

Accused child abuser gives birth to baby

PERRYTON (Spc) — A Perryton woman already in jail on a charge of severely beating her infant daughter was rushed from her cell to a Perryton hospital where she gave birth to a baby boy.

A laboring Ventura Melendez Ramirez, 20, was escorted from the Ochiltree County Jail about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday to the Ochiltree General Hospital. About two hours later, she gave birth to a seven-pound baby boy.

Ramirez, a Mexican national living in Perryton, named the child Abram; but at least for now, she can't call the child her own. The state welfare department immediately received emergency guardianship of the newborn, who was born with a serious heart defect. A custody hearing for the newborn will be held in 84th District Court at Perryton Tuesday.

The welfare department has received temporary custody of the baby boy, as Ramirez was previously charged Aug. 25 with the abuse of her one-year-old daughter.

According to authorities, a then pregnant Ramirez battered her infant daughter in their Perryton trailer home last Aug. 20. A neighbor at the Perryton trailer park heard both the mother and child screaming on the day of the alleged attack. The neighbor entered the trailer, saw the injured child, and took her to the Perryton hospital, police said.

The infant girl suffered head injuries, broken bones and bruises in the August beating, officers said. The child was transferred to an Amarillo hospital for further treatment and continues to recover from the injuries. The injured daughter and another of Ramirez's children, a four-year-old, were taken from the mother after the charge of child abuse. The four-year-old presently lives with foster parents in Amarillo.

Ramirez told police after her arrest that she sometimes "has spells" and cannot remember her actions.

Environmentalists furious

Reagan names another conservative to succeed James Watt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists are angry and Western conservatives delighted. Neither see policy changing with President Reagan's surprise choice of William P. Clark to succeed James Watt as interior secretary.

Amid howls he is unqualified for the job were expressions of hope — and fear — that Clark might succeed where the combative Watt failed in forging a consensus for developing the nation's public lands.

Almost all environmentalists were stunned by Reagan's announcement late Thursday that he was moving the 51-year-old Clark from the hotseat of world affairs as national security adviser to a domestic post where the greatest heat was generated by his predecessor's penchant for putting his foot in his mouth.

"We're dumbfounded," said Carl Pope, political director of the Sierra Club in San Francisco. "Mr. Clark has no visible record on environmental issues."

William Butler, a vice president of the National Audubon Society, said he was "thunderstruck" by the nomination.

"He is a God-fearing Westerner, a fourth-generation rancher, a person I trust and I think he will be a great secretary of the interior," Reagan said in making the announcement. Watt, who resigned last Sunday after losing the support of several members of his own party in the Senate, said Reagan could not have made a better choice.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, said Clark's ability to calm choppy waters made him an attractive choice to replace Watt, who had created sharp divisions within his own party with his policies.

A similar view was voiced by the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation group, and one of the few environmental organizations to not immediately denounce the appointment.

"From the little we know, Mr. Clark has a reputation as a consensus builder," said Jay Hair, a vice president of the federation.

Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., chairman of the House Interior subcommittee on mining and forest management, said the nomination "proves that to be Ronald Reagan's secretary of interior, you don't have to know anything about the stewardship of our precious natural resources."

"You just have to be willing to serve as a handmaiden to big business, the oil companies and the others who want to destroy our public lands for short-term profit," Weaver said.

But Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., who had been rumored to be one of the top candidates for Watt's job, said Clark is "an able and capable administrator."

Fifth U.S. Marine killed in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.S. Marine died after being caught in a hail of sniper fire today at Beirut's international airport and another Marine peacekeeper suffered gunshot wounds in both legs, Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said.

The fatality was the fifth suffered by the Marines since the latest round of violence in Lebanon began Aug. 28. Forty more Marines in the international peacekeeping force have been wounded in grenade attacks and bombardments.

Later in the day, Jordan said, two Marine positions came under additional fire and the Marines shot back.

Jordan said the dead Marine was hit by sniper fire in the chest and possibly the head. But Jordan said it could not be immediately determined whether the head injury was a gunshot wound or occurred when his jeep overturned as it came under small arms fire.

Jordan said he did not know which of the injuries the man died from.

The Marine, whose name was withheld until his family was notified, died in a helicopter that was evacuating him from the Marine base at the airport to a hospital aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Iwo Jima off the Beirut coast, Jordan said.

Jordan said the jeep was hit at 10:42 a.m. local time (4:42 a.m. EDT) by sniper fire from the northeastern corner of the road between the Shiite Moslem militia strongholds of Hay el-Sellum and Bourj el-Barajneh on Beirut's southern outskirts.

The other marine was wounded 37 minutes earlier in another jeep that came under sniper fire from the same direction, Jordan said. He was evacuated by helicopter to the Iwo Jima and was in "guarded" condition, according to Jordan.

Jordan said a Marine staff sergeant was riding in the jeep with the Marine who was killed. The sergeant was hurled out of the vehicle by the impact of the accident and was unharmed, Jordan added.

He said that Charlie Company, a unit of the 1,600-man Marine contingent, stationed at the northern end of the airport perimeter road, and the Marines' helicopter base both came under fire from rocket-propelled grenades and small arms.

"We have returned small arms fire,"

Jordan said. "I can still hear some small arms fire now."

Another Marine guard of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut's seafort Ein Mreisseh corniche suffered a slight shrapnel wound Thursday night when a hand grenade was tossed at the main Marine security checkpoint in front of the Durafor building where embassy offices are located.

All four Marines who died during the civil turmoil in late August and early September were killed by bomb and rocket shrapnel.

Since the latest round of violence began, 41 Marines have been wounded.

Today's attacks came a few hours after Druse militiamen fired at Lebanese army positions overlooking the Marine base and after Druse and Shiite Moslem representatives pulled out of the committee overseeing the 18-day-old cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war.

Meanwhile, representatives of President Amin Gemayel and major warring factions unanimously agreed Thursday on an agenda for a "national reconciliation conference" that is scheduled to convene Oct. 20.

President says 'Jump in'

Chamber installs new officers

New officers and directors for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce were installed Thursday night during a banquet at the Pampa Country Club.

Installed as president for the 1983-84 year was Marion A. John. Other officers will be Rev. Claude Cone, first vice president; Cheryl Every, second vice president; and Phil Gentry, finance director.

Elected for three-year terms as Chamber directors and installed last night were Mrs. Dona Cornutt, Mrs. Reed Echols, Joe Gidden, Gene Hall, Bill Harris, Roy Sparkman and Gentry.

Also installed were Bob Chambers, Paul Simmons and Richard Stowers, Jr., appointed to one-year terms as directors by President John.

"I have one thing to say to you: 'Jump in!'" John said to the newly installed officers and directors. He urged them to get active in the operations of the Chamber and be willing to work and share ideas.

Bill Waters, acting as installing officer, said, "You have been singly honored by your selection" to the Chamber positions.

He asked the officers and directors assembled at the banquet to "be realistic" about Pampa's business and economic situations. He said Pampa has had a good, strong youth, but now it is into its period of maturity, facing some problems that need action to overcome.

During the installation, he handed out pacemakers to the new officers and pieces of copper wire to the new directors. He used these to illustrate his analogy of Pampa needing new strength in its maturity.

Waters said the officers should be like pacemakers, ready to provide the needed stimuli to keep Pampa's heart strong and healthy. He compared the directors to the electrode by which the stimuli are conveyed to the heart, working in conjunction with the pacemakers.

Ed Sweet, 1982-83 president, presided over the meeting and introduced guests. Invocation was by Rev. Claude Cone.

Sweet reported on his experiences as Chamber president for the past year. "I feel humble at having been able to serve as president," he said, noting that the experience had given him greater insight in the operations of the organization and pride in what had been accomplished by the members.

Also honored were directors who had completed their terms during the year, with Sweet presenting them certificates of appreciation.

Completing three-year terms were Doug Carmichael, Bob Chambers, Ken Fields, Louise Fletcher, Verl Hagaman, Carl Kennedy and Loyd Waters. Ending one-year appointed terms were Mrs. Cornutt, Gentry and Gidden.

New officers and directors will participate in the Chamber's annual banquet Thursday, Oct. 20, in the Heritage Room at M. K. Brown Auditorium. A reception will begin at 6:30 p.m., with the banquet activities at 7:15 p.m.

Guest speaker for the event will be Dr. W. C. Newberry, "Sage of the Southwest" and noted speaker.

Outstanding citizen of the year will be named at the banquet.

Tickets for the banquet are $12 per person and may be obtained at the Chamber offices or from any Chamber director.

Inflation rise almost invisible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices edged up 0.2 percent last month, pushed upward by the biggest food cost increase in five months, the government reported today in a new indication of the severity of this summer's drought.

In all, food prices rose 0.7 percent, the most since the 1.1 percent gain of April, with fresh vegetable prices soaring 16.3 percent. Analysts have said crop damage from the drought will cause further strong price gains for months to come.

The overall rise was restrained by a 2.1 percent decline in new car prices, "largely reflecting the inventory liquidation allowances granted dealers by domestic manufacturers to close out the 1983 model year," the Labor Department's Producer Price Index said.

Energy prices, held down by a small decline in gasoline costs, rose just 0.3 percent, matching the gain of August.

The overall September increase was half the size of the previous month's 0.4 percent gain. Economists are still expecting the figure for all of 1983 to be well under last year's 3.7 percent, itself the lowest in more than a decade.

For the first nine months of this year, the wholesale price calculation rose at an annual rate of 0.2 percent, potentially the best yearly mark since the 0.2 percent decline for all of 1983.

Detailing food price trends, the department said vegetable costs rose 16.3 percent after a 18.5 percent August increase. In July, before the effects of the drought were widely felt, vegetable prices had dropped 11.9 percent. Fresh fruit prices rose 3.5 percent after declining 5.6 percent in August; egg prices were up 1 percent following a 4.4 percent gain; pork prices declined 4.6 percent after rising 0.6 percent in August, and poultry prices rose 5.8 percent, a bit ahead of August's 5.1 percent hike.

Beef and veal prices dropped 3.9 percent, meanwhile, as ranchers continued to cut down their herds rather than pay higher feed prices.

Clark successor?

JEANNE KIRKPATRICK

ROBERT MCFARLANE

Leading candidates for security post totally different

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Clark's shift to the Interior Department opens one of the most sensitive jobs in the government — head of the super-secret National Security Council — and speculation on his successor centered on Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane and U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick.

The two are as different as night and day. Former Marine Lt. Col. McFarlane, 45, is a faceless public servant who shuttles easily between the council, where he is Clark's deputy, and his office in the State Department, without creating waves.

In the Middle East, he operates quietly — without the splash of Henry Kissinger, Sol Linowitz and some other American diplomats who also have tried to find a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, 56 next month, is by contrast one of the best-known officials in President Reagan's administration — an outspoken advocate of administration policies at the United Nations and on the speaker's circuit.

Her attempt to draw a distinction between authoritarian and totalitarian regimes, finding the former group not so objectionable, got her into hot water with liberals. The fact that she is a Democrat, the highest-ranked member of the party to serve the Republican president, did not ease their criticism of her.

She travels in a blaze of bodyguards, on flights between New York and Washington and even when making shopping trips to crowded department stores.

A White House official said Secretary of State George P. Shultz would participate in the selection of Clark's successor and that whoever Reagan chooses would be someone with whom Shultz could work smoothly. The official, who declined to be identified, said Clark was moving to the Interior Department to help the president and not because of any differences with Shultz.

By coincidence or design, both McFarlane and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were in Washington and at the White House on Thursday, the day Reagan announced he was appointing Clark to succeed James Watt.

McFarlane returned from the Middle East on Wednesday night and had lunch with Clark and Shultz. Mrs. Kirkpatrick met with Reagan in the morning to discuss the first leg of the Kissinger Commission trip to Central America.

After some work at her State Department office, Mrs. Kirkpatrick went home with what her executive assistant, Jackie Tillman, called "a very bad cold."

Urged to appoint a well-known figure such as Kissinger or Linowitz as special U.S. emissary to the Middle East, the president in July tapped McFarlane. He replaced Philip C. Habib, an experienced and vigorous diplomat who had come out of retirement to seek peace in Lebanon.

McFarlane was unable to get Syria to withdraw its troops from the troubled country, as did Shultz despite a personal appeal to Syrian President Hafez Assad. But McFarlane apparently played a key role in lessening tensions between warring factions and then, in recent days, in arranging reconciliation talks in Beirut.

The State Department explained that McFarlane was back for meetings on a general review of U.S. policy, including ways of getting Israel and Arab nations to discuss a future for the Palestinians. He was scheduled to meet with Reagan today.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was the first woman and the first Democrat named to a Cabinet-rank position in the Reagan administration.

Shocked father can't believe his son murdered five people

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — A stunned Weslaco father says he can't believe one of his 11 children has been accused of killing five people during a crime spree through Southeast Texas.

Felipe Moreno apologized Thursday to the families of the people his son, Eliseo Moreno, is accused of killing during a 5½-hour, 160-mile rampage.

"I'm very sorry for what happened. I feel sorry for the trooper's parents and everybody else who got hurt by my son," the elder Moreno said, adding he still could not believe his son was capable of the killings.

Eliseo Moreno, 24, is accused in the Tuesday shooting deaths of a couple in College Station, a state trooper who stopped him for a traffic violation between College Station and Hempstead, and an elderly man and woman in Hempstead. He was arrested later Tuesday night at a state police roadblock southwest of Houston.

Moreno says his son has never before caused problems for the family.

"I never had any idea anything like this — even in my wildest dreams — would happen. My children are all hardworking and I'm proud of the all," said Moreno, who operates a small lawn mower repair shop out of his home.

Moreno said he talked to his son, who is in the Waller County Jail, by telephone Wednesday.

"I talked to him yesterday afternoon. He denies shooting those old folk. He said he didn't do it," Moreno said. He said his son sounded normal when he spoke with him the night before the shootings, and that the younger Moreno "was talking about going into partnership with his brother who is now in the Air Force in Austin."

Funeral services, meanwhile, were scheduled in the Rio Grande Valley Saturday for Juan Garza Jr., 30, and his wife, 31-year-old Esther, who were shot to death in the College Station apartment.

The Garzas will be buried at Donna Cemetery following 2 p.m. services Saturday at St. Joseph Catholic Church in Donna, said Santo De Leon of De Leon Funeral Home.

Garza Jr., who grew up in Donna, was the brother of the younger Moreno's estranged wife, Blanca.

White calls for speedier trials

HOUSTON (AP) — After attending the funeral of a highway patrolman gunned down on the job, Gov. Mark White told policemen meeting here that he has asked prosecutors around the state to speed up trials of those accused of violence against law enforcement officers.

"I can think of no more unconscionable offense than when violent acts are performed against those men guarding others from such acts," White told members of the Greater Texas Peace Officers Association Thursday night. "It shocks our sensibilities."

White said he had written to district attorneys asking them to speed up the trials of defendants charged with violence against officers, especially those charged with killing them.

Uniformed officers in the audience wore black electrical tape over their badges in memory of Department of Public Safety officer Russell Lynn Boyd, 25, of Hempstead, killed Tuesday night after stopping a man officials say killed Boyd and four others during a 5½-hour crime spree through Southeast Texas.

Earlier Thursday, White attended funeral services for Boyd in the slain officer's home town of Weatherford. The Tuesday killings were the third incident of multiple murder in Texas in three weeks. On Sept. 23, five people were abducted from a fast-food restaurant in Kilgore and shot to death. On Oct. 9, four men were found shot to death in an aircraft hangar near Sherman.

"I think the people of Texas are outraged by the acts of violence the past few weeks," White said. "The only way we can cut the crime in our state is to increase the number of officers on our streets, in our neighborhoods. The one thing that will tend to inhibit criminals — it's not the long punishment — is the chance of being apprehended."

Investigators get together to compare notes on Lucas

MONROE, La. (AP) — Investigators are trying to decide which among hundreds of women killed in 19 states might have been murdered by Henry Lee Lucas, who claims to have killed more than 150.

If those claims are true, he would be the worst mass killer in the nation's history.

However, Detective Bill Causey says he doubts that many — if any — of the 85 or so investigators will return home with enough information to bring charges against Lucas or Otis Toole, who has admitted to being involved in some murders with him.

"It's going to take more than a three-day conference to get enough information to do all that," said Causey, of the Monroe Police Department.

"They've brought anywhere from one to 25 or 40 cases. You're talking about several hundred cases we're looking at. We're trying to weed them out and see what's possible and what's not a possibility."

Comparing timetables was a big part of Thursday's session, said Monroe police Maj. Don Hill.

Lucas, a 47-year-old drifter who pleaded guilty Sept. 30 to killing an 80-year-old woman in Ringgold, Texas, has told police that his first victim was a schoolteacher he killed when he was 13 years old and living in Blacksburg, Va.

He told police he killed the woman because she spurned his sexual advances. Investigators have since quoted him as saying that he killed other women because he enjoyed having sex with their dead bodies.

The Sept. 30 guilty plea, which brought Lucas a 75-year sentence, was his first conviction since he confessed to the murders after being arrested on a weapons charge earlier this year.

Police say Lucas has cooperated thoroughly, and recalls the killings in vivid detail.

Lucas has also been charged with the 1981 murder of Kathy Whorton, 19, of Bastrop. The Northeast Louisiana University student was among three area women police believe Lucas killed during a six-month period.

Toole, a man imprisoned for arson in Jacksonville, Fla., also is charged with that murder.

Lucas has also been charged with murdering seven other women in Texas, including the girl he called his common-law wife, 15-year-old Frieda Powell of Jacksonville, Fla. He is scheduled to stand trial Oct. 17 for her death.

Lucas was first convicted of murder in 1960 for killing his 74-year-old mother, Viola Lucas. He spent six years at a state hospital for the criminally insane in Michigan, was returned to prison and released on parole in 1970.

He was convicted again in 1971 for the attempted kidnapping of a young girl, served his sentence and was released in 1975.

Losing football coaches claim they have received death threats

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Coaches who have led Crosby High School's football team to a 1-5 record this season have received death threats, a newspaper here is reporting.

The Baytown Sun, quoting a source who requested anonymity, reported Thursday that coaches began getting telephoned threats three weeks ago after Crosby, a small community about 20 miles northeast of Houston, lost a game to Houston Furr High School.

Harris County Sheriff's Department Detective Eddie Macaluso, while refusing to disclose the nature of the investigation, said his agency was acting on a complaint filed by Crosby School Superintendent Tom Miksch and football coach Ronnie Davenport, who has received some of the calls.

"I know you were at the grocery store earlier and I know where you are now," the newspaper said Davenport was told.

Besides Davenport, assistant coaches Dennis Stewart and James Cross also have been receiving threatening calls indicating they were being stalked.

Pampa band enters contest at Canyon

The "Pride of Pampa" marching band will compete in the West Texas University Marching Contest at Canyon Saturday.

The Pampa High School musical group will be one of 10 high school marching bands competing in the contest which will begin at 1 p.m. The local marching band is scheduled to perform at 2:30 p.m., according to Charles Johnson, director.

The bands will be competing for first, second and third place trophies. Directors of winning bands will be presented medallions. Awards are to be presented at 2:45 p.m.

Other bands in the contest will include: Canadian, Canyon, River Road, Hereford, Tulla, Vega, Dimmitt, Borger and Phillips.

Admission will be $2 for adults and $1 for students.

newspaper said.

The death threat, the Sun said, came Saturday after Crosby, now 1-5, lost 28-13 to Huntsville. The caller warned coaches they would be killed Friday night during Crosby's scheduled game at Galena Park, the newspaper quoted the source.

Davenport said Wednesday he and his staff were under orders to not discuss the matter.

Players were informed of the problem on Monday and were told that if they chose, they did not have to play in the Galena Park game, the newspaper said.

"We've been alerted that there's been a problem" Galena Park School Superintendent Gerald Cobb said, adding that no extra security was planned for the Friday contest although special attention would be paid to the Crosby side of the field.

received a telephone call from a couple living next to the northbound lanes of the interstate.

"They told us a big tire had hit their house at about the same time as the accident," he said. "They didn't know about the accident until they read it in the paper."

Another San Antonio resident, Angel Quirino, called police several minutes after Munoz' wreck to report "a loud noise" and said he feared someone was trying to break into his house.

Officers responding to Quirino's call found the homeowner with a loaded shotgun — and a large truck tire in his front yard, Abate said.

The tire had a long white mark on it that seemed to match the impression on the taxi's roof, he said.

The sergeant surmised that the tires flew off the left rear axle of the truck before striking the taxi, adding that the driver probably never would be found.

Scouts turn away black youth

ROBERTA, Ga. (AP) — A church-sponsored Cub Scout program which took its recruitment drive to an elementary school turned away a 10-year-old black student there, advising his mother to wait until a separate black group could be organized.

The action was condemned by an attorney for the Boy Scouts of America, and a local Scouting official said a place will be found in some Scout organization for the youngster.

Patricia Preston said she took her son, Eric, to a Sept. 20 Scout recruitment meeting at Crawford County Elementary School. He signed up, and she wrote a check for his membership dues.

Then, she said, they were taken aside and told that Eric could not be a Cub Scout until a separate black group was organized.

"My child cried all the way home. He said, 'Mama, why can't I be a Cub Scout?' The only thing I could say at the moment was, 'You're not white,'" Mrs. Preston said.

The all-white Pleasant Hill Congregational Church sponsors the only Cub Scout and Boy Scout programs in Roberta, a central Georgia city of 853, and Cubmaster Delorna Sims said the church does not permit integration of its Scouting program.

"They're the sponsor. There's nothing we can do about that," she said.

Ms. Sims said Scouting leaders have tried unsuccessfully to help organize a local black Scout group, but have had trouble finding black parents to serve as volunteer leaders.

Billy Lacey, a Pleasant Hill deacon and a member of the church Scouting committee, said Eric Preston was excluded because the question of integration had never come up before and it was uncertain how church members would react to it.

"We didn't want to do anything to upset the members of the church," he said.

Scout and church leaders will discuss the issue next week, Lacey said.

"It's going to come down to how the church leaders feel," he said.

At the Boy Scouts of America's national headquarters in Irving, Texas, attorney Dave Park said, "It is our policy not to discriminate on the basis of race. If the church is doing that, they're dead wrong. If I were the parent, I'd take it to the local council, and they should pull the charter."

Norman Burkhalter, Scout executive for the Central Georgia Council, said, "We have a situation that needs looking into. Unfortunately, we still have a lot of sponsoring organizations that do not have an open-door policy for everyone."

Burkhalter said he planned to meet soon with church and Scout leaders in Roberta. He said he could not guarantee that Eric Preston would be admitted to the Pleasant Hill Cub Scout group, but he said the child would be admitted somewhere.

To new charges

Ex sheriff, four others plead innocent

HOUSTON (AP) — A former sheriff, his son and three other men have pleaded innocent to charges alleging they conspired to arrest drivers without cause to steal their bail money.

James C. "Humpy" Parker, former sheriff of San Jacinto County; his son, Gary; former deputy Robert Rice; and two bail bondsmen, Herbert Atwood and James L. Browder, pleaded innocent to the conspiracy charge in federal court Thursday.

The elder Parker, already convicted of torturing jail inmates to gain confessions, and his son also pleaded innocent to six other charges alleging they altered arrest documents and submitted the false records to federal agents investigating allegations of misconduct.

The seven-count indictment was handed down Oct. 4.

The Parkers face as much as 70 years in prison and maximum fines of $16,000 each if convicted.

The other three men could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000 each.

The charges accuse the five of conspiring to violate the civil rights of motorists by operating a "marijuana trap" along U.S. Highway 59 about 50 miles northeast of Houston.

U.S. Magistrate Calvin Botley set a Nov. 25 trial date in federal court in Houston although attorneys indicated the trial, expected to last at least eight weeks, probably would not begin until sometime next year. The five are free on personal recognizance bonds.

Gary Parker's attorney, Roy Beene, accused the government of sending an FBI agent and a Texas Ranger to his client's home at 3 a.m. Thursday to interrogate Parker.

"This is your last chance. We're going burn you," Beene quoted Parker's early morning visitors as saying. Parker, questioned by Botley, said he did not get the names of the men who identified themselves as an FBI agent and a Ranger.

"We know nothing," Assistant U.S. Attorney Scott Woodward said. "We were given a name of the man who called himself an FBI agent and we don't know the name."

The indictment alleges deputies sought out cars driven by "hippies" or blacks, searched for cars bearing certain Louisiana license plates and bumper stickers for a Houston rock radio station.

Woodward said deputies used an excuse such as a license plate light being burned out to stop motorists and then conducted illegal searches. The operation allegedly ran from 1978 to 1982.

According to the government case, the motorists would be taken to jail and charged "bond" money that was not reported to county officials.

The indictment said that, without probable cause, the officers searched vehicles and occupants, sometimes conducting strip searches of men and women, and then damaged or altered the vehicles to justify the stops.

Bond money was divided and drugs, guns or other property seized from vehicles were kept or sold, the indictment said.

The former sheriff and three deputies convicted with him in the trial last month face sentencing Oct. 25. Parker could receive 12 years in prison and a $12,000 fine. In that trial, Parker was convicted of forcing jail inmates to make confessions by torturing them with water.

The most recent charges are similar to ones Sheriff Parker pleaded guilty to early this year. The plea, however, was thrown out by a federal judge who contended penalties agreed to in a plea bargaining arrangement were too lenient.

Boyer says schools' quality improved

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A former U.S. commissioner of education says the nation's public schools are not as bad as some reports say, but recommends a return to emphasis on basic skills instead of a rush to teach high technology.

But Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, told educators here Thursday that the epitaph for the nation's schools should not yet be written because some students are getting the best scholastic training in the world.

U.S. public schools "are certainly not one great big disaster," Boyer said. "Ten to 15 percent of the students are getting the best education in the world. Twenty to 30 percent of the schools are in bad shape. The rest would get a grade of B-minus to C-minus."

The Carnegie Foundation, in a recent report, recommended strengthening teachers' roles through rewards for good work, improving working conditions and revising core curriculums.

He said the change described by the National Commission on Educational Excellence as the "rising tide of mediocrity" actually occurred from the early 1960s until four or five years ago.

Boyer said people then discovered problems in the schools and began developing plans to reverse the situation.

"The decline in public education that began during the early 1960s was not a decline in the schools so much as a nation trying to determine its priorities after a period when it had been traumatized from coast to coast," Boyer said.

"In recent years the clear signals have been that we are serious about the quality of our schools," he said at the first Texas A&M University System Symposium.

Boyer said the current intense interest in public education — mostly at the state level — is encouraging, but that there will be no results without increasing interest among teachers, parents and communities.

A blue-ribbon panel in Texas headed by Dallas computer company owner H. Ross Perot is examining public school education. Perot has already suggested that Texas schools devote too much time and energy to extra-curricular activities such as athletics.

"In the last four or five years, we've seen a rising tide of school improvement," said Boyer. "The national commission may have misjudged the tides a little bit. There have been clear signals this nation has once again become serious about quality and standards in public schools."

Boyer recommended some changes in the makeup of the nation's high schools.

He said the Carnegie Foundation report suggests increasing the number of required courses, with a heavy emphasis on language, language arts and writing.

"Language is the basic of basics. Unless you use language you can't engage in any other learning," Boyer said.

He said all students should master the art of oral and written communication with only a "special group" of students receiving training in high technology areas.

Grand jury expected to issue more indictments in murders

HEMPSTEAD, Texas (AP) — Eliseo Moreno, charged with capital murder in the slaying of a highway patrolman, will likely face further charges in the deaths of four others killed during a 5 1/2-hour crime spree through Southeast Texas, officials said.

Assistant District Attorney Peter Speer said Thursday that evidence against Moreno, 24, would be presented to a Waller County grand jury Nov. 1. Moreno is being held in the Waller County Jail here.

Moreno was arrested Tuesday night at a highway roadblock near Wharton, southwest of Houston, after law enforcement authorities traced a 160-mile trail of shootings, auto thefts and kidnappings from College Station to Pasadena, a suburb on Houston's southeast side.

Moreno is charged with capital murder in the shooting death of rookie state highway patrolman Russell Lynn Boyd, 25, who stopped Moreno on a traffic check six miles north of Hempstead, which is 30 miles northwest of Houston.

Boyd was buried Thursday afternoon in his hometown of Weatherford. More than 350 law enforcement officers from seven states and Texas Gov. Mark White attended the services and heard Boyd described as a hero who dutifully accepted the dangers of his job because he wanted to help others.

The crime spree began when Juan Garza, a mailman, and his wife, Esther, a cafeteria worker were shot to death in their College Station apartment early Tuesday evening, said investigators who speculate that Moreno had gone to the Garza home looking for his estranged wife and argued with the Garzas over her whereabouts.

Investigators say Moreno then stole an automobile, drove here, and was stopped by Boyd.

Shortly after Boyd was gunned down, James Bennatte, 62, and Allie Wilkins, 78, were shot to death in Hempstead. Also wounded in that attack was Bennatte's 70-year-old sister-in-law, Ann, who remained in critical condition Thursday in Houston's Hermann Hospital.

Authorities say Moreno then kidnapped a Hempstead family, forced them to drive him to Pasadena in their car. In Pasadena, officials say, Moreno abducted a man in the man's truck and drove south where he was finally arrested without a struggle at a roadblock near Wharton.

None of the hostages was injured. College Station police Capt. Ronnie Miller said Juan Garza called police shortly before he was killed saying he feared Moreno was armed and trying to find his wife.

"But he did not, at that time, think Moreno would come to his home," Miller said. Hector Nieto, of College Station, a friend of the Garzas, told The Eagle, a Bryan-College Station newspaper, that Moreno and his wife, Blanca, had a stormy marriage. He said the couple had lived with the Garzas for a time last spring, but that Garza had thrown Moreno out because he did not help pay bills.

Blanca Moreno, Garza's sister, had left Moreno about a week before and returned to Donna, a Rio Grande Valley town where they grew up, Nieto said.

The killings were the third mass murder in Texas in three weeks. Four men were found shot to death at a hangar near Sherman in North Texas on Saturday. On Sept. 23, five people were abducted from a fast food restaurant near Kilgore in East Texas, taken to an oilfield and shot execution-style. No suspects have been named in either incident.

Alicia losses half of early estimate

AUSTIN (AP) — Property losses from Hurricane Alicia will be less than half of the original $300 million estimate, the State Board of Insurance has been told.

As a result, the board heard Thursday, the state will not rise as much in state insurance taxes as first expected.

"I wish to advise the board that as of today, the catastrophe pool now estimates that its total losses from the hurricane should be less than one half of our initial $300 million estimate," said Don Manthe, chairman of the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association.

The board, after hearing testimony from its staff and industry representatives, delayed indefinitely a decision on when tax credits granted for unusually large insurance payments would be effective.

"We've got until the first part of next year to do anything on this," said board chairman Lyndon Olson.

There were frequent references during the hearing to a warning in September from Comptroller Bob Bullock that damage from the hurricane could cost the state $40 million to $110 million. He based his prediction on a 1979 law that would allow insurance companies to deduct losses over $100 million directly from their state insurance tax payments.

After the board session, John Moore, press secretary for Bullock, said if the Alicia losses total only $150 million, it will mean a state tax loss of $27 million for 1983-84-85 or $20 million if just for 1984-85.

"In other words, this is a tax loss to the state of less than $10 million a year instead of the previous estimate," said board member Carol McClellan.

Bullock said previously the loss, based on the early $300 million damage estimate, would mean a loss of $40 million if the tax credits were not taken until 1985, but could be $110 million if the discounts were given in both 1984 and 1985.

"This all could be a moot question," David Irons, representing the Associated of Fire and Casualty Companies, told the board. "There is no insurer yet who has paid $100 million in claims this year. It may occur later this year, but not so far."

Irons, along with other industry representatives, argued the tax credits would be due the year following the year in which a company paid out $100 million in claims. In other words, Irons said, if the $100 million mark were met in 1983, anything above that could be subtracted from state insurance taxes for the next five successive years, beginning in 1984.

Manthe said the pool, which is supported by all companies in the state, has paid out more than $20 million in claims from Alicia. He said the representatives of the pool had been working seven days a week in the hurricane-stricken area and had handled 17,000 loss claims, 23 percent of which he said had been paid.

Manthe said the initial loss estimate was based on early reports from the scene.

"Fortunately, sustained winds from the storm were considerably less than were initially reported. And, although damage was widespread and Alicia generated thousands of claims, we have now paid a sufficient number of claims to reasonably project that property damage was not as severe as we once feared."

83 evacuated in offshore drilling rig explosion

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An explosion at a gas drilling rig lit up the sky above the Gulf of Mexico and forced 83 workers to evacuate in watertight escape pods, an oil company official said.

No one was injured and damage appeared to be minor, said Tom Stoy, Union Oil Co. of California's vice president for the Gulf region.

Workers were flown by helicopter to a Union Oil Co. plant at Surfside hours after the blast and fire Thursday, Stoy said.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Larry Lawrence said the 8 p.m. blast put on a show for offshore workers and sailors in a huge section of the Gulf.

"An observer 30 miles away on another rig said he saw a mushroom cloud," Lawrence said.

Lawrence and other Coast Guard officers said a helicopter and a search jet were scrambled at one point because one of four escape "pods" was unaccounted for. But within two hours, all workers had been picked up by boats in the area and carried to another rig about five miles away, Stoy said.

Escape pods are watertight, saucer-shaped motorized vessels which hold between 25 and 40 workers, Stoy said.

A man who answered the phone at the Surfside plant referred all questions to Stoy and refused to let a reporter talk to any of the workers flown in from the rig.

Gas blew out at the platform — actually two gas drilling rigs about 50 yards apart — about 7 p.m., Stoy said. He said gas came up through the hole the workers were drilling with such force that they decided to evacuate.

But the gas was successfully diverted through a pipeline system which carried it about 100 feet away from the rig, he said.

"It probably made a big pop, but that was at the end of the diverter pipes," Stoy said. "The equipment worked the way it should have."

The explosion occurred at about 8 p.m. and a fire followed, he said.

"I don't know exactly how long the thing fired. Not very long," he said. Stoy said the flow of gas stopped as suddenly as it had begun.

By midnight, Stoy said, there were "three minor fires" on the platform. He said the rig would be reboarded at daylight by crewmembers of Boots & Coots Inc., an oil well firefighting firm.

"Both rigs are still standing," Stoy said. "We appear to have no substantial damage."

He said the blowout came from "dry" gas, which caused no pollution.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

How conservative are Reagan's men

Last fall a research group headed by Ralph Nader completed an exhaustive study of the men and women of the Reagan administration. Among the findings: "Reagan's allies on the right are quite justified in their complaint that the president's appointments have left the White House filled with committed, conservative risktakers, the study noted, "the Eastern Establishment, moderate wing of the Republican Party has re-asserted itself."

Now comes a survey by Professor Johnathan Kessel of Ohio State, with the opposite conclusion. Kessel: "The vocal Right has consistently charged the Reagan administration with insufficient conservatism... The implication is that Ronald Reagan has somehow been surrounded by moderates or even liberals. (Yet) no differences exist between President Reagan's policy preferences and those of his staff. His beliefs are their beliefs." All the clashes between advisers you read about merely reflect "strategic differences," Kessel says, as to how to carry those policies out.

Well, no one doubts that Reagan advisers who answered the questionnaire checked off the boxes favoring smaller government, stronger military, lower deficit, and less regulation. But how you get there from here is often the critical question. "In politics," writes columnist Joseph Sobran, "strategic differences can make all the difference."

Do you shrink the federal deficits, something even Tip O'Neill now seems to favor, by the Kemp route of tax cuts or the Dole method of tax hikes? Do you try to eliminate the Department of Education - or simply propose renaming the place, and then wonder why the idea fails to attract a following? Do you win support for aid to El Salvador by saying it is "not another Vietnam," tacitly accepting all the foreign policy baggage that accompanies that phrase? Or do you ask for help for El Salvador - and we shouldn't have let our friends down the last time? Et cetera.

All these "merely" strategic questions go to the heart of Reagan's presidency. If politics is the art of the possible, then leadership is the art of re-defining what is possible to begin with.

Reagan supporters have every right to hope that as re-election plans take shape, they include a larger role for such individuals as Lyn Nofziger - and smaller parts for Jim Baker, David Gergen, et al. It's not time to howl, as did one critic at a recent press conference, that President Reagan has "betrayed the revolution." But it would be nice to see him add a couple of assistants who look as conservative as he.

U.N. deserves only contempt

NEW YORK (NEA) - I have expressed my low opinion of the U.N. so often that my first impulse, when the subject came up again as a result of Charles Lichenstein's remarks to the Security Council, was to give it a pass. But various pompous types are still huffing and puffing about how "shocking" and "unambassadorial" Lichenstein's comments were, and how undiplomatic (or even "childish") it was of U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick and President Reagan to back him up, and my aggravation level has finally filled to the brim and overflowed. So here goes - again.

The U.N. was born in San Francisco in 1945 to the accompaniment of some of the highest - minded and most nonsensical rhetoric that has ever affronted the human ear. Somehow the worthy goals for which most (though not all) of its founders were striving - things like world peace and brotherhood - became confused with the seriously flawed mechanism through which they were pursuing these lofty aims, and soon any criticism of the U.N. was being interpreted as an attack on peace itself.

This did no great harm so long as the dependably anti - communist nations of the world had a majority of the votes in the General Assembly. In and after 1960, however, a large number of new nations, carved out of former colonial empires, entered the U.N. and banded together as the Third World. Although ostensibly "unaligned" with either the communist bloc or the world's free nations, these new countries quickly discovered that, together with the communists, they could control the General Assembly. And since the Soviet Union was quite willing to support most Third World objectives so long as the U.S. was their target, the U.N.'s fur - trimmed precincts were soon ringing with denunciations of the U.S.A.

This has gone on ever since, and has seriously eroded American support for the U.N. When, a few years ago, the General Assembly adopted a resolution equating Zionism with racism, regard for the U.N. dropped to a near zero in this country. Increasingly it was seen for what it had in fact become - a ridiculously expensive wind tunnel with, however, considerable utility as a forum for anti - American propaganda.

It was only after a couple of years of sitting in the Security Council and General Assembly taking this guff that Charles Lichenstein, our deputy ambassador, allowed his glacial demeanor to crack ever so slightly. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko had questioned whether the U.S. was any longer a fit host for the U.N. Relishing the chance, Ambassador Lichenstein suavely invited the delegates to leave if they were discontented in New York, and promised that the U.S. delegation would be "at dockside, bidding you a farewell as you set off into the sunset." Mrs. Kirkpatrick refused to criticize her deputy, and President Reagan went even further, saying that the U.N.'s departure would have "the hearty approval of most people in America."

No doubt it is the hope of doing Mr. Reagan a little political damage that explains the subsequent rush of his adversaries to the U.N.'s defense. The amount we spend on it - not far short of a thousand million dollars a year - has been successively misrepresented and declared "well worth it." Its failure as a peacekeeping instrumentality, or indeed as anything else except a matchless, tax - free living for a bunch of global hypocrits, was first denied, then excused. A series of alleged "advantages" accruing to this country from its presence on East 43rd Street has been manufactured out of whole cloth and exaggerated absurdly.

Its admirers needn't worry. Wild horses couldn't drive the U.N. out of New York City. As for Ambassador Lichenstein and Ambassador Kirkpatrick and President Reagan, they can stop worrying about whether they are treating this pretentious flea circus with the proper respect. Respect must be earned, and all the U.N. has earned by its conduct is the contempt of the free people it seeks to undermine and (no doubt) of the communist ringmasters to whom it has sold its soul.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Oct. 14, the 287th day of 1983. There are 78 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On Oct. 14, 1912, former President Theodore Roosevelt, campaigning for the presidency on the Bull Moose ticket, was shot in the chest by a New York City saloonkeeper in Milwaukee. The incident did not keep Roosevelt from going ahead with a scheduled campaign speech.

On this date:
In 1890, the 34th President of the United States, Dwight D. Eisenhower, was born in Denison, Texas.

In 1899, the magazine "Literary Digest" predicted that the horseless carriage would never catch on.

In 1964, civil rights leader Martin Luther King won the Nobel Peace Prize.

In 1977, actor-singer Bing Crosby died in Spain at the age of 74.

Ten years ago: University administrator Sanya Thammarak was named premier of Thailand after a series of violent clashes between troops and students.

Five years ago: A procession of 111 cardinals entered the Sistine Chapel for the start of a conclave to elect a successor to Pope John Paul I.

Deregulation and the airlines

I have this hot line to a "crisis center." Every Monday morning I call up and ask him, "What's the crisis of the week?" and for $25 he tells me.

This week I called him and he said, "The 'big C' is the airline crisis. It could be a Mt. St. Helens."

"What happened?" I asked him.
"The thing that started it all was the big boys in aviation wanted the airlines deregulated because they claimed they weren't making enough money. So the administration deregulated the friendly skies of America and opened them to the marketplace."

"Free competition is what this country thrives on," I said.

"The only problem was that after they got deregulated, all the big boys wanted to fly the same routes. A company that used to fly to Charlotte, North Carolina, decided to fly to London, England, instead. Every major company put on flights to Hawaii and cancelled flights to middle America. Instead of going to Missoula, Montana, one airline started a daily service to Tokyo. Pretty soon you could fly to Miami every 15 minutes, but you could only go to Buffalo once a week.

"With all the competition for the major cities, the airlines got into a price war. First they cut their fares - then they offered you a free seat for your wife. And finally, during the recession, they let you take all the people that you had met in a bar. There wasn't an empty seat on the plane, but there was only one paying passenger."

"To make things worse, the little guys started taking on the big boys and price - cut the hell out of them. The little guys were nonunion, no - frill companies who offered you nothing but a seat. But for $39 you could fly from New York to Los Angeles with a layover in Newfoundland."

"I guess the free market was really working."

"It was for the little guys, but the big boys were going nuts. They came up with new sales gimmicks. If you flew a certain number of miles on their airline, they would upgrade you from tourist to first class. If you flew 15,000 miles they would let you sit in the co - pilot's seat. If you flew 100,000 miles they made you president of the company. Most of the people now running a losing airline came up through the ranks from the 'frequent flyer plan.'

"To make things worse, the big boys guessed wrong on what planes they would need for companies. Some ordered planes that were too big - others ordered planes that were too small. When they had too many planes in mothballs, they had to sell a lot of them to the little guys who were putting them out of business. Of course it wasn't their fault. One of the major airline executives was walking through his terminal at Kennedy Airport and it was jammed with people. He immediately ordered six new 747s. What he didn't realize, until later, was that all people there were from Central America, waiting for their grandmothers to get off the plane."

"That was an honest mistake," I said.
"To make things worse, the big boys, to protect themselves from their stockholders, invested their cash flow in other businesses, such as hotels, fast - food franchises and natural gas. Since they were making money in these businesses the stockholders started demanding they spin off the airline part of their business."

"Everyone made mistakes. Eastern Airlines thought it could get healthy by having Frank Borman do their TV commercials. He was very credible but he didn't sell any tickets."

"Why didn't they scrub the advertising campaign?"
"What advertising executive is going to tell the chairman of the board of Eastern Airlines he can no longer do the company's commercials?"

"What a mess," I said. "I guess the big boys are sorry they never asked for a deregulation for the airlines. Are they going to go back and lobby for airline regulation again?"

"That's their only chance. Most of them have decided free air competition is for the birds."

LaRocque's right; critics wrong

I can't say I haven't been warned. A Texas reader recently wrote that the Center for Defense Information, whose views and data on military matters are periodically cited in this space, is "an anti - defense organization and a little pro - Soviet."

I had already heard from New Jersey that the same CDI has "interlocking relationships with other organizations of the extreme left."

And I have in hand a clipping from an Oklahoma newspaper in which another commentator, Gen. T. R. Milton, describes the CDI as "a curious little institution founded in 1972 by a disenchanted rear admiral, Gene LaRocque."

Well, at least he's got the date and rank right.

As you are already aware if you caught my most recent remarks on the subject of the CDI and LaRocque, the general is far from being the admiral's only uninformed critic.

To the number of 575, retired naval flag officers blasted LaRocque in a signed newspaper advertisement (Washington Times) for airing his objections to U.S. nuclear policies on Soviet television.

Let's pause here for a bit of background. The Center for Defense Information is a private, non - profit, Washington - based organization that monitors defense spending and policy making.

The CDI, in its own words "supports a strong defense but opposes excessive expenditures or forces. It believes that strong social, economic and political structures contribute equally to national security and are essential to the strength and welfare of the country."

LaRocque, as he is fond of reminding listeners, spent his entire professional life preparing for war. He has been a carrier task force commander, volunteered for duty in Vietnam because he believed it was the right war in the right place until experience persuaded him otherwise, and served in the Pentagon.

The CDI is the product of LaRocque's professional experience and a personal conviction that war, in the nuclear era, has become unthinkable.

He opened shop the day following retirement from active duty with the initial assistance of a research director and a fund raiser. The staff has grown in the 11 years since, but it is still modest by Washington's institutional standards.

So is the budget - roughly $800,000 for the current year. The books are open, a public accountability contrary to established Washington practice in which he takes pride.

Funding comes from a variety of sources including foundations, individuals, a direct mail program and LaRocque's own lectures. Contributions, in the unlikely event that any might be offered, are not accepted from government agencies or military contractors.

The money goes into research, which relies entirely upon public sources such as the budget and congressional hearings, and information dissemination to the media, schools, organizations and interested individuals.

The emphasis is on constructive criticism. "We've never suggested reducing the amount of money the Pentagon gets in any one year below what they got the last year," says LaRocque. "We often say they shouldn't be buying this weapon system or that weapon system."

This, however, runs counter to the current emphasis at the Pentagon and in the White House on more of everything - especially nuclear.

Of which LaRocque believes we already have more than enough already.

"The lesson ought to be clear that (having) more and more weapons does not make us more secure. It doesn't make any difference who has more missiles or more megatonnage. There is such a potpourri of weapons that we would be inundated in both countries."

That such views get military backs up neither surprises nor deters LaRocque. It comes down to a priorities and it's his critics who have them wrong. As they see it publicly questioning whether an MX is needed or not is disloyal to the military. As LaRocque sees it, to do otherwise is to be disloyal to the country.

"I keep reminding myself and my colleagues that my oath of office is to the Constitution, not to the U.S. Navy."

Texas nuclear weapon shipment not welcomed

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Anti-war groups plan a prayer vigil tonight to protest the expected arrival of a train believed carrying nuclear weapons materials for the Charleston Naval Weapons Station.

The shipment, which left the Department of Energy's Pantex Plant in Amarillo, Texas, late Tuesday was expected to arrive here about 11 p.m., the groups said.

The Pantex Plant is the final assembly point for nuclear weapons and also handles classified non-nuclear components of such weapons.

The train has attracted other demonstrators along its route through Oklahoma, Kansas and Tennessee.

Ben McCarty, the public information officer for the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy, said Thursday "we have a safe, secure rail car shipment moving through the Southeast. We cannot identify the specific cargo of any one shipment and at this point we cannot give its ultimate destination."

"We have had other protests, but this is the first time that we have noticed people carrying signs, standing along railroad tracks in the Southeast," he said.

"It's the first time anybody's known about it," said Jim Douglass, the cofounder of the Ground Zero Center for Nonviolent Action, of Poughkeepsie, N.Y. "If they let us know about it, they'd have people protesting more often, which is what a democracy is all about."

He described the train as a heavily-armored, all-white train with the designation ATMX, adding "ATM stands for the old Atomic Energy Commission and the X means the cars are not owned by any particular railroad but instead are owned by the government."

The group monitored the train on its trip back to Texas and has been keeping tabs on it ever since, he said.

During a court case after two demonstrators were arrested along the train route in Denver in March, Douglass said that the group secured government and Burlington and Northern Railroad documents and learned the train's route to Charleston.

He said his organization calls peace groups and church groups along the route who go to the tracks and hold their quiet protests.

"The problem is with what's in the train, not with the vigils. The problem is also with the government making these shipments secretly and not making notification to state agencies through which the trains pass," he said.

Douglass said his group believed the train was carrying "either Trident-I nuclear warheads to be backfitted on Poseidon submarines which is the main nuclear weapon shipment for (Charleston) or it could have Pershing II or Cruise warheads."

Meanwhile, Lt. Cmdr. Steve Clawson of the Charleston Naval Base said no one at the base had been placed on alert.

Illegal aliens found trapped inside railroad tank car

ROBSTOWN, Texas (AP) — A U.S. Border Patrol official says that 14 Mexicans narrowly escaped death when they were rescued from an enclosed railroad tank car, used to haul animal fat, in which they had hitched a ride from the border.

Three women were treated for oxygen deprivation after they were found nearly unconscious Thursday following a two-day ride from Laredo, where they had been led after their trip across the Texas-Mexico border, a U.S. Border Patrol official said.

"It's entirely possible that all of these people could have perished if they hadn't attracted someone's attention," said L.D. Pearson, Border Patrol agent-in-charge in Corpus Christi.

The Mexicans pounding on the slick sides of the car attracted railway workers during a train stop in Robstown, near Corpus Christi. The slick walls had prevented the illegal aliens from escaping through the tank's hatch.

"Three females out of the group of 14 were semi-asphyxiated — incoherent," Pearson said. "One woman had a possible broken ankle."

Pearson said the woman injured her ankle when she failed in an attempt to climb to the hatch.

"There was only a tiny crack in the hatch through which air could get into the car," Robstown Constable Johnny Calderon said.

Pearson said the three women were taken to Riverside Hospital where they were treated and released to the Border Patrol.

He said the women and the men were taken last night to Laredo where they were being returned to Mexico.

"They were smuggled across the Rio Grande two miles from the port of entry at Laredo by a smuggler who charged them 1,000 pesos each," said Pearson.

He said a "coyote" who had smuggled them across the Texas-Mexico border led them to the Tex-Mex Railway yards in Laredo, where he told them to get inside a tank car and then closed the hatch.

A "coyote" is the term for someone who smuggles illegal aliens across the border.

Pearson said the Mexicans were destined for "anyplace they could find work."

"The smuggler said they would stop in several places and told them not to get off until the third time," Pearson quoted one of the illegal aliens he interviewed.

Earlier stops were in Hebbronville and Alice, and after the third stop, the aliens attempted to leave the car, he said.

"The interior of the car was so slimy with this concoction they could not get up to open the lid," Pearson said.

Engineering scholarships available

Scholarships for high school seniors interested in becoming petroleum engineers are being offered by the local chapter of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

The professional society is offering two $1,000 scholarships this year with seniors in the Pampa, Canadian, Miami, Phillips, Stinnett, White Deer, Lefors, McLean and Shamrock schools eligible to compete for the scholarships, according to Allan Gann of Pampa, who is coordinating the scholarship program.

Gann said the scholarships are being offered in order to attract more interest in the field of petroleum engineering as a profession and the whole petroleum industry as a worthwhile and rewarding profession.

High school seniors in the top 20 percent of their class who desire to pursue a petroleum engineering curriculum at an accredited engineering university are eligible to seek the scholarships, he explained.

The scholarships will be awarded on the basis of academic excellence, rather than on a financial need, Gann said.

Applications for the scholarships can be obtained by writing to Allen Gann, P.O. Box 2700, Pampa, Texas 79066 or calling him at 665-1876. All applications are to be completed and returned by Feb. 1 with receipts to be determined by April 1, 1984.

SUBMITS RESIGNATION — Israeli Finance Minister Yoram Aridor announces his resignation during a news conference Thursday in Jerusalem, after walking out of a Cabinet meeting. (AP Laserphoto)

New government grapples with minister's resignation

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today sought to protect his new government from the aftershock of his finance minister's resignation over a short-lived plan to link Israel's economy to the U.S. dollar.

The opposition Labor Party said it would try to bring down the five-day-old government by presenting a no-confidence motion in Parliament next week. Critics of the short-lived "dollarization" plan said it would have turned Israel into America's "51st state."

A humiliated Yoram Aridor announced his resignation as finance minister Thursday night during an emergency Cabinet meeting. He told reporters he had no support in Shamir's government for the plan he said would have solved Israel's economic crisis "in one stroke."

He was to have announced the dollarization scheme to the Cabinet Sunday, but Shamir called the meeting early as the storm of controversy grew.

The prime minister expressed no regret at Aridor's departure and said he never took the plan seriously.

Barring surprises, Shamir's supporters are expected to be able to defeat the no-confidence motion, but he faces additional political trouble trying to choose a new finance minister who will please all factions of his coalition government.

Aridor, 49, had been in the Cabinet less than three years.

News of his plan, first made known in a Tel Aviv newspaper Thursday, was another shock to the Israeli public, still reeling from Tuesday's 23 percent devaluation of the shekel and a deep cut in government subsidies of basic foodstuffs which raised the price of milk, eggs, flour bread and other essentials by 50 percent.

In an interview with Israeli Television, the prime minister said he was sorry it had created more unrest and assured the public there was no need for panic.

Dollarization would have fixed a dollar exchange rate for the steadily dropping shekel and put most of the country's business, salaries and debts in dollar terms. The shekel would be the legal tender, but eventually the dollar could have equal rank, Aridor said.

Israel is battling with an inflation rate heading toward 160 percent this year. Its foreign debt is $21.5 billion — the highest per capita in the world — and its imports are increasingly outpacing its exports, draining the nation's foreign currency reserves to cover the difference.

Shamir distanced himself from Aridor, saying, "I never saw it as a plan for execution ... I don't see it as something realistic or feasible."

Reagan re-election committee will be established next Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's political advisers will formally establish a campaign committee for his re-election on Monday, with the president's blessing.

"He will legally be a candidate at that point," said Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who will head the campaign.

While Laxalt said the president was leaving himself some "wiggle room" in case he decides not to seek a second term, the senator told reporters outside the White House after conferring with Reagan on Thursday: "I have no doubt... that Ronald Reagan will be a candidate for re-election."

Laxalt, who retains his seat in the Senate, became general chairman of the Republican National Committee nearly a year ago with the assumption that Reagan would seek re-election. He was chairman of Reagan's 1976 and 1980 presidential campaigns.

His latest announcement was part of a timetable that has been unfolding for several months, and is likely to culminate with the president's formal declaration of candidacy. That, he said, would probably take place around Thanksgiving, after Congress adjourns for the year.

On Monday, after Reagan signs a letter authorizing the establishment of the "Reagan-Bush '84" committee, Laxalt will file the necessary documents with the Federal Election Commission.

An office near the Capitol has been selected for the committee, and the president's top political affairs aides on the White House staff, Edward Rollins and Lee Atwater, have been designated to shift to the committee payroll.

In addition, key Reagan political allies around the country have been lined up for regional roles in the campaign.

During the brief news conference, Laxalt said that Bush "very definitely will be" involved in the effort. "The committee will be Reagan-Bush. This is a package from the front end on," he said.

While the 72-year-old Reagan has steadfastly refused to state publicly whether he will run for a second term, Laxalt took up the question of when the president made his decision.

"Consciously? ... I think probably from almost the beginning it's been apparent to him as well as all of us that this job that he's assumed cannot be effectively done in four years," the senator said, adding: "He's probably focused on it very actively in the last few days."

Reagan has frequently said that he was avoiding a declaration of his campaign intentions because a formal announcement would cast all his actions in a political light.

North Korea claims 'armed attack' by south, Seoul cabinet submits resignations

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's Cabinet resigned today in response to the Burma bomb attack, while North Korea — blamed by Seoul for the bombing — claimed South Korean soldiers unleashed heavy gunfire in an incursion across the demilitarized zone.

North Korea said at least 10 soldiers from the South crossed into the northern side of the DMZ during the night and fired 500 rounds of ammunition in what it said was a provocation aimed at raising tensions to "the brink of war."

The developments came one day after a mass funeral in Seoul, attended by more than 1 million mourners, for four Cabinet ministers and 13 other South Koreans killed in the bombing Sunday in Rangoon, Burma. The attack also killed four Burmese and wounded more than 40 people.

The 18 surviving Cabinet members tendered their resignations at a 30-minute emergency meeting today, a government announcement said. It was not immediately known whether any or all of the resignations would be accepted by President Chun Doo-hwan, who is working to fill the gaping holes left by the bombing in the government's senior ranks.

Also submitting his resignation was Seoul's mayor, Kim Sung-bae.

Park Chan-kung, minister of government administration, announced the Cabinet resignations, saying they were offered to give the president a free hand in naming new ministers.

It is traditional in many Asian societies for top-ranking officials to assume moral responsibility in a crisis, even if the crisis is brought on by occurrences out of their control.

South Korean Prime Minister Kim Sang-hyup said the government intends to seek "as strong countermeasures as possible against the North Korean barbarity in Rangoon."

North Korea's state-run news agency claimed in a report monitored in Tokyo that at least 10 South Korean soldiers entered the communist side of the demilitarized zone dividing the countries at about midnight Thursday and fired.

It called the alleged action "a premeditated military provocation for leading the situation to the brink of war."

The news agency said in its report that North Korea immediately placed a telephone call to South Korea protesting the "armed attack."

South Korean military authorities had no immediate comment on the charge.

The United Nations Command in Seoul said the alleged incident was "being investigated," but declined further comment.

Burma bomb attack boosts Korean tensions

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The bombing that killed 21 people this week in Burma, including some of "the brightest and the best" of South Korea's President Chun Doo-hwan's cabinet and aides, has fanned old hatreds on this tinderbox peninsula.

Although American and other officials in South Korea say North Korean involvement in the blast hasn't been confirmed, Chun has accused his country's communist neighbor of plotting the attack.

The Seoul government sent a team of investigators to Rangoon, Burma, to carry out a joint probe of the bombing with Burmese authorities. But "no matter what finally comes out of it, the key thing is that the president and other leaders have blamed it on North Korea and the people have reacted," said one Western source who did not want to be identified.

"Certainly it has increased tension at a time when things were looking up for the south."

The explosion last Sunday in Rangoon, more than 2,000 miles from Korea, left gaping holes in the government's top ranks of economic and diplomatic experts. It killed four cabinet members and 13 other South Koreans, most of them ranking aides or advisers to the president. Four Burmese also died.

Chun escaped the blast at Martyr's Mausoleum, where he was to have placed a wreath, because his motorcade was delayed and he was running a few minutes late.

"Talk about the brightest and the best, this was really a case of hitting them," one source said.

North Korea, in broadcasts from Pyongyang, has denied accusations it was involved, calling them preposterous.

Reports from Rangoon said police there arrested two men and killed a third in connection with the bombing. They were identified as Koreans, but it was not stated whether they were from the north or south.

No South Korean officials have cited specific evidence linking North Korea with the bombing.

But American and other officials have said such an act would be in keeping with North Korean moves since the end of the Korean War. They recalled the seizure of the U.S. vessel Pueblo in 1968, the shooting down of a U.S. Navy reconnaissance plane in 1969 with the loss of all 31 men aboard, and an ax attack by North Korean guards in the demilitarized zone in 1976 that killed two U.S. Army officers and injured four Americans and five Koreans.

"Of course, they (North Korea) are capable of carrying out something like this," said one Western source. "We don't know yet, but look at their track record."

Another source said the North Korean leadership under Kim Il Sung must be growing increasingly disturbed with South Korea's strides since the end of the Korean War 30 years ago. A meeting of the inter-Parliamentary Union was just held here despite North Korea's bitter protests and a boycott by communist countries. A meeting of the International Monetary Fund is scheduled for 1985, and the Asian Games for 1986 and the Summer Olympics for 1988.

The blast occurred only one day after Chun had set off on what was to have been an 18-day tour to Burma, India, Sri Lanka, Australia, New Zealand and Brunei. Selection of the first three countries to be visited had been regarded as a significant diplomatic step because they are non-aligned and have leaned at times toward North Korea in its bitter confrontation with the south.

Chun immediately canceled the tour after the blast.

Newspapers in Seoul reported Thursday that investigators in Rangoon had found "physical evidence of North Korean involvement," citing what they said was the discovery of batteries and other equipment that could have been used to set off a remote-controlled explosive.

The reports were attributed only to unidentified diplomatic sources, however, and could not be confirmed.

A report from Rangoon late Thursday quoted a South Korean investigator here as saying no South Korean dissidents were involved in the bombing. South Korea has firm controls over dissent and is severe in dealing with real or suspected communism.

There was speculation that internal controls might be tightened, but most qualified sources said it was too early to tell. One said that with the strides South Korea has made in the eyes of the international community, "it can't do an about face now."

The South Korean investigator, who declined to be identified, said evidence obtained by authorities in Burma proved North Korea was responsible, claiming materials that had been seized were "standard articles used by North Koreans."

Reports from outside South Korea have quoted some officials and diplomats as saying the bombing may have been the work of Burmese dissidents.

After the bombing, South Korea's military and police forces were put on a special alert. North Korea said it was on the "highest alert against the South Korean puppets."

The killings prompted an outpouring of grief and anger.

One generation passes, another waits in wings

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The death of Sir Ralph Richardson underlines the mortality of an immortal band of actors who have electrified the British theater for a half-century.

Richardson, who died Monday at age 80, was one of Britain's great "acting knights," with Lord Laurence Olivier, 76, Sir John Gielgud, 79, Sir Alec Guinness, 69, and Sir John Mills, 75.

The eccentric and much-loved Richardson, whose career included more than 200 plays and 100 films, had been appearing in "Inner Voices" at London's National Theatre until illness required him to bow out Sept. 14.

His show-must-go-on attitude was characteristic of the actor-knights. Olivier is in France filming a television adaptation of John Fowles' "The Ebony Tower," and Gielgud has just finished a TV production in Britain of "The Master of Ballantrae."

But as their generation continues to win esteem, another talented generation waits in the wings to inherit their mantle. Albert Finney, Alan Bates and Ian McKellan may soon be worthy of a collective accolade all their own.

Richardson, Gielgud and Olivier can be seen together playing three ministers at the court of Ludwig, the "mad king" of Bavaria, in a 13-hour television film called "Wagner," starring Richard Burton as the German composer.

Completed in April, "Wagner" is under negotiation for showing on an American cable channel late this fall.

The joint participation of the three giants of British theater is typical of their frequent collaboration.

Richardson and Gielgud first met in 1930 at London's Old Vic Theatre and their careers frequently crossed. In 1970, David Storey's "Home" paired them on stage to great critical acclaim, and Harold Pinter says he wrote his 1975 drama "No Man's Land" for the two actors. They also worked together in Joseph Brooks' film "Invitation to the Dance," as yet unreleased.

With Olivier, Richardson established the New Old Vic Theatre in 1944 and scored some of his greatest theatrical triumphs: his Falstaff to Olivier's Hotspur in "Henry IV, Part 1," and his performance in the title role of Ibsen's epic "Peer Gynt."

Gielgud enjoyed a string of successes in Shakespeare, and played the Bard himself in 1974 in Edward Bond's play "Bingo." Olivier played a notable Henry V and Macbeth, and won an Academy Award for his performance as Hamlet in 1948.

Great British actresses of the same generation are Dame Wendy Hiller, 71, and Dame Peggy Ashcroft, 75, who both appeared opposite Richardson when the National Theatre opened its new London complex with Ibsen's "John Gabriel Borkman" in 1975.

Many of these talents juggled successful stage careers with award-winning film work. In addition to Olivier, Dame Wendy and Gielgud have both won Oscars.

Gielgud's Academy Award came late in his career — for his supporting performance as Dudley Moore's lovingly flip butler in the 1981 comedy "Arthur."

Another recent Oscar winner, Ben Kingsley, 38, honored as best actor for his performance in the title role of "Gandhi," is the man many now see as a pre-eminent British actor of the post-Richardson-Gielgud-Olivier generation.

Although "Gandhi" was the beginning of widespread recognition for the young actor, followers of London's leading repertory theaters, the Royal Shakespeare Company and the National Theatre, had admired Kingsley's work for almost two decades. In 1967, he played Demetrius in Peter Brook's production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and he went on to play Mosca to Paul Scofield's Volpone, and Trofimov in a "Cherry Orchard" that included in its cast Ralph Richardson as the forgotten manservant, Firs.

That same "Cherry Orchard" cast Albert Finney, 47, as the purchaser of the estate, Lopakhin. Finney, says Laurence Evans, agent for the three actor-knights, has "all the makings of a major star, and could be the natural successor to Olivier."

Finney, like Olivier, has done many films between stage roles. Finney's undertakings range from Macbeth and Hamlet at the National Theatre to Daddy Warbucks in the film "Annie" and Hercule Poirot in "Murder on the Orient Express."

Another middle-generation actor shuttling deftly between stage and screen is Alan Bates, 49, who just concluded a sold-out limited run in London in John Osborne's play "A Patriot for Me." But despite his Tony Award for "Butley" in New York in 1973, Bates probably is best known for film roles in "Women in Love," "The Rose," and "An Unmarried Woman."

Dear Abby

Camp souvenirs startle mom of precocious teen

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: While my 12-year-old daughter was visiting her cousin in another state, I cleaned out the gear she brought back from camp. In her backpack I found 24 large color photos of teen-aged boys, naked and in a state of arousal. I also found a box of a dozen condoms; one had been removed from its inner foil wrap. Her father and I have always talked openly with her about sex ever since she was old enough to ask questions. When she was 4, she expressed curiosity about the male anatomy, so I showed her a picture of Michelangelo's David.

We've had long talks about menstruation, dating, petting, intercourse, birth control, morals, etc., with no embarrassment on either side.

I have concluded that she was probably given or sold the pornography by a college-age girl camp counselor who was discharged mid-season with no explanation. I don't know where she got the condoms.

She's a well-adjusted, normal 12-year-old girl who appears to be no more boy-crazy than any of her girlfriends. I don't know whether I should be outraged, amused or even proud of her precocious interest in erections. I've heard of girls 12 and even younger having sex, but she is such a baby, I can't imagine her in such a situation.

I haven't the foggiest idea of what to say when she returns, but I know I must talk to her about this. Perhaps I've told her too much already, or somehow failed in preparing her for this phase of her life. What do I do now, Abby?

TRoubled IN PARADISE

DEAR TROUBLED: When she returns, tell her what you found in her backpack, but not in an angry or accusatory way. If she is into sex at this early age, be grateful that she is taking no chances on becoming pregnant or contracting a venereal disease.

Don't punish, berate or put her down. Do assure her that you love her and will be there for her no matter what. Then stress the importance of respecting herself and her body. Also stress the high price of promiscuity, which includes a low self-esteem, a bad reputation (boys talk) and ultimately confusing sex with love. And don't blame yourself for telling your daughter "too much." What our children don't know can hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: Please find room for this in your column and a million people will bless you. I am one of many people over 60 who have a hearing loss. I am not deaf, and I hear most everything that's said, but I wish people would not speak with their heads turned in another direction from the person they are speaking to. This is so important. It just drives me up a wall when someone talks to me and keeps turning his head every which way except where I am!

EXASPERATED IN ST. AUGUSTINE

DEAR EXASPERATED: I hear you. Now let's hope they hear me and act on this valuable suggestion.

DEAR ABBY: When "Happy Atheist" took you to task for your many references to "God," you might have responded with this quotation from Christian Scientist Dr. Robert Milliken, winner of the Nobel Prize in physics: "We have come from somewhere and are going somewhere. The Great Architect of the universe never built a stairway that leads to nowhere."

Woman searches for family of half-sister

Are you a descendent of MABLE FORREST? She was born in 1903 or 1904, probably in Portageville, New Madrid County, Mo. Her parents were BENSON BAYLIS FORREST (also known as "B.B.") and LUCY HARDEN.

In 1916, the family was living in Matthews, Mo., when LUCY HARDEN died. The following year, "B.B." remarried to FLORENCE

JANE COX. Children of this marriage included JAMES HENRY, ERMA LUCILLE LILLIAN JANE, OLA MARIE, NINA MAXINE, BENSON PRESNELL, BETTY JO and MARY ANN.

Family tradition states that MABLE left with a carnival and did not return, that she might have lived in Texas or Oklahoma. The name of her husband is not known; however, he might have been an Indian. In 1932, he mailed a trunk from Oklahoma City back to the family in Matthews, Mo., with a brief note that MABLE had died of tuberculosis. OLA MARIE FORREST WEST is searching for relatives of her half-sister, MABLE, and would appreciate hearing from anyone with information on the family. Her address, OLA MARIE WEST, 1635 Marshall Ct.

Florissant, Mo., 63031.

Take every opportunity to talk with people that have the same surnames in your lineage. For example, while living in Pampa I found several people with the name AYERS - AYRES in area phone books but made no effort to contact them as I was confident that my family had stayed in Georgia. I have discovered that a great-great-uncle, NATHANIEL JOHN AYERS, left Georgia in the middle 1870s going first to Waco and later moving to Chillicothe in Hardman County, Texas. He died in 1911 and is buried with his wife MARTHA ELIZABETH CASH AYERS in Chillicothe. Anyone interested in this family? I have information I would like to share with other researchers.

Are you having difficulty locating a relative? Place a query in this column free. If you wish a response to a question other than through the column, please send a self-addressed stamped envelope. Queries and questions are always welcome and I answer all letters that include an envelope. Write me at Rt. 2, Box 505, Lot 26, Gonzales, La., 70737.

Marcum receives award

Melba Marcum, West Texas Regional Manager for ARA Living Centers, has been presented with the company's Challenge Award during the Executive Conference Awards Banquet in Houston.

In making the presentation to Marcum, Demeris Smith, president of ARA, Central Division, said, "This year we have one recipient of the Challenge Award. This individual has overcome tremendous odds to consistently provide quality care for the elderly."

"A year ago, fire broke out at Pampa Nursing Center. The fire was discovered in an unoccupied room in the north wing of the facility; there were three resident fatalities and nine others (employees and residents) were injured."

"At that time, Marcum was administrator of the Pampa Nursing Center. She proved to be the guiding force in maintaining a stable facility both during and after the fire. She directed her staff in an orderly evacuation of the facility. She cooperated with the authorities during several investigations of the incident. She dealt calmly with local and state media. And, perhaps most commendably, she assured families that their loved ones were well protected.

"Only two months after the fire, Pampa Nursing Center received a superior rating by the Texas Department of Health Bureau of Long Term Quality Standards Division."

As West Texas Regional Manager for ARA, Marcum is now responsible for overseeing the operations of 10 nursing homes including Pampa Nursing Center.

School bus tests new device to avoid collisions

One of the fleet of school buses that serves the Camden, Ark., School District has an extra piece of equipment that alerts the driver of approaching trains, and vehicles on emergency runs.

Sam Watkins, assistant superintendent and director of special programs, said the school is testing the device for a Texas manufacturer.

"Anytime somebody comes up with something that may look good, we sure want to put it out and test it," said Jim Bohannon, supervisor of school transportation for the Arkansas Education Department in Little Rock. "It sounds like a good idea. It has merit. But you never know. Things may look good in theory, but when you put them on a bus, it may not work."

"It's an electronic sound detector that's tuned to the frequency of sound generated by diesel locomotive horns and emergency vehicle sirens," Watkins said in a telephone interview. "Of course, when it detects those sounds, it causes a visible and audible alarm to trigger so that the bus driver knows that he needs to look for something."

Watkins said it should be most effective in misty, foggy weather or when buses must cross railroad tracks in warehouse districts.

A sensing device is on top of the bus, Watkins said, and a small panel is mounted on the dash. The alarm has about the sound and intensity that a digital wristwatch alarm emits. There also is a flashing light on the dash.

Our eccentric women—brilliant and a bit kookie

They are with us today as they were in the past and will be in the future, our eccentric women — those endearing characters who walk the fine line of being slightly different with a sure-footed grace.

From Alice Whitfield of Mississippi, who was buried upright in her favorite rocker, figuring she might as well be comfortable through the long stretch of eternity, to iconoclastic Katharine Hepburn, they brighten our lives.

Hepburn? She donned slacks and a baggy sweater to be comfortable more than 50 years ago when such attire was unacceptable. Banned from the lobby of a stodgy London hotel, she used the service entrance, and won the admiration of the entire staff. Today, largely through Hepburn's pioneering, a wardrobe without trousers is unthinkable.

Washington's Alice Roosevelt Longworth kept government circles off balance through seven decades and 13 presidents with her talent to amuse. She likened Governor Thomas E. Dewey to the bridegroom on the wedding cake. She said Calvin Coolidge look as if he had been weaned on a pickle. Her favorite throw pillow was embroidered: "If you haven't got anything nice to say about anyone, come sit by me."

Mrs. Augustus Hemenway of Boston, who founded The Society of Those Still Living In The House They Were Born In; the Cherry sisters, going on as "The World's Worst Sister Act" protected behind a wire screening to fend off vegetables and rotten eggs; Mrs. Andrew Jackson and financier Hetty Green, and many more visionary ladies have their roles in the article.

Planted in a field of tolerant attitudes, nurtured by the freedom to be different, they flowered from the beginning in a display of crazy colors. While most of us, earth-bound, slog along in our gray cloak of conformity, trying so desperately hard to be "normal," the eccentrics still dance lightly among us, independently pursuing their own slightly erratic courses.

They are still our most absurdly engaging romantic figures — smudging the canvas with a smile, dreaming their own off-beat dreams, forever beguiling us with their own special magic.

Hawaiian aquaculture increases

HONOLULU (AP) — Several times a month, Robert Hanohano drags a net along the perimeter of a one-acre freshwater pond as two helpers, waist deep in water, pull in the slack.

They harvest fresh water prawns on the Island of Oahu. It is a facet of the growing aquaculture industry in Hawaii.

"We made our profit in the first year," said Hanohano. "The demand far exceeds the supply."

The Hanohano venture began in 1974, and even as more players enter the business, Hanohano says the future remains bright.

Others active in the burgeoning industry agree.

"We're in the black by a reasonable margin," said Dr. Jim Wyban, 32, who has been in the aquaculture business since mid-1981. "Now it is just a matter of maximizing those things we're doing profitably."

Wyban said he has paid off his initial investment of $10,000.

Wyban modified an ancient Hawaiian fishpond, and raises several species of fish.

The largest sellers are mullet and tilapia, which are popular with Hawaii's Asian population, he said.

"Everything we've been producing can be consumed right here in the state," said Richard Fassler, spokesman for the Aquaculture Development Program of the state Department of Land and Natural Resources.

Gross sales from aquaculture in Hawaii rose from $200,000 in calendar 1976 to $2.6 million in calendar 1982, Fassler said. The figure is expected to rise as more "farms" in Hawaii become commercially viable, he said.

"We predict that the expansion is going to be enormous," said Fassler. State officials envision growth in exports as the industry matures.

However, not all aquaculture ventures in Hawaii have been quick successes. Many have been plagued by financial and technical snafus, and a slow return on investments.

Other operations, sponsored as research programs by large companies, have found the companies unwilling to spend the extra money to get the ventures operating commercially.

Analyzing the entrepreneur

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — One of most observable traits of those complex people who start businesses is their ability to be "super organized," says Joe Mancuso, an entrepreneur himself.

Organization, he says, is the key to the entrepreneur's success, the principle on which all entrepreneurial ventures are based. "Without it," he claims, "no other principles matter."

Mancuso, founder-president of the Center for Entrepreneurial Management, studies his subjects with the same curiosity with which biologists examine microorganisms. And sometimes his findings are as fascinating.

Entrepreneurs, he maintains, aren't big risk takers, an observation that many will dispute, if only because the vast majority of new enterprises fail within five years, many of them within a few months.

In support of his contention, Mancuso offers the evidence of a recent questionnaire sent to 2,500 center members in which they were asked to imagine themselves at a race track, faced with one of four choices.

The choices: "The daily double — a chance to make a killing; a 10-to-1 shot; a 3-to-1 shot; the 2-to-1 favorite."

Although 45 percent of respondents selected the first or second choices, the 3-to-1 shot by itself attracted 40 percent of the replies, leading Mancuso to the observation that entrepreneurs set realistic, achievable goals.

"While they do take risks," he says, "these are usually calculated risks. They know their limits, but are willing to bet on their skills."

He observes also that they tend to avoid risks in areas beyond their expertise. "They seldom buy lottery tickets or bet on spectator sports, but they aren't reluctant to gamble on games involving their own skill...."

They would, for example, like to play tennis with a top professional, but they wouldn't bet a penny on winning. No less than 78 percent said so. And given the choice of rolling dice with a 1-in-3 chance of winning, or working on a problem with a 1-in-3 chance of solving it, 92 percent chose the latter.

They have great faith in themselves. Whereas many people contend they would be in business if they could raise the money, Mancuso's survey suggests that entrepreneurs don't let money stand in the way.

Asked to name "the only ingredient both necessary and sufficient for starting a business," only 3 percent said money. Forty-four percent said customers, 28 percent named motivation and hard work, and 25 percent checked the "idea or product" category.

Port's ancient mariner is model boat craftsman

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Failing health and an opaque film clouding his aged brown eyes have robbed "Captain Vic" of his seafaring days, but patience and skilled hands keep his second passion alive.

"I've always been in the water," said Victor Delgado, 60, known as "Captain Vic" throughout this South Texas mariners' haven. "That's where I'd be right now — out in a boat in the water, but I can't see."

Instead, the captain sits at a workbench in the living room of his home. His hands feel among the saws, drills, pieces of wood, chunks of lead and sail fabric for a miniature anchor he has made from nails.

In his lifetime, Delgado figures he's made "thousands" of model boats — schooners, sloops, gunboats, canoes — some as small as pecan nuts, others up to 4 and 5 feet long.

He crafts each piece of the intricate models by hand, whittling balsam, sewing sails, bending thin wood slices around tin cans for square rig sails and pouring hot lead into a mold to make propellers.

"I've been making models

since 1900," he said. "I used to make them out of clay at first. I've sold a lot of them and given a lot to my friends."

Today, he's crafting a sloop for a South Padre Island man, working from a picture the man gave him of his boat. He says he'll sell the boat for $150, but may quit taking orders.

"Some people want to buy them, but I don't want to sell them," he said. "I don't think I will make another because of my eyes."

Although Delgado still sees blurry shapes and does most of his work from memory, he says threading a needle to make a sail is his greatest challenge.

"I feel for the needle on the table. Then I put wax on the thread" to stiffen it. "I keep on punching and finally I hit the eye, you see."

He doesn't ask for help when he's working on a boat because "nobody knows better than me," he said.

"It takes patience to build a boat," Delgado said. "Today, everybody is running around, running around in automobiles. They don't stop to make these things. Nobody stops."

Delgado is the resident ancient mariner who fascinates townsfolk and visitors alike with his model boats and his tales of life at the turn of the century.

"Customers who come in sometimes will sit and talk to him for hours," said Denise Roblin, a bookkeeper at Marchan's, a popular seafood restaurant Delgado helped start.

Delgado was born in Bagdad, a once-thriving Mexican community on the mouth of the Rio Grande. He and his mother, who he says lived to be 110, moved to Galveston when Delgado was a young boy.

It was there he developed a love for the sea and for building model boats.

"I was born and I was raised on the water," he said. "I played with boats and when I got older I made boats and raced them."

When he was in his early 20s, Delgado joined the organization that later was to become the U.S. Coast Guard. He retired after 25 years and moved back to the Port Isabel area, where he worked many years as captain of a privately owned yacht.

Delgado likes to talk more about his craft than his personal life, though he will admit to having been married "more than five times" and having fathered "a dozen or more" children, most of whom he doesn't remember.

Delgado said two "gray-haired ladies" came to his door a few months ago and told him they were his daughters, but he didn't recognize them.

Asked why he hasn't kept contact with his children, Delgado simply said, "I don't go visiting. I don't know whether they're living or not."

Nevertheless, he has a big family in the people of Port Isabel.

"Everybody in this town just loves him to death," Ms. Roblin said.

Delgado sold his share in Marchan's years ago, but still owns a trailer that sits in the restaurant parking lot.

He stops in the restaurant most every day wearing a sailor's hat and, occasionally, a uniform.

Delgado goes home to work on his boats, then returns to the trailer to sleep.

Browsers get warm welcome

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Some of Phil Zimmerman's customers have been known to crawl around on the floor, peer into corners and under shelves.

"They think I've hidden the good stuff and are looking for it. They're wrong, of course. Everything I have is on display," he said, and then grinned.

By display, he means that more than 20,000 hardcovers and paperbacks are scattered around the huge room. There are stacks upon stacks of mysteries, science fiction thrillers, romances and classics — but nothing is cataloged.

"This is a place where you can browse in every sense of the word. I enjoy meeting and talking with people," said Zimmerman, owner of the oldest used-book store in Louisville.

It was opened by his father, Abraham, in 1905. "I had just arrived on earth, so there was a double celebration."

Zimmerman's childhood was spent in the store, learning the tricks of the trade. He obtained a degree from the University of Louisville and did graduate work at the University of Kentucky.

"But I got my most expensive education in this business. It's easy to make a mistake when you come across a rare book."

He recalled the time a woman paid $35 for a volume of poems published in Oregon in 1836 before it gained statehood. She took the book down the street and sold it to another dealer for $75. He let it go a week later for $800.

"Much later, I saw the item listed in a rare-books catalog. It was valued at $3,000."

When he's in doubt about what to charge, Zimmerman can consult the guide published specifically for booksellers.

"Like all other commodities, books go up and down in price," he said. "I've learned that a well-informed collector often will buy books instead of stocks. They feel it's safer."

Sales have been slow recently.

Analyzing the entrepreneur

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — One of most observable traits of those complex people who start businesses is their ability to be "super organized," says Joe Mancuso, an entrepreneur himself.

Organization, he says, is the key to the entrepreneur's success, the principle on which all entrepreneurial ventures are based. "Without it," he claims, "no other principles matter."

Mancuso, founder-president of the Center for Entrepreneurial Management, studies his subjects with the same curiosity with which biologists examine microorganisms. And sometimes his findings are as fascinating.

Entrepreneurs, he maintains, aren't big risk takers, an observation that many will dispute, if only because the vast majority of new enterprises fail within five years, many of them within a few months.

In support of his contention, Mancuso offers the evidence of a recent questionnaire sent to 2,500 center members in which they were asked to imagine themselves at a race track, faced with one of four choices.

The choices: "The daily double — a chance to make a killing; a 10-to-1 shot; a 3-to-1 shot; the 2-to-1 favorite."

Although 45 percent of respondents selected the first or second choices, the 3-to-1 shot by itself attracted 40 percent of the replies, leading Mancuso to the observation that entrepreneurs set realistic, achievable goals.

"While they do take risks," he says, "these are usually calculated risks. They know their limits, but are willing to bet on their skills."

He observes also that they tend to avoid risks in areas beyond their expertise. "They seldom buy lottery tickets or bet on spectator sports, but they aren't reluctant to gamble on games involving their own skill...."

They would, for example, like to play tennis with a top professional, but they wouldn't bet a penny on winning. No less than 78 percent said so. And given the choice of rolling dice with a 1-in-3 chance of winning, or working on a problem with a 1-in-3 chance of solving it, 92 percent chose the latter.

They have great faith in themselves. Whereas many people contend they would be in business if they could raise the money, Mancuso's survey suggests that entrepreneurs don't let money stand in the way.

Asked to name "the only ingredient both necessary and sufficient for starting a business," only 3 percent said money. Forty-four percent said customers, 28 percent named motivation and hard work, and 25 percent checked the "idea or product" category.

Port's ancient mariner is model boat craftsman

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Failing health and an opaque film clouding his aged brown eyes have robbed "Captain Vic" of his seafaring days, but patience and skilled hands keep his second passion alive.

"I've always been in the water," said Victor Delgado, 60, known as "Captain Vic" throughout this South Texas mariners' haven. "That's where I'd be right now — out in a boat in the water, but I can't see."

Instead, the captain sits at a workbench in the living room of his home. His hands feel among the saws, drills, pieces of wood, chunks of lead and sail fabric for a miniature anchor he has made from nails.

In his lifetime, Delgado figures he's made "thousands" of model boats — schooners, sloops, gunboats, canoes — some as small as pecan nuts, others up to 4 and 5 feet long.

He crafts each piece of the intricate models by hand, whittling balsam, sewing sails, bending thin wood slices around tin cans for square rig sails and pouring hot lead into a mold to make propellers.

"I've been making models

since 1900," he said. "I used to make them out of clay at first. I've sold a lot of them and given a lot to my friends."

Today, he's crafting a sloop for a South Padre Island man, working from a picture the man gave him of his boat. He says he'll sell the boat for $150, but may quit taking orders.

"Some people want to buy them, but I don't want to sell them," he said. "I don't think I will make another because of my eyes."

Although Delgado still sees blurry shapes and does most of his work from memory, he says threading a needle to make a sail is his greatest challenge.

"I feel for the needle on the table. Then I put wax on the thread" to stiffen it. "I keep on punching and finally I hit the eye, you see."

He doesn't ask for help when he's working on a boat because "nobody knows better than me," he said.

"It takes patience to build a boat," Delgado said. "Today, everybody is running around, running around in automobiles. They don't stop to make these things. Nobody stops."

Delgado is the resident ancient mariner who fascinates townsfolk and visitors alike with his model boats and his tales of life at the turn of the century.

"Customers who come in sometimes will sit and talk to him for hours," said Denise Roblin, a bookkeeper at Marchan's, a popular seafood restaurant Delgado helped start.

Delgado was born in Bagdad, a once-thriving Mexican community on the mouth of the Rio Grande. He and his mother, who he says lived to be 110, moved to Galveston when Delgado was a young boy.

It was there he developed a love for the sea and for building model boats.

"I was born and I was raised on the water," he said. "I played with boats and when I got older I made boats and raced them."

When he was in his early 20s, Delgado joined the organization that later was to become the U.S. Coast Guard. He retired after 25 years and moved back to the Port Isabel area, where he worked many years as captain of a privately owned yacht.

Delgado likes to talk more about his craft than his personal life, though he will admit to having been married "more than five times" and having fathered "a dozen or more" children, most of whom he doesn't remember.

Delgado said two "gray-haired ladies" came to his door a few months ago and told him they were his daughters, but he didn't recognize them.

Asked why he hasn't kept contact with his children, Delgado simply said, "I don't go visiting. I don't know whether they're living or not."

Nevertheless, he has a big family in the people of Port Isabel.

"Everybody in this town just loves him to death," Ms. Roblin said.

Delgado sold his share in Marchan's years ago, but still owns a trailer that sits in the restaurant parking lot.

He stops in the restaurant most every day wearing a sailor's hat and, occasionally, a uniform.

Delgado goes home to work on his boats, then returns to the trailer to sleep.

Browsers get warm welcome

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Some of Phil Zimmerman's customers have been known to crawl around on the floor, peer into corners and under shelves.

"They think I've hidden the good stuff and are looking for it. They're wrong, of course. Everything I have is on display," he said, and then grinned.

By display, he means that more than 20,000 hardcovers and paperbacks are scattered around the huge room. There are stacks upon stacks of mysteries, science fiction thrillers, romances and classics — but nothing is cataloged.

"This is a place where you can browse in every sense of the word. I enjoy meeting and talking with people," said Zimmerman, owner of the oldest used-book store in Louisville.

It was opened by his father, Abraham, in 1905. "I had just arrived on earth, so there was a double celebration."

Zimmerman's childhood was spent in the store, learning the tricks of the trade. He obtained a degree from the University of Louisville and did graduate work at the University of Kentucky.

"But I got my most expensive education in this business. It's easy to make a mistake when you come across a rare book."

He recalled the time a woman paid $35 for a volume of poems published in Oregon in 1836 before it gained statehood. She took the book down the street and sold it to another dealer for $75. He let it go a week later for $500.

"Much later, I saw the item listed in a rare-books catalog. It was valued at $3,000."

When he's in doubt about what to charge, Zimmerman can consult the guide published specifically for booksellers.

"Like all other commodities, books go up and down in price," he said. "I've learned that a well-informed collector often will buy books instead of stocks. They feel it's safer."

Sales have been slow recently.

Group promotes benefits of nation's space program

By KURT GREENBAUM
Lancaster New Era
ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Houston, maybe. Or perhaps some city on the Florida coast.

But the rolling countryside of Lancaster County is not the place one might expect to find something called the United States Space Education Association (USSEA).

And artifacts, such as a chunk of old launch pad, models of the space shuttle and a piece of space shuttle heat tile.

Finally, there is the tiny, cramped office of Stephen M. Coughlin, a space travel aficionado and the founder and president of what has become an internationally known amateur space education organization.

Coughlin and six other local board members — also space program enthusiasts — work for the organization in their spare time.

What does a space education association do and what is it doing in Lancaster County? This one collects and disseminates information to thousands of people and institutions annually — at their request — through its news magazine, the Space Age Times.

Lancaster County happens to be the place where the people who began the group live. Coughlin and several friends founded the organization 10 years ago — July 20, 1973 — on the anniversary of Neil Armstrong's "giant leap for mankind" on the 1969 Apollo 11 moon landing.

The magazine is published bimonthly and sent to people and institutions in most of the 50 states, as well as 10 other countries, including England, Australia, France and West Germany. It has a circulation of about 2,000.

The organization also answers requests for information, according to Coughlin. He receives several hundred pieces of mail weekly from people asking questions, requesting literature and craving research assistance.

Coughlin and his assistants answer some of the mail based on their personal knowledge and research. For questions that require more research, he enlists the aid of experts in the field.

More than 1,000 people are members of the organization and many more lay people and specialists receive the magazine. Most members of the United States House and Senate space program committees receive the news magazine, Coughlin said.

All public relations offices of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration receive the magazine, as well as Hugh Harris, NASA's launch commentator.

All this is to fulfill Coughlin's hope for the space education organization: "To stimulate the public awareness of the benefits to mankind that will accrue from a viable and expanded space program," according to the organization's constitution.

"Some people said, 'Well, why do we really need a space program?' We felt if the space program was really to get public support, we were going to have to tell people not only what the space program was doing, but why," he said.

The group has tried to meet this challenge by reporting on every manned space flight since 1975. Coughlin has more than two dozen volunteers on his staff, reporters who have received press credentials from both NASA and the USSEA.

The reporters — ranging from professional journalists to people who only write for pleasure — share an interest in the space program and spend their free time in an effort to elevate public awareness.

Video games makes Ottumwa more than blip on map

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer
OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — Tourists don't usually spend too many dollars when they visit this small southern Iowa city but, oh, do they plunk down the quarters.

Once known nationally only as the hometown of Radar O'Reilly on television's "M-A-S-H" series, this city nestled in the cornfields is now known as the "Video Game Capital of the World."

Teen-agers from across the country have made Ottumwa a vacation priority, a place to showcase talents and perhaps capture a world record on Q-Bert, Ms. Pac-Man, Nibbler or any of the 225 video games that are now popular.

At the heart of Ottumwa's video game allure is the Twin Galaxies Arcade and its colorful 16-by-18-foot planet, asteroid, invader and star-studded international scoreboard.

Walter Day, co-owner of Twin Galaxies and keeper of the scoreboard, is also the man primarily responsible for solemn ceremonies on March 19 that saw Mayor Jerry Parker, Gov. Terry Branstad, the Amusement Game Manufacturers Association and Atari Inc. declare Ottumwa the "Video Game Capital of the World."

The "renown" of Twin Galaxies is primarily based on the International Scoreboard. The scoreboard, and the arcade, are well-publicized in industry magazines.

Much of the publicity centers on tournaments and Day says teen-agers love to come to his arcade to say they played it because it's famous.

"It's a riot having the most famous arcade in the world," says Day, a 34-year-old Boston native. "It gives me great mirth."

Day, who owns a second Twin Galaxies in Kirksville, Mo. — but no scoreboard there — says he put the arcade in Ottumwa because "it had to be Iowa — someplace typically American."

"Having the video game capital here among the hogs has a certain charm."

In an average day, the arcade receives 70 to 100 calls from across the nation reporting what is believed to be a new record on a game. Tourists also fill the arcade to watch nationally-ranked players banging, whizzing and blipping up points.

"Once you get the pattern down, you'll always be able to stay with it," explains 16-year-old Steve Harris, of Kansas City, Mo.

Harris, a high school junior with a B average, holds the records on Congo Bongo, Bubbles, Sinistar, Popeye, Motor Race, Wacko, Swimmer, Red Alert and Dragon Lair. Like many of the nationally-ranked youngsters, he credits his success to a knowledge of computers.

"Video games got me interested in computers and once you understand computers, you can figure out any video game because they all have a pre-programmed logic," Harris says.

Mayor Parker, who proudly claims that he "trounced" the governor in Pac-Man, says the video game capital title has "generated a lot of favorable publicity" for the city of 27,000.

Town is just a strip of water

By PATTI PATTERSON
Longview Morning Journal
UNCERTAIN, Texas — When folks here decide to take a Sunday drive, they're more likely to pile into a motorboat than into a car.

"The city of Uncertain is just a strip of water," says Fred Dahmer, historian and former mayor of this town of 176 on the banks of Caddo Lake.

"Downtown, there's not much left — a lot of bones, but not much meat."

Downtown consists of City Hall, a volunteer fire department, an automotive supply warehouse and Marion's Mini-Mall — Uncertain's version of a convenience market without the gas pumps.

Bait shops, catfish lodges and weathered wooden boat docks make up the rest of Uncertain's business district, all centered around the 35-mile-long lake which straddles Texas and Louisiana in the states' northern corners.

Last year the town had its first Christmas parade. Like most small-town parades, the procession included angels, Christmas music, decorated floats and Santa Claus. But instead of parading before residents and judges on Main Street, Uncertain's 30 entrants floated down the Cypress-filled bayou.

Dahmer, 70, and his wife, Lucille, have lived in Uncertain more than 20 years, but Dahmer has visited Caddo as long as he can remember.

"I've been coming to the lake since I was a very young child — weekends and holidays all of my life," he said.

Although he has read "every scrap" he can find about Uncertain, Dahmer says he hasn't been able to determine the origin of the town's name.

The most widely accepted explanation is that 19th century steamboat captains named the area because it was difficult to navigate and they were never sure if they would make it through on their way to the Jefferson port. Several other legends exist, but Dahmer says none are confirmed.

"The bottom line is, the people of Uncertain are uncertain as to how the name came to be," he said.

Although he isn't clear on the origin of the town's name, Dahmer says he is certain about why the town was incorporated in 1961. Scottsville was the only place to legally buy alcoholic beverages in Harrison County and many people believe Uncertain was established to get part of the business.

Dahmer disputes this — sort of.

Uncertain owes its start to automobile parts, he says. Booze was just "the stated purpose."

It seems that W.L. "Beer" Smith, a Harrison County business man, wanted to open a factory warehouse for his auto supply stores, Dahmer said.

Marshall commissioners wouldn't grant Smith a tax break, so he decided build his warehouse on some land he owned near Uncertain Landing.

After putting up the warehouse, Smith contacted railroad and trucking lines about shipping rates. That's when the trouble started.

The freight companies told Smith they delivered only to incorporated cities, certainly not to a swampy lake in the wilds of Harrison County.

Smith needed a city — fast. After checking into the procedure, he found he had to round up 200 residents, the majority of whom wanted to incorporate.

Being a good businessman, Smith knew he'd better offer something better than regular shipments of spark plugs and mufflers. Since the closest beer was several miles away, Smith figured a little liquid libation would be the best enticement for incorporation. He was right.

"Somehow we managed to scrape up 202 (residents)," Dahmer said. "Where they found 202 I don't know. They must have counted one day when the fish were biting real good, and I believe a few turtles were counted, too."

Today Uncertain's population is listed as 176, and the automotive supply warehouse is the town's largest employer.

The latest census figures cite Uncertain as one of only two East Texas towns that have lost residents since 1970. But by Dahmer's calculations, the town hasn't gotten smaller, the census takers just happen to count one day when the fish weren't biting.

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with rules and orders of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of its intent to re-file evidence and appropriate tariff(s) in support of a request to establish rates for the use of certain complex inside telephone wiring in the amount of $54.5 million annually. This request was previously a part of the considerations in Docket 5141 and now has been re-docketed as Docket 5420.

Customers who do not own the Complex Inside Wire associated with their Customer Premises Systems (such as PBX and Key Systems), and who utilize Southwestern Bell's wiring after January 1, 1984, could be affected by this request. On January 1, 1984, all of the Customer Premises Systems presently provided by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company will be transferred to a subsidiary of AT&T and that subsidiary of AT&T will be almost exclusively responsible for the charges pursuant to the proposed tariff on January 1, 1984. After January 1, 1984, customers who purchase their Complex Customer Premises Equipment and do not purchase, but continue to use, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's inside wire will be subject to the charges proposed in the tariff.

The proposed effective date for these new rates is January 1, 1984.

Persons interested in intervening in this matter should file a written motion expeditiously with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757, as the Hearing on the Merits in Docket 5420 is set for November 21, 1983.

Americans wary about money

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are surprisingly optimistic about their financial health, but there is an undercurrent of worry about the future, according to a survey on money released today.

About two people out of three also said their standard of living was comfortable and slightly more than half were satisfied with their personal financial situation. At the same time, however, about four people in 10 did not necessarily think the future would bring improved finances and half of those questioned said they worried about money.

The survey was conducted by Lieberman Research Inc. for Money magazine. It is based on a nationwide sample of 2,553 adults who responded to a questionnaire mailed earlier this year.

"One of the more striking things was an unusually high degree of optimism," said Seymour Lieberman, president of the research firm, in a telephone interview.

He pointed out that 49 percent of those questioned — almost half — said they expected next year would be better than this year.

World Series continues tonight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 1983 World Series, a mirror image so far of last week's League Championship Series, continues tonight for the Baltimore Orioles and Philadelphia Phillies with Mike Flanagan and Steve Carlton, a pair of Cy Young Award winners, opposing each other.

The teams split the first two games of this "Amtrak Series" in Baltimore before moving 100 miles or so up the road for the next three contests in Veterans Stadium.

For both teams, the results of Games One and Two of this 80th World Series were remarkably similar to their respective League Championship Series a week ago.

In the American League pennant playoff, Baltimore lost the opener to Chicago 2-1 before coming back on a 14-strikeout shutout by Mike Boddicker, 4-0. The Orioles lost the World Series opener against Philadelphia, 2-1, and again used Boddicker's airtight pitching to recover, beating the Phillies 4-1 in Game Two.

Philadelphia captured the opener of the National League playoffs against Los Angeles, 1-0 — a one-run victory much like the one the Phillies imposed on Baltimore in the first game of the Series. The Dodgers won Game Two of the playoffs, 4-1, the same score by which the Orioles beat the Phillies Wednesday night.

The similarities end tonight. Both teams won the third games of their pennant playoffs. One of them must lose the third game of the World Series.

Pitching has dominated the Series so far and that could continue tonight with Flanagan and Carlton, a pair of left-handers who have both won baseball's top pitching award, facing each other.

Flanagan won his Cy Young Award in 1979 when he went 23-9 for the Orioles. He is the first to admit that he is not the same pitcher now that he was then.

"I think I'm entirely different," he said. "I've been three different pitchers since then. In 1980, I had a sore shoulder. I had to learn to finesse batters, change speeds. It took two years of therapy to get the shoulder strong again. This year, I was back. I could go either way. The fastball was back if I wanted to use it. If I didn't, I could finesse batters. Now, with the knee, I'm back to finesse."

Flanagan got off to the best start of his eight-year career, winning his first six decisions this season. Then he tore up his left knee on May 17 and was sidelined for three months in the heart of the division race. He was re-activated Aug. 7 and, wearing a bulky brace on the knee, lost his first two starts before recovering. He finished with a 12-4 record and a 3.30 earned run average.

Which pitcher will he be tonight?

"If the leg feels 100 percent, I'll throw hard," he said. "If it doesn't feel so good, I'll finesse them."

In addition to the knee, Flanagan has been troubled by an arthritic left hip that limits his motion. "It won't get better until the off-season when I can rest it," he said. "It just means I have to favor my left leg a little and put extra pressure on the right one."

Carlton has had some physical problems, too, and visited a chiropractor this week after coming up with back spasms in his last start, the fourth and final game of the playoffs against the Dodgers.

"It goes up into his neck and prevents him from turning," Philadelphia Manager Paul Owens said. "But Lefty said he felt better."

Carlton, a record four-time Cy Young winner and baseball's all-time strikeout king, won his 300th game in a 15-16 season. He will be the first pitcher at the 300-victory plateau to appear in a World Series game since Grover Cleveland Alexander did it for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1928.

Pete Rose feels confident with Carlton pitching for the Phillies after five days of rest.

"Lefty is the Rolls Royce of pitchers," said Rose. "I know a little about Rolls Royces, too. He is the best because he is the strongest and he is the strongest because he works the hardest."

Rose was asked about Carlton's sub-500 record this season, the first time in a decade that he has lost more games than he won.

"I don't care what his won-lost record was," he said. "If it's a big game you need pitched, that's the stud I want out there."

Pampa visits Dumas tonight

Head coach John Kendall is trying to avoid a possible letdown after Pampa's 21-7 loss to Lubbock Estacado last week. Not from the players, but from the coaching staff.

"I'm not worried about the players. They've been working hard this week," Kendall said. "I'm more worried about the coaches. Sometimes after a tough loss, a coach will have a mental block and slack off on the players a little bit. We can't afford to have that happen."

Pampa visits Dumas tonight for another important District 1-4A meeting. Kickoff time is 7:30 p.m.

"Dumas is a much better team than their 1-4 record," Kendall said. "They've got good size and they're fast."

Dumas running back John Scott Buerger made the Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll after rushing for 201 yards and scoring four touchdowns in the Demons' 33-6 win over Brownfield last week.

"He's rushed for over 100 yards in the last three games," Kendall said. "They've got some good track people in the backfield, so it's not going to be an easy game."

Pampa is 2-3 overall and 1-1 in district play.

"We need a win to stay in the district race," Kendall added.

Pampa and Dumas fought to a 3-3 tie last season.

Junior cornerback Brian Kotara may miss tonight's game after pulling a muscle against Estacado.

"He hasn't been working out too much, so he's a question mark for tonight," Kendall said. "Either David Ellison or Dwayne Roberts will take his place."

Ellison moves up from the junior varsity team.

Kendall wasn't too disappointed with the Harvesters' loss to defending league champion Estacado.

ranked No. 17 in the latest Harris Ratings.

"The kids played a good game against an outstanding club," Kendall said. "We made some mistakes that hurt us."

Estacado's swift offense rushed for 300 yards and had 19 first downs despite losing the ball six times on fumbles and interceptions.

"Estacado surprised me. I knew they were quick, but they were a lot quicker than I thought they were," Kendall said.

(There won't be any letdowns, or ties either. Pampa 19, Dumas 0.)

Jets riding a rollercoaster

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The New York Jets, whose Super Bowl hopes last season died one game short of fruition in the Miami mud, try to put their up-and-down 1983 season back in gear—when they play host to the Dolphins in a key National Football League game Sunday.

The Jets, who had seven victories and a tie over Miami from 1978-1981, lost three times to the Dolphins last year. The last was a 14-0 decision in the American Conference championship, played in a quagmire in Miami's Orange Bowl.

New York and Miami, expected to be the class of the AFC East this season, are both 3-3, one game behind Buffalo and surprising Baltimore, who meet Sunday. Both the Jets and the Dolphins lost last week. Miami 38-35 in overtime to the Bills; New York 10-7 to the Cleveland Browns on a last-second field goal.

"It's puzzling to everybody, not just to me," Jets Coach Joe Walton says of his team's record. "We've played well enough to win the games we won and not well enough to win the three games we lost. Still, we're in the race. It's up to ourselves to get cranked up."

In other games Sunday, Houston will be at Minnesota; San Francisco at Tampa Bay; San Diego at New England; Chicago at Detroit; Cleveland at Pittsburgh; Buffalo at Baltimore; Cincinnati at Denver; the Los Angeles Raiders at Seattle; the New York Giants at Kansas City; Atlanta at the Los Angeles Rams and Philadelphia at Dallas.

Washington is at Green Bay on Monday night.

In New York, the Jets will be facing a fresh face at quarterback in Dan Marino, who last week took over an offense that had sputtered under David Woodley.

"I'm happy with the direction our offense is going now," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "Marino's got good awareness. He had a lot of experience setting up and throwing the ball in college. We like everything about him."

The Colts, who won two games in 1981 and 1982, will be trying to run their record to 5-2 and take over outright possession of first in the AFC East.

Buffalo has beaten Baltimore four straight times, including a 28-23 victory in Buffalo four weeks ago. But Colts Coach Frank Kush is concerned the rivalry is second to momentum.

"We have to keep on a normal plane," said Kush. "We have a long way to go. I don't think we can be concerned whether we're playing the Bills or Miami or Timbuktu."

Houston, which has dropped 13 straight games, will be trying to start down the path trod by Baltimore under new Coach Chuck Studley, who took over as interim coach this week when Ed Biles quit.

If anything, the losing streak and the coaching change make Vikings Coach Bud Grant apprehensive.

"I'd much rather play a team the week after they've won than after they've lost, and a losing string like Houston's makes a team even more troublesome," Grant said.

Threshers lose grid game to Dumas, 14-8

Dumas won out over Pampa, 14-8, in a ninth-grade football game Thursday in Harvester Stadium.

Pampa's only score came on a run by Cliff Medley. Tim Harvey ran the conversion.

Linemen Shawn Green and David Tolbert played an outstanding game for the Threshers, according to coach Tom Pollack.

"It was a close game," Pollack said. "We had some chances to win it."

Pampa hosts Canyon next Thursday, starting at 4:30 p.m.

Rockets drop exhibition

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Wayne Cooper pumped in 16 points to lead seven Portland players in double figures Thursday as the Trail Blazers outscored the Houston Rockets 102-73 in a National Basketball Association exhibition game here.

Portland, 2-1 in pre-season play, took a 28-18 first period lead and led by as many as 38 points in a wire-to-wire victory.

Houston's celebrated rookie Ralph Sampson scored 10 of his 12 points in the first quarter, but was bottled up by Portland's defense in the second half.

Mychal Thompson and Calvin Natt added 15 and 14 points respectively for the Blazers, who outscored Houston 15-9 at the outset of the third quarter.

The Rockets, now 0-4 in pre-season play, went 6 minutes and 37 seconds without scoring in the third period as Portland built a 65-41 lead.

Cooper led the Blazers with 14 rebounds, as Portland outmuscled the Rockets. Sampson collected 11 rebounds, his personal high this year, to lead the Rockets.

Dupree decides to quit Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Running back Marcus Dupree says he is quitting the Oklahoma University football team, citing pressure from head coach Barry Switzer as a major factor, according to a published report.

back home. He was located Wednesday night but didn't announce his decision until Thursday night.

Dupree described those days as "some of the worst times in my life."

He said two losses by Oklahoma this year — to Ohio State and Texas — plus his inconsistent performance and fan reaction to it also were factors in his decision to leave Oklahoma.

Dupree said his decision eases a burden he had carried in Oklahoma.

"People put things on my shoulders," he said. "Like saying I can't play in the big games — I know better."

"I wouldn't say we had conflicts, but it seemed like I couldn't please him most of the time," today's edition of the Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger quoted Dupree as saying. "All this criticism I've been getting, almost from the time I first got there, just got to where it was wearing on me."

"I don't feel comfortable at Oklahoma. The things I though were important — playing on television, winning the Heisman Trophy, playing at a school with Oklahoma's tradition — aren't so important to me anymore," a copyright story today in the Commercial Appeal in Memphis, Tenn., quoted him as saying.

Switzer couldn't be reached late Thursday for comment. Earlier in the day, however, Switzer said, "If he doesn't want to come back, that's his choice. Then he shouldn't come back."

Dupree was suspended from the Sooner football team Wednesday after he failed to return from a weekend trip

Thatcher aide resigns

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today accepted the resignation of one of her closest aides, Trade Secretary Cecil Parkinson, after his ex-mistress accused him of distorting the facts about their love affair. Sara Keays, 36, published her statement on the front page of The Times of London, sparking fresh criticism of Parkinson just as Mrs. Thatcher was preparing to deliver the final speech at her Conservative Party's annual conference. Parkinson has acknowledged that Miss Keays is expecting his child. Parkinson, who masterminded Mrs. Thatcher's re-election in June, made no immediate comment on the crushing development in his political career. His position had appeared secure despite the furor. On Thursday, he received a warm reception in his first appearance at the conference as Mrs. Thatcher led thunderous applause by 5,000 delegates. Standing with Parkinson, 52, was his wife, Amy, 48. Mrs. Thatcher had staunchly supported Parkinson and said last week she would not ask him to resign. But sources close to Mrs. Thatcher said she accepted Parkinson's resignation after holding an informal Cabinet meeting in her hotel suite. A statement issued by Mrs. Thatcher's office in London said: "The Right Hon. Cecil Parkinson has tendered his resignation as secretary of state for trade and industry and the prime minister has accepted it with regret." On Monday night, Parkinson had said in a television interview that he had no intention to resign but would do so if the controversy became an unacceptable political liability to the prime minister.

Witness describes drug distribution and slaying

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — A witness has testified he was paid $60,000 to help a drug-smuggling organization move marijuana from the Sylvester airport to Valdosta three times in 1980.

County between August 1980 and November 1980. Haas' elder daughter, Judy Haas McNeil, 39, of White Springs, Fla., also was indicted in the case but remains at large after escaping from the Valdosta jail in July.

Gary Childers, testifying Thursday in the U.S. District Court trial of five people charged with drug smuggling and related charges, said he was paid to drive the marijuana to one of several "stash houses" in Valdosta, where the drug was weighed for distribution.

Frank Howard Corry III pleaded guilty to a related drug conspiracy charge in Miami and was sentenced to five years in prison Aug. 2. John Parella, 40, of Tampa, Fla., pleaded guilty Aug. 2 to a second-degree murder charge in the slaying of pilot Frank Marrs and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

On trial are Robert Haas, 64, of Valdosta; his daughter, Constance Haas Meester, 28, of Live Oak, Fla.; Edward Conrad Sawyer, 51, of Miami; Jeanne Tumulty, 46, of Camden, N.J.; and Herman Whitlow, 37, of Dallas. They were among eight people indicted by a federal grand jury in Macon last March. The indictment said the eight smuggled more than 5,000 pounds of marijuana into Worth

Childers testified that he was hired to unload marijuana from an airplane after it was flown to Sylvester from Jamaica. Childers said that, after his first trip to Sylvester in August 1980, Whitlow followed him back to Valdosta in a car. They met Mrs. McNeil and Ms. Tumulty, who weighed the marijuana, he said.

Economy into another gear

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — You may not have noticed it, so smoothly is it occurring, but the economy is moving into another gear, one that some forecasters think will push the recovery well into 1985. By then, of course, people are likely to be calling it an expansion rather than a recovery, and conceivably the most doleful of them might be worrying about an eventual slowdown and then — forgive the thought — another recession.

these local economies blossom in the second stage of the business-cycle recovery." She maintains that the increase in business capital spending "will fuel expansion in the production of heavy capital equipment, and thus spur further gains in economic activity in the Midwest." Among other likely consequences of the change to a business-led expansion are a lower — though still relatively high — jobless rate, more savings, relatively less consumer use of credit, and stable interest rates.

FBI raids young 'hackers' who tapped into pay computer network

By The Associated Press
A nationwide FBI crackdown on computer buffs who tapped into a Defense Department system and an electronic mail network targeted at least 10 youths, and one of the "hackers" said he feared "they are going to make an example of us."

Agents on Thursday raided the homes of four teen-agers in Irvine, Calif., where officials seized thousands of dollars worth of computer equipment. Six others were targeted in Detroit as part of an alleged defense computer sabotage ring. Raids were also reported in Rochester, N.Y., and Oklahoma City by The New York Times.

In Detroit, six teen-agers were implicated in a national ring that federal investigators believe has done at least $500,000 damage while sabotaging computer networks, according to the Detroit Free Press.

The leader of the group, who calls himself "The Wizard of ARPAnet," claims he has penetrated a system that carries sensitive information on phone lines for military use, the Free Press said.

The newspaper quoted a source close to the FBI as saying the probe was focusing on "deliberate, calculated sabotage," with the emphasis on "anything defense-oriented."

The Detroit group, known as the "Inner Circle," included youths ranging in age from 14 to 17, the newspaper said. Their names were not released by authorities and they have been not been charged, but the mother of one said federal agents and security officials from Michigan Bell showed up at the family home Thursday morning and seized computer equipment.

The seizure was confirmed by FBI Special Agent John Anthony, who refused to comment further.

"It was a real shock," said Sharon Stadjas, whose 14-year-old son, Eric, has bragged about breaking into a Defense Department computer. "They claimed he had over 30 pages of defense computer listings and passwords to get into them."

Stadjas admitted he had the listings but said, "They don't indicate that I was on those systems."

"He bragged he knew how to do it, but he said he would never harm anything if he got in," Mrs. Stadjas said. "He would just look and leave. It was just the thrill of getting in."

The California raids were part of "a continuing wire fraud investigation" that began after General Telephone and Electronics of Vienna, Va., "became aware of unauthorized access to its system during routine monitoring," said FBI spokesman James E. Mull.

"Investigation is still in its initial phases. It will be several months before the case reaches a prosecutable phase, and search warrants have been issued nationwide," said Mull, who is based at the FBI's field office in Alexandria, Va. He would not elaborate.

"The Irvine kids tapped in GTE Telenet Communications Corp.'s Telemail electronic mail system," Mull said.

At a Thursday news conference, the four Irvine youths said a San Diego computer hobbyist was responsible for the group's unwitting use of the Telemail system.

The youths, all students at Woodbridge High School, said they had no idea that the San Diego youth, whom they know only as "the Cracker," had given them passwords for a pay system.

"I definitely think that the Cracker wanted to get us in trouble," said Gary Knutson, 15.

FBI agents on Wednesday seized thousands of dollars worth of computer equipment from the homes of Knutson and his brother Gregg, 14, Wayne Correia, 17, and David Hill, 17.

No arrests have been made, FBI Special Agent Fred Reagan said.

Hill said FBI agents told him he and his friends were responsible for thousands of dollars in losses by an East Coast company, but Correia said their use of the system would cost only about $30.

"We weren't doing anything to invade anyone's privacy or to destroy or to play tricks with anyone else's information," Correia said.

"But I'm afraid that they are going to try to make an example of us to try to stop everyone from accessing" computer networks, he added.

GTE Telenet confirmed that the youths had been improperly using its electronic mail system, which links more than 1,200 commercial computers. Telenet said in a statement that it would "pursue all available legal recourse, including criminal prosecution."

The latest crackdown follows discovery in July that a group of youths in Milwaukee had used the Telenet system to enter a computer at the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in Manhattan and some Defense Department computers. That investigation is continuing.

Middle East approach changing

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is quietly shifting its approach in the tangled Middle East, from bold declarations and far-reaching peace formulas to patchwork solutions for more immediate problems.

As a result, President Reagan's dramatic and controversial proposal nearly 14 months ago for an Arab-Israeli settlement is on the shelf, not formally withdrawn but in abeyance while the administration tries to keep peace in Lebanon.

American diplomatic activity is concentrated in the hands of special U.S. emissary Robert C. McFarlane. There has been at least one report that he is working on a secret deal to have Syria crush the Palestine Liberation Organization while Israel carves out a sphere of influence in southern Lebanon.

Actually, McFarlane's mission is much less cosmic in nature, but important nevertheless. Especially since the Soviets have stepped up their military buildup in Syria.

The National Security Council official is trying to bolster the central government in Beirut by promoting unity talks among the 17 distinct and often warring Lebanese groups. That may be the only way to maintain the 19-day (as of Friday) cease-fire and get the Syrians to withdraw their troops from the country.

The cost is likely to be at least some residual Syrian influence in Lebanon, but unless the ruling Phaliganists share authority with other factions it may be impossible for the government to remain in power.

At the same time, McFarlane is trying to lay the groundwork for the eventual withdrawal of both Israeli and Syrian troops by encouraging Israel to take the first, unilateral, step.

Some Israeli units would retreat to new lines and wait for Syria to carry out a matching pullback in the areas under its control. If all goes well, the two armies would methodically quit Lebanon in stages.

Paradoxically, however, the Reagan administration is not demanding an Israeli pullout right now. In fact, the Israelis are being encouraged to stand nose-to-nose to the Syrians in the Bekaa region until tensions are reduced.

The idea is keep the Syrian forces in check, while peace efforts proceed. U.S. officials were miffed that Israel did not delay its withdrawal to the Awali river early last month to mid-October.
