Speaker paints dismal picture for oil producers

SCOTT CAMPBELL

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Texas oil producers face a "dismal picture" for the future because of the politics of oil in the global situation, Scott Campbell, executive vice president of Natural Resource Management Corporation in Dallas, told members and guests at the February Pampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon Tuesday at Coronado Inn.

"We're simply running out of oil," Campbell said. "Alternatives are not being developed. Oil is going to become a scarce commodity."

Campbell, who recently returned from a business trip to the Middle East, said, "Oil, unlike most other goods, is a political product."

Because of its importance, oil has a set of complex relationships among nations - international, economic, social and religious factors have to be considered.

He said 1973-1983 proved to be a "tumultuous decade" in the political history of oil. In the 1960s the United States dominated oil production. It was the "swing supplier of oil for the West," with prices managed by a cartel of U.S. oil producers. Oil was selling at $2.88 a barrel. The nation was "economically strong and energy self-sufficient," he said.

But after 1970 the U.S. outran its geological base for oil and began importing cheap foreign oil rather than paying the costs of developing more U.S. sources. The nation then allowed itself to become dependent on other nations for oil. "We did it because it was cheap," Campbell said.

The Middle Eastern nations took up the slump caused by U.S. cutbacks in oil production as drilling and exploration dropped tremendously and oil reserves in the U.S. declined. Then the Middle East and other OPEC nations dominated the oil market and drove prices up excessively in just a few years.

OPEC prices have stabilized in recent years, dropping from nearly $40 a barrel at one time to around $29 a barrel now, Campbell explained. He said he expects these prices will retain relative stability for several years.

"Oil prices are going to remain weak, flat until 1986, 1987," he predicted.

But the oil market is tied too much now to political problems which could get out of control at any time.

"Every time there has been a significant price increase," it has been tied to a war or other international crisis, he said.

The instability in Middle East politics poses significant concern now, since that area controls most of the oil production exported to other nations. "Lebanon is basically a sideshow," he said, with relatively little to do with oil politics now.

The Iran and Iraq conflict "has a real possibility of upsetting everything," he warned. If the war gets out of hand, the Persian Gulf could be shut off or blockaded, drastically reducing the export of oil from the area. "No one will get any oil," he said.

"We face continued uncertainty," Campbell stated. Oil prices after several years will probably increase $5 to $7 a barrel. "We must wait and see. It's not a very happy position for the U.S. to be in."

The nation will continue to become more dependent on "the uncertainties, the vagaries" of the Mideast situations.

"More and more the oil pot is shrinking," he said, with discoveries of other fields moving slowly or being too expensive to pursue.

In an interview after the luncheon, Campbell, who specializes in following world energy developments, elaborated on the changes he expects in the national and international oil markets.

Oil prices will rise after several years by $5 to $7, barring any drastic political events in the Mideast. But this should be an incentive for the development of "vital, strong independents," he said. The major U.S. oil companies will undergo major changes, slowly diversifying and expanding to try to develop alternatives.

The independents have found 80 percent of oil reserves in recent years, but "they are taking a real beating now" as they face a liquidity crisis and panic in business dealings. Independents will go through a process of consolidation and merging, he predicted.

There will be "a smaller group of players," he said, but this will result in "tighter, more efficient" operations.

OPEC nations will move more into the marketing and refining ends of oil production, taking such operations away from the major U.S. oil companies. "The handwriting's on the wall," he warned.

The national trend is away from finding viable alternatives, he claimed. When oil prices dropped from $40 to $29 a barrel and an oil glut developed, U.S. companies dropped their pursuits of finding alternatives. "They turned the lights out," he said.

"We're going to lose some valuable time" in closing the gap for developing alternatives to our oil problems, he said. The current Reagan administration "has no interest in getting government involved in providing alternatives," he stated.

"We go from one crisis to another," Campbell said. "The markets are very volatile" because of their relationships with political situations.

The American oil companies are "into a lull now," he said, having "a false security for the future."

Rebels surround U.S. Marine base

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anti-government forces surrounded the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport today after Druse insurgents linked up with Shiite Moslem militiamen and took control of the highway into the city.

A Druse advance overnight seized the last area, south of the airport, in which the battered Lebanese army acted as a buffer between the Marines and militia forces. Shiite militia controlled the areas north, east and west of the airport base.

A Marine spokesman said the U.S. forces did not come under fire in the offensive. The advance by the Syrian-supported Druse "has raised some concern, obviously," said Army Col. Ed McDonald, chief spokesman for the U.S. contingent in the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut.

He said the Marines were ordered to don flak jackets and carry weapons but could leave the bunkers. Marines can leave their base by helicopter to U.S. ships offshore.

With his U.S.-trained army falling apart, President Amin Gemayel today was reported ready to give in to opposition demands that he scrap Lebanon's troop withdrawal pact with Israel.

But Druse leader Walid Jumblatt said today he would demand Gemayel's removal from power even if the withdrawal accord were abrogated.

"Amin Gemayel has to step down. There will never be any talks, any dialogue, any reconciliation with the Phalangists or Amin Gemayel while he is in power," Jumblatt said today at a news conference in Damascus, Syria.

Israel, which invaded the nation in 1982, has warned that it would keep its army in southern Lebanon if the accord is scrapped. Although it signed the pact last May with Lebanon, Israel refused to remove its troops from Lebanon until the Syrians pulled out their forces. Syria has refused to do so and the U.S.-mediated agreement that was designed to get foreign troops out of Lebanon has not gone into effect.

The Druse militia captured a strategic mile-long corridor to the sea after defeating government troops on Tuesday. It was the second defeat in eight days for the Lebanese army, which was pushed out of Moslem west Beirut last week.

The U.S. Marines could depart on amphibious landing craft from the beach near the airport. They would have to cross the coastal highway to get to the beach and Amal, the largest Shiite militia, has checkpoints along that stretch of highway.

Beirut's leading newspapers, the independent An-Nahar and leftist As-Safir, said Gemayel had decided to scrap the accord after the militiamen forced his army out of the coastal highway linking Beirut with Israeli-occupied southern Lebanon.

Druse insurgents capped a surprise offensive Tuesday by rolling down the hills from a mountain corridor they took from the army to link up with Shiite Moslem Militia allies in west Beirut, the Moslem half of the Lebanese capital.

The overnight hookup was at a coastal highway intersection just south of the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport and a beachside hotel in suburban Khalde where Israel and Lebanon signed their U.S.-mediated agreement May 17.

The newspapers said Gemayel was discussing with Lebanon's elder statesmen the political and legal process needed to cancel the accord — whether it should be done by parliament or in a conference of the nation's top Moslem and Christian leaders.

On Tuesday, Gemayel paid an unexpected visit to northern Lebanon and met with former President Sulemein Franjeh, a Christian allied with some of Gemayel's main Moslem opponents. The president later met with his father, Pierre Gemayel, leader of the rightist Christian Phalange Party.

THREE INJURED—Three Pampa residents were injured today, including one with serious injuries, when a pickup truck and a small car collided at the intersection of West Kentucky and a rural road, one mile west of Price Road, shortly before 9 a.m. Thomas Randall Townsend, 29, of 320 Tignor, driver of the car, was transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo in critical condition this morning after receiving emergency treatment at Coronado Community Hospital. Driver of the pickup, John Williams, 26, of 1124 S. Barnes, and a passenger, William A. Pence, 24, of Rt. 2, Pampa, were undergoing treatment in the local hospital's emergency room late this morning for injuries sustained in the accident. (Staff Photo by Ed Copeland)

Navy chief retracts shelling explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John Lehman, in hot water over his remarks about the U.S. shelling of Lebanon, is one of the most outspoken of the nation's civilian military chiefs even though his job is outside the chain of command and removed from operations and strategy.

The assertive, 41-year-old Lehman was prodded Tuesday, none too gently, into repudiating an earlier statement that conflicted with the Reagan administration's current policy line on using naval firepower in Lebanon.

Lehman had told reporters "there's very definitely been a shift in emphasis" to make clear the U.S. Navy will provide supporting fire to the tottering Lebanese government forces, not just for American Marines and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Not so, retorted White House spokesman Larry Speakes. He contended U.S. Navy guns had been shooting at Syrian-controlled positions only to protect Americans in and around Beirut.

Hours later, after Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger gave Lehman a sharp lecture and other administration officials also jumped on him, the Navy secretary recanted in a formal statement, bringing him back on the approved administration track.

Lehman has been one of the most outspoken and visible civilian Navy chiefs since he took over that office three years ago.

Under the law, the Navy secretary is not in the chain of command and does not have a hand either in fleet operations or strategy. He functions principally to recruit and train sailors and officers, equip the fleet and manage the Navy's resources.

But, with confidence born of many years of involvement in defense and foreign policy matters, Lehman has not hesitated to pronounce strategic philosophies, even though he has irritated top admirals in the process.

Last year, Adm. James Watkins grumpily complained to some reporters that Lehman "does not set the operational strategy for forces." He said this in disputing some aspects of Lehman's proclaimed strategy for fighting a war with the Soviets.

"John Lehman would be a great secretary of the Navy if we could only get him off the quarterdeck," one senior Pentagon official said Tuesday, speaking anonymously.

Texas would win, lose under Reagan budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas would lose federal funds for some programs and receive more money for others under President's Reagan's proposed budget for next fiscal year, according to an analysis by a state office.

A report released Tuesday by the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations said that under the proposed budget Texas would receive major cuts in federal funding for economic development grants, soil conservation programs and migrant education.

The administration is also refusing to provide $30 million to help local school districts nationwide educate alien children, though Congress last year approved spending the money, the report said.

According to the report, Texas has received extensive cuts in federal aid over the past three years — of 50 percent in economic development assistance, 47 percent in bilingual education aid, 18 percent in energy conservation assistance and 50 percent in funds for job training for the unemployed.

However, under the proposed budget for next year, Texas would receive increased funding for Corps of Engineers water projects, primary and secondary education block grants and criminal justice assistance, the report said.

It also said that an increase of nearly $75 million for the Immigration and Naturalization Service nationwide will allow the hiring of 850 additional border patrol agents, who would be concentrated near El Paso and Chula Vista, Calif.

Programs such as job training for the unemployed, urban and community development and health block grants would receive about as much money as this year in Texas, said the report, an analysis of the president's proposed budget for the fiscal year which begins Oct. 1.

Despite the president's proposals, further deep budget cuts appear unlikely in an election year, the report said. "Prospects for the president's budget request look dim," it said.

Following are some of the major areas where Texas is likely to feel the greatest impact of Reagan's budget proposal, according to the report:

— Elimination of Economic Development Administration programs, which help communities throughout Texas pay for local projects to reduce unemployment and weather economic hard times. Texas would receive nothing for the programs next year, compared with more than $12 million this year.

— A 54 percent reduction in money for Texas for the Soil Conservation Service's watershed and flood prevention program, which is intended to reduce erosion and improve land conservation. Texas would receive $8 million under the president's request, compared with more than $17 million this year.

— A 13 percent cut in funds for migrant education programs in Texas. About 100,000 students in Texas are currently served by the programs, which are designed to help children of migrant workers. The state's share of migrant education money would drop from $59 million to $51 million under the proposed budget.

— No expenditure next year of $30 million to help local school districts nationwide to educate alien children. The administration is also refusing to provide the money this year, even though Congress last year approved its expenditure. The administration contends Congress has yet to authorize establishment of a program through which the money can be spent, the report said.

— A 38 percent increase in Texas in money for elementary and secondary education block grants, from $28.2 million this year to $38.9 million next year. The funds, administered by the Texas Education Agency, are used for such activities as improving basic skills, helping the gifted and talented and providing emergency school aid for desegregation.

— A 12 percent increase in Texas in money for civil works projects by the Army Corps of Engineers, or $210 million compared with $188 million this year. Included are 39 flood control projects, 12 navigation projects and six flood damage prevention projects.

Geter attorneys claim police's mistakes led to prison sentence

DALLAS (AP) - An elderly white woman, frightened by a black man in a city park, called police and set in motion a series of mistakes that left Lenell Geter falsely imprisoned for nearly 16 months, defense attorneys have contended in a pre-trial hearing.

For two days, Geter's lawyers have probed police procedure and retraced the trail of suspicion that led to the 26-year-old black engineer's arrest, identification in a Balch Springs armed robbery, conviction and life sentence.

Attorneys say the "mini-trial," scheduled to resume late this morning, could last all week.

Jewell Peavey, 68, of Greenville testified that she became afraid of a young black man who often came to the park and sat by a duck pond. When she heard of a local restaurant robbery, she thought she should bring the man to the attention of police.

"I kept seeing this colored man get out (of his car) and just sit there," Mrs. Peavey said Tuesday. "It just made me nervous, upset me. I was at home alone by myself."

She relayed the license number of the man's brown Volkswagen to Greenville Police Lt. James Fortenberry, who traced it to Geter and his home address in Denmark, S.C.

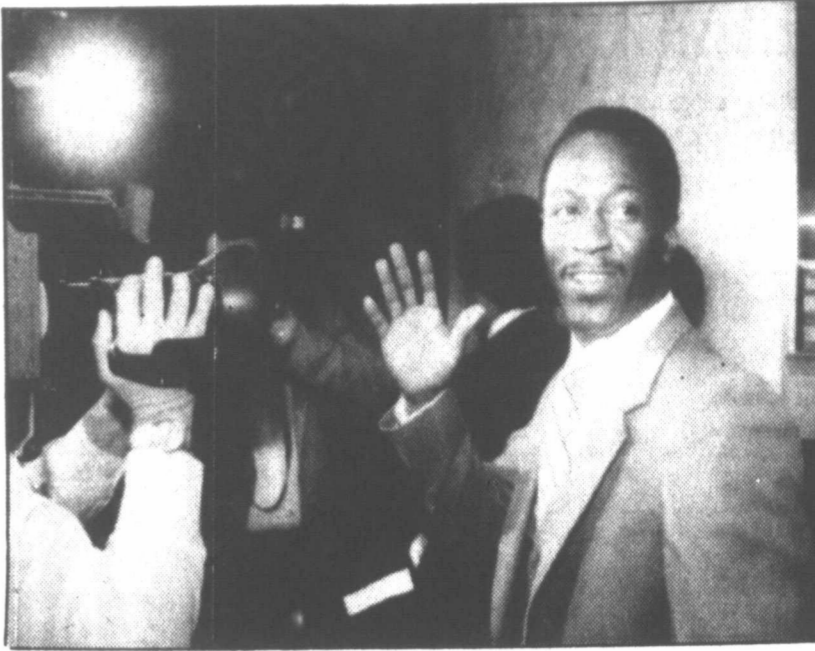

Fortenberry, whose conduct is the basis of a defense request to have the controversial armed robbery charges against Geter dropped, testified he called Bamberg County Sheriff Ed Darnell to obtain background.

"When I called and explained to the sheriff I was called concerning person named Geter from Denmark, S.C., Sheriff Ed Darnell stated to me, 'If his name's Geter and he's from Denmark, S.C., he's an outlaw,'" Fortenberry testified, as he had in Geter's first trial.

But Darnell testified during an earlier appeal hearing that he had never made that comment to Fortenberry and that he had no record of any police contact with Geter.

Fortenberry said he and a Plano detective spent two days watching Geter's apartment, but he said at the time he did not consider Geter a "hot suspect."

Geter, who has returned to work at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, served nearly 16 months after being convicted

Geter waves to media after court session and sentenced to life for the Aug. 23, 1962, robbery of a restaurant in Balch Springs, a Dallas suburb 44 miles from Greenville.

In December, Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade agreed to Geter's release and a new trial following national news reports that raised questions about the case. The trial is scheduled for April 9.

Five eyewitnesses identified Geter from photographic lineups. His co-workers claim he was at work on the day of the robbery.

Geter's attorneys say police had no cause to distribute his picture, and allege that his picture was so widely distributed that "there's a mathematical probability" he would be identified by witnesses.

"In the interest of justice," they say, the case should never go to trial.

Garland police Lt. Patrick Martinkus testified that he obtained Geter's picture from police in Plano, which got Geter's name from Greenville.

Martinkus said he placed Geter's picture in a photographic lineup shown to two victims of a Taco Bell robbery in Garland. One tentatively identified Geter; the other made no identification, and Martinkus issued an arrest warrant for Geter.

"If any police officer gives you a picture, do you show it?" asked defense attorney George Hairston, who joined the case on behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Mr. Hairston, if a little birdie told me he was a suspect, I would take a picture and show it," Martinkus said.

He also testified that Geter implicated two colleagues in a series of Dallas-area robberies, but conceded he made no notes or tape recordings of the conversation.

"I asked him who was involved in the robberies here, and he said Anthony Williams (and two other men) were the ones doing the robberies," Martinkus testified.

Williams, Geter's roommate who also worked at E-Systems and also came from South Carolina, was acquitted of a Garland 7-Eleven robbery last year.

During a break in testimony, Geter said, "The only thing Martinkus asked me was, 'who were the people who came from South Carolina with me to work at E-Systems?' And I said 'Williams and (another man)....'"

Minister strangled

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) - A Methodist minister found slain in the back of his van died from strangulation, according to the results of a preliminary autopsy report.

The body of the Rev. John H. Basham, of Dublin, was discovered near Gordon on Thursday, three days after he disappeared en route to Dallas, authorities said. Basham, 55, was traveling from Dublin to Dallas, where he was to have received an award from the Methodist church.

He had been reported missing by his family Feb. 7.

Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin said Tuesday that the autopsy had not yet revealed how long Basham had been dead.

No new leads in the case had been developed, Turpin said.

Mid-winter concert Thursday

The Pampa schools bands will present the fifth annual Nona S. Payne Mid-winter Concert at 7 p.m. Thursday at M.K. Brown auditorium.

The concert will feature five different bands, ranging from elementary to high school. Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. A reception in the Heritage Room will follow the concert.

The annual event is named for Nona S. Payne, who has donated $20,000 to the band and choir. Interest from her donations is used to provide scholarships each year for a local male and female student who plans to major in music in college. Past winners include Jurgen Keys, Teresa Taylor, Robbie Edwards, Cheryl Whitmarsh, Crispin Bradsher and Jay Miller. The concert will be opened by the sixth grade Cadet Band, directed by Joe Dicosimo.

Their performance will be followed by the Middle School Patriot Concert Band under direction of Kevin Roberson, then the Patriot Band, also directed by Dicosimo.

Their performances will be followed by the High School Concert Band, consisting of freshmen and part of the Pride of Pampa High School Band. It will be directed by Roberson.

The concert will be closed with a performance by the Pampa High School Symphonic Band, directed by High School Band Director Charles Johnson.

Many Mormons reported taken

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is reemphasizing its adoption policy following reports that a growing number of Mormons have been linked to the activities of a questionable international adoption network, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

The newspaper said in its Tuesday editions that of 80 American couples in 18 states who said they paid $3,000 to $7,000 each to receive Mexican-born children they never got, most are Mormons.

And the Star-Telegram said many of those who successfully adopted through the program also are Mormons. The newspaper said some of the principals allegedly arranging the adoptions also are Mormons.

"In the wake of this new proliferation of illegal adoptions," the national church leaders are reemphasizing a long-standing policy on adoptions, Don LeFevre, a spokesman for the church's world headquarters in Salt Lake City, said.

He said the policy encourages church members to go through Mormon Social Services on matters pertaining to adoptions or foster care, who is director of press information for the church.

"Privately arranged placements of any children without a licensed agency's sanction are frequently in violation of local or national law," the policy states. "Church officers or members should not be involved in such arrangements."

The policy adds that when Mormons are engaged in such activities, the public often views their actions as being sanctioned by the church.

Authorities said Walter Turley of Durango, Mexico, who helped Ms. Tanner with between 15 and 20 Mexican adoptions, also is a Mormon.

Jones murder case goes to jury today

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — The Genee Jones murder trial goes to the jury today, a panel that must decide if the defendant is a nurse whose skills were used to kill a baby.

State District Judge John Carter planned to give each side 90 minutes to offer closing arguments today. Jurors, who will be sequestered for deliberations, are expected to get the case around mid-day.

Both sides wrapped up rebuttal testimony Tuesday. The testimony, which included 44 prosecution witnesses and seven for the defense, ended with disagreements on whether traces of a muscle paralyzing drug were found in Chelsea McClellan after death.

The 15-month-old girl died on Sept. 17, 1982, after getting two injections from Ms. Jones. The licensed vocational nurse was working for a Kerrville pediatrician, who ordered routine immunizations.

Prosecutors say the shots carried succinylcholine. Chelsea suffered a mysterious seizure, similar to attacks that hit five other children treated by nurse Jones.

Unlike the other five, Chelsea did not recover. She died during a frantic ambulance ride toward San Antonio.

Defense lawyers Jim Brookshire and Burt Carnes hammered at the prosecution's expert testimony — especially a new test devised to detect succinylcholine in embalmed tissues.

Dr. Fredric Rieders, a Philadelphia toxicologist, said his tests — at the Stockholm laboratory of the man who developed the process — proved the drug was given to the girl.

But a defense expert, toxicologist Joseph Balkon of New York, challenged the result of Rieders' work.

The defense also tried to show that Chelsea was not a murder victim. Four of the seven defense witnesses were medical experts who had never seen Chelsea. Dr. William Goldie, a Houston pediatric neurologist, said Chelsea's records showed a sick girl prone to sudden death.

But Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton pointed out to Goldie that some of the records he studied were written by Ms. Jones.

The state's strongest shot at showing a motive came through nurse Mary Morris, who talked to Ms. Jones in Kerrville shortly after the defendant moved there from San Antonio.

Ms. Jones said she moved to Kerrville to help start a pediatric intensive care unit, according to Mrs. Morris. Ms. Jones also said she planned to "find" enough sick children to justify the new unit, the witness said.

Dr. Kathleen Holland, Ms. Jones' former boss, said she found two unexplained holes in the top of a succinylcholine bottle in her office. Ms. Jones said she found the vial after she had reported it lost. The drug bottle also turned up after the mysterious seizures, according to Ms. Holland.

And a state chemist testified here that the solution in the bottle had been heavily diluted with salt water, a possible attempt to make it look full.

During rebuttal testimony Tuesday, Sutton tried to quash the defense's effort to show that any succinylcholine found in Chelsea could have come from someone other than Ms. Jones. A defense witness had testified that Petti McClellan, Chelsea's mother, was given the muscle relaxant during the emergency Cesarean section done to deliver Chelsea.

Jim Garriott, chief toxicologist for the Bexar County medical examiner, testified Tuesday that there was no chance the drug given to the mother showed up two years later when the baby's body was exhumed.

"I don't think that is worth considering," he said.

Lucas secretly in El Paso to find bodies

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officials say a secret visit self-confessed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas made to El Paso led police to two of his alleged victims' bodies has turned up nothing.

El Paso Sheriff's Capt. Alfred Bonilla said Lucas, 47, was flown into El Paso Monday about 11:30 a.m. "to show us where he had hidden these bodies."

However, at the two spots Lucas located, no bodies were found, Bonilla said.

Lucas, who says he is responsible for the slaying of more than 150 women nationwide, was taken back out of El Paso by two Texas Rangers Tuesday about 8 a.m., Bonilla said.

"He was returned to Georgetown, where he is being held right now," Bonilla said.

"We found nothing at the two scenes where he claims to have dumped the bodies," Bonilla said.

"We'll be looking at the areas again within the next couple of days to make sure. But we got nothing yesterday (Monday)."

Bonilla said one of the sites where Lucas claims to have buried a murder victim was east of El Paso, while the other was to the west of the city.

Bonilla said local authorities have found three skeletons to the west of El Paso during the past three years. But he said they are not believed to be the bodies to which Lucas alleges a connection.

"They weren't found in the area that he showed us yesterday (Monday)," Bonilla said.

He said Lucas' trip to El Paso was not announced at the request of Lucas.

"He indicated to us that if there was any news media at all that he would get back on that plane and that he wouldn't talk to us at all," Bonilla said. "We were sort of at his mercy."

Lucas is scheduled to go on trial in Georgetown March 5 in the death of an unidentified woman whose nearly nude body was found near Georgetown on Halloween 1979.

He already has pleaded guilty to the slaying of 80-year-old Kate Rich of Ringgold and on Sept. 20 was sentenced to 75 years in prison for that slaying. He was tried at Denton and was assessed a life sentence on Nov. 9 in the fatal stabbing of his teen-age companion Frieda "Becky" Powell, 15, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Bonilla said if "we find anything during these future looks at the two sites he took us to, you can bet we'll be talking to him again."

He said he does not know "exactly who" Lucas claims to have killed in the El Paso area. "I just know they were women and that he says he did it."

David has an ulcer, can't eat, doctors report

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors treating David, the "bubble boy," have found he is suffering from an ulcer as well as the diarrhea and vomiting which have plagued him for weeks, a hospital spokeswoman says.

The 12-year-old, brought out of his sterile environment last week for the first time, was in "serious but stable" condition Tuesday, said Susan Griffin, spokeswoman for Baylor College of Medicine.

The boy was also unable to eat Tuesday after several days of being able to take at least some food normally. Mrs. Griffin said. He was being fed intravenously.

Bleeding from the ulcer has been stopped, she said. David has been receiving blood transfusions as doctors searched for the source of his internal bleeding.

Dr. William Shearer, David's personal physician, said Monday a test showed the boy has graft vs. host disease as a result of an Oct. 20 bone marrow transplant. In that operation, specially treated marrow was placed in the boy's bloodstream in an attempt to awaken his immune system, which has been inactive since his birth.

Doctors do not know what caused David's ulcer, Mrs. Griffin said.

The boy had been able to eat some food normally for several days until Tuesday, she said.

"David is now receiving ulcer medication intravenously. I don't know what kind of medication it is," she said.

Mrs. Griffin said David will continue receiving ulcer medication and corticosteroids for several weeks. Corticosteroids are used to rebuild destroyed tissue.

Mrs. Griffin said she did not know how much blood the boy had lost; specifically how doctors discovered the ulcer; what quantity of antibiotics he is receiving; or whether he was passing blood in his urine.

The boy, whose last name never has been disclosed, was born without resistance to disease and until last week had spent his entire life inside a series of sterile room-size plastic bubbles.

In October, he underwent a bone marrow transplant with marrow from his sister, Katherine.

In past weeks, he became ill for the first time in his life, suffering persistent flu-like symptoms. Doctors took him from the bubble and placed him in a sterile, two-room suite Feb. 7, saying they could not properly treat him inside the bubble.

Besides doctors and nurses, his parents and sister are allowed to visit him, although all must don sterile clothes and masks, Mrs. Griffin said.

"His mother or father is there all the time," Mrs. Griffin said. "One spends the night."

Shearer said the graft vs. host reaction was at least proof the transplanted tissue is still functioning.

The transplant operation, considered David's only hope of surviving in the dirty outside world, placed in his system 1 2-3 ounces of bone marrow from his sister. The marrow had been treated with monoclonal antibodies, micro-organisms designed to kill mature T-cells, which are part of the body's protection against outside organisms. But if transplanted into another person's body, mature T-cells can attack their new environment, mistaking it for a threat.

The treatment with monoclonal antibodies is designed to leave only immature T-cells.

Tornadoes can occur even in winter

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Winter tornadoes are unusual, but weather experts say last weekend's twisters in Normangee and Palestine shows they can strike swiftly at any time of the year.

John Griffiths of the State Climatologist's office says studies show April, May and June are the most likely months for tornadoes in Texas.

"But March, July, August and September also account for a significant number of twisters," said Griffiths, a Texas A&M professor. "Citizens should always be alert during warm weather months for the possibility of a killer storm."

The cooler months of December, January and February carry a smaller risk, but no month is safe, Griffiths said his records show.

Griffiths said at least 3,750 confirmed tornadoes were recorded statewide between 1951 and 1982, the period for which complete information is available.

The records for the period show 35 tornadoes in January, 69 in February, 251 in March, 603 in April, 1,122 in May, 570 in June, 207 in July, 252 in August, 277 in September and 190 in October. November has a 30-year total of 93 and December has had 68.

Researchers said the tornado Saturday that struck Normangee was part of a larger pattern of violent weather that struck several Southern states, in keeping with unseasonably warm weather

Machine will be used to treat kidney stones

HOUSTON (AP) — Kidney stone surgery may someday become obsolete if the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approves a new machine that will be used experimentally in Houston's Methodist Hospital and five other U.S. hospitals.

The hospitals have been given approval to experimentally use a $1.6 million machine that crushes kidney stones with underwater shock waves.

The machine, called a lithotripter, could make it possible for 150,000 Americans each year to avoid kidney stone surgery, an operation that costs an average of $6,000, said Methodist Hospital spokeswoman Kathleen Much.

Ms. Much said a lithotripter used in Munich, West Germany, has achieved more than a 90 percent success rate.

The machine is expected to arrive at Methodist Hospital next week and will be ready for use by April.

Patients are strapped to a reclining chair and lowered into a tank of water. Using a fluoroscope, doctors locate the stone and position the patient so the shock waves will bombard it.

"When all the shock waves come together on a kidney stone, the stone will be pulverized," Ms. Much said. But the power is concentrated on a small area so other parts of the body are not damaged, she said.

Ms. Much said the shock waves are synchronized with the patient's heartbeat. Doctors must determine whether anesthesia will be used, she said.

Patients who undergo the shockwave treatment stay in the hospital two nights for observation, compared with 10 days for surgery, she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Line-item veto approval unlikely

President Reagan has challenged Congress to help him reduce budget deficits that everyone recognizes are too large. Will Congress cooperate or obstruct?

An early indication will be how much help Republicans get from Democrats on the supposedly bipartisan congressional task force charged with cutting the deficits by $100 billion during the next three years. Another sign will be Congress's willingness at least to consider giving Reagan the authority to make line-item vetoes in appropriation bills he received from Capitol Hill.

The odds on Reagan getting the line-item veto are admittedly long, partly because it would almost certainly be used to dilute the value of a prized legislative prerogative—logrolling.

Anyone familiar with Congress or a state legislature will recognize the term "logrolling," that parliamentary practice aptly characterized by a Civil War-era politician as "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours." Logrolling accurately describes the process by which billions of dollars of questionable expenditures and outright waste are crammed into state and federal budgets.

Logrolling helps explain how needless public works projects are built, subsidies created and sustained, and programs continued long after they have outlived their usefulness or been proved failures. And, of course, the bill for every penny of this profligacy and waste goes to the already overburdened American taxpayer.

At least the governors of 43 states have a useful weapon with which to combat the budgetary consequences of logrolling. It is called the line-item veto. With it, governors can take up blue pencil and neatly delete wasteful appropriation items in budgets sent to them by their legislatures.

Two things make the line-item veto effective. First, it can be used without vetoing an entire appropriation bill that may be essential to keep government operation. Second, overriding a line-item veto typically requires a two-third vote, always a difficult margin to muster.

These attributes help explain why Congress in general and Democrats in particular are so loath to hand this power to President Reagan. Congress has always jealously guarded its power of the purse, and no president since Andrew Jackson has been allowed by Congress to veto individual appropriations in the budget bill.

And because Reagan and congressional Democrats disagree on spending priorities, many Democrats fear that the president would use the line-item veto to reorder those priorities.

But President Reagan has some weighty arguments of his own. The congressional budget process is demonstrably out of control and the resulting deficits might eventually menace economic recovery if something more is not done to restrain spending. The Democrats themselves profess to believe just that.

If they really do, they will at least give a fair hearing to Reagan's request for legislation, or better yet, a constitutional amendment granting a president the right to combat budget waste via the line-item veto.

More help for the real needy

One reason Speaker Tip O'Neill does not want to go for any election-year "deal" on a deficit-reducing plan to link tax increases to spending cuts, is that he thinks it might take away the "fairness" issue for Democrats. The fairness issue is bogus. The fact is: total spending on the five so-called "safety net" programs has risen over 37 percent since 1980, and nearly 20 percent since FY 1981 (Carter's last budget).

While, in 1984, this amount is roughly $7 billion less than it would have been under the Carter proposals, virtually all of that level of growth has been taken, not out of the poor, or the elderly or the sick or disabled, but from the able-bodied persons living at 150 percent of the poverty line or higher. Which is to say, the main effect of the 1981 Reagan budget proposals was to target the safety net programs on the poor, and take them away from those who are able to support themselves.

It may come as a shock to most Americans but in 1981, when Reagan took office, benefits totalling more than $20 billion went to recipients whose total cash and in-kind benefits exceeded 150 percent of the poverty level (over $14,000).

As Professor Kenneth Clarkson of the University of Miami pointed out in a recent paper for the American Enterprise Institute (AEI), "This figure indicated the amount of resources ($20 billion) that could be redirected or saved without significantly harming the truly needy.

"We note that less than one third of that amount was actually redirected (or cut) for fiscal year 1984. This comparison (suggests) that future reforms are feasible without significantly lowering the social safety net."

As Professor Clarkson points out, "The combination of poorly designed programs and associated errors and abuses often resulted in the inefficient distribution of existing resources."

Clarkson says that when he looked at individual programs and counted the so-called "in-kind" benefits at market value, he found that on AFDC, for example, 27 percent of all the benefits go to individuals with over 150 percent of poverty level income; 25 percent of food stamps; 33 percent of free or reduced price lunches; 53 percent of Medicaid; 47 percent of public housing; and 54 percent of Section 8 housing subsidies.

This is why the pre-1982 "social safety net" was so ineffective in reducing the so-called "poverty gap," the gap between what poverty would be without the programs and with them.

"In 1981, the pre-transfer (i.e. before social spending) poverty gap was $50.1

billion in 1982 dollars. After spending about $81 billion in means-tested benefits (for the poor), including in-kind transfers (of food and health benefits) the after-transfer poverty gap remained as $25.6 billion in 1982.

This means out of $81 billion in spending, only $24.5 billion actually cut poverty. This is about a 30-percent effective "targeting" of benefits to the needy. Even when you confine that analysis to the five "safety net" programs (approximately $58 billion in 1983), that "Target Efficiency Index" in 1981 was only 49 percent.

Clarkson then analyzed the latest data from the two Current Population Surveys (CPS) of March 1982 and 1983, to see whether or not the Reagan safety net concept had helped improve that Target Efficiency Index.

He found that it had. "Between 1981 and 1982, the CPS survey shows that the Target Efficiency Index rose 10 percent, from 49 percent of total benefits (going to) reduce the poverty gap to 54 percent."

"This improved targeting of benefits occurred despite the modest decline in means-tested benefits between 1981 and 1982."

For example, Clarkson found that in the food stamp program improved "targeting" was especially evident. "In 1981, 65.4 percent of families participating in the food stamp program cash incomes below the poverty line. By 1982, the actual number of families in this category (getting food stamps) had increased (by about 12 percent), moving the percentage of total food stamp recipients with incomes below the poverty line up to 71.3 percent."

Furthermore, Clarkson noted that the average food stamp bonus per meal was increased from 45 percent in 1981 to 54 cents in 1982, a 20-percent rise, while food prices rose only 6 percent.

"Contrary to some beliefs... the Reagan administration's efforts to re-target benefits, redesign incentives, and improve management in the food stamp portion of the safety net has actually improved delivery of goods to the truly needy."

The same is true of child nutrition programs. Clarke says that "reforms in the social safety net programs certainly have not been as severe as some critics have indicated. Nor has funding for these basic programs been cut drastically."

Instead, we have substantially improved the targeting of this funding to those who really need them - and the screaming you hear is not from the poor, whose benefits have generally improved, but from the politicians and advocates, who have lost a lot of their above-the-poverty-line clients and constituents.

How Congress gets advisors

A lady friend of mine from Maryland named Sally came into the office the other day and showed me a letter. "I need your advice on this."

I looked at the letterhead. It was from the "U.S. Congressional Advisory Board," which listed as Co-Chairman Sen. Jack Garn (R-Utah), Sen. J. Bennett Johnston (D-La.), Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), and Rep. Bill Chappell Jr. (D-Fla.).

The letter began, "We are writing to you today personally to invite you to join with us in the select U.S. Congressional Advisory Board."

"As a charter member you will advise and support the members of Congress (232 Senators and Reps) who belong to the Coalition for Peace Through Strength. Our objective is to get today's and tomorrow's opinion leaders really involved and helping on defense, foreign policy, and internal security matters."

The letter then went on to say that the "Advisory Board" was in a fight with "well established ultra liberal organizations who have been unilaterally disarming the U.S.

and are trying to keep us from rebuilding our strength."

It said that Sally could become a Chairman's Advisor for $1,000, a Senior Advisor for $500, a Special Advisor for $250, and a State Advisor for $100, annually of course.

If Sally became an advisor to the chairmen, she would receive a "Handsome Engraved Wall Plaque" to hang in her home or office. If she chose to be a senior, special or state advisor she would receive "a 9-12 Embossed and Sealed Membership Certificate."

She would also get a "Special Identification Tag" to wear to congressional receptions. But most important of all, Sally would "establish one-on-one relationships with Members of Congress and other leaders on the Congressional Advisory Board."

After finishing the letter I said, "It's a helluva honor, Sally. What's the problem?"

"I just have a feeling they're trying to get some money out of me."

"That's ridiculous. I'll bet they haven't sent out more than 500,000 letters like this. You should feel flattered that Garn, Johnston, Kemp and Chappell are seeking your input on the problems of this country. I know those guys and they don't take advice very easily."

"But," Sally protested, "I don't know anything about defense, foreign policy or internal security."

"Don't be modest, Sally. They apparently think otherwise or they wouldn't have written to you."

"I thought senators and congressmen held hearings and questioned expert witnesses on things like that."

"Of course they do. But then they also depend on advice from other sources. This is a great opportunity, Sally, that you may never have again. Just think of you sitting in a room with these four powerful legislators. They're up a tree on what to do about the arms talks and they turn to you in a desperation and say, 'Sally, what do you think we should do to acquire a first-strike capability?'"

"Do you believe they'll really ask my opinion on things like that?"

"Of course they will. They're not going to put someone on a U.S. Congressional Advisory Board whose opinion they don't respect."

"How often do you think they'll want to meet with me?"

"It doesn't say here in the letter, but I would guess at least once a day. Also, I imagine when a big defense bill came up in Congress they would want to call you at home to see how they should vote."

"It's an awesome responsibility," Sally said.

"That's why they're asking you to send in $1,000 annually. This will prevent them from getting advice from deadbeats."

"Maybe I should just send in $250 and become a 'Special Advisor.' Then I'd have time for other things."

"You have to go for the big one, Sally," I told her. "No respectable U.S. senator or congressman is going to take advice from somebody who won't put her money where her mouth is."

The big danger of socialism

Socialism is a curse, not because it does nothing for you and me but because it does so much. Any law which makes it unnecessary for individuals to support themselves - to keep the ever-present wolf from the door - is, though a seeming boon, a bane.

The reason, to put it bluntly, is that man is by nature lazy. Arrange his life so that he does not have to exert himself, and he won't. For several reasons, this is unhealthy.

The present generation of old folks is doubly in the money. They were born and grew up before Social Security benefits for the aged were thought of. In those early years of the century, people still assumed they would have to support themselves, somehow, in their old age, just as their parents and grandparents had. So they prepared to.

Then, in the 1930's they were handed Social Security, which now pays them a fairly liberal monthly pension. So they are doubly provided for.

The younger people will observe - have already observed - that S.S. will provide at least a backlog of security for them in their dotage. So, why sweat to save now? "Let's spend it up. Social Security will take care of us later."

Whereas we present-day codgers have both S.S. benefit, and self-security savings, the old-folks to come till have only the Social kind. And the amount will depend on the bureaucrats.

In a socialized society, nobody saves. Why should they? The state promises to take care of them.

Few of us paid any attention to the Social Security act when it was enacted - was it in 1935? If Joe Doakes had told me then that in 1984 I would be getting a sizable check from Washington every month for doing absolutely nothing, I would have suggested he go to a psychiatrist. We went right on putting that pittance in the savings account every week and considering ourselves lucky to have it.

After a couple of decades of compounding, it began to look of respectable size, so we ventured to invest a few bucks in stocks. Thirty or 40 years of odd-lotting and we had accumulated enough to supplement our S.S. benefits. But those benefits are rotting the urge to invest, and the next generation won't know an odd lot from a pasture lot. S.S., which makes us all secure, will make us all non-earners - non-producers.

The old folks are well cared for now, but that won't last. They will not work when they no longer have to, and in a couple of generations they will be right back with their sons and daughters, helping with the housework and looking after the latest arrivals in the cradle.

Well, maybe that is where they belong. Their S.S. check will enable them to put their own thin envelope in the collection plate on Sunday, besides paying for a new hairdo now and then.

Chernenko, Reagan different but with similar backgrounds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The differences between Konstantin U. Chernenko and Ronald Wilson Reagan are as wide as the steppes of Russia.

When Chernenko, the new Soviet leader, berates Washington's "primitive anti-communism" he is talking about Reagan. When Reagan questions the Soviets' commitment to peace, he is referring to people like Chernenko.

And yet, there is much in the background of these leaders of the two superpowers to share.

It begins with their ages: both were born in 1911 — Reagan is seven months older — and both are the oldest to ever head their governments.

It continues with their backgrounds: humble.

Reagan's father was a sometime shoe salesman and sometime alcoholic and young Ronald's childhood was one of constant moving and poverty. He remembers it as being happy.

And so it was with Chernenko, in Siberia.

"I was born into a large and poor peasant family in the Krasnoyarsk Region," Chernenko wrote in an introduction to a collection of his speeches and articles.

"I left my mother when I was a young boy. At 12 I went to work for a wealthy master to earn my living. New Soviet life was just coming into its own and I felt its fresh winds when I joined the Young Communist League.

"That was back in 1926. We studied and held down our jobs at the same time. We were underfed and poorly clothed, but the dreams of a radiant future for all fascinated us and made us happy."

Reagan, too, got his political ideas early.

In his autobiography, he writes: "I was a near-hopeless hemophiliac liberal. I bled for causes. I had voted Democratic, following my father, in every election. I had followed FDR (Franklin D. Roosevelt) blindly. The story of my disillusionment with big government is linked fundamentally with the ideals that suddenly sprouted..."

Reagan's ideas of success are rooted in the Horatio Alger legend and so, in a way, are Chernenko's.

The New York Times observed that "woven through Mr. Chernenko's published thoughts is the belief that if he could make it through hard work and loyalty, others could too... and a belief that ideology — if only it is properly served up — should be capable of inspiring young Russians the way it inspired him."

Neither man had World War II combat experience, unusual for politicians of their generation. Reagan was in the service, but his bad eyesight caused him to fight the war in California as part of the Culver City Commandos, the first motion-picture unit of the Army Air Corps.

Reagan turned to politics when his movie career turned sour, registering for the first time as a Republican in 1962 when he ended a stint as spokesman for General Electric. He was elected governor in 1966 and again in 1970.

Chernenko's rise was tied to that of Leonid Brezhnev; their association went back 30 years to when he was party propaganda chief for Brezhnev in the southern Moldavian Republic.

Suspect is placed at bombing

DALLAS (AP) — A city magistrate has denied a motion to reduce the bond of a man charged with murder in connection with the slaying of his stepfather, who was killed when a bomb exploded inside a newspaper vending box.

Marshall Dewayne Williams, 21, of Mesquite, remained jailed in lieu of $100,000 bond today after Magistrate Ken Hurrington turned down a defense motion to reduce his bail to $50,000 Tuesday night.

Williams is charged in connection with the Jan. 27 death of Ward S. Keeton, 63, who was killed when he opened a newspaper vending box near his North Dallas apartment.

A Dallas police homicide investigator testified Tuesday that Williams beat police to the victim's apartment and retrieved a plaque the Ku Klux Klan had given the victim.

Investigator T.J. Barnes said a resident of the apartments told police that he spoke to Williams as the defendant and two other men loaded Keeton's furniture into a rental truck about an hour after the bombing.

Williams has said that he built the bomb at his home, according to investigators.

A new heart for Valentine's Day

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Encouraged by her "good" appearance, relatives and doctors say they're hopeful that a 6-year-old girl who "got a new heart for Valentine's Day" will recover fully from the world's first heart and liver transplant.

"She seems to be doing better than other liver transplant patients," Dr. William Donaldson, medical director at Children's Hospital, said Tuesday after the 16-hour operation.

Stormie Jones of Cumby, Texas, was moved into an isolated room in the hospital's intensive care unit after the operation ended Tuesday morning. She was listed in critical but stable condition today, considered normal for recent transplant patients.

The child was born with a rare disease that caused her blood fat to rise to life-threatening levels, damaging both her heart and her liver, hospital officials said.

She had suffered two heart attacks in the past few months and would have died without the double operation, doctors said.

The blond, blue-eyed girl's mother, Lois Jones, 27, visited her daughter after the operation. Stormie's parents are divorced.

"I'm happy with the results. She looks good," Mrs. Jones said.

"We'll make it," added Donnie Millsap, 25, Mrs. Jones' fiancé.

Dr. Thomas Starzl, the liver transplant pioneer who headed the surgery along with heart transplant surgeon Dr. Henry T. Bahnson, hailed the operation as a milestone.

"It's a very important case, of course for the child, but also in that the amount of information that will be obtained from that kind of situation is really overwhelming," Starzl said in an interview at his Pittsburgh home following the operation.

Mrs. Jones, who has not yet learned whether her insurance will cover the costly operation, came to Pittsburgh with Stormie 1½ months ago to await a compatible donor. Stormie's sister, 9-year-old Misty, is staying with relatives back home, where residents have raised $7,000 for the family. Liver transplants alone average at least $70,000.

Recently Stormie made a red-and-beige valentine for her mother and pasted her own photograph on it. In the picture, she is holding a cake that reads "I love Mom."

Following the transplant, Mrs. Jones returned her daughter's gift with a special valentine greeting of her own.

"I told her I loved her," Mrs. Jones said. "I told her she got a new heart for Valentine's Day."

Dear Abby

Love affair has gone to the dogs

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, Jim, and I live together, and my problem is his three dogs. They are with us 24 hours a day! We don't go to movies or restaurants because he can't take the dogs. If he leaves them locked in the car, they bark and howl.

He used to insist that the dogs be in our bedroom all the time. When we made love, one dog would sit on the floor with his chin on the mattress, watching! It really turned me off, so I said, "No lovemaking with the dogs in the room." Now he puts them out, but they scratch at the door and whine the whole time. And the first thing he says after lovemaking is, "Let the dogs in."

These dogs are with Jim constantly. The minute he sits down, one dog sits beside him, the other one jumps on his lap and the third one lies at his feet. There is no room for me. It's almost as though the dogs have a conspiracy to keep us apart.

What do you think of this situation? My mother says I should give Jim an ultimatum: me or the dogs.

COMPETING WITH DOGS

DEAR COMPETING: It's no canine conspiracy; Jim has trained his dogs to come between you and him. Don't give Jim an ultimatum. The dogs will win—paws down!

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. I am 51 and my husband is 52. We have a very good marriage, which includes a satisfying and active sex life.

My periods ceased two years ago, but I still insist we take contraceptive precautions. My husband objects to this, saying it is reducing his desire for me.

I don't want him to grow cold. Am I being silly? If there is even the slightest chance of getting pregnant, I don't want to risk it.

Please advise me. I trust you.

TAKING NO CHANCES IN IRELAND

DEAR TAKING: Would you trust another Irishman? Dr. John A. Haugen, my gynecologist of many years, says, "The rule is: No periods for 12 consecutive months means pregnancy is not possible, so the lady is doubly safe."

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I met this man through a mail club last summer. The first time we met in person, he talked me into going to bed with him. I'm not usually that easy, but he was such a fast talker, before I could think of a good argument against it, he had won.

He lives in Jacksonville and I live in Palm Beach, and we have been together almost every weekend since we met. I still don't know much about him. I just know he's the best salesman I've ever met. I have yet to meet any of his family, but he has met all of mine. He almost talked me into marrying him last Christmas. When we are apart and I can think straight, I ask myself, "What is his hurry?"

I guess I don't really trust him 100 percent. I don't like the way he looks at other women when he's with me. I think he's still shopping, even though he says he loves me.

I need to tell this turkey my true feelings, but I don't have the nerve. What do I do now? I'm a nice-looking, 64-year-old widow and I'm not hard up for anything. He says he's 65, but I don't believe that either.

BEING RUSHED

DEAR RUSHED: I think your instincts are good. Go with them. If you don't have the nerve to tell him that you don't trust him, don't like the way he looks at other women and don't like being rushed—write him a letter, and write him off.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet: "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Efficiency the key

New hairstyles simple

CHICAGO (AP) — Hairstyles that work — for the woman and her lifestyle — will take a prominent fashion role this spring and summer, industry experts predict.

Hair silhouettes will be simple and narrow, and the blunt-cut, one-length bob will be a favorite among women of all ages, according to the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board, a group of recognized professionals from around the country.

Perms are expected to provide the foundations for many of these styles.

"Bobs will be everywhere this spring, but there are so many possible variations that few women will look alike," comments board member Victor Figueroa of New York City. "My clients like the versatility of the bob, but want to personalize their hair fashion statement. To some this means soft, spiky bangs, to others, an asymmetrical design." Michael Marks, Elkins Park, Pa., agrees that "simplicity and efficiency in design are key to a workable hairstyle that's fashionable as well. Today's woman doesn't have the time to fuss with a lot of unruly hair. She wants something that's fast, manageable and very versatile. I call it 'reality fashion.'"

"Versatility will come in many ways: partial perms in areas where volume and support are needed will be popular; evening styles will be created instantly with a dab of styling mousse to control and slick one side behind the ears; a comb, barrette or bright jewel can be placed in the crest of a wave for accent; slightly messy strands of hair that fall out of the sleek silhouette of the bob will create a natural, casual wind-blown feeling."

While the bob will be the biggest hit of the season,

Rocco Altobelli of Minneapolis-St. Paul sees other looks emerging on the fashion scene.

"Very short spiky curls, a tone-down version of the punk look from past seasons, the sensuous 'Marilyn Monroe' fluff-cut and even a super-short 'I.' cut for the very young and daring will make a fashion statement nationwide," he predicts.

Rosalie Cantrell of Seattle also thinks "many women are ready to experiment with their hair. Asymmetric looks, combining several shapes in one haircut, will be quite right for the stylish woman. The side lengths can be longer or shorter depending on how dramatic an effect is desired."

While women are looking for more dramatic looks in their hairstyles, men, who patronize beauty salons in ever-increasing numbers, favor a more conservative look. Mario Tricoci of Oak

Brook, Ill., finds that his male clientele "want to look very corporate, but are willing to have a perm, or add subtle color changes as long as it looks natural."

"I'm perming even the smoothest of bob looks," comments Douglas Marvaldi.

"My clients who had the wild and frizzy perms of the late '70s have come to depend on the support and fullness only a perm can give. But now they add one more quick step, using a hot styling brush, curling iron or electric rollers to smooth the curl while leaving the volume."

Originality main concern of modern rug weaver

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (AP) — There's a mystique about sitting at a loom, lost in the artistry of weaving bright yarns into a beautiful design, producing a rug so glorious that it doesn't end up under foot but hangs on the wall like a painting.

Alice Pickett of Doylestown makes such rugs, but she finds her hours at the loom anticlimactic, even boring. She hates to admit it, but sometimes while she's weaving she watches TV. To her, the intensity and adventure come when she sits down with a pencil and graph paper to create a design.

She can make a Lightning Rug, bright red shot through with a yellow zigzag that seems to vibrate; or a bold geometric pattern composed of tiny stripes of many colors; or a tapestry-like weave that comes out of a shaft-switching technique; or a picture made up of little blocks, like something from a computer.

"I try very hard to do original contemporary design," Mrs. Pickett says. "The whole joy of doing it is to do something different and original."

Mrs. Pickett is not pleased to hear people compare her rugs to those made by Navajos or early American settlers. She rejects such imitation both because she works from her own vision and because of the market value of her rugs — $30 a square foot and heading higher.

"I couldn't make as much money as I do, rehashing colonial things," she says.

Mrs. Pickett gets $620 for her average-size 43-by-70-inch rug, turning out about 20 a year on a loom that completely fills what was supposed to be her dining room. She sells them through an interior design firm with an affiliated art gallery in Boston, through the Artisans Cooperative in Chadd's Ford, and occasionally at shows.

"Artists aren't supposed to be monetary," she says, "but it's nice to be able to go out and buy yarn and not feel guilty afterward."

When Mrs. Pickett designs a rug, she starts with a sketch. Then she sits down with the graph paper and does a careful rendering of every curve and angle. When she plans the colors, as often as not she decides to dye the yarn herself. She wants shadings so gradual that one color will slide into another with no obvious line between the hues.

Although her rugs are modern, she doesn't consider them avant-garde. She says what she's doing is combining traditional techniques in a new way.

"I do original designs," she says, "but there is a lot of super-unconventional fiber work being done out there. My mind doesn't work that way. I have this functional idea behind most of my work."

Not every rug Mrs. Pickett weaves turns out successfully.

FORMER HOME—After an auto accident in 1964 which nearly killed him, John E. Davis of Charleston, W. Va., often slept here at Spring Hill Cemetery. A "spiritual experience" in the graveyard reversed the brain damage he suffered from. Today, Davis is reinstated as a practicing attorney. (AP Laserphoto)

Lawyer makes a 'miraculous recovery'

By STEVE Le VINE
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Once the governor's lawyer and friend of the Kennedys, John E. Davis made a long, agonizing descent to the gutter. Now a "miraculous recovery" from brain damage has brought him back into the world he once knew.

Davis has struggled for more than a decade to regain his lost stature, most recently fighting a large chemical company to put 150 unemployed coal miners back to work.

"I'm beginning to have some acceptance among the people and friends I had before," says Davis, an intense 49-year-old whose Charleston office is adorned with autographed pictures of President Nixon and Robert and Edward Kennedy.

By the age of 30, Davis was already a partner in a prominent law firm. His resume included stints as personal lawyer to former Gov. W.W. Barron and as a principal in John Kennedy's 1960 presidential campaign. He owned a real estate company, vacationed on his own island off Virginia and drove a Jaguar convertible.

He wrecked the car in 1964 and very nearly his life as well. Brain damage diagnosed by doctors as progressive and untreatable slowly eroded his mind. Davis lost his friends, law practice, home and marriage.

By his own account, he spent almost a decade in the gutter, usually babbling to himself, drinking heavily. Sometimes he slept in a cemetery.

Davis points to a "profound spiritual experience" in 1977 as the start of his long climb back, but he's not interested in proselytizing others — "I'm not Elmer Gantry."

Still, Davis sometimes seems suffused with evangelical fervor, abruptly digressing from a discussion of West Virginia politics to a recitation of poetry from a stack of inspirational originals. Other times, a hint of his ordeal appears. His speech sometimes slurs, which he says is because he is not concentrating hard enough, and he will walk around his office as though in a trance, his gaze distant.

Cecil Johnson, owner of a now-closed Charleston diner once frequented by Davis, remembers Davis before the accident as "an Einstein," an astute lawyer with friends in important places.

"He was one of those guys who had a photographic memory. He could read something and tell you what page it was on and what paragraph it was in."

In 1960, Davis helped engineer the West Virginia presidential primary victory that John F. Kennedy later credited as the turning point of his campaign. In 1964, Barron left office and formed a law firm with Davis.

Davis entered into the partnership just months after smashing his Jaguar into a bridge. Thrown onto the pavement, he damaged the right side of his brain, affecting his speech, memory and emotions.

He went on practicing law, but "when people thought I was the most successful, I was having seizures all the time," Davis says.

"By 1969, I couldn't function at all."

Davis says he still had "the edge of courage" in 1974 when he tried to return to the courtroom. He fought the state bar association's move to block him, but on his birthday in 1977, July 12, his license was indefinitely suspended. The bar gave Davis, by then divorced from his wife, Ruth, a year to rehabilitate himself, but his family doctor told him "you don't even have a year to live," Davis recalls.

The day he got that prognosis, Davis returned to the Spring Hill Cemetery overlooking the city, where he had been sleeping frequently. It was there, he says, a "spiritual experience" stopped his relentless decline.

"I didn't see lights, didn't hear voices echoing from the mountaintops, didn't have any mission sent upon me, except being a human being," Davis says. "That might be the biggest mission, but perhaps one I didn't understand before."

He describes the experience as a "sense of kinship, a oneness with the universe. I felt my whole brain reorganize. I learned more things that night than I'll ever be able to explain."

Davis began a health regimen, seeing doctors, running, reading and practicing concentration.

Davis bought himself a big, three-by-six mirror and a podium. Following Demosthenes, who used pebbles, Davis put marbles in his mouth to practice speaking and enunciation, he says.

Mondale uses Reagan to solve a problem

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
OTTUMWA, Iowa (AP) — Walter F. Mondale has a problem and he's using President Reagan to help solve it. The incident tells something about the political styles of both men.

With Mondale being repeatedly described as the heavy favorite in Monday's Iowa precinct caucuses, his campaign aides are worried that many of his supporters won't bother showing up.

They devised a "Five for Fritz" gimmick in which Mondale backers are urged to bring four people each to their caucus. Democrats identified as Mondale supporters also are getting printed invitations that begin, "Joan and Fritz Mondale respectfully request the honor of your presence at one of the most important events of their lives." The event, of course, is the caucuses.

These are standard devices for trying to boost turnout. But Reagan gave Mondale a bonus in his turnout campaign when the president decided to make a caucus-day visit to Iowa. It demonstrated both men at their political best.

It was an irresistible opportunity for Reagan to mix nostalgia and politics. He'll visit the state where he was Dutch Reagan the radio announcer in the 1930s.

Republicans hope his trip will generate some enthusiasm for their caucuses where there is no presidential contest and, more importantly, for the re-election campaign of Sen. Roger Jepsen, regarded as one of the most vulnerable Republicans running this year.

Iowa Democrats and some of the presidential candidates were quick to cry "foul" when the Reagan visit was announced, but Mondale quickly turned it to his advantage.

At every campaign stop, he told supporters that on Feb. 20, "The voters of Iowa will be the most powerful citizens on Earth."

"Mr. Reagan has decided to come to Iowa that day. Why don't we all deliver just a little message to him while he is here about what we want for this country and who we want to lead it?"

It's an appeal that always draws a cheer from the partisan audiences and gives one more incentive for Democrats to turn out for the caucuses.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

Try to function as independently as possible this coming year because you may not fare too well in partnerships. What you attempt to do on your own will be another story.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) One-to-one relationships are still a bit touchy, so be careful today how you conduct yourself. Try not to cast blame on others. Want to find out to whom you are best suited romantically? Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 for your Matchmaker wheel and booklet set, which reveals compatibilities for all signs, plus more. Mail an additional $1 plus your zodiac sign for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not wait upon others to help you today with responsibilities which require immediate attention. They could be so involved they'll forget you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not be a scene-stealer in social situations today. If you try to dominate the show, it won't go over too well with your peers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Domestic happenings could be a bit trying today. It might be advisable to get out of the house awhile just to break the pattern.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is a possibility your concentration might not be up to par today, so it's important to think before you speak.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Although your intentions will be good, there's a chance that you could create bigger problems for one whose affairs you're attempting to manage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't rely too heavily upon allies today. Someone you think is on your side might suddenly shift his or her allegiance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Should responsibilities get too tough for you today, walk away for awhile and come back to them later. Above all, don't attempt to do too much at one time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today is a bad day to gamble on risky ventures, even if you are linked with a friend who usually fares rather well on fliers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you conduct yourself too forcefully today, your results are likely to end up opposite to what you desire. Be tactful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) First, count to 10 today before giving anyone a piece of your mind. If you fail to use the soft approach, you'll be asking for trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Even though you may be tempted to do so, this is not a good day to lean on, or make demands of, persons obligated to you. Wait until later.

Lions Club, Pampa media tip off for Miss Guenther Saturday night

By L.D. STRATE
News Sports Editor

Rebekkah Guenther's eye problems started as a high school sophomore and grew steadily worse. She started seeing one big black dot, then a series of dots followed by blurred vision.

Miss Guenther, now a Pampa High senior, was more aggravated than scared.

"It was really bugging me," she recalled. "It was interfering with everything I did."

Miss Guenther went to a doctor, who diagnosed her problem as "pars planitis," a rare form of eye disease. For two years, Miss Guenther went from clinics in Amarillo to the Dean McGee Eye Institute in Oklahoma City in hopes of finding a cure or at least temporary relief. The results were negative.

"They gave me a shot of cortizone in my eye, but that didn't work and nothing else seemed to help," Miss Guenther said.

Then last year, Dr. George Walters, who first examined Miss Guenther, heard about the National Eye Institute in Bethesda, Maryland and an experimental drug called "Cyclosporin A" which researchers were having success with under laboratory conditions.

With Dr. Walters' recommendation, Miss Guenther was admitted into a testing program at the institute where she and 25 others from across the United States were treated with the new drug.

"On the third day of taking the drug, I started seeing better," Miss Guenther said. "Now, I've got 20-50 vision in my left eye and 20-20 in my right eye."

However, Miss Guenther must return to the institute for more treatments if her condition is to continually improve.

The Pampa Noon Lions Club has been paying Miss Guenther's transportation costs, but its sight conservation fund is almost depleted and more money must be raised as soon as possible.

To help raise the necessary funds, Lions Club members have planned a benefit basketball game with the Pampa Media for Saturday night, starting at 7:30 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse. Miss Guenther, a Lady Harvester basketball player, will coach the Lions Club.

Tickets are selling fast for the benefit game, which the Lions Club hopes to make an annual event. Floyd Sackett, Noon Lions Club president, said between 750 and 1,000 tickets have already been sold.

Sackett said Pampa Merchants have donated prizes to be awarded at halftime to fans holding the winning numbers.

"We'll be selling popcorn during the game and the numbers will be in each bag," Sackett explained. "We're hoping to have over 50 prizes to give away."

Tickets are two dollars for adults and one dollar for students. Tickets may be purchased from any participating Noon Lions Club member, or at the Chamber of Commerce or Farm Bureau offices.

LA Open tees off Thursday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On paper, the $400,000 Los Angeles Open has drawn the strongest field of the still-young 1984 PGA Tour.

The current holders of the Big Four titles — Tom Watson, British Open; Larry Nelson, U.S. Open; Seve Ballesteros, Masters; Hal Sutton, PGA — are together for the first time this year in the event.

Harvesters close in on unbeaten loop season with Dumas win

DUMAS—No. 13 was a lucky number for the Pampa Harvesters Tuesday night. The Harvesters shot 60 percent from the floor the second half to pull away from Dumas for a 73-46 victory and are only one game away from an unbeaten District 1-4A season.

Pampa, now 13-0 in league play and 23-5 overall, couldn't break away from Dumas in the first half and led by only 29-26 at intermission. However, the Harvesters outscored the Demons, 10-2, in the opening minutes of the third quarter and led by 20, 56-36, going into the fourth quarter. Pampa's 6-7 Coyle Winborn, who was held in check by Dumas' sagging zone defense the first half, scored 14 of his game-high 21 points the second half. Craig Chapin, a 5-11 senior, added 14 points to Pampa's attack.

Able Vasquez also tossed in 14 to lead Dumas, now 11-15 and 5-8.

Dumas guard Shawn Read, who hit 26 points against Pampa in the first game Jan. 17, was held to only six last night.

"The kids really played good defense the second half," said Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols. "Dumas started out slowing the ball down, but we played good ball and shot extremely well from the floor the second half."

Pampa, ranked No. 2 in the Class 4A state basketball poll, closes out the regular season Friday night at Lubbock Dunbar.

Tickets are on sale now at the athletic office for Pampa's practice game Monday with District 3-5A champions Amarillo High.

"That game and our game with Amarillo High will enable us to work on our inside rebounding against big people," Nichols said.

The Sandies clinched the 3-5A title with a 66-55 win over Lubbock Coronado last night. AHS has a 23-3 record.

Pampa's Junior Varsity also won Tuesday night, defeating Dumas JV, 53-29. Jeff Gaines led the Shockers with 18 points.

"We played real good defense the second and third quarters which enabled us to win," said Pampa Coach Sparky Roberts.

The Shockers were now 19-4 overall and in second place in the district standings with a 10-3 record.

The Shockers' game with Lubbock Dunbar JVs Friday night will be aired over KGRO (1320) Radio.

NBA roundup

Cavaliers win fight-marred game

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Cleveland's four-game winning streak has the Cavaliers in a fiery mood and their opponents fighting mad.

Two fights marred the contest as Cavaliers broke a 16-game losing streak against the New Jersey Nets with a 103-93 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night.

Four players were ejected for fighting — Cleveland's Phil Hubbard and New Jersey's Micheal Ray Richardson in the second quarter and Cleveland's Lonnie Shelton and New Jersey's Buck Williams in the third.

But Cleveland coach Tom Nissalke was not as concerned with the punching as he was pleased that his team beat the Nets and won four games in a row for the first time in three years.

"That was one of our best games," Nissalke said after the Cavaliers opened a 61-34 lead at halftime, their biggest bulge at the midway point of a game this season.

"We just absolutely brutalized that hoop, didn't we?" said Nets Coach Stan Albeck, whose team shot 41.6 percent for the game.

Williams and Shelton squared off before, in a game earlier this season in New Jersey. Shelton was fined $2,500 on that occasion.

"Basically, this was the same thing," Williams said. "I was going in for a rebound and he threw an elbow."

There's no way I could have not fought with him tonight." The fights did not distract Cleveland's World B. Free, who returned from a back injury to score 18 of his 30 points in the second quarter.

Kelvin Ransey scored 21 points to lead New Jersey, which got just five points and three rebounds from foul-plagued center Darryl Dawkins.

In other NBA action, it was

New York 106, Kansas City 100; Chicago 112, San Diego 99; Milwaukee 92, Phoenix 83; Detroit 126, Houston 119; Utah 100, Atlanta 98; Washington 108, Denver 96 and Golden State 105, Seattle 102. Jazz 106, Hawks 96.

Utah won at home for its first victory in 10 tries against Atlanta since the Jazz moved to Salt Lake City in 1979.

Adrian Dantley scored 28 points for the Jazz.

Canadian wins practice game

CANADIAN—Canadian girls slipped by Higgins, 39-35, in a practice game Tuesday night.

The Lady Wildcats, who play Littlefield at 8 p.m. Friday night in a Class 3A bi-district game in Amarillo Civic Center, forced Higgins into 19 turnovers.

"They outrebounded us and outshot us from the floor, but we outlasted them," said Canadian Coach Steve Zurline.

Higgins hit only 10 percent from the foul line while Canadian downed 50 percent of its attempts.

Stephanie Mitchell led Canadian with 12 points. Regina Cano, Beth Ramp and Dana Johnson had six points apiece, while Melinda Vanhooser had four, Kelly Schoenhals three and Penny Kendall two.

"It was a typical practice game," said Zurline. "We did a lot of different things and showed everything we had. We learned a lot from it."

Tickets for the bi-district game are available now at the Canadian Superintendent's Office. Tickets are four dollars for adults and two dollars for students.

Fans will also be able to see the Perryton-Abernathy bi-district tilt, which start at 6:30 p.m. at the Civic Center. Perryton was runnerup to Canadian in District 1-3A.

Planning committee Pampa golfer hits first hole in one

A planning committee for the Pampa basketball banquet will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the high school football fieldhouse film room.

Mothers of all boys and girls on the ninth grade though high school varsity teams are urged to attend.

Dr. Joe Donaldson of Pampa scored his first hole in one recently at the Pampa Country Club course. He used a No. 4 iron to ace the 170-yard, No. 16 green. His playing partners were Dr. Foster Elder, Pete Blanda and O.M. Prigmore.

NEW YORK (AP) — A tawny 5-month-old theatrical cat is being primed in the wings for the role of a lifetime: to be the next Hamlet of the Algonquin.

He's extremely promising," says Andrew Anspach, managing director of the renowned Algonquin hotel, a New York institution for half a century, a literary hangout since its lounge was made a clubhouse by the likes of George S. Kaufman, Dorothy Parker and James Thurber.

An orange cat that slinks through the lobby and lets guests scratch its head has been an Algonquin institution almost as long.

Anspach said Tuesday that Hamlet III will be "ready for an official debut soon."

The Algonquin is bringing Hamlet III along in slow stages. The hotel man explained, because it doesn't want a repeat of the disappointment with the beautiful, lovable, but perhaps feckless Hamlet II. This apricot-colored Hamlet II, a gift from a staffer at the New Yorker magazine across the street, stayed around the Algonquin for only a year. He disappeared last March.

Anspach says he may have eloped with his girlfriend at the neighboring New York Yacht Club.

Before him there was the first Hamlet. He was lord of the lobby for 14 years. A touch snooty and on occasion a biter, he was the hero of the book "Algonquin Cat," and when he died in January 1982, Variety, the show business newspaper, ran his obituary.

LAKE CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Country entertainer Barbara Mandrell and television star Tom Wopat are in this tiny former coal mining town to start filming a made-for-TV movie called "Coal Fire."

It's the first major acting role for the 35-year-old award-winning singer and the first TV movie for Wopat, who stars in the CBS series, "The Dukes of Hazzard."

The $2 million production also stars Eddie Albert and Carol Kane. Eight Lake City and Caryville residents got speaking parts, with about 200 local folks as extras.

"It's really fun and interesting and totally different than anything else I've done... I never thought I'd do my first movie in Tennessee," said Miss Mandrell, a Tennessee native who lives with her husband, Ken Dudley, in Gallatin.

Miss Mandrell plays a geologist from Washington, D.C. who comes to town to help relocate residents who are in danger from a coal fire in a mine under the town.

She falls in love with Wopat, a fish and game agent who helps her discover the source of the fires.

British duo wins olympic gold medal

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean skated last of the 19 couples in the finale of the ice-dancing competition at the Winter Olympics.

But the wait for the British couple was worth it for the capacity crowd of 8,000 at the Zetra arena. They saw perfection.

In earning a gold medal, Britain's first of the Games, T & D, as they are known fondly to their adoring fans, earned unprecedented marks from the panel of judges. They received 12 perfect 6.0s out of 18 scores for their electrifying dance to Ravel's "Bolero" in the free-skating portion of the competition Tuesday night.

No one else in the field of 19 couples came close to matching their performance, which also included seven marks of 6.0 in earlier sections of the three-day competition.

"We've reached the pinnacle for us so far," said Dean, a 25-year-old former policeman from Nottingham. "This is the thing we've been going toward for at least the last four years, or since we put on skates and tonight this was it."

But as joyous as the competition was for the Britons, who gave their country its first gold medal of the Games, it was heartbreaking for Americans Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert.

Third entering the final event, they were shooting for the silver, but instead, found themselves bumped to fourth by Soviets Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko. Another Soviet couple won the silver.

Seibert said a low mark of 5.5 from the Italian judge cost them the medal.

"She's been a swing judge for us before... always swinging toward the Russians," said the 24-year-old from Washington, Pa.

"I just feel we skated well. We felt it was good skating, theatrical and showed what we do best," Blumberg said of the couple's exotic dance to "Sheherazade."

"I guess that it wasn't appreciated here tonight by the judges. What are you going to do?" she added.

American prospects for a figure-skating gold medal were still bright in the men's competition where three-time world champion Scott Hamilton had a commanding lead overall going into Thursday's free-skating.

Enke goes after third gold medal

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Karin Enke of East Germany sought her third gold medal in the last and toughest women's speed-skating event of the Winter Olympics — the 3,000 meters.

For the other skaters, the 3,000 was their final chance to break the East Europeans' hold on the women's speed-skating events at the XIV Winter Games.

Enke, 20, and her teammates have finished 1-2 in the three races held so far.

Her individual performances were: a gold in the 1,500 meters in world record time, 2:03.42; a gold in the 1,000 meters in Olympic record time, 1:21.61, and a silver in the 500 meters in 41.28.

Overall, the top seven finishers in the 1,500 were East Europeans. In the 500, the top six were East Europeans. In the 1,000, the top five were East Europeans.

Mary Docter, 23, of Madison, Wis., hoped to break that domination and win the United States' first speed-skating medal at the Games.

The 3,000 meters is her best distance. Two weeks before the Olympics she was a bronze medalist in the 3,000 at the world all-around championships in Holland.

"That made me feel really good because in the worlds I was the only free country skater that got a medal," Docter said. "I think it's bad if only a few countries dominate a sport like that. Nobody will be interested."

Docter entered two of the previous races here, finishing 14th in the 1,500 and 24th in the 1,000.

"But I'm concentrating on the long one (the 3,000)," she said. "I know I can do it again. I'm in shape. I've trained hard. I know how to skate. I don't have any problems right now with my technique."

Andrea Schoene of East Germany, who has won two silver medals in the speed skating events, called Docter a "threat."

"She surprised in the World Championships and she can do it again," Schoene said.

Swiss skier wins men's giant slalom

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Max Julen heard the roar and saw the Yugoslavians alongside the course raise their arms in celebration. It was left to him to spoil the party.

Jure Franko had just clocked the fastest time on the second run of the men's giant slalom at the Winter Olympics on Tuesday, moving into first place with a combined time of 2 minutes, 41.41 seconds. Yugoslavia had never won a medal in Winter Olympics competition, and Franko had appeared to give them a gold.

But Julen, who won the first run, had more than a half-second cushion on Franko, and he was determined to protect it.

"I saw and heard the reaction of the crowd," said the 22-year-old Swiss skier. "I knew Franko had achieved a good result and I told myself, 'You've got to give as much as you've got.'"

Julen was 38-hundredths of a second slower than Franko on the second run, but he won the gold with a combined 2:41.18. Franko took the silver, and Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein, silver medalist in the 1980 Olympic giant slalom, won the bronze in 2:41.75.

Franko was ecstatic, nevertheless.

"I had two very good runs, but I didn't really believe I would win the silver," he said. "What a joy."

But it was a disappointing day for the United States, following the gold-silver triumph by Debbie Armstrong and Christin Cooper in the women's giant slalom on Monday.

Phil Mahre, the three-time World Cup overall champion, finished eighth, and his brother Steve was 17th. Tiger Shaw of Stowe, Vt., fell on his first run.

Phil Mahre criticized the gate-setting and preparation of the course, which had a vertical drop of 382 meters on Mount Bjelasnica.

"There were a ridiculous number of gates on that hill," said Mahre, referring to 56 gates in the first run and 55 in the second. "And they watered the course. The Austrians and the Swiss like hard snow — the Yugoslavs, too — that's why they watered it. It should not happen."

The men's giant slalom was marked by the absence of two of the event's strongest competitors, Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark and Luxembourg's Marc Girardelli. Stenmark has been barred from competing because he accepted endorsement money directly, and Girardelli, an Austrian, doesn't have citizenship in Luxembourg.

"It is difficult to say if they (Stenmark and Girardelli) would have beaten me today," said Julen, "because the slope was just right for me. It was extremely difficult and icy, just the way I like it."

Julen has won just one World Cup race in his three seasons on the circuit.

West Germany wins luge doubles

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — West Germany's Hans Stangassinger and Franz Wembacher, with a spectacular second run down the Trebevic ice chute, won the Olympic gold medal in double luge today.

The former Alpine skier and the former soccer star had a combined time of 1 minute, 23.628 seconds for the two runs.

Evgeny Belousov and Aleksander Belyakov of the Soviet Union, who were leading after the first run, took the silver medal in 1:23.660. Joerg Hoffmann and Jochen Pietzsch of East Germany, the 1983 world champions, were third in 1:23.887.

Ronald Rossi of Yonkers, N.Y., and Douglas Bateman of Somerville, N.J., were eighth 1:24.651.

The West Germans were second after the first run in 41.880 seconds. But they had the fastest time of the day with their second in 41.740 to take the gold medal.

It was the second gold of the games for West Germany. Peter Angerer won the 20-kilometer biathlon last Saturday.
