit.

The explosion Sunday shattered the roof of the Martyr's Mausoleum outside Rangoon, sending up a billowing cloud of smoke and engulfing most of the South Korean delegation waiting for Chun to arrive for a wreath-laying ceremony, officials said.

The blast shook buildings in a mile away in the Burmese capital, killed 19 people, including 16 South Koreans, and wounded 19 others. It was not clear what type of explosive was used, but South Korean news agencies said it may have been a time bomb planted in the ceiling of the one-story shrine.

The victims included South Korea's deputy prime minister and foreign minister.

Witnesses said Chun's limousine was three minutes away from the memorial site and immediately wheeled around and fled the area. One report said the president and his wife had been delayed because the car was tied up in traffic.

After arriving at the heavily guarded airport in Seoul, Chun said his government "will study all possible countermeasures in punishing such injustice and violence" although he

Continental begins bid to hire pilots

HOUSTON (AP) — Financially ailing Continental Airlines expects to interview a large number of applicants this week in an effort to replace striking pilots, a company spokesman says.

Continental planned to conduct interviews in 11 cities, beginning today, said spokesman Bruce Hicks. He was unsure how many replacement pilots would be hired.

"That all depends on how many more striking pilots come back to work for us in the next few days," Hicks said.

Replacement pilots could be on the job "between two days and two weeks after they are hired, depending on their experience and their familiarity with our equipment," he said.

Interviews were to be done in gave no specifics. "It will not only be our people alone who point to the North Korean communist group, the most inhumane on earth, as the mastermind of the crime who perpetrated an extremely atrocious sin in an attempt on my life," he said.

Houston, Dallas, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Atlanta, Miami, New York and Chicago.

Capt. Larry Baxter, who represents Continental pilots on the master executive council of the pilots union, said airline representatives' actions during the negotiations demonstrated that the company "has no intention of bringing people back to work to save Continental Airlines."

Baxter accused Continental president Frank Lorenzo of continuing "to play out his premeditated plot to break unions, abolish jobs, end employee rights and run a cut-rate airline using 'rent-a-pilot' replacements."

Daughter brings feminist views to father in the White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maureen Reagan has some advice for her father, President Reagan. She says the key to closing the gender gap is to make women feel like part of the Republican Party, rather than stressing what the Reagan administration has accomplished for them.
In a recent interview, Ms. Reagan said she was convinced the bipartisan women's movement is coming to an end, marking the beginning of a very partisan campaign between Republicans and Democrats for the women's vote.
"It's not bipartisan anymore," she said emphatically. "It's us versus them. I say that with some amount of sadness. I have a lot of friends over there" in the Democratic Party.
Ms. Reagan said she made her views known to the president late this summer. She said he bemoaned the fact that women didn't seem to understand how many women he has appointed to office and how important they were in his administration.
"I told him I didn't think he was getting the full picture," she recalled. "I told him this was a much bigger problem to be addressed than simply putting out the more positive aspects of what had been accomplished in the administration."

Specifically, Ms. Reagan said she explained that the allegedly bipartisan women's movement "is taking a partisan position and in effect destroying the home base of Republican feminists."
A few weeks later, Ms. Reagan said she met with White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver to discuss the matter.
"We realized that somebody was going to have to direct traffic," she said. So she was hired by the Republican National Committee as a part-time consultant.
In her new role, Ms. Reagan will make speeches, get involved in GOP women's programs and probably put out a newsletter "to communicate to a lot of women supporters around the country," according to a Republican strategist who did not wish to be identified.
But one of her most important duties will be behind-the-scenes at the White House, where one aide said she would help resolve policy debates and help make the men who run the White House more sensitive to women's concerns.

A Reagan organizer, who refused to be identified by name, said Ms. Reagan has credibility with the public "because she's well known to be independent-minded."
Asked whether her job was partly to help counter any sexism at the White House, Ms. Reagan responded: "There isn't any doubt that in both parties one of the things we have to do today is to make sure that the men understand or at least accept the political reality."
Reagan has had problems with women voters since the 1980 election, when fewer women (48 percent) voted for him than men. In the 1982 midterm election, the pattern re-emerged: Women generally favored Democratic candidates over Republicans.
There's no doubt that to win re-election, Reagan must increase his current popularity rating among women of 39 percent or 40 percent. Unknown is by how much.

PROTEST U.S. BASE — Thousands of leftist demonstrators gathered outside the U.S. military base at the Athens, Greece, Hellinokon airport today, shortly before staging a march to protest the bases' presence in Greece and to condemn alleged American pressures on the Greek government. The demonstrators, carrying banners reading "out with the bases of death," "no nuclear weapons," and "national independence" and shouting anti-American slogans, marched to parliament and the American Embassy to deliver a protest. Agree to seek Italian and Greek observers in civil war cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Amin Gemayel's government and its Syrian-backed opponents have agreed to seek 600 observers from Italy and Greece to police Lebanon's civil war cease-fire, officials said today.
They said a formal request would be made to the Socialist governments of Italy and Greece once a committee overseeing the cease-fire makes final arrangements for the functions and deployment of the observers.
The committee, made up of representatives of the Lebanese army and warring Christian, Druse and Shiite Moslem militias, scheduled a meeting today to discuss the arrangements, said one official who declined to be named.
The committee also will discuss measures to reduce violations of the Sept. 26 cease-fire that halted three weeks of civil warfare on Beirut's southern outskirts and in the central Lebanese mountains, the official said.

Two U.S. Marines serving with the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut suffered minor gunshot wounds, one in the heel and the other in the shoulder, over the weekend in the latest cease-fire violations around the Marine base at Beirut's international airport.
News of the agreement on seeking Italian and Greek observers came after intensive talks that U.S. Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane held with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam in Damascus and with Gemayel in Beirut on Sunday.
McFarlane also has been discussing plans for a reconciliation conference to debate the distribution of power in Lebanon between Moslems and Christians. The conference, which would include observers from Syria and Saudi Arabia, has been delayed by disagreement on a site.
Both the cease-fire observation force and the reconciliation conference were called for in the Sept. 26 truce agreement.

In other developments:
An official of the Druse Progressive Socialist Party announced Sunday in Damascus that Maj. Gen. Nadim al-Hakim, the Lebanese army's chief of staff and the highest-ranking Druse in the nation's military service, had defected to join the Druse militia. But a high-ranking Lebanese army official rejected the report as "nonsense."
In the Lebanese port city of Sidon, just south of the Israeli defense line along the Awali River, Israeli troops raided the office of the Lebanese government's national news agency and arrested two reporters, state radio said. The reporters were interrogated and released two hours later after Israeli officials confiscated several rolls of film, the broadcast said.
Talks on a U.S.-sponsored peace initiative broke off several months ago when Palestinians rejected the plan for not recognizing the PLO as their sole representative.

Railways combats debt with luxury

TOKYO (AP) — Japan National Railways, perennial porphy of governmental corporations here, is trying to improve its abysmal financial status by appealing to those with time and money to spend.
That often means middle-aged women and elderly couples, groups of which embarked Oct. 1 on a 14-day, 2,000-mile tour of the country in a luxurious maroon-colored car modeled after the Orient Express.
They left with considerable fanfare, mainly from Japanese railway officials, who maintained that the cost, up to $4,219 a person, was a bargain in view of the panoramic view of the country the trip presents.

"The price is not that steep, considering you get to travel 14 days on a luxurious coach, stay at good hotels or inns and enjoy 40 meals of local delicacies," said Sakae Hashimoto, spokesman for the Japan Tourist Bureau.
He said four couples had bought the top-cost, million-yen tickets for the inaugural tour. Many passengers were elderly couples celebrating 50th wedding anniversaries or the husband's retirement, Hashimoto said.

The "European style" coach and tour is one of 100 special, comfort-oriented travel plans to which railway has given the name "toku-toku," the meaning of "toku" being profit or gain.
The national railway staged a 6-week campaign this past summer, advertising toku-toku tickets on 60,000 posters throughout the country, according to JNR official Akiyoshi Uriu.

Millions of Americans will turn to kerosene heaters to keep warm this winter, but authorities warn that there is a risk of fire or pollution if the heaters are not used properly.
The staff of the Consumer Product Safety Commission investigated the heaters earlier this year and said it did not think mandatory safety standards were necessary. It did, however, recommend some changes in the way kerosene heaters are made to lessen potential dangers.
The commission staff said the industry should develop a device that would automatically shut the heater off if the flame flares up. It also said there should be guards around heaters to prevent children and pets from bumping into them.
The Insurance Information Institute estimates there are about 10 million kerosene heaters in use and it says most of the models already on the market lack the extra safety features the commission suggested, making caution a must for consumers.

There are two basic types of portable kerosene heaters — convective and radiant.
Convective heaters usually have a circular shape, with the fuel tank located below the wick and combustion chamber. They circulate warm air up and out in all directions and are designed for large areas rather than small, confined spaces. Convective heaters must be moved for refueling; they do not have removable fuel tanks.
Radiant heaters generally are rectangular in shape. Like convective heaters, they have a wick and combustion chamber. They also have a reflector to direct heat at people or object. Many models have a removable fuel tank so the heater can stay in place while the tank is refueled.

No matter what type of kerosene heater you are considering, you should check your local fire department first.
Juvenile jail facilities okayed
Judges of the Juvenile Court and members of the Gray County Juvenile Probation Board inspected the facilities for handling juveniles at the City of Pampa jail and juvenile court September 21, 1983.
The judges found the detention facilities of the juvenile ward and quarters and facilities in the juvenile court suitable for hearing and disposition of those cases.
Certificates of certification were filed with Gray County last week.

Four people slain in hangar

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Three men whose friendship grew with their love of ultralight aircraft were killed execution-style with a bullet in the head and another friend was shot to death as he ran from a hangar where they were to sell one of the small, noisy and colorful aircraft.

Authorities, who declined to speculate on a motive, said three of the men were shot in the head and the fourth — who may have surprised the killer — was shot twice in the back as he apparently ran for his life.

"We know we've got four dead people. And we know a .22 was probably used ... and that's about it," said Grayson County Sheriff Jack Driscoll.

"It is not like when somebody walks into a 7-Eleven and shoots a clerk in the head. You know what the motive is then. ... It's the money. With something like this, you don't know. There is no reason," said Driscoll.

Three of the four had gone to the hangar Saturday at a North Texas ranch to discuss selling one of the planes to a fifth person.

Driscoll said ranch owner Bob Tate, 51; Grayson County deputy sheriff Philip Good, 29; and Jerry Brown, 51, were shot in the head and their bodies were found covered by a carpet a few feet away from pools of blood on the floor and a card table.

He said the fourth man, former Sherman police officer Ronald Mayes, 37, may have walked in on the slayings and tried to run for his life. Mayes' body had been dragged almost 9 feet and was lying face down in a pool of blood against the side door. He had been shot twice in the back.

A friend of Mayes, who asked not to be identified, said they had talked during the week about the execution-style slayings of five people abducted from a fast-food restaurant in Kilgore.

"We were talking about Kilgore at work last week ... and Ron said, 'They'd have to shoot me in the back. There's no way I'd stand still and wait for it to happen,'" said the friend.

Driscoll said the bodies, which were taken to Dallas for autopsy, "were all warm. ... It had not been long."

He said investigators found 11 .22 caliber shell casings scattered around the hangar.

Investigators also found money ranging from $13 to $100 in the men's wallets and all still wore their jewelry, Driscoll said.

Relatives said an ultralight aircraft was missing from the hangar. And Driscoll said several people told investigators there should have been more than one plane in the hangar.

"I understand you could take one down and put it in a compact position in two hours," said Driscoll. He said the main hangar doors were locked but a side door was not.

Brown's daughter, Lynn, said Brown, Good and Tate had gone to the hangar at 4 p.m. to meet a man from Dallas who was going to buy the plane for $4,000.

Mayes, who lived within sight of the Tate ranch, knew that the men were in the hangar, because he was curious when they never opened its doors and went over to investigate, said his uncle, George Barbee of Dallas.

His body was found by Tate's wife and son, who had gone to the B&B Ranch about 8:30 p.m. Saturday when Tate failed to return home when expected, Driscoll said. Sheriff's deputies found the other three bodies lying side-by-side on blue carpeting and covered with more pieces of carpet. Each had been shot once in the head.

A man who lives near the ranch told investigators he heard shots about 6:30 p.m., but Driscoll said the shots may have come from hunters.

Driscoll said he was certain the slayings took place in the hangar "because of the amount of blood present and said the scene was undisturbed except for a chair tilted against a table.

Good, a licensed pilot, and Mayes were members of Brown's Sunday school class at a Sherman church. Brown, a deacon, talked the two into visiting the West Sherman Baptist Church where Good and Mayes later became members.

"He (Brown) was the kind of people who was always inviting people to come to church," said the Rev. Danny Wood.

Tate, Good and Brown flew the planes "ever chance they got, every time the wind was out," said David Watkins, Tate's son-in-law.

Mayes lived nearby and was friend with the other three, but he did not fly in the ultralight aircraft.

He was "scared of those things and hated to fly," said a friend of Mayes' who asked not to be identified.

A relative of Tate's who asked not to be identified said Tate would "buy and sell anything." He's a wheel-dealer.

She said Tate had told another relative the name of the man he was going to meet.

Former justice, Alabama official say court confused

HOUSTON (AP) — An Alabama official who supports the death penalty and a former U.S. Supreme Court justice who wants it abolished say the high court is confused about how to handle capital punishment and point to the 11th-hour stay of a Texas execution as an example.

"They don't know what they're doing and, as a result, state courts and appellate courts have to hit a moving target and predict what the Supreme Court is going to do," Alabama Attorney General Charles Graddick said Sunday on the CBS broadcast, "Face the Nation."

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg said more than 1,200 convicts nationwide wait in their death cells because the high court "doesn't know itself where it comes out."

Goldberg said capital punishment should be abolished once and for all.

"The Supreme Court is faced by an intolerable situation which can only be solved by declaring the death penalty unconstitutional. In our country, are we to witness the mass executions of a thousand people?" Goldberg asked.

The debate over capital punishment flared again last week after Supreme Court Justice Byron White delayed the execution of James David Autry, who was condemned for the killing of a Port Arthur, Texas, convenience store clerk during a 1980 robbery.

The high court had refused to block the scheduled Oct. 5 execution. But White granted a reprieve about half an hour before a lethal dose of chemicals was to be injected into Autry's veins.

The stay was based on a last-hour appeal that Autry's case should have been reviewed for proportionality, or compared with other death row cases to make sure his crime was not less aggravated than the crimes of other murderers given life sentences. The Supreme Court will hear arguments on the issue next month.

The state, arguing that Texas has proportionality review of death sentences, plans to ask the Supreme Court to dissolve the stay and clear the way for Autry's execution.

Graddick, a defender of capital punishment, said the Supreme Court has been inconsistent in its actions. He said the federal review process needs to be changed.

"Capital punishment is society's form of self-defense," he said. "Why grant a stay on a legal technicality when we're talking about guilt or innocence?"

Texas Gov. Mark White, a Democrat and an advocate of the death penalty, said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that the death penalty was "appropriate punishment for the most severe, most heinous crimes committed by people."

"We have a right to protect ourselves," said White, who served as state attorney general before taking office in January.

But New Mexico Gov. Toney Anaya, also a Democrat, said that turning to capital punishment is a "cop-out."

Anaya, a former assistant district attorney and New Mexico attorney general for four years, has vowed no convict will be executed while he is in office.

He said he has dismissed the notion that capital punishment acts as a deterrent.

"It's inhumane. It's barbaric and it does absolutely nothing to lower the incidents of murder. And I think we're just lowering ourselves as a state, as a government, to the same levels as those who do commit murders," he said.

"I find it interesting that America is only one of three significantly industrialized nations in the world that still has the death penalty — Russia and South Africa. And I don't think that's very good company to be keeping," he said.

Authorities dispute license issued transsexual to marry

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A marriage license issued to a woman and a transsexual who now identifies himself as a man is being challenged by Tarrant County attorneys who say it is not clear when a sex change operation takes effect legally.

Tarrant County Clerk Madrin Huffman said he sought guidance from the district attorney's office when he was told that a license was issued Aug. 6 to the couple.

The pair was married soon after receiving the license by Peace Justice Gary Ritchie.

"At what point, if ever, does a person who has undergone a sex change operation actually change their sex?" asked Assistant District Attorney Dalton Gandy.

"The question in this case, as I see it, is whether this person is a male or a female, how we're going to determine that, that's the knotty problem," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Our position is that both parties are female. The parties don't agree to that."

According to records in the district clerk's office, the man was born in Weatherford as a woman and had his name legally changed July 22 by State District Judge Maryellen Hicks. In the request for a name change, he said he underwent reconstructive surgery to change his sex from female to male and has lived as a male for four years.

But Huffman said the doctor who performed blood tests for the couple and examined them concluded both were female. The physician, whom Huffman would not identify, gave the couple a certificate showing they had taken the blood test.

Huffman said he researched the matter further and determined that the groom had not secured a birth certificate change, which would require a court order based on a doctor's certification that the sex change operation was complete.

Huffman then filed suit in civil court, citing Texas' ban on marriages between couples of the same sex and asking that the license be revoked.

Victim's lives became intertwined over hobby

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Philip Good and Ronald Mayes would normally have been sitting in the Sunday school class of a Baptist deacon whose friendship they had made over their hobby of flying ultralight aircraft.

But their lives ended tragically in the small hangar outside town where the friendship had blossomed.

Bodies of the deacon, 51-year-old paint contractor Jerry Brown, Denison builder Bob Tate and Good were shot execution style under a pile of carpet beside one of the planes.

Mayes, who lived within sight of the hangar, lay 36 feet away with two gunshot wounds in his back. Family members think he surprised the gunman or gunmen who had slain his friends.

"They had gotten to be very good friends," Brown's daughter Lynn said of the four.

They and Tate flew the planes "every chance they got, every time the wind was out," said Tate's son-in-law, David Watkins.

"They are what he (Tate) bought this place for."

Miss Brown said her father became interested in the hobby a year ago after reading a newspaper advertisement placed by Good, a sheriff's deputy who sold the planes. Brown, 51, later met Mayes, a friend of Good's, and Tate.

Tate, also 51, had bought a small 20-acre ranch outside Sherman two years ago and built the hangar to house his ultralight planes. He was building a new home up the road from the hangar.

Brown, a deacon at West Sherman Baptist Church, later talked Good and Mayes into visiting the church where they became members earlier this year, their pastor said.

"He was the kind of people who was always inviting people to come to church," said the Rev. Danny Wood.

Good and Brown had both owned planes and flew them regularly during the summer, Wood said. "During the early part of the summer they were going out every weekend."

Demos pick Dallas for '84 gathering

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas Democrats, wanting to capitalize on the media attention that Dallas will receive during the Republican National Convention next summer, have decided to hold their 1984 state convention in Dallas two weeks later.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, in a 32-24 vote Saturday, picked Dallas over Austin for the site of the Sept. 7-8 political gathering.

"National attention will be on Dallas, so why move it to another site when it is so easy to keep it there?" Dallas County Democratic Chairman Bob Greenberg said at the meeting.

The Democratic presidential nominee and his running mate are expected to attend the Texas gathering.

The Aug. 20-24 Republican National Convention is expected to draw 25,000 visitors and bring more than $35 million to Dallas, city officials have said.

The Democratic meeting could bring the city as much as $15,000 more from the 12,000 Democrats and visitors expected to attend.

Greenberg said the "eyes of the nation" will remain on Dallas after the Republicans leave and the second convention will allow Democrats to show the difference between their party and the GOP.

Travis County Democratic Chairman Walter Richter labeled Greenberg's would be more convenient argument "a bunch of and less expensive as a hogwash." He said Austin convention site.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Deregulation is no mistake

Before Congress and the Civil Aeronautics Board deregulated the airline industry in 1978, none of the nation's commercial air carriers ever went out of business. The federal regulators themselves protected the airlines and saw to it that none suffered the normal consequences of inefficiency, including the ultimate sanction of going bankrupt. The consumers, who subsidized inefficiency via air fares set by the CAB regulators, were the losers.

Now that the airlines are having to compete in a free market, and bear the consequences of making mistakes, it should hardly come as a shock that not all are succeeding. Braniff went down last year, victim of the recession and a poorly timed expansion that it could not sustain. Continental filed for bankruptcy in recent weeks and Eastern Airlines' management is threatening to do the same if Eastern's employees will not agree to wage and benefit concessions.

To some, these failures are proof that deregulation was a mistake, or a mixed blessing at best. To the contrary, it's a sign that deregulation is doing exactly what it was supposed to do - guarantee a free market that rewards the best - managed airlines and punished the less efficient.

The airlines have had a predictably difficult time paring their high labor costs and boosting productivity. Why? Because airline employee unions are accustomed to negotiating with complaint managers willing to just pass on higher labor costs to the public via fare hikes. Now, fare increases can cost an airline portions of the market share it needs to survive. So, let Eastern and the "recognized" Continental keep struggling to pare costs. The consumer will be the ultimate beneficiary.

Since deregulation, any number of new carriers have entered the air transport market offering cutrate fares, commuter service, or other innovations. Inevitably, some of the established carriers have failed. Those who continue to survive will be those who best serve the public, which is what a free market is all about.

William Murchison

Unions meet the free market

"The proud bird with the golden tail" - as Continental Airlines used to call itself - had to be a glittering enterprise indeed. Its pilots earned an average of $89,000 a year, its stewardesses an average of $37,000.

That was thanks to a couple of things: (1) strong labor unions and (2) federal regulation.

The unions won the pay increases; the government let the airline pass on those increases to the traveling public. The Continental modus operandi was not one bit unique. The rest of the regulated airline industry operated in just the same way.

Then, in 1978, when Congress partly deregulated the airlines, hoping to introduce into their affairs some measure of marketplace discipline. Few of the major airlines liked the idea. It was easier to compete through gimmicks like wider seats and free champagne than to rejigger fares and routes: so much easier indeed that the major airlines, their federal protection withdrawn, have started going bankrupt.

First Braniff; more recently Continental, which dramatically cut wages in order to become a low - cost carrier, able to compete with the most competitive of them. Eastern likewise says it may go to bankruptcy court in order to bring down its labor costs.

Meanwhile Continental's pilots and flight attendants are on strike. The Air Line Pilots Association talks of a nationwide sympathy strike.

It's pointless to rejoice over the plight of Continental's employees. These are people with families and mortgages; they had counted on receiving dollars, far into the future - and no wonder; they always had.

But an economic shakeup is taking place in America. The only way to make things as comfortable as they used to is to organize an American KGB. And in the end, that wouldn't work. Not even the secret police can make a bankrupt airline prosperous.

The shakeup has much to do with the labor unions and their ossified attitudes. For forty or fifty years, unions have been able to ask what they wanted, and to get most of it, with the cost being picked up by the customers.

This worked so long as the customers had - or thought themselves to have - no alternative. Who, besides a Harvard professor, would drive a foreign car? And what other airlines were there to fly?

Gone, all gone, those carefree days! The lower labor costs of the foreign car makers have played havoc with Detroit's sales. The same in the steel industry. The same in textiles. The same in shoes.

As for the airline unions, the blow came when the federal government renounced any intention of keeping airlines profitable.

With deregulation, entrepreneurs discovered that, come to think of it, they didn't have to charge such high fares. There were alternatives like "no frills," traveling. One such entrepreneurial venture, People Express, recently promised to fly us from Houston to Newark for a rockbottom $69.

Continental's problems stemmed essentially from its high labor costs, VIS A VIS its slim, trim competitor's, Southwest and Muse Air. The airline concluded that it couldn't stay aloft, weighed down by its fixed costs. Such costs, at the new Continental, assuming it finally takes off, will be much lighter than before.

The pilots may pick to their hearts' content. But this will not change the new economic realities. The fat, juicy union contract is becoming a luxury, not to say a competitive liability. The companies with contracts of this sort will lose out increasingly to the companies without: hungry-eyed, innovative, flexible.

Of course the unions can't admit as much, given that their whole RAISON D'ETRE is the negotiation of fat contracts. Instead they clamor for restrictions on foreign imports and for the election of their political friends, notably Walter Mondale, anointed paladin of the AFL - CIO and the National Education Association. Poor Sir Fritz. Wonder when he'll figure out why the horse they provided him lurches and staggers to the lists.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Oct. 10, the 283rd day of 1983. There are 82 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 10, 1981, Anwar Sadat, the assassinated president of Egypt, was buried near Cairo.

On this date: In 1945, the U.S. Naval Academy was opened in Annapolis, Md.

In 1911, revolutionaries under Sun Yat-Sen overthrew the Manchu dynasty in China.

In 1913, the waters of the Atlantic and the Pacific flowed together through the Panama Canal after U.S. engineers blew up the Gamboa Dam.

In 1963, a dam collapsed near Belluno, Italy. The resulting flood killed 1,800 people.

Ten years ago: Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned in an agreement with the Justice Department to admit evasion of federal income taxes and avoid imprisonment.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter signed a bill authorizing the minting of a new one-dollar coin bearing the image of Susan B. Anthony.

One year ago: Fast-moving brush fires, driven by the Santa Ana winds, destroyed 125 homes and injured scores of people in southern California.

Today's birthdays: Actress Helen Hayes is 83. Entertainer Ben Vereen is 37. Singer Tanya Tucker is 25.

Thought for today: "Better to ask twice than lose your way." - Danish proverb.

Pleading guilty and not guilty

I am constantly fascinated when I read in the newspapers that the Justice Department or a federal agency has just arrived at an agreement with a large company or powerful individual accused of wrongdoing.

The stories read something like this: "The Double Jeopardy Automobile Company agreed with the Justice Department not to manufacture any more of their Double Y cars without brake pedals. The company paid a $50,000 fine, and said it would recall all Double Y cars now on the road that are missing the brake pedal. While paying the fine and making to recall, Double Jeopardy executives denied that there was a problem with the Double Y car, or a reason for the recall."

I consulted a lawyer friend, of which I have many in Washington, to ask him what exactly it meant when the company was fined, agreed to recall all its cars and still was able to maintain its innocence.

"They have to do that," he said. "Otherwise the company would open itself up to a lot of frivolous lawsuits."

"I understand that. But why would the government allow them to maintain their innocence when Double Jeopardy forgot to put a brake pedal on the car?"

"The government is more concerned with getting the cars fixed than punishing the company for incompetence. If they bring Double Jeopardy to trial it's going to take years to resolve the problem, and in the meantime a lot more people could get killed."

"Suppose the company knowingly was selling cars without brake pedals? Isn't that a criminal offense?"

"Possibly. But let's start at the beginning. Double Jeopardy puts out a Double Y car without brake pedals. The engineering department catches it after the millionth car is on the market. They inform their salespeople, who tell them to shut up. Finally, the government safety people get wind of it and, after testing the vehicle for two years, come to the conclusion that the Double Y could cause a danger on the highway."

"They contact Double Jeopardy and say their data indicates the Double Y car may have a flaw in its braking system. The company responds by saying the safety agency did not test the car under road conditions, and the only time people have accidents in a Double Y car is when they try to stop it."

"The safety agency studies the data submitted by Double Jeopardy and concludes the only thing that can stop a Double Y car is a brick wall. In preparation for this negative reaction, Double Jeopardy has hired the best law firm in Washington - that usually means the law firm with the best connections to the present administration. The lawyer calls his friends at Justice and says he is shocked that the auto safety agency would pick on an American car firm just as the economy is starting to shape up. He offers to meet with the Justice Department lawyer to work out an equitable solution that will satisfy the company and the government. They make a date for a golf game at the Burning Tree Club."

"It sounds so civilized," I said.

"It is. Usually by the ninth hole an agreement can be hammered out. In the case of the Double Y car, the Justice man says, because of the publicity, he can't look the other way and Double Jeopardy will have to be fined and go ahead with a recall.

"The lawyer for the company says this is all right with him, providing Double Jeopardy doesn't have to admit there is anything wrong with the car, or else the settlement could be construed as an admission of guilt."

"The Justice Department lawyer says he is sure he can get the auto safety agency to agree to the stipulation, providing Double Jeopardy promises not to do it again."

"This is where I always get confused," I said. "Double Jeopardy agrees with the government there is a serious defect in the Double Y car, but doesn't have to admit it to its customers."

My lawyer friend said, "That's because you don't understand how the government and big business work. The government's job is to protect the consumer; the company's job is to protect their sales. As long as both sides sign an agreement that they know the company botched, the law is satisfied without admitting it, and no one really gets hurt."

'Kiddie porn' law supported

Now that Congress is back in session, it should take up some of the very important social agenda items that are of great concern to the American people. One of the most important of these items is enactment of the strongest possible law against child pornography, or "kiddie porn" as it is known.

No one is a more effective battler against this vicious abuse of children than the Rev. Bruce Ritter, director of Covenant House in New York City, who does humanitarian work in rescuing exploited young boys and girls.

In a recent letter to friends of Covenant House, Father Ritter described what needs to be done by this Congress. The following is an excerpt from his letter:

"The Senate has approved a bill - the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation Act of 1983 - which would ban the production and distribution of virtually all child pornography. In addition - and extremely important - the bill (sponsored by

Sen. Arlen Specter (R - Pa.) raises the age limit of children protected from use in pornography to 18. (It had been 16!) The House Judiciary Committee, headed by Rep. Peter W. Rodino, Jr. (D - NJ), is considering a very similar proposal.

"Nothing in current law, however, and nothing in the leading Congressional bills, allows the victims of child pornography to recover any compensation from their exploiters. To make matters worse, nothing in the current proposals would allow for special punishment of those who pursue child pornography as a business, with profit as their motive. Unless the bills currently pending are amended, those who organize to make and distribute child pornography will have nothing special to fear.

"It's amazing, but a very simple change in federal law could make all the difference. We have asked from the beginning and will continue to ask Congress to include sexual exploitation of children as a crime covered by one of the most powerful of all federal statutes: the Racketeering Influence and Corrupt Organizations provisions, or 'RICO.' RICO makes it a crime to make a business of other crimes - such as transmitting gambling information; shipping contraband cigarettes, or transporting children for use in prostitution. It gives victims of those businesses the right to sue for three times their actual damages plus attorneys' fees.

"At present RICO doesn't cover child pornography. This is the perfect opportunity - and perhaps the last chance for years - to correct the oversight. But Congress is going to miss that chance unless concerned voters around the country send a message to Washington."

Congress has a lot of important work to do in connection with economic matters and national defense. But there is no higher priority legislative item than protecting the nation's children from exploiters.

Preventing fires takes year-round commitment

DEAR READERS: Last year in the United States, 6,020 civilians and 117 firefighters died in fires, and approximately 300,000 civilians plus 100,000 firefighters were seriously injured. The total loss in property alone came to $6.4 billion.

In Canada there were 669 fire-related deaths last year, none of which were firefighters. The property damage was approximately $999 million.

This is Fire Prevention Week, and although fires occur throughout the year, each season has its own special fire hazards. Here are some tips for all seasons:

FALL: If you enjoy camping, select a tent made of flame-resistant fabric. Pack a reliable flashlight with plenty of extra batteries to light the inside of your tent — never use matches or candles. When building a campfire, place it downwind of your tent. And never try to hasten the burning by using gasoline or other flammable liquid starters.

If you use your fireplace, have your chimney professionally cleaned in the fall to make sure it's in good condition for the coming season.

WINTER: More fires occur during winter than in any other season. The reasons: home heating and the holiday season.

If you use a portable heater, be sure it is placed away from combustibles — draperies, furniture, paper, etc. Remember, the surface heat of some portable heaters may reach 500 degrees, so keep a careful watch on your children and warn them to keep away from heaters. Hospitals are treating an increasing number of patients with burns resulting from contact with the outside surface of some portable heaters.

For a Merry Christmas, choose a Christmas tree that does not have shedding needles, and keep it standing in water while it is in the house. If you choose an artificial tree, choose one that is flame-resistant.

After holiday parties, before retiring, check your ashtrays for smoldering cigarette butts, and carefully examine all upholstered chairs and sofas to make sure that no "live" cigarette butts have fallen between the cushions. Remember, most house fires occur between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m., when people are sleeping.

SPRING: Take spring cleaning seriously — clean out your attic, basement, garage and workshop. Throw out trash, especially combustibles like rags, newspapers, magazines, boxes and scraps of wood. Never smoke while fueling gas-powered lawn mowers or chain saws. If you must store gasoline, store it in a ventilated area in a can designed especially for that purpose. And store oily rags and paint in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

SUMMER: When cooking out, never use flammable liquids near live coals. An explosion or flash fire could result. When you've finished with cooking, soak the coals with water and make absolutely sure they're out when you leave. Smoldering coals that appear to be "dead" can reignite as much as a day later! If you use a propane gas grill, always have the lighted match in position before turning on the gas.

Some tips for all seasons:
Never smoke in bed.
Never leave invalids or small children alone in the house — not even for "a few minutes."
Never use flammable liquids for dry-cleaning in-closets.

Have periodic fire drills in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire.

Keep easy-to-use fire extinguishers in your kitchen, cottage, back bedrooms and on your boat. And if you can afford smoke detectors, install them and be sure they are always dust-free and in working order.

The phone number of your fire department should be taped to every telephone in your house. If it isn't, should a fire occur, don't waste time trying to find it; get out, and call from a neighbor's house. And once you are out, stay out. No measure is worth risking your life for.

It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it? I hope so.

Baby wall hanging is perfect for shower gift

By STEVIE BALDWIN

I always thought baby booms were supposed to occur in the spring. That's not so this year. Maybe it's due to the mid winter we had. Or, perhaps it has something to do with the ion concentration. Nevertheless, there are scads of brand new babies waiting for their "welcome to the world" gifts.

During the past few months, I have become quite crafty in the baby gift-making department. Occasionally, it's refreshing to make something fun and decorative, instead of practical and useful. That's the case with my latest baby gift: the Baby Wall Hanging pictured here.

By the time you've finished making your wall hanging, you'll be unbearably attached to it. Even though my youngest is almost nine years old, I am tempted to make another one just for me! You can create the wall hanging in just a few very enjoyable hours.

Overall dimensions of the baby wall hanging are 33 inches wide and 25 inches tall. It features a brightly-colored air balloon, floating lazily past a colorful rainbow. I attached ribbons and white eyelet trim to the front of the balloon for an additional decorative touch.

The balloon's passengers are three adorable, soft-sculptured beanbag babies. Tucked snugly in a cozy gondola, the babies' faces reveal sheer delight as they are whisked away into fluffy white clouds.

I chose bright yellow, pink, blue, and green checked gingham fabric for the wall hanging. Not only are they popular "baby colors," they make an excellent combination. I used the gingham to make the balloon, gondola, and tri-colored rainbow.

To make the balloon, cut a large oval shape from cardboard. Spread a generous amount of polyester fiberfill across the surface, and cover with a piece of gingham fabric. Wrap the edges around the back of the balloon, and glue into place. I used cement glue, but you can substitute hot-melt or industrial glue.

The gondola is made from cardboard, and covered with stuffed fabric. I attached a pink ribbon to the front, and sewed white eyelet trim around the top. The gondola is securely attached to the balloon by gluing 1/4-inch ribbon-covered dowel rods to the inside of the gondola, and to the front of the balloon.

The beanbag babies are made from stuffed pantyhose. Their tiny faces are soft-sculptured to give each of them a very distinct personality. I covered their delicate little heads with felt caps and eyelet bonnets. Colored ribbons trim their easy-to-make baby garments.

To make the two larger balloons, cut the shapes from cardboard, and cover the top surfaces with white eyelet fabric. Wrap the edges around the back, and glue into place. Attach white eyelet trim to the finished clouds. To make the smaller, soft-sculptured cloud, stuff two cloud pieces with polyester fiberfill, not using cardboard forms. Since the backs of the clouds will not be seen, you can use plain white cotton fabric for the back of the smaller cloud.

The rainbow strips are cut on the bias of the fabric so that the trips can be easily curved into a rainbow. Stuff each strip with fiberfill. Glue the upper ends of each strip to the back of the balloon, and sew the lower ends to the back of the smaller cloud.

To secure the balloon and clouds, position them to your liking, front side down, on a flat surface. Lay a 32-inch-length of wood horizontally across the pieces. Glue the wood to the back of each piece. Again, be sure to use heavy-duty glue. Let the glue dry thoroughly, and your masterpiece is complete!

Grownups join in Halloween fun

Two hundred years passed before Halloween caught on in America. Though the holiday has its roots in prehistoric pagan rites and was celebrated in England, Scotland and Wales long after the Middle Ages, it was unknown here until the Irish arrived in full force after the 1840 potato famine. Since then, children have taken Halloween over as their very own, dressing up in imaginative costumes, carving faces on Jack O' Lanterns and trick-or-treating like mini-brigands.

This year it looks as if something new will be added to Halloween. Adults are getting into the act. So much so that five and dime stores, where generations of children have been outfitted for Halloween, has added a line of adult costumes including Dracula, a clown and a skeleton among others, to those they traditionally stock for children.

Some people still insist on concocting their own costumes. In Elgin, Ill., Mrs. David Keare plans to wear the same Mexican shawl she wore last year. With three-year-old Amanda in a pink and-white bunny suit, five-year-old Isaac as Superman and the eldest, Amber, as Strawberry Shortcake, they're going to go trick-or-treating in their immediate neighborhood. Parents are no longer letting their children roam about unsupervised. "I have to get home early," says Mrs. Keare. "We're having a party for 30 children and I don't know how many adults." The menu? Pumpkin soup and popcorn balls.

In Atlanta, Joan Finley says her nine- and 10-year-olds, Dawn and Amanda "dress up in my high-heeled shoes. I get them a Halloween makeup kit and they paint their faces green with purple eye-lids. We're having a spook house for the whole neighborhood." Spook house, Mrs. Finley explains, was part of her Minnesota childhood. "The children are blindfolded, taken one by one into a dark room, and given eerie things to touch. Peeled grapes are John Henry's eyeballs, and warm ketchup is — what else? — blood! Everybody shrieks and has a wonderful time." Her husband, Jerry, who's an airline pilot, wears a shiver-inducing skeleton suit and acts as M.C. For the Johnson children, Anne and Sandy, in Stamford, Conn., Halloween is an all-day three-generation event. Firt there's a party at nursery school where the teachers, dressed as hoboes, serve chocolate cookies with orange icing. In the afternoon, Sharon Johnson, sporting a witch's hat, takes her daughters trick-or-treating in the neighborhood. "Afterwards, we go to their grandmother's house. There's usually a big crowd — she invites her friends and their grandchildren. It's hard to know who enjoys it most!"

Jewels & Gems

A pearl should be judged according to the following standards: It should have a luster which depends on the reflection of light from the pearl's surface. The pearl's "orient" is due to light refracted through the translucent surface of the pearl's various layers of nacre. A pearl should be free of blemishes and should also be judged according to its color, which ranges from pink to black. The size of the pearl should be considered as well. Its diameter is measured in millimeters. Generally, a pearl's desirability increases with size. Shape should also be taken into account. Finally, pearls should be matched using all the above characteristics.

To maintain luster pearls should be worn. But you need to be sure that yours are well stored or they might break. One of our services at RHEAMS DIAMOND SHOP is the care and a maintenance of your fine jewelry, including the re-stringing of pearls. Rafael Septien's kick wins for Cowboys God's team?

Dallas win borders on divine intervention

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have earned all six of their victories by coming from behind, but the four-hour-long overtime epic against lowly Tampa Bay bordered on divine intervention.

"I looked up through the hole in the roof and I swear I saw a picture of the Lord," said defensive back Dennis Thurman after the 27-24 triumph Sunday that kept Dallas the only unbeaten team in the National Football League.

Thurman's awe was understandable considering how the two-touchdown favorite Cowboys kept trying to lose and the 0-6 Bucs found ways to keep from winning.

Rafael Septien's second-chance 42-yard field goal with 4:38 expired in overtime was the game winner, a sudden end to as wild and bizarre a game as ever played in Texas Stadium.

Septien had just missed a 50-yarder, but Thomas Morris crashed into him and the Bucs were penalized for roughing the kicker.

"I guess God is watching us this year," said Septien. "I hit the second kick good, but I would have gotten another try anyway because the same guy roughed me again."

Dallas tied the game 24-24 with 47 seconds remaining in regulation when Timmy Newsome took a short swing pass from Danny White and turned it into a 52-yard touchdown play.

"These things (late rallies) are making my heart rate go up," Newsome said. "The law of averages is against us. Some day something has got to give."

Tampa Bay went ahead 24-17 with 8:53 remaining on James Wilder's 23-yard scoring run, but the Buc celebration was premature.

"We can't beat them here, even when we play good," said Tampa Bay John McKay, who is 0-6 in Texas Stadium. "We can't do anything with them. We had just as soon cancel here and play somewhere else."

"I think we are the best 0-6 team in football, but I don't know if that means anything."

The outspoken McKay blasted Morris for roughing the kicker.

"That was absolutely stupid. You've got to let him kick it from 50 yards and hope he misses it," snapped a seething McKay.

"Hell, he went in and did it a second time. If they had missed that kick he (Septien) would have had a third shot," McKay added.

The Bucs intercepted White three times and sacked him five times, but suffered a club-record 185 yards in penalties.

The Cowboys inducted Roger Staubach into their "Ring of Honor" at halftime and with boos raining down on White, some fans were hoping Staubach would come out of retirement.

"It was a special day and it was a shame we didn't carry it out onto the football field," said White, who hit 29 of 44 passes for 377 yards, including an 80-yard touchdown pass to Ron Springs.

"This should be the lesson that teaches us we can't do this," said running back Tony Dorsett. "The bubble almost burst today."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry concluded, "You couldn't win many games the way we played today."

He said the comeback was "amazing, but I say that every week. We just keep coming back each week and I am happy to be 6-0."

Houston defense gives DeBerge winning start

Nielsen learns about timetable

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Gifford Nielsen discovered that he had a five-game make good schedule the same way that the press found out — at Coach Ed Biles' post-game news conference.

"We decided we wouldn't even consider making changes in that position until after Gifford had five games," Biles said Sunday in response to a question about Nielsen's future as a starter.

Nielsen, in his third start since assuming the starting job after Archie Manning was traded, showed a new scrambling ability in Sunday's 26-14 loss to Denver but a pass late in the game did not please Biles.

Nielsen had tight end Walt Arnold open near the Denver goal and overthrew the receiver.

"They're getting paid good money not to make mistakes like that," Biles said following the game.

Nielsen said he was unaware of any timetable on his future at the quarterback position.

"If I direct the team and we win, everything will be fine," Nielsen said. "If I don't, then they have to make a decision."

"I've done everything in my power to win. He's the coach and he makes the decisions (about who starts). I have given 100 percent. I can't give any more."

Nielsen regained the starting job three weeks ago after Archie Manning and tight end Dave Casper were traded to the Minnesota Vikings, Sunday's opponent.

The Oilers have lost all three games under Nielsen and have an 0-6 record going into the game.

Nielsen said he didn't think about whether such a timetable was fair.

"One thing I've learned in this game is you don't know how things are judged and how fair things are," Nielsen said.

"How fair was it to trade Archie Manning and Dave Casper to Minnesota? When you're in this league you don't think if something fair or not, you just go out and do your best."

24-yards to Steve Watson and directed the offense that entered the game ranked 28th in the National Football League to 402 total yards.

Karlis provided the difference with field goals of 45, 39, 49 and 35. The 49-yarder was the longest of his career.

The best Houston could manage was Nielsen's 40-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Tim Smith in the second quarter and Earl Campbell's one-yard dive in the second quarter.

Campbell gained 101 yards on 19 carries for his 35th career 100-yard performance but it was far short of Sammy Winder's 165 yards on 29 carries effort for the Broncos, the top effort of his pro career.

Linebacker Tom Jackson said the Broncos defense had little trouble deciphering Houston's offense strategy.

"We knew in critical situations, they'd give the ball to Earl, so we just blocked up the middle and waited for him," Jackson said. "We knew they were having trouble with their offense and coming along slow with Gifford, so we wanted to force them to throw the ball."

'Wheeze Kids' against organization

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Recent polls contend football has overtaken baseball as America's favorite sport, but if it is true that the pigskin indeed is king, this is the one time in the year that it relinquishes its crown.

Baseball's big championship showdown — the World Series — remains supreme as the one event, more than any other, that excites every segment of the population.

Kids and grownups, hardhats and Wall Streeters will be sharing a single bond when the signal to play ball is given Tuesday night at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

If the stadium sported a marquee it would read, "The Wheeze Kids Against the Organization — Best Four-out-of-Seven Falls, No Holds Barred."

Few will dispute that the 1983 campaign boiled down to the two best teams in baseball — the American League champion Baltimore Orioles and the National League winners, the Philadelphia Phillies.

Both are proven winners, accustomed to World Series pressure, deep in talent with both good pitching and punch. It should be a dilly of a fight.

"The Organization" is the tag they've tacked on the Orioles. People speak of it as one might the Mob but with different connotations.

It's family. If a member of the family is lost, the head of the family reaches down and plucks a replacement from the lower echelon ranks.

Take the case of Earl Weaver. In his 14½ years as manager, the Orioles won 100 or more games five times, six division championships, four pennants and a World Series (1970).

When Earl retired at the end of last season, the experts said, "Oh, oh! With Earl gone, they can't be the same Orioles."

The Orioles hired genial, cigar-chomping Joe Altobelli, former minor league manager in the system who had strayed to the San Francisco Giants as skipper and later the New York Yankees as coach.

But the Orioles didn't miss a beat. Playing in baseball's toughest division — American League East — the Orioles rallied for a 27-7 record in September to leave the Tigers, Yankees and Red Sox puffing far behind.

The Orioles disdain the free agent draft. They don't go after high-salaried, heavily publicized super stars, letting Reggie Jackson go to the Yankees and not even trying to land the most coveted player in the 1982 list, Floyd Bannister.

The Phillies are cut of another bolt of cloth — a collection of Golden Oldies, in the twilight of their careers, and kids looking for the dawn.

The most celebrated of the antiques is the scrappy, unquenchable Pete Rose, 42, his hair flecked with gray, his spirit flaming, his heart and bat chasing the once thought imperishable records of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Hank Aaron.

Rose's old Reds' teammate, Joe Morgan, is 40 and another, Tony Perez, 41 — the "Cincinnati Connection." Gary Matthews, star of the playoff series against the Dodgers, is a 10-year itinerant veteran never with a winner before.

The team's best pitcher is a dour, introverted veteran of 39 named Steve Carlton, whose records occupy eight pages in the media guide. His interviews could be written on the head of a pin.

Paul Owens, 59, fatherly, soft-spoken, didn't like it when he was called from his general manager's office to the dugout after the firing of Pat Corrales in mid-season.

He liked it less when players became unhappy and unmotivated because of his platoon system and the team drifted aimlessly until Labor Day.

That's when Mike Schmidt, the perennial MVP, let out the blast about the Phillies' lack of direction.

The Phillies promptly won 11 games in a row and embarked on a win streak that clinched the division easily and Saturday night the National League pennant.

Now they're on a roll. Will "The Organization" be the stone wall that stops them? Stay tuned.

Texas, Arkansas showdown looms

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — To have success against the Texas defense, says Coach Lou Holtz, his Arkansas Razorbacks will have to run the ball inside.

Pampa golfers nab second

AMARILLO—The Pampa High School boys golf team placed second in a triangular match with Amarillo High and Plainview Saturday at the Amarillo public golf course.

In the first tournament of the fall season, the Pampa team totaled 306, finishing just eight strokes behind Amarillo's 298. Plainview was far back at 328.

Buffalos tie ISU

West Texas State University battled Illinois State to a 24-24 tie Saturday night in a Missouri Valley Conference game at Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

WT is 0-5-1, 0-0-1 in conference play while ISU's record now stands at 3-2-1, 2-0-1.

The win snapped the Buffs' six-game losing streak.

WT's Dennis Steinbock kicked the score at 24-all with a 43-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Illinois was leading 7-0 when the Buffs scored two second-quarter touchdowns to take a 14-7 lead at halftime. The scores came on a three-yard run by Wayne High and a one-yard plunge by Adrian Baker.

After the visitors tied the score in the third quarter, the Buffs added their final TD on Jeff Smith's 70-yard interception return.

ISU scored ten fourth-quarter points before Steinbock booted his game-tying field goal with 17 seconds to play.

WT's next game is at Wichita State on Oct. 22.

That, he says, is something no one has been able to do during the Longhorns' first four games.

"You have to be able to mix the run and the pass," Holtz said Sunday. "You have to run against them even if you only gain a yard. I never thought I'd be excited about a 1-yard gain but I will be Saturday."

McLean blanks Phillips

Elson Rice and Darin Corley provided all the offensive heroics McLean needed in a 7-0 District 1-1A win over Phillips Friday night.

McLean's defense forced a Phillips drive to stall at the Tiger nine-yard line in the fourth quarter.

Phillips intercepted three McLean passes and recovered two fumbles, but still couldn't penetrate the goal line.

The win gave McLean a 2-2 record for the season while the Blackhaws fell to 1-4. The Tigers are now 1-1 in loop play. Phillips is 0-2.

McLean visits Lefors for another district game Friday night.

WHAT'S BOTHERING YOU?

"I'm not feeling well, doctor," the patient says. "Well, what's bothering you?" asks the doctor. "I don't know exactly. I'm just not up to it lately. I feel kinda nervous, stuffy and on edge. Oh yes, I get these sharp little pains in different places at different times."

This is a common doctor-patient conversation. Are the patient's complaints psychosomatic? Are they all figments of his imagination? Is he merely trying to get sympathy? Not at all—the pains are real, even though they may be fed only by the mind.

Fear, anxiety and worry are common problems in our highly complicated society. They reflect themselves seriously in the physical body and are, conversely, fed by the physical body.

It is easy for one to advise, "Don't worry." But the fear of world situations in an atomic age, family problems in a fast-moving generation, and financial requirements in a free-spending, free-borrowing, competitive economy play an important part in causing the disturbances of physical structure and the distressing symptoms from organs.

"Feed-back" from muscle and organ tension are continuing sources of upset emotions. There are three approaches to treating such problems: via the mind, via the physical body and via a combination of the two.

The individual can do much to help himself by cultivating a deeper faith in himself, in humanity, and in a supreme being. Remember that worry, fear, and anxiety are habit forming. Allowed to take over, they often grow deeper and more intense. Thus the physical as well as the emotional aspects of the problems can become severe.

To gain more confidence in yourself, to release physical tensions, and to allow organs to function properly, your doctor of chiropractic urges you to give constant attention to your posture. Stand straight. Sit straight. Walk straight. By so doing, you will help convince the mind that there is little or no cause for fear. It puts you in command of yourself. And control of the body provides a controlling influence also over the mind.

Correct posture is a step in correcting many physical and emotional problems.

Investigation panel resigns

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — All five members of the commission investigating the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino resigned today, saying they wanted to clear the way for appointment of a more credible investigative panel.

The announcement was greeted with a standing ovation from an audience of about 300 people who had gathered for the scheduled resumption of public hearings on the Aug. 21 slaying.

Acting commission chairman Felix Antonio, a former Supreme Court justice, said the commission wanted to give a "free hand" to chairman-designate Arturo Tolentino, who announced earlier today he would not accept leadership of the group as it had been appointed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Tolentino, who did not appear at the hearing, said in a separate statement released by his office, "My conclusion was that under the present circumstances my designation would only serve as a cosmetic for the commission."

He proposed that a new investigative body be set up that would include non-politicians. Antonio said that Marcos appears to have accepted suggestions made by Tolentino on forming a new commission, but there was no immediate comment from the government.

Tolentino had told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the commission appeared to have "prejudged" the assassination at Manila's airport, which the government says was carried out by a gunman promptly shot and killed at the scene by guards.

The assassination triggered massive demonstrations by government opponents who accused Marcos' forces of complicity in the killing of his arch rival. Marcos has denied the charge.

The commission's session today lasted only 15 minutes, and the commissioners then left the hall in the Philippine International Convention Center where the hearings were to have been conducted.

Tolentino said Marcos created the commission through an administrative order that rendered the body "not an independent commission — but a mere arm of the president."

The commission had been scheduled to call Gen. Prospero Olivas, who headed the military probe into the killing, along with five men identified as the security personnel who escorted Aquino off an airliner when he was shot. Gen. Luther Custodio, head of the military group charged with protecting Aquino, also was to testify.

Current crop of candidates claim to make no promises

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Promise me no promises, interest me in no special interests. Would-be presidents think they hear that cry abroad in the land and that it will lead them to the White House.

A campaign without promises would be like a speech without words. It can't be done. But that is what some candidates now are pledging.

"Or is the right word, promising?" My program is not a set of promises, but a set of challenges, said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina. "Our people are tired of being promised what can't be delivered," said Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, moments later.

They gave back to back speeches at a Democratic Party conference in Maine. The theme was one they echo in Maine and New York, in California and Texas.

At this point that talk often seems aimed at Walter Mondale, the Democratic Party's unashed king of promises, and the candidate with a lock on the support of some of its most powerful interest groups.

In Maine, Glenn promised, "oops, said he would 'talk sense to the American people.'"

Hollings recited with some pride the groups to whom he had said no to senior citizens on their cost of living adjustment, to the rich on their tax cut, to a defense contractor on the MX missile and the B-1 bomber and to church groups on tuition tax credits.

Maybe they are out there, those voters who want a candidate who says no, who promises them nothing. But they weren't in the Civic Auditorium in Augusta, Maine, on Oct. 1. Mondale delivered a three and one-half page speech that was two and one-half pages of old-time political promises such as "I'll help our teachers make this the best-educated generation in our history ... I'll get those toxic wastes cleaned up ... I'll get those deficits down and I'll bring those interest rates down."

Did those Democrats shake their heads and mutter, there goes Walter again, promising anything and everything?

SMU, Texas stake their claims

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns staked a claim for a higher rating in the polls and Southern Methodist served notice it will not yield the Southwest Conference crown easily.

Texas blasted Oklahoma 28-16 while the Mustangs outgunned Baylor 42-26 behind Lance McIlhenny's four touchdown passes.

In other games, freshman quarterback Kevin Murray threw three touchdown passes in his starting debut as the Texas Aggies beat Houston 30-7. Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker got his first Horned Frog victory, a 34-3 triumph over Rice, and Texas Tech was stunned 30-10 by New Mexico.

Here's how it looked in the stadiums:

MURRAY DRILLS COOGS COLLEGE STATION — Kevin Murray, a freshman quarterback with a major league baseball arm, pitched three touchdown passes and an aroused Texas A&M defense shut down the Houston offense when it counted as the Aggies whipped the Cougars 30-7 — the highest point total ever for A&M against Houston.

Murray, who won a court battle this spring to get out of a baseball agreement with the Milwaukee Brewers, completed 18 of 31 passes for 217 yards in his debut as a starter. He also had a net of 39 yards rushing even after subtracting 28 in losses for a total offense of 256 yards.

Houston, for the second week in a row, had nearly 500 yards total offense — 472 — but lost.

The Cougars lost three fumbles to kill potential scores, at the A&M 2, 15 and 18, and punt returner Larry Shepherd dropped a punt at the Houston 49 with the Aggies leading only 14-7 to set up A&M's third and clinching touchdown.

Shepherd also erred by fielding a Kyle Stuard punt at the Houston 3, which led to A&M's second touchdown. Another Stuard punt rolled out at the Houston 3 and yet another was downed at the Houston 1. Except for a fumble recovery in the first half and a kickoff return to the 28 on their last possession, the Cougars started from their 20, 15, 20, 19, 21, 16, 3, 3, 20, 20, 20 and 1.

Houston tried running backs David Tate, Dwayne Love and Donald Jordan on three fourth-and-one attempts, but A&M held for no gain at its 26, 35 and 29

Jordan, the nation's eighth-leading rusher, lost the fumble at the 2, and Donald Kenebrew dropped the other two inside the A&M 20.

Freshman Keith Woodside scored A&M's first rushing touchdown of the season on a 6-yard dash after sprinting 61 yards to set up the touchdown.

In addition to Murray and Woodside, A&M halfback Rod Bernstine and split end Shea Walker, who also caught scoring passes, are freshmen.

"It's a good feeling when you have a freshman quarterback and some freshmen running backs all doing well and playing hard," said A&M coach Jackie Sherrill.

MUSTANGS BOUNCE BEARS

IRVING — In Irving, senior Lance McIlhenny took another step toward setting the "McIlhenny Era" in cement at Southern Methodist, directing the 13th-ranked Mustangs to a 42-26 drubbing of Baylor.

McIlhenny tossed four touchdown passes to tie a school mark and moved to third in total TD passes for SMU, passing Don Meredith.

After McIlhenny picked apart the Bears' secondary to extend SMU's unbeaten streak to 21, Mustang Coach Bobby Collins had his eyes only on Texas.

"Obviously, Texas is outstanding and we will have to play real hard to beat them," said Collins, whose team has a week off before facing the unbeaten Longhorns in Irving.

"We really need to improve in practice. It will be a great game and we will be ready for Texas. We are all looking forward to it."

Added Collins after the Baylor game, "It was just another Lance McIlhenny masterpiece. We've come to expect it from him and he always seems to deliver. ... There is no doubt that his passing has progressed this season."

Baylor's Cody Carlson tossed three touchdown passes of his own and Bruce Davis returned a kickoff 99 yards for a Bear touchdown, but the night belonged to SMU.

Dallas miracle highlights NFL

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Somehow, they do it. Every week, the Dallas Cowboys do it.

This time, though, even the Dallas players were wondering whether they'd pull out another comeback victory.

And, of course, they did. Rafael Septien booted a 42-yard field goal with 4:38 gone in overtime Sunday to lead the National Football League's only unbeaten team to a 27-24 decision over winless Tampa Bay. In all six of their victories this season, the Cowboys have come from behind. None of those rallies was more improbable — or more dramatic — than this one.

"We can't even lose if we try," said Septien, who had missed a 50-yard attempt earlier in the overtime, only to be roughed by Tampa Bay's Thomas Morris, giving Dallas the ball on the 28. "I was feeling terrible because I missed my first shot."

Dallas trailed 24-17 in the final moments and was deep in Bucs territory, when quarterback Danny White was intercepted in the end zone by Cedric Brown. But the Cowboys forced a punt, taking the ball with 79 seconds left on their own 26.

White hit Ron Springs three times, then passed to Timmy Newsome on the left sideline. Newsome tightroped the final 35 yards of the 52-yard scoring play to tie it with 47 seconds left.

"It was amazing ... a miracle," said Cowboys Coach Tom Landry.

Elsewhere, it was Buffalo 38, Miami 35, also in OT; Cleveland 10, the New York Jets 7; New Orleans 19, Atlanta 17; the Los Angeles

Rams 10, San Francisco 7; the Los Angeles Raiders 21, Kansas City 20; San Diego 28, Seattle 21; Washington 38, St. Louis 14; Denver 26, Houston 14; Minnesota 23, Chicago 14; Lions 38, Green Bay 14; Colts 12, Patriots 7, and Philadelphia 17, the New York Giants 13.

Tonight, Pittsburgh is at Cincinnati; Bills 28, Dolphins 35.

Joe Ferguson riddled the NFL's No. 1 defense against the pass for five touchdown passes and 419 yards. He hit Byron Franklin for two TDs and also found Joe Cribbs for a pair of scores, including the tying touchdown from the 1 with 23 seconds to go.

Joe Danelo hit a 36-yard field goal at 13:58 of OT after Miami's Uwe von Schamman missed from 52 and 43 yards in the extra session.

"This is something I really wanted to do before I got out of football," said Ferguson. "I'd like to do it again sometime." Browns 10, Jets 7.

Matt Bahr 44-yard field goal — helped by a gusting wind listed at 16 mph — as time ran out moved the Browns to the top of the American Conference Central Division. Cleveland's touchdown came on Bobby Jones' spectacular first-half reception of Brian Sipe's 32-yard pass. The Jets' Richard Todd connected with Bruce Harper on a 15-yard TD toss with 1:28 to go.

"I don't like to say this, but when you're tied, it's not quite as pressure-oriented," Bahr said. "You always know you might get another chance. When you're a point behind, you know you just have to make it."

New Orleans, at 4-2 off to the best start in its 17-year history, got a game-winning field goal from Morten Andersen for the second time this season. Andersen, who beat Chicago in overtime earlier this year, kicked a 35-yard field goal as time expired. He had four field goals in all.

"I knew it would come down to me," Andersen said. "Once we were inside the 35, I knew I could make it. I feel comfortable from the 50 on in."

The Saints had been shutout in their last two trips to Atlanta. Rams 10, 49ers 7.

The 49ers went into the game as the highest scoring team in the NFL but managed only a 3-yard touchdown run by Roger Craig with 4:52 left. Eric Dickerson, the NFL's leading rusher, picked up 142 yards and the visiting Rams' only touchdown. Chuck Nelson kicked a 41-yard field goal for LA and Ivory Sully blocked Ray Werschling's last-second field goal attempt.

National Football League Profile

This time last year Clarence Weathers was a construction worker.

Now he is a wide receiver for the New England Patriots.

How did it happen?

When he arrived at the 1983 Patriots training camp, Weathers, a free-agent, appeared to be the unlikely candidate to make the team.

Compared to the big-name rookies from the big-name schools, Weathers' forecast didn't look very promising.

He had to overcome a lack of size (5-foot-9, 165 pounds), plus a lack of experience. He had played only one year of college football — at Delaware State three years ago.

"When I walked into camp, I really didn't believe I would be around very long," says Weathers. "I went in thinking I would be cut, but hoping to learn something about the NFL that might help me if I tried out again someplace else."

Clarence made the final cut and wound up seeing plenty of action for the Patriots. In the first three games, he caught six passes for 109 yards. His best effort was four for 92 yards against Miami.

"If I'm dreaming this," says Weathers, "I don't want to wake up. Sometimes I have to pinch myself."
