Lorenza Valdez gets 10-year sentence

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

Jurors deliberated just 34 minutes Thursday to find a Pampa woman guilty of the September beating death of her one-year-old daughter. The jury refused to believe the testimony of Lorenza Valdez and found her guilty of involuntary manslaughter about 5 p.m. Thursday. The lesser manslaughter charge was included under the indictment charging the mother with murder. Court recessed until 9:30 a.m. today for the punishment phase of the trial.

The eight-woman, four-man jury needed 14 more minutes to sentence Valdez to a maximum 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

On Sept. 12, two hours before Lisa Marie Valdez was pronounced dead, Valdez's landlord showed up at her Pampa home and "borrowed" the infant for awhile, the convicted child killer testified earlier Thursday. Valdez told the jury she didn't tell police about loaning out her baby on the same day she died, because it had slipped her mind until she spent two or three days in jail.

But it was Valdez, not a baby-borrowing landlord, who jabbed and jabbed her crying child with a broom handle, who battered the child so badly the blows ruptured the infant's liver and spleen, bringing death by internal bleeding, the jury decided after a three-day trial.

The convicted woman, one of two witnesses called by the defense, said she was preparing lunch for her children Sept. 12, when "Mr. Julian Ontiveros came to my house."

"He asked if he could borrow Lisa Marie," Valdez said her landlord inquired.

"I said okay, because I didn't think he would hurt her," she claimed.

She said Ontiveros took the child to a nearby apartment and returned about 30 minutes later.

"When Julian brought Lisa back he told me she was asleep. I took his word for it. He laid her in the crib."

"I took his word she was asleep, so I didn't check on her," Valdez testified.

She said her landlord left. Valdez said she felt dizzy, took two aspirin, and lay down on the couch.

The next thing she knew, Valdez told the jury, Ontiveros returned and called an ambulance for the unconscious baby.

Asked by her court-appointed lawyer, Lee Waters, who she thought had injured the child, Valdez told the jury: "I think Julian, because I sure didn't abuse that baby."

When cross-examined about the story by prosecutor Joe Hendley, Valdez responded, "I wouldn't lie."

"Uh, huh," the prosecutor remarked. Presiding Judge Don Cain told jurors to disregard Hendley's "Uh, huh."

Instead of the story Valdez told Thursday, jurors believe the confession the defendant gave police the day she was arrested. In the confession, Valdez said she "spanked" the one-year-old at least twice, once with a broom handle and once with her fists.

"I told Lisa two or three times to be quiet, but she would not. I had to raise my voice to Lisa to tell her to be quiet. Finally, I picked up my broom and hit Lisa in the upper part of the stomach with the stick part of the broom. When I hit her, I lost my temper. I don't know how many times I hit her."

"Lisa started crying again. I told her three or four times to be quiet and she wouldn't. I picked her up and put her in the crib. She wouldn't stop crying. She kept on crying and I hit her in the chest with my fist. I just lost my temper and kept on hitting her with my fist, more than several times I know," Valdez's confession says in part.

During her testimony Thursday, Valdez said that in thirteen months of life, her battered baby only learned to say one word — "Mamma"

Ontiveros testified Wednesday that he and his son went to the Valdez home to put in a water cooler about 1 p.m. Sept. 12. He said he went inside, saw the infant "foaming at the mouth," told his son to call an ambulance, and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation on the unconscious child.

Outside the courtroom Thursday, the defendant's former landlord said he is shocked about Valdez's effort to finger him for the child beating. Ontiveros said he felt pity for Mrs. Valdez and her children.

During final arguments Thursday, Waters told jurors the state had no case against the defendant without her confession. Further, jurors were

Marine moves fast over exposed ground

Two U.S. Marines wounded

Israeli gunboats shell PLO base

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militiamen fired on the Marine base at Beirut airport today, wounding two U.S. servicemen, and Israeli gunboats and helicopter gunships attacked a PLO base near Tripoli.

A PLO spokesman said the Israeli shelling killed one person and wounded three and that the Israelis set up a naval blockade to prevent Yasser Arafat and his loyalists from evacuating Tripoli. Israel denied it set up a blockade.

The Marine contingent at the airport retaliated with small arms, 40mm grenades, and anti-tank Dragon missiles and "the firing ceased. There were no other casualties or damage," Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said.

Beirut radio stations said the counterattack devastated the Shiite position, the second wiped out in two days by the Marines.

Brooks said one Marine was slightly wounded and one Navy Seabee suffered minor wounds when two rocket-propelled grenades and smallarms fire struck near the northeastern perimeter of the base shortly before 8 a.m. (1 a.m. EST).

Brooks said the Marine was in a bunker and the Seabee was driving a bulldozer when the base came under fire.

The wounded Marine was evacuated by helicopter to the amphibious assault ship Guam. The Seabee suffered a broken eardrum when a rocket propelled grenade blast hurled him off the tractor. He was treated at the airport, Brooks said.

The PLO base shelled by Israeli gunboats contained tents, buildings and vehicles. Israel's military command announced it said the bombardment scored "accurate hits" on the fortification which it said was a half-mile north of Tripoli, where Arafat is trapped.

The Israeli attack came three days after a bomb exploded on a Jerusalem bus, killing four Israelis and wounding 46. Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility for the blast.

But a government official in Jerusalem, speaking to reporters on condition he not be identified, said the Israeli attack today "shouldn't be considered an eye-for-an-eye action" and "should not be viewed as an effort to prevent Arafat from leaving Tripoli."

The Israeli official said the gunboat assault on the Tripoli base was "in line with our long-standing policy of hitting terrorist targets from which terrorists are sent out on actions or where terrorist actions are planned."

The official reiterated Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's condemnation of the United Nations' decision to allow the use of its flag on Greek ships heading for Tripoli to evacuate Arafat and his loyalists from the siege mounted by Syrian-backed rebels in the PLO.

Fatah spokesman Ahmed Abdul-Rahman charged that Israeli ships set up a naval blockade after the attack to halt the evacuation of Arafat and 4,000 loyalists from Tripoli, his last stronghold in the Middle East. The loyalist fighters have been under siege for more than a month by Syrian-backed PLO rebels seeking Arafat's ouster.

Lebanon's state radio described the attack as designed to prevent the departure of Arafat's forces, who have been negotiating to leave the area aboard Greek ships flying the United Nations flag.

Abdul-Rahman said Arafat sent an urgent message to the U.N. Security Council to intervene and lift the Israeli blockade. He said Arafat also sent messages to France and Greece seeking a reaffirmation of their commitment to help carry out the evacuation.

Abdul-Rahman said France had agreed to provide a naval escort for four Greek ships that will take Arafat and his fighters to Tunisia and North Yemen, probably next week.

The bus bombing Tuesday in Jerusalem killed four people and wounded 46 in the bloodiest terror attack in the city in more than five years.

News analysis

Administration plans no new arms offers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is ruling out new proposals to get the Soviet Union to resume negotiations to curb nuclear arms.

And if the Soviets try to merge the interrupted talks on strategic weapons with stalled discussions of Euro-missiles, the United States is likely to turn the move down.

U.S. arms control director Kenneth Adelman made these points Thursday while President Reagan avoided accusing the Soviets of a walkout.

Reagan's remarks could make it easier for them to return to the bargaining table in Geneva, Switzerland, after New Year's.

Adelman took the same conciliatory approach. "It is not a walkout in the sense the talks are called off," he said at a news conference. "It is a situation where the Soviets have just not set a resumption date."

The United States had proposed resuming in February, after an eight week recess. But Adelman said the Soviets gave notice that they wanted to revise their position in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) to cover intermediate range nuclear missiles.

The weapons were being discussed separately when the Soviets called a suspension two weeks ago. They were protesting the deployment of U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in West Germany and Britain.

In effect, the Soviets apparently are trying to merge the two sets of deadlocked negotiations. That would mean discussing the U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles and Soviet SS-20 missiles along with global weapons on both sides.

Said Adelman: "The fact is, I think it's safe to say combining the talks would complicate each of the problems, the intermediate problems and the strategic problems."

He also questioned that the Soviets were concerned about the Pershing 2 and cruise missiles. Some 572 are to be deployed in Western Europe and targeted on Soviet territory by 1988 if there is no agreement.

In the four years since the North Atlantic Treaty Organization approved the U.S. missiles, the Soviets could have stopped them by dismantling the SS-20 aimed at Western Europe and Asia.

"That opportunity is still open to them," Adelman said.

At the same time, he dismissed any idea of luring the Soviets back with a new U.S. proposal.

"The fact is that if the Soviet Union is not willing to negotiate with us in an INF (Intermediate Nuclear Force) or a START forum there is little that we can do besides show our seriousness and show our interest in making progress in arms control," he said.

Reagan said he did not interpret the Soviet action as a walkout. "They simply said that they were not prepared at this time to set a date for resumption of meetings," he told reporters here Thursday.

As he has often in the past, Reagan indicated he would be willing to hold a summit with Yuri Andropov, the Soviet leader. "There's been no indication from them of any desire for such a meeting," he said.

Quadriplegic fights court for right to die

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Bouvia's futile attempts to have a child and the state's refusal to pay for experimental treatment that might have eased her paralysis were setbacks that made the cerebral palsy victim want to die, her estranged husband says.

"She said, 'Why is this happening? What can I do to change it?'" Richard Bouvia testified. "A lot of times she cried herself to sleep."

Bouvia, who married the 26-year-old quadriplegic after his release from prison in 1982, offered intimate glimpses of the failed marriage Thursday, the fourth day of a courtroom drama which has pitted one woman's desire to die against the determination by the medical profession and the county to keep her alive.

Ms. Bouvia says death is preferable to her painful, hopeless, dependent plight in life. She wants Riverside General Hospital to let her die there without forcing her to eat, but supplying her with pain killers and personal hygiene.

Dr. Donald E. Fisher, the hospital's chief of psychiatry, says he will force-feed her no matter what the courts decide because he believes she is attempting to commit suicide with professional help, which is illegal.

Ms. Bouvia's husband, 36, said they were married Aug. 25, 1982 and one of his wife's strongest desires was to have a baby — "this was one of her most important things in life."

He said she became depressed when, several months after their marriage, she still was not pregnant.

Bouvia said doctors found his sperm count was too low.

He also said Ms. Bouvia dropped out of college when she was told her handicap would get in the way of her studies.

Ms. Bouvia had testified earlier that depression and recent circumstances of her life had little to do with her decision to die.

Superior Court Judge John H. Hews could decide the matter today.

The case, raising novel legal issues and placing the American Civil Liberties Union in the position of advocating a person's right to die, has brought other cerebral palsy victims and right-to-life advocates to the small courtroom 55 miles east of Los Angeles.

Hews must decide whether to issue a preliminary injunction sought by Ms. Bouvia to prevent the hospital from force-feeding her and giving her medication against her will.

Columbia crew leaves shuttle after landing

Computer failure remains a mystery

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Scientists inspected Columbia and its astronauts today for signs of wear from a record 10-day flight, but it may be weeks before officials know why a computer and a navigation device failed and forced an 8-hour landing delay.

With the $1 billion European Spacelab in its cargo bay, Columbia ended its flight of more than 4 million miles in a dusty touchdown at 3:47 p.m. Pacific time Thursday, less than an hour before sunset.

The ninth space shuttle mission was hailed as a success for the reams of scientific data accumulated during the voyage. Fourteen countries contributed to 73 experiments conducted round-the-clock in an unprecedented amount of scientific activity.

"We have many scientific firsts that came out of this mission," said NASA administrator Gen. James Abrahamson, flanked by shuttle Commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw at a post-landing news conference.

"We also have one that has been proven time and time again, and that's that the level of uncertainty in the universe is a constant," Abrahamson said.

The four mission specialists — Owen Garriot, Robert Parker, Byron Lichtenberg and West German scientist Ulf Merbold — were hurried off for a week of 12-hour-a-day experiments on how the body reacts to weightlessness and the return to gravity. The tests will duplicate those done during the flight. Columbia, which has now made six trips into space, was towed to a scaffold-like device which will hoist it onto a Boeing 747 jetliner for its return to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida planned for Monday.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists examined its exterior for damage. However, inspection of the failed computer — there were four backups on board — and a broken navigational guidance device will await Columbia's arrival in Florida.

The six astronauts — the biggest crew on any space flight — were not endangered by the delay from the scheduled 7:59 a.m. PST landing as NASA officials said. The flight had already been extended by one day to give the astronauts time for more experiments and some sightseeing.

But Young, praising Shaw's handling of the situation, joked that when the computers failed, "I turned to jelly."

"There was a problem and I do want to minimize that, but ... we were not on the edge of some huge problem," Abrahamson said. Mission Control ordered the de-ice after a powerful jolt shuddered through the craft, followed by the failure of computers and the navigational device called an Inertial Measuring Unit (IMU). One computer was quickly brought back up. Columbia had backup IMUs and only one was needed for landing.

minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported no minor accidents during the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Valdez convicted

Instructed not to consider the bruises and internal injuries displayed in the autopsy photos could have been caused during efforts to revive the dead infant.
 In her testimony, Valdez tried to convince the jury that she only confessed because Pampa police threatened her. She said police forced her to confess.
 "If you don't give me a statement, you're not getting out of here," Valdez said a detective warned.
 "He said if I didn't tell the truth, he would lock me up and throw the key away. I was depressed, upset and emotional. I guess, I didn't have no other choice," she claimed.
 "Is what you told him that day the truth?" Waters asked about the confession.
 "No, it's not," Valdez replied.
 In telling the story of her child's death, Valdez was collected and never wept or wavered on the witness stand, even when autopsy photos showing her child's opened chest and abdomen were played in the courtroom.

The defense tried to show that the bruises and internal injuries displayed in the autopsy photos could have been caused during efforts to revive the dead infant.
 Before Valdez took the stand, pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann testified the dead baby had numerous bruises on the abdomen and corresponding injuries to the underlying internal organs. Erdmann said the fatal injuries were consistent with the damage that would be inflicted by the hammering blows of a broom handle.
 Waters asked the pathologist whether it is possible that the injuries he discovered could have been caused during CPR efforts made to revive the infant. Erdmann, jabbing the air with his hand, responded that it wasn't possible, unless the CPR was done "with the end of a broom handle."
 The jury did accept the defense position that Valdez, 31, is not guilty of the murder charge, because they agree she didn't "intentionally and knowingly" kill the child. Jurors opted for the involuntary manslaughter conviction, which means the defendant's reckless conduct caused the death.

 What was the motive for the killing, Waters wondered during final arguments.
 Holding up the statement, Hendley rebutted, "It says right here, the baby was crying. There's your motive."
 "She's not crying now. She's screaming to you from the grave!" the prosecutor told jurors.
 Jury selection in the trial began Tuesday morning.
 Valdez has remained in custody under a $50,000 bond since her arrest several hours after the child died. The expectant mother, who is seven or eight months pregnant, has three other young children who remain in the custody of the state welfare department.

BACK HOME—Former Argentine president Isabel Peron arrives back in her homeland after more than two years in self-exile in Spain. She came back to attend the inauguration of President-elect Raul Alfonsin.

Former president of Argentina home after two years in exile

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Former President Isabel Peron returned home today after two years in exile to attend the inauguration of Argentina's first civilian president since she was ousted by a military coup in 1976.
 Raul Alfonsin will be sworn in Saturday for a six-year term as president. Mrs. Peron was invited by Alfonsin to attend the ceremony and sources said she is scheduled to meet privately with the new president before leaving Monday.
 Mrs. Peron, 56, is titular head of the populist, labor-based Peronist party that had not lost an election since 1946 until Alfonsin was elected in October. The party was founded by her late husband, three-time president Gen. Juan D. Peron.

 Mrs. Peron arrived at 6:50 a.m. aboard an Argentina Airlines flight from Madrid, Spain, and was met by Antonio Troccoli, who will be Alfonsin's interior minister and a 15-member Peronist welcoming committee and nearly 300 reporters.
 She waved to well-wishers as she was escorted to an airport lounge and then read a statement to reporters and a handful of Peronists who chanted

"Isabel, Isabel!" and "Viva Peron!"
 She said she was returning to the nation "with neither complaints nor insults" and planned to "help consolidate the Peronist party," which was left in disarray after its loss to Alfonsin's center-left Radical Civic Union.
 Mrs. Peron has been living in self-exile in Madrid since leaving her homeland on July 9, 1981, after more than five years of house arrest on corruption charges. A March 24, 1976, coup ended her 20-month presidency that was characterized by leftist terrorist violence and inflation.

Over arms sale

U.S. draws criticism of Britain

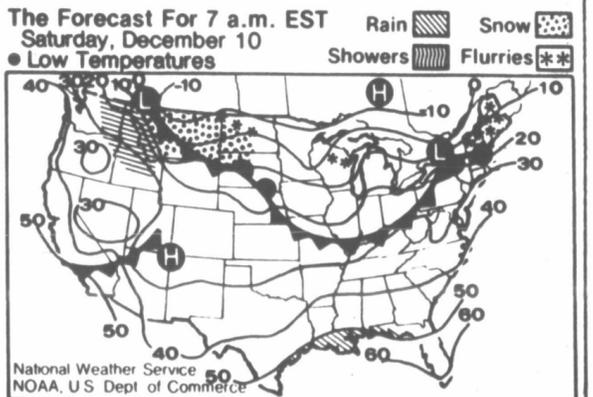

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher bitterly criticized U.S. economic policies within hours of a U.S. decision to lift the ban on arms sales to Argentina, Britain's enemy in the Falklands war.
 As a result, British newspapers reported today "major friction" in U.S.-British relations. One analyst concluded that the Atlantic alliance's staunchest allies are undergoing their "most serious rift in 3 1/2 years."
 The Daily Mirror, which supports Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government, said Reagan had delivered "a bitter snub" to the prime minister. Relations between the two governments, it said, were at "rock bottom."
 "Reagan Sells Out Thatcher," the Daily Mirror, which supports Britain's opposition Labor Party, headlined its report.
 The Financial Times, Britain's main business daily, said Mrs. Thatcher's government, which fought a 74-day war in the South Atlantic last year to regain possession of the Falkland Islands, was "seriously upset" over the U.S. decision. The conservative Sun reported "major friction" between London and Washington.

 The United States backed Britain in its South Atlantic war.
 U.S. State Department spokesman Alan Romberg announced Thursday that Argentina's improved human rights performance and its imminent return to democratic government merited a lifting of the arms sale ban, imposed by former President Carter in 1977.
 A few hours after Romberg's statement — and shortly before meeting here with U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan — Mrs. Thatcher delivered a scathing attack on Regan's economic policies. She told the House of Commons that large U.S. budget deficits were hurting Europe and would in time damage the United States as well.
 Legislators said they were shocked by the prime minister's vehemence and disdain. Her meeting with Regan was believed to be stormy.

Newspapers and legislators were quick to recall Mrs. Thatcher's words in an interview with the Daily Mail last month.
 "The United States lifting the embargo (against Argentina) would be the single most difficult thing for me," she said. "It is the one thing I am very worried about ... very, very concerned indeed."
 The rift between the two leaders first surfaced when Reagan, ignoring warnings from Mrs. Thatcher, ordered the invasion of Grenada last October by U.S. troops. Grenada is a former British colony and its governor-general is a representative of the queen.
 Another point of friction is the reported American failure to keep Britain informed about its intentions in Lebanon. Mrs. Thatcher on Wednesday ruled out demands for Britain to withdraw its 110-man contingent from the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut but indicated she thought there was a need for closer consultation with the Reagan administration.

White is convicted in kidnapping-burial

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Ronald Floyd White has been found guilty of aggravated kidnapping in the abduction of a Santa Fe man who was buried alive for four days.

White faces a sentence of from five years to life in prison. Jurors, who returned the verdict after deliberating for an hour and 15 minutes Thursday, were scheduled to continue hearing testimony in the punishment phase of his trial today.

White was accused of masterminding a scheme to hold his former employer's son, Michael Baucom, 22, of Santa Fe, for $75,000 ransom in late September 1982.

Baucom testified he was buried in a makeshift coffin for four days in an oilfield near Conroe, north of Houston.

After the verdict was returned, White's wife, Phyllis, said her husband was "awfully, awfully sick and I don't see how anyone could not see that."

"He's sick and there's so much that people don't know. He's suffering so much," said White's mother, Wilmoth White.

Baucom's father Bennie, asked if he thought White needed psychiatric care, said, "No, he needs hard labor."

The younger Baucom said the verdict did not surprise him.

"It was pretty well apparent," he said. He called defense attorneys' contention that he was involved in the extortion attempt "just a move by the defense to make a better case for his client."

"I'll never be able to put it aside," said Baucom's mother, Glendell. "It will be with me forever." She said she hoped White "never goes out on the street again."

In his final remarks to the jury, prosecutor Jim James said the 38-year-old Conroe man bought the car used in the abduction under his stepson's name five months before Baucom was taken from his home.

"This is a planned crime. It takes planning and cunning," James said.

Defense attorney Elmo Schwab told jurors he suspected Baucom at first was a participant in the scheme and became a captive well after his disappearance Sept. 21, 1982.

Schwab suggested that after something went wrong with a scheme to extort money from Bennie Baucom, the younger Baucom was buried by his co-conspirators.

When he emerged, Schwab said Baucom "blamed the most likely scapegoat, Ronald Floyd White."

Schwab also told jurors that White's blood pressure had increased progressively, eventually rising as high as 296 over 206, and was symptomatic of the disease encephalopathy, which is characterized by delirium.

But James reminded the jury that doctors had testified, the disease would prove so debilitating that someone who suffered from it would be incapable of performing daily tasks.

If White was insane, James asked the panel, "Why did he head to Mexico? Why did he drive 100 mph trying to elude officers?"

Baucom testified he was abducted at gunpoint from his mobile home and driven in his own pickup truck to a Montgomery County oilfield, where he was buried in a wooden crate.

Baucom said he was forced to make tape recordings telling his father that he had lost $75,000 in a drug deal and needed the money or he would be killed.

He said he was able to peek beneath duct tape covering his eyes and catch a glimpse of his alleged abductor by faking a shoulder cramp. He said he was "positive" that White was the man.

Baucom was rescued from the grave by two deputies.

State prison payments questioned

DALLAS (AP) — A preliminary audit indicates that prison officials may have overpaid an architect by as much as $350,000 by allowing him to claim some costs not authorized in his contract, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The architect, Lawrence D. White of Fort Worth, says that his fees are valid and that the audit did not take into account an unwritten amendment to his contract approved by the Texas Department of Corrections staff.

But prison system officials say that the audit has found several instances of "mismanagement" and that unresolved questions about the fee point to a need to establish stricter accounting procedures in the department.

The preliminary audit of prison architectural contracts did not refer to the architect by name, but White confirmed Thursday that it concerned about $1.5 million in fees he claimed for designing an addition to the department's Ferguson Unit.

White acknowledged that his fees did not appear to be authorized by his written contract, but he said he had a valid, verbal agreement with Eugene N. Shepard, former head of the department's construction division for the contract change. Shepard could not be reached for comment.

The Ferguson project, which White was hired to design in 1980, has been the subject of a special state audit and an attorney general's investigation since last March, when Board of Corrections member Harry Whittington questioned why the project, which had been expected to cost $4 million, was later estimated at $21 million.

The preliminary audit prompted the prison board last month to order a full-scale audit of the architectural contracts in nine major construction projects in the prison system, the Times Herald said.

State Rep. Ray Keller, R-Duncanville, chairman of the House Law Enforcement Committee which oversees the prison system's budget, said the audit's findings indicate "total incompetence" in the department's construction division.

"This is the best example of a series of things that raises the question of who's minding the store," he said. "Aggressive steps have to be taken to get that money returned."

White's contract included a paragraph stating that it could be amended only in writing, but prison board Chairman Robert Gunn said he was not surprised by White's claim that the contract had been changed by an oral agreement.

"We assumed he would say that," Gunn said.

Sulphur dioxide cloud dissipates

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A cloud of sulfur dioxide released over this Southeast Texas city dissipated without causing serious problems, officials say.

The leak was blamed on a ruptured pipe at the Olin Corp. Chemicals Group. Bill Munson, plant manager at Olin Chemical, said an expansion joint on a circulating line to a storage tank ruptured early Thursday, releasing an undetermined amount of sulfur dioxide into the air.

"It will make you cry and cough and sneeze, but it won't kill you," Munson said. "This is the first time we've had a leak like this in two or three years."

The sulfur dioxide had dissipated within four hours, he said.

Munson said cleanup operations were going on throughout the day. The leak was covered with soda ash to neutralize the sulfuric acid, he said.

At least one person, Leon McGraw, a biology professor at Lamar University, said he was working when he noticed the acid odor.

"I got a good whiff of it, and I must have been coughing for 20 or 25 minutes," McGraw said. "I went outside and I saw this foggy cloud moving across the campus. I was coughing for so long that I got mad and called the campus police."

The cloud created no disturbances to students or classes at Lamar on Thursday. Students at the dormitory closest to the chemical company said they were not aware of any strange odors or irritation.

Second nursing home in Lubbock closed

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — For the second time in a little more than a week, the state has obtained a court order to close down an unlicensed nursing home in the Lubbock area.

State District Judge William R. Shaver signed a temporary order Thursday closing the Inez Retirement Center, located near Shallowater and Reese Air Force Base, the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported.

The order was sought by the state attorney general's office.

On Nov. 30, the state obtained a temporary order closing a nursing home operated by Goldie Wilson in Lubbock. A hearing on an injunction to keep that home closed until the case goes to trial or is otherwise disposed of was scheduled for today.

A similar hearing on the Shallowater home was set for Dec. 16.

Euna V. Wright, a nurse surveyor for the Texas Department of Health in Lubbock, testified Thursday that the Shallowater facility was in violation of state law requiring licenses for homes which care for more than four people unrelated to the owner.

"Without a license, she said, a home "can only provide food, shelter and laundry."

Sixteen people were housed at the facility, Ms. Wright said. In a court affidavit, Ms. Wright cited a five-inch bed sore on one of the patients as an example of "inadequate care" at the facility.

She also said several patients were catheterized, which requires a licensed nurse, and said a fire hazard was created by oily rags near a hot water heater.

Developers pressed for political contributions

DALLAS (AP) — Some investors recruited by promoters of several large condominium projects in suburban Dallas say they were pressured to make $1,000 contributions to specific political candidates, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

According to campaign finance reports, those investors, along with the developers, financiers and their families, contributed at least $90,000 to Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and at least $65,000 for their statewide races last year.

Those contributors were among at least 150 individuals who personally guaranteed more than $500 million in loans to develop condominium projects concentrated around Lake Ray Hubbard, northeast of Dallas, the News said in a copyright story.

The financing of those projects is under investigation by the FBI, the Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

A press aide to White said the governor, who attended a December 1982 fund-raising breakfast at the invitation of developer Danny Faulkner, believed that the contributors who attended the gathering were "just local community people." White said he was unaware of any pressure on his behalf.

Mattox was attending a conference of the National Association of Attorneys General in Hawaii and could not be reached for comment Thursday, but his press aide, Elna Christopher, said Mattox "didn't know anything about pressure at all."

The contributions were solicited by Faulkner and developer Clifford R. Sinclair, the investors told the News.

Faulkner could not be reached for comment. Sinclair, president of Kitco Developers Inc. of Mesquite, Texas, has been subpoenaed to provide records and testimony in the state's investigation of the financial condition of savings associations that funded the projects.

Attorneys for Sinclair declined comment.

An investigation by the News found that Sinclair and Kitco provided condominium investment packages — including land, financing, construction and marketing — for pre-arranged groups of investors. The investors, most of whom did not invest any of their own money, personally guaranteed loans for the condominium projects. The investors in turn received $21,000 to $43,000.

Investors interviewed by the News said the amount of contribution and the candidates were specified at the breakfasts without explanation.

Several investors said they felt "undue pressure" to donate to candidates they would otherwise not support, and that the presence of officeholders at the gatherings lent a sense of legitimacy to the condominium projects.

Other investors said there was no more pressure than normal at such fund-raisers and others said they contributed because of the "bandwagon atmosphere" or group pressure.

"I objected (to contributing), as did others," said one investor, who contributed $1,000 to Mattox and White. "As I recollect, it was implied to anybody that did object that perhaps there would not be any more investment opportunities."

White also noted a $10,000 from Spencer H. Blain Jr., chairman of the board of Empire Savings and Loan in Mesquite, and Paul Arlin Jensen, a Utah man whose dealings with savings associations in Lancaster and Belton, Texas, are under scrutiny by state and federal investigators.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'High Frontier' no final answer

The development of a system of defense against ballistic missiles is a goal which should be actively pursued.

Such a system, nicknamed "High Frontier" and "Star Wars," has been presented by President Reagan as a defensive measure that would go far to protect the American people from the horrors of nuclear war. But some cautions are in order:

There is no assurance that a workable system could be developed, although the technology for various pieces of the system are already available. After all, the Pentagon spent nearly $6 billion on an earlier anti-ballistic missile defense system, called Safeguard, which was actually emplaced in North Dakota but was never put into operation, because in 1975 it was decided it would never work.

If a workable system can be developed, it will be decades before it can be operational.

We may devise an effective system of defense against land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles launched from the Soviet Union against our land-based intercontinental ballistic missile launch silos. But such an ABM system might not be effective to protect our cities. It might not stop submarine-based ballistic missiles launched from the ocean or short-range, low trajectory ballistic missile launched from Siberia. It might not stop low-flying cruise missiles or bombers. Thus it would not put an end to the nuclear threat.

The development of such a system would be seen by the Soviet Union as a threat and a challenge. The Russians could not afford to be without a nuclear shield if we had one.

An ABM system based on satellites or "battle stars" would introduce a galaxy of new weapons into space. It would greatly accelerate the militarization of our national space effort, which is already well under way. And an arms race with the Russians in space would be on. High Frontier is, therefore, not an alternative to the nuclear arms race. It would be an escalation on the nuclear arms race.

At this point, some readers will be asking, "Can't we put a freeze on the High Frontier?"

Not likely in the near term. It would be impossible to verify whether research on the system is being conducted in secret. On the other hand, testing being conducted in secret. On the other hand, testing of major components could probably be detected and prevented, if such testing were prohibited by a freeze agreement. A freeze may eventually become possible on the High Frontier.

Our country should devote a reasonable segment of our defense budget to long-term research and development on High Frontier. Meanwhile, we should be ready and willing to negotiate with the Russians on a verifiable freeze agreement prohibiting the deployment of such defensive systems in space.

If we don't get the agreement, and if the system becomes workable in 20 or 30 years, we should be prepared for deployment.

And, if a "star wars" defense system protecting this country from nuclear attack can be developed, what harm would there be in sharing the technology with the Soviets? That way both countries could be protected, and arms escalation might be stopped.

Standing on 'slippery slope'

Carl Rowan would commit hara-kiri before admitting a conservative thought inside the formidable fortress of his mind. Thus when he decries "Big Brother" government, you know the topic at hand is complex.

Rowan writes in behalf of Dan and Linda S. of Long Island, N.Y., whose newborn daughter, known by now to millions as Baby Jane Doe, has spina bifida (an opening in the spinal column) and excess fluid on the brain.

Her parents - whose agony cannot be measured by anyone not similarly situated - have convinced themselves that no meaningful, or even very long, life is possible for her. The U.S. Health and Human Services Department disagrees strongly. It insists that corrective surgery be performed. To the parents - and to Rowan, among other sympathetic commentators - this is unconscionably government meddling in the rights of private people.

But that's not exactly so. It's government "meddling" all right - the best conceivable kind, proceeding from recognition that government's fundamental, bedrock duty is to protect the lives of its citizens. It is the kind of "meddling" of which this republic needs more, not less.

Events move fast, in this, the twilight years of the 20th century. How strange to think that until about a decade ago government protection of life was widely seen as an absolute duty. This was before the U.S. Supreme Court terminated the anti-abortion laws, making ad hoc moralists of a whole generation.

When the "sovereign" states lost the right to affirm the goodness of life in the womb, matters of life and death moved for the first time from the moral realm to the free marketplace, formerly the sole habitat of economic and intellectual questions.

The Supreme Court invited mothers to make up their own minds. Was a particular unborn baby's life worthwhile - or was it burdensome? For that matter, was the life in question merely inconvenient? However the mother decided, the Constitution would back her up. Such a "private" matter was beneath a democratic government's notice.

And so on into the '80s, when it became plain that unborn life was not the only species of life raising problems for the ad hoc moralists and their society. Soon, "defective" life raised similar problems. If the law no longer unambiguously viewed life as good, further feats of discernment became necessary. For instance, if unwanted babies were burdensome, how much more so were the kind needing costly medical treatment - and then perhaps only to save their lives in the short-run.

Maybe it was better on the whole to let life wither away, as in another Baby Doe case last year, where the parents, supported by the courts, decided to withhold treatment from a Downs Syndrome baby, who obligingly died within a week.

Such cases are painful and pitiful. Who would wish for himself such a decision as Baby Jane Doe's parents have faced? But how can such a decision be rightly theirs, even as parents? Where does it say in the Constitution that parents are the proprietors of their children's lives? If parents ARE the proprietors, we must repeal a lot of laws including those that prohibit infanticide and child abuse.

Wait; it is objected that there is a vast difference between child abuse (presumably vicious), and the decision to let a spina bifida child die (presumably compassionate). So might we once have supposed a vast difference between the "termination" of life inside the womb and of life outside it. The differences have been badly eroded in ten years' time - that span since the Supreme Court thrust a particular kind of life outside the palisade of government protection.

What next? For we stand, do we not, on what is sometimes called "the slippery slope." We have slid from absolute protection of life to protection merely of life outside the womb. From that, we show signs of slipping toward protection only of "meaningful" life outside the womb - whatever "only of meaningful" means.

All along, the right-to-life movement has warned that abortion leads ineluctably to mercy-killing, not only of the young but of the old. I would not treat this argument as overwrought or frivolous.

And where, while all this goes on, is the government? Laissez-faire economics is one thing; laissez-faire morality is another and indefinitely more dangerous. Once the government resigns to private interests the right to judge which lives are worthwhile and which are not - well, the door is wide open. Nor can you ever tell what rough beast will walk through.

Listening to strange voices

One of my recent columns dealt with subliminal voices. This one deals with liminal ones. We are now entering the age of recorded messages. I didn't realize how pervasive it was until I had to fly to Atlanta the other day. After I deplaned I took a long walk and then a long escalator into the bowels of the earth, and waited for a two-car train to take me several stops to another long escalator which would bring me back up to the crust to claim my baggage.

The train pulled in and a voice said, "This is the B station. Please enter and go to the center of the train."

This was a reasonable request, but as I followed the mob trying to board, my carry-on bag got caught and I held the door so I wouldn't be dragged along the train. The voice said, and I swear I am not making this up, "Someone is holding the door and preventing the rest of you from moving."

"I can't help it," I shouted. "My strap is caught."

The voice sounded angrier. "Someone is holding the door. The train cannot start."

I finally broke the strap and squeezed on the train. Everyone was staring at me. I tried to smile. "It wasn't my fault," I said defensively. A dozen hostile eyes were on me. The voice said, "Please do not stand near the door as we approach station A."

"I'm not standing near the door," I shouted at the loudspeaker. "Does anyone see me standing near the door?" The other passengers looked away in disgust.

By the time I got to station A I was in a cold sweat trying to figure out how to get off the train by not standing near the door. I made it to the platform just as the doors closed behind me.

Then I went to rent a car. It has a new sedan and when I started it up a voice came out of the dashboard and said, "Your safety belt is not fastened." I could have sworn it was the same voice who bawled me out on the train. I quickly fastened the safety belt. The voice repeated itself, "Your safety belt is not fastened." I undid it and fastened it again.

The voice repeated, "Your safety belt is not fastened."

After being told two more times I called over the rental attendant. "This car keeps telling me my safety belt isn't fastened."

"Don't pay any attention to it," he said. "It's been telling our customers that for three days."

I drove to my hotel. By the time I got there I was smashing my fist against the dashboard.

I checked into one of those huge glass greenhouses with the elevators on the outside of the building. As soon as I got in the voice said, "There is no smoking on the elevator. Press the button just once. This elevator does not go to the roof garden. If you wish to go to the roof garden take the elevators on the other side of the lobby."

"I don't want to go to the roof garden, and I'm not smoking," I yelled. A couple took one look at me and got off.

I finally got to my room and locked the door. The first thing I did was search it for loudspeakers. If they were there they were carefully hidden. Then I called down for room service. A recorded voice answered. "All lines for rooms service are busy now. Please hold on until someone is available to take your order." I slammed the phone down.

Then I turned on the TV set. It was the same voice. "In case of fire follow these instructions carefully." I turned off the set.

There was nothing left but to go to sleep. I left a wakeup call for 7 a.m.

The phone woke me up. "It is 7 a.m."

"Thank you," I said. "What's the weather like outside?"

The voice said, "It is 7 a.m."

"Look, is it cold or raining or snowing or what?"

"It is 7 a.m."
"Hello. This is a guest in room 1209. Is anybody there? This is guest in room 1209. Is anybody there?"

The voice said once more, "It is 7 a.m.," and then there was a click and dead silence. There was nobody there.

'The Day After' was big bust

If you were a youngster in the 1950s, as I was, you probably knew the people who had bomb shelters in their basement, or at least had considered installing one. But you were unlikely to have lived in fear of "the bomb." In school, there were air raid drills as well as the fire drills, but nobody tried to convince you that the end of the world was in sight.

And certainly nobody tried to convince you that the U.S. was responsible for a pending nuclear holocaust because we didn't have the vision to disarm ourselves and beg for mercy from the Soviet Union.

Ah, the good old days. All that has changed now, thanks to ABC television and their broadcast of "The Day After" a made-for-TV movie aired November 20.

"The Day After" (which starred Jason Robards) was not a sleazy sex film. It wasn't even a classy one. It featured the residents of Kansas City, Missouri, and Lawrence, Kansas, in a grisly and graphic look at life on earth during and after a nuclear attack.

The film sought to be terrifying. But to a nation jaded by "The Towering Inferno" and "Jaws," it was disappointingly dull. I'm almost tempted to say ABC's nuclear holocaust was one big bomb, creating an audience where the bored envied the dead.

ABC almost took a bath showing the $7 million program. Sponsors were reluctant to touch such a (excuse the expression) "hot" property. But ABC executive Anthony Thomopoulos stressed the network's commitment to airing the film regardless of how many sponsors signed on.

For anyone familiar with the entertainment industry, this seems odd. In a business where profits are the be-all and end-all of existence, no one goes around throwing millions of dollars down the tubes. After all, SOMEONE has to pay for the Guccis, the Mercedes, and the tab at Perino's. So what was ABC's motive - if not another fast buck.

Despite the denials, it looks like the real purpose of the film was the desire by ABC executives to make a political statement: "disarm or die - support the nuclear freeze!"

Why else would they have scheduled it to air just as NATO was starting its deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe - missiles that were requested by our allies to make the Soviets think twice about using the hundreds of missiles they have aimed at Europe?

Star Robards let the cat out of the bag when he commented that making the film "beats signing petitions." And pro-freeze in virtual hiding since the Kremlin again revealed its barbarism by shooting down Korean Air Lines Flight 007, were ecstatic. "ABC is doing a $7 million advertising job for our issue," said Janet Michaud, leader of a pro-freeze group.

Sadly, the joke may be on the fearmongers. If the movie has the impact they're hoping for, and the U.S. opts for unilateral disarmament, they may indeed get their holocaust.

Why? Because deterrence works and appeasement doesn't. We didn't worry about nuclear annihilation in the 50s because our nation was strong. Nuclear war was unthinkable because the aggressors in the Soviet Politburo knew the U.S. was determined to defend its interests. So Khrushchev and company never pushed the button.

Another former deputy given prison sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — A San Jacinto County sheriff's deputy who pleaded guilty to a count of conspiring to violate the civil rights of prisoners tortured at the county jail about 70 miles northeast of Houston has been sentenced to four years in prison.

Floyd Baker, who pleaded guilty to a single count in October and who was sentenced Thursday by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, is the third county deputy to be sentenced to prison in the case. Former Sheriff James C. "Hump" Parker also was found guilty earlier and sentenced to serve a prison term.

Baker originally was charged with Parker and the two other deputies. DeAnda, however, severed Baker from that case, declaring a mistrial after Baker testified he was just following the orders of his superiors when he participated in the torture. Baker could have been sentenced up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Baker, who also worked previously as a deputy in adjacent Polk County, testified in the Parker trial that he once witnessed the torture of a prisoner in San Jacinto County.

"I have never been able to understand why you joined an organization that was saturated with misconduct of all kinds," DeAnda told Baker on Thursday.

Baker said the earlier incident he saw while working in Polk County "slipped my mind."

DeAnda also barred Baker from any law enforcement work. "You may like the work, but you're just not cut out for it," the judge said.

According to a presentencing investigation prepared for DeAnda, Baker had abused other prisoners.

Testimony at the trial of Parker and former deputies Carl Lee and John Glover indicated several prisoners were tortured in order to gain confessions from them. Prisoners were handcuffed or tied to chairs, had their faces wrapped tight with a towel and then had water poured over the towel, making it difficult to breathe and creating a sensation of drowning.

Earlier this week Parker's son and two former bail bondsmen agreed to a plea bargain and pleaded guilty to setting up so-called "marijuana traps" along U.S. Highway 59 in the county.

Gary Parker, 22, faces up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine after entering the plea to a charge of conspiring to violate the civil rights of a motorist.

Time of year for frustration

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While fortunate people at this time of year worry about big issues, like the size of their bonuses or their ability to dig shelters from the taxman, common people concern themselves with simple frustrations.

There are the usual problems with mail-order catalogs, which you use because they simplify the process of gift-giving.

Your order is placed and accepted and later you receive a card. It informs you not, as you expect, that your gift is on the way to the recipient but, instead, is out of stock. Choose again, it advises.

From another catalog you have chosen steaks. A few days later you receive a card that confirms your order and assures you they will be delivered as near as possible to the date you chose.

Shortly before Christmas it happens again. Because of a crush of orders, you are informed, your order will be delivered as soon as possible following the holidays. Promise.

By this unilateral action you are left with insufficient time to get another gift, and maybe with no time to inform the recipient-to-be, who by this time might be thinking of eliminating you from next year's Christmas card list.

Something must be done. You plunge into the crowd at a retail outlet and select a discounted watch. You are assured by the salesgirl that it can be returned within two weeks if defective. You buy.

Hours later you remove the folded receipt that has been stapled to the package. Stamped on the reverse you read: "No Refund. Watch Must Be Returned To Manufacturer Or Distributor For Repair."

Having chosen several items that seem suited to the people on your list you present the magic plastic card for payment. The clerk checks with your bank. She reports that your credit is insufficient to complete the transaction.

While knowing this not to be so — that, in fact, you had sent a check to the bank, reducing what you owed to an amount far below your credit limit — you have little choice but to cancel your purchases. "What happened?" you ask. Why the mails, of course. The envelope with your check has been slowed by the Christmas mail.

Confusing signals from Poland

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confusing signals are coming out of communist Poland, but practiced Poland-watcher, Zbigniew Brzezinski, detects a healthy trend.

The one-time U.S. national security adviser is cheered by his reading of developments in the Polish underground. He thinks there are opportunities for the United States and the Polish people.

"Something fascinating is happening inside Poland," Brzezinski said in a recent interview. "It is something altogether novel. An underground society is emerging."

The communist government cannot crush it, Brzezinski said, and the Reagan administration should encourage the movement by lifting U.S. economic sanctions.

The news from Warsaw is not always that bright or clear. Last Monday, for instance, Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski, fearing anti-government demonstrations, ordered special military units to move into cities and towns throughout the country.

But the same day, Lech Walesa, the Solidarity founder, held a news conference in his hometown of Gdansk and urged an end to the Western economic sanctions imposed after the 1981 military crackdown. "What Poland needs now is not losses of millions of dollars, but aid of billions of dollars," Walesa said.

President Reagan responded Wednesday by saying he would give "immediate and serious consideration" to issues raised by Walesa.

The United States should lift the sanctions it imposed at the same time, "not because General Jaruzelski has been howling for this for two years, but because Walesa, the authentic voice of the underground society, has asked for it," Brzezinski said.

Since the Carter administration closed down nearly three years ago and he relinquished his office in the White House west wing, Brzezinski has maintained his deep interest in international events. And he keeps a sharp eye on Poland, his native land.

Sitting in his office at the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies in downtown Washington, he described a salutary trend.

Brzezinski said there are some 450 underground newspapers in Poland, some with a weekly circulation of 20,000 copies. There are regional committees in almost every city, and underground courses in universities and libraries.

"In effect," he said, "there is emerging a pattern of social cooperation in which people participate in different degrees — some full time, some part time, in what is emerging as a separate self-operating society in contrast with the government."

"And that is a totally new development in terms of any communist state," he said.

"It is encouraged by the church, and the state cannot crush it because many members of the state participate in it, including on high levels," Brzezinski said.

Some people are well organized

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP)

— Our first Christmas card of the year arrived two days before Thanksgiving from friends in Tasmania, an island south of the Australian mainland from whence come those sheep-eating devils.

They (the friends, not the devils or the sheep) must have sent it around Easter because it arrived by sea mail. One of the enduring miracles of Christmas is that you can remain fond of people who are that organized.

My mother often told us, about this time of year, that Eleanor Roosevelt always wrote all her White House Christmas cards on the day after the Fourth of July.

I don't know where she got her information, but some of it must have rubbed off. Mom always bought next year's cards at cut-rate prices in the big clearance sales the week after Christmas and had all hers written by the first week in December.

Unfortunately, our operation around here has never been anywhere near that efficient. As late as Christmas Eve, with the carolers at the door interrupting our flow of thought, we are often found huddled before the fireplace, scratching away at a pile of cards and envelopes as crabbedly miserable as Bob Cratchit up on his high stool in Scrooge & Marley's countinghouse.

And, most of all, I detest humorous Christmas cards. I prefer Santa Claus, Christmas trees, horse drawn sleds, the Wisemen on their camels, overfed Pickwickian squires raising a toddy in toast, angel choirs, star-lit mangers — oh well.

Venue hearing postponed

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A scheduled Dec. 19 change of venue hearing for Linda May Burnett, already convicted of murder and charged with four other slayings, has been postponed until January, defense attorneys say.

Attorney Charles Carver said Thursday either he or Assistant District Attorney David Moore would file a motion this week with Criminal District Judge Larry Gist, asking that the hearing be held after the first of the year. Carver said the judge has indicated he would grant the delay.

Carver predicted the hearing would take about two weeks. Gist in September granted Burnett's bid for speedy trials on her four remaining capital murder cases and set the hearing to decide whether to move them out of Beaumont.

Seven dead in fire

BALTIMORE (AP) — A fast-moving fire tore through a three-story home today, killing seven people and injuring four others, two critically, fire officials said.

Flames burned through the roof of the single-family dwelling, but the blaze was contained within a hour after it was reported at 12:55 a.m., Fire Department spokesman Capt. Pat Flynn said.

Among the dead were four children, including a week-old infant, a teenage boy and one adult, he said.

One of the other victims — identified as Gillet Pumphrey, 21 — died several hours after the blaze at the University of Maryland Shock Trauma unit. Ms. Pumphrey had suffered second- and third-degree burns over 80 percent of her body and broke several bones when she leaped from the brick single-family dwelling, Flynn said.

The four survivors also were apparently forced to leap from upper windows to safety, suffering broken bones and head injuries in addition to severe burns, said Flynn.

Meese defends food programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III says he has not seen any authoritative evidence there are hungry children in America and that many people go to soup kitchens "because the food is free and that's easier than paying for it."

In an interview Thursday, Meese said the Task Force on Food Assistance was created by President Reagan in September "to get to the bottom of some of these allegations that have been unsubstantiated."

"So, if there are hungry children, the question is why are they hungry? The United States government is spending more on food assistance than it ever has in history."

Proclaiming World Food Day last Oct. 14, the president said there was "no reason for hunger anywhere in America ... Food and help are available to anyone who is hungry in America."

The U.S. Conference of Mayors said in October that economic recovery had not yet reached the hungry in U.S. cities.

"The problem of hunger is indeed continuing to grow in cities despite recent reports and indications of an economic recovery," said the mayors.

They added that the hunger problem "has been exacerbated, clearly, by the recent drastic cuts in federal benefits and the high cost of basic necessities, such as food, shelter and energy."

During the same period, a group of physician told a House subcommittee that studies in the states of Massachusetts and New York as well as in Chicago found increases in the number of people, especially children and the elderly, suffering from inadequate diets.

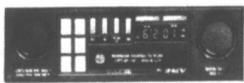

Asked about reports of hungry children, Meese said, "I've heard a lot of anecdotal stuff, but I haven't heard any authoritative figures."

"With all the resources of the federal government, with all of the resources of state and local government, with all of the voluntary organizations," he added, "if people are going hungry there must be some problem that has not yet been addressed and it is not lack of funds."

Lawyer home after year as ABA president

By ED TIMMS
Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) — Morris Harrell flew 300,000 miles and talked law with lords and fence-building with President Reagan.

He walked away from a small-plane crash — and immediately began looking for another plane to continue the journey.

Now, after a year of hopping from town to town and village to village around the world as president of the American Bar Association, he's back in Dallas.

And he is once again frequenting Dallas' judicial arenas, armed with weapons he has known well for more than three decades — briefs and petitions.

"I don't intend to retire," Harrell, 63, said. "I enjoy the practice of law, and I enjoy the trial of lawsuits. And I am glad to be back home and able to get back into it."

A one-year term as president of the American Bar Association took him away from the practice of law but sent him all over the world. He discussed law with the elite of the judiciary in London and Paris, in Ottawa and Sydney.

It was in New Zealand — on an ABA trip — where Harrell and his wife, Rhoda, had a flight end a bit sooner than anticipated.

"We were taking a private plane out to visit some people on a ranch..." Harrell said. "We lost an engine on takeoff, bounced off the runway and broke the landing gear."

The plane continued skidding away from the runway and came to rest in a pig's delight — lots of mud and water.

Harrell was undaunted. "Fortunately, we were not hurt. As a matter of fact, I tried to get another plane that day to go on to our event, but I couldn't make the arrangements."

His combined flying distance while president of the ABA: 300,000 miles, by a conservative estimate. Dallas was home, but just barely.

As ABA president, one of Harrell's greatest coups was getting President Reagan to speak at the group's annual convention held at Atlanta in August.

Harrell spoke with the president briefly before the opening session of the convention, where Reagan made a speech.

"We talked about the presidency, about the demands on his time, and my observations as to how things were going — and ended up talking about building fences at ranches," Harrell recalled.

"He was telling me about a fence he was designing and building out at his ranch in California and I was telling him about a ranch that we have.

"I think he was building a better fence than what we're used to."

Harrell's ranch, located near Cotulla between San Antonio and Laredo, is his wife's pet project. Harrell, born in Grandview, in Johnson County about 50 miles southwest of Dallas, indulges his urges to return to the soil with a farm in Johnson County.

"Fortunately, our two interests are wide apart geographically," Harrell explained. "I don't try to cultivate her ranch, and she doesn't try to graze my farm."

For years, Harrell has been outspoken about problems confronting the nation's judicial system. He continued that work as ABA president.

He supported an amendment to the Bar's Model Rules and Professional Conduct that defined the limits of the lawyer-client relationship. The amendment prevents lawyers from revealing information about a client without the client's consent except in two cases — to prevent a client from committing a criminal act that could result in death or bodily harm to someone or to establish a claim or defense for lawyers if faced with criminal charges because of a dispute with the client.

An education program aimed at teaching both youths and adults more about the courts was a favorite project during his tenure.

Harrell was the driving force behind the ABA's first national symposium on public education, which was held in Houston in November.

"I think we're making great headway in a program that will take several years to get under control... I think most people are tremendously interested in the law," he said.

Harrell perceives court delays and the cost of trials as serious problems that defy simple solution.

"Of course, there is plenty of room for improvement in most everything, and certainly in our judicial system," he said, pensively. "I'm not condemning the system. I think it's the greatest system there is. One of the problems we have with our system is our recognition of so many rights of the people. You wouldn't need but a handful of lawyers and two or three judges if nobody had any rights."

Harrell sees the rights as a blessing. But as a practitioner, he knows the cause-and-effect relationship as well.

"When you take all those rights and put them into a system of justice, we're going to have some delays. Our task is to try to keep the system up and make the changes that need to be made in order to accommodate that situation."

"Alternate means of dispute resolution," Harrell said, may be part of the answer — using mediation, arbitration and conciliation to take some disputes out of the courts and resolve them with less time and money spent.

At the same time, Harrell said, it is important to preserve the integrity of the system and its accessibility, "because part of our American way of life is the right... to seek redress through the court system."

Harrell's career in law began in 1946. His entry into the profession after passing the Bar exam in 1942 was postponed by World War II.

An uncle, Dallas lawyer W.B. Harrell, helped him set up his practice after the war. Harrell had his own practice, although at first his uncle threw enough cases his way for him to make a living.

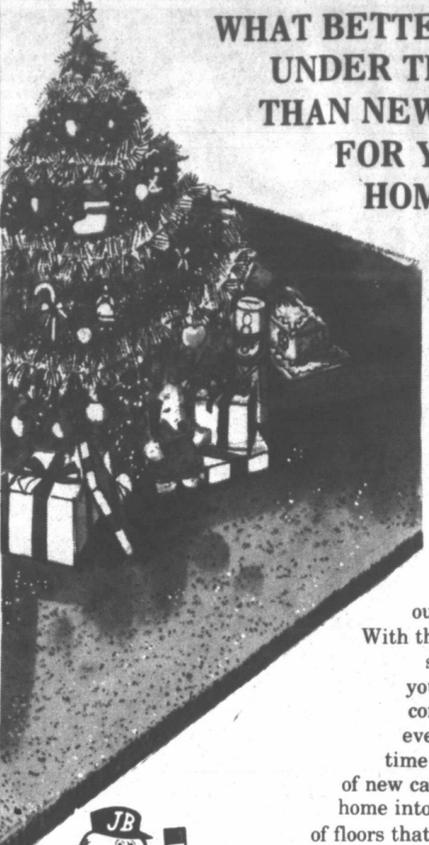

In 1947, Harrell became an assistant U.S. attorney, working in both Fort Worth and Dallas.

He later returned to private practice and joined a large Dallas law firm. In 1965, he and several other lawyers began their own firm — what is now Rain, Harrell, Emery, Young & Duke.

Now, after reaching the pinnacle, he is looking forward to spending more time in the community.

"With all the work I've done with the Bar association and all the traveling I've done in the last few years, I have not been as active in civic affairs as I would like to be."

Associated Press Writer
RUNDU, South-West Africa (AP) — Along the banks of the crocodile-infested Okavango River, where some of Africa's greatest beasts gathered freely before the region was torn by war, one finds a zoo.

Wire cages at the end of a rutted lane reflect the determination of both civilians and soldiers to persuade tribesmen to reduce their killing of game for food. Despite the pressures of drought and the dislocations of war, the zoo director says, the message of conservation seems to be taking hold.

There is a friendly female lion named Yanna next to a shy cheetah, a red-eyed hyena, two crocodiles, several monkeys, birds, snakes, brawling baboons and a gemsbok, or antelope, named Susan. Susan lost her left horn in a fight with a lion and her right one battling wild dogs.

"Yes, it's kind of a strange place for a zoo, here in the wilderness, looking straight across that river into Angola, and being in the war," zoo director Elric Pretorius said in an interview. Susan followed his steps like a loyal dog. Pretorius, a trained anthropologist and psychologist from Cape Town, South Africa, came to the banks of the Okavango 10 years ago to work with tribesmen of the same name.

For 17 years, black nationalist guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization have been fighting white-ruled South Africa's administration of the territory also known as Namibia. Rundu is in northeastern Namibia, where the river forms the boundary with Angola and where South African soldiers regularly scout for guerrillas moving south from Angolan camps.

When Pretorius arrived, many of the region's 110,000 Okavangos were being caught in the middle. Fighting and harassment by combatants were forcing 95 percent of the widely distributed Okavangos to move to within nine miles of the river.

The South Africans were building roads and clinics in the area, and were offering jobs, and there was still plenty of game.

"The Okavangos looked at an animal and they saw lunch. They were killing everything," Pretorius said. As the chief teacher in Rundu, Pretorius said he tried — and failed — to use the classroom to teach ecology and animal husbandry.

"They still went on killing," he said. "There were more and more people and less and less game. We wanted to show that if they allowed an animal to live, it could reproduce and there would be more game for everyone."

Then the idea of the bush zoo emerged as a way to demonstrate the advantages of conservation. Pretorius and some other teachers urged the civilian South African administration to establish the zoo.

For spring, summer, fall and winners.

Shudders in nation's largest court system

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — In the nation's largest court system, these are days of high anxiety. Names are about to be named. Secrets are about to be revealed. Scandal is in the air.

Now, three years after it began, Operation Greylord, an Abcam-style probe touted as the most ambitious investigation of judicial corruption in U.S. history, is about to go public.

It promises to be a tale of intrigue and adventure: a "white knight" judge who concealed a tape recorder in his cowboy boots, FBI "moles" posing as corrupt prosecutors and a "Boy Scout" state's attorney who turned to life in the fast lane to snare crooked defense lawyers.

Reports also have surfaced of deals cut in bars, an FBI agent snapping pictures of a judge counting money and even electronic "bugs" placed inside the chambers of at least two judges — believed to be the first such court-approved eavesdropping.

As many as 100 phony criminal cases also were created to ferret out Cook County's kinky lawyers, judges and courtroom fixers as part of Greylord, said former Police Superintendent Richard Brzezczek.

Now, some judges, attorneys and police officers accustomed to adjudicating millions of cases each year, including tens of thousands of felonies, will be getting a fresh look at law and order — from a defendant's eye view.

In recent days, scores have been advised by the Justice Department they were overheard in legal wiretaps — sometimes in judges' chambers. Not all are suspected of criminal activity. Some also have been advised they are targets of the Greylord probe.

Part of Greylord, named after the wigs worn by British jurists, reportedly focused on narcotics and traffic courts — just two parts of Cook County's immense judicial system that includes 322 judges and 20,000 licensed attorneys.

One judge — who was relieved of official duties Monday — predicts he will be indicted. By the end of next week, as many as four judges, eight lawyers and four police officers and other court personnel reportedly will be charged with crimes.

"What this has done is intimidate everybody," said Edward Genson, a veteran defense attorney who has confirmed his client, Judge Wayne Olson, is expected to be indicted. "People are afraid to practice law. People are afraid to be judges."

Indeed, some say caution has replaced cordiality since word of Greylord first leaked last summer when Brocton Lockwood, a southern Illinois judge serving a stint in Chicago's Traffic Court, disclosed he was an undercover agent, wearing a microphone under his robe and carrying a tape recorder in his cowboy boot.

Since then, some say judges are anxious to put more on the record. Attorneys are reluctant to waive juries for fear of being misinterpreted. And every word in private conferences is being weighed carefully.

Though no one has yet been charged with a crime, the Greylord investigation already has created legal tremors — both for its methods and the message it may carry.

Some veteran defense attorneys are outraged, arguing the legal wiretapping of judicial chambers is an invasion of private conversations of hundreds of innocent people.

"There are certain things I say to people that are not crimes but I don't want the FBI to know it," said Sam Adam, a defense attorney who said he's been approached to represent some lawyers who fear they may be indicted in the Greylord case.

Adds Sherman Magidson, another defense attorney: "It's 1984 and the tape recorder has taken over."

Others in the system say Greylord will further tarnish an already tarnished reputation in a town where cops on the take, politicians on the make and wheeling and dealing sometimes have been a way of life.

"It's going to confirm a (mistaken) belief that all lawyers and judges are corrupt everywhere," Adam said. "People in general think lawyers are fixers and all judges are on the take.... Judges are in big trouble come November."

Though some judges say there is no apprehension, Judge James Bailey, who serves in criminal court, said Greylord will hurt jurists who are on the retention ballot this fall and must get a 60 percent approval rate to stay on the bench.

"Nobody likes a crook," Bailey said. "Nobody likes anyone under indictment. Nobody likes anyone with a cloud over his or her head."

And that cloud definitely is hovering over the judicial system, said Judge Kenneth Gillis.

"The public," Gillis said, "could perceive that 50 percent of the judiciary is involved, when it could be only two to three, if any."

The number of indictments expected is a tiny percentage of the lawyers and judges operating in Cook County.

Dear Abby

Pregnant bride-to-be sings wedding blues

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and my fiance is 21. I'll call him "Leon." We've been engaged for two years, but we never set a wedding date because Leon wanted to pay off his motorcycle, van and boat first.

Well, in the two years we've been engaged, I've had two abortions, and I just found out I'm pregnant again. I honestly don't know how this keeps happening, Abby. I've been on the pill for two years and I hardly ever forget to take it. Leon never uses any protection because it's against his religion.

He wants me to get another abortion, but this time I think we'd better keep the baby and get married. I've always wanted a pretty church wedding. My parents promised me one, but I'm afraid if I tell them I'm pregnant, I won't get the wedding. Also, the kind of wedding I want will take four or five months to plan, and I'll be showing by then. Please tell me what to do.

IN LOVE IN TAMPA

DEAR IN LOVE: Tell your parents you are pregnant and want to be married as soon as possible. Forgo the kind of wedding that will take four or five months to plan. There's no reason why your wedding can't be both pretty and prompt. And if it's against Leon's religion to use birth control, tell him to use self-control.

DEAR ABBY: Please, settle this long-standing dispute between my daughter-in-law and me.

I say that when we are out for dinner and I am the host and the bill comes to the table, the guests should engage in polite conversation and show no interest in the check.

My daughter-in-law not only insists on knowing how much the bill is, she offers her unsolicited opinion on how much the tip should be!

Please print your answer. I want to show it to her.

STORMY IN SUNLAND, CALIF.

DEAR STORMY: The amount of the bill and the size of the tip should be the exclusive concern of the host or hostess. Your daughter-in-law should contribute her opinion only if she is going to contribute to the bill.

DEAR ABBY: I just returned from picking up my 9-year-old son at school, and I am at the end of my rope. This is the fourth time in as many days that "Johnny's" teacher called and asked me to pick up Johnny because he had wet his pants. Today she told me that unless something is done about this I will have to take him out of school.

Johnny stopped wetting his bed when he was 4, but he has not as yet achieved consistent daytime dryness. Sometimes he will be fine for weeks, then for no apparent reason he starts to wet his pants again. It doesn't matter if he's in school or on vacation, he still wets his pants.

I've had him to a pediatrician, then to a urologist, and neither doctor could find anything physically wrong, so I took him to a child psychologist. She said, "Ignore it and don't make an issue of it; in time the boy will outgrow it."

This is very hard to ignore, Abby. Now what?

END OF ROPE

DEAR END: Take the psychologist's advice, then ask her to write (or telephone) Johnny's teacher enlisting her patience and cooperation.

To expel the boy from school for this reason would only compound his problem. In the meantime, buy him some disposable, absorbent, diaper-type underpants with plastic linings. Your urologist can tell you where to get them.

Family records for gifts

By GENA WALLS

Are you ready for the holidays? Finished with your shopping or just beginning? Be an elf to yourself this year and purchase something to record your family tree and display your work.

This might be a pedigree chart that you have completed as far as possible and framed with a pretty mat to highlight your findings. You might prefer one of the "trees" that several genealogy supply companies are publishing. My favorite is the oak tree with the names printed on the branches with your children's names on acorns at the base of the tree. Another choice is the apple tree with names placed on small apples. If you can draw, then design your own and make it really special.

Do you like to needle point or crewel? Several kits are available with a variety of designs and the local stores have them in stock. If you want to give them as a gift this year better hurry as Christmas is "just around the corner." A pillow top with your family names embroidered on it would be a real treasure for future generations.

Do you plan on giving someone a Bible this season? Take a few extra minutes to complete the family history pages before wrapping it. Before the federal government started keeping birth and death records, the family Bible was often the only place such information was recorded. Bible records are recognized as accurate proof in obtaining social security benefits in some instances. Many organizations will accept this as part of membership requirements.

When recording in your Bible, remember to be as accurate as possible and include as much about each event as you remember. Use full names with nicknames following and the place and date of each event. If a marriage, include the name of the minister or the church with the location.

Birth records might include the name of the hospital and the doctor or the first visitor. These are the "extra" facts that give personality to names for future generations. Add the little extras to baby books, school directories, or your own diary. It might not be the next generation that appreciates your efforts but sometime in the future one of your descendants will be proud of your work.

Local genealogy book available

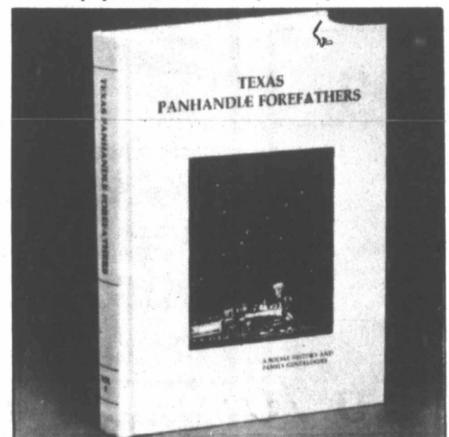

AMARILLO—Unveiling of the collector's volume "Texas Panhandle Forefathers, 1875-1930," published by the Amarillo Genealogical Society, is scheduled at KGNC Studios, 3505 Olsen, Sunday, Dec. 18, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and will be on display afternoons all

The work represents a permanent resource for future use as well as an attractive reference for current researchers and readers curious about the development of this region.

Barbara Spray, who compiled the volume expressed special thanks to life, development of commerce and social organizations. More than 300 Family Group Sheets are included.

Additional volumes may be purchased by mail from the Treasurer, 1505 Austin, Amarillo, 79102 for $45.50 including tax and mailing.

the families in Pampa who contributed accounts for the book. Included in the stories are elements of community week. All prepaid book orders will be distributed at this time. Pampa and surrounding community residents who requested books by mail will receive them promptly.

Buffalo hunters, farmers, businessmen, Indians, cattlemen, soldiers and land promoters all shared in the early development of the Texas Panhandle. Now their stories and common heritage have been assembled in one book.

Family histories and previously unpublished old photos have been gathered from all 26 counties of the Panhandle, said Society President Sharon Jelinek.

Area Cowbelles offer Perryton man's books

Texas Cowbelles are to begin selling books by John Erickson of Perryton this Christmas as a fund raising project for the non-profit organization.

Erickson, whose books and articles have been widely read throughout the West met with the Texas Cowbelles at the convention of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in San Antonio, Nov. 13-14.

The writer, who is known primarily as a humorist and the creator of Hank the Cowdog, Head of Ranch Security, struck a serious note in his address to the Cowbelles.

"You are here at this convention because you realize that your way of life is in danger," he said. "I know your way of life. I've lived it and loved it. In my books, I try to capture the strength and integrity of ranch people. Humor is one of the strengths of our breed. If cattle people couldn't laugh about hard times, they couldn't survive."

Anna Lee Barton, a Lipscomb County ranch wife and a past president of the Texas Cowbelles, announced that the organization will be selling five of Erickson's books: "Through Time and the Valley," "The Devil in Texas," "Hank the Cowdog," "The Further Adventures of Hank the Cowdog," and "Cowboys Are Partly Human."

Cowbelles will also be selling cassette tape versions of the Hank books with the stories read by the author.

The retail markup price from the books is earmarked for the Cowbelle treasury to fund projects promoting beef and the cattle industry.

After meeting the women in San Antonio, Erickson said, "Cowbelles are terrific. Their mothers and grandmothers fought Indians and disease and dust storms. Today, the problems are different, but the Cowbelles are just as formidable.

"There's an old saying that the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world. That's as true today as it was a hundred years ago, but with the Cowbelles you have to add that the hand that rocks the cradle can also hold a hay hook, stretch a barbed wire fence, or write a scorching letter to a United States senator."

Anyone wishing to buy Erickson's books for Christmas may contact, Top O' Texas Cowbelle president, Pat Youngblood at 835-2904.

Guess Who's? Tomorrow!

Points on fair debt collection

When a friend calls and wakes you early in the morning it can be irritating, but it's not illegal. However, when a debt collector does the same thing, it IS against the law.

To explain what a debt collector can and can't do, and how you can protect yourself from harassment, the Federal Trade Commission has published a helpful pamphlet.

Fair Debt Collection, the pamphlet, points out that debt collectors may not contact you at an inconvenient or unusual time or place, such as before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m., unless you agree. They may contact you at other times in person, by mail, telephone or telegram, but not at work if your employer disapproves.

The law requires that within five days after you're first contacted, the debt collector must send you a written notice stating the amount of money you owe, the name of the creditor to whom you owe the money and what to do if you believe you don't owe the money.

If you want to stop debt collectors from contacting you at all, just write a letter to the collection agency and tell them to stop. Once they get this letter, they are only allowed to tell you once that there'll be no more contact or to notify you that some specific action is going to be taken. However, sending them a letter doesn't remove the liability; you are still responsible for paying your debt.

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act of 1978 which provides the protection also states that if you have an attorney, the debt collector may only contact your attorney. If you don't have a lawyer, the collector may check with other people but only to find out where you live or work.

You're protected by this law from many types of bill collector harassment, and Fair Debt Collection spells out the specific prohibitions. For instance, a debt collector may not use threats of violence or harm to your property or reputation, nor publish a list of consumers who refuse to pay their debts. (They may, however, notify a credit bureau.) They're also forbidden to use obscene or profane language, to repeatedly use the telephone to annoy you, or telephone without identifying themselves.

Debt collectors are also not allowed to say you'll be arrested if you don't pay your debt, or to say they'll seize, garnish, attach or sell your property or wages, unless the collection agency or the creditor fully intends to take these actions and they're legal under your state laws.

To learn more about your protection under the law, send for a copy of Fair Debt Collection (50 cents) at Consumer Information Center, Dept. 403L, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

CANTATA PREPARATION - Ken McDonald, left, director of music ministries at First United Methodist Church, and Elaine Ledbetter, Christian education director, discuss the cantata, "Unto Us a Child Is Born." Mrs. Ledbetter has written a narration for the performance scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the church.

Christmas cantata at First Methodist

The Chancel Choir of First United Methodist Church, Foster and Ballard, will present the Christmas cantata, "Unto Us a Child Is Born," at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

The work is a compilation of Christmas carols, all arranged by contemporary composer Ronn Huff.

The carols included in the cantata display a wide range of different styles, time periods and cultural periods.

Selections include "How Great Our Joy," "Good Christian Men Rejoice," "Joy to the World," "O Come, All Ye Faithful," "Sweet Little Jesus Boy" (solo by Rochelle Lacy), "Fairiest Lord Jesus," "Mary's Little Boy Child" and "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light."

Others are Vivaldi's "Gloria," "O Holy Night," "Wonderful Counselor," "Ah, Dearest Jesus," "The Jesus Gift," "Go Tell It on the Mountain," "With All Thy Host" and "That Night."

Elaine Ledbetter, director of Christian education at First United Methodist Church and well-known author, has written a narration that will tie the carols together.

Dr. Richard H. Whitwam, pastor, will be narrator. The parts of Mary and the Three Kings will be played by Judy Marcum, Bill Jones, Dick Crockett and Jay Warner. Aubrey Steele and Bill Ledbetter prepared the backdrop.

The choir will be accompanied by Tracy Cary and Ruby Gunn.

The public is invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

Musical at Central Baptist

The musical "Heaven Rejoices" will be presented by the Sanctuary Choir of Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The choir will be under the direction of Randy Lind, minister of music. The presentation will be highlighted by a Wayland Baptist University drama group depicting the angels.

"Heaven Rejoices" promises to be a beautiful musical that presents the birth of Christ from the viewpoint of the angels in heaven," said Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor.

The public is invited to attend the musical performance.

Does hell really exist?

By George R. Plagenz

Whenever he speaks about hell, Billy Graham says people always come up to him afterward and say, "Billy, I don't really believe in hell."

Graham says he tells them, "If there is only a 10 percent chance that there is a hell as it says in the Bible, wouldn't it be smart to make sure you won't go there by accepting Jesus Christ tonight as your Lord and Savior?"

If there is a chance — even a 10 percent chance — that there is a hell and it is anything like the hell pictured in the Bible, Graham's advice would be well worth taking.

The book of Revelation says, "As for the cowardly, the faithless, and the vile, murderers, fornicators, sorcerers, idolaters and liars of every kind, their lot will be the second death, in the lake that burns with sulphurous flames" — translated "fire and brimstone" in the King James translation.

Fundamentalists also point out that Jesus, in the parable of the sheep and the goats, said the wicked will go to a place of "everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

But this concept of hell has undergone many changes in modern times. The Liberal Protestant idea of hell is the hell-on-earth theory. Instead of being a part of the next world, hell is looked upon as a condition of this world. It is viewed as "separation from God," which results in anxiety, loneliness and frustration.

Many churchmen feel that conditions such as war, poverty and racism, by dragging society into the abyss, create a "hell on earth" more real and terrible than any post-mortem hell could be.

While heaven and hell traditionally have referred to the two options offered to souls in the next world, a growing number of people today who believe in life after death find the terms "heaven" and "hell" unserviceable.

These people contend you will be the same person in the next world as you are when you leave this world. At death you will go neither to heaven nor hell, but will take up an existence similar to the one you had here. The big difference is that "over there" everything is spiritual.

This can, of course, turn out to be a form of hell for somebody like the sensual person in a spiritual world — there can be no satisfaction of the physical cravings that gave him happiness on earth.

There also are modern theologians who believe in heaven but doubt the existence of hell. They don't mean, however, that everybody will go to heaven. They mean that those who don't go to heaven will merely cease to exist. Their "eternal punishment" will be eternal death — i.e., non-existence. They won't burn eternally but life will be taken from them forever.

These theologians, in support of their position, quote Jesus' words in the parable of the talents: "For the man who has will be given more and the man who has not will forfeit even what he has."

The orthodox churches teach that hell is a punishment for sin. But God's punishment to Adam and Eve for sinning in the Garden of Eden was a life of hard work ending in death.

"Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return," was God's judgment on the human race. Presumably, death was going to be the end of it for each individual.

The idea of a resurrection of the dead appeared at the time of the prophets. It was Daniel who first foresaw that the righteous who had died would rise from their graves to be in a new golden age. It would be a time in which the nations that had oppressed the Jews would be overthrown and the Jewish state would return to its former glory.

Then the thought occurred: What about the unrighteous? Couldn't the idea of divine retribution be extended to them? Couldn't they get their just desserts? Sheol, the quiet, old grave-like abode of the dead, now began to stir with activity, became a place of torment and suffering for the wicked.

Billy Graham, at his recent Crusade in California, stopped short of going into vivid, lurid detail of the terrors of hell. Still he left no doubt that he believes in hell.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Lord's Calling Card

The Light shining through a stained glass window beckons one to enter the house of the Lord. It is an invitation to friendship, sympathy, joy, and worship. Let this be your invitation to church this Sunday.

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Handgun possession a passionate issue

EDITOR'S NOTE — Handguns are one of the more passionate issues in the nation. Should they be banned? Do citizens have the right to bear personal guns? The controversy has focused on Morton Grove, Ill., a Chicago-area community where they have outlawed the possession and sale of handguns.

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Writer
MORTON GROVE, Ill. (AP) — Mayor Richard Flickinger opened the letter postmarked from Sequim, Wash. It began, "Dear Commie Cur Dog."
"Should I read more?" he asked. "It's pretty bad, but it's not unusual."
Since this community became the country's first to break the handgun barrier by outlawing their possession and sale in 1981, Flickinger has received nearly 400 letters from all over.

"About 60 percent favor what we did, praising our courage and conviction in the face of five court challenges backed by the well-heeled National Rifle Association," he says.

The 67-year-old Flickinger was a salesman most of his life before he retired and became mayor and liquor commissioner in this community of 24,000 for $4,800 a year. He's heard about everything. He flipped the letter aside.

It all began in 1981 when this middle-class suburb northwest of Chicago received an application for a license to open a gun shop in a small shopping center.

"When people got wind of it, they got up a petition against it and presented it to the board... and that started the ordinance," says Flickinger, who just happened to live a block from the location.

"At a public hearing more than 100 people showed up and one in 10 were NRA people from all over the area yelling against the ordinance," says the mayor. "We had two votes. It was 5-1 to ban the sale of handguns, and 4-2 to ban their possession. We didn't have a referendum — this village is tight with the buck — but we felt that being elected officials we represented the people."

He says 73 percent of cards, calls and letters received before the well-publicized ordinance went before the board were in favor of it.

Trustee Neil Cashman, who introduced the ordinance, says $16,000 has been spent in meeting court challenges by the NRA and other handgun supporters.

"But it has cost the village nothing," he adds. "ABC in Hollywood wanted to make a documentary and gave us a $17,000 advance. We put it in a fund for court fights. And the Chicago law firm of Jenner & Block donated a lot of services."

Would the mayor do it all over again?

"I think more so now. I never had to vote (only in case of ties), but I certainly was behind the ordinance. And the further this went on, the madder I got."

Only 17 handguns have been turned in since the ban, and the crime rate, low from the beginning, hasn't changed.

In the village's general election in April, two trustees who voted for the ordinance and another who opposed it were re-elected. They were challenged by a former neo-Nazi and a new political party that labeled the law "a little dictatorial."

"I think that election was the most important thing of all in the ordinance issue," says Flickinger. "Our Action Party ticket won by a 2-1 margin over the We The People Party. To me that was a referendum, a mandate from the people."

The mayor says "outside interests" tried to run the election with a vigorous $40,000 campaign backed by such pro-gun groups as the NRA and the Second Amendment Foundation.

People Party candidate Seymour Primer denied the charges. "We received small donations from individual people but no funds from the NRA or Second Amendment Foundation," he says.

The constitutionality of the handgun ban was upheld 2-1 in January by a three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, a ruling binding only in the court's Illinois-Wisconsin-Indiana jurisdiction.

The panel stated that the Second Amendment for the right to bear arms is a limitation only on the powers of the federal government, not state or local municipalities. It affirmed Morton Grove's right, under the state's home-rule powers, to enact handgun restrictions.

Early in October, the United States Supreme Court refused to disturb the ruling. A review of the ordinance by the Illinois Supreme Court is pending.

The high court decision was hailed by Flickinger.

Michael Beard, executive director of the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, says: "Communities all over the country have been asking, 'Can you enact a handgun ordinance ban and live to tell about it?' Yes, you can! Morton Grove fired a shot that has been heard 'round the country."

The ordinance, which became effective in February 1982, prohibits the sale and possession of handguns within the borders of the village. Exceptions were provided for law enforcement officers, licensed gun collectors and certain others.

Violators are liable for fines ranging from $50 to $500 or up to six months in jail.

Since the ban, convictions have been obtained on three arrests.

A survey by the Chicago Tribune of two dozen communities that had asked Morton Grove for copies of its handgun law found only one reacting to the ruling by opening debate on it.

After the high court's decision, Morton Grove's neighbor, Skokie, rejected a handgun ban on a 4-3 vote by the trustees.

But last year neighboring Evanston enacted a similar law, and Chicago followed with an ordinance banning registration of new handguns in the city, although people already owning them were allowed to keep them.

On Nov. 2, 1982, California voters overwhelmingly rejected Proposition 15 billed by both sides as a true test of the will of the people regarding the handgun issue.

Simple remedies can help save the world's children

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Half of the estimated 40,000 children in developing countries who die each day from malnutrition, dehydration and illness could be saved through simple, low-cost remedies, the U.N. Children's Fund said today.

Last year, 15 million young children died in developing countries — equal to the number of children under 5 years old in the United States, UNICEF Executive Director James P. Grant said in his annual State of the World's Children report.

"They do not die from exotic causes requiring sophisticated cures. And for every child that has died, another has been left blind or deaf or crippled or retarded," he said.

UNICEF believes that widespread use of such low-cost remedies as 10-cent salt and sugar packets, reintroduction of breastfeeding, expanded immunization and monthly weight checks to guard against "invisible malnutrition" could help cut those numbers in half.

There are indications that as infant mortality rates drop, birth rates fall because parents who are confident of their children's survival have fewer babies, Grant said in his 42-page report.

"A revolution in child survival is likely to result in a slowing down of the rate of population growth and to contribute to the stabilization of world population," Grant said.

"While the problems are severe and pervasive, UNICEF now offers new hope," said James Sheffield, president of the U.S. Committee for UNICEF. "To save millions of lives now lies within our grasp."

Oral rehydration therapy — salt and sugar mixed with water — has halved deaths from dehydration over one to two years in areas of Guatemala, India, Bangladesh, Honduras, Nicaragua and Egypt, studies show.

Three-fifths of the world's children are born in 70 countries where the infant mortality rate is higher than 50 deaths per 1,000 births. Some African countries have rates above 200 per 1,000, compared with industrialized nations.

Gas discovery may aid reservation

INDIAN VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — Substantial amounts of natural gas located beneath an East Texas Indian reservation will help ease poverty that has plagued the Alabama-Coushattas, tribal leaders say.

But Ray Apodaca, executive director of the Texas Indian Commission, vowed Wednesday the tribe won't go on a spending spree.

Union Oil Co. of California announced Tuesday workers had found a substantial natural gas reserve on the 4,000-acre reservation 75 miles northeast of Houston.

Leaders say they hope they will receive about $8 million in royalty payments over the next 20 years from this week's find and another strike brought in earlier this year.

The reservation has been in financial trouble for years. Median income of residents is about $6,500, about two-thirds of the national median per capita income.

The reservation has recorded revenues of $1 million this year but failed to show a profit. About 40 percent of the Indians suffer from diabetes, the highest rate in the nation. Apodaca said establishing a health clinic with a doctor is a top priority.

He said he hopes his tribe can avoid the mistakes made on other reservations who encountered windfalls.

Steinkuhler claims Lombardi Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Dean Steinkuhler, a hulking offensive guard for the top-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers, shared the honor of being college football's best lineman with the nation's top running back.

Steinkuhler, 6-foot-3 and 275 pounds, won the 14th annual Lombardi Award on Thursday night over Doug Dawson of Texas, Bill Fralic of Pittsburgh and Reggie White of Tennessee.

Part of the award, given in honor of the late Green Bay Packers Coach Vince Lombardi, belonged to Mike Rozier, winner of the 1983 Heisman Trophy, Steinkuhler said.

"Any time you have a guy like Mike behind you, it can't help but make the line look better," Steinkuhler said after receiving the award. "I want to thank Mike, without him I probably wouldn't be here. People don't get up on Sunday morning and read our (the offensive linemen's) stats in the paper."

The four finalists were chosen by a panel of 150 college football coaches, sports writers and sportscasters to receive the 40-pound block of granite that is given as the trophy. Results of the balloting were not released.

Steinkuhler is the Cornhuskers' fastest lineman ever, running 40 yards in 4.67 seconds.

A native of Burr, Neb., a rural community of 300, where he played only eight-man football for Sterling High School, Steinkuhler was selected to the AP's All-Big Eight team and was a second team All-American.

"I don't know if this is the biggest thing to ever happen to Burr, Nebraska, but it's definitely the biggest thing to ever happen to Dean Steinkuhler. Most kids from small towns don't get the chance to play football for a major university," he said.

He was described by his coach, Tom Osborne, as "possibly the best lineman" he has seen in his 20 years of coaching at Nebraska. "The main thing about Dean is his speed and balance," Osborne said.

"He has good coordination. He is strong and very intelligent and you just don't find guys that size who could move like that. I think that's why the pros and everybody who's seen him play are quite impressed with him."

Even as a junior, playing with with All-American, 1982 Lombardi winner and two-time Outland Trophy winner Dave Rimington and all-Big Eight linemen Randy Theiss and Mike Mandelko, Steinkuhler consistently graded highest.

"A lot of people have compared me to Dave. I really don't see how they can. I used Dave as a leader. He has helped me get where I am today," Steinkuhler said.

This year Steinkuhler was the foundation of a line that a number of opposing coaches said was among the best they had ever seen.

Rozier continually credited the offensive line for opening holes that helped him become only the second man ever to rush for more than 2,000 yards in a collegiate season, gaining 2,148.

"Those guys open holes anybody could run through," said Rozier.

'Skins favored over Dallas

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Perhaps Joe Theismann put it best. "Dallas has been playing a lot of 60-minute games," said the Washington Redskins' quarterback. "We've been playing a lot of 45-minute games."

The Redskins have, indeed, scored early and often, rolling over most of their opponents (two losses by a total of two points) while the Cowboys (two losses by a total of three points) have had to come from behind a lot this season, starting with their season-opening 31-30 victory in Washington.

That loss has been eating at Washington for 13 weeks now, and there's no doubt the Redskins will be wild-eyed when they hit the Texas Stadium turf Sunday.

In past years, the 'Skins might have been expected to collapse under the pressure of such an important game, but their 31-17 demolition of Dallas in last year's National Conference championship put that to rest.

The Cowboys can lose and still win the NFC East title next week. But for the Redskins, it all hinges on this one. Without a win, they get nothing more than a wild card. And they want more. They want it all. And they want it now! Take Washington plus 3 over DALLAS.

Pittsburgh, with Cliff Stoudt crumbling at quarterback, has lost three in a row and has looked horrible in the last two, so Coach Chuck Noll has called upon Terry Bradshaw, not so much for his healed right arm as for his spiritual healing powers.

Noll is not one to make rash decisions. He knows Bradshaw may not be physically 100 percent. But he also knows that the Steelers' sagging confidence will get a massive boost just by Bradshaw's presence on the field.

All but lost in the excitement over Bradshaw's return is the fact that Saturday's game is the New York Jets' last at Shea Stadium. For that finale, take Pittsburgh plus 2½ over the JETS.

In other games (home teams capitalized), take:

L.A. RAIDERS minus 9½ over St. Louis
Cleveland minus 7 over HOUSTON
L.A. RAMS minus 6½ over New England
SAN DIEGO minus 4 over Kansas City
Seattle minus 3 over N.Y. GIANTS
MINNESOTA minus 2 over Chicago
San Francisco minus 2 over BUFFALO
CINCINNATI minus 1½ over Detroit
New Orleans plus 1 over

PHILADELPHIA
TAMPA BAY plus 3½ over Green Bay
Atlanta plus 8 over MIAMI
Baltimore plus 9 over DENVER

Last week's picks against the spread: 5-7-1. For the season: 87-95-9.

Can top Dems halt primary chaos?

By Robert J. Wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) — We might be nearing the end of the season's longest-running political soap opera: the continuing battle over the Democratic Party's primary schedule.

The controversy centers on the party's effort to bring order to its primary season by decreeing that all primaries and caucuses must take place between March 13 and June 12. There were two exceptions: the New Hampshire primary, which could take place one week earlier, and the Iowa caucus, scheduled for the weekend before the New Hampshire primary. The exceptions were made because the two states had followed the same schedules for many years.

Then Vermont roiled the waters by scheduling a non-binding "beauty contest" for March 6 — the original date of the New Hampshire primary — and Maine followed suit by moving its primary to March 4. New Hampshire feared that the impact of its primary would be diluted, and it advanced its primary by one week — and then Iowa followed suit by moving its caucus one week ahead.

Democratic National Committee Chairman

Charles Manatt said that the DNC would stick to its guns: If New Hampshire and Iowa stuck to their week-ahead plan, he said, the party would not recognize delegates from those states. Instead, the DNC would adopt an alternative means of selecting official convention delegates.

Since this pronouncement, the factions involved have hardened their positions. The DNC has approved the March 4 Maine test. New Hampshire reaffirmed a Feb. 28 date, and Iowa followed suit by voting to hold its caucus on Feb. 20.

In doing so, Iowa tried to shift the blame to New Hampshire, saying it was moving its caucus ahead only because New Hampshire was moving up its primary. Iowa agreed to move its caucus back to Feb. 28 — the date preferred by the DNC — if New Hampshire would move its primary back to March 6.

In his response, New Hampshire party chief George Bruno said that state law binds him to schedule his primary a week earlier than any other. Therefore, he said, New Hampshire must hold its primary on Feb. 28. He tried to shift the blame back on the DNC by noting that they had approved the earlier Maine and Vermont tests.

The candidates find all of this maddening. They still don't know when the early primaries will be, or even if the Iowa and New Hampshire contests will count. All of their plans have been based on the eight days between the Iowa and New Hampshire contests, but the two contests could end up taking place on successive days. The candidates might even have to return to both states at a later date to campaign in a second "official" contest — and this after they've used up all of the funds that federal election laws let them spend in each state.

Therefore, the candidates have now stepped rather forcefully into the fray: They've told Manatt to get the matter straightened out — and fast.

Manatt seems to be softening his stance. In one meeting with reporters, he said the dispute has become counterproductive and could impede the election of Democrats from the states involved.

However, despite his conciliatory words, neither side is yet backing off. All of those involved seem to be looking for a compromise, but the only compromise might occur when the national party accepts the dates as they now stand.

SEN. EDWARD KENNEDY'S travel schedule is being viewed with more than a little suspicion by several people in the Democratic Party — especially those in the presidential contenders' camps.

For the last few weeks, Kennedy has been traveling the country "investigating" poverty. During his visits, he holds "hearings" — with poor people and workers from social-service agencies as witnesses — and talks with clients of soup kitchens and similar facilities.

Typical of Kennedy's visits was one to San Francisco, in which he visited a free meal program run by the Franciscan priests, who feed more than 2,000 people daily, and met with senior citizens, hearing of the hardships their limited fixed incomes entail.

The visit received major media coverage in the Bay area and throughout California, and a visit to Minneapolis drew the same kind of attention, including network coverage. In addition, Kennedy's visits to Detroit, Pittsburgh and rural Kentucky probably will be major regional media events.

Living in space

Throughout history, people have had an urge to reach out and settle new regions. From the Arctic to the tropics, people have moved and prospered.

Now unexplored reaches of space lie open for settlement. Plans for several types of space colonies already exist. Orbital space may soon become like the Old West — the preserve of rugged miners and builders, dreamers and soldiers.

The path toward space colonization can be seen clearly in projects proposed over the next 20 years.

Skylab and Salyut are precursors of true space stations. The Soviet Union is reportedly formulating plans for a jigsaw space platform of rockets with a central pad.

The Johnson Space Center in Houston, meanwhile, has plans for an American space station that would orbit some 300 kilometers above the planet. Eight to 12 people would inhabit the $9 billion facility and coordinate American activity in space.

Another U.S. plan is less ambitious. It envisions a station somewhat like that of the Russians, consisting of a number of Spacelab modules docked together at a cost of just $1 billion. By the end of the '80s such space stations will be launched.
