Homecoming for Marines depends on Gemayel's success

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The prospects for peace in Lebanon and an early homecoming for the Marines may hinge on President Amin Gemayel's success in persuading the United States and Israel to amend or abandon the troop withdrawal pact they signed May 17.

Gemayel and his supporters scored a temporary victory during their five-day reconciliation meeting by resisting demands by Syria and its Lebanese allies that the conference cancel the agreement immediately.

But the nine Lebanese leaders left Geneva over the weekend convinced the agreement, as it now stands, remains a major obstacle to ending Lebanon's eight-year ordeal of civil strife and ridding the country of Syrian, Israeli, Palestinian and other foreign forces.

It is now up to Gemayel to work with the United States,

An Associated Press news analysis

Israel and other parties to find some way of changing parts of the agreement rejected by Syria and its allies, including Druse leader Walid Jumblatt.

Otherwise, the Americans and Israelis will face either a long, dangerous stay in an unstable Lebanon or the need to force Syria to change its mind on the accord. Israel, in signing the accord, stipulated it would withdraw its troops only if Syria did likewise, and the Syrians thus far have refused.

Until the issue is resolved, prospects for the rival factions to reach lasting decisions quickly on other problems, such as reforming Lebanon's political system,

The delegates agreed to return to Geneva Nov. 14, appear dim. As long as Israeli and Syrian forces confront one another in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, chances for a new round of fighting remain high.

During the conference, Foreign Minister Abdel-Halim Khaddam of Syria denounced the accord, which grants Israel major political, economic and security guarantees and ends the formal state of war which has existed with Israel since 1948.

But Gemayel argued that Lebanon had no current alternative to the agreement. Sources said Lebanese opposition groups concluded that some sort of agreement with Israel was necessary, and agreed to let Gemayel try to negotiate something more acceptable to them.

though the plan may be changed depending on Gemayel's contacts. "The fireball was returned to the American playground," said the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir.

Opposition sources have suggested the agreement could be replaced by some new arrangement under which Syria and Lebanon would guarantee the security of Israel's northern border without agreeing to economic or political relations.

Whether the United States and Israel would accept such an arrangement remains questionable. Both countries have stuck by the accord, which was negotiated under U.S. auspices. But David Kimche, director general of Israel's Foreign Ministry and one of the principal negotiators, refused to rule out changes if all Lebanese factions together demanded them.

Court leaves Amarillo case ruling intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to prohibit the nation's police departments from disciplining unmarried officers who have sex with each other.

The court, by a 6-3 vote, left intact rulings that allowed the Amarillo, Texas, Police Department in 1977 to suspend Patrolwoman Janet Shawgo and suspend and demote Sgt. Stanley Whisenhunt.

The two, who subsequently resigned from the police force and are now married, contended that the disciplinary action violated their privacy rights.

Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun voted to hear arguments in the case. Four votes are needed, however, to grant such review.

Whisenhunt and Ms. Shawgo began dating while both were employed by the police department. They worked different shifts, and Whisenhunt was not Ms. Shawgo's supervisor.

When the city's chief of police learned that Ms. Shawgo was occasionally spending the night at Whisenhunt's apartment, she was suspended for 12 days without pay. Whisenhunt also was suspended for 12 days without pay, and was demoted to the rank of patrolman.

Ms. Shawgo had been a policewoman for about a year. Whisenhunt was an 11-year veteran.

After the disciplinary action was upheld by the Amarillo Civil Service Commission, the two police officers sued Chief of Police Lee Spradlin, the city and commission members. The suit sought back pay and monetary damages.

A federal trial judge and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the police department's actions had not violated the couple's privacy rights.

"We can ascertain a rational connection between the exigencies of department discipline and forbidding members of a quasi-military unit, especially those different in rank, to share an apartment or to cohabit," the appeals court said.

Syrians go on alert; fear attack by U.S.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — PLO mutineers in north Lebanon bombarded Yasser Arafat's last stronghold with up to 50 shells a minute today, and the state radio said the barrage forced the guerrilla chief to retreat into Tripoli.

Lebanese police said more than 1,000 people have been killed and 3,000 wounded since the PLO rebels began their attack Thursday, many of them Palestinian refugees in squalid camps outside Tripoli and residents in the port city.

Syria put its armed forces on alert and declared a general military mobilization today. Sources in Damascus said Syria feared a U.S.

attack in retaliation for the terrorist bombing of Marines in Beirut.

State-run Damascus radio blared messages to Syrian reservists to report at once to active duty with the 220,000-man army. One source, who spoke on condition he not be named, said the government of President Hafez Assad has "decreed a status of full mobilization" throughout the country without officially announcing it.

Many reservists confirmed privately that they have been ordered to join active service for the first time since the Syrian-Israeli cease-fire in the Lebanon war was proclaimed 14 months ago.

Terrorists truck bombed installations of the U.S. and French contingents of the multinational force in Beirut on Oct. 23, killing at least 230 American servicemen and 58 French soldiers.

Last Friday another truck bomb at the Israeli military headquarters in Tyre killed 28 Israelis and 32 Lebanese and Palestinians. A Shiite Moslem group with allegiance to Iran's fundamentalist Islamic regime has claimed responsibility for all three attacks.

Some U.S. officials have said they believe Syria may have known about the Beirut bombings but have not specifically accused the Syrians.

Computer gap seen in schools of Texas

DALLAS (AP) — A gap is emerging between schools that have computers and those that don't because of funding inequities state officials say they haven't been able to correct.

"The rich get richer and the poor play video games," said Sandy Pratscher, who was hired a year ago to develop a statewide plan for classroom computers. "There's no question there's a discrepancy."

Use of computers in Texas classrooms has tripled in the past year and now more than half of all the state's schools use computers, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

According to Market Data Retrieval Inc. statistics, 3,085, or 57.6 percent, of the state's schools have computers this year, compared to 872, or 16.4 percent, in 1981.

"Everybody feels they have to get on board," Ms. Pratscher said of the state's schools. "They've bought computers even if they weren't prepared for them."

But many schools who can't afford to buy the equipment and software are being left behind, she said.

The Texas Education Agency has been mostly unsuccessful trying to iron out the inequities, said Joe Neely, TEA director of special programs.

"Funding is the big issue now," Neely said. "Most computers are bought with local money. The schools that are the richest have money for them. The poorest schools can qualify for some federal funds. It's the ones in the middle that sometimes get left out."

"This puts a strain on them," he said. "It certainly opens up the question of equity."

Texas schools primarily are using computers in high school programming classes and for mathematics drills in elementary schools, Ms. Pratscher said.

In some school districts, students are writing programs, using word processors to write English themes and hooking up to data-retrieval systems.

But many schools, according to a nationwide survey by Market Data Retrieval, have entered the computer age blind.

"I think a lot of schools bought computers because of parental pressure," said John Hood, vice president of marketing for Market Data Retrieval.

"It was a little surprising but we found quite a number of schools using more than one brand of computer. Some of the software is not as advanced as the computers," he said.

TEA has drafted guidelines for computer literacy, which have been presented to the State Board of Education for adoption.

"We're urging districts to slow down," said Ms. Pratscher.

Louisiana gets execution okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today gave Louisiana permission to proceed with plans to execute Robert Wayne Williams, who was convicted in 1979 of the shotgun slaying of a grocery store security guard.

By a 6-3 vote, the court overruled a federal appeals court which temporarily prevented Louisiana officials from scheduling a date with the electric chair for the convicted killer.

Williams was sentenced to death for the murder of 67-year-old Willie Kelly, a guard at a grocery store.

Lot of issues on ballots Tuesday

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

The annual moose hunt could be banned in Maine, non-smokers in San Francisco offices could be guaranteed smoke-free work space, and Cambridge, Mass., could turn itself into a "nuclear freeze zone" in voting Tuesday on state and local ballot issues.

In other voting, New York state will decide on a $1.25 billion transportation bond issue, and St. Louis considers a $63.5 million school bond issue as a way to finance court-ordered desegregation.

There are 54 measures on ballots in 11 states and the District of Columbia, including initiatives, referendums and constitutional questions, according to the Free Congress Foundation in Washington, which tracks referendum.

In San Francisco, voters will decide whether to keep a city ordinance that requires non-smoking areas in workplaces if non-smokers request them. Another issue there would redraft the city's master plan to place tough environmental restrictions on future construction.

Grenadian gravesite found

Reports indicate over 100 bodies discovered

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — American officials say a gravesite has been discovered on Grenada that may contain the body of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and others killed in the coup that prompted the U.S.-led invasion.

State Department official John Steinmetz said in Washington that tests will be conducted to determine the identity of the bodies, which were found Sunday. He said department personnel in Grenada did not specify how many bodies were in the gravesite, but other reports indicated more than 100 bodies had been found.

Bishop and a number of key supporters were killed Oct. 19 after a confrontation with soldiers loyal to the hardline Marxist leaders of the coup. Several witnesses have said Bishop and the others were executed.

Governor General Sir Paul Scoon, recognized by U.S. officials as Grenada's acting head of government, is expected to announce today or Tuesday the fate of Gen. Hudson Austin and former Deputy Prime Minister Bernard Coard, architects of the coup.

The two men were moved Sunday from a U.S. helicopter carrier lying off the coast of Grenada and were taken, handcuffed and stripped to the waist, to a prison in St. George's. The two had been held on the vessel for their own safety, military authorities said.

Today, residents of the small Caribbean island were working to end the disruption resulting from the coup and the invasion. Telephone and cables lines were restored over the weekend, and commercial flights were scheduled to resume today.

Government workers were to receive their first paychecks since U.S. Marines and Army paratroopers invaded Oct. 25. And the first load of bananas in two weeks — the chief export crop here — was shipped off to Great Britain.

U.S. Army helicopters dropped hundreds of leaflets Sunday over northern and central Grenada, urging residents to cooperate in locating Grenadian army or Cuban resisters still holding out against the occupying forces. Children scrambled for the swirling sheets of paper in hopes dollars were falling from the sky.

Officials said U.S. aid to Grenada in the wake of the invasion was likely to far surpass the $3 million announced by President Reagan.

William Wheeler, the East Caribbean director for the federal Agency for International Development (AID), said the agency had already spent about a half million additional dollars, including grants for collection of mounds of residential garbage.

Another AID official, Ted Morse, announced that a military damage claims center would open today in St. George's.

Claims of up to $25,000 will be settled here, while larger claims will be decided in Washington, Morse said.

Part of the $3 million pledged by Reagan will be used to help rebuild the mental hospital that Washington said was accidentally bombed during the invasion. The attack killed 16 people.

Three separate congressional groups also continued their fact-finding missions on the island.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Latin America and a frequent critic of Reagan administration policy, said he had come to the "reluctant" conclusion the invasion was justified because U.S. citizens in Grenada had a "reasonable" fear for their safety. Barnes is a member of a 14-man delegation appointed by House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

A privately funded group of four conservative Republican congressmen also is touring Grenada, and Senate Armed Forces Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, arrived Sunday on his own fact-finding mission.

Meanwhile, U.S. military cargo planes flew another 100 Cuban detainees to Barbados on the first leg of their journey back to Havana. The remaining 300, including Cuban Embassy personnel, were expected to be off the island by Wednesday — the date Scoon is expected to name Grenada's new interim government.

Scoon, who is Queen Elizabeth II's representative in this Commonwealth-member state, said he will name a seven- to nine-member panel of "technocrats," with no politicians among them, to govern until elections can be held.

Job Hunter

Emmett Teakell, 26, of 844 E. Scott, has joined the ranks of those looking for a more settled and permanent employment.

"It doesn't matter what it is, as long as it's not cross-country truck driving again," he said.

Married and with two children, he found the cross-country driving was taking too much time away from his family.

He has lived in the Pampa area all of his life, "and I'd kind of like to stay here," he said. He attended Pampa public schools.

He feels oil field or feedlot operations have given him the most skills, "things I can do best."

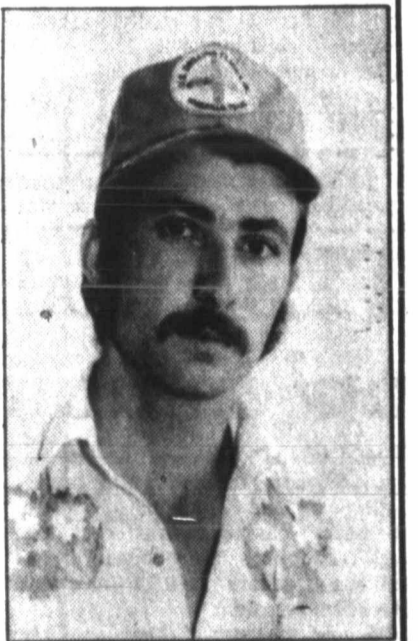

He has worked on drilling rigs, cable tool rigs, well servicing pulling units and wire line units for oil well completions. He has been employed with Windsor Servicing Co., GOWireline and Serfco.

He feels he has the most experience in oil field work. "It's all familiar to me," Teakell said.

He worked with Serfco for three years until laid off in May. There he was a warehouseman and purchasing agent, also working in receiving and shipping and in warehouse control (inventory).

"I can operate just about any type of heavy equipment that's available," he said, and drive "just about any truck on the road."

Teakell has also worked in feedlots and "cowboyed a little," he said.

EMMETT TEAKELL

He was driving truck cross-country for Jack B. Kelley Co. of Amarillo until three weeks ago.

References may be obtained from Serfco, Windsor, Jack B. Kelley Co. and GOWireline, he said.

He can be contacted at home at 665-0140. He also is registered with the Texas Employment Commission and may be contacted through that office.

ANNIVERSARY PARADE — These T-72 tanks rumbled through Red Square in Moscow Monday in the traditional military parade marking the Bolshevik Revolution. President Yuri Andropov failed to appear. (AP Laserphoto)

Ailing Andropov is no-show at Bolshevik anniversary parade

MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov was too ill today to attend a major military parade marking the 66th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution that brought the Communist Party to power.

It was believed to be the first time a Soviet leader has failed to attend the annual celebration in Red Square. It also was the second major event of the holiday weekend marked by the 69-year-old Andropov's conspicuous absence, further fueling speculation that he is seriously ill.

A government spokesman said he missed a speech Saturday night at the Kremlin Palace of Congresses because of a cold. He has not been seen in public in 111 days.

Andropov's predecessor, Leonid I. Brezhnev, last year climbed the stairs to the reviewing stand atop Lenin's tomb and stood an hour in freezing weather to view the parade. He died three days later of a heart attack.

This year, Red Square was bathed in sun and the temperature was an unseasonably high 46 degrees as tanks, armored personnel carriers and missiles mounted on trucks rumbled over the cobblestones.

Despite his absence, evidence that Andropov remained firmly in power was plentiful. A 9-foot-tall portrait of Andropov was displayed in the first float that followed the military hardware.

It was trailed by much smaller pictures of his 10 fellow Politburo members, many of whom watched the high-precision drill from the reviewing stand about 20 feet above the red granite and marble mausoleum at the base of the red brick Kremlin wall.

The parade was led by Defense Minister Marshal Dmitri F. Ustinov, a Politburo member, who rode in a grey convertible. He climbed the mausoleum after reviewing his crack troops, and gave a speech mentioning Andropov's Oct. 27 interview with the newspaper Pravda, in which the Soviet leader expressed new flexibility on arms control issues but threatened to end the Geneva negotiations if the West deployed new medium-range missiles in Europe.

Ustinov was flanked by Konstantin U. Chernenko and Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov.

On Aug. 18 a group of U.S. senators saw Andropov in what apparently was his last public appearance.

Congress shelves foreign crises, resumes battles over money bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, its attention for the past two weeks riveted to hostilities in Lebanon and Grenada, returns this week to the spending battlefield and renewed skirmishes over major money bills.

The Senate was to resume work today on the largest military spending measure in the nation's history, one that would earmark $25.2 billion for the Pentagon for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

But before the Senate can finish the bill, it is expected to deal with several major amendments — including one by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., to eliminate $2.1 billion for construction of the first 21 MX international ballistic nuclear missiles.

The Democrat-controlled House turned back a challenge to the MX money by a nine-vote margin last week before approving its version of the legislation.

An attempt may also be made in the Republican-led Senate to restore money to the bill to allow the Pentagon to begin producing a new generation of nerve gas weapons. Sponsors are hopeful that the Senate can vote final passage of the bill by late Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Congress faces a midnight Thursday deadline for providing funds to keep much of the government operating. The process may be complicated if House Democratic leaders follow through with their plans to try to add to the emergency bill nearly $1 billion for various aid-to-education programs, a move that could provoke a presidential veto.

The spending bill — due up in the House on Tuesday and in the Senate on Wednesday — is needed because many federal agencies have not yet received money from Congress and an earlier measure, giving them temporary funds since Oct. 1, is about to expire.

At the same time, Senate leaders were expected to press their search for a compromise that would avert another possible fiscal crisis — the need to raise the national debt limit above its current $1.389 trillion.

The House has already approved an increase in the debt limit — the government's borrowing authority — but the Senate refused to follow suit earlier last week.

The debt limit was reached last Tuesday without major impact on federal operations. But Treasury Department officials say the real crunch will come if Congress has not acted by Nov. 15 at the latest.

The House today was scheduled to consider a major dairy bill, one that would trim government support prices for milk and begin a 15-month program of paying dairy farmers not to produce. The Senate already has passed a nearly identical bill.

Meat producers oppose the bill, claiming that its incentives would idle up to 30 percent of dairy herds, resulting in large numbers of dairy cows being slaughtered, flooding the market with meat and depressing their prices.

The Senate also is expected to take action this week on legislation to renew the Civil Rights Commission, embroiled in controversy since President Reagan fired three of its six members last month.

Authority for the panel technically expired Sept. 30. A move led by Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and Joseph Biden, D-Del., to restructure the commission as a congressionally appointed body has already gained 54 Senate sponsors.

Also pending action in the Senate is a House-passed measure that would require American forces to be withdrawn from Grenada by Dec. 24 unless Congress allows them to stay longer. But the Senate's Republican leadership is expected to sit on the bill and postpone a vote, in light of the administration's reported plans to begin withdrawing troops within the next few days.

TI officials say they 'screwed up' in home computer business

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. is beginning to regroup after taking "a torpedo" and bailing out of a home computer business that cost the high-technology giant hundreds of millions of dollars, says TI Chairman Mark Shepherd Jr.

"A good measure of the fiber of an outfit is: Does it go into a tailspin, or does it pick its pants up and go on to win the next one?" asked Shepherd. "We're going to pick our pants up."

TI announced Oct. 28 that it would quit making its 99-4A personal computer after losing more than $100 million for the second quarter in a row.

Just nine months ago, Dallas-based TI boasted in a letter to stockholders that sales of the 99-4A had "favorably impacted profitability" and would continue to soar.

But since then, TI's home computer division had gobbled up nearly $700 million in the first nine months of the year, consuming the profits of TI operations in semiconductors, military radar and missile guidance systems.

"I have no excuse for that (the failure in home computers) other than we screwed up," said TI President J. Fred Bucy.

"When you've got a serious hemorrhage, you've got to stop it," he said. "How long do you want the bleeding to go on before you put on a tourniquet?"

TI turned a modest profit in the first quarter of the year but lost $119 million in the second quarter and another $110 million in the third, largely because of its ailing home computer division, the company said.

"An operation like that (the home computer division) is something like a cancer," Shepherd told the Dallas Times Herald. "It sucks up a disproportionate amount of management's time, keeps everyone concerned and worried. It's very disruptive."

"Yeah, we took a torpedo," Shepherd said. "But the ship is not going to sink."

Bucy said the company has fared well during the past two years, an tumultuous period in the electronics industry.

TI weathered a two-year recession, waged a costly battle with Japanese competitors, watched an oil glut eat up profits in TI's seismic survey operations, and survived "the debacle of the home computer," Bucy said.

Study shows Bell executives' pay is more than counterparts

DALLAS (AP) — A study finding that Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. executives earn as much as 21 percent more than their counterparts make at other corporations is evidence that the utility pays its management too much, says a state-appointed consumer advocate.

The confidential study commissioned by Southwestern Bell shows the greatest disparity in pay among lower- and middle-level supervisors.

The study is part of the information Bell supplied with its request with the Public Utility Commission for a $1.36 billion rate increase but was not intended to be revealed to the public, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Public Counsel Jim Boyle, who is opposing Bell's attempt to double the cost of local telephone service in Texas, said the study bolsters arguments that Bell's management salaries are "excessive."

"If, in effect, Southwestern Bell is a regulated quasi-governmental entity, which in my opinion it is, then the salaries that are paid the executives are far out of line in terms of what the ratepayer ought to have to bear," Boyle said.

Bell officials, however, said the telephone company must pay its employees enough to attract and keep competent workers.

"The telephone company is a business," Bell spokesman Dale Johnson said. "It is operated in a businesslike and efficient manner."

"The people who are operating it, at the upper levels especially, are doing so at levels of pay, which in many instances are much less than comparable levels of pay elsewhere," he said.

The study is included in a series of Southwestern Bell documents that reveal how much consumers pay for executives' salaries and fringe benefits. Bell is asking the Public Utility Commission for $67 million in raises — $23 million for management increases and $44 million for contract wage increases for non-management workers.

Details of the study, which was conducted by the Hay and Associates consulting firm of New York, were released recently by the Kansas Corporation Commission which is considering Bell's $213.7 million rate increase request for that state.

Bell says the information includes "trade secrets," but the Kansas panel ruled that consumers who wanted to testify on the rate increase request were entitled to the salary information.

The survey separated management salaries into five levels.

In the lowest-paying executive level, about 17,849 employees in the five-state Southwestern Bell system, including about 8,290 in Texas, earn an average salary of $33,200, which is 21 percent higher than the $27,400 average salary earned by supervisors of similar rank in other companies.

In the second-level, about 5,893 employees, including about 2,283 in Texas, earn average salaries of $42,600, which are 15.4 percent higher than the $36,900 average salary earned in other firms.

Salaries in the other three levels are much closer to the norm.

In the third tier, which includes district-level managers, about 1,347 employees, about 488 of whom are in Texas, earn an average of $52,900. The norm was $49,300 — 7.3 percent less.

In the fourth level, about 363 employees, including 103 in Texas, earn an average of $67,300, 1 percent more than the $66,500 average salary. The 102 managers in the fifth level, 26 of whom are in Texas, earn $93,600. The norm was $90,200.

Johnson said that one reason Bell's salaries were higher than other companies surveyed was that its managers had accumulated more seniority than comparable managers at similar firms.

Lucas to plead innocent, lawyer says

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas will plead innocent to a murder charge today in the slaying of a 15-year-old girl, his attorney says.

Lucas, a drifter who claims to have killed 165 people in several states, is accused of slaying Frieda Powell of Jacksonville, Fla. Her body was found along a Denton County highway after Lucas led officers to her shallow grave.

Lucas introduced the teen-ager as his common-law wife "Becky" after she accompanied him to Texas in early 1982. The couple settled at a religious encampment in the North Texas town of Stoneburg.

In August 1982, Lucas told friends he and the teen-ager were driving to Florida, but he returned alone a few days later.

Prosecutors in the trial are expected to introduce a videotaped statement in which Lucas describes the slaying.

Lucas, 47, has detailed several dozen slayings to investigators and even drawn pictures of some of his victims.

But his court-appointed attorney, Tom Whitlock of Denton, said over the weekend that Lucas is "worn to a frazzle" from talking to investigators from across the country and now plans to remain silent.

Lucas was arrested last June in nearby Montague for possessing a pistol, a violation of his parole. Since then, he has been charged with 12 slayings in Texas, Florida and Louisiana.

He is charged with capital murder in three Texas cases, in which the maximum penalty is death by injection.

The first case in which he was charged was the slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich of Ringgold, whose bones were found in Lucas' wood-burning stove.

Lucas pleaded guilty and was sentenced Sept. 30 to 75 years in prison for that murder. Last week, however, he requested a new trial in the Rich slaying, saying the case should be reopened because all the facts were not heard.

In 1960, Lucas was convicted of killing his mother in Michigan. In 1971, after his parole on the murder charge, Lucas was returned to prison for attempting to kidnap two young girls.

In 1975, he was paroled again and began what authorities say was a nationwide murder spree. Most of the crimes described by Lucas were sexually oriented, investigators say, and many of the victims were mutilated.

Ottis Toole, a convicted arsonist imprisoned in Florida, has admitted to joining Lucas in many of the slayings.

Opposing cook-off camps see red

TERLINGUA, Texas (AP) — What started out as a joke 17 years ago turned into a somewhat heated battle between two competing camps who say theirs is this West Texas town's original chili cook-off.

At one site was the Original Terlingua World Chili Cookoff, held at the same place previous cook-offs in Arriba Terlingua have occurred and run by the newly formed Terlingua trust.

Four miles away was a rival cook-off organized by Dallas restaurateur Frank X. Tolbert, one of the cook-off pioneers in 1967.

"I never thought it would come to this," said "Little" Pete Anderson, an 80-year-old Brownwood restaurant owner who never has missed a Terlingua cook-off. "I've been coming here all along, and now I can't even say which is the original."

To keep his record intact, Anderson attended both on Saturday.

Both camps used T-shirts, posters and buttons to lure spectators. The Terlingua Trust offered 2½ beers to anyone who would buy a $7 ticket rather than enter the Tolbert camp.

Because of lawsuits, Tolbert's camp billed itself as the nineteenth Annual Original Terlingua Chili Appreciation Society International Championship Chili Cookoff & Wick Fowler Memorial.

Both sides, of course, were declaring victory.

The Terlingua Trust said it drew 5,000 spectators, while the opposition claimed a turnout of 3,000 and blamed its competition's beer bribes for the lower number.

Tolbert's group drew 93 cooks, 47 more than the Terlingua Trust. The latter group, however, said their qualifying rules were less stringent.

The chili demonstrations included Tex Swindle's Medicine Show, the Slap Happy Cookers and the Shady Bunch, a Lubbock wash tub band. Spectators wore buttons proclaiming, "I am not drunk" and "Chili is my life."

"This is what it's all about," said Beth Moon of Hurst as she prepared her "gin-u-wine" chili — made with moonshine and chicken lips — at Tolbert's camp.

The Terlingua Trust crowned Paul Brian, a media consultant from Dallas, the best cook for a concoction he calls "Dioxin." The Tolbert camp's champion, Houston mechanic David Talbot, won for a recipe he calls "The Silver Bullets."

Both winners also said they yearned for a united Terlingua.

Engineers find other ride defects

DALLAS (AP) — Engineers have found defects in another gondola on a Texas State Fair amusement ride that they say made it more dangerous than the car that tore loose from the ride last month.

The slow dismantling of the Enterprise ride, which began Saturday, had turned up fractures and welds in two of four cars inspected, officials said Sunday.

One person was killed and 16 people were injured Oct. 17 when car No. 1 ripped from the spinning ride and sailed 40 feet onto the midway.

But Russell Smith, an attorney for the fair, said Sunday that car No. 19 appeared to be more defective than No. 1.

"No. 19 had a fracture of its main member," Smith said. "That's a significant finding. It's a significant fracture. The other (No. 1) did not have it."

The frame on car No. 19 was broken at a main joint under the flooring of the car, and a piece of metal that joined the gondola frame at the top had broken and was missing from the car, engineers said.

That car "could have broken loose as well," one engineer, who spoke on the condition that his name not be used, told the Dallas Morning News.

Discoveries of the defects Sunday led one attorney involved in the investigation to call for a nationwide shutdown of similar rides until experts can determine if they are safe.

"There apparently have been problems with this ride in the past and someone had attempted to weld them back together at the pressure points," said Frank L. Branson, a lawyer representing the family of William Wade Phillips, 19, who was killed in the accident.

Branson told the Dallas Times Herald that the breaks and welded repairs indicate the ride was designed or built in such a way that the cars could not handle the stress.

"Some of the things we've found out here today have been pretty frightening from a consumer point of view," Branson said. "There's an urgent need for the Consumer Product Safety Commission people to join the ride nationwide."

Branson said federal officials should shut down rides like the Enterprise manufactured by Heinrich Wilhelm Huss & Co. of West Germany until the welds are explained. There are 70 similar rides operating in the United States.

Attorneys to call girlfriend to stand

DALLAS (AP) — Defense attorneys say they would call the girlfriend of an armed robbery defendant to the stand today to support his contention that the charge stems from racism and faulty investigative work.

Anthony Williams, 25, testified Saturday that he was at home watching television with his girlfriend when a suburban convenience store was robbed of $31.

The black engineer told an all-white jury he had no idea why he was arrested last year by police in Greenville, 50 miles northeast of Dallas. He subsequently was charged with the Aug. 22 robbery of a Garland 7-Eleven store.

Williams' former roommate and coworker, Lenell Geter, was sentenced to life in prison last year for the robbery of a Balch Springs restaurant the day before the convenience store was robbed.

At Geter's trial, five eyewitnesses identified him as the robber, but nine co-workers said he was at work the day of the robbery.

Both men moved here from South Carolina last year to work for E-Systems, Inc.

Also taking the stand Saturday was a thrice-convicted felon who testified after authorities apprehended him through a telephone trace. James Samuel Wilson had called defense attorneys repeatedly with anonymous information he said cast doubt on the prosecution's star witness, Lyla Baggett.

Mrs. Baggett, a clerk at the convenience store, testified Thursday that she had "no doubt" Williams was the gunman who robbed her.

Wilson, who said he was Mrs. Baggett's nephew, testified outside the jury's presence that he once heard her plot to fake a robbery.

Wilson testified that in 1979, he was in Mrs. Baggett's apartment when she and a man whose name he could not remember discussed faking a robbery of the convenience store where she worked to steal the store's money.

Parents didn't recognize kidnapped daughter

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Richland Hills couple didn't recognize their daughter or her alleged abductor when they were shown photographs of them a week before the 7-month-old girl was found, according to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Investigators were so convinced Cherie Ann Kennedy was the infant living with Linda Lee Ashmore Gomez that they asked the woman to bring the baby to the station to be fingerprinted and photographed, the newspaper said in a copyright story Sunday.

Ms. Gomez, 32, was charged with abducting the Kennedy baby last week after she was arrested crossing the border into El Paso. Cherie Ann, who was abducted from a Fort Worth hospital May 10 by a woman posing as a nurse, was reunited with her parents Friday night.

The Fort Worth woman voluntarily went to Fort Worth police Oct. 26 with the baby, whom she called Monica and who she said was adopted, the Star-Telegram reported.

Photographs were taken of both Ms. Gomez and the infant, but Cherie Ann's parents did not recognize either, police said. Penny and Andrew Kennedy said they selected a picture of a woman who "resembled" the abductor, but the photo was of another woman.

"Neither Penny nor her mom (Adlain May of Haltom City) thought the baby was Cherie," Kennedy said, referring to the baby picture provided by police.

Photocopies of Cherie's fingerprints at birth, provided by John Peter Smith Hospital officials, were of such poor quality that a police fingerprint expert with more than 40 years of experience said he thought Monica's and Cherie's fingerprints were the same, but he could not testify to it in court.

The hospital refused to give police the original records until a court order was issued Thursday after Ms. Gomez's arrest in El Paso, the newspaper said.

Late Thursday, eight days after Ms. Gomez and Monica were photographed, fingerprinted and questioned by police, Monica was identified as Cherie, ending six months of anguish for the Kennedys.

Homicide Lt. T.C. Swan said Saturday that police received a telephone tip two weeks ago that suggested police and FBI agents investigate Ms. Gomez.

On Oct. 26, Swan said, Ms. Gomez voluntarily went to the homicide office, taking the girl she called Monica and Ms. Gomez's daughter, Amanda, who was born after the kidnapping. They were photographed, and Monica also was fingerprinted. Because seven months had passed, the fingerprints were nearly twice as large as the original birth prints.

Ms. Gomez agreed to take a polygraph examination and cooperate fully in the investigation. But Swan said police had not reached the point in their investigation where they wanted to give her a polygraph test. Shortly after she was questioned by police, Ms. Gomez disappeared and fled to New Mexico and El Paso.

"Once the mother and father couldn't identify the photographs, that almost closed the door" on Ms. Gomez as a suspect, Swan said.

Ms. Gomez was stopped by U.S. Customs agents as she crossed a Rio Grande bridge into El Paso Wednesday evening and charged on an automobile theft warrant. The two children were taken into custody.

Jewels & Gems

Topaz is the birthstone for the month of November. Although this stone comes in a variety of colors, yellow is the most familiar. The name "topaz" is derived from the Sanskrit word "topas" which means "fire". When incorporated into an amulet, the topaz is said to drive away sadness, strengthen intellect and bestow courage upon its wearer. The topaz is also credited with banishing the fear of death and insuring a peaceful demise. It gives its owner faith and charity, symbolizes true friendship, lasting love, intelligence and beauty. Of all its available colors, the violet-red topaz is the most valued.

Every gemstone and most semi precious stones have myths associated with them. Most people are particularly interested in the myth of their birthstone. At RHEAMS DIAMOND SHOP we will be happy to tell you the stories of any of our stones and happier still to help you select one that is perfect for your taste and budget. This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Reagan's dismissals bold political move

With Grenada and Lebanon dominating the news, domestic developments have received relatively little attention. But one domestic news story that should not be overlooked in President Reagan's firing of three incumbent members of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Reagan's recent dismissal of Commissioners Blandina Ramirez, Mary Frances Berry and Murray Saltzman was nearly as bold a move on the domestic front as the liberation of Grenada was in the international arena. With one swift, political stroke, the president has confounded his critics. The onus now is on Congress to either fill the three commission vacancies with Reagan's nominees or disband the entire commission.

Reagan sent his commission nomination to the Senate in May. The Senate Judiciary Committee, however, has yet to vote on them. Committee action has been blocked by intense opposition to the nominees from the civil rights establishment. Why? Lamentably, its members are more interested in imposing racial and ethnic quotas than in protecting individual rights.

All three Reagan nominees—Morris B. Abram, Robert A. Destro and John H. Bunzel—have impeccable civil rights credentials. But, to the horror of the civil rights establishment, they vigorously oppose quotas. The nominees realize, as does the president, that quotas are as discriminatory as the abuses they are supposed to correct.

Some members of Congress had hoped that Reagan eventually would compromise and agree to withdraw one, or possibly two, of the nominations. Even that, however, would not content the civil rights establishment. It has been lobbying for legislation that would have perpetuated the five commissioners in office. Never mind that the Constitution only provides life-time appointments for federal judges.

Reagan, however, hung tough. And rightly so. Nominating commission members is a presidential prerogative. The commission was created by Congress as part of the executive branch. By law, commission members serve at the president's pleasure.

With the firings, the commission no longer can conduct business. Four members are required for a quorum. Only three remain. Moreover, Congress thus far has not re-authorized the commission. As things stand, it is scheduled to go out of business at the end of next month.

Congress, as some have proposed, could create a new version of the commission and make it responsible to the legislative branch. Such a body, however, would obviously lack the prestige of a presidentially appointed commission. It might provide employment for quota advocates, but its work would have little impact.

Instead, Congress would better serve the cause of civil rights by recognizing that quotas advance only special group rights—not civil rights. President Reagan's highly qualified nominees should either be confirmed or the Civil Rights Commission shut down.

'Day After' leftist propaganda

NEW YORK (NEA) - In a business renowned for its cynicism, ABC television's forthcoming two-hour spectacular, "The Day After," has achieved, even before its airing, a sort of sleazy pre-eminence as the biggest package of ratings hype, raw shock value and blatant leftist propaganda ever thrown at the American people.

If it accomplishes its purpose, it will simultaneously put ABC well ahead of its rivals in the crucial "November sweeps" (which determine what viewers are watching, and therefore what the networks can charge for their commercials), scare the wits out of every impressionable individual (adult or otherwise) who sees it, and mightily aid the Kremlin in its strenuous effort to keep NATO from countering the 600 Russian IRBM's now deployed against Western Europe.

In case you came in late, "The Day After" is a ghastly fictional depiction of what would happen if war broke out between the U.S. and the Soviet Union and a Russian nuclear missile incinerated Kansas City. The action focuses on the plight of Lawrence, Kan., the next day. ABC has been very coy about letting potential critics see the picture in advance, but there is no mystery about it: viewers are unanimous in testifying to its grisliness. Just by way of example, 3,000 citizens of Lawrence were hired as extras to play corpses, and several of the local women, on seeing the finished product, were interviewed on film actually weeping with horror. Oh, it's going to be a lulu, in its own sick way.

By a funny coincidence, the picture will be aired from coast to coast on the ABC network on the evening of Nov. 20, which just happens to be about two weeks before the new Pershing II intermediate-range missiles are scheduled to start deployment in NATO Europe. These missiles are intended merely to match Soviet missiles already emplaced and aimed at Western Europe, but both Moscow and the so-called "peace" movement are pulling out all the stops to prevent their installation. President Reagan has repeatedly offered not to install the Pershings if Moscow will dismantle its own IRBM's, but the Russians prefer to leave theirs installed and block ours.

million spectacular on how dreadful some deaths by cancer can be; could that be considered a high public service?

Or suppose that - paying no attention whatever to those November sweeps, of course - ABC had persuaded 3,000 citizens of Lawrence, Kan., to let it film them in a simulated series of mass rapes, ostensibly to dramatize the awfulness of the crime of rape and its aftermath; wouldn't there be just a whiff of sensational exploitation on the breeze?

The bug-out brigade understands very well what ABC is up to, and is planning to precede, accompany and follow the film with a vast array of teach-ins, community meetings and candlelight vigils. As one of its national organizers rightly said, "What's most important is what happens the day after 'The Day After.'"

Nov. 21 will indeed be an important day. It will be a fine opportunity to show just how steady the nerves of the American people can be in the teeth of a concerted effort to scare them out of their wits - and a splendid chance to display their scathing contempt of a television network that would even try.

ABC's contribution to the debate will be several million hysterical women and children (and an unknown number of men), too paralyzed with fear to think. Rationally considered, of course, the deployment of the Pershings will be a major step in deterring the Soviet Union from the sort of bullying adventurism that might actually lead to war. But there will be plenty of people whose mental processes will be much too thoroughly incinerated by "The Day After" to take them even that far along the road to common sense. They will simply recoil in horror from any dealings with the notion of defense through nuclear deterrence - forgetting that it alone has kept peace between the superpowers for the past 38 years.

ABC has topped its cynicism with bland denials that "The Day After" traffics in sensationalism or has any political significance, whatsoever. According to Brandon Stoddard, president of ABC Motion Pictures, "The movie simply says that nuclear war is horrible. That is all it says." But if that is, in fact, all it says, who needs it? Suppose ABC had put together a grisly 97

"I've always loved the great outdoors — by the way, where's the thermostat?"

Needlepoints

The story about the Senate Rules Committee authorizing $1.6 million to buy office furniture for seven (count 'em) offices (or more than $200,000 per senator) was just the tip of the iceberg. What causes such extravagance is the year-end discovery that there's money left unspent in the budget, which might just possibly lead to somebody suggesting (gasp) that such a huge budget isn't necessary. It happens all over Washington this time of the year.

Predictably enough, there wasn't a land rush when the federal government offered 10,000 acres 325 miles northeast of Anchorage, Alaska, reachable only by foot or airplane to homesteaders. But a few hardy souls braved cold weather and snow to stake a claim on the American dream. Now if the government would just start allowing homesteading on some of the millions of acres it claims to own in the lower 48...

Is the private sector moribund? Reports of its death may have been greatly exaggerated. Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca recently announced that the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission, which he heads, has raised more than $40 million from private donations to renovate the Statue of Liberty in time for its centennial in 1986.

Plugging new books not easy

When you're out flogging a new book, which I've been doing for the last three weeks, you run into some interesting people.

No one is too big in this country to refuse the publisher's request to appear on talk shows.

I've been on radio, television and newspaper interviews in every town from Kalamazoo to Burbank. Whenever I'm about to take a plane home, I get an urgent call from the publicity people at Putnam's.

"The book isn't moving in Caspar, Wyoming. Would you mind stopping there on your way back from Atlanta and doing the 'Wake Up With Sally' radio show?"

I'm not alone on the road these days. I discovered this when I had a layover in Chicago between Detroit and Milwaukee. It was 11 o'clock at night, and I tried to catch a few winks in a stone chair in the O'Hare airport terminal.

The security guard woke me up and wanted to know if I had a home. I said I wasn't sure anymore. I was out promoting my book. He said the airport had a special green room for people like me. He explained they set it up because so many authors were sleeping in the terminal, and it was giving O'Hare a bad name. He escorted me to a room, and much to my surprise it was jammed with other authors all waiting for midnight connections so they could get on early morning TV shows around the country.

Erma Bombeck was there doing her laundry in the sink. Dinah Shore was trying to cook a soufflé over a can of Sterno. Russell Baker was explaining the gross national product to John Kenneth Galbraith. Harold Robbins was talking to Gloria Steinem about doing a book together, and former President Jimmy Carter was whittling a new chair he hoped to have ready for the "Merv Griffin Show."

I went over to grab a cup of coffee. "What happened to all the Danish pastry?" I asked.

Nathan Pritikin, who had his new book under his arm, said, "Danish pastry is very bad for you. Have a carrot instead."

James Michener was scribbling in a notebook. "Did you know," he said to me, "that before the Ice Age O'Hare airport runways were inhabited by 40-foot dinosaurs, then glaciers from the North Pole swept down and all we have left from that period is Lake Michigan?"

I was about to answer him when I saw a beautiful girl in black leotards sitting on the floor stretching her legs over her head.

"Who is that?" I asked Erma Bombeck.

"Victoria Principal of the 'Dallas' show. She hopes to push Jane Fonda off the best-seller list. I hate her."

"You mean because she's got a new book?"

"No, because she can put her legs over her head."

There was a lot of tension in the room until Leo Buscaglia, who was pushing another book on love, came in and started hugging everybody, and made us hug each other. Si Hersh, who was still out promoting his Kissinger book, said he didn't want to be hugged. Buscaglia told him the only way he could ever make peace with Kissinger was to hug him. I started hugging Victoria Principal and Dinah Shore got mad, so I hugged her.

We were all starting to feel pretty good when a security guard came in with Joan Mondale and said to the lady running the green room, "I found her sacked out on the baggage carousel at American Airlines."

"What book are you plugging?" someone asked Mrs. Mondale.

"I'm not selling a book. I'm going on talk shows to promote my husband for the Democratic presidential nomination."

"That's unfair to use up our time on talk shows just to get your husband to be president," I protested. Mrs. Mondale became upset, "Mrs. Reagan is doing it. Why shouldn't I?"

Mr. Buscaglia said, "Getting your husband elected president is not as important as selling a book, but we still love you." He ordered us all to hug Mrs. Mondale, which we did. A voice came over the loudspeaker: "Air Wisconsin now leaving from Gate 118 for Racine, Waukegan and Appleton. Passengers with small children, senior citizens in wheelchairs and authors plugging their book may board first."

Monroe Doctrine finally upheld

The Monroe Doctrine, enunciated by President Monroe December 2, 1823, was a fundamental feature of American foreign policy until the end of the 1950s when Fidel Castro seized power in Cuba and gave the Soviet Union an island fortress in the Caribbean.

President Carter further undermined the Monroe Doctrine by surrendering the strategic Panama Canal and allowing the Cubans and Soviets to establish a client regime in Nicaragua.

As a result, the peril in the backyard of the U.S. has increased steadily. A Marxist regime also has gained power in Surinam, the former Dutch Guiana on the northeast coast of South America.

The situation on Grenada, the tiny island in the Windward chain, proved to be the most critical. A Marxist ruler was displaced by an even more slavish follower of Castro.

The construction of a huge airfield indicated that the Cubans and their Soviet masters would have a second powerful base in the Western hemisphere, one from which they could directly menace South America.

President Reagan's action in occupying the island, at the request of Grenada's democratic neighbors, was completely in character with an historic feature of U.S. foreign policy. The action is a blow to the totalitarian forces that seek to outflank the U.S.

It is outrageous that this essential defensive move on the part of the world's leading democracy is condemned by narrow partisans in Congress, especially by a group of left-of-center representatives such as Reps. Ron Dellums of California, Howard Wolpe of Michigan, and Edward J. Markey of Massachusetts. In every case, when the security interests of the American people are concerned, one finds these and other radical congressmen opposed to vital measures of national defense. If their counsel were to prevail, the U.S. would be encircled and endangered. If the radical coalition had its way, the U.S. would embrace the Castro regime in Cuba.

Aside from the radical contingent in Congress, there are members of the House of Representatives who have a mistaken view of their role in the making of foreign policy. The Constitution of the U.S. does not give the House a direct role. The Constitution spells out that foreign policy is the responsibility of the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate in regard to treaties. Article II also states that "The President shall be the Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy." The American people understand this. They elected Ronald Reagan, well-knowing his views on foreign policy and national security.

President Reagan's action in the case of Grenada is in accord with his constitutional authority and his oft-stated views. Indeed he would have been remiss in his duty to the American people if he had failed to prevent establishment of another Cuban-Soviet outpost on our national doorstep. He should have the full support of the Congress and the people in respect to his fulfillment of the Monroe Doctrine.

Counselor's Corner

Only you can limit your own potential

In order to get all out of life that is possible, it's necessary to have a definite plan to get us where we want to go. More often than not we fail, probably because we don't know the way to achieve, improve ourselves, be self assured, or deal honestly with ourselves. Too much energy is wasted breaking up life's possibilities instead of making ourself the best we can be.

Few people ever become all they could be. Yet our potential is unlimited. Our best quality is our individual uniqueness.

What we do is muddle aimlessly, blindly through life allowing circumstances, other people and self doubt control our days.

We can't always control some circumstances or the way some people treat us, however. We can control our reactions to circumstances and others' behavior. The best decision in our various encounters is to use the best we have and are.

Limits help us maintain a negative outlook on life. We use excuses and misuse our time. We become inflexible and hardnosed. We feel sorry for ourselves and worry and procrastinate. We continue towards self destruction through bad habits.

Circumstances do not lead to failure unless we let them. We become winners by allowing ourselves these priorities suggested by Nidro R. Qubein. Don't compare yourself to others because you are your own equal. No one else can be compared to your only kind. Winners compare achievement with personal goals; losers compare achievement with those of other people. We aren't supposed to be equally successful according to other people. See yourself as a special, unique, privileged one - person entity. Since the history of mankind, you are different from all others. That makes you special.

Make a strong and permanent commitment to invest your talents and abilities in those pursuits that deserve your best effort. If it's not worth the best you can do, it's not worthy of your time. You are the best you've got and that isn't small change. You're worth the maximum and that's out of reach of all the wealth in the world. You have enough worth to change the course of the world's order. Put it to use and be potentially unlimited. The world could use a change.

Ignore those who try to get you to doubt yourself. Make a contract with you self to give all that you have and all that you are to achieve your goals. Others have that record. Henry Ford failed five times before succeeding. Babe Ruth held many baseball records, one of which is strike outs. It was said of Vince Lombardi, one - time coach of the Green Bay Packers, that he possessed minimal football knowledge and lacked motivation. The Dallas Cowboys felt his knowledge and motivation as Bart Starr ran a quarterback sneak and won the Packers a Super Bowl.

Albert Einstein was criticized because he didn't wear socks and forgot to get his hair cut and could be mentally retarded. George Hallas made football a challenging sport at a critical point in history which could have put it to sleep. He made his commitment and look at the sport today.

We'll always have the skeptics and critics who are afraid to commit themselves to the challenge which materializes into winning. Thank goodness some of us plod on despite risk, the climb, the obstacles and accomplish for mankind because we paid the price in order for our dreams to come true.

Search until you find what you can do best, what no one can turn you away from, what you gladly pay to do. Then go for it with everything you have. Practice eliminating your mind of all negative, self-defeating thoughts. Practice mental alertness. Read, listen and observe everything around. Cultivate curiosity. Ask questions. Learn. Develop your imagination.

Organize your thoughts. Practice going from what you know to discover what you don't know. Other people can teach you from their storehouse of speciality, uniqueness and commitment to be the best they are.

Our greatest enemy in the use of our creative powers is procrastination, complacency - settling for less than the full potential we possess. Go with the urge to improve your creativity; grow into your full person.

Philosopher Henry David Thoreau said, "I know of no more encouraging fact than the fact that thought is a sculptor who can create the person you want to be."

Risk a dream. Gain some hope. Believe in your full potential. Make those potentials come true by believing in your worth as a person. Success comes in believing in your potentials. The sky's the limit. It's your decision. Act today.

Dear Abby

Woman thankful to find her misery has company

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last week I read in your column a letter from a young woman who discovered that her mother had been having an affair with her husband. Believe it or not, I was happy to read it because I realized that I was not alone! My mother and husband had an ongoing affair for 16 years before I found out. It had been going on right under my nose and I never suspected a thing.

It's been a year now, and I'm still struggling with the anger, bitterness and feelings of betrayal. I'm seeing a counselor who is helping me deal with this. Until I read that letter in your column, I thought I was the only person in the world in such a bizarre situation.

Abby, you do such a great service by allowing people to tell their stories. So many times we feel we're so alone that no one could possibly know what we're going through and how we feel.

Now I'm sure I'm going to make it. Thanks for being there.

CLIMBING BACK UP IN COLORADO SPRINGS

DEAR CLIMBING: Don't thank me; that's what I'm here for. Please write again and let me know how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: On a recent trip returning from London, I was driven to near madness by a hyperactive 5-year-old boy who ran up and down the aisles screaming and intentionally ramming people with his toy truck while his parents drank martinis and beamed at him.

After the third time he connected with my second-degree sunburn, I gave up hoping for either the flight attendants or the parents to discipline the child. I told the mother bluntly that the next time the boy rammmed me I would probably "ram" him back.

A plane is no place for a child to be running around unsupervised. Also, it was not what I paid a thousand dollars for.

Perhaps major airlines should schedule two or three flights a week for families on long trips—and those of us who want some peace and quiet can fly on the other days when no children under a certain age are allowed on those flights. A sensible idea?

DEB IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR DEB: Sensible indeed. But please don't offer the major airlines suggestions until they resolve their own major problem—surviving.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the 58-year-old feminist who is enraged by the phrase, "Who gives this woman in marriage?"

I always wanted my father to walk me down the aisle, but I never particularly cared for the tradition of being "given away." Although I did not express my feelings about this, after my father walked me down the aisle, and the minister asked, "Who gives this woman in marriage," my father said, "With her mother's and my best wishes, she happily gives herself."

By the way, I had a real "family" wedding: My grandfather was the minister, and my grandmother was my matron of honor!

Family tales hold more than meets the ear

As American families gather at holiday tables this time of year, they will share far more than the traditional dinner with all the trimmings. After everyone is seated, the napkins in place, it will be only a moment before the family stories begin to unfold.

"Do you remember the time," one relative asks — and of course everyone does because this story is told at EVERY holiday gathering — "when the plum pudding wouldn't flame and mother drenched it with a bottle of brandy trying to get it lighted..."

As it turns out, more is going on at these family gatherings than meets the palate, or the ear. Often - told tales featuring the likes of pudding and other special memories are more than just enjoyable, time - passing moments. Family folklore experts tell us; rather, such stories are the sound of a family celebrating, renewing and re - establishing itself. And repetition plays no small part in this process.

"For some families, these tales may be their most important way of expressing kinship," not the authors of "A Celebration of American Family Folklore," a collection of stories and photographs gathered during the Smithsonian's annual Festival of American Folklife in Washington, D.C. "For others it is here, over the dinner or picnic table, that family members renew a dedication to one another..."

Mealtime, in fact, turns out to be the time when family members are most at home with each other physically and psychologically. "Perhaps it is not a coincidence," the authors observe, "that we satisfy our emotions along with our appetites."

Until quite recently, folklore students were more interested in traditional folktales than family stories, neglecting the local yarn or the little - known but colorful character for the tall tales about the country's Davy Crocketts and Buffalo Bills. This is changing now, as folklore teams such as the Smithsonian's set up their interview tents at festivals, make things homey with memory - evoking snapshots and tables covered with kitchen cloths and turn on their tape cassettes to record family lore.

"Family tradition is one of the great repositories of American culture," says Amy Kotkin, who, along with Steve Zeitlin and Holly Cutting Baker, authored "Celebration." "It contains clues to our national character and into our family structure."

What exactly is family folklore? Essentially, it's a family's creative expression of its common past, distinct from the facts that make up its history. A family's stories, photographs and traditions are "personalized and often creative distillations of experience, worked and reworked over time," Zeitlin explains. "When a family tells of that glorious moment when a relative just missed sailing on the Titanic, the lore is precisely that: a glorious moment carefully selected and elaborated through the years."

Though family stories are altered and become embellished over the years, they usually are based on actual incidents, and they often provide fascinating glimpses of American history. One Midwestern native recalls traveling to Chicago with a friend in 1928 to see her sister, then a private nurse and living at the old Metropole Hotel. "One night my sister had to go on duty and told us not to leave the room. After she left, we heard dance music and really wanted to go out but didn't. Later we found out that the Metropole was Al Capone's hotel."

America's great diversity shapes its folklore. Appalachian families often tell stories of longstanding feuds, third - generation Americans recall their ancestors' perilous escapes from the old country and Westerners tell of their kin's journeys over the Oregon Trail.

Generally, family stories fall into one of two categories: legends that describe a particular character and those that capture the major transitions in a family's history. Families are "selfish" in what they choose to remember and pass on.

Zeitlin says. "A single episode comes to represent the entirety of a relative's personality; a whole family history is symbolized by a few dramatic turning points." These distillations, in effect, act, as one man put it, "as a kind of glue" holding the family together.

In researching "Celebration," Zeitlin, Kotkin and Baker found that in the stories about memorable relatives, the most common protagonists were mischief makers, heroes, villains and innocents.

Bowl contenders feel the pressure

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The pressure is beginning to mount as the nation's college football teams seek all-important bowl bids.

"True, the bowl talk was a distraction," Boston College quarterback Doug Flutie said after throwing four touchdown passes in the 16th-ranked Eagles' uninspired 34-14 victory over Army. "We weren't talking about Army; we were talking about what bowl we'd go to."

The bowl pairings won't be known officially until Nov. 19, but each slip along the way can mean a change of holiday plans. So you can understand why Bernie Kosar, the freshman quarterback for fifth-ranked Miami of Florida, heaved the ball into the stands after his 1-yard touchdown run with 1:04 remaining gave the Hurricanes a 12-7 triumph over East Carolina and a school record ninth consecutive victory.

The Hurricanes are in the running for an Orange Bowl bid and the crowd at the Orange Bowl — it's also Miami's home field — hurled hundreds of oranges onto the playing surface to celebrate Kosar's touchdown, which capped a nine-play, 90-yard drive that included a 52-yard strike from Kosar to Ed Brown to the 13-yard line.

"Just a little emotion," Kosar said. "I guess that was my freshman mistake for the day."

The day's biggest losers were seventh-ranked Maryland, No. 9 Florida, 10th-rated North Carolina and No. 18 Notre Dame, who probably saw any hopes of a major bowl bid fall by the wayside. Maryland lost to third-ranked Auburn 35-23. Florida was edged by No. 4 Georgia 10-9 — Auburn visits Georgia for a Southeastern Conference shootout next Saturday — North Carolina fell to Clemson 16-3 and Notre Dame was knocked off by Pitt 21-16.

But there was some solace for those who will be spending the holidays at home, like 7-1-1 Clemson, which is on probation.

"Every game is a bowl game for us," nose guard William Perry said after the Tigers downed North Carolina thanks to three Bob Pauling field goals and Mike Eppley's 8-yard touchdown pass to K.D. Dunn.

And some coaches, like Pitt's Foge Fazio, don't worry about a bowl bid because there's nothing they can do about it.

"I'm not on the bowl committees and I have no idea (where we're going)," Fazio said after Joe McCall's two touchdown runs and John Congemi's 44-yard scoring pass to Bill Wallace paced the Panthers over Notre Dame. "I told the team after our two losses that if we keep winning, the polls and bowls will recognize the team."

Said Notre Dame's Gerry Faust: "We're still in it (the bowl picture). We have two tough games remaining (Penn State and Air Force), but if we finish 8-3 we'll be in good shape."

Meanwhile, No. 1-ranked Nebraska buried Iowa State 72-29 as Mike Rozier rushed for 212 yards and four touchdowns and set three school scoring records.

Overcome slow start

Cowboys keep their cool

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Coach Tom Landry said he felt his Dallas Cowboys' ability to come back within the final four minutes of the second quarter after falling behind 10-0 was the turning point in a 27-20 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

Philadelphia came out fired up and held Dallas to minus-3 yards in the first period, while amassing 128.

But the Cowboys never panicked. They came back in the second quarter and almost reversed the figures, gaining 115 to just 11 for the Eagles.

More importantly, with 3:45 left in the half the Cowboys overcame that 10-0 deficit to gain a tie by intermission.

First, Dallas got a 39-yard field goal from Rafael Septien. And before the half ended, quarterback Danny White threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Timmy Newsome to tie the score.

The Cowboys went ahead 13-10 in the third quarter on Septien's 23-yard field goal, which was set up when safety Bill Bates recovered a fumble at the Eagles' 10-yard line.

They made it 20-10 on a 29-yard third period run by Tony Dorsett, who had been held to a minus-5 yards up to that point.

"I was frustrated and a little upset," said Dorsett. "But I'm a realist. I know that things aren't always going to go your way. I definitely had a strong feeling I was going to pop one sooner or later."

After Franklin cut the margin to 20-13 with a 37-yard field goal, Dallas then came up with an 18-yard TD pass from White to Tony Hill that made it 27-13.

White said the pass resulted from a busted play.

"It was supposed to be a screen pass to Dorsett. But they (the Eagles) were waiting for it. I should have thrown the ball away.

"But I was able to pick up Hill out of the corner of my eye running in the left corner of the end zone. And I got it to him."

White said it was a good thing the pass to Hill worked.

"It was the kind of play that Coach Landry would have been cussing at me if it didn't work," he said.

White, who has been under fire in some places despite keeping the Cowboys on top in the National Conference East, had a brilliant day.

He completed 21 of 24 passes for 268 yards and two touchdowns. More importantly, in Landry's eyes, was the fact he held the Cowboys together when the Eagles were hot.

White was surprised with his performance because he said he didn't feel well.

"I had bumps and bruises coming into the game. And during the game I didn't think I was throwing the ball better than I'd ever done."

The Cowboys, now 9-1, clinched their 18th consecutive winning season, an NFL record.

The Eagles jumped to a 7-0 first-period lead on a 20-yard TD pass play from quarterback Ron Jaworski to Mike Quick, who caught seven for 120 yards. It was the fifth time this season he's gained 100 yards or more.

They made it 10-0 early in the second period on a 19-yard field goal by Tony Franklin. But their offense sputtered as Dallas caught up and moved ahead.

Franklin kicked a 37-yarder in the third period to cut the margin to 20-13. The Eagles didn't score another touchdown until late in the fourth quarter, a 71-yard pass play from Jaworski to Glen Young.

The Eagles had a last chance when they recovered a fumble at their 6 with 1:05 remaining. But time ran out on a drive that reached the Dallas 37.

Eagles Coach Marion Campbell was pleased with his team's performance.

"Our guys put out a top effort," said Campbell, whose team now is 4-6 and fast fading out of the playoff picture. It was the Eagles' fourth straight defeat, and 10th time in the last 11 games they've lost at home.

Campbell said the Eagles played very aggressively.

"That kind of effort wins most games."

San Antonio comes up with muscle off bench

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The much-maligned San Antonio bench has finally flexed some muscle, thanks to newly acquired center Mark McNamara.

Spurs substitutes scored 34 points, grabbed 23 rebounds and handed out 13 assists Sunday as San Antonio took a 132-115 National Basketball Association victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

McNamara relieved Artis Gilmore and scored eight points and grabbed five rebounds in 23 minutes.

"McNamara is real aggressive and he can rebound, which has been one of our weaknesses. Heck, Mark hasn't even practiced, yet. He is really going to help this team," said Spur Coach MoMcHone.

McNamara was traded to the Spurs from Philadelphia three days earlier.

"I think it's great to be here. They really have such great players, it doesn't put a lot of pressure on me. It felt great to get a nice welcome from the fans. It really helped my confidence," McNamara said.

The Spurs were in control of the game from the opening moments, taking a 25-15 lead with five minutes left in the first quarter.

"San Antonio played very aggressively and went to the boards strong," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens.

"They had 10 offensive rebounds in the first half, which we shouldn't have let them get. Our biggest problem this year has been going to the boards."

Seattle guard Gus Williams led the Sonics with 26 points and 10 assists. Center Jack Sikma finished with 11 points and four rebounds.

"We didn't get the job done tonight," said Sikma. "There was a great deal of pushing and shoving going on out there. They (the referees) called some fouls on me early, and he Spurs were putting good pressure on us defensively."

Continental Basketball Association referees are still officiating NBA games, because of a referees' strike.

San Antonio's George Gervin led all scorers with 32 points.

Emotions rule; Oilers lose again

HOUSTON (AP) — The personnel changes in Cincinnati's 55-14 victory over Houston Sunday evoked strong emotions from the players involved.

Quarterback Ken Anderson regained his starting job and led a 34-point first half. He was happy.

Oiler quarterback Gifford Nielsen lost his position to Oliver Luck. Luck was glad, Nielsen was puzzled.

Earl Campbell left the game midway in the second quarter and did not return. He was mad.

But as the players' emotions rose and fell, the Oilers remained steady and extended their losing habit to 17 straight games and became the only winless team in the National Football League with an 0-10 record.

Cincinnati, headed in the opposite direction, won for the third straight game, now is 4-6 and feels confidence returning by the minute.

Houston Coach Chuck Studley benched Campbell after the Oilers fell behind 24-0 in the first quarter. Campbell gained 42 yards on 16 carries before retiring for the day and was upset afterwards.

"I think now the only thing they (Oilers) can do is put me off this team," Campbell said. "The Houston Oilers treated me bad today. They treated me like a dog today."

"I have individual goals. Nobody said nothing to me about coming out of the game. I feel like I've done nothing wrong. I come to practice on time every day and practice hard every day and then play only the first quarter."

Anderson said reached an agreement with his offensive line prior to the game and he held the game unmoled.

"I didn't have to worry about getting hurt today because no one came close to hitting me," said Anderson, returning after spending three weeks on the injury list. "I told the offensive line if they took care of me I'd take care of them."

"We didn't get specific about what it was but I'll have to think of something."

Anderson completed 7 of 12 passes for 107 yards and did not throw an interception after missing three weeks of action.

The Bengals put the game away quickly, jumping to a 34-0 halftime lead on Anderson's 14-yard touchdown pass to Chris Collinsworth, Pete Johnson's touchdown runs of five, one and one yard and field goals of 44 and 29 by Jim Breech.

Second-half scores came on runs of one yard by Stanley Wilson, three yards by Larry Kinnebrew and a 59-yard fumble return by linebacker Reggie Williams.

The Oilers didn't get on the scoreboard until the fourth quarter when Luck completed a 21-yard touchdown pass to Tim Smith and Curtis Brown dove one yard with 34 seconds left to play.

"They wanted to see Ollie (Luck) and see what he could do," Nielsen said.

"I don't know exactly what's wrong with my performance right now but I feel I can still contribute. I'm still walking around. I'm still breathing. I'm okay."

Williams played the Oilers throughout the game with two fumble recoveries, two sacks and his 59-yard touchdown.

Offense sputters

Ward's kicks boost Steers

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' struggling offense got that old treadmill feeling Saturday night in the Astrodome.

"It seemed like we were making the blocks, but I really don't know what was happening," offensive guard Kirk McJunkin said. "We would come back to the huddle shrugging and asking what went wrong."

What went wrong was the Longhorns managed only 96 total yards of offense, lost two fumbles and had two passes intercepted and didn't have a sustained drive until late in the fourth quarter.

What went right, however, was pressure-proof freshman Jeff Ward, who kicked field goals of 20, 51, and 47 yards to give the No. 2-ranked Longhorns just enough lift to beat Houston 9-3.

The real difference in the game was a pair of missed 29- and 39-yard field goal attempts by Houston's Mike Clendenen, who wasn't up to a kicking duel with Ward. Clendenen's 24-yard field goal in the third quarter provided all of Houston's scoring.

"It sure wasn't a good day offensively, but we got the win and that's what counts," said quarterback Todd Dodge, getting his first start of the season. "I didn't feel any extra pressure coming in. I've got a lot of great people around me out there. I just want to be able to go out and move the team."

But there was little Longhorn movement on offense, forcing the defense to save the day.

Texas Coach Fred Akers was just delighted to have the game in the books.

"I don't know what was happening to our offense, whether it was simply their great play or whether we were breaking down," Akers said. "But it's going to take a while to get this smile off my face ... the last time I looked, it was 9-3 and we had the nine."

Houston's youthful defense played its best game of the season, allowing only one sustained drive that resulted in Ward's third field goal with 4:37 left in the game.

"The kids played about as hard as a bunch could, but so did that other group," Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said. "They (Texas) have great, great physical strength."

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are some critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals... call for in Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Why not get best advice?

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Why doesn't the United States make better use of its presidents once they've left office? Right now we've got three of them sitting in mothballs, their minds still sharp, human libraries of the kind of knowledge that only can come from having been there.

The cheapshot answer, with variations on the theme, is that they had plenty of time in the White House to make a mess of things. Still, we paid for their on-the-job training and we're still paying them well, so why not — as Jimmy Carter might say — get the best advice?

Harry Truman, who lived 20 years after he left the White House, had strong ideas about what ought to be done with retired public officials.

"A man who has had the experience of a president, or a vice president, or a speaker of the House gets a chance to become much more familiar with our government than anyone else," he said. "We must not shelve or thrust into obscurity men with such unique experience."

But sheldom is what the United States bestows on its former chief executives.

Richard Nixon was discredited and brought down by his flaws, but he also achieved detente with the Soviet Union and opened the door to China. He writes and talks extensively about foreign affairs. It was once rumored he would be appointed ambassador to China and why not?

Gerald Ford, who calmed a nation rent by Watergate, knows from 25 years in the House all there is to know about how administrations can work their will with Congress. It was knowledge that could have benefited his successors.

Carter, the president who sat on Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat until they reached their Camp David agreements, now sits in Georgia carving chairs while blood flows with renewed vigor in the Middle East. Special envoys come and go, using the Camp David accords as their benchmark, but none of them is Carter.

All three former presidents testified recently before the Kissinger commission on central America. It was the first time there was a formal bid for their advice.

Former presidents do, of course, have many forums to make their views known. Nixon has written four books since leaving Washington. Ford is on the lucrative convention circuit and he's lectured to more than 130 college audiences since leaving Washington. A news conference called by any of the three is bound to be well attended.

No sitting president, of course, would be willing to be upstaged by a former president. When Ford set a kind of deputy president role as the price for being the Republican vice-presidential candidate in 1980, Reagan decided the cost was too high and turned to George Bush.

Some observers say the problem with appointing a former chief executive as, say, a special envoy or head of a special commission, is that he wouldn't want to report to a secretary of state.

Perilous times for industry

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — These are perilous times as well as times of opportunity for some of the big names in American industry.

Names such as Eastern and Greyhound and Texas Instruments and International Harvester and Grumman and Gulf, to name a few, in industries such as airlines, buslines, computers, heavy manufacturing and oil. All are involved in predicaments of one sort or another, and in almost every case their problems arise from change and their approach to it. This is a period of rapid, turbulent change that is rare in American industry.

What happened in personal finance is probably the best example of the phenomenon, with bankers, insurers and brokers all competing for the same consumer dollar by offering very much the same products.

Fifteen years ago these industries were each different, but as individuals became financially sophisticated, and as electronics allowed industries to develop new products, the lines blurred.

Now, old-line insurers sell stocks, brokerage houses offer insurance, and bankers peddle mutual funds.

What emerged is a new financial services industry, but in the process scores of brokerage houses, the least heavily capitalized of the three, have had their names disappear into mergers.

Well-known computer makers, just a few years ago sitting atop a mountain of expectations, are in trouble.

Texas Instruments, a giant, has apparently backed out of the personal computer market. Those who study the industry expect more to follow, voluntarily or otherwise.

American Can is now in life insurance, as is American Brands. Grumman, an aerospace manufacturer, tried building buses and met disaster. Xerox spent three years trying to be a retailer of office products but is now retreating.

Deregulation is adding to the confusion, primarily by inviting competition, as some of the large airlines have learned. Eastern Airlines has been forced to seek wage concessions from workers. Continental Airlines sought to lower payrolls by firing workers. Greyhound, which operates bus routes, has done likewise.

Imports — made easier by the dollar's high valuation — have created havoc and forced wage concessions in many companies and several industries, most notably automobiles. Chrysler, the third-largest U.S. automaker, still might not have overcome the financial problems that almost led it to bankruptcy.

The perils do not always come from the obvious directions.

A company whose shares are depressed might find itself pursued by an unwelcome suitor seeking not just to take it over but perhaps bust it up as well. Gulf Oil, a giant, is now fighting that battle.

In fact, the entire oil industry, made up of multibillion-dollar giants, seems to be under pressure to reorganize its assets.

Grain elevator to be checked

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — The condition of corn being inspected at an elevator here is the focus of a battle between Texas officials and the U.S. Agriculture Department over whether to make the government grain available to drought-stricken farmers and ranchers.

A team of federal experts headed by the state's top grain-warehouse regulator were scheduled today to inspect the 21.5 million bushels of grain to determine its quality.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Ford said the inspection is "a fact-finding mission for the secretary (John Block). "We are not down there to announce any (grain) release. I can tell you that."

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who wants the grain made available to drought-stricken areas of West Texas, says that an analysis he commissioned of the corn indicated its quality had seriously deteriorated.

Tampa Bay finally celebrating

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers finally could celebrate a victory, but there were no celebrations for Houston, Denver, Minnesota and the Los Angeles Raiders — the latter despite posting another National Football League victory.

"I think our rallying cry of late has been, 'Whatever it takes,'" said quarterback Jack Thompson after Tampa Bay captured its first game of the season after nine losses by downing Minnesota 17-12. "James Wilder had the right stuff. It wasn't artistic, but the bottom line is we won."

Wilder banged out 219 yards in 31 carries, including a 75-yard touchdown sprint that put the Pucs ahead to stay in the third quarter. The TD run was the longest ever by a Buccaneer and the 219 yards broke the team's single-game rushing record.

"It's something to celebrate about," said Wilder. "It feels great when you want to win and you never get tired."

In other games Sunday, it was Dallas 27, Philadelphia 20; Pittsburgh 26, San Diego 3; New Orleans 27, Atlanta

10; Cincinnati 55, Houston 14; Green Bay 35, Cleveland 21; Los Angeles Raiders 28, Kansas City 20; New England 21, Buffalo 7; Miami 20, San Francisco 17; Seattle 27, Denver 19; Los Angeles Rams 21, Chicago 14; Baltimore 17, New York Jets 14, and Washington 45, St. Louis 7.

Tonight, the New York Giants will be at Detroit. Wilder's performance came a week after he carried the ball a league-record 42 times against Pittsburgh. "He's a genetic mutant," Thompson affectionately said of the 6-foot-3, 225-pound Tampa Bay running back. "When you have a body like James Wilder, you never get tired."

Wilder's broke the Ricky Bell's single-game team rushing mark of 187 yards. The 219 yards also was the second-most rushed against the Vikings. Chicago's Walter Payton had 275 yards in 1977.

Three teams lost their quarterback, while Houston running back Earl Campbell threatened to leave the Oilers after being benched in the second period.

Steve DeBerg suffered a separated left shoulder and will be lost to Denver for virtually the remainder of the season. The Raiders' Marc Wilson will be sidelined for at least six weeks because of a broken left shoulder, while Minnesota's Steve Dilts was hospitalized overnight for observation after becoming disoriented after taking some heavy hits.

Bengals 55, Oilers 14

Pete Johnson slammed into the end zone for three touchdowns and Ken Anderson came off the injury list to direct 34 first-half points to lead Cincinnati to victory and extend Houston losing streak to 17 straight games — 10 this season.

Johnson scored on runs of five, one and one yards, and Anderson hit Chris Collinsworth with a 14-yard touchdown pass. Rookie Stanley Wilson added a 1-yard TD run, Reggie Williams returned a fumble 59 yards for a score and Larry Kinnעד went three yards for a score.

Cincinnati 55, Houston 14

Houston running back Earl Campbell was upset after being taken out of the game in the second period after gaining 42 yards on 16 carries.

"I think now the only thing they (Oilers) can do is put me off this team," said Campbell. "The Houston Oilers treated me bad today. They treated me like a dog today."

"Something's going to have to happen this week because of the way I had to sit down. Even if the game was out of control, I can do more in the game than on the sidelines."

Rams 21, Bears 14

Rookie Eric Dickerson ran for 127 yards and scored twice to power the Los Angeles Rams over Chicago.

Dickerson ran his 1983 rushing total to 1,223 yards and scored his 16th and 17th touchdowns of the season, both tops in the NFL.

The Rams' victory overshadowed the achievements of Chicago running back Walter Payton. He carried 14 times for 62 yards to become the fourth man in league history to top 11,000 yards in career rushing. With 11,020 yards, he trails only Jim Brown, Franco Harris and O.J. Simpson.

Payton also caught four passes for 32 yards to move ahead of Simpson and behind only Brown on the all-time combined yardage list with 14,440.

Cowboys 27, Eagles 20

Quarterback Danny White completed 21 of 24 passes, including two for touchdowns, as Dallas stopped Philadelphia.

The Cowboys trailed 10-0 in the second period when they put together a 39-yard field goal by Rafael Septien and a touchdown pass from White to Timmy Newsome within a 3:09 span to tie the score.

Tony Dorsett, who had minus-5 yards rushing through the first 2 1/2 periods, had a 29-yard TD sprint and White teamed up with Tony Hill on an 18-yard TD pass.

Seahawks 27, Broncos 19

Dave Krieg, starting his second straight game after being replacing Jim Zorn at quarterback, passed for two third-quarter touchdowns and ran for another in the fourth period to lead Seattle over Denver.

The Broncos lost quarterback Steve DeBerg for virtually the remainder of the season when he suffered a separated left shoulder.

Krieg passed 14 yards to Steve Largent and 30 yards to Paul Johns for touchdowns and rookie Curt Warner rushed 25 times for an NFL career-high 134 yards to become the Seahawks' single-season rushing record holder. The American Football Conference's rushing leader improved his season total to 889 yards.

Saints 27, Falcons 10

Dave Wilson, playing in place of injured quarterback Kenny Stabler, threw for 146 yards and a touchdown, while reserve fullback Hokie Ojain ran for two touchdowns as New Orleans defeated Atlanta.

Atlanta, which took a 10-0 lead before the Saints began their comeback turned the ball over three times — twice on fumbles and once on Steve Bartkowski's fourth interception of the season.

Lions are counting on rookies

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Coach Monte Clark is counting on six rookies to help the Lions in tonight's National Football League game with the New York Giants.

The Lions, 4-5, have won three of their last four games and Clark gives much of the credit for that turnaround to fullback James Jones, the team's No. 1 draft choice from Florida, and center Steve Mott out of Alabama.

"Jones has stepped right in," Clark said. "His vision is really unbelievable. He's even better than we thought, and we thought he was pretty good when we drafted him. Jones, who has started every game, has rushed for 382 yards and six touchdowns on 107 carries. He also has caught 29 passes for an additional 314 yards.

Mott took over at center three weeks ago after beating out veteran Amos Fowler.

"It shows the value of a quality program like Alabama's," Clark said. "Steve really is aggressive."

Other rookies who see a great deal of playing time on offense are tackle Rick Strenger, the No. 2 draft pick out of Michigan, and wide receiver Jeff Chadwick, a free agent walkon from tiny Grand Valley State who has become the Lions favorite target in clutch third-down situations.

On defense, Clark has turned increasingly to end Mike Cofer and middle linebacker August Curley.

"Those two guys were relatively low draft choices, but they can really play," Clark said. "It's a real tribute to our scouts."

The Giants, 2-6-1, making their third appearance this season on Monday night, will be trying hard to protect quarterback Scott Brunner — the only experienced signal-caller they have left after injuries knocked out

Phil Simms and Jeff Rutledge.

Brunner will employ the services of two fine running backs — former Michigan star Butch Woolfolk, who has rushed for 422 yards on 104 carries, and Rob Carpenter, who has lugged the ball 154 times for 560 yards.

"Detroit has one of the best pass rushes we have seen," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said. "We're going to have to pay attention to keeping those guys off Scott."

The Giants last Wednesday signed 31-year-old free agent Tom Owen to act as backup to Brunner.
