Lebanese shell snipers after sixth Marine killed

army troops shelled hideouts of Shiite Moslem snipers today in south Beirut near the international airport where one U.S. Marine was killed and five wounded on Sunday.

The Marines remained on alert today against possible new attacks, and spokesmen said the U.S. peacekeepers have been unable to remove two of the Marines wounded in sniping and grenade attacks Sunday to a hospital ship off the Beirut coast.

The Marine commander, Col. Timothy Geraghty, 45, of St. Louis, told a news conference at his airport headquarters that all five wounded Marines were "in stable condition. The prognisis is good.

He accused "certain elements operating within the Beirut area" of attacking the American contingent in an effort to sabotage Lebanon's civil war cease-fire and a proposed peace conference among leaders of warring

Sunday was the third consecutive day of attacks on the Marines and raised the toll of Marine combat deaths to six since the U.S. peacekeeping contingent arrived 13 months ago. A seventh Marine died when a mine he was trying to defuse exploded.

None of the Marines shot Sunday was immediately identified. A total of 56 have been wounded in the past 13 months.

Geraghty said he did not blame the dominant Amal militia of the Shiite sect for the attacks on his 1,600 Marines. He cited assurances from Amal leader Nabih Berri that "members of his community are not involved in this."

'We have some ideas" about the identity of the assailants, Geraghty said. "I believe Mr. Berri is doing everything in his power to get these Beirut blamed the attacks on an extremist Amal splinter group called the Party of God that is loyal to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

A Lebanese army spokesman said soldiers fired an artillery barrage this morning to silence Shiite snipers shooting at positions near the airport. where the Marines serving with the multinational peacekeeping force are

Other army positions on the "green line" that divides Beirut into predominantly Christian and Moslem sectors came under sniper fire from Shiite strongholds at midmorning, Christian-controlled radio stations reported.

But no new casualties were reported in the latest violations of Lebanon's civil war cease-fire, which entered its yet on a site for a "national reconciliation conference" to resolve differences between the warring Lebanon's government attempted to

Economic crisis threatens Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's week-old government faced its first no-confidence motion today over its handling of an economic crisis that has shut down the stock market and doubled basic food prices.

The motion was presented by the opposition Labor Party and was expected to be debated on Tuesday or Wednesday, Parliament spokeswoman Dalia Asraf said.

Shamir's government was installed last Monday on a 60-53 vote, and that majority is expected to assure the defeat of Labor's motion

A senior government official said he expected Shamir to announce a new finance minister today to replace Yoram Aridor, who resigned Thursday after his proposal to base Israel's economy on the U.S. dollar was rejected.

The official confirmed reports that the candidates for the post had narrowed down to three: Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai, Industry Minister Gideon Patt and Yigal Cohen-Orgad, a Member of Parliament who is not in the government. All three belong to Shamir's ruling Likud bloc. Whoever Shamir chooses has a difficult task ahead - not only to choose successful economic policies but also to persuade the public that he will carry out promises without more unpleasant surprises like last Tuesday's devaluation

The uncertain economic climate was heightened by newspaper reports today that the stock market would remain closed until next week, setting off a credit squeeze because businesses have a large amount of liquid assets tied up in bank shares.

The newspapers Yedioth Ahronoth and Maariv said leading bankers were negotiating with the Treasury for measures to prevent mass dumping of bank shares, which have been seriously weakened by the crisis.

On Sunday, an estimated 1 million workers - 70 percent of the workforce - rstaged a nationwide two-hour strike. The protest was viewed as a warning to the government by the Histadrut labor federation against tampering with cost-of-living increases now granted automatically to compensate for inflation.

The Histadrut acted after the government last week devalued the shekel by 23 percent, hiked the price of basic foodstuffs 50 percent and said it would not grant the full compensation that salaried workers are used to receiving for inflation. The changes are predicted to boost the average family's cost of living by 10 percent

Among Israel's economic problems are an inflation rate of 131 percent a year, a rising trade deficit, and a record foreign debt of $21.5 billion. The stock exchange has been closed for 10

The union strike Sunday was peaceful and virtually complete.

Conservatives oppose McFarlane

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, bucking a strong lobbying campaign by conservative supporters. has decided to bring his special Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, back to the White House full time as the chief officials say McFarlane would move into the post of assistant to the president for national security affairs, which will be vacated when William P. Clark becomes secretary of the interior.

The officials, who spoke on the condition that they not be identified by name, said the president notified the top members of his national security and foreign policy team of his decision over the weekend. When he returned from a weekend at Camp David, Md., on Sunday, the president replied "nope" to questions about whether he had spoken with McFarlane about the job

The officials said they could see no snags developing, although Reagan has vet to actually offer the job to McFarlane, who is also Clark's deputy. "All that remains is the president making it formal," said one official.

Conservatives allies of the president, both in and out of government, had conducted what White House officials said was a strenuous campaign on behalf of Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. One White House official said Mrs. Kirkpatrick was in line for a new foreign policy job in Washington, although the details were not set.

McFarlane, a 45-year-old former Marine lieutenant colonel who has served Republican administrations since 1973, would not have the same access to Reagan as Clark. The current national security assistant has known Reagan for 16 years and is one of his closest advisers in Washington. Clark is leaving the White House to replace

James G. Watt, who resigned on Oct. 9. White House officials said McFarlane had the support of Clark and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, two top foreign policy and national security aides who have differed in the past. The national security assistant is responsible for briefing the president each day on foreign policy developments, summarizing for him the various options presented by the State Department and other foreign policy experts.

McFarlane served as a national security special assistant to Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford during their McFarlane has been valued at the White House for his ability to keep his mouth shut, a quality that has not endeared him to reporters. He's been called a master of obfuscation around the White House press room.

President still won't admit he's seeking re-election

WASHINGTON (AP) - Today, 1,000 days into his first term, President Reagan was signing legal documents making him a candidate for re-election.

Although Reagan has yet to state publicly that he is running for a second term in 1984, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., one of his closest political advisers, is establishing a re-election committee. The papers, once signed by the president, were to be deposited with the Federal Election Commission.

"He is going to run, and those who work with him on a day-to-day basis all feel that way," said White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III on Sunday.

"I'm 100 percent convinced the president will be a candidate for re-election." said Edward J. Rollins. the presidential assistant who has been chosen to run the campaign. The president and his aides have said

Reagan is reluctant to announce his plans because, if he is running, each step he takes would be seen in a political light. If he is not running, he would become a lame duck, they say.

Although the president's own announcement is said by Laxalt to be at least one month away, an extensive campaign organization is in the works, with state chairmen already designated and a Washington office taking shape near the Capitol.

Laxalt will be general chairman of the Reagan-Bush '84 Committee, the official name of the organization to re-elect the president and Vice President George Bush. Rollins will leave his current job as assistant to the president for political affairs and take over as campaign director. His White House deputy, Lee Atwater, will join him at the committee.

Laxalt, Baker, consulting strategist Stuart Spencer, deputy White House Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver, and pollster Richard Wirthlin will be given key policy-making roles.

L.L. Bean catalog parody sparks order deluge

NEW YORK (AP) - L.L. Bean, purveyor of gear for outdoor lovers and sporty preppies, was a sitting duck for a spoof of its popular mail-order catalog.

But when people picked up the decoy volume, entitled "Items From Our Catalog," they couldn't resist the bargains. Adorable doggie brassieres

- a steal at $7.75. Sheepskin-lined cases for canned tuna - $5. Edible moccasins - $41.75.

Several hundred readers got on the phone to Avon Books in New York, bank cards in hand. They mailed checks for the proper prepaid amounts, including the size and color of their choice.

The catalog, of course, was just a ioke. The items did not exist.

But a real pair of Bean's hip waders might have come in handy at the publisher's office, where an extra person was assigned just to handle the Lorraine Buckley, Brenner's assistant, was the bearer of the bad news. "We just had to tell people, 'Sorry, it's just a gag,'" she said. "Some people were very upset that they couldn't order the items.

Helms going to court over holiday

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate is set to pass a national holiday honoring Nobel laureate Martin Luther King Jr. but not before conservative Republican Jesse Helms makes one final attempt to

While Helms is planning to battle the proposed holiday on the Senate floor in a federal courtroom leaders of both parties say when the roll is called Wednesday, approval will be overwhelming. King's widow. Coretta, who waited 15 years for the moment, plans to attend the Senate session. Similar bills have been introduced each year since the civil rights leader was assassinated on a Memphis, Tenn., hotel balcony April 4, 1968, but until this year, the votes were missing.

The legislation, which breezed through the House 338-90 on Aug. 2. would set the holiday observance for the third Monday in January to honor King's Jan. 15 birthday. The holiday would begin in 1986.

White House spokesmen said President Reagan, who once opposed another paid holiday for federal workers, now is committed to signing the first bill honoring the achievements of a black American with a national

DOE officials say they have handled the case no differently from any other overcharge case. Since 1975, more than 4,000 oil price settlements have resulted in payment of about $4 billion by energy companies There is no doubt in my mind that these charges by the Vanderbilt attorneys are totally baseless," said Rayburn Hanzlik, the government's chief oil price enforcer. "Essentially, all companies of that size were subject to audits. It's not a big case. It's not a priority case. But Craig Dodd, an attorney for the

Hinckleys in Enid, Okla, told the Times Herald that he disagreed that the government was not treating this case any differently. 'It's the most oppressive, outrageous, inexcusable, heavy-handed government action that I've ever heard of," he told the newspaper. "But for the assassination attempt, this case would have died long ago.

Dodd said Sunday night that the claim was filed to protect the Vanderbilt Energy Corp.'s option to take action in the future, so that the statute of limitations would not run out.

"I guess it's a matter of principle," said Scott Hinckley, John Hinckley Jr.'s brother. "We are simply putting the DOE on notice that we're not going to roll over and play dead. We feel like our integrity has been questioned, and it's not something we'd like them to get

Texas Ranger was unwilling confident of Henry Lee Lucas

DECATUR, Texas (AP) - When Henry Lee Lucas began telling his tales of dozens of killings, it was Texas Ranger Phil Ryan who became the 47-year-old drifter's unwilling

"I tell you, I've been to two country fairs and a hog-calling, and I've never seen anything like this," Ryan told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Lucas claims to have murdered more than 150 women in 16 states. Since June, when Lucas was arrested in Montague, Ryan has spent most of his time in the jail listening to the slightly built former mental patient with whom he has formed a grudging bond.

That first night, to sit there and listen to someone talk in detail about all those murders. ... We went until 4 in the morning. ... In one night, he goes through 40 murders, what they (the victims) said, what he said, where he stabbed them, how he stabbed them. ... I don't know. It can't help but affect you if you value human life at all," Ryan said.

There have been times when, with the exception of eating and using the phone, I would stay with him for 12 hours. I went from being enthusiastic to where I had to force myself to go in and talk to him. I'd rather have done manual labor than talk to Henry another day."

Ryan said he often had to fight his own revulsion in order to do his job and take Lucas' statements.

"You have to reach back in your reserves sometimes just to be able to offer him a cup of coffee," he said. "You learn to shield your emotions, to be able to still treat them like human beings. I say, 'Henry, I hope God has mercy on your soul, but you have put him to the test.

Because of his hours of conversations with Lucas, it was Ryan who provided much of the information to about 80 law enforcement officials who met in Monroe, La., last week, hoping to link unsolved murder cases to Lucas and sometime traveling companion Ottis Toole, jailed in Florida.

Lucas has been indicted in eight slayings in Texas and one in Louisiana. He pleaded guilty in the death of Kate Rich, 80, of Ringgold, and received a 75-year prison sentence.

Ryan said he thinks Lucas changed his plea in the Rich case partly because "I don't think he liked the idea of being pitted against us. For a period there, he had more confidence in us than in his attorney.

Lucas was convicted in 1960 of killing his mother. He spent six years in a mental institution, was paroled and went back to prison on a kidnapping charge.

Lucas, Ryan says, is "a prime example of why the death penalty should be carried out." Nevertheless, Ryan says, "You can't take his humanity away from him. There is still a likable trait to the sorry Ryan said he, like others, at first assumed that Lucas was making up his admissions. Then Lucas' stories started checking out. Some didn't, though. Lucas told Ryan that he killed his schoolteacher when he

"She's alive and well," Ryan said.

Ryan said when other law enforcement entities began lining up to talk to Lucas, Lucas relished the attention

'If you're planning' on putting it in the air, you better look at it again." Scholl told Beck as the North Dakota crop duster looked at his purchase.

Vintage airplane collectors who somehow saw flight in the remains of the old planes put their money where their hearts were during the auction at the late H.H. auctioneer Irv Rosen was brought in to get rid of the stockpile. Coffield's will specifies the charities that will share the proceeds.

Ben Houle of Lakeway, Texas, an old plane buff, saw nothing more than "junk" at the Saturday auction. Bob Collins, whose love of B-25s brought him from Boston, decided early that he wouldn't be a bidder.

"I'm interested in B-25s. I'm not really interested in these. They're in rough shape," Collins said, adding that a B-25 in good shape could bring up to $100,000.

"These are worth whatever somebody is going to bid. You find a crazy and they're worth $10,000-$20,000," said

But Beck came south with a more positive attitude. "Anything will fly," he said, adding, "You've got to have a good banker.

About 500 bidders registered for the Saturday auction. Rosen knew the condition of the goods.

"We make no guarantees or warranties on anything offered," he told bidders.

The warning strangely echoed the caution long ago painted on Coffield's hangar: 'If you have permission to use this field, you do so at your own risk and no obligation by the owner.

Interim director has unenviable job

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Supporters say Daniel V. University and graduated in 1961 with a degree in sociology. 'Red'' McKaskle will be more responsive to demands for changes within the embattled Texas prison system. His critics say he will continue the "business-as usual" tradition.

McKaskle, 44, was chosen as interim director of the Texas Department of Corrections after W. J. Estelle abruptly resigned the post earlier this month.

Sweeping changes ordered in response to a federal lawsuit by inmates in 1981 upset the tradition-bound routine of the prison system, and Estelle said he was unwilling to accept further compromises the way the TDC was run. McKaskle said changes will occur within the prison system and employees who cannot adapt or break the rules will be

"We need someone like Dan who can re-establish the TDC's creditility with state officials and legislators," TDC Board Chairman Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls told the Houston

"McKaskle has not been one of the great prison reformers and, in some cases, has been an obstructionist in the way of inmate rights," Turner said.

David J. W. Vanderhoof, a former Justice Department lawyer now representing inmates in their claims against the state, said McKaskle "will maintain control in the old TDC business-as-usual tradition.'

A federal court hearing had been scheduled today in Houston about conditions on Death Row. But a last-minute effort by McKaskle avoided another lenghty round of hearings.

Under an agreement which will be presented to U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice for approval, more than half of Death Row prisoners will be allowed many of the same privileges as other inmates.

McKaskle worked his way through Sam Houston State hand," Gunn said

A former basketball player, he coached an inmate team at the Huntsville Unit in his spare time. His volunteer work landed him a job in 1962 as recreational director.

He rose quickly through the prison ranks, promoted to lieutenant in 1964 and captain in 1965. Three years later, at age 30, he was named warden of the Diagnostic Unit and assistant director for TDC classification.

McKaskle was appointed in 1973 to head the special services division, which keeps in contact with all the unit wardens and oversees the system's security.

He preformed well. The number of inmate escapes, one indicator of security effectiveness, is much lower than at other

He also earned a reputation as being tight with money Texas lawmakers have complained recently about TDC budget overruns.

Some of the TDC's sharpest critics have noticed a difference in McKaskle's operating style.

'McKaskle is very sensitive to the wishes of the board, which is a dramatic change from Estelle, who was a flamboyant director," said Rep. Ray Keller, D-Duncanville. "The board allowed Estelle full rein and it turned out they just didn't know what was going on, which led to some embarrassing situations," Keller said.

Gunn said he is confident McKaskle will carry out the board's reinforced policy against brutallty against inmates. "I feel strongly that Dan will help bring the system into compliance with the court order and still maintain our system

JUIL studying reforms of academic standards

University Interscholastic League committees have taken the first step toward raising the academic requirements for public school students involved in extracurricular activities.

The committees voted Sunday to back reforms suggested by the UIL director and to send them to the league's 20-member legislative council today.

The proposals include increasing academic requirements, penalizing students who are held back in the seventh and eighth grade for athletic reasons. punishing coaches who break UIL rules and banning school expenditures for nonessential

If the coucil approves the reforms, the proposals then would be put before the UIL member school districts in a spring vote.

UIL Director Bailey Marshall announced his reform program last month to the Select Committee on Public Education, chaired by H. Ross Perot, who is a strong critic of extracurricular activities.

Perot, during a five-minute appearance before the full council on Sunday, issued another attack on what he considers the over-emphasis on extra-curricular activities in Texas public schools.

"Unfortunately, while you activities, our schools in some areas across the state have deteriorated to the point where four Ds and an F are considered adequate performance in the learning activities." said Perot "In some schools nonacademic activities have taken over the school day," he complained.

But a San Antonio school trustee said tougher academic standards for UIL participation could spark "a unique form of segregation."

Saving she is concerned about Hispanic students in her district, Sylvia Ward said sports and other activities encourage youths to stay in school. Such activities "keep more people in school than math and English." she said.

"Will taking something a student really loves away from him encourage him to hit the books harder? I doubt she told the council 'Let's keep kids off the streets and involved in wholesome activities.

John Buchanan, a Spring Branch school trustee, said he was speaking for the "silent majority" that believes extracurricular activities are crucial to education. He urged the council to resist the suggestions of "the inexperienced and the uninformed" and called would be set as passing. Most Texas high school students take six courses. Under the proposed rule, a passing grade in physical education would not count toward the required four.

The UIL policy committee voted Sunday to back Marshall's proposal that students pass four courses instead of the current three to participate in UIL programs. A grade of 70, or C.

Committee member Wayne Schaper, principal of Spring Branch Memorial High School, predicted the UIL might move within two years to require passing grades in all subjects.

"I don't want to move it too fast," he said, when asked why the committee did not now back five passing grades. "It would be a shock to some

The policy committee also backed Marshall's plan to penalize families that hold back students in junior high school in order to give them another year of growth before high school. Such students would lose a year of high school sports eligibility for each year they were held

Walesa's selection a timely message

The selection of Lech Walesa as winner of the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize came as Poland's Communist regime was intensifying its propaganda campaign to villify the Solidarity union founder and the principles of freedom he espouses

The government's claim that Walesa tried to hide a million dollars in alleged Western contributions is patently absurd. It only demonstrates how desperately the community authorities want to destroy the Solidarity

In choosing to honor Walesa, therefore, the Nobel Committee has sent a timely message to him, to all the people of Poland, and to the world. It proclaims that he and his countrymen are not alone in their courageous

In leading Solidarity's battle for worker rights against an oppressive government, Walesa came to symbolize the universal aspiration for freedom. His own profound respect for individual dignity was illustrated by his efforts to avoid violence. His emphasis on negotiations, instead of confrontations, clearly prevent more bloodshed on the streets of Poland.

In outlawing Soldarity and imposing martial law, the Polish government served notice once again that the totalitarian Communist regimes routinely view workers as mere exploitable slaves of the state, without a shred of dignity and with no claim to rights.

Martial law has been lifted. But the restrictions placed on the Polish people are as severe as ever. Although Walesa has been freed from confinement, the authorities monitor his every move. And the current propaganda campaign against him may well be a prelude to the filing of phony charges, the staging of a show trial, and imprisonment.

We must hope such a move will be detered by the Nobel Peace Prize. Even Warsaw's communist masters must know their own problems and liabilities with Solidarity have been multiplied by the decisions of a committee in

"Aren't you carrying this infatuation with Brooke Shields a bit far?"

Warren T. Brookes

Inflation may be under control

Given the history of the 1970s, it is perhaps not surprising that almost a third of all Americans still think inflation is rising, even though we have just witnessed the sharpest drop in inflation of any Western nation in modern history-from 13.5 percent in Carter's last year to 2.6 percent in Reagan's third year, the lowest year-to-year rate since 1965. But such disbelief is not all bad.

Knowing how easy and "prfitable" it is for politicians and banks to inflate, the 'inflation watch" must be unrelenting. Suspicion and skepticism are useful public attitudes on this subject.

At the same time, you can carry such attitudes too far, in the process undermining public confidence and unduly escalating ong-term market interest rates.

With this in mind, we suggest that the "bearish" outlook for inflation for 1984 and 1985 ought to be challenged as overly pessimistic-and therefore harmful to the recovery climate.

Our view is that not only will year-to-year inflation for 1983 wind up below the 3.9 percent of 1982, but that in 1984 it will remain at or below 4.5 percent, and for 1985, perhaps even lower. We know that on this subject we are bucking the mainstream "experts" who are strongly arguing the opposite.

In late August, for example, "Dr. Doom." Henry Kaufman of Solomon Brothers. predicted that interest rates would continue to rise for the balance of this year, So far, he's been dead wrong, but then that's nothing new for old Henry. But on Sept. 1, Professor Milton Friedman weighed in with a prediction that a "surge of inflation is likely next year." In a scholarly op-ed piece in the Wall Street Journal, he attempted to refute all those on the "supply-side" who say that rigid monetarism doesn't work because it can't account for striking changes in the velocity, or turnover, of

Then on Sept. 19, a round-up Journal lead story noted that a surprising number of key forecasters were raising their inflation estimates for 1984-85.

James Solloway of Argus Research flatly argued that inflation for 1984 would be 6-7 percent and 8-9 percent in 1985. He told the Journal that "it's already embedded in the system." Like Friedman, he is impressed by the fact that from July 1982 to July 1983, the nation's basic money supply grew at a nearly 14-percent rate, while the real GNP grew less than 4 percent.

What toubles Solloway and many other Wall Street experts is the fact that basic commodity prices have been rising at an astonishing rate since late 1982, with various indexes showing a 15-to-20 percent rise. much more than usual even in the early

With all these jittery indices and bearish experts, it is perhaps not surprising that the administration has tried to put a quick damper on these inflationary expectations.
On Sept. 22, Martin Feldstein told the

Indianapolis Economic Association, "The inflation situation is basically under control...The administration's forecast of an inflation rate of about 5 percent next year. followed by a gradual decline of inflation in the coming years can be achieved."

Feldstein pooh-poohed the fears about the 1982-Federal Reserve money supply expansion. "Monetary policy has come through a very difficult transition period and is now very much on track...it looks like no further tightening of the monetary aggregates should be needed in the months

Is Mr. Feldstein just a "cockeyed optimist", or is he more on track than the doomsters? I think he's right. Over the years, I have learned one thing about monetarism. While its basic tenets are solid, it is a very imprecise predictor of consumer price inflation. As Polyconomics expert Alan Reynolds has pointed out, the Friedman two - year lag "model" which suggests that inflation two years hence can be predicted by money growth - (M-1) now, has seldom worked, except as only the crudest indicator of trends.

In this respect, I have found only one indicator that consistently "tracks" with inflation year to year and that is the trend in unit labor costs.

For example, from 1970 to 1974, unit labor costs rose an average of 5.92 percent a year, and inflation (CIP) an average of 6.14 percent. From 1975 to 1979, unit labor costs averaged 7.34 percent and inflation 8.08 percent, and even in the very volatile period from 1979 to the present, the variation has been only one percentage point.

Ho I ele

When an indicator is that accurate, we ought to pay attention to it, and I do. Since 1982, unit labor costs have actually been trending down, because wage rates are rising only 5 or 6 percent. while productivity is rising over 4 percent.

With the recovery barely underway, and with productivity almost certain to rise by at least 3 percent in 1984 and the same in 1985, against already built - in wage growth in the 5 - to - 7-percent range for both years. we are looking at unit labor cost increases of no more than 3 - to - 4 percent for at least the next two years.

Unless there is another oil embargo (unlikely with decontrol), there is no way the CPI can rise more than 4 or 5 percent for the next two years and possibly a lot longer. The "experts" are wrong, and the gold market (which has been steadily falling since last winter from $490 to $415) is right.

propensity to use government regulation to its own advantage Businessmen usually criticize the FDA (often correctly) for its molasses - like pace in approving new products. Dangers of being a champion

I went to the Monetary Health Fitness Club the other day to see the different currencies work out.

Most of the currencies were flabby and breathing hard. The only one that seemed in great shape was the American dollar. Its muscles were bulging and it was shadow boxing in the ring.

Secretary of the Treasury Don Regan, the dollar's manager said, "We have a real slugger now. In the late '70s the dollar was the weakest fighter in the world. Everyone was killing us. But now we have the world champion

"That's great. Who is that getting in the ring with it?' 'The French franc. It hasn't won a fight since Mitterrand became president.'

The bell rang and the two currencies started at each other. The dollar jabbed to the face and when the French franc took a wild swing, the dollar ducked and hit the franc in the stomach, then the head, then a mean right squarely on the jaw. The franc was groggy and almost fell to the canvas

A few minutes later the franc was being counted out, and the dollar was hardly it instructions. But the British pound could hardly stand on its legs and after playing with it for a round, the dollar knocked it out of the ring.

Mrs. Thatcher said to Regan, "Your president is going to hear about this." The next contender was the West German mark, who had held the currency championship for years. It was a real grudge match.

Regan said, "The dollar will kill this guy. It took a terrible beating from him during the Seventies and it wants revenge."

The West German head of the Central Bank came over and said, "If you beat us from America.

Regan told him, "I have no control over the dollar. The only reason it's so stong is that your own people are betting on my boy instead of yours.

The bell rang, the dollar moved in quickly and hit the mark right in the solar plexus. Then it started working on the mark's face. The mark's right eye began to bleed and the Swiss referee stopped the fight.

The West German banker said, "You think you won, but now that we're weak we're going to flood the U.S. with German goods that will underprice anything you can

The last fight was between the dollar and the Japanese yen. At one time the yen had even been stronger than the West German mark. But it also lost a match to the dollar.

The Japanese Minister of Finance said, "You have made us lose face. But we are not worried. Our exports will make up for any money we lost on the fight."

Regan went over and shook hands with the dollar. "Good show," he told it. But when he came back to me he looked worried.

"You don't seem as happy as I thought you would be."

"I wanted a strong dollar, but I didn't want it this strong. If it keeps knocking out the other currencies no one will be able to afford to buy American goods abroad, and that means high unemployment in this country and a whooping trade deficit. Everyone is blaming us for putting steroids in our interest rates. But if we lower the interest rates we'll be back to high inflation, and the dollar could be knocked out again." "Why don't you throw a fight? Then people abroad will start getting faith back in their own currencies."

"Who do you suggest we throw a fight to?" "What about the Italian lira? If the money dealers see the dollar lose to the lira, our currency will become the laughingstock of the world, and you won't have to worry about anybody being afraid of the dollar

Reforms hinge on '84 elections

The future of the reforms introduced by President Reagan depends very much on the character of the U.S. Senate after the 1964 elections. Those reforms already are threatened by liberal control of the House of Representatives. If the liberals are in the majority in the Senate, the reforms are likely to be abandoned. Obviously, taxpaying, responsible Americans have a tremendous stake in the protection of reform efforts. Among the most important of those reform moves is Mr. Reagan's effort to restore fiscal responsibility to the government. While the cost of government has continued to move upward, Mr. Reagan has been successful in wing the rate of growth. He has made repeated attempts - frequently frustrated by liberals in the House of Representatives - to bring welfare state programs under proper control, as in the case of the much - abused food stamp program.

President Reagan's reform movement has not been carried forward singlehandedly. He has depended on strong fiscal conservatives in the U.S. Senate, such as Sen. Jesse A. Helms of North Carolina. who has played a leading role in exposing the food stamp abuses. For this type of legislative effort, Sen. Helms has received the Watchdog of the Treasury Award each year since 1972.

As President Reagan and Sen. Helms have learned, defense of the public interest in sound fiscal programs is not an effort that always is rewarded with applause. Powerful constituencies want to expand welfare state programs and return to the spend - and elect philosophy that characterized the U.S. government for so many years. And when, as is the case with Sen. Helms, a national policy, also is committed to a strong national defense and foreign policy. opposition become intense. In the 1984 elections, the welfare groups and the antidefense lobby plan to team up to defeat senators who are vigilant in protecting the national interest.

It will take many years to implement the reforms that President Reagan has introduced. The country has to be mindful of the need for on - going leadership in this reform effort. After Mr. Reagan completes his work, there must be strong leadership in the Congress that will be dedicated in carrying on the work that has been begun.

The American people labor under an enormous debt built up over decades. This debt threatens the well - being of the rising generation. There is no more important task, therefore, than ensuring the continuing influence of fiscally responsible legislators who will work against any reversion to the runaway spending that characterized the U.S. government, beginning in 1961.

The taxpayers of the nation must have their champions in both houses of Congress.

Kids give their ideas on how to be good kids

DEAR READERS: It all began when I published "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Wife," followed by "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Husband." Then a reader signed "Old-Timer" suggested that I invite the younger generation to submit its "10 Tips on How to Be a Good Kid."

DEAR CONSUMER REPORTS: Do they make washing machines today that have a permanent press cycle - actually a slower agitating cycle? The old Whirlpool that I had for 17 years had a regular cycle and a gentle cycle for permanent press clothes. When I opened the lid, the machine kept right on working and I could see that the cycle was much slower than the regular cycle. You could practically wear the clothes right from the machine.

Last year, I bought another Whirlpool. Although permanent press appears on the panel and it was supposed to be a 2-cycle machine, it wasn't. I exchanged it for a General Electric washer and found it had the same problem. The clothes were terribly wrinkled from both machines. If my first machine had not been so perfect, I would not have known the difference. Can you help me? DEAR READER: As you have discovered, not all washing machine models use slow agitation in their permanent press cycle. However, Consumer Reports' engineers say that there are several models that do enable you to select the agitation-speed inde-

Sound self - esteem is probably the most sought - after functional level know today. We want to feel good about ourselves throughout our lives.

Self - esteem is an emotion — a feeling within that can open doors of opportunity. It is total, unconditional acceptance of oneself in spite of past mistakes, failures, rejections and putdowns. Sound self - esteem gives us freedom to take charge of ourselves. It will give us a way to maximize our full potential, helping us to become full functioning individuals in these five areas of our lives: family, physical, mental, social and even financial

These are maximum potentials for each person. These are a fair approach to life. There is freedom from guilt, bitterness, worry, hurry, fear, anxiety, depression, loneliness, conflict and self - pity in sound self - esteem.

You may be thinking I've lost my mind in believing that each person has the power within to realize these possibilities. Sound self - esteem is a way of life that allows you to recognize everyone as innately "good." Count your blessings and rejoice in your growing awareness that you can make the most of each day by making use of the power within. Here are two examples:

A man in Wichita Falls, named Ray, was diagnosed with terminal leukemia a year ago. The usual grief period followed. Chemotherapy and radiation ran their course without good results. Ray decided to go with sound self - esteem, use the power within and believe in restoration. He used mind pictures, actually visualizing little images submerging into the cancerous tissues and ripping them apart and breaking up their network of death - wish accumulation. He has used mental pictures for about six months now and is in a stage of reprieve at this time.

Second, a young lady in Texas decided four years ago that she would get her degree in elementary education. She is married and an excellent homemaker, employed with a fine independent insurance agent and is active in the church, involved with pre - school age children. There were no means to get an education - no money, no time, no encouragement She dreamed on until the power within took over. In June 1984, this determined young lady is to finish her education at Midwestern University and become an elementary school teacher, because her power within gave her sound self esteem to believe in her potential as a person of worth. She continues working, homemaking and volunteering at the

rmy' marches to victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They are a team of role players, a baseball club assembled like an army that comes at you in style. One was a screamer and the other is not. waves, row after row of fresh troops.

And the Baltimore Orioles are the world champions today depends on moving players like chess pieces to suit situations. This is not a team of greats, but it's a great team.

The general in charge of this battalion of spare parts is Joe screaming. Altobelli, a soft-spoken man whose club met the enemy at Philadelphia and wiped them out in five games. "Now," he said, "I can go home and see my grand-kids.

The last time Baltimore was in a World Series was 1979, when the manager was Earl Weaver, a fiery Napoleon type. The Birds led that Series 3-1 - just like they did against Philadelphia. But they let Pittsburgh off the hook that year, losing in seven games, only the fifth time in history a team has blown that kind of edge. This time, with Gen. Altobelli calling the shots and 15 troops from that team still in Baltimore's army, the story had a different ending.

"He's the smartest guy I know," observed Eddie Murray, who battled his way out of a 2-for-16 Series slump with a pair of mammoth home runs and a single in Sunday's 5-0 wrapup victory. "He put the right nine out there every day."

Not the same nine, but the right nine.

ME

The difference between Weaver and Altobelli is mainly in

"They were both outstanding managers," said Rick Dempsey, the Series Most Valuable Player, who had because they have mastered platoon baseball, a game that Baltimore's other two hits Sunday - a double and homer -and batted .385 for the Series with five hits, all for extra bases. "When Joe came in, there was no yelling and

Gen. Altobelli preferred a low-key approach.

"Obviously, it's quieter in the dugout," said Scott McGregor, whose five-hit shutout finished the Phillies and helped soothe the memories of '79, when he was the seventh-game loser. "I think Joe is just as good a manager as Earl, and maybe it proved we didn't have to be fussed at all the time. But Earl couldn't have done it any other way.

McGregor's shutout gave Baltimore a 1.60 earned run average for the five-game Series, the best in 40 years.

The closest Philadelphia came to a run Sunday was in the eighth inning when Joe Morgan tripled and Pete Rose followed with a long fly to left field. Morgan tagged up but tripped leaving the base, falling to the ground and scrambling back. It was symbolic of the stumbling Phillie offense throughout the becoming the fourth team to accomplish that. The Orioles were the victims the last time it happened, in 1969 when the New York Mets won the world championship.

Without the designated hitter in this Series, Baltimore lost the use of Ken Singleton, one of its important offensive parts. It hardly disturbed Altobelli, who set a Series record by sending four consecutive pinch hitters to the plate in Saturday's fourth game and made nine lineup changes in one

"I thought that was tremendous," said McGregor. Watching him, you got the feeling he was bored by the DH. Not bored, perhaps. But he certainly knew how to survive rithout it, using Baltimore's interchangeable parts.

We did quite a few things like this during the course of the season," the general said. "It was just magnified here. This club won 94 games last year. I just wanted to keep us going in the same direction."

His approach was to use all his players. The left field job, for example, was shared by lefty-swinging John Lowenstein and righty Gary Roenicke. The result was a combined 34 home runs and 124 runs batted in, numbers neither was likely to approach playing fulltime.

The major hurdle is the acceptance on the part of the Baltimore lost the opener but swept the next four games, players," said Lowenstein, who was 5-for-13 in the Series but "It takes maturity and it is a psychological adjustment as well as a mechanical one.'

Remember Tito Landrum? He hit the home run that clinched the American League pennant. He never came to the plate in the World Series.

The Orioles' playoff victory, like the one that clinched the division title and the one that nailed down the world championship, all came on the road. The Orioles, in fact, assembled baseball's best record away from home, another measure of the team's maturity.

Of course, not all the parts were interchangeable. The switch-hitting Murray bats fourth and plays first base against all pitchers, slumps notwithstanding.

Murray was struggling, with just two singles in the first four Series games. But he made up for that with a pair of huge home runs, fielping Baltimore.to a 4-0 lead in Game Five. The second one smashed into the right field scoreboard, hitting just above his own name on a list of American League runs batted in leaders which was being displayed at the time.

Murray's slump-snapping homers were in sharp contrast to the problems that Philadelphia slugger Mike Schmidt went through. Schmidt managed just one broken bat single in 20 at-bats and was a major contributor to the Phillies' .195 Series batting average.

Cowboys abandon miracle finishes

IRVING, Texas (AP) -The unbeaten Dallas from that point Cowboys abandoned their Twightlight Zone-Alfred Hitchcock storybook thriller scripts Sunday for a dramaless thrashing of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Dallas quarterback Danny White, tiring of stomach-churning last-second miracle victories, directed the Cowboys to a 37-7 triumph that left them as the National Football League's only unbeaten team.

'We finally showed some killer instinct," said White who displayed a considerable amount himself as he passed for two touchdowns and 266 yards.

It was Dallas' biggest victory over Philadelphia since 1971 and was the Eagles' worst loss since 1975 when Cincinnati beat them 31-0.

However, Dallas did have to come from behind for the seventh consecutive week. The Cowboys are now off to Joe Morgan had tripled with one out in the eighth inning Sunday and his Philadelphia Phillies trailing Baltimore in what would be the last game of the World Series. He asked for the game ball.

"I guess he thought he might be playing in his last game," Pete Rose said of his 40-year-old teammate. "But I don't plan to retire. I still will be playing baseball in 1984.

Following the most humiliating moment in his glorious career, the 42-year-old Rose had showed 'em.

He had been benched for Game 3 of the Series on Friday night; "embarrassed," he said as tears nearly came to his

The day had finally come when Pete Rose wasn't good enough to play in a World Series game.

But he started Game 4 Saturday, and came through with a single and a run-scoring double. And on Sunday, he came back with two singles and would have gotten a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning had not Morgan fallen down while

"I know Pete Rose can

The question, though, is whether the man who led the Phillies to their only world championship ever in 1980 will be back with the team next year. "We have until Nov. 15 to make a decision," Phillies President Bill Giles said Sunday. "If we decide not to re-sign him, we'll probably make that decision before then. It would make it easier on Pete. Early last season, Giles and Rose worked out a $1 million-plus, year-by-year contract through 1986 "Pete will finish out his career in Philadelphia."

Giles had proudly

But that was before he hit 271 last year, good for most players but Rose's lowest average since 1964. And this year, there were disturbing signs and numbers for the guy with a .308 career mark.

Outfielders began playing him a lot closer and far to the opposite field, knowing he couldn't pull the fastball.

There were whispers for the first time that he might not break Ty Cobb's all-time hit record of 4,191 He began taking extra Datting practice, staying long into the night after games, just him, someone

Houston fullback Earl nose guard Charlie Johnson, Campbell, the Oilers' 14th who dashed 50 yards for a straight loss, a 34-14 romp by Minnesota, sounded like the Tony Dorsett scored his latest verse in a depressing country music song.

"We've been aware of rumors going around that we're not too good against the run and so we came in at a high-intensity level," said Minnesota defensive end Neil

Elshire, making his first pro start in his 3-year career, earned some respect. He had four solo tackles, seven assists, a blocked pass, a fumble recovery and he sacked Houston quarterback Gifford Nielsen three times including a blind-side jolt that forced the ball to squirm

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - To loose into the waiting hands of touchdown.

"I was lying on the ground and I thought it was just a sack," Elshire said. "But I looked up and saw Charlie cookin' downfield - I really enjoyed watching that." Johnson's touchdown gave

Minnesota a 10-0 lead midway through the first quarter. But Campbell, who has now run for 100 yards 36 times in his career and four times this season, made it 10-7 when he carried a pair of Minnesota defenders into the end zone on a 13-yard run. Roman Catholic funeral for popular Irish-American actor

LOS ANGELES (AP) -Actor Pat O'Brien, who once joked that if he played one more Irish priest "they will have to ordain me," will be honored Tuesday with a funeral Mass at his neighborhood church

Surprising Raiders keep lead in SW

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

AP Sports Writer A quickie Southwest Conference quiz: Who is the current league leader? If you answered Texas or Southern Methodist you need a lesson on how to look at the standings.

The correct answer is Texas Tech, which keeps doing just enough to survive and also to lead the loop with a 3-0 ledger.

Tech downed Rice 14-3 Saturday night in a struggle that saw the Owls actually lead 3-0 in the second half.

Meanwhile, No. 2-rated Texas rolled toward for its nationally televised showdown this Saturday against SMU in Texas Stadium with a 31-3 slaughter of Arkansas. SMU was idle.

In the only other SWC games, Ole Miss beat TCU 20-7 and the Texas Aggies and Baylor Bears tied 13-13.

TCU TAKES A TUMBLE FORT WORTH - After Mississippi forced five Texas running back James Calhoun. Christian turnovers for its 20-7 victory Saturday, both sides could agree on one thing - it wasn't talent that made the difference.

"TCU had more speed than any team we've faced," said Mississippi coach Billy Brewer. "They played well, but they didn't capitalize on their opportunities like we were able to do."

Bear coach Grant Teaff used quarterbacks Cody Carlson and Tom Muecke on alternate series in the 13-13 tie with the Texas Aggies. And Teaff said later he eventually will choose one of those players for the full-time starting position.

"We eventually will pick one and it could be this week or next week," Teaff said. Both are freshmen.

Aggie freshman quarterback Kevin Murray did himself proud throwing a touchdown pass and leading a perked up A&M offense. However, he intentionally threw the ball out of bounds late in the first half thinking it was just third down and helped the Bears to a field
