Proposed city ordinance is not just for the dogs

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Pampa City Commission is in the new ordinance

> By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

- Many dog and cat owners in the city will find themselves having to make some changes in the lives of their pets, especially in letting them out of the house, according to the provisions of a new animal control ordinance being adopted by the city commission.

The new ordinance more specifically defines restraints pet owners are expected to use for their dogs and cats and puts stricter limits on allowing animals to run at large in the city.

One thing pet owners need to be aware of is that the new ordinance applies to cats as well as to dogs.

> About 200 citizens signed a letter in March, 1982, demanding city commissioners revise the current animal control ordinance to make it easier to prevent dogs from running at large. The action was taken after a several children had been bitten and attacked by dogs, including a 2-year-old Pampa boy who required more than 100 stitches.

> In the following weeks, a large number of residents held meetings to suggest changes in the ordinance. The city prepared a proposed new ordinance several months later but tabled adopting it after a number of citizens complained it was not much better than the old ordinance.

State education board tentatively okays back-to-basics curriculum

Education, in what one board member called an "historic moment," tentatively approved Saturday a new back-to-the-basics curriculum that mandates the teaching of evolution. The proposed curriculum would require elementary students to spend more time on reading, writing and arithmetic and would allow some of next year's seniors to get a special degree that might impress college admission officials. Board member Mary Ann Leveridge of East Barnard made the motion to adopt the new curriculum, which has been in the making for seven years and was debated for hours by the board on

'Imperfect flight' ends with perfect touchdown

With "a dream of a touchdown," Challenger wound up a flight of high drama and deep disappointments Saturday, landing for the first time at its Florida home port so it can return to space more quickly

"We've been wanting for a long time to be the first to land at America's spaceport," said commander Vance Brand, who guided the 101-ton shuttle to a textbook landing on the Kennedy Space Center runway.

It was a perfect'end to an imperfect flight. Two satellites launched from the shuttle failed to rise to a usable orbit, and a tracking balloon burst before it could be used. But Flight 10 also saw the spectacular first unrestrained sojourn in space by a human.

The ship sent twin sonic booms rolling across the flat Florida landscape as it came in high and fast over pad 39A where it had lifted off eight days earlier. It made a spectacular looping turn to runway 15, gliding down on the center line of the 15,000 foot strip, stopping with 3,300 feet to spare at exactly the predicted time: 7:16 a.m. EST. It had been aloft for seven days, 23 hours, 16 minutes and traveled 3.3 million miles.

There were a few scorch marks on was pronounced "in great shape," after its fourth flight. "That was a dream of a touchdown," said Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, the shuttle boss

A red carpet was rolled to the stairs for Brand, pilot Robert Gibson, space walkers Bruce McCandless and Robert Stewart and mission specialist Ronald McNair. They left their space plane. smiling, waving and in apparent good health

Eight of the nine previous flights have landed on a California desert; the other touched down in New Mexico. Each then required a cross-country piggy-back flight on a jumbo jet that cost up to eight days in "turnaround

With a landing here, the shuttle needed only to be towed five miles to the building where it undergoes repair and refurbishment. Agency officials confidently predicted an April 4 launching for the next mission, the shortest turnaround vet

'We have been trying for a long time to get this vehicle back into Kennedy and this of course marks an all-time first; that we have launched and landed at the same place," said NASA administrator James Beggs "No one has done that before anywhere in the Things started badly for the crew of flight 10. First one $75 million communications satellite, then a second, was launched with great precision from the shuttle cargo bay. Both failed to achieve a 22,300-mile geosynchronous orbit, apparently because of common malfunctions in their attached rocket stages.

Then a $450,000 balloon got hung up in its canister and burst as it was being inflated, canceling an important rendezvous exercise. The astronauts had to check their tracking gear with the orbiting remnants of the balloon.

NASA said that if it were asked to do so by the owners of the satellites, Western Union and the Indonesian government, it would study ways of retrieving the errant payloads using the shuttle. But the prospect seemed so difficult and expensive it probably would not be worthwhile

But when things worked, they worked

On Tuesday, McCandless and Stewart put on gas-filled backpacks and floated around in open space, with no safety line to keep them from drifting off. They moved a football field's distance above and behind the shuttle and performed somersaults framed against the Earth.

H. Ross Perot: Is he preaching or meddling?

EDITOR'S NOTE - He once sold newspapers on horseback in the black part of town. Despite his millions, he still lives modestly. But now this multimillionaire conservative, who has demonstrated his gumption from Vietnam to Iran, is tackling something tougher - the Texas school system.

By SCOTT McCARTNEY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Sometimes it's hard to remember that H. Ross Perot is for real.

During the Vietnam War, he tried to fly Christmas Eve meals into Hanoi for American prisoners of war. He masterminded a spectacular jail break in Iran. And before that, he turned a simple idea into one of the nation's largest

Now Perot, the crew-cut, 5-foot-6 founder and chairman of Dallas' Electronic Data Systems, is at it again, and he concedes it's his toughest task yet.

Perot is trying to break Texans of their addiction to high school football and revamp the state's below-average

And to many Texans, the 53-year-old multimillionaire crusader now seems like a meddler trying to break up a passionate love affair Perot doesn't flinch.

"If the people of Texas want the schools to be places of entertainment for adults, they've got it," says Perot. "If they want their children to learn and to be successful as adults and have Texas continue to be a rich state with a diversified industrial base after the oil and gas runs out. we better get busy and teach our children something.

Texas Gov. Mark White, a Democrat, asked Perot, a conservative Republican, to chair a 21-member panel that will recommend improvements in the public schools. Perot attacked the task with his characteristic tenacity and outspokenness

HE TOOK HIS panel to all corners of the state to interview educators, football coaches, parents and school board members. He has also hired consultants at his own

He outlined the ills he had found in a school system that has three million children and ranks 16th of the 21 states where most students take the Scholastic Aptitude Test. In standardized test scores, graduation rates and average teacher salaries. Texas ranks below the national average

'This is as complicated as anything I've ever attempted." Perot said during a recent interview in his memento-filled office atop EDS' headquarters in Dallas.

'Getting down to what you need to do is probably the easiest part. Working your way through all of the various special interests and the politics and getting the grass-roots support is the most difficult part.

His ideas on improving education cover a wide spectrum, but he drew immediate flak by saying he believed too much time and energy was being devoted to extra-curricular activities such as band, drill team and football, and by calling for the abolition of those activities in elementary and junior high schools.

Football coaches howled. 'Ross Perot evaluating coaches is like me evaluatingbankers," says Bay City High School head football coach Ron Mills, whose team was crowned state champion in December in its class. "Most of them (the coaches) feel the same way I do. He's not qualified to be in that position. And our opinion of the governor has really dropped since he appointed Perot.

Dallas Morning News sports columnist Randy Galloway

"Dream on, Ross Perot. Then wake up to the fact that high school football in this state is much bigger than you and your committee, or Gov. White and his campaign

PEROT IS NOW on the counter-attack.

'In today's school system you go and spend a good deal of time playing," he said. "You spend a good deal of time in soft elective courses, you do very little homework and whenever possible you avoid confrontation with rigorous learning And whether you pass or fail, you are socially promoted.

"In the new school system," Perot said, "you'll work, strive, sweat, study at night and pass or fail.' The typical Texas high school senior spends an hour a night on homework - about 15 minutes per subject, Perot says. The typical Texas high school senior also spends 15 to 20 hours a week on one of three activities: band, drill team or football, he adds. "We've got the greatest bands, football and drill teams in the country. If Dr. Bell ever publishes a chart on that, we will be No. 1," he said the day after Education Secretary

Gulf will sue Pickens

- Pickens Jr. says Gulf Corp.'s lawsuit to stop his investor group from acquiring control of Gulf would be as profitable as drilling a dry well.

Pickens initially confirmed Gulf's statement Friday that his investor group planned to buy an additional 61 million Gulf shares for a 51-percent · share of the nation's fifth-largest oil company.

But in a later interview Pickens, the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., said Gulf's concern was 'The possibility of a tender offer was nothing more than an idea." he said from Mesa's Amarillo, Texas, headquarters. "No decision has been made."

Pickens said the suit would 'waste Gulf assets. "That lawsuit is just like Texas oilman T. Boone in the Beaufort Sea," he said, referring to recent unsuccessful Gulf drilling in northern Canada.

Gulf spokesman Keith Anderson said the suit, authorized by the board of directors Friday, was not filed yet. But John Boros, vice president of Mesa, said he believed the suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Delaware.

The Pickens group holds 13.2 percent of Gulf's stock. Gulf said its suit would charge Pickens' group with market manipulation and other violations of securities

Gulf's prepared statement, released after the close of business on Friday, said the effect of an offer by Pickens 'would be to seize the future potential of Gulf for the benefit of such investors with strength of Gulf's assets.' Pickens called Gulf's contentions "the usual charge in these kinds of things." "They feel threatened by our raising money to buy 61 million shares," Pickens said in the initial telephone interview.

Pickens later reiterated that he was raising money for the investor group, but added that no decision had been made on buying more Gulf

"When we have the money, if we do get it, we will then have to make that kind of decision," he said.

At the $57-a-share closing price Friday of Gulf stock, 61 million shares would cost $3.48 billion. Pickens' group paid about $1 billion for the approximately 21 million Gulf shares it has acquired in recent months group was "fairly close" to acquiring enough money to make the new purchases. It had been known that Pickens was seeking additional financial backing, but he had not previously disclosed his specific plans.

Anderson said the Pickens group planned, if successful in acquiring 51 percent of the common shares, ''to exchange some type of debt security ... for the remaining shares outstanding. The debt security would be mortgaged against the company."

"He's taken it too far now." Pickens said. "We have discussed a lot of things. That is not something specifically we focused on."

Gulf also said its board has authorized management to increase to $6 billion the corporation's committed lines of credit

Area man helps save youngster

A Skellytown man has been credited with helping to save the Boothe on the phone for eight minutes, giving him CPR life of a 3-year-old boy in Amarillo from drowning in an incident late Friday morning.

David Boothe, 27, of 105 Ash in Skellytown followed cardio pulmonary resuscitation instructions from an Amarillo paraplegic, Bill Propst, 29, a Panhandle Emergency Medical Service dispatcher, to help restore life to the young boy, Kyle

The youth, who was playing on the northeastern side of the Jones home about three-quarters of a mile from River Road School, fell into a 12-foot deep cesspool shortly before noon Friday. He was pulled from the cesspool by his 12-year-old sister, Shalon, who tried giving him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Unable to revive him, she dragged him to a neighbor's house about 100 yards away.

Boothe, who was visiting his father at the time, phoned PEMS for help at 11:59 a.m. The child's heart had apparently stopped beating and water was already in the boy's lungs.

Propst, who is confined to a wheelchair because of injuries in a mountain accident in Colorado seven years ago, talked to instructions to use while the paramedics were on their way to the house. He told Boothe how to empty the boy's lungs of water with a pat on the back, to place his fingers into the child's mouth to clean the air passageway and to use mouth-to-mouth resuscitation techniques.

Boothe, who had no previous CPR experience, performed the instructions until the paramedics arrived.

The paramedics placed the boy on advanced life supports and transported him to Northwest Texas Hospital. The boy was "effectively dead," PEMS officials said, before CPR techniques were used.

The young boy was still listed in critical condition Saturday

Boothe's parents had just moved into the area several months ago and had not yet met the Jones family. Boothe's father had had recent surgery and he was visiting his father during his recovery from the operation.

PEMS officials praised Boothe for his calmness in following instructions given him over the phone.

Animal ordinance

those who are animal owners and those who are not.

Wofford said the main aim of the new ordinance is to make owners more responsible for the actions of their pets. "If everybody takes care of their own," he said, then the city could reduce its expenses in animal control matters.

The ordinance provides a list defining terms used in the ordinance. An "animal" is generally regarded to be a dog or a cat. "At large" means a dog or cat "shall be deemed to be at large when off the property of the owner and not under

An animal is considered to be a nuisance if it "damages, soils, defiles, or defecates on private property other than the waste is immediately removed and properly disposed of by the owner; causes unsanitary, dangerous, or offensive conditions; chases vehicles, or molests, attacks, or interferes with persons or other domestic animals on public property; or is at large. An "owner" is defined as a person "having the right of property or custody of a dog or cat or who keeps or harbors a dog or cat or knowingly permits a dog or cat to remain on or about any premises occupied by that person for more than 72

"Humane manner" is defined as the care "of an animal to include, but not be limited to, adequate heat, ventilation, and sanitary shelter, wholesome food and water, consistent with the normal requirements and feeding habits of the animal's size, species, and breed.'

The ordinance specifies an owner's responsibility: "(1) All dogs and cats shall be kept under restraint. (2) No dog or cat shall be allowed to cause a nuisance. The owner of every dog or cat shall be held responsible for every act of such dog or cat proscribed by the provisions of this ordinance.

Another section provides that it "shall be unlawful to abandon, desert or dump any animal in the City of Pampa.

The ordinance also will require all dogs or cats over four months of age kept as pets within the corporate limits of the city to be vaccinated against rabies by a licensed veterinarian in accordance with the state's Rabies Control Act of 1981.

Owners are expected to get a certificate of vaccination and a durable vaccination tag for each animal vaccinated. The rabies tags must be attached to the collar or harness of the dog or cat and worn at all times. The vaccination must be renewed

A person who violates any provisions of the ordinance faces the possibility of being found guilty of a misdemeanor. Upon conviction, a person could be fined up to $200 for the offense. 'Each and every day of such violation shall be deemed a separate and complete offense," the ordinance states.

'This ordinance is common to most cities," Wofford

Pampa Flying Service .W. "Cap" Jolly Maj. Virgil Ackfeld, Ret claimed. "Of course, there has to be a matter of judgment in the enforcement of it.

Some matter of judgment would be required in sections referring to wild animals, Wofford noted

The ordinance defines a wild animal as "any mammal except the common domestic species (i.e., dog, cat, horse, cattle, swine, sheep and goats)." The term "mammal" leaves out reptiles (such as a python), birds, amphibians and fish.

The provisions on wild animals state "it shall be unlawful to keep or harbor any wild animal" within city limits, "excepting commercial establishments dealing in the sale of these animals and zoos that have proper facilities for restraint and care of these animals

Technically, a pet shop could have such mammals as ferrets, raccoons and skunks to sell, yet an owner could not purchase one to keep at home as a pet, according to the wording of the ordinance

Enforcement, however, would be a matter of judgment. Wofford said anything commonly seen as a pet would be permitted as long as the provisions referring to the ownership of dogs and cats are observed

'We certainly would have no specific campaign to eliminate them or to search them out," he said.

The ordinance provisions on wild animals, he explained, are aimed at the more dangerous types, such as lions, tigers and bears. If problems occurred with pets other than dogs and cats, the situation probably would be judged by the standards applied to such areas as an animal creating a nuisance or a dangerous situtation for people or other animals, Wofford

He said the local ordinance sections concerning wild animals "are not near as restrictive as some (ordinances) we've seen

The local ordinance contains no provisions for handling persons accused and convicted of cruelty to animals, Wofford said. But state laws concerning such treatment will be enforced. One such case is currently pending in which a dog was kicked, injured severely and placed in a trash dumpster,

Other provisions concerning rabies control, impoundment procedures and the issuance of permits to animal establishments will be detailed in the second article.

Adobe Walls gets added personnel

By JULIA CLARK Staff Writer

Two new scout executives have joined the Adobe Walls Council, Boy Scouts of America, Richard Stowers Sr. announced recently

Stowers, council president, said the addition of professional scouters Bill Price Jr. and Tary Clump, to the staff will "enable our Council to better serve the youth" of

Although they came from different places, both men have been employed in scouting since 1979.

Clump came to Pampa from Stillwater, Okla., to work in the Kiowa District, which includes Gray, Donley, Collingsworth and Hall Counties.

He and his wife Joni, and four - month old son, Casey, will make their home in Pampa. Clump said they have already met many friendly people in Pampa and are looking forward to living here.

"I grew up in scouting," Clump said. He feels this position gives him the opportunity to share the good times and good feelings he experienced as a boy.

Price will serve the Adobe District of Hansford. Hutchinson, and Carson Counties. He and his family will live in Borger.

Most of his work in the council will be with grownups, Price said. He believes that together the grownups and youngsters can make scouting a growing process.

"A young man can take his scouting experiences with him into the rest of his life," he said. "Scouting is making good men from young boys," he added.

Texas minister beaten to death

Methodist minister whose bloody body was found in the back of his van three days after he disappeared had been strangled and beaten to death, according to an

A Palo Pinto County constable discovered the van and body of the Rev. John H. Basham, 55-year-old pastor of First United Methodist Church, on the shoulder of Interstate Highway 20 near Gordon, west of Fort Worth, Thursday night.

A portable television bearing some blood and hair was found in the van, Sheriff John Turpin said. A towel that police suspect may have been used to strangle Basham was found next to his body.

Preliminary autopsy results indicated Friday that Basham was killed by a combination of strangulation and a traumatic blow to the head, Turpin said.

Turpin said Basham also had three puncture wounds to the stomach, but these were determined by researchers at the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences to be only superficial.

Basham's white and yellow van had last been seen Monday afternoon near Stephenville, 25 miles to the south of Gordon.

"I looked in the window and, my God, there was blood all over," said the constable, Cecil Holifield, who found it

Thursday Basham had been traveling Monday to Dallas to meet other Methodist ministers for their annual meeting at Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology.

Dublin Police Chief David Johnson says a witness has been found who saw Basham

DUBLIN, Texas (AP) - A in Stephenville about 4:45 p.m. Monday on a road that leads directly to U.S. Highway 281, which connects with Interstate 20 in Palo Pinto County.
"The witness identified him as driving the van," Johnson said. "He thinks he was alone.

The burly Fort Worth native, who had served as the pastor of churches in 13 Texas cities before moving to Dublin 18 months ago, was to have received an award Tuesday from the Texas Methodist College Association.

"I'm not surprised that John would stop to pick up someone that needed help. That's not surprising," the Rev. Robert L. Robertson. director of the United Methodist news service in Dallas, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "What is surprising is that someone who was befriended by John would take his life."

Most of his friends were surprised that someone had managed to subdue Basham, who was a starting lineman on the 1948 team that produced a Heisman Trophy for Doak Walker and a Cotton Bowl victory for Southern Methodist University, the Star-Telegram reported Saturday.

Although it was clear that Basham didn't follow his normal route from Stephenville - U.S. Highway 67 to Dallas or U.S. Highway 377 to Fort Worth - Turpin said police don't yet know what route he did travel.

Despite reports that the van had been spotted at the scene as early as Tuesday, Wednesday morning was the earliest confirmed sighting, Turpin said.

Free food for Valley

DALLAS (AP) - A coalition of churches and vendors has donated 24,000 tortillas, 3,000 pounds of pinto beans and 102,000 pounds of potatoes to help feed unemployed farmworkers in the Rio Grande Valley.

The food was being flows free of charge to Harlingen beginning Saturday and will be distributed by South Texas churches, said Charlie Moore, a Dallas travel agent who arranged the airlift.

Thousands of agriculture workers in the Rio Grande Valley lost their jobs when a record cold spell in December desttroyed much of the citrus

"The major problem there is simply lack of food not lack of facilities, like with a hurricane." Moore told the Dallas Times Herald

A Southern Baptist layman in Colorado will send about 3,000 pounds of pinto beans next week, he said.

United Methodist churches arranged for shipment of 20,000 pounds of potatoes, part of a 52,000-pound truckload given to the North Texas Food Bank by a Dallas food distributor.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Propaganda should not be in schools

Nuclear war and arms control have become hot academic topics. Classes on the controversial issues are rapidly increasing.

Although no standard testbook covers nuclear armament questions, the National Education Association (NEA) and other organizations have developed curriculum manuals and are offering them to the nation's schools.

As a teachers' union closely allied with the liberal Democrats, the NEA is highly partisan. It is not surprising, therefore, that the NEA's curriculum manual entited "Choices: A Unit on Conflict and Nuclear War," flunks the test for objectivity and intellectual integrity.

Written with the assistance of the Union of Concerned Scientists, the manual clearly reflects both organizations' support for a nuclear freeze as well as their bias against President Reagan's policy of deterring aggression through strength. It is replete with inaccuracies, distortions and flagrant omissions.

In comparing the nuclear weapons of the United States and the Soviet Union, the manual falsely asserts that our arsenal is far superior. It disregards the fact that the Soviet Union comes out ahead in three of four categories of generally accepted criteria used to assess nuclear

In examining U.S. defense spending, the 144-page NEA manual curiously makes no mention of Soviet military expenditures. And the manual's claim that the United States spends more on weapons than on social programs is belied by its own charts that show the Department of Defense budget dwarfed by expenditures of social welfare and transfer payments.

Shockingly, the manual also would have teachers manipulate students' emotions. It urges teachers to describe the symptons of radiation sickness in nauseating detail, while the students listen to recordings of anti-war songs

We can't imagine why anyone would spend $9.50 to purchase one of the NEA manuals. The NEA says it has sold 5,000, but news reports indicate few school systems

That is good. Schools are exactly right in declining to use such material and, in fact, should be on guard to make certain they are not introduced in personal actions by those who might be sympathetic to the NEA's

While nuclear issues are a proper subject for study in schools, objective texts rather than biased curriculums should always be used. The use of instructional manuals written by the NEA, or any other advocacy group, is certain to leave students with dangerous, one-sided

Paying for things you detest

By now most Americans have received their W - 2 forms from employers and tax forms from the Internal Service (IRS). Before you read on, pick up your W - 2 form and see how much you paid in federal income tax and Social Security tax (The Social Security tax is listed as F.I.C.A.). And don't think for one minute that the money deducted for Social Security is put away for you in a special account.

It's a tax and is immediately doled out to somebody else. If you are under thirty years old the odds are you'll pay into S.S. and never see a check.

Now that you see on your W - 2 how much you paid in federal taxes, let's see a sample of how your money was spent

Since 1979 William Winpisinger, avowed socialist and president of the Internataionl Association of Machinists (IAM), has received $1,515,024 of your tax dollars. IAM sponsors activities like "Solidarity Day," which was a mass attack on Reagan. It supports calls for nuclear freeze and the equal rights amendment (ERA). Whether you are for or against this kind of activity. your earnings were used to pay for it.

Winpisinger's IAM is not the only union in our pockets. The United Auto Workers (UAW) has received $7,092,345 since 1979. The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) has received $710,866 since 1979, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers got $3,707,287 since 1977, and the United Food and Commercial Workers bagged $888,470 since 1981. All this is reported in "Eye on Bureaucracy," a report by the Conservative Caucus in Vienna, Virginia, whose research was based on government documents; get on their mailing list.

The National Council of LaRaza, an Hispanic organization, has received $7,577,563 since 1978 in taxpayer money. With your money it engages in advocacy to lobby for policies THEY say will benefit Hispanics, such as bilingual education and school busing. Are you for that?

Marshall J. Breger, in a Heritage Foundation lecture titled, "Halting Taxpayer Subsidy of Partisan Advocacy.

spelled out other ways your money is being spent (or misspent)

How many times have you been to the plush Bethesda Country Club, or for that matter any other country club? You say you haven't? You can't afford it? Maybe the reason you can't is that according to government documents, your money goes to pick up the membership tabs of representatives of defense contractors, as well as the costs for goose hunts in rural Maryland.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) was sold to us as a program to deal with unemployment, particularly among minorities. CETA is just about gone, but let's look at some of the ways it spent your money a few years ago. According to the Washington Dateline: the Labor Department, under its CETA program, gave $41,000 to a feminist group to perform, in the nude, the "Leaping Lesbians Follies." The Atlanta CETA paid a Communist $500 a month to organize demonstrations and confrontation. Los Angeles CETA gave Gay Community Services $640,000 to provide education about gay life styles. Not finally, CETA gave $261,933 to a Washington, D.C., arts organization to assist other organizations in applying for CETA money. You'll recall all the attacks on Reagan over CETA cuts; this is what it was all about. No wonder the gays, lesbians, artists and you - name - them are against Reagan. Mondale would, if elected, probably re - institute CETA.

We could go on and on about these shenanigans and outright government sponsored private use of citizen money. But look again at your W - 2, then ask yourself whether you can better spend YOUR money.

Many hardworking Americans cannot, after taxes, afford to take a vacation, send a kid to college, or buy a house. Don't get mad yet - we'll have more tax columns between now and April 15th.

This writer can't recall Thomas Jefferson's quote verbatim, but in essence he said one of the cruelest acts of government behavior is to force people to pay for things they detest. Do you agree?

Who likes the federal deficit? indicated that only 16 percent of us want to narrow the management and a fairer federal pension system.

Let's see a show of hands. Who likes the $180 - billion federal deficit projected for fiscal 1984? What? Nobody at Then let's talk about how we should be working to eradicate that deficit: if anything, working harder than the president himself Reagan's quiescence on the deficit question can be understood. In election years, politicians try to anger as few interest groups as possible. On the other hand, the deficit really is too big for more than short - term comfort. Pretty much everybody thinks so.

Obviously the economic recovery will blot up a lot of the red ink. But what else do we do besides wait for this to happen? Raise the taxes of "the rich"? Cut the military budget? That's what Mondale, the Numero Uno Democrat of the moment, wants to do, and so one must give his views attention.

One trouble with "soaking the rich" is that they aren't THAT rich. As the Grace Commission on government cost - cutting has pointed out, above the $60,000 tax bracket there's just $65 billion of untaxed income enough to run the government for a month. And that's doing it just once, after which there would be no rich people left to soak.

Anyway, raising taxes - on anyone - is a wonderful prescription for diminishing, rather than stimulating, work and investment. For going back, in other words, to the conditions of the '70s. The voters seem to understand this (as indeed they often understand more than their political "leaders" do). A Gallop Poll last December deficit by raising taxes.

Meanwhile an equally fundamental point wants emphasizing: deficit is an expectation gap. The money isn't there, but, never mind, there are things you want, so you borrow the difference. The surest way to wipe out a deficit is to want less and spend less.

That's what is odd about the Democratic "budget balancers." They don't want less; they want more: more for education, more for farm programs, more for environmental protection and so forth. More for just about everything in fact but the military, even though it's been rightly called our primary social service program.

You'd suppose, to hear the budget - balancers, that Ebenzer Reagan had been squeezing government like a sponge. In fact, when fiscal 1985 is over, federal spending will be almost $300 - billion higher than in fiscal 1981.

This is by no means attributable to high levels of military spending. Over the past three fiscal years, Congress has shaved $41 billion for proposed military budgets. As a percentage of the total budget, defense spending is a bit more than half what it was in the Eisenhower and Kennedy years - when America was far and away the Soviet Union's military superior.

Do we want (as we certainly should) to Do Something about the deficit? If so, we must attack the non - military side of the budget. The Grace Commission has a laundry list of more than 2,000 potential savings, for a total of $424 billion in the next three years. Nor does this involve throwing the poor out on the street; it involves better Comes now The Heritage Foundation with yet another' proposal to cut the 1985 deficit $119 billion through various economies. Such as: get the federal government out of mass transit, charge for Coast Guard rescue services, cap the tax deduction for health insurance, and lower our U.N. subsidy.

It doesn't have to be these particular programs we reduce or eliminate; all have fervent friends (meaning beholden beneficiaries) who will fight to keep them. But if not these programs, which ones do we cut? It is a fair question to Mr. Reagan, who in a presidential year doesn't want to do much cutting. It is a fair question to his Democratic adversaries, who seem mainly interested in cutting HIM.

Reagan, Mondale targets for Demos

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale were the prime targets Saturday as eight Democratic presidential candidates met in debate 10 days before Iowa's precinct caucuses provide the first rank-and-file test of strength in their

With candidate surveys showing many Iowa Democrats still undecided, the two-and-a-half-hour debate offered an opportunity to cut into Mondale's lead in the state.

It also provided another forum for the Democrats to criticize Reagan administration budget deficits and the president's policies in Lebanon and Central America.

Reagan spurned the advice of the Democrats Friday and decided against going to Moscow to attend funeral services for Soviet leader

Yuri Andropov. Joining Mondale on stage at the Civic Center were Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Alan Cranston of California, Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, Gary Hart of Colorado, former Sen, George McGovern of South Dakota the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida. Broadcast live by Cable News Network and several Iowa radio stations, the debate also was being carried nationally on delayed basis by Public Broadcasting Service. "This debate is the most important so far because it is so close (to the caucuses),' said Greg Schneiders communications director of Glenn's campaign. "And there's a big undecided out there.

The debate was sponsored by the Des Moines register, whose editor, James P Gannon was the moderator The format provided for the debate to start with a two-minute statement by each candidate followed by an opportunity to question each other.

Then the candidates were to be questioned by James Risser, chief of the Register's Washington bureau, and then by a panel of five Iowans: a businessman, a farmer, the president of the University of lowa, a college student and the director of a vocational

Bentsen tops Mondale's list

IRVING, Texas (AP) -Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen ranks at the top of Walter Mondale's list of potential vice presidential running mates, former Democratic national chairman Robert

Strauss says. "I just know, talking to him (Mondale), that there's no one he would look at more favorably," said Strauss, who recently endorsed Mondale for the Democratic presidential nomination. Strauss, in Irving Friday for a Democratic conference on national political issues. said Mondale campaign insiders also have told him "there's no one who ranks any higher on Mondale's list than Lloyd Bentsen."

The Texas senator would be a major political asset because he could provide the winning margin for the Democratic ticket in the state. Texas is considered critical in the Nov. 6 election

Another thing which must be taken into consideration is the benefit that one receives from these activities. These activities teach competitiveness, leadership, responsibility, pride and discipline. The more talented students have the opportunity to develop their talents.

Improvements in education can be accomplished and are welcome without destroying the fine arts, sports, and other programs which are valuable in the total educational process.

We urge that the State Board of Education, Texas Education Agency and our Texas Legislature give serious consideration to every proposal which affects the educational opportunities of all the students in the great state of Texas.

Board wrong

Dear editor.

What the school board pulled last night is outrageous. They decided to wait until some certain members were away at the

Pampa vs. Borger basekball game to pass the new rule concerning school days missed because of extra-curricular activities. This rule should be considered only if these children's grades are not kept up. Maybe the school board should examine the grades of those not in extra-curricular activities. Some are probably just sitting on their duffs doing nothing.

I am a fulltime student at he Clarendon College-Pampa Center. My extra-curricular activity is a fulltime job during the day. I've had to miss my classes at night occasionally, but I've managed to keep my grades. This new rule is not fair at

Against tax

Dear Sir, As a followup to my recent letter, I would like to make the following comments. If the city commission wants to promote tourism in the city, I would suggest that they get something worth promoting. After all, what tourist attractions does Pampa have to promote? The White Deer Land Museum? Lake McClellan? A Pampa Fine Arts Association presentation of Othello? Oil

Wells? Prairie dogs? It seems to me that the tax to promote tourism will only drive tourists away, if there are any, by causing a hike in motel rates. Visitors to our town are usually here to see friends or relatives or to check on business deals.

A member of the city commission suggested we ought to have the tax because Amarillo does. Hogwash! Amarillo has entertainment that out of town visitors like to see like popular rock and country bands. I still contend the tax is for entertainment that caters to a minority of Pampa's population

Justice...?

To the editor and readers, The great trial is at last over. The armchair lawyer can now give the TV a rest at local news time.

I look back at this trial where justice was administered (naturally) in measured quantity and I find several areas that could have been improved. The judge for this trial was entirely wrong. We needed the "Miami Hanging Judge." The first day in court he could have given the Grandstaff widow thirty days; no jury, no lawyers, just thirty days. The Judicial Conduct Commission would approve his decision as they have already set a precedent in a Miami, Tx., court ruling. The DA in Borger should have been in this court case. He may not have been over in Fritch if he had a big trial going on.

The Gray County officials were certainly not involved in the pasture proceedings. It is only fair that they be paid (by the plainfitt, naturally) for having the inconvenience of appearing in court. I have never been paid to do so, even when found not guilty, but I guess a number of the readers have. The expert and coherent testimony of the peace officers amazes me. It is nice to know when one is involved with the judicial process, one can be sure of accurate law enforcement testimony.

The above paragraphs might seem humorous. The humorless part is that the truth in these paragraphs is about the local officials who directly affect our lives daily. It is something to think about.

Loan closet

Dear editor.

To clarify the piece about our volunteer Joanne Linville and the Red Cross loan closet in last Sunday's Pampa

Red Cross has had a small loan closet for a good many years, but not until Gray County dissolved the County Hospital and gave us so much fine equipment, along with beds given to us by the Hospital Auxilary, were we able to provide as much as we can now. It is our hope to continue to build on this service to the point that we may never have to refuse a family when they have a need of a loan item to care for their loved ones in their own homes Thanks to M.K. Brown Foundatoin and to others we have an excellent place to house our loan closet and conduct our other Red Cross services. Our greatest gift continues to be our many Red Cross volunteers, like Joanne Linville who give of their time, year in and year out.

Terrell Bell released new figures showing Texas ranking very low nationally in education.

Perot will deliver his report to the governor March 1. He says the keys are recovering the school day for learning, putting a "great teacher" in every classroom, developing strong parental support and building the finest elementary school system in the country. He has also said most teachers' colleges in Texas should be closed because they graduate illiterates.

He wants to build a pre-school "early development" system, and he shrugs at the cost of all this.

"People fret about the cost of this system but I always point out we can send them to Harvard cheaper than we can send them to Huntsville," headquarters of the state's prison system.

"We can't afford not to spend this money on these children. We can break the welfare cycle by spending this money intelligently."

WHEN THE REPORT is written, Perot will get back in his Lear Jet and take to the stump, selling his ideas to a skeptical public.

Selling is his forte; he's been doing it since he was 6.

Perot, the son of an independent cotton broker, grew up in Texarkana, Texas, during the Depression. He sold magazines on the street until he took a paper route at age 12. The route was in the black part of town.

"People said you couldn't sell newspapers in that part of town because no one could read. So I got the paper to reverse the rates: the paper cost 25 cents a week - 71/2 cents went to the paperboy and 171/2 cents went to the paper. I got them to reverse that and I went door-to-door selling the paper and delivering it on horseback," he said.

"The typical paperboy was making $5 a week. I got up to where I was making $35 to $40 a week. W. Lee O'Daniel was retiring from the U.S. Senate and as he was cleaning out his office in 1948, one aide told him he had an unfilled appointment to the Naval Academy. He asked if anyone wanted it, and the aide said "this boy from Texarkana has been writing us for several years. "Give it to him," the senator said, and Perot was off to Annapolis, where he became president of his senior class. After the Navy, Perot went to work for International Business Machines, selling IBM computers in Dallas. In his fifth year, he filled his annual quota by mid-January.

Perot took his simple idea to IBM executives. The company sold computers, but did little in the way of programming. Perot proposed establishing a programming division to grab the other 20 percent of the market spent on software.

IBM TURNED HIM DOWN. Today, about 80 percent of the computing dollar goes into software, and billions of dollars go to Perot's company, EDS, which develops software and computer systems for large organizations and corporations, and is contracted by Medicare and Medicaid systems in many states. EDS, started in 1962 with a $1,000 Perot check, has 13,000 employees in 12

In its last fiscal year ending June 30, 1983, EDS had revenues of $651.6 million and earnings of $58.6 million. Perot's personal stock is worth about $550 million, not including the $334 million worth of stock placed in trust for his family. He also owns an oil company and some real estate. Forbes Magazine said he is one of the 10 richest men in the world.

He drives a Chevrolet, lives as modestly as one can live with his wealth

"When I started EDS, it was a classic case of a good idea at the right time," Perot said. "A few years ago, I saw (IBM Chairman) Mr. (Tom) Watson and he said 'Ross, tell me again. Did you know the ratios would change?' And I said, 'No, Mr. Watson. It was just that the 20 percent looked good to me then and it didn't look like much to you.'

"I didn't know it was a good idea at the time. There was no market for our services and we had to go out and convince people we could do good work for them. Then five years ago, suddenly a multibillion-dollar market developed for our services."

With customers knocking on the door of EDS every day, Perot has turned the daily duties to president Mort

He gets involved in his crusades - he calls them "projects" - in part because he has the time, money and energy to carry them through. He says he has no desire to run for public office because he would then have to be accountable to the voters and would have to divest his business interests

HENRY KISSINGER BROUGHT Perot to public attention by asking him to lead a publicity campaign to improve Vietnamese treatment of American prisoners of war. That campaign included Perot's unsuccessful attempt to land supplies in Hanoi on Christmas Eve 1970.

In 1979, two of Perot's employees who had helped construct a national health care system in Iran were taken prisoner by the Shah's falling government. Diplomatic efforts to free them failed, so Perot put together a team of EDS commandos that provoked a jailbreak of 11,000 inmates, rendezvoused with the two EDS employees at a hotel and sneaked out of the country across the Turkish border. Perot himself had gone to the prison during the escape planning.

The Iran episode is chronicled in a best-selling Ken Follett book, "On Wings Of Eagles."

Gov. White's predecessor, Bill Clements, appointed Perot to lead a "War on Drugs" campaign in Texas that resulted in laws broadening police capabilities in investigations of drug dealers. He also campaigned for and won the relocation of a major electronics research group to

His friends saying rebuilding Texas' educational system is just par for the course.

Dallas entrepreneur Norman Brinker, a longtime friend, says education falls in line with Perot's other interests. 'If you look at drugs and what drugs do to education, and when you think about the strength of our nation and education, there is a connection. And think about business - if we are not educated, we will not be competitive in the long run," said Brinker.

"One of the things I really like is people who stand for something. Ross stands for perfection. (And) I like people who are willing to stand up to solve a problem and not just talk about it and that is Ross."

Brinker said once involved in a cause. Perot devotes all his waking energy to it.

"Ross is fascinating because even when we're laughing and joking about something, there is an intensity behind him. He can still be relaxed and casual and all of a sudden he'll look at you with that intense Ross Perot look.'

Perot said the attacks launched against him over the football issue bother him only because they detract attention from the issue of education.

"So I try to shove thoughts like that out of my mind." Perot said. "Indulging in various forms and shades of self-pity is a waste of time."

His ideas have drawn support from metropolitan educators and even some coaches.

Dallas schools Superintendent Linus Wright, who already has enacted some of the requirements and changes Perot favors, is a big supporter.

MORE RESISTANCE TO educational changes comes from within education than from the public, Wright said.

"I think there are very few people who can bring about the major changes we need, and he (Perot) is one person who can," said Wright. "This takes somebody not only with the courage but also with the conviction and competency to deal with these people."

"When football has a priority that it has in our state, where it is almost a sacred institution, of course there are going to be a lot of screams," he said.

"(Perot) created the issue through shock treatment. I haven't seen the people come around to him yet. But because it is such a radical change, it takes time to reorient people. My recommendation to him and his committee is that it will take a year to educate the public before the Legislature feels the need to make changes."

Gene Mayfield has been a winning head football coach in Texas since 1954, except for a brief foray into private business. He said he hears his brethren saying Perot doesn't know anything about education, but he thinks they're wrong.

"I think the guy has really done his homework," said Mayfield, head coach at Levelland High School in West Texas. "I don't know how you would argue with some of the evidence and test scores.

Perot says he believes he will win in his education battle, but concedes he always believes he's going to come out ahead while he's in a fight.

"You don't have to win every round in a fight. You've got to show up every time the bell rings. You can lose the first few rounds but you just keep going until you win. All that takes is perseverance.

Shells slow evacuation

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Mortar and sniper fire disrupted the evacuation of Americans and other civilians fleeing the strife-torn capital Saturday. A ricocheting bullet wounded one woman as more than 400 evacuees were airlifted to U.S. warships offshore.

When the shelling stopped the evacuation resumed.

At Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut, hundreds more foreign nationals were trucked in by French and Italian troops from west Beirut as machine gun bursts rattled in the distance. They boarded landing craft that took them out to sea where they will board ships bound for Cyprus.

At the end of the two-day evacuation operation, 2,400 civilians had been lifted out of the capital.

Police said army troops and rightist Christian Phalange militiamen in east Reirut traded machine gun and mortar fire with Shiite Moslem and Druse militiamen across the "green line" frontier in west Beirut throughout the day.

There also was heavy overnight fighting around the U.S. Marine base at Beirut's airport, but the Marines, awaiting orders to withdraw offshore, were not involved.

Saudi mediator Rafik Hariri returned to the capital and met with President Amin Gemayel and Foreign Minister Elie Salem, the state radio said.

The talks focused on ways to resolve the crisis in Lebanon, where Syrian-backed Moslem militias captured west Beirut in street battles with the Lebanese army early last week. The fighting continued Saturday along the "green line" dividing mostly Moslem west Beirut and the Christian-controlled eastern

An official U.S. statement to the Soviet Union extended condolences on President Andropov's death and invited his successor "to respond in kind" to the U.S. pledge to "work to build a more stable and more positive relationship.

Reagan sent a personal message of "condolences and sympathies" from his vacation ranch in California and decided not to attend next Tuesday's ceremony in Red Square. U.S. officials said he would be holding meetings at the White House with King President Hosni Mubarak of

Favorable conditions aiding land preparation

Texas (AP) - Farmers in South Texas are awaiting dry weather and warmer soil temperatures to begin corn and grain planting, but elsewhere across the state land preparation activities are gaining momentum as favorable conditions continue in many areas.

Light drizzle also slowed field operations in some coastal areas. Wet fields

The citrus leaf drop is almost complete in the Valley, and growers are awaiting warmer weather in order to accurately assess freeze-damage to their trees.

PANHANDLE: Warmer temperatures are boosting some wheat growth, although moisture is needed to continue this trend. Producers are busy with land preparation, pre-irrigation and fertilization. Livestock are in fair to good condition with feeding of range cattle continuing heavy.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation has gained momentum this week, aided by warm, dry weather. Wheat is making good growth, and most South Plains counties have adequate moisture. Some fertilizer and herbicide work under way, but farmers have not started pre-plant irrigation or planting activities vet.

ROLLING PLAINS: Dry, gusty winds continued to deplete soil moisture. Wheat is responding to warmer temperatures but grazing potential continues limited. and some producers are selling off their wheat-pastured cattle. Some freeze-damaged oat fields are being replanted in Wilbarger demand continues strong.

NORTH CENTRAL: Some greenbugs are appearing in wheat fields that are slowly reviving following freeze damage. Most oat fields, however, suffered severe winter-kill during the December freeze. The prospect of hay shortages loom as producers continue their heavy schedule of supplemental feed for livestock. Some producers are applying nitrogen fertilizer as a top dressing on wheat.

NORTHEAST: Hay supply shortages are predicted due to heavy livestock feeding and shortage of grazing in native and winter pastures. Stock ponds also are reported low in many areas. Wheat is making slow recovery from freeze damage due to moisture stress. Lice populations continue to increase and create problems for livestock. Early vegetable planting is beginning, and owners of fruit trees are pruning and spraying their CENTRAL: An estimated 60 to 90 percent of the oat crop was killed by the December freeze. Some producers are planting spring oats. Supplemental livestock feeding continues, but the condition of many cattle is declining. Some winter grain mites are being sprayed, and gardeners are preparing seedbeds for planting.

EAST: Large amounts of freeze-killed plant materials are contributing to grass and brush fire hazards in many areas. Some livestock producers are getting short of hay as heavy feeding schedules continue for livestock. Some regrowth starting on freeze-damaged oats. Pine seedlings are being planted, along with some onions, cabbage and Brussels sprouts.

WEED CONTROL IN WHEAT

The current warm spell encourages rapid growth of weeds that have germinated earlier or that may be germinating now. the beginning of a warming trend. On land that is intended only for wheat or barly production for the next few years a producer may want to consider applying Glean A March application will control most winter broadleaf weeds as well as apreventing the growth of kochia and careless weeds that become established later in the spring causing problems at wheat harvest. An added advantage of Glean is that most weed growth will be controlled during the summer between wheat crops. Grassy weeds and volunteer wheat can be controlled by one or two sweep tillages or by applying low rates of Roundup or paraquat. Substituting herbicides for tillage usually enhances the establishment of the next wheat crop because moisture is not depleted by weed growth or grassy weeds in Tam 101. Tam 105 and Newton wheat varieties in the fall and early spring. Rates of applicatioan are based on soil type, PH and organic matter and should be strictly followed to avoid crop damage. Overlapping spray swaths can eliminate wheat as well as weeds. To save application cost in some cases, spraying only a few swaths around the field will eliminate most of the weed infestation. OATS

The probability of the occurance of extreme winter temperatures is quite low now and oats with some winter hardiness can be planted with reasonable assurance of no freeze damage. Cimmaron, Bronco, Checota, Nora and Norwin are winter varieties adapted to this area. True spring types imported from the northern states should not be planted in this area until after March 1 to reduce the risk of freeze damage. No specific spring varieties are recommended for the Panhandle because they are usually less productive and not well adapted to our

DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) Unless there is a change in White House budget policy, farmers in 11 states who have $42.9 million in direct 'economic emergency' loans tentatively approved by the Farmers Home Administration may have to get most of their money from commercial lenders under guaranteed credit terms.

In Mississippi, for example, the FmHA approved or obligated $12.8 million in direct emergency loans, about 10 times the level of $1.2 million authorized by the Office of Management and Budget.

The loans had been tentatively cleared by state FmHA offices at the $42.9 million level but should have been held to $12.1 million under an OMB formula, Agriculture Department officials said Thursday.

do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my grain and goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink be merry. But God said unto him, thou foolish one, this night is thy soul required of thee; and the things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God." (Luke 12:16-21.) This parable the Lord gave was in answer to the request for Him to divide and inheri-though they leave an inheritance of thousands, or even millions of dollars, they would have to be described as spiritually poverty-stricken.

To be rich toward God is to be rich in good works (I Timothy 6:18.) But the "works" cannot be said to be "good" unless they are ordained of God (Ephesians 2:10) There will be those in the judgment professing to the Lord that they have done many mighty works in His name. But their works will be classified as works of iniquity because they

One of the problems may have been an apparent three-week delay in getting OMB's directive distributed to the state offices.

A spokesman said state offices of the FmHA - an agency of the Agriculture Department — are being told there is a possibility that $30.8 million of the committed loans may have to be shifted to guaranteed loans. That means a bank or other commercial lender would handle the account, usually at higher interest rates and under stiffer terms.

Meanwhile, sources who asked not to be identified said negotiations are continuing with OMB for clearance to boost direct lending by about $30 million so that the FmHA can keep its initial commitments with applicants.

The bookkeeping snarl began when Agriculture Secretary John R. Block refused to renew the economic emergency loan to agency officials. program, which expired Sept 30, 1981. It began in 1978 and dispensed more than $6.6 billion to 121,000 borrowers.

Last September, U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery ordered Block to reinstate the loan program at a level of $600 million that was authorized by Congress. It resumed Dec. 22.

When the program operated before, most of the loans were direct - nearly $63 billion, compared to about $332.8 million in guaranteed

According to testimony a week ago by FmHA administrator Charles W Shuman, the agency initially sent out allocations of the $600 million to state offices "based on operating loan distribution criteria" used in standard operating loan programs. There was no limit or breakdown on direct and guaranteed loans.

"On Dec. 22, the date the program opened, the Office of Management and Budget apportioned $600 million to be obligated on the basis of $50 million in insured — or direct - loans and $550 million in guaranteed loans," Shuman told a House Agriculture subcommittee Feb. 2.

The FmHA's field offices were not notified of the OMB's allocation, including the $50 million limit on direct loans until Jan. 13, according Shuman, in a Jan. 18 memorandum to state directors, noted the previous communications on Jan. 13 and Jan. 16, when further processing on direct emergency loans was halted because the $50 million lid had been reached or exceeded.

But some state offices had approved or committed themselves to the economic emergency direct loans far above their allocations based

In Mississippi, which had an original apportionment of more than $12.8 million, the full amount had been committed to farmers long before OMB's directive was distributed, according to agency figures. Under the OMB formula.

Mississippi was supposed to hold its direct emergency loans to less than $1.2 million. Thus, unless the administration comes through with more money for direct loans, Mississippi borrowers will have to shift about $11.6 million to guaranteed loans from commercial banks or other lenders.

In Jackson, Mississippi FmHA director Don Barrett said the original allocation was $12.8 million - prior to OMB's directive.

"It wound up we got approximately $12.8 million of the $50 million of the direct money," Barrett said. "As we understand it, the whole $600 the other states will be using more of the guaranteed loans. We did not exceed our allocation."

According to FmHA figures provided at the request of a reporther, 10 other states exceeded their direct lending limits that were specified by White House budget officials:

States took lead on the EDB issue, are accusing feds of delay

By KEN KLEIN Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - Pesticide contamination of food and water is a national problem, but Florida and other states took the lead in prompting federal action on highly toxic ethylene dibromide.

State leaders say they welcome tighter national standards on EDB unveiled Feb. 3, but they accuse the Reagan administration of foot-dragging.

"It has been 10 years since the National Cancer Institute identified EDB as a carcinogen," said Florida Gov. Bob Graham. "The (U.S.) Environmental Protection Agency should act promptly to avoid further delays in protecting American consumers.

The federal agency virtually banned use of EDB as a pesticide and suggested safety standards for food containing residues of the substance.

The federal action forbids use of EDB as a fumigant for fighting insects in stored grains and in grain milling machinery. On Sept. 30, 1983, the federal government suspended use of EDB as a soil fumigant.

However, many state leaders say the saga of EDB regulation was an example of the tail wagging the dog, of states leading a slow-to-act federal government.

"We'd be better off in this situation if we didn't even have an EPA," declared Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, "EPA still marches to the beat of the special-interest drum.

David Pingree, secretary of Florida's public health system, accused the federal agency of years of delay in reacting to warning signals about EDB

Florida officials say the lack of federal regulations forced the state to take a tough regulatory posture that eventally prodded the federal government to act.

"I am quite certain that the concerns raised by this state and by a number of other states led very directly to the action on the part of the Environmental Protection Agency," said Florida's state health officer, Stephen King.

Last month, EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus acknowledged that his agency had been slow to respond.

"I think we've been slow in regulating EDB" Ruckelshaus

Relatives say German settler pioneered flight

By KRISTIN GAZLAY Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It was 38 years before the Wright brothers, so his relatives say, when German immigrant Jacob Brodbeck designed a spring-powered cedar and canvas airplane and pioneered man's first flight.

That August 1865 experiment ended unceremoniously with an abrupt crash, but Brodbeck soared - however briefly above the treetops in a San Antonio park, the story goes.

History books credit Orville and Wilbur Wright with being the first to get off the ground with a power-driven craft, but Brodbeck's relatives say they hope he eventually gets at least a sliver of credit.

"I'm not begrudging what the Wright brothers did," said Brobeck's great-grandson, Sherman Brodbeck. "They had a

"I just feel it's inevitable that Jacob will get some credit for contributing to their flight with his airplane design," he said. "That's basically what his dream was — to fly like a bird but he didn't have the finances or time left to go further.

Brodbeck, the sheriff of Blanco County, planned to travel to Dallas today to accept the 1984 "Bonehead of the Year" award on behalf of his great-grandfather.

The Bonehead Club presents the award each year "to a person or group that has committed an act or participated in an event which, in the eyes of the Boneheads, is a monumental unable to raise enough money to perfect his "airship." He died in 1910 in obscurity, leaving the glory to the Wright brothers, the Boneheads say.

Brodbeck's goof? That he was "an inventor and a dreamer"

"I don't feel Jacob's goof is as big as historians' goof in not recognizing his achievement," said Sherman Brodbeck. "I'm not insulted by the award at all."

A bust of Brodbeck has been placed in San Pedro Park, where his supporters say the school teacher and watchmaker first tested his on-a-wing-and-a-prayer flying machine.

The craft supposedly was powered by a spring that, when wound up, would turn a shaft. It apparently also sported movable wings and a rudder. Newspaper accounts say the "airship" went down when Brodbeck was unable to rewind the coil

"He crashed, so people didn't think it was important," said Jim Fisher, board chairman of San Antonio's Museum of American Aviation. "He was a failure in everybody's eyes, a man with a toy

Dr. Paul Garber, historian emeritus at the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum in Washington D.C., said many visionaries contributed to the Wrights' manned flight in 1903.

"I've never heard of Brodbeck, but I wouldn't be surprised if others were interested in flight earlier," Garber said in a telephone interview. "There are many people who deserve to be known, but then there are many different definitions of flight - did he hop, jump, skip and crash?

Even Leonardo Da Vinci was sketching detailed drawings of airships way back in 1490 that possibly could have been translated into flight, Garber said.

*The Wrights had complete control on their flight, which was very important, and they landed without wrecking the plane." he said

Connie Backlund, a supervisor at the Wright Brothers National Memorial near Kitty Hawk, N.C. - where the Wrights flew into the history books - said she'd never heard of Brodbeck

NUMB ARMS, LEGS

There may be misalignment of vertebras in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful ioints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacited. said while visiting Dallas. "It is bad stuff and it is a very potent carcinogen, but we don't have any evidence that it has harmed anyone - nor do we have any that it hasn't."

Tests on lab animals have shown that EDB produces cancer, mutations, sperm disorders and liver problems.

EDB has been in the national spotlight less than a year, but it has a long history in industry and agriculture. It has been registered as a pesticide since 1948. Most EDB - perhaps 90 percent - was used as a fuel additive and the rest in agri-business. A key use in farming was soil fumigation to fight destructive nematode rootworms. In Florida, EDB had been used since 1961 in a state program to control nematodes in citrus groves.

But last year, EDB was discovered in groundwater. When Florida agriculture officials learned of water contamination in California, they began testing drinking-water samples July 5,

By the end July, Florida had stopped using EDB in its state anti-nematode program because the pesticide was found in

On Sept. 16, state Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner issued a temporary suspension of EDB as a soil pesticide two weeks before federal regulators announced similar action. Conner issued a permanent ban on soil fumigation Oct. 7 because he was worried that the federal action didn't cover supplies on hand

In the fall, Conner's food-testing lab found EDB in a wide range of processed grain products such as flour, cake mixes and cornmeal

Wen Conner learned there was no federal safety level on consumption, he turned to the state's health officer, who recommended a 1-part-per-billion threshold.

In December and January, Conner stopped sale of 76 grain products with more than 1 part per billion EDB, shaking up the food industry and the Reagan administration.

Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc. sued Florida officials before Christmas, failing to obtain a temporary restraining order against the state. The case was pending in federal court at Tallahassee.

Meanwhile, Florida's well publicized sanctions against food products containing EDB prompted other states to begin their own testing programs. California started random tests last month and had pulled nine lots of packaged mixes from the shelves for exceeding the state's 300 parts-per-billion standard.

It was California - not the federal government - that alerted Hawaii to EDB-contaminated cake mixes, said Don Horio, a spokesman for the Hawaii Department of Health.

"Lacking any EPA or federal guidelines, we had to more or less develop our own studies, and fortunately the state of California Department of Health Services was extremely cooperative...," he said.

Four water wells outside Honolulu were closed last summer when samples showed traces of EDB. Hawaii asked the federal government if the amount of EDB was a health hazard, and the government said it didn't know, Horio said.

Texas couple gives love and hope to unwanted

Associated Press Writer

LANCASTER, Texas (AP) — The telephone keeps ringing at the home of George and Alice Ruff, and there's the clamor of voices coming from the kitchen.

Outside, dogs bark and roosters crow to the sounds of construction on the small wooden buildings going up. The front yard overlooking the expanse of farmland is overrun by parked cars and trailer homes.

This is the Ruff House Ministry, where George and Alice have been taking care of orphans, the emotionally disturbed, handicapped and retarded for seven years.

"We have big plans. We've always had big plans. We know we're never going to reach the whole world, but we're going to take care of as many as we can," says Ruff, rubbing a day-old beard he said he forgot to shave because of the "13 things" on

ely

The 28 people currently living with the Ruffs range from age

Everyone here, with the exception of two (herself and her husband), are emotionally, mentally or physically handicapped. And sometimes I wonder about those two," said Mrs. Ruff, laughing as she strokes a thick white braid that oops around her shoulder.

But it seems Mrs. Ruff, 56, has always been taking care of the needy. There's 83-year-old Albert, who has been under Mrs. Ruffs's wing since 1946, when she still lived in Lawrence,

"His mother had died and I was taking care of her when she died. She asked me to promise her that I would take care of him as long as he lived, which I did. I'm still working at it. "He's mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed — the whole bit. He's unable to cope with society because he's epileptic also, and a diabetic," Mrs. Ruff said. At the time, Mrs. Ruff was married to Albert's brother, who she said was "abusive" towards her. 'When we got a divorce, I got his brother," she said. "It was a mixed up story, but that's the way it works.'

mothering the unwanted. In 1961, she began taking in handicapped children in her home in Lawrence.

In 1967, she met George Ruff, 51, while working part-time at

"She was a waitress and I was the boss," said Ruff. "You might say I was messing around with the help.

Mrs. Ruff said neither of the two was "interested in marriage." She had been through one failed marriage and he

"He liked the same things I was doing. See, he's handicapped, physically handicapped, and we got to talking about or : likes and dislikes, our desires ... and found out we both had the same desire in life," she said.

Ruff got polio when he was 13. Shortly afterward, a polio vaccine was invented, but Ruff has no hard feelings.

"God has made it a beautiful thing ... he took what the devil gave me and turned it into a beautiful thing because I can sympathize with everybody that's handicapped too. I can say

'look I'm handicapped too. But I did it, you can do it too.'''
On a whim, George and Alice drove from Kansas to Texas in

"We were riding around in a car and the temperature was 67, and it was minus 27 in Kansas. So I said, 'Let's come to

Texas,' "said Mrs. Ruff. Ruff House Ministries is run with this same impromptu confidence. As Mrs. Ruff put it, "we rely on God's help and

There's also been a lot of media exposure and with the attention comes help. But also, more needy people. "So I still have to go out there, mowing lawns, picking up trash — all that good stuff — and keep my people busy supporting the home," said Ruff, whose odd jobs help support the household.

Of the 27 people living here, six work outside the home and pitch in financially. Only about half have any kind of insurance. Ten attend public schools. Mrs. Ruff says she gets $214 a month in Social Security disability payments and five others receive some type of Social Security aid. There is no financial help from the state or county because the Ruffs do not qualify as a foster home.

On a given week, the Ruffs and their charges will consume 32 dozen eggs, 21 gallons of milk and 15 pounds of chicken.

Vincent, who is 28, blind and retarded, recently bought a cow with the $125 he saved while working in a workshop for the handicapped.

"Our main goal is to produce independent people," Ruff said. "We want them independent. We don't want them to depend on us. We're not going to be here forever.' Word of mouth is how people hear about the Ruffs.

"Almost every pastor in the area knows we're here," said Mrs. Ruff. "And if we exist, they find us ... doctors, lawyers - anyone that knows what we do.' Connie Bodensteiner, a Garland housewife, was "desperate." She'd been everywhere trying to find help for her emotionally disturbed son, Virgil, who is 21 While talking with counselors at Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Mrs. Bodensteiner was told about Ruff Ministries. The next day she was sitting in the Ruffs' kitchen, filling out information sheets. "See, he (Virgil) is not low-level enough retardation and he's not high-level enough to be somewhere else," said Mrs. Ruff. When a new member moves into the Ruff household, he or she is given a room or a bed and second-hand clothes, donated by local charities, if they're needed. Above all, a person is treated with massive doses of love. If they're capable, they're given household responsibilities And when the Ruff's feel a person is ready, he's moved into an adjacent "training room," or apartment so that he can learn or re-learn how to run a household. City officials have told the Ruffs their four mobile homes have to go because they're not in a legal trailer park. For now, city officials have turned their back. The Ruffs are hoping when they look again, they will have some structures up.

"We will eventually have to move the mobile homes - as soon as we have enough housing. But right now, we can't afford it. I would describe the situation as hanging in limbo,

But regret is not in the Ruff's vocabulary. "How can you regret taking a 15-year-old boy that weighs 46 pounds, never been taught to eat, walk, never been solid food

Permian Basin recovering from the oil bust

By JUDY GIANNETTINO

Associated Press Writer MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - After enjoying the best of times and enduring the worst of times within a three-year period, residents of this oil-dependent West Texas city are searching for a condition almost unheard of in the oil industry -

In 1981, the oil-based economy of the Permian Basin hit an unprecedented high. People from every corner of the earth flocked to the area, lured by the millions of dollars that were flowing as freely as the oil.

But in 1982, just as the champagne corks were popping, the bottom fell out. An overabundant supply of oil and a more cautious approach by investors caused an economic downturn for Midland and nearby Odessa, leaving the thousands of newcomers jobless and the two cities in one of the most devestating oil busts in recent history.

This year, the oil-based economies of Midland and Odessa are leveling off and oil executives say they hope their industry, which is gaining ground again, can remain stable at least through 1986.

"Right now, we're in a situation where we're rebuilding," said Ed Thompson, executive director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "We see things settling out here now. Our companies are beginning to rehire and we're starting to get over everything, which is just what we want to do.

'One thing's for sure - we don't want the industry to be like it was in 1981 again because that was abnormal."

"get rich quick" seekers was the result of fevered investors eager to get in on the last few months of a tax shelter,

The Reagan administration established changes in the tax law for 1982 that lowered to 50 percent the maximum deductable that an oil investor could take under a tax shelter. Thompson said investors poured as much money as possible into the oil industry in the final months of 1981 because they saw the diminished tax advantage in 1982.

"There was money being thrown around back then and some people doing the throwing shouldn't have been in the business," he said. "It cost us all a lot."

Because of the increased activity, 1981 was a

The boom that brought to the Permian Basin thousands of get rich quick" seekers was the result of fevered investors number of wells drilled and the economic and population growth of Midland and Odessa.

But when the calendar pages flipped to 1982, the tax shelter shrank and oil prices began to drop.

"The bust was on," Thompson said. "And it was too late to Unemployment peaked in both Midland and Odessa in June 1982. Midland, the smaller of the two cities with a population of about 70,000, saw its jobless rate hit 7.7 percent, while Odessa's rate stood at 10.3 percent.

Cassie Gittings of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce said, however, Midland and Odessa were hit equally as hard during

So was natural gas.

Some folks remember cheap gasoline prices. Natural gas prices used to be cheap for power plants at Southwestern Public Service Company, too.

Today, it's different. Natural gas costs continue to increase, and since we don't own any gas wells, we don't have much to say about natural gas prices ... just as you don't about gasoline.

We've brought coal into the Pampa, with another display of awesome scoring power, smote Brownfield, 99-39, Friday night in a District 1-4A game in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa, playing its final home game of the season, kept its district record intact at 12-0 in hopes of become the first Harvesters' club since -1962-63 to finish the district unbeaten. That 1962-63 club, which featured Olympian shot putter Randy Matson, went 14-0 in loop play.

Brownfield, 0-12 in district action and 2-21 overall, scored only two field goals the first quarter as Pampa rolled easily to a 27-5 advantage. By halftime, Eit was a 54-21

Probably the most excitement came when Brownfield's Steve Cardenos lost his contact lens in the third quarter. Or, maybe it and then closes the regular was when Brownfield went into a fourth-quarter stall to try and keep Pampa from scoring 100 points. Cardenos found his eyepiece and Brownfield won the battle, but lost the war.

"The kids were up for this game more than I thought they would be," said Pampa Head Coach Garland Nichols. But they realized this was the last home game for the seniors and we talked about it before the game. It was an emotional time both for me and the kids."

Coyle Winborn, playing his last game before the home crowd, responded with 30 points and 20 rebounds. Rodney Young followed with 18 points while Craig Chapin had 13, Gaylon Faggins and Marty Cross 10 apiece.

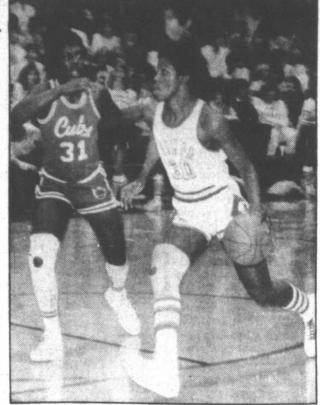

Clint Ellis led the Cubs with Pampa, now 22-5 overall. season at Lubbock Dunbar next Friday night.

"These next two games are going to be really tough," Nichols said. "Dumas gave us a good game the first time we played. Dunbar got beat Friday night, so it's hard to tell how they're going to react. They could come out with fire in their eyes or they could just give up.

Pampa, already declared the district champions. tentatively has a practice game scheduled with Amarillo High Feb. 20 in the Borger High gym. The Sandies have clinched a playoff berth in District 3-5A. PAMPA (99)

Recruiting madness is over for another football season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

Forget finding a cure for the common cold.

If you really want to gain fame and fortune, discover a fair and equitable way to end all this high school football recruiting madness.

Praise be, the stakeout and stalk of teen-age football heroes is virtually over for another year.

Grown men at Southwest Conference academic institutions can start acting normal again.

They can quit living in hotels and airplanes and talking bad about their

They can regain their dignity after being interviewed and inspected by confused and in some instances arrogant 17-year-olds.

They can take time to visit their doctor and get high blood pressure medicine after dealing with fickle fuzzy expletive-deleted pursuit of high school kids. From January to signing day Feb. 8 there's a daily incoming barrage of "Oral

In fact, an underlying reasons for Lou Holtz's recent ouster at Arkansas was his lack of recruiting zeal.

Tim Brown of Dallas Woodrow Wilson, writing a dairy for the Dallas Morning News, admitted he played poorly in a basketball game because he was worn out from the recruiting game.

Brown, who was to sign with Notre Dame, told how three or four coaches were even at the basketball game: of how Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne dropped by the next day to say howdy; of how he he was swarmed by coaches at his athletics period at school on Monday 25 of its 27 victories after the University Interscholastic League's District Executive Committee declared a set of twins on the basketball team ineligible.

Vince and Victor Webb, 6-foot-6 seniors for the Kangaroos allegedly competed in an "organized basketball activity" after last season, making them inelgibile this year.

The Webbs did not play in Tuesday's victory over Copperas Cove or Friday night's win over Round Rock Westwood.

Before Thursday's ruling, Killeen was 26-3 and leading the district standing with an 8-1 mark. The Kangaroos were 2-28 and 2-8 after Friday night's game.

The Webbs, who were each averaging close to 15 points and 10 rebounds per game, moved to Killeen from Ohio last year. After the completion of the 1982-83 season, the twins played eight minutes in a non-school tournament game in March.

United States battles Norway to 3-3 deadlock

SARAJEVO. Yugoslavia (AP) - The Canadian hockey team peaked at the right time. The American team has gone flat at all the wrong times

Canada moved a step closer to the medals round at the Winter Olympics with a spirited 4-2 victory over Finland Saturday. That win, combined with the United States' 3-3 tie against Norway, eliminated the defending gold-medalist Americans from medal contention.

Meanwhile, West Germany tied Sweden 1-1: Czechoslovakia beat Austria 13-0; the Soviets beat Yugoslavia 9-1, and Italy beat Poland 5-1.

Canada and Czechoslovakia are 3-0 in Group B, where Finland is 2-1 and the United States 0-2-1. If Canada beats Norway Monday and Czechoslovkia beats Finland. Canada will be in the medals round

'We've really come together, we're on the top of our game," said Canadian captain Dave Tippett.

Defenseman Craig Redmond scored on a 40-foot slapshot at 9:03 of the third period to break a 2-2 deadlock. Dave Gagner added a goal just under five minutes later to clinch the victory.

Darren Lowe began Canada's comeback from 2-1 with a backhander that sailed over the shoulder of Finnish goaltender Kari Takko.

Kirk Muller scored on a deflection of Bruce Driver's shot in the first period for Canada. Finland grabbed the lead in the middle session on goals by Harri Tuohimaa and Petri Skriko.

They won by wearing down the Finns. And by fooling

The United States was expected to beat Norway with ease. The Norwegians had lost 10-4 to the Czechs and 16-2 to Finland. But the Americans couldn't get untracked and had to rally to tie on a power-play goal by Ed Olcyzk in the third period.

Paul Guay and Pat LaFontaine also scored for Coach Lou Vairo said his team's trouble dated back to before the opener against Canada, which the Americans lost 4-2.

"There was a strange feeling in the room that I hadn't seen all year, almost a nervousness." Vairo said. "We haven't been able to get back on track. It's very frustrating. We're a good team: We played hard all year and have some scorers who are just not scoring. If you had told me before the tournament that we'd be 0-2-1 at this point I wouldn't have believed you.'

Meanwhile, West Germany tied Sweden on Uli Hiemer's goal with only 3:46 left to play. Hiemer capitalized on a goaltending mistake by Sweden's Goete Emil Walitalo, who went behind his net to clear a puck and fanned on it. Jens Erik Ohling scored for Sweden in the first.

Both teams are 2-0-1 in Group A, trailing the Soviet Union, 3-0. West Germany plays the Soviets on Monday and Sweden faces the top-seeded team on

Mavericks down Kings

DALLAS (AP) - As a college senior, Dale Ellis was one of the best senior forwards in the nation. But as a Dallas Maverick, he has been hard to find.

Friday night, Ellis took another step toward changing that, scoring 17 points in 18 minutes in a 115-96 Dallas victory over the Kansas City

Kings.

"I've been trying to be patient," said Ellis, who started all 32 of Tennessee's games last season and was Dallas' first pick in last year's National Basketball Association draft, but has yet to start a game for the Mayericks 27-24

Dallas Coach Dick Motta told him not to get discouraged, Ellis said, and "I just waited until he called on me and tried to respond.'

Ellis, who came into the game averaging seven points and three rebounds, hit eight of 10 shots and grabbed a team-high 10 rebounds in one of his best performances of the season.

"I never lost confidence," Ellis said. "I knew I could play. I'm just happy I got a chance.

The Mavericks, who were led by Mark Aguirre's 30 points, led by as many as 17 points before the Kings closed to within 90-82 early in the fourth quarter. But it was Ellis who hit two consecutive baskets to pull the Mavericks away again.

Five minutes later, he added a free throw and a layup to make it 105-96.

'They beat us in every phase of the game shooting, rebounding, loose balls," said Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, whose team dropped to 20-29 for the season and 6-19 on the road.

"They were just much sharper than we were," he said.

Eddie Johnson led Kansas City with 29 points. Larry Drew scored 11 and Billy Knight 10 in the first half, but neither player scored in the

Although Motta had assured Ellis he would get some playing time soon, Ellis was surprised that it came Friday.

Dick never told me I was going to play tonight," said Ellis. "I read it in the paper. But you can't always believe what you read, so I just tried not to think about it. Motta, who has juggled his forwards all season due to the inconsistency of last year's starter, Jay Vincent, said his only complaint about Ellis is a rare one. "I have had some trouble getting him to shoot," Motta said. "Most guys fire it up. But Dale is one of the few kids to whom I have to say, 'Dammit, shoot.' "

Button gives TV ratings lift at Winter Olympics

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Sports Writer

For ABC, which loves to call itself the Olympic Network, the first week of coverage from Sarajevo was a disappointment. Disappointing weather, disappointing hockey team, disappointing ratings.

Until along came Dick

Not everything was ABC's fault. It couldn't control the weather that postponed the downhill skiing; it couldn't control Canadian and Czech hockey teams that beat the United States. And it couldn't control viewers who would rather watch "Magnum P.I." and "Cheers" - ABC ran third in the ratings two of the first three nights, recouping Friday night, with the ever-popular figure skating. But some of the problems stemmed from the ABC style that has evolved over nine Olympics and keeps its coverage in a kind of lockstep.

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) - Kicker Nick Mike-Mayer booted two fourth quarter field goals to pace the San Antonio Gunslingers to a 13-3 victory over the Memphis Showboats in a U.S. Football League exhibition game

Memphis scored first when Alan Duncan connected on a 38-yard field goal with 8:08 left in the second quarter, capping to cap a 11-play, 50-yard march.

San Antonio scored all its points in the fourth quarter. First. Mike-Mayer drilled a 40-yard field goal that capped a nine-play, 34-yard drive. An interception on the quarterback Rick Neuheisel's 1-yard run with 8:48 left that lifted the Gunslingers' lead to San Antonio drove 75 yards in 12 plays to set up Mike-Mayer's other field goal of 30 yards with only 30 seconds left in the game.

Overall, Memphis had 60 yards rushing and 129 yards passing, while San Antonio had 121 yards rushing and 83 yards passing.

For Memphis, quarterback Ken Johnson hit eight of 17 passes for 68 yards and one interception. Johnson also was the Showboats' leading rusher with 28 yards on four

"I won my case, and I was right and I don't have anything else to prove. Now I can get back to play like I am capable of without having all this on my mind."

Sims, an All-Pro running back and 1978 Heisman Trophy winner, signed contracts with both the National Football League's Lions and the Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League last

He later filed suit asking that the $3.5 million contract he signed with the Gamblers last July 1 be voided on the misrepresented during contract negotiations by his then-agent, Jerry Argovitz, who now is a co-owner of the Houston team.

'I wanted to stay in Detroit, because that's where I started and I've had some pretty good years there. There's just so much more available to achieve in the NFL," Sims said.

When asked whether he had felt the decision would go his way. Sims said "I was being realistic about it. I really didn't know how it would go. but I was prepared to go with it either way."
Sims added it would have been difficult to play his best for the Gamblers but said "being an athlete I would have done the best I could. I wouldn't go out and embarrass myself." In ruling in Sims' favor, After learning of the decision Argovitz said, "it was a tough decision for that judge to make. It was easier to make with him sitting in Detroit. If any other court in the country, other than Detroit, would have heard this case, there would have been a different verdict.

"I don't feel I've been damaged in any way, shape or form," he added.

Cook Mom a Valentine this year!

Instead of giving Mom flowers or candy, kids, why not cook "boats" carefully. About two to three minutes baking time is 'dinner for her this Valentines Day? Following are some all that's needed simple, easy - to - make dishes featuring cheese.

Cheese?

Cheese! What was discovered by chance centuries ago has become an international food favorite. Why? Because there are so many different kinds and it's so versatile. It's appropriate for any meal - morning, noon or night and in between. It's convenient and nutritious, and best of all, it

Kids loove cheese, and smallfry cooks will smile proudly when they can present main dishes made with cheese to the family and say, "I made it myself."

The rules beginners will need to know for cooking with cheese are simple: Use low to medium heat and keep cooking time short. Heat just until the cheese is melted to keep it smooth and tender

Explain to children that natural cheese needs to be shredded when added to sauces, used as a topping or mixed with other foods. You can purchase some cheese varieties already shredded in convenient packages, or purchase a chunk of cheese for junior cooks to shred at home. When shredding cheese, remember that four ounces of chunk cheese makes one cup of shredded cheese. Show beginners how to hold a shredder and follow these guidelines for best results:

Shred cheese while it is cold so it will be firm and easy to

Shred over wix paper, using the medium holes on a shredder

Shred slowly and carefully, keeping fingers away from the shredder holes

Most cheeses today are made from cow's milk, but children will be interested to know that in some countries cheese is made from the milk of goats, buffalo, camels, llamas and even

Pizza Pepper Boats is a fun - to - fix main dish cheese recipe that the family will enjoy. To prepare, green pepper halves are ... placed in boiling water for five minutes. Peppers should then be thoroughly drained before filling with a mixture of cooked regular or instant rice, corn and pizza sauce. After baking for 30 to 35 minutes, the peppers are topped with mozzarella cheese. Since overbakking toughens cheese, junior cooks will want to set a timer and watch the

Cheese, like the milk from which it is made, provides many essential nutrients the body needs such as vitamin A and some of the B vitamins. It is an excellent source of protein as well as calcium and phosphorus, the minerals needed to help form strong bones and teeth. And, it's always high on any kid's favorite foods list, served alone or in favorite recipes,

Mention "pie" and most people think of a sweet dessert that's time - consuming to prepare. Easy Cheddar Pie, however, is a savory main dish that's easy enough for smallfry cooks. Made with eggs, milk and shredded cheddar cheese, it's a breeze to prepare and to bake in a convenient frozen pie

The recipe begins by tossing the cheese with flour. To "toss" means you mix very lightly by lifting the ingredients, using two forks. Chopped parsley adds its special flavor to the pie. It can be chopped on a cutting board using a small sharp knife, but children may find it easier to snip the parsley with kitchen shears or scissors

Sweet treats forValentines

NEA Food Editor

Two simple desserts based on strawberries help carry a Valentine's Day message. A double strawberry mousse and strawberry angel food cake will surprise the most eager friend or love at this sweet time.

These may be made with frozen or fresh strawberries. Keep the desserts in mind for upcoming bridal showers, too perhaps a follow - up to a successful Valentine's effort.

DOUBLE STRAWBERRY VALENTINE MOUSSE 1 pkg. (12 oz.) frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, thawed 1 envelope unflavored gelatin 1 T. lemon juice

1 c. whipping cream SAUCE: 1 pkg. (12 oz.) frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, thawed 1 T. lemon juice 1t. cornstarch

Prepare mousse. Drain strawberries; set aside. In glass measuring cup or small heatproof bowl, mix strawberry liquid and gelatin. Set cup in small pan of boiling water over medium heat. Stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon juice. Refrigerate gelatin mixture about 15

Whip cream to form stiff peaks. Gently fold gelatin mixture and strawberries into cream to blend thoroughly. Pour into 3 to 4-cup mold. Chill until firm, at least one hour.

Prepare sauce. In small saucepan heat strawberries just to boiling. Mix lemon juice with cornstarch; stir into strawberries. Cook and stir over low heat just until thickened and liquid is clear. Cool, then cover and chill.

To serve: Unmold mousse onto serving plate. Spoon some of the sauce over mousse; pass remaining sauce separately. This kitchen - tested recipe makes four to six servings.

STRAWBERRY VALENTINE ANGEL FOOD 110-inch angle food tube cake 2 pkgs. (16 oz. each) frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, thawed mint sprigs Prepare cake from a mix or your own recipe. Cool and turn out of pan. Split into two layers; reserve. Drain one package of strawberries. In small saucepan, soften gelatin in water. Stir in 1/2 cup of the strawberry liquid. Place over medium heat. Stir until gelatin is completely dissolved. Cool, then chill until syrupy, about 15 minutes.

Whip cream to form stiff peaks. Stir in gelatin mixture to blend thoroughly, then fold in drained strawberries. Place one of the cake layers, cut - side up, on serving plate. Spread with half of the cream mixture. Top with second cake layer, cut side down. Spread top with remaining mixture; chill up to six

Meanwhile prepare sauce: In saucepan, combine second package of strawberries with any liquid remaining from first package. Bring just to boiling.

Mix cornstarch with lemon juice. Stir into saucepan. Cook and stir just until mixture is slightly thickened and liquid is clear. Cool, then chill. Drizzle cake with a little of the sauce. Garnish with mint. Cut into wedges to serve. Pass remaining sauce separately. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Let flowers bring the message

Let flowers bring the message of remembrance or affection on St. Valentine's Day. They do it well.

There is an ancient Middle Eastern legend that the first tulip express character traits: cactus for endurance, azalea for blossomed when the tears of a lovesick Persian youth moistened the hot desert sand.

Tulips and other timely spring - flowering bulbs are appropriate to speak the language of romance. So are a host of other flowres. Here are some attributes given to flowers by romanticists - and florists.

Bi - colored, striped tulips say, "Your eyes are beautiful; I see love in them." Red tulips are strong declorations of love and yellow ones vow "Today I love you more than yesterday, less than tomorrow." Hyacinths, named for Hyacinthus, mythical Greek games player, connote playfulness. Irises bring a secret message.

Bleeding heart is a sentimental favorite and primroses bring visions of lacy valentines. The glossy anthurium also is heart shaped — and long lasting.

Plants with heart - shaped leaves include hearts on a string or heartvine. Another is the English ivy, hedera helix

A houseplant suited to Valentine's Day is cyclamen. It provides both hearts and flowers. The heart - chaped leaves are touched with silver and topped with red, pink or white

The rose, of course, has long symbolized love and desire. Red roses are much in demand at this time. Red favorites include the old American Beauty, the brilliant tea rose named Better Times, and another appropriately titled Forever Yours.

Tomatoes don't sound very romantic, but at the turn of this century many people referred to them as "love apples" and they were a popular valentine card illustration. Many regarded them then as flowers and not edible.

A Valentine gift suggestion is a potted ivy with heart shaped leaves tied to a heart - shaped wire frame. You can make one with a bent coat hanger

The language of flowers has long been a form of secret correspondence to convey precise sentiment. Every flower has a meaning, and the color of the bloom has special

A red rose is the symbol of love; a pink rose perfect happiness; the white rose means innocence, and the yellow jealousy. Interpretations vary, of course.

A red carnation implies admiration; a yellow carnation is a strong sign of rejection. A zinnia tells absent friends you are thinking of them, and a chrysanthemum denotes cheerfulness. Daisies mean loyalty, daffodils regard, apple blossoms mean a preference for the person receiving them, and the gardenia indicates a secret love. Plants also have their own meanings, the ivy a symbol of wedded love and the fern, fascination.

on Betty White's life

You could spit. The woman is in her 50s; she barely exercises; on occasion, she packs away four hot dogs at a time; she's been working steadily in the business for more than 30 years and look at her: Betty White could be a promotion for a health food store.

Well, some people are lucky. Ms. White - who has two Emmys for being Sue Ann Nivens on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," who shows up in commercials, on "The Love Boat," "Mama's Family," and elsewhere says she's been lucky. From the start. Being an only child didn't harm me," she says. "I had two parents who were great good friends of mine and each other, and the house in Los Angeles was always full of friends. She got on so well with her folks, in fact, that they couldn't get her out even when she wasn't a kid anymore. "I liked the house and the people in it," she quips. "We lived our separate lives and it was a wonderful way to maintain my career. I'd be on the road a lot and they'd take care of my animals. She was in her mid-20s in 1954 when she was discovered and signed to do a network TV daily talk show, based on her success on a local TV disc jockey show in Los Angeles. Originally, however, she says, "I was going to be a singer but I discovered at 14 I was not built for opera. I had the (um, chest) but not the voice. But all through school I wrote and acted.

Getting up there was irresistible because, "Let's face it," she kids, "you never have to grow up if you can go around pretending all the time. You get to wear pretty clothes and people put words in your mouth so you don't have to think of them." So she became an actress known for her light touch, and a smart talker on "The Jack Paar Show," where she appeared more than 65 times, the gambit being why wasn't she married? The fact was she had been, early on, but it didn't last. Still. she says, "Even though it was a bummer at the time. it was my choice to break up so I got off lighter even there. And after that my life was full and satisfying and I didn't want to marry.

She didn't have to. She didn't want children - "I felt I did certain things better" - and she never lacked for dates. Then, in the early '60s, she met Allen Ludden, the congenial game show host. "The second week we dated, he said, 'Will you marry me' and I said, 'No," she says, replaying her astonishment. "Finally, I realize after a year he wasn't kidding. Now, I wish

I had that year back.' Ludden died in 1981, and that's the worst thing she's ever had to contend with. "He was sick for four years and we knew where we were going for two, but we never other things, like work. "I can't picture not working. I will die in harness. My fingers are itching to do a novel or a movie for TV and write myself in the lead." Then there are her animals two dogs and a cat at home - and all the others out there she works to protect as president of the Morris Animal Foundation, "the only organization of its kind that funds studies on specific animal problems," she says. She's also a member of the board of trustees of the Greater Los Angeles Zoo Association. Not long ago, Morrow published her book on the "human/animal companion bond," "Pet Love" ($12.95).

At one point in it, the woman who seems so unguarded writes, "Personally, the people who really know me and with whom I am completely myself are few... and for the most part four-legged." Which means? "I think there's a part of us that's sad and terribly insecure and vulnerable, she says. "Somehow, you have to muster at least a facade when you go out in the jungle and not let that take over. But you can't fool the animals and they know how to support you.

So out she goes, with energy, wit, warmth, always busy, only planning five or six weeks ahead "to my next trip to our house on the water in Carmel, Allen and I would walk on the beach and collect sea glass for hours." "I worry about things that don't happen, although I'm trying to say, so far this has not happened, maybe it won't. And I am getting better about saying no to things I'd never say no to before. Forthright, straight to the point, easy - going ... Carol Hance, wife of U. S. Rep. Kent Hance reflects many of the characteristics her husband is known for Wednesday, Mrs. Hance was in Pampa stumping for her husband in his search for the U.S. Senate seat to be vacated by Senator John Tower. Hance, along with Lloyd Doggett of Austin and Bob Krueger of New Braunfels, are seeking the Democratic party nomination in the May 5 primary elections.

Cay Warner hosted a coffee for Mrs. Hance in her home Wednesday morning attended by 19 local people, many of them politically active women in the area.

"A wonderful experience," Mrs. Hance defines her new role as a campaigner for her husband. She said she prefers to travel with her husband, providing support and admiration, but trying to reach the whole of Texas during the campaign

"They started me in the (Hance's) congressional district which was very easy - talking to so many people I know. Then they sent me to the Panhandle area which is like home to us. Kent and I both grew up in Dimmit and we have ranches and farms between Hereford and Vega," she added.

So far in her campaigning, Mrs. Hance said the issue she comes up against the most is the economy. "Farmers are having a terrible time," she added.

The big "push" of the Hance campaign is "to get people out to the polls," Mrs. Hance said. Secondly, Mrs. Hance is drumming up volunteers to work for the Hance campaign to help fill out promotion of Hance in areas he may not be able to reach otherwise.

Two nights a week, Mrs. Hance travels for the campaign, leaving her 14 - year - old daughter with her neice who is a 18, is a freshman at Texas Tech.

Hance, himself, travels six days a week, reserving one night a week for home. "He insists on that, if for no other reason than to get to spend one night in his own bed!" Mrs. Hance said, with a laugh. "And I like it, too!"

With a degree in education, Mrs. Hance spent time in Washington, D. C. as a volunteer for the Heritage Hall School for children with learning disabilities. She also worked as a volunteer in her church and her children's schools.

For many congressman, transition to living in Washington, D.C., was a trying experience for the family. Many did not fare well, Mrs. Hance said. However, the Hance family was fortunate, she said. The children adjusted well and they made many friends. "But we couldn't wait to get home," she admitted. In fact, their son graduated on June 6 and was back in Lubbock ready to go to Texas Tech by June 8, she said.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a 29-year-old working woman. I'm 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 158 pounds. The idea of saying goodbye to my 20s at this weight doesn't appeal to me, especially if it's true that weight loss will become increasingly difficult as I age. I'd like to lose 30 to 35 pounds before my 30th birthday.

habits to a diet that doesn't thing less than 1200 calories a day

My thyroid is normal. Can lack of exercise alone make it difficult to lose weight? I tried jumping rope and after five jumps my heart was pounding. I paused several times en route, but finally got in a hundred jumps and

DEAR READER - It's helpful to lose excess body fat at any age. A person who has become significantly overweight is apt to have loose skin after the excess body fat is gone. You can minimize the problem of sagging skin by losing weight and keeping it off when you are young. People older than 40 have more excess skin and it doesn't have that old snap-back it

Exercise is a very important factor in losing weight. I'd recommend a mild exercise that you could do for a sustained period of time. That would help you more calories than strenuous activities which you may only be able to do for a short duration. One of the best of these is walking and you should build up to walking three or four miles a day. People with a small amount of weight to lose can usually eliminate excess body fat through a walking program. Those who need to lose more weight will be more successful with a combined diet and exercise program

I'm sending you a bal-anced diet which allows 1200 to 1300 calories a day. You can combine it with your walking program. This program is outlined in the Health Letter 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY

You will need to be patient. Be happy if you are losing a half pound to one pound a week. Accept that it's going to take about one year to get yourself in proper condition. Don't be discouraged by plateaus. You may go two or three weeks without losing weight and then lose a significant amount followed by another plateau. Just stick with the program and you will

The first Summer Institute of Linguistics was held in 1934 to train people to translate the Bible. Since, then, its sister group, the Wycliffe Bible Translators, has completed New Testament translations in 200 languages, said Benjamin F. Elson, associate director of the branch. The branch headquarters are in Catalina, 15 miles north of downtown Tucson and east of U.S. Highway 89.

Sixty - five of these New Testaments are in languages of Mexico, where the linguistics institute first began fieldwork in 1935. Wycliffe Bible Translators was founded in 1942 to provide recruits and funds to underwrite the institute's international work. The 65 New Testaments involve only 35 languages.

The peelings can be removed easily before putting the fruit in the crust. I get the extra flavor and nutrition from the peelings with little waste. If I put raw fruit in a crust to bake, I cook the peelings separately with enough water to cover, then use that liquid for the pie. totally," said Elson, who hopes to have all the fieldwork completed for the 65 remaining languages by

Though Mexico officially has 56 Indian languages, Elson said many of these languages have variations, spoken by large numbers of people, which cannot be understood by others in the same linguistic family.

In Mexico, Elson said, 10,000 Indians speaking Zapotec - a family of languages spoken in the southern state of Oaxaca may not be understood by another group of 10,000 Zapotec - speaking Indians living 10 miles away.

Thanks to linguists who have done fieldwork in the area for nearly 50 years, Elson said, "we can distinguish now the differences in Zapotec. All (the Zapotec languages) have the same name, but there are an alphabet. He had also probably 40 different dialects. "Some Indians can read Spanish Bibles but it isn't as meaningful to them as Scripture in their own language," said Elson. Many Indian women, children and old people don't unerstand Spanish and their own languages have been unwritten. "We provide an alphabet for them and part of our work is to do linguistic studies of these languages," he said. Elson began his linguistic work in a remote village in the easternmost state of Veracruz in 1942. He went knowing no Spanish but within a month, with the help of a village language helper. he was able to learn enough interrogative phrases to help him acquire a vocabulary. After 10 years of living in the village for six - month periods, Elson had completed printed the Gospel of Mark, reading primers and storybook's for as many as 15,000 Indians within a 500 square - mile radius who spoke the Sierra Populuca language

"Today the village has the entire New Testament, thaks to others," said Elson, 61, ho left the village in 1953 to pursue his doctorate in linguistics at Cornell University. He subsequently returned to direct Wycliffe's Mexico program for eight years, before serving 10 years as executive vice president for Wycliffe's international operations, headquartered in Huntington Beach, Calif.

He said about 70 Wycliffe translators with permanent resident status continued to work in Mexico. They are among about 200 linguists in Wycliffe's Mexico program.

recious gifts for grandchildren--now!

County Extension Agent

Grandparents are special people to their families. Many times grandparents wonder what "things" they can give to their children or grandchildren. Here are 10' presents grandparents can give grandchildren at any time, at any age.

The gift of SELF WORTH. When children are recognized in a positive manner, it makes them feel important. Every time a grandparent praises a job well done, children begin to think they are important.

The gift of EXAMPLE. The experiences grandparents have with their families not only builds family strength for the present, but also provides a model for future parents and grandparents. One of the ways we learn is by example, and one of the things older people offer their younger generation is an illustration of how to or how not to grow old.

The gift of CARING. Grandparents can do much to ease the pressures upon parents while grandchildren are young. A loving, caring relative who is on hand while the new baby is coming, and through the illnesses and accidents that occasionally affect a young family, can help cushion these crises.

The gift of UNDERSTANDING OTHERS. Young children can have extremely positive feelings about older people. They view them as being warm, permissive and helpful. Studies reveal that the more good experiences a child has with an older person, the better he feels about growing older himself. During the teenage years, adolescents sometimes poor and lonely. Researchers feel that this may be due to the fact that teenagers have less contact with grandparents or other older people. They do not understand grandparents because they really do not know them very well.

The gift of KNOWLEDGE. Everyone has a special interest. Grandparents have spent many years accumulating knowledge about their interest. Therefor, grandparents should make opportunity to share all of the special things they know with others. Sharing may bring surprises to everyone.

The gift of the PAST. Grandparents are experts inchange. They who have seen the first television, the first computers, and the first space flights can tell their their experiences to share important principles. This helps children realize that they are living in a world in which almost everything can

The gift of HERITAGE. Whether you live many miles away from your grandchildren or just down the block, grandparents can do much to give children a sense of family, a sense of security and belonging. Grandparents can enrich the lives of other family members by providing a sense of time and continuity as they share memories about the days when their children were young.

The gift of PRACTICE TIME. Grandparents can provide time and attention for anything on which a child needs special practice. Practicing with grandparents break, but also provides a warm, comfortable environment, free from critical judgment of peers, and enables a child to successfully gain confidence to meet new challenges and

The gift of HAPPY MEMORIES. Special memories are gifts that children and grandparents will always have.

The gift of LOVE AND ACCEPTANCE. It means a lot to know that no matter what, grandparents still love you and accept you. That gift, whether spoken aloud, written in a letter, or shown by deeds, will always be the most treasured and remembered present of all.

Finally - if you don't have any grandchildren nearby or at all ... go out and get some

lake charming cross-stitch doll

By APRIL BAIL As every crafter knows, there's nothing like an adorable, exciting project to get the new year off to a good start. Not only does it help doldrums, but it gives you a leg up on your list of upcoming gifts, which does not disappear just because the holidays are over

This incredibly lovable cross - stitch doll will be the perfect gift for any child on the list, and she's guaranteed to keep your creative spirits in gear. As cute as she is,

Becky takes very little time to make Our plans include full - size patterns for the body, arms, legs and face; graphs for the cross - stitch facial features and dress collar; and additional full - size patterns for all of her clothing. The plans are complete with fully illustrated step - by - step instructions for sewing and cross - stitch.

If you would like to order, please specify Project No. 1312-4, and send $3.95. Mail your order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 159, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

To make Becky, you'll need two yards of muslin, two yards of pink gingham for the dress and bloomers, white seersucker for the collar, a small amount of pink fabric for the shoes, 14 - count aida cloth for the face, 18 - count aida for the collar trim, embroidery floss, a skein of rug yarn for the hair, ribbon. eyelet and lace trims, elastic, and fiberfill.

Begin by cross - stitching the facial features and the "I (heart) You" message that goes on the collar trim. Make a body and head assembly as one piece, and stuff it firmly. Sew the cross - stitched face to the front of the head. Make the arms and legs separately and stitch them to the body so

To make Becky's hair, use the rug yarn. Wrap the yarn several times around a pencil to form one curl, and tack the curl to Becky's head. Continue making curls in this manner until you have covered the head. The curls aida cloth face. Make two pony tails from straight lengths of yarn, and stitch them to the head

Becky's dress consists of front and back yokes, to which the gathered front and back dress pieces are attached. Leave a back opening from top to bottom. The sleeves are short, gathered at the top, and trimmed with lace around the lower edges. Stitch a length of baby elastic around the insice of each sleeve near the lower edge, so it will fit the doll's

The over - collar is made like a large square yoke, of double thickness, trimmed with eyelet. It is sewn into the neck seam of the dress. Handstitch the aida cloth with the cross - stitched message to the front of the over

Becky's bloomers are made just like a pair of very baggy shorts, with casings at the waist and lower leg edges to accommodate elastic. Trim the lower leg edges with lace or eyelet. The shoes are made like ballet slippers, trimmed with lace, and held on her feet by elastic around the tops and ribbon ties. As a finishing touch, I soft sculptured fingers on Becky's hands. This is a very simple the hand at the base of one finger, wrap the thread around the end of the hand. and stitch through again. Do the same for each finger.

I know you'll enjoy making Becky as much as I did. She's a real charmer.

Miami rancher and senior geology major at West Texas State University, and Dr.

until a West Texas State University student and professor found them again.

During one of this year's more pleasant days, J. T. Webb, a senior geology major who is a Miami rancher, and Dr. Gerald E. Schultz, professor of geology and paleontologist, set out to discover any ancient life forms they could find.

Webb and Schultz headed for Bill Tolbert's ranch, about and a paleontologist, discuss seven

and Grain and he'd told me about riding by and seeing these bones," Webb said.

Webb and Schultz drove to a spot on Indian Creek which cuts across and exposes an old river bed. The creed had cut a bank 60 to 70 feet high, Schultz said. The ancient river bed was outlined by buff caliche common to the area while the bed was filled with rust to yellow to almost white

Schultz refers to the contour of the river bed as a paleovalley. Erosion and weather have slowly uncovered what nature took millions of years to cover.

"Just the vibration and noise of the truck approaching caused a small landslide as we approached the high cut bank," Schulz

"The sand was so round, if you weren't careful it would move under you," Webb said. Schulz said they did not dig much, but picked up the pieces of bone found lying on the ground.

Several pieces of thick tortoise shell were found, Schulz said. These ancient tortoises, once common to this region, are like the large land tortoise found on the Galapogos Islands.

"Land tortoises are good evidence of a frost - free environment," Schulz explained.

If the weather is too cold, a tortoise's metabolism slows until it is unable to digest food and the result is death.

As the search continued, a small part of a mastodon tooth, part of a rhinoceros tooth, the toe and ear bone of a horse and the toe bone of a hemphillian land mamals," Schulz said.

This particular age of mammals was named because of the large number of specimens discovered in neighboring Hemphill County. They range in age from six to seven million years old.

Schultz said the most exciting find of the day was the right foreleg of a camel.

'When we spotted it (the camel bone), only two or three inches were exposed in the bank," Webb said. Schultz said they carefully dug it out of the bank.

'Most of the time large bones get broken as they are carried downstream by the current," Schultz said. "You get the end, but often not the whole bone.

When they removed the leg bone, it was in two pieces. With the aid of plaster of paris and a piece of a coat hanger, Schultz said he rejoined the pieces.

Large or heavier pieces of bone tend to sink to the bottom of a moving stream, Schultz said, while small or lighter pieces are washed downstream.

Bones often can show the direction of the river current, Schultz said. If several bones are found in the same area, all pointing in the same direction, it is an indication of the direction of the current. "We are interested in hearing about the other finds in the area," Schultz said. They can call me in the geology department at WT or call J.T. in Miami on the

The area around Miami and along the Canadian River has potential of producing good finds. Schulz said

What do you say?

Parents' love should be seen and heard by kids

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is not a major problem-just an irritating one. My husband refuses to kiss me in front of the children. I know he loves me, but he bends over backward to hide it when the children are around.

I think children should see their parents express a little affection for each other once in a while-not go overboard, just an occasional kiss

My 4-year-old made me realize that children do notice things like that when he crawled up onto my lap, gave me a big hug and kiss, and said, "I'm the only one around here who will give you a kiss-huh, Mommy?"

FAITHFUL READER

DEAR READER: Children most certainly need to witness expressions of affection between their parents. And fortunate are those who can recall such sweet memories. Psychiatrists' couches are wet with the tears of patients who remember only the fights their parents had.

DEAR ABBY: I am at a loss for a good answer. In the last few years I have been embarrassed by a waitress, a salesclerk and a good friend because I look so young.

First, my husband's boss and his wife invited my husband and me to a fancy club for dinner. The waitress asked the boss's wife if I was her "daughter." (We are the same age.)

Then I was shopping with a good friend (also my age) when the salesclerk asked me how my "mother" liked the dress I was trying on.

Yesterday it happened again when a friend (my age) and I went to a crowded tearoom, and another friend asked if my "mother" and I cared to join her.

I suppose I should feel flattered, but I know it must have hurt these women. Please give me a good answer so I won't feel hurt for my friends.

OLDER THAN I LOOK IN TUCSON

DEAR OLDER: There is nothing you can do about what other people say, so please don't search for a "good answer." (In this case, there is none.) Your friends are surely aware that you are not as young as you appear to be, so they may not be as "hurt" as you think they are.

P.S. The only person I know who isn't as Young as she looks is Loretta.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I recently took our two boys (ages 9 and 12) to visit some friends in Minnesota. (We are from Virginia.) We raised our boys to always say "Yes, sir" and "Yes, ma'am" when speaking to adults.

The people we were visiting have children about the ages of ours, and they never addressed anyone as "sir" or

A visiting neighbor remarked on how "nice" it was to hear our sons say "Yes, ma'am" and "No, ma'am." Our Minnesota host said, "Oh, we don't use that kind of talk-Abby, do you think it's "too military"? Or do you think as we do-that it shows courtesy and respect? VIRGINIA FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Do I think it's too military? No. sir! Do I think it shows courtesy and respect? Yes, CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: The piece "Teen-Agers, Go Home," erroneously credited to Judge Philip B. Gilliam of Denver, was written by Doris Burville of Olympia, Wash.

My husband has consistently accused me of forgetting to send in the notice to my book clubs canceling books I don't

I have assured him consistently that this is not the case When a book comes in the mail, I want that book. I have waited for it with breathless anticipation. I cannot wait to sit down and begin reading it.

A couple of weeks ago, he picked up a volume by my bed and said, "What book did you order this month?" "It's 'Ptolemy: Harbinger of the Scientific Spirit."

"Ptolemy was a Roman scientist."

"You think I don't know that?" I snapped. "Why else would I order a five - pound book that has over a thousand pages?"

"How far have you gotten?" "Through the dedication.

"How do you like it so far?" he persisted.

"It's very cerebral."

"Did you finish 'The History of String and Its Effects on Western Civilization?"

"That's not fair," I charged. "I heard they were going to make a movie out of it starring Redford and I didn't want to spoil it by knowing the plot.

'What about 'Overcoming Computer Anxiety?''' "It was slow reading."

"Maybet that's because we don't have a computer," he said. "Look, you can't tell me that you get through all those books. Like this one, 'Cooking with Oregano.'

"There is not a single day I do not pick that book up," I said. (He doesn't have to know I use it to prop against the doo so it won't close and lock on me when I go to the mailbox.)

You would think that my husband would be proud to have a wife who has such a searching, probing mind. Why else would I belong to six book clubs, two record clubs, a fruit - of - the month club, a plant - of - the - month club and subscribe to a Chocolate Newsletter?

Yesterday he brought in the mail. There was the familiar brown carton with the pull - tab.

"What did you order this month?" he asaid.

"I'll open it later," I said.

He ripped open the package. "It's a dual selection, 'Hebrew Flower Arranging' and 'Male Menopause: Fad or Fantasy." I put one book in each of my hands and began to read them conscious Americans, or so say Italy's shoe designers, who varied autumn wares go on display March 9 - 12 at Milan's annual shoe fair.

Shoes are Italy's biggest single export, according to an article in Connoisseur's February issue, and Americans buy some 60 million pairs of them each year. That may seem like a lot of shoes, but West Germans buy even more, and many of the most exotic and innovative Italian styles never show up in American stores. The Italian shoe industry hopes to remedy that

Bologna displayed the most exciting and diverse collection of shoes to be seen anywhere: wide - strapped lizard and snake skin, pastel summer boots, thonged "barbarian" sandals that ladder their way up the calves, the popular 'sportivo' look, and a tattered style that is lugubriously called "post -atomic." Even this futuristic look is rooted in an ancient tradition: men and women in Italian Renaissance paintings

This should not be a surprise. The Guild of Italian Shoemakers was founded more than six centuries ago, and the industry's unique system of stilista apprenticeship is calculated to ensure that the Italian tradition of fine creative shoemaking will continue. Promising young workers are spotted in factories, then carefully trained at industry expense until they are ready to join the elite corps of professional designers. They are so elite, in fact, that some manufacturers from other countries are interested in buying their designs directly, a circumstance that adds to the cloak - and - dagger air of Italian shoe exhibitions. Buyers come from everywhere to purchase new designs - and to steal them. # When marriage brings another country's problem

WASHINGTON (AP) -The atmosphere in the house is anxious. Her husband gets only a glimpse of sleep each night. And every hour, they check the latest reports from their battered land

For Julie Cole Bouhabib. wife of Abdullah R. Bouhabib, the Lebanese ambassador to the United States, "Life's become much more intense.' 'Now we're waiting.

Mrs. Bouhabib said she is concentrating on supporting her husband while the Gemayel government fights for survival and the U.S. Marines and other units of the multinational peacekeeping force begin withdrawal.

"He's involved in a lot of hard work," she said Thursday. "Yet we're continuing to go on with our lives and hope things work

Mrs. Bouhabib, 33, is one of three Americans married to foreign ambassadors now serving in Washington. The Jacovides, wife of the ambassador from Cyprus, and Jessie Hawkins Amany, wife of the ambassador from the Ivory Coast.

Unlike most diplomatic spouses in Washington, these women find themselves in the position of living in their own country while engulfed in the problems and culture of

"My loyalties are not divided between the countries," said Mrs. Amany, who was born in Washington, D.C. "I feel comfortable with Yet at times, these women walk a diplomatic tightrope and must refrain from saying anything that might be construed as a political statement.

There are some things we just can't say,'' Mrs. Bouhabib said.

She added, however, that she is "waiting to see what happens, if negotiations will work. I think this is a time other two are Pamela White when something will

Of President Reagan's decision to withdraw U.S. Marines to battleships off Beirut, Mrs. Bouhabib said: "I think Reagan is giving Lebanon a great deal of support.

Since her husband, a close family friend of Lebanese president Amin Gemayel, was appointed to his post a year ago, the Bouhabibs have spent much of their time trying to explain policies of the Gen.eyal government to influential Americans.

Because Washington is a city where social life is often an extension of the business day, the Bouhabibs have entertained two or three times a week, inviting small groups to dine on such Lebanese specialities as babbaghounish, an eggplant dish, and meatballs called maid offers coffee and tea from silver pots.

"I never anticipated living like this," said Mrs. Bouhabib, who grew up in Aiken, S.C., the daughter of a draftsman for E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Her mother was a librarian.

Mrs. Bouhabib met her husband on a blind date when she was a biology student at Vanderbilt University, where he taught economics. They were married in 1974.

Two years later, he went to work for the World Bank. He worked there for seven years before being appointed amhassador

Mrs. Bouhabib said she worries about her husband's security when he travels to Lebanon but when he is in America, "I feel confident."

Pamela Jacovides married Andrew J. Jacovides five years ago when she was working in New York City's office of consular affairs and he was representing his Mediterranean island of Cyprus at the United Nations.

He was appointed have the time with the ambassador and they moved to Washington two months later.

"This life may look glamorous on the outside, but inside we work as hard as any housewife," Mrs. Jacovides said as she sat in the sunny living room of the ambassador's five - bedroom quarters just off Embassy

Mrs. Jacovides said she spends much of her time supervising the household staff and promoting Cyprus in the United States by making speeches and attending a myriad of social and professional functions. When her husband was promoted to his new post, she enrolled in a public speaking course so she wouldn't be nervous when asked to make speeches.

Much of her time is spent organizing the household and attending functions important to Cyprus.

"It's hard to make real friends," she said. "You don't

Mrs. Jacovides, 41, grew up Red Bank, N.J., the daughter of a New York real estate man. She met her husband several years after graduating from Mount Vernon College in Washington and getting a job as a secretary at the United

"Working at the United Nations was better than four years in college and a master's degree," she said. "I got so much experience."

Mrs. Bouhabib said she has never lived in Lebanon, although she and the couple's three children visit her husband's family there every summer

"Every time we went, it got smaller and smaller and we could travel less and less.' she said. "We always intended to go back to Lebanon. And we will go back. But I'd worry about going back now, primarily for the children."

Plant therapy proves helpful to patient

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) - It may look like an ordinary greenhouse, but the large glass structure on the psychiatric campus of Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center here nurtures not only plants, but also the human spirit.

Plant therapy - as work in the Hillside division's greenhouse is sometimes called - is credited with creating remarkable changes in the lives of many patients. Psychiatrists and activities specialists at the medical center have noted that caring for plants often gives withdrawn patients emotional rewards that build a bridge to other people.

Initially, many of the 30 men and women working in the greenhouse are suspicious of people, but not of plants, according to Estelle Douglas. director of the Department of Rehabilitation Activities.

They raise flowers from seedlings and cuttings, do florat arrangements, conduct research on plant diseases, and sell in the greenhouse. In season, they cultivate flower beds, plant Japanese rock gardens and raise vegetables for their own use.

In the process, says Ms. Douglas, they gain confidence and self-esteem in being able to nurture living things. When a middle-aged carpenter with a severe problem of alcoholism arrived at Hillside, he was hostile and socially isolated, Ms. Douglas recalls. "Growing plants offered him a gentle focus of attention that gradually broke through barriers of alienation and apathy," she says. "At first he refused any contact with other group members. All he would do is water the plants. "Then the work grabbed him. As he trimmed plants, made cuttings, repotted, checked for insects and disease, he began to relate to the greenhouse group leader Maria Marrone, who has been an activities specialist at the hospital for 34 years. That also marked the beginning of a notable difference in the patient's interaction with

In combination with psychotherapy and medication, rehabilitation activities are an important part of treatment at Hillside. Psychiatrist Dr. Philip Goldberg says patients who find other types of activity unacceptable are often willing to work in the greenhouse.

"People feel peace among plants," he points out. 'Plants are alive, something to touch and handle, but also safe. They provide pleasure, hope, expectation. They even help bring acceptance of the workings of nature, for when a plant dies, you have to replace it and get on with raising the next plant. That means making the best of something when it passes its bloom, giving it up and moving on For three hours every day, the routines of caring for plants provide a needed structure of meaningful activity for the greenhouse group, Ms. Douglas says. Not only do they enjoy hands-on-experience, but they participate in planning each work task and setting standards together with the rehabilitation staff.

"Plants can stimulate a caring response," she explains. "At the greenhouse we often see lost contacts with life renewed. connections with other people restored, a sense of responsibility developed."

The greenhouse at Hillside is one of a number of small group workshops in which work is part of therapy and a link to normal life. There is a boutique for clothing and crafts, a carpentry shop, ceramics center, clerical pool and commissary Rehabilitation therapists say these activities share a common goal: to treat the healthy part of the patient.

Health Plan.

BOSTON (AP) - By the millions, Americans are abandoning traditional pay as - you - go health care and taking their aches and ills to the medical supermarkets of the future: health maintenance organizations.

Already, 12½ million people in the United States belong to these pre - paid group plans. And one expert predicts this will grow to 50 million within the next 10

"I think 90 percent of the population will be in plans of this type over the next couple of decades," says Dr. Paul M. Ellwood Jr., president of InterStudy, a health policy research group in Excelsior,

People who join these plans, known as HMOs, give up their freedom to go wherever they want and see whomever they please for whatever ails them. They must accept the doctors on the HMO's payroll.

But in return, there are big advantages: HMOs are cheaper than ordinary insurance. And they provide one - stop care for everthing from sore throats to childbirth, allergies to open heart surgery.

In exchange for their flat fees, subscribers get as much care as they need. Everything within reason is covered, and there are no deductibles. Even annual physical exams are included at no extra charge.

The HMOs say they can provide more care for less money because they are more efficient than traditional, fee for - service care, and they strive to keep their patients out of the hospital. In fact, HMO subscribers spend 30 to 50 percent less time in hospitals than do people covered by ordinary health insurance.

"The most significant thing about HMOs is what they've done to the entire shape of American medical care," Ellwood said. "They are the device that introduced price competition."

In 1973, there were just 72 HMOs in the United States. That year, a federal law made it mandatory for large employers to allow their workers to choose between HMO coverage and ordinary insurance, such as Blue Cross Blue Shield. It offered grants and loans to get HMOs started and abolished state laws that prohibited them.

Now there are 280 plans across the country. They enroll 1 in 10 people in Boston, 1 in 7 in California and 1 in 3 in Minneapolis - St. Paul.

The national enrollments are doubling about every five years. Non - profit organizations, hospitals, private insurers, group practices, Blue Cross plans and investor - owned companies are getting into the business And it's big business the HMO boom, obviously, Seventy percent of the country's HMO patients are are the nation's independent Blue Cross plans. For now enrolled in plans owned by the 10 largest national example, in Massachusetts, HMO companies. The biggest Blue Cross' share of health of these is Kaiser, which coverage has slipped from 65 pioneered the idea in percent to 58 percent in California in World War II.

recent years. So Blue Cross is fighting back. There are now 59 Blue Cross - affiliated HMOs in 28 states. A family membership in the Blue Cross - owned Medical South Community Health Plan in the Boston suburbs costs $166 monthly.

"They would be (a threat to Blue Cross) if we weren't into them," said Virgil Marsh, manager of alternate delivery systems at the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Associations in Chicago. "But it's an opportunity also. We expect all the plans will be into them in time."

How can HMOs charge less? In large part, they do it by cutting down on hospitalization. Patients who are admitted are often sent home sooner, and minor surgery is done on an out patient basis.

But the HMOs have an additional advantage. Most of their patients are enrolled through group plans where they work. They must be at least well enough to hold jobs. And overall, they tend to be significantly younger and healthier than average:

However, Dr. Harold S. Luft of the University of California in San Francisco

said that despite this, "I think there's pretty good evidence that HMOs do provide services and care for a given population at lower total cost than does the conventional system.

Luft said HMOs typically employ a variety of

-One, he said, is to perhaps make access a little more difficult." HMO patients are assigned personal physicians, but they often must make appointments a couple of weeks in advance and in some plans can't see them on short notice. If they want immediate care, they can go to the HMO's emergency room but must settle for the doctor on duty.

-HMOs probably perform fewer questionable diagnostic tests, Luft said, although there is little objective evidence to prove this.

-Many routine ailments are treated by nurses, not -Patients are often urged

Scrub-A-Dub-Dub

If you are bothered with blackhead problems, especially around your nose, here's a great scrub you can make with ingredients from your kitchen. Take four tablespoons of almond meal (you can grind fresh almonds in a blender or food processor), one teaspoon of comfrey, 1/2 teaspoon goldenseal, two dashes of sea salt and add them to one to two tablespoons of distilled water. Mix into a paste and let it stand in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning, rub onto your face gently concentrating on , the problem areas. Rinse off in the shower. ### Blushing beauty

A little bit of blush adds life to your face, but too many women don't realize that there is an art to "blushing." If you want to emphasize your eyes, play down your blush, use a lighter shade such as peach or pale pink. However, if you want your lips to be the center of attention, wear a dark shade of lipstick and complement it with a darker shade of blush otherwise you will look washed out. When going out at night, remember that artificial lights also washes out your blush, so go a bit heavier with it than you would during the day. Blush will stay on longer if you dust it over with a light layer of translucent powder

What's cooking?

Eggs don't only belong in the kitchen! Bring them into your bathroom and you will find you have a great way of getting rid of those oily hair blues. First, take the volks of two eggs and mix in a few drops of fresh lemon juice. Work the mixture into freshly washed wet hair. Let the mixture sit for five minutes and then rinse off with warm water. This kitchenconditioner will keep your hair shiny, clean and oil free until you wash it again two or three days later!

Museum is located in a former police garage

By JACKIE HYMAN

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a loading dock for a lobby and paintings hanging where the city once patched up its police cars, the newly opened Museum of Contemporary Art is planning several events featuring - what else? - cars.

"The feeling was that it's appropriate to Los Angeles," said Richard Koshalek, director of the museum, which will offer an exhibit called "Automobile and Culture" beginning in July during the city's Olympic Arts Festival.

The show, with about 30 autos and 150 works of art, will tour to the Detroit Institute for the Arts and to Paris after its December closing, said Koshalek. Although the museum's "Temporary Contemporary" facility consists of abandoned city-owned warehouses in the downtown Little Tokyo area, there's nothing ramshackle about it.

$1-a-year, five-year lease — the 55,000-square-foot facility is brightened by industrial skylights and striking steel beams bracing the ceiling.

The museum, funded by private donations, opened in November with a show of selections from eight international contemporary art collections. It draws about 1,000 people a day during the week and 1.400 on weekend days, Koshalek said.

The dead-end street outside serves as part of the museum's space.

In early July, while the galleries are closed for installation of the automobile show, the museum will stage an exhibit of "portable architecture." By this, the museum means tents, and about 200 different types will be set up in the street.

'We're kidding that it's the only show you can go to and stay overnight," said Koshalek, former curator of the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, director of the Hudson River Museum in New York. On Labor Day, the Museum of Contemporary Art, known as MOCA, will offer yet another innovation to coincide with its car show

In cooperation with the Mark Taper Forum of the Los Angeles Music Center, playwrights have been commissioned to write 10-minute scripts to be performed in cars. The time limit is significant because that's how long it takes to drive between the Taper and MOCA.

Each performance is limited to an audience of three, the number of people who can fit in the back seat. Visitors to the museum that day will see two shows, one as the actors drive and perform en route to the Taper, and another on the way back. A number of cars will make the rounds all day, to accommodate as many people as possible.

You remember the horse, of course, the famous "Mr. Ed.

The source of this unusual course is a 25-year-old self-proclaimed "Edhead" who publishes a newsletter for the 1,100 members of his Mr. Ed Fan Club.

James Burnett hopes to revive the dead talking horse by returning the once-popular Mr. Ed television show to the airwaves.

Burnett runs his campaign to syndicate the show, which went off the air in the 1960s. from his tiny apartment in the Dallas suburb of Cedar

Although he had never actually watched the show, he founded the club in 1974 - by · accident.

"I decided I needed the ultimate fake return address. So I used the 'Mr. Ed Fan Club' because I thought it would be completely absurb for Mr. Ed to have a fan club," Burnett said.

"Then in 1979 I decided to make a T-shirt with the return address on it and people stopped me on the street and said they wanted to join," he said.

Most of his 1,100 members, including Alan Young, who played Wilbur Post, Mr. Ed's owner, have joined in the last year. Word of the club is spreading, Burnett says. Most people just love Mr.

Ed. That's all there is to it,' he said. "Right now, Mr. Ed is not very heavily syndicated. He's actually shown in more cities," he said. "I have no idea why that is. But it presents an interesting challenge for me." Burnett works at part-time odd jobs and hopes to make it big someday as a promoter. He's worked with rock musicians on concerts, handling some publicity, and believes the Mr. Ed Fan Club may lead to bigger career endeavors. "He's something that was once very popular," Burnett said of the white talking horse, who liked bowling, driving a milk truck and sneezing "Wilburrrrr!"

"I have a chance to promote him and bring the show back," he said. "I think I've really tapped into something unusual."

The fan club, Burnett said, 'Is a part-time job and a full-time debt." The club has held two Mr. Ed parties in Dallas, where "Edheads" gather to watch videotapes of the black-and-white show "I had never seen Mr. Ed in my life until 10 months ago when an 'Edhead in California sent me a videotape for a party," Burnett said.
