Rogers Bothered By Inequity In Sentencing Of Criminals

A 17-year-old boy in Texas can receive the death penalty for robbery with firearms while a mature man convicted of sabotaging in time of war or national emergency could only receive 30 years in jail and-or be fined $10,000.

Rep. Walter Rogers of Pampa, discussed in his weekly newsletter a bill in the House of Representatives that would not provide the death penalty for a saboteur, though it would do so for espionage.

Pointing out that he offered amendments to the bill which would make it possible for a death penalty for sabotage to be ruled, Rogers said he saw merely at tempting to enlarge the authority of the court to impose such a penalty.

"Doesn't Make Sense"

"Frankly, I have always felt the courts should have full power to assess punishment commensurate with the crime committed," he writes. "and I can think of no worse crime than sabotage, espionage or treason."

"I just don't make sense to me" to have a robber executed and a saboteur escape it, he continues, adding he is certain the House would not have turned down the amendments the other night if it had had a chance to consider them under different circumstances.

"We are never going to be able to defeat Communism or the other isms that would destroy our way of life," he says, "unless the courts have full power to mete out penalties that will not only punish the criminal, but will be a potent deterrent to the crime involved."

Cautious Leaders

The Pampa congressman cautions against telegraphing our plans in the matter of the possible entry of Red China into the United Nations.

"I know of no one in this country who wants to see Red China admitted to the UN," he continues. "Certainly I, as a member of Congress, would vigorously and bitterly oppose such entry." But, if Red China should be admitted, Rogers says the subsequent action or course of this nation should be determined by thorough analysis of the world situation at the time.

"Certainly, we would not want to do something that would aid and abet Communist forces in their quest for world domination," he concludes. "Giving the other team our signals is not going to help us with the game."

Visitors to Rogers' office have included Mr. and Mrs. Don Conley and family, of Pampa.

saking Yarborough to state his platform.

He attacked Yarborough as the "hand-picked" candidate of the KKK, NAACP, the ADA and George Farris, and said his opponent didn't have a platform.

Speaks at Seaton

Yarborough Sunday spoke at Seaton, a Czech community near Temple, and attacked Shivers' stand on the tidelands. The governor spearheaded a move to get control of the tidelands vested in the state.

Said Yarborough: "Since the Texas attorney general let it leak out that Brownell (U. S. attorney general) is now claiming that the tidelands extend just three miles into the Gulf, Governor Shivers hasn't said a word."

"I challenge him and call upon him to come out from behind that log in the woodpile and tell the people what his Republican friends are trying to do to the people of Texas."

He said he prepared "the first brief stating Texas claims to the tidelands out to the 10.35-mile limit back in 1934 and I have been fighting for that ever since."

City Spraying On Schedule

The chances of Pampa losing some of its bug population rose this morning when the city's spraying machine was back to work.

James Cowan, city director of public works, late this morning said it was back in operation, meaning that both spraying and fogging of Pampa's alleys would go forward on schedule. The sprayer has been out of service for a week.

L. E. West, city-county sanitarian, early last week said he was convinced the increase of bugs in town had been caused, at least partially, by the lack of spraying. Fogging went on as usual, however.

Heir's Death Still Confusing

CHICAGO, July 12 (UP)—Four of Chicago's top doctors were to decide Monday whether to exhume the body of mail order heir Montgomery Ward Thorne.

The doctors were called by Coroner Walter E. McCarron to review the various theories on Thorne's strange death in his tiny studio apartment June 19.

Exhumation of Thorne's body was among the recommendations which the doctors might submit.

Doctors have already drawn widely differing conclusions from the bizarre evidence surrounding the death of the 29-year-old heir to a $13 million fortune.

Dr. Harry Leon coronar's physician, said Thorne died in agony and convulsions of suffocation induced by alcohol and narcotics.

McCarron, commenting on Leon's findings, said he believed a mysterious second person injected morphine into Thorne's body before he died. He said he suspected foul play.

1,300 Use Water Rate

Thirteen hundred Pampans late this morning had signed up for lawn water rates in the city water office.

Miss Ellen Keough, chief bookkeeper in charge of the water office, today figured that was about all the residents who would apply.

The lawn rate applies only to residential accounts inside the city limits. Miss Keough pointed out. There is no rate for those outside the city limits or for commercial accounts.

Minimum for the lawn rate is $3.30 for 6,000 gallons; for the residential rate, it is $1.65 for 3,000 gallons. If a residential account uses as much as 6,000 gallons per month, the lawn rate is cheaper; if the consumption is less than 6,000 gallons, the residential rate is cheaper.

National Citizens Commission For Public Schools Tries To Defend Public Schools

I have only found one man holding a position of public trust who would even try to harmonize tax-supported schools with the Golden Rule.

Now I have a letter from Samuel C. Gale, Vice Chairman of the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools, in which he attempts to show that public schools are in agreement with the Golden Rule. He gives me authority to publish his defense providing I publish it in toto.

I had asked Mr. Gale and all the other 35 members of the National Citizens Commission the following questions:

1. Would it be a violation of the Golden Rule for one individual, say John Smith, to set up a school and coerce another individual, say Bob Jones, either to pay a fee for Smith's school or leave town?

2. If it is a violation of the Golden Rule for John Smith to coerce Bob Jones to help pay for Smith's school or leave town, wouldn't it be a violation of the Golden Rule for one group, say Group A, to set up a school and coerce another group, say Group B, to either help pay for support of Group A's school or leave town?

3. In question 2, Group A could be a majority or it could be a minority. If it is a violation of the Golden Rule for a minority to coerce the majority either to pay a fee or leave town, why isn't it a violation of the Golden Rule for a majority to coerce a minority to either pay a fee or leave town?

Mr. Gale sent the following explanation of why he believes tax-supported schools are in agreement with the Golden Rule. Writes Mr. Gale:

"When our Society which founded the United States of America interpreted the Golden Rule in terms of a political structure and procedures (including the levying of taxes) it provided that taxes might be levied by the majority vote of the free citizens of each community.

"The board rules for government were set down in documents called Constitutions. I am told that in the constitution of each of our 48 states it is provided that by the votes of the people in such states and the communities within such states, taxes can properly be levied for the purpose of public education.

"There is further provision that these constitutions may be changed by the votes of the people. But as they were originally conceived in the terms of the political interpretation of the Golden Rule by the founders of our Society, they can so be accepted today until the people of our Society decide, by majority vote and in accordance with legal processes set down, to change them."

Dead Men Cannot Answer Questions

It will be noted that Mr. Gale makes no attempt himself to answer questions, but simply refers to the politicians who wrote the various constitutions of the states. Most of these men, if not all, are dead and cannot explain, if they ever did, how they drew the conclusion that public schools were in agreement with the Golden Rule. To use dead men as an authority and then refuse to try to defend their philosophy is certainly a strange and arbitrary way of trying to prove that an act is in agreement with the Golden Rule. One can prove most anything by this method. They can even prove that slavery was in agreement with the Golden Rule.

After patient years of trying I have yet to find anyone who believes in public schools who is willing to answer these questions. On the other hand, those who have given sufficient thought to the question of morality of public schools are perfectly willing to answer any and all questions without evasion for they realize that there is no way that a belief in public schools can be harmonized with the Golden Rule.

It is generally conceded by those who have given a great deal of thought to moral questions that moral laws are eternal — they do not change with time or place. Man does not make moral law and cannot alter it. If man disobeys moral law, he suffers the consequences. But Mr. Gale seems to put the laws made by man above Nature's or God's laws. He seems to deny Peter and the Apostles' statement that:

"We ought to obey God rather than man."

Here we have the vice-chairman of the National Citizens Commission putting the laws of man above the laws of God. He is in reality contending that we can serve two masters or he completely repudiates God's laws and prefers to worship and obey the changeable will of men.

Constitution Sanctified Slavery

Would Vice-Chairman Gale contend that all the constitutions made by the various states were in agreement with the Golden Rule? Would he contend that the majority or the minority determines the Golden Rule?

In fact, at the time the earlier state constitutions were written on by about three per cent of the population had the right of franchise. They did not even represent the majority.

And if these constitutions sanctioned slavery and also sanctioned tax-supported schools, just where is Mr. Gale going to draw the line as to when state constitutions are in agreement or disagreement with the Golden Rule?

Mr. Gale says he has done the best he can in attempting to harmonize tax-supported schools with

National Whirligig Cold War Help Demanded From 3 Principal Allies

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Our principal European allies—Britain, France and Italy—have been given plain warning that American money for economic or military aid will be cut off one year from this month, unless they show greater co-operation in the cold war with Russian and Chinese Communists in the twelve-month interim.

Despite re-establishment of close Anglo-American bonds in the wake of recent misunderstandings, that is the most significant fact to emerge from the Eisenhower-Churchill negotiations, and to be assumed from forthcoming conversations with Premier Mendès-France of Paris.

The ultimatum has been delivered in extremely frank language by President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles, with the full approval of both Republican and Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill. It was conveyed in even blunter terms at cocktail parties and dinners thrown for the secretarial and journalistic retinue which accompanied or trailed Churchill on his recent visit to Washington.

The conditions which the three countries must meet vary. Funds for France and Italy will stop unless their Parliaments have ratified the European Defense Treaty, and unless their governments have taken actual steps to draft and train troops for a European military force. In implementing the pact, Paris and Rome must attach no reservations adverse to Germany's participation in the continental army and air force.

Churchill will be given an opportunity to improve political and commercial relations with Russia and China through talks at the "summit" with Georgi Malenkov and Mao Tse-tung, but he must initiate and conduct these advances on his own. Eisenhower will not be a party to them.

But if they fail, and Washington must be a partial judge of their success or failure, Britain will be expected to support Eisenhower's alternative tough program against the Communist powers. That is essential to a continued flow of funds Londonward.

Britain also will be expected to support the Golden Rule. He probably has done as good a job as anyone else could do who attempts to harmonize something with the Golden Rule that all who will answer question without evasion know is incompatible with it. He also takes a position that is in the agreement with the Declaration of Independence that says "governments derive their just power from the consent of the governed."

Mr. Gale has to take the position that governments do not derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. He has to take the position that they derive their just powers from either the consent of the minority or the majority — whichever has the most force back of its aggression.

And when we are entrusting the youth of the land to men like Mr. Gale and teachers who must evade moral questions, it is no wonder that we are in the moral predicament we are in today that leads to class legislation, ever-mounting discriminatory taxes, dishonest money, conscripting the youth and almost continuous wars.

We are reaping in the United States exactly what we are sowing by trusting men like those in The National Citizens Commission of Public Schools who serve and obey men rather than God, as expressed by the Golden Rule and the Commandments.

Fair Enough New York Cop Made Effort Against Harassing By FBI

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK — Some elements of our press are taking smug satisfaction in the fact that a subcommittee of the House committee on Judiciary took a mild fall out of George Monaghan, who was New York police commissioner under Impellitteri, for trying to protect good, conscientious cops from outrageous persecution by the federal department of justice. The truth is that Monaghan did make an effort to quit harassing these cops.

George Monaghan was tossed out of the police department when Mayor Wagner took office. One special reason was that Monaghan defended one of his cops against persecution by the U. S. Department of Justice for subduing a subway employee who was a member of Mike Quill's CIO Union of Transport Workers. Quill gave a lot of union money to Wagner's campaign and during that campaign Wagner could not be coerced to fire the cop.

Quill's subject got into a petty scrap with a policeman in a public place in a remote neighborhood late at night. Words led to blows. The Quill man was pinched and the policeman found himself in jeopardy in three areas. First he was charged with ordinary assault. Then, the state grand jury made a pass at him. Then the U. S. grand jury indicted him pursuant to a pernicious policy of the Department of Justice. The cop was tried in the federal court and convicted of denying this Quill subject some indefinable right by fetching him a poke in the snoot in the rough-and-tumble of an ordinary man-fashion fight between two guys who were well able to take care of themselves.

However, as soon as the jury convicted the cop the judge reversed the verdict, thus upholding Monaghan's contention that the Department of Justice has no important business to do with its meddling in the case of a cop who has thrown me up for grabs on various lawns and estates of people who can afford hounds and jaguars and I can say that in only one case was there a can of beer in sight or available. I passed a brace of weekends at the Westchester retreat of Billy Rose, a vast and sprawling country seat, and he had put in a few pitchers of beer in the Rose garden to be served at lunch time to some Broadway people who like it and, presumably, had requested it. Since Mr. Rose does not touch alcoholic beverages in any form, the presence of beer was a simple courtesy for some beer-drinkers who happened to be along that week-end. Neither my host nor myself put a lip over these pitchers of beer and I have to testify that a used Cadillac was the best car in the driveway. Nor were there any copies of The Social Register, Spur, or Town & Country. I think I glimpsed a copy of Variety, however.

Since then I have passed odd moments on even more notable estates, owned by men of the sort who are described in Southern areas as having more money than a show dog can jump over. I never saw a can of beer at any of these places. I assume, therefore, that the persons arrested were innocent.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

(Wall Street Journal) The activities in the Security Council Sunday are further evidence that the ostensible purposes of the United Nations are not necessarily consonant, and may not always be reconcilable, with United States interests.

In the first place, the Soviet Union vetoed a proposal to refer the Guatemala uprising to the Organization of American States. In the course of the discussions United States Delegate Lodge told Soviet Delegate Tzarankin to "stay out of the Western Hemisphere" — a warning to transatlantic powers as old as the Monroe Doctrine.

But the Soviet Union is already "in" the Western hemisphere. It is not only that it has established footholds in a number of Latin American states and has all but captured the government of Guatemala, to which it gives important military and diplomatic aid. The Soviet Union is in this hemisphere also through the United Nations.

The practical effect of the Soviet veto will not be great. But the fact that the Soviet Union could veto an action originating from Communist infiltration of Latin America suggests how far the United Nations has carried the United States from its traditional policies.

In the second place, the Security Council unanimously called for a cessation of hostilities in Guatemala and the withholding of aid to either side by United Nations members. Now it is possible that a government set up by the Guatemalan insurgents would be no better than the present one; perhaps we have here just another Latin American struggle between military factions which reflects but little the feelings of the populace and in which communism is not the fundamental issue.

But it is a fact that the present government is strongly pro-Communist. And it is a further fact that it is not in the interest of the United States to have communist or pro-Communist governments in Latin America, which it is very much to the Soviet interest.

On the contrary, most of them were admitted violators. Under Brownell in the Eisenhower administration as under a varying succession of political executives who served as attorney-general in the Roosevelt-Truman reign, there has been an insulting distinction between the denials of "civil rights" by cops and far more flagrant denial of the same "rights" under union pickets. The cop who jabs a drunk in the plexus with three fingers is a rogue to be thrown in prison. The wantonly murdering picket is beneath the notice of the same authorities.

All Monaghan did was try to make a deal with Department of Justice to mind its own damn business. The papers which hold that this was an evil deal come not from the public with clean hands, but from a journalist who, they lack the honesty and courage to tell the truth.

Looking Sideways

By WHITNEY BOLTON

Although I would not put beer down on a list of my favorite pastimes, I recognize that millions of worthy folk enjoy this brew and look upon it as a solace and a friend. Therefore, I am a little amazed to note in the 50-cent magazines that the advertising of beer has taken a highly tony course and that the humblest of flannel beers is offered to the public in four-color spreads involving a pack of hunting hounds, usually a Kentucky manion complete with firm, glistening white pillars, a jaguar or two nestled on a gravelled driveway impeccably raked and, if I am not mistaken, a copy of the 1954 edition of The Social Register negligently tossed on a table.

Fine, in its time and which has thrown me up for grabs on various lawns and estates of people who can afford hounds and jaguars and I can say that in only one case was there a can of beer in sight or available. I passed a brace of weekends at the Westchester retreat of Billy Rose, a vast and sprawling country seat, and he had put in a few pitchers of beer in the Rose garden to be served at lunch time to some Broadway people who like it and, presumably, had requested it. Since Mr. Rose does not touch alcoholic beverages in any form, the presence of beer was a simple courtesy for some beer-drinkers who happened to be along that week-end. Neither my host nor myself put a lip over these pitchers of beer and I have to testify that a used Cadillac was the best car in the driveway. Nor were there any copies of The Social Register, Spur, or Town & Country. I think I glimpsed a copy of Variety, however.

Since then I have passed odd moments on even more notable estates, owned by men of the sort who are described in Southern areas as having more money than a show dog can jump over. I never saw a can of beer at any of these places. I assume, therefore, that the persons arrested were innocent.

When not showing their wares, frosty and enticing, on the awards of such places, beer-makers go in for inside photography showing gents in Tattersall vests and hand-loomed tweed gracefully upping with a shell of beer while their ladies, invariably garbed as for The Royal Enclosure, are daintily dipping their beaks into glasses of beer.

If I knew a brewer, which I don't, I'd take this excellent fellow aside and point out to him that if he intends to cater only to people with sacks of money and spottles replete in Society he is entering to dwindling market, what with taxes and other bites at the cash. The fact is, as everyone knows, that beer is for the masses, the masses love it, and no brewer is going to be able to buy himself better than a five-room cottage if he doesn't cater to the masses. For every glass of beer consumed at Newport or Southampton, not to mention an alms-house and Palm Beach, there must be another million glasses consumed at an assortment of roadside stands, picnic grounds, back yards and baseball parks by ladies and gentlemen who wouldn't know what to do with a hunting hound if you gave it to them and, most certainly, would fall off the first Irish jumper they saddled and mounted.

For awhile there, the white-painted brick wall set was the top in elegance in beer advertising. You could hire a couple of models who looked as though they knew what a bathtub was for, put some Brooks Brothers threads on them, shove them in front of a white brick wall with a shell of beer in their hands and get a slick picture implying that well-to-do people love beer. But that is long past. Now you have to have a Rolls-Royce, a pack of happy Afghan dogs, some polished riding boots and the serene look of people with money in the bank in order to sell beer. I don't believe it. I bet you could sell beer if the ads showed a sweet-stained character in overalls sitting on the seat of a tractor while, off in the distance, his plow pulled the furrows, or if you had shown a happy citizen in the bleachers at a ball game.

What is the story?

PAUSE FOR REFLECTION

With JAMES C. INGEBRETSEN, President, Spiritual Mobilization

An apparatus that can measure distances smaller than one-trillionth of an inch — equivalent to the distance a boy grows in 1-30,000 of a second — was demonstrated in Boston recently at the Harvard Medical School.

Perhaps this instrument might be useful in measuring the distance we have traveled as a nation on the road back to fiscal sanity, sound foreign policy, and reduction of bureaucratic government, which both major parties have been promising for some time.

If we really have turned around and are now started in the right direction — the direction of freedom under God — when are we going to begin making some progress visible to the naked eye?

No Place To Go?

The Republican party hit an admitted new nadir in a recent issue of "Straight from the Shoulder," a monthly bulletin from the Republican National Committee in Washington.

A headline in the publication says this: "HE'S GOT A POINT THERE!" The headline is over a brief paragraph and apparently reflects the official thinking of the Republican party and approval of the paragraph which says:

"In a recent column, Fletcher Knebel observed that 'Republicans keep forgetting their best issue — the fact that the voter's only alternative is the Democrats.'"

We cannot quarrel with a portion of the observation by Knebel in that the difference between the leadership of the two parties is so similar in type and thinking that there is little to choose between them. But we will be stated and damned if we agree that the voter has only these two choices. The Republican voter can, and we know a number who have said they will, refuse to vote for the candidate of either party in the coming Presidential election unless there is a change in the Republican party. The same is true of a flock of Democrat voters who can no longer stomach the pinkies and left-wingers in that party. Any true libertarian realizes that he cannot stamp his approval on (for the sake of clarification) an Eisenhower-Stevenson ballot. Even though he might lose his vote he is better off for having refused to vote than to give support and aid to those who are determined to make some sort of a statist government out of America.

We hope that by the time the election gets here there will be a party to which those of us who are disgusted with both major parties can repair. There exists in the broad general grouping of Americans who fought for the Bricker amendment a solid core of voters who can make a loud protest against New Dealism regardless of the party cloak it wears at the moment. That such a splinter group could, now or in the near future, elect a President or provide the notion with a conservative Congress is not likely. However, the success of such a movement is not necessarily based upon whether a candidate is elected to office or not but upon whether the movement provides a springboard for action and a sounding board for expressing opposition to the New Dealers.

We know that in this area such a movement would receive considerable popular support, being in the main a conservative community. It could be that such a movement would find many supporters if presented to the voters.

The American Way

THE LAST THREE FEET

By DONALD BAKER

Shortly after World War II an industrial film was made with the rather curious title, The Last Three Feet. It dealt with the way goods flow to market through the channel of distribution — from maker to middleman to retailer to consumer. The idea for the title came from the fact that the average retail store counter is about three feet wide.

Perhaps this clever title should have one more word—The Vital Last Three Feet, because the final sales counter is the goal line of the whole economy. All the yards gained in serfdom behind it in the process of product designing, material assembling, production, financing, transportation, warehousing and all the other moves on the economic gridiron — are for naught if the goods don't move over the goal line to the final customer.

Thus it is that occasionally we witness a strange circumstance of which the business page call an inventory recession or an over-production slump. That means the game was temporarily stalled right on the goal line. In some other business page language, it means that the pipe lines of distribution are plugged up, and again the trouble is located at this vital last three feet. The customers aren't taking the goods away fast enough on their side of the counter. When this happens the production end of the economy, no matter how efficiently it is working, has to slow down.

One of the greatest miracles we have achieved with our unique free enterprise economy is to make it a virtual certainty (probably for the first time in history) that our goods and services pipe lines need never get empty because we can't produce enough. We have practically run out of problems when it comes to mass production. It is now a question of what else or what should we mass produce next? But this production miracle of ours would never have happened, nor could it continue if it were not for an even greater miracle—which is also a part of our free society and its economy—the miracle of the market place. That this is really the greater miracle, follows from the fact that while our production records stem from our economic production, it is our economic production that is the very fact of its freedom from control.

It is not that we have people in every language talking about the free market. That is not a new thing.

I don't see how Dulles can look so prosperous. Unless he's been profited by his mistakes. Jonathan York

Many Modern Appliances For Cooking Are Own Dishwashers And Dry Easily

By KAY SHERWOOD, NEA Staff Writer. A rapid increase in the number of small electrical kitchen appliances available has made it possible for the cook's work to be automatic...

Care of automatic coffee makers, cooker-fryer and new frying pans, as well as the more familiar waffle-sandwich grill, is simple enough if you remember one thing: You must never immerse the heating element in water.

This no-dunk rule frets some of us who think of washing utensils in terms of using a dishpan full of suds. At least, I have some trouble reconciling myself to washing a coffee pot on the kitchen counter.

If you have a spray-hose attachment on the sink, use it to spray water into the pot without risking wetting the element. A real advantage of these cooking appliances, however, is their ability to heat their own wash water if hot tap water is limited.

It's easier to keep a coffee pot clean if you wash it after each use. I find that permitting stale coffee to stand in the pot all day won't hurt the utensil, but it does tend to build up a residue that affects the flavor.

With automatic percolators, pay particular attention to heating well, and keep it free of coffee residue. It takes a periodic boiling with a solution of water and baking soda to sweeten any pot.

Chrome exterior finishes can be shined up with cleaning tissues after the spots are wiped off with a soapy cloth. Always leave the top of the coffee pot ajar when storing, to let air reach the interior. And don't hook up the appliance until you have put some water in the coffee pot.

Careful, thorough washing is particularly important with combination cookers-fryers when you are switching from deep frying to casserole cooking. After excess shortening has been drained off, swab the inside with paper toweling.

A friend of mine who uses her cookery-fryer a great deal tells me this is the way she washes hers: she pours water, hot or cold, in the cooker well and then adds detergent and three teaspoonful of powdered water conditioner.

She swabs the solution around thoroughly to dissolve the greasy residue. Then she rinses with clean water.

Remember to pack your hairbrush with the drying effects of too much sun and salt water, your hair really will need the brushing you should give it each day of your vacation.

A small complexion brush takes about as much space in your case as a face cloth, so take it instead. A body brush is essential, too, if you want to scrub away any accumulated pores you have accumulated while you were swimming.

The time to try out that new make-up shade is before you leave on the trip, not after you arrive. The same is true of the new clothes you take. Be sure that the fit is perfect and that you feel comfortable in them. This is the best way to avoid any feeling of self-consciousness.

RUTH MILLET

For women who haven't married, but haven't given up hope — a few words from a man who is in the marriage market himself. He writes: "Not long ago you had an article about how difficult it is for some women to marry."

"I am a man who has stayed single longer than he wanted to due to circumstances beyond his control. This is my opinion on the situation: "Real good looks are not too important in a woman. The beautiful woman gets the first notice and that is about all. Most important is a warm friendliness. Of course, an woman should realize the importance of being nicely dressed and neat."

"So many of these unmarried women are good company to other women or when they are in groups of married people. But as soon as a single man comes near he immediately feels a restraint that he's not wanted and so he doesn't hang around."

"If you are known woman who lost out with men for no other reason than they had a sharp tongue and actually scared the men away."

"Well, that's how it looks to a man with marriage on his mind. There are several points there for the woman who really wants to marry to keep in mind: "Don't get an inferiority complex because you aren't a beauty. Make the most of the looks you have — and then forget yourself."

"Be just as friendly and charming and interested when you are with an unmarried man as you are when you are with women or husbands and wives. Strive to put across that warm friendliness that puts a man at ease."

"And don't make the mistake of saying sharp, mean, critical things about others. Men run from a sharp tongue before marriage — as well as after marriage."

WEDDING GIFT Dear Grace: A girl from Massachusetts is visiting her fiancé's family here but she plans to return there for her wedding which will be solemnized in her home parish. It is advisable to mail the wedding gift to that state when she plans to return here immediately to make her home. It would just necessitate shipping all of her gifts back here again. Your advice would be welcome. D. E. F.

Dear D. E. F.: It is correct to send all wedding gifts to the bride and supposedly that means to send them to her at her home wherever it may be. However common sense would suggest that they be held here until she returns from her honeymoon as it would save her much bother in shipping them back. I think that it would be quite correct in this case to send the wedding gifts to the home of her fiancé's family. But they should be addressed to her. Undoubtedly the family will hold such gifts for the couple until they arrive here to make their home.

'In-A-Door' Beds Are Coming Back

Not too long ago, the in-a-door bed which dropped down from the bed massive, tilted doors was standard sleeping equipment for many apartment dwellers. Today, it's staging a comeback — but with a brand-new look.

Although homes being built today are generally smaller, it is still possible to have plenty of living area if every inch is utilized to best advantage. Rather than decide between having, say, a guest room OR a study, homemakers are discovering that they can have both — in the same room — simply by modernizing the principle of the in-a-door bed.

Installed under a bookcase or in some other inconspicuous place, a bed does not diminish floor space nor even give indication it is there. Folded down, it converts the study into a guest room in a matter of seconds. Since the installation is a relatively simple operation, labor costs should not run too high.

The weekend carpenter who prefers to install his own recessed bed may construct an enclosure for it, which can be used to store the family's out-of-season wear.

Should the room later be converted, cedar closets of course will meet the closet needs of a bedroom. An additional advantage is that cedar closets will help you make a quick sale if you ever wish to dispose of the home.

Den With Closets Easily Converted To Extra Bedroom

If your plans for a new home include a den, it's smart to anticipate the possibility that at some future time you may wish to utilize the area as a bedroom, builders say.

Such a conversion becomes much more satisfactory if the room is equipped with one or two cedar closets, which may be provided at little extra cost.

The fragrant aroma of cedar is just the thing to give the room an added air of distinction, while the natural beauty of the wood harmonizes perfectly with the masculine theme of a den.

From a utilitarian standpoint, the major advantage to gain from that cedar closets will help you make a quick sale if you ever wish to dispose of the home.

MANNERS MAKE FRIENDS

When a friend has her picture in the paper, receives some honor or is elected president of a club, there's your opportunity to please her by telephoning your congratulations.

It's as important to express your pleasure at a friend's success as to offer your sympathy in time of trouble.

MATURE PARENT SOCIAL CALENDAR

By MRS. MURIEL LAWRENCE. As the parent of two children, Brad's attractive young mother is performing many actions this morning. While she acts, however, her mind is elsewhere. As she feeds the baby, her mind is considering tomorrow's plan to get to a downtown stock sale.

As she hangs out the sheets, she worries at yesterday's failure to remind her husband that his insurance payment is due again.

As she scrapes the lunch carrots, she is recalling the look of her sister-in-law's expensive new permanent — a recollection that immediately arouses her memories of this relative's ability to flaunt advantages that she can't afford.

Brad interrupts his mother's mind. He rushes past her into the yard, leaving the screen door open. She calls, "Come back and close the door behind you!"

When he does not obey, she thinks with mounting irritation, "Honestly, that child is absolutely unmanageable!"

Actually, of course it is herself that Brad's mother cannot manage. That unmanageable mind of hers veers so constantly between what has already happened and what has not yet happened that she cannot attend to what is happening now.

As a result of her disinterest in the open screen door, Brad is bored by it, too. He ignores her request to shut it because he knows that her mind is not in the words she has spoken to him.

Children are fast at sensing preoccupation in us. Often what we define as "disobedience" or "defiance" in them is their disinterest in the commands we speak mechanically and with our minds on other things.

They place on what we say the exact value we place on what we say. If what we say is not important enough for us to keep our own minds on it, they feel entitled to forget it, too.

Next time we want Brad to shut the screen door behind him, try pin-pointing that booming, unremembered mind of ours to the moment's reality. Let's put down our knife and carrot. Let's walk to the door and call our small one.

When he comes, let's speak slowly and clearly. Let's say to Brad, "I asked you to close the screen door. Let's try once more. Go out again; only this time shut the door behind you."

Then let's wait by the door until this is done. It will be very foolish of us to repeat our request to Brad with irritation. That would mean we had missed the entire point of our problem. It is our own discipline that we are demonstrating.

We are not controlling Brad, but our own tendency to lose ourselves in the unreality of the past and the tomorrow.

How Good Can Blackberries Be?

Wild blackberry thickets once grew in profusion in our country. But the demand for these super-delicious berries led to cultivating them—and a bigger, juicier berry was the result. Delicious when fresh, they are simply wonderful when cooked. Heating changes the flavor and color of blackberries; most people love them in pies, puddings, homemade jellies and jams. Homemade blackberry jam and jelly are easy to make, using natural fruit pectin and the modern short-boil method. By adding pectin, boiling time is cut to one minute. Try this kitchen-tested recipe and see how good blackberries can be.

BLACKBERRY JELLY Yield: About 11 medium glasses 3 1/2 cups juice (about 2 1/2 lbs. blackberries) 1/4 cup strained lemon juice (2 lemons) 7 1/2 cups sugar 1 bottle liquid fruit pectin

First, prepare the juice. Wash thoroughly about 2 1/2 quarts fully ripe blackberries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure 3 1/2 cups juice into a very large soup-cup. Squeeze and strain the juice from 2 medium-sized lemons. Measure 1/4 cup juice prepared with blackberry juice.

Then, make the jelly. Add sugar to juice in soup-cup and mix well. Place over high heat and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. At once stir in liquid fruit pectin. Then bring to a fast rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute without stirring. Remove from heat, allow off steam with metal spoon and pour quickly into glasses. Cover jelly at once with waxed lid or cork.

Come As You Are To O & Z

Come as you are to enjoy home cooking served in good old family style.

That is the invitation of the O & Z Dining Room, 306 N. Cuyler, Telephone 4-8113.

Mrs. Zella Mae Prescott and Oma Shelton, owners and operators of the dining room, purchase and prepare the food themselves, and take particular care to be sure meals are tempting as well as tasty. Their objective is to have meals pleasing to the eye as well as to the palate.

The owners also have arranged the dining room itself for eye appeal. The clean, cool green of the walls is brightened by flower drapes over the windows.

Attractive, easy to clean plastic cloths are used on the 11 tables. O & Z has seating capacity for 66 at one time.

Home style meals served from 11:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m. includes the meat, two vegetables, potatoes, gravy, salad, hot rolls and dessert.

Meals are planned to be attractive both for those who like the "extra eye appeal," and for those who like the "extra hunger stopper."

Working men of the city especially are invited to try O & Z's big meals. "Some men have said they didn't think they would be 'at home' here," Mrs. Prescott said. "They are the ones we especially invite. We know they are hungry. We know our meals are good. We want the men to eat and enjoy themselves here."

Meals at O & Z are only $1. And that includes the featured fried chicken dinner served Saturdays. The fried chicken is the special "Sunday dinner served Saturdays" because we are closed Sundays, Mrs. Prescott said.

Oma Shelton came to Pampa in 1930, stayed a year, left for two years, returned in 1933 and has remained here since then.

Mrs. Prescott has lived in this area continuously since 1928.

Investigation Of Gas Prices Boggling Down

WASHINGTON, July 10 — UP — The Justice Department's investigation of "collusive" gasoline price increases, begun 13 months ago, has bogged down, it was learned Saturday.

Word from inside the department is that it can assign only a limited number of men to petroleum inquiries and most of them are tied up on specific court cases, among them the civil anti-trust suit against five major oil companies in New York.

This action also faces long delays. The accused companies—Standard Oil (N.J.), Socony-Vacuum, Gulf Oil, Standard of California, and Texas Company—are still submitting pertinent preliminary documents and many months may elapse before the department feels it is ready for trial.

'Apparent Collusion'
The gasoline price inquiry dates to the spring of 1953 when crude oil prices were jumped 25 cents or more a barrel in most producing areas. There followed swiftly what a congressional investigating committee called "apparent collusion" in price hikes at the filling station.

A department spokesman said "the end of the inquiry is no where in sight."

General counsel Paul E. Hadlick of the National Oil Marketers Association, who demanded the inquiry, said it appeared to be a "lost cause." He said he had heard nothing official from the department since he filed his collusion charge more than a year ago.

Assistant Attorney General Stanley Burnes, in charge of the anti-trust division, gave Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. a "preliminary report" on the inquiry last December. It was Burnes' intention then to push the investigation to an early conclusion.

Had Full Backing
In the cartel suit, the companies have until Sept. 15 to provide the department with documents necessary in pre-trial proceedings. On that date it will be up to the department to decide whether additional data is required.

The companies were originally charged with violation of the criminal anti-trust laws—that they had conspired to control the world oil market. The civil action was substituted after the Eisenhower administration took over.

The accused refused to sign a cease-and-desist consent decree on grounds it would be an admission of guilt in circumstances where they had full State Department backing for their overseas operations.

NEW SEATSELECTOR — Leymond Hall, owner of Hall & Pinson, located at 700 W. Foster, is shown demonstrating the new Arthur-Fulmer seatselector. The seatselector enables you to see just how your seat covers are going to look on the seats of your car. There are 221 different changeable patterns on the seatselector to give you a variety of selection. Stop and see the many different colors and styles you can get at Hall & Pinson, your seat cover headquarters. They have one of the largest displays and stocks of seat covers in Panhandle and can offer you any type and any price seat cover you need.

Find The Right Seat Covers Today At Hall & Pinson's

Seat Covers are more beautiful than ever.

And Hall & Pinson, 700 W. Foster, your seat cover headquarters, has the widest selection of covers in its history. See them, all the 1954 designs, in sizes to fit your own automobile.

Seat cover headquarters, to offer a greater serviceto motorists, has added many covers made for less popular cars. That is a new service for Hall & Pinson's growing group of patrons.

Of course in the special order department Hall & Pinson offers more than 100 different pattern combinations to please every style, and taste, and to provide all color combinations.

You always can find the right seat cover — in size, color and design — at Hall & Pinson, telephone 4-3521. And the right seat cover can add miles of extra wear as well as beauty to the interior of your automobile.

Hall & Pinson maintains the largest stock of seat covers in the entire Panhandle, and one of the largest stocks in the State of Texas.

When a motorist drives up we can show him a variety of styles, covers and designs of seat covers to fit his car, Leymond Hall, owner, said.

Hall & Pinson adds another feature to its seat cover business; a guaranteed fit. It takes skill and experience to fit seat covers correctly. Hall said, "We insist on a good fit. If the covers are not fitted properly, motorists do not get all the wear they are buying."

Hall & Pinson's giant stock of seat covers gives motorists a good selection from which to choose the right style, design and color for their type and model of automobile.

The seat cover business requires a large stock in order to offer motorists.

He explained the need for the large stock:

"We need various colors, designs and sizes to fit not only every car on the market, but need them to fit every model of every car. It wouldn't do to show a Chevrolet owner a set of seat covers made for a Ford. Or to show a sedan owner a set of covers made for a coupe. To give the owner of any car a good selection of seat covers, we must show him a variety of covers made for his make and model of car."

Hall & Pinson, he said, carries seat covers in a wide variety of color, design and price range.

"The need to carry a large stock of seat covers is one of the great differences between the seat cover business and other types," Hall pointed out. "A dealer can offer a variety of other stock, and still carry only a small stock."

"In tires, for example, we can give motorists just about any size and type of Kelly Springfield Tire. And we don't have a large number of tires in stock."

"The reason we can do that is this: a small number of tire sizes fits every make and model of automobile. We don't need a large number of tires to give every motorist a good selection."

"That holds true also for other auto accessories. We carry them. We stock a good selection of each item — and all of them fit every make and model of car.

"In seat covers, of course, we must — and we do — stock a selection for the various models of the makes of cars."

Hall works directly with his assistant, Walter Wooley, to fit every set of seat covers he sells.

"Here we do not feel the work is completed when someone picks out his seat covers. We fit them right before we let the covers leave our shop."

Hall & Pinson also provides all the features of a service station: lubrication, Mobil gasoline and oil, tire service, washing and polishing.

It is time for motorists to prepare their cars for vacation driving. Hall observed. Here we offer him conscientious work and top quality products. Every owner puts a great investment in his car, and is interested in keeping it in good shape — in top running order.

Other lines Hall & Pinson carries include Mercury outboard motors for boats, the Cris-Craft boat lift, the Bowman boats, marine paint, evaporative air coolers — sales and service, and Kelly Springfield automobile tires, fishing and hunting needs — rods, reels, lures, books, rifles, shotguns and ammunition.

Patrons of all Hall & Pinson lines know the firm's attitude:

"We treat each person who comes in here as a friend we want to please. We try to please him by being courteous, by doing the 'extras' busy people must let go, and by the excellence of the work we do," Hall said.

"I want to talk to my wife about this Indo-China business — anything that has to do with intervention she's a whiz at!"

No-Roach Protects Homes From Evil Insect Pests

Feed a roach and you court disaster. These evil insects breed disease and contamination in their own filthy way. They often thrive on things unseen by the naked eye.

which makes the problem of their annihilation even tougher. You may think your home a sparkling example of cleanliness, still — there's the roach. Until now, no holes were barred to this ugly crawling specter. But today, the roach has reached the point of no return — with the introduction of a new scientific liquid. This remarkable "deliverer from evil" is known as Johnson's No-Roach.

Just brush the colorless, odorless, liquid near cockroach sink, and baseboards. Applied to such spots, the coating attracts roaches within the room. They walk across the coating, contacting the chlordane, and within two or three hours become paralyzed and die. The coating remains effective for many months to kill any strays and thus prevent reinfestation.

To kill the waterbugs that crawl into your home from sewer pipes, brush No-Roach around the drain openings in your basement. To keep ants out, brush No-Roach across window sills and door sills. Ants will not cross this invisible barrier. Pour a few drops into ant hills to eliminate their nests.

It is important to remember that roaches and ants are found near food and cooking utensils, and that contaminating sprays should never be used in such areas. But No-Roach may be brushed just where you want it... you don't have to move your pots and pans away from the area.

Guard against crawling insects this modern No-Roach way. Eight ounces 80 cents; Pint 1.40; Quart 2.38.

Available at Furr Foods, Cheney's, Clyde's Perkins, and your local drug store.

Military Pay Hike Unsure

WASHINGTON, July 12 —UP— Chances appeared slim Saturday for a military pay raise this year although prospects were excellent for a five per cent increase for most civilian federal workers. Supporters of a similar pay hike for the armed services said only a strong plea from President Eisenhower could rush a military increase through before Congress quits. Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) of the House Armed Services committee, said in Missouri that such action was "extremely unlikely" this year, and that he has heard no word from the Pentagon. Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), a committee member who introduced a 10 per cent service-

Prime Problem For Next Year Is Foreign Economic Policy

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The Eisenhower administration has already begun to compile the list of things it will want to do next year. It is made up largely of the things that aren't going to get done this year. One of the first items on the list is a three-year extension of the trade agreements act. That was a "must" item on the Administration's program at the beginning of this session of Congress. But after the act was allowed to expire on June 12, the President had to accept a simple one-year renewal as the best he could get for now. There is some talk of having the House Ways and Means Committee hold hearings on foreign economic policy this fall — probably after the elections. If this could be arranged, it would allow the trade agreements program to be taken up as first order of business by the new Congress. But whether a lame-duck Congress would have any enthusiasm for this job is doubtful. And if the Democrats win control of Congress in November, anything done by the present Congress might have to be done all over again next year. Whenever they are held, the hearings on this international trade program will have to cover all the recommendations made by the Commission on Foreign Economic Policy under the chairmanship of Clarence E. Randall. Nearly all members of the cabinet will have to testify, as their departments all have an interest in trade policy. Scores of business leaders will also want to be heard. So this will be a lengthy, full-dress affair. Mr. Randall, who is staying on as White House adviser on foreign economic policy on a half-time basis, apparently felt there was not time to organize any such hearings this year. Also, his program got caught in the congressional log jam. The tax reform bill and new social security legislation took precedence. Reluctantly, Mr. Randall made the decision that a one-year renewal of the cabinet will have to testify, as their departments all have an interest in trade policy. That is what he recommended to the President.

There was a feeling that if the President had been allowed to go all out for the new foreign economic policy, it might have been defeated in an election year. That might have set the program back for another 20 years. Even the present one-year delay may work a considerable hardship on most of America's allies who want more trade with the United States in place of the aid, they have been getting. But it is now felt that with this delay, a better job can be done in the end. A closely related problem impressed on the Eisenhower administration is that there is no provision in government for coordination of foreign trade and economic policies. This isn't a new problem. It bothered both the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. Many departments of government have an interest in foreign trade. The only provision for coordinating all these activities, now is through the President. He doesn't have time for all the detail that tariff policy requires. He might delegate it. But any "assistant president" created to boss foreign economic policy would soon build a huge bureaucracy. In a short time it would be bossing all the other departments of government. The job given to Mr. Randall a year ago was that of a consultant on foreign economic policy. He has no staff, other than one secretary; he has no authority to give orders to any other departments of government, and he doesn't want it. But sooner or later, some way will have to be found to run this complex job. Where the need for centralized direction of this kind becomes apparent in handling matters like the Japanese trade problem — on which President Eisenhower, has been talking lately. Japan's prewar business with China and the British dominions has been cut off. Trade with the U.S. is roughly $200 million exports, $700 million imports. Japan gets no benefits of postwar tariff cuts. A brand new trade program must be negotiated with every country in the world. If the U.S. trade agreements act had not been renewed by Congress, Japan might go down the road to economic ruin and down the drain to communism. Somebody in government has to watch these things.

Auto Thrill Show Slated At Perryton

PERRYTON — Perryton Junior Chamber of Commerce members Saturday were making plans for the presentation of "Stunt Capades of 1954," an automobile thrill show featuring stunt drivers. Performance is slated for the night of July 20 at the county fairgrounds. Bill Ward, Vancouver, B.C., heads the troupe and Don Chadwick, Tacoma, Wash., will attempt the more dangerous stunts, including the dive-bomber crash in which a sedan hurtles from an improvised precipice into a row of parked cars.

Perryton Harvest Nearly Complete

PERRYTON — (Special) — Wheat harvest in the Perryton area is nearly through. There are only scattered fields yet to be harvested. Total harvest this year is estimated to be approximately 1,500,000 bushels of wheat. There were 281,000 acres seeded to wheat last fall and an estimated 35 per cent was lost because of drought, blowing, freezing, or was just plowed up because it was not good enough. The remaining 180,000 acres are estimated to have averaged around 8 bushels per acre. The test weight of the grain was quite good this year with practically all of it grading No. 1 or No. 2 wheat with many reports of wheat testing over 60 pounds.

Weed Killer Applications Being Taken

MIAMI — July 19 has been set as the deadline for making application for sodium chlorate to be applied to bindweed patches in Roberts County, according to County Agent Vic Joyner. The chlorate will be applied from August through October at a cost of 9.25 cents per pound, plus three cents for freight, Joyner said. The ASC will pay nine cents per pound, leaving the farmer's share at 3.25 cents, he added. Recommended rate of application is 800 pounds per acre. At this rate the cost to the farmer would be $28 per acre. Some farmers have completely eliminated bindweeds on their farms, while others who have them under control can eliminate them with further treatment, Joyner stated.

Miami Wheat Harvest Closing

MIAMI — Only a few wheat fields in Roberts County are yet to be harvested. County Agent Vic Joyner estimates the harvest is better than 90 per cent complete. The county average yield is estimated at six bushels per acre. All-cutting should be completed by Monday or Tuesday.
