Chernenko named oldest Soviet boss

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko, a member of the Kremlin's old guard, was named general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party today, succeeding the late Yuri V. Andropov in the Soviet Union's most powerful post.

At 72, Chernenko is the oldest man ever selected to lead the 18-million member party, which governs this nation of 280 million people. For 30 years, he was a close ally of Andropov's predecessor, Leonid I. Brezhnev, but Andropov outmaneuvered him 15 months ago to become party leader.

The Central Committee formally named Chernenko at a special session, called four days after the death of Andropov at age 69. The succession was decided by the 12 members of the Politburo, the country's ruling body.

In naming Chernenko, the ruling Politburo chose a member of the leadership's old guard rather than hand the reins of power to a member of the younger generation who could be expected to serve a decade or more.

It was a remarkable comeback for Chernenko, who had been pushed aside after Andropov defeated him 15 months ago in a contest to succeed Brezhnev. The four-day delay in announcing the new party secretary had been taken by some as evidence of a political struggle in the Politburo.

In a speech to the Central Committee, Chernenko attacked Western leaders, saying they posed a threat of nuclear war. He said the Soviet Union would strive to avert war by maintaining its nuclear strength.

"We do not intend to dictate our will to others, but we will not permit the military equilibrium that has been achieved to be upset," he vowed.

"And let nobody have even the slightest doubt about that: We will further see to it that our country's defense capacity be strengthened, that we should have enough means to cool the hot heads of militant adventurists," he said, according to the official Tass report of his speech.

The announcement was made by the 300-plus-member Central Committee through the official news media as the country prepared for the burial Tuesday of Andropov, who died Thursday. Andropov had previously been the oldest man to take over as general secretary of the party — at age 68.

Soviet television and radio said Chernenko opened the plenum and called for a minute of silence to honor Andropov, whom he praised for his domestic and foreign policies.

Since Chernenko has had virtually no personal role in foreign affairs, it is difficult to gauge how he will approach the biggest problems of international relations — the deterioration of relations with the United States and the impasse on negotiations on control of nuclear weapons.

But Kremlin foreign policy changed little in the transition from Brezhnev to Andropov, and since Chernenko has been strongly identified with Brezhnev for decades it seemed unlikely that he would institute any radical changes.

The announcement said Chernenko was nominated by Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov and was elected unanimously. Chernenko had nominated Andropov 15 months before, upon the death of Brezhnev.

Chernenko's selection as general secretary still leaves the office of the presidency vacant.

'Fritz Blitz' leaving all opponents behind

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Walter F. Mondale's "Fritz Blitz" campaign through Iowa has stranded the other candidates for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, leaving them to seek front-runner status in the second tier of contenders.

Campaigning Sunday in Des Moines, Sen. Alan Cranston said he has to "come in a clear third in the voting" in the Feb. 20 party caucuses across the state — the first test of strength among Democratic rank-and-file.

Cranston, meeting with members of the Jewish community, said his goal in Iowa is "to emerge as the alternative to the two front-runners, Mondale and (Sen. John) Glenn."

Mondale's position as the acknowledged front-runner made him the target, along with President Reagan, during a 2½-hour nationally-broadcast debate here Saturday among the eight major candidates.

Mondale, though, shrugged off their barbs.

"This is the trash period. We're getting close to these elections and people are saying things," Mondale said.

During the debate — the last chance Iowans had to see the candidates together before the caucuses — the contenders made clear that Reagan is the enemy.

Glenn called the president's policy in Lebanon a "moral outrage."

Mondale reminded the audience that a second term could give Reagan the opportunity to make several appointments to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"That could well be the end of the rest of justice in America," Mondale said.

Nonetheless, when Glenn was not attacking Reagan, he was going after Mondale, especially Mondale's support from big labor.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who is concentrating his efforts in New England and the South, said, "I don't know who's going to pay for the promises of Fritz Mondale, but I also don't know who's going to pay for the inexperience of John Glenn."

Lebanon president not expecting multinational forces to pull out

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The street fighting and artillery barrages around Beirut subsided today following statements by government leaders that they would step up efforts to give Lebanon's Moslem majority greater power.

President Amin Gemayel rejected demands by opposition leaders that he resign and said he hoped to convene a national reconciliation conference with leaders of Lebanon's rival factions in Geneva, Switzerland, within two weeks.

Gemayel, during an impromptu briefing of reporters Sunday, also said he expects the multinational force to remain in Lebanon. He said the plan to withdraw U.S. Marines to ships offshore was just a "detail."

"I am confident that President Reagan is fully committed to help Lebanon," he said.

It was Gemayel's first public statement since rebels seized control of west Beirut, the Moslem half of the capital, in battles with the Lebanese army a week ago.

Gemayel said a new Cabinet to replace that of Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan would be formed at the planned reconciliation conference. Wazzan resigned Feb. 4 but Gemayel asked him to stay on until a new government is formed.

Foreign Minister Elie Salem told reporters at the briefing in Beit Mary, six miles east of Beirut, that Gemayel would propose a 28-point program of political and constitutional reforms at the Geneva conference.

A shakeup in Lebanon's Christian-dominated political structure is a key demand of the rebels.

Salem said the plan would give Moslems equal representation in parliament instead of the current 6:5 ratio in favor of the Christians and would create a senate in which all sects would be represented.

Under the plan, the president, traditionally a Maronite Catholic, would be elected by a minimum of 55 votes in the 99-member parliament.

At present, the president is elected by a two-thirds vote on the first ballot or by a simple majority on subsequent ballots.

Valentine postmark a much-wanted item

VALENTINE, Texas (AP) — Eleven months out of the year, Postmaster Leila Doris Kelley handles the mail for this far West Texas hamlet, but her duties increase substantially towards Valentine's Day, thanks to an influx of cards from sweethearts and collectors.

It's no problem, though. For Mrs. Kelley, it's a labor of love.

Over the past 30 years, her special valentine postmark has become a high-demand item in late January and early February.

This year is no different. For a couple of weeks, Mrs. Kelley has been surrounded by bags of valentines sent here for remailing, complete with the heart-shaped postmark stamped "Love Sta."

"That's not bad, though," Mrs. Kelley said. "It's good. I love this work."

By Feb. 1, she had received about 100 envelopes containing one or more valentines. Last week she had affixed her special mark to hundreds more, she said, as the cards kept rolling in. Most arrive by mail truck from El Paso and are returned there for distribution.

"I expect 2,000 or more total," she told The Dallas Morning News.

Most of her business comes in the week or so before Valentine's Day. But she stops using her special postmark Feb. 15.

"People are always disappointed if it gets here late, but I can't put an old date on the postmark," she said.

Mrs. Kelley said she received mail from 45 states before Valentine's Day last year and put the special stamp on about 5,000 pieces of mail in a recent year.

The post office is not the only local establishment affected by the valentine fever. Most of the year, this town of 350 quietly concerns itself with the ranching and railroad businesses.

But in late January and early February, some travelers passing through Valentine on U.S. Highway 90 interrupt their journeys when the idea hits them to send a card from here.

Former Pampa resident among recipients of Carnegie Medals

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A concrete finisher who was hospitalized for a week after rescuing a wheelchair-bound woman and a baby from a burning house and a former Pampa man who gave his life saving a child from a moving vehicle were among 15 people named to receive Carnegie Medals for heroism.

"To be frank with you, I was scared to death," said Melvin Torrence, 35, of Mineral Springs, N.C. "I was a tool, an instrument being used. I'm glad God could use me at that time."

Torrence had to enter the smoke-filled, one-story house twice on March 16, 1982, to rescue Natasha M. Capers, then 27, and Ryan S. Bailey, then 1, among the several children being cared for by his sister-in-law, Miss Capers, his brother's foster daughter, has since died of pneumonia, Torrence said.

The 15 Carnegie heroes, from 11 states and Canada, or their survivors each received $2,500 Thursday in addition to the medals. Three of the heroes died in their attempts to save others from fire, drowning or a moving vehicle.

One of those was former Pampa resident Robert G. Head, 71, a custodian and crossing guard from DeSoto, Texas, who was struck by a car in Brownwood, Texas, on Jan. 24, 1983, when running to pull a 5-year-old girl from the car's path. Head died of a heart attack while being treated. The girl was unhurt.

Of the heroes who survived, most seriously injured was Ralph A. Newman, 68, a high school English teacher from Milwaukee, Wis.

Newman was temporarily paralyzed when he broke his teen-age neighbor's 17-foot fall. James F. Hoffer, then 17, was working on his roof when he lost his balance. Newman, standing below, tried to catch Hoffer but the boy landed on Newman's head.

After 12 months in the hospital and out-patient therapy, Newman, whose neck was broken, said he can get around with a walker.

Since the Carnegie Hero Fund was established in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie, 6,782 people have been honored and $15 million has been granted in one-time payments or continuing support.

Among the other heroes honored in the ceremonies were:

—Curtis E. Kunze, 25, of Heavener, Okla., who pulled a truck driver from a burning truck in Fanshawe, Okla., on June 23, 1983, moments before the truck's fuel tank exploded. Both men suffered broken bones and burns.

—David R. Langdon, 18, of Dedham, Mass., a high school student who pulled a man from a burning car in Westwood, Mass., after a collision on May 22, 1983. Both recovered from burns.

—John R. Lee, 33, a corporate executive from Frankfort, Ill., who helped rescue a neighbor in Frankfort from her burning house on Sept. 26, 1982. Both survived.

Animal control ordinance sets new procedures

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tuesday morning the Pampa City Commission will consider on second reading a new animal control ordinance. This is the second of a two-part series concerning aspects of the new ordinance.

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

A result of a new animal control ordinance under study by the city commission will be more specified procedures for pet owners. Animal Control Authority officers and owners of animal establishments in such areas as rabies control and impoundment procedures. All will have more responsibilities outlined for them under the new provisions.

Pet owners, as detailed in Sunday's article, will be required to get yearly rabies vaccinations for their dogs and cats over four months of age. They also are required to have vaccination certificates and tags for their pets.

The Animal Control Authority will have the responsibility of insuring rabies control procedures are followed by pet owners and animal establishments to protect people and other animals.

The ordinance gives the ACA authority to order the quarantine of animals responsible for bite incidents or suspected of having any zoonotic disease (one capable of being transmitted from an animal to a person) considered to be a hazard to people or other animals.

But the ordinance also places responsibility on the owner of an animal in such cases:

"Every animal that bites a human being or attacks another animal, or has rabies or any other zoonotic disease, shall be immediately confined by the owner, who shall promptly notify the Animal Control Authority of the place where such animal is confined and the reason for the confinement," the proposed ordinance states.

The owner is also expected to keep the animal from coming in contact with any other person or animal. Further, the owner "shall surrender possession of such animal to the (ACA) on demand for supervised quarantine."

The confinement may be at the animal shelter, a veterinary hospital or any other place approved by the ACA supervisor. The quarantine cannot be for less than 10 days and must be under the supervision of a veterinarian or the local health authority. If no signs of rabies or other diseases are observed, then the animal may be released from quarantine.

"The violation of quarantine by any person shall be just cause for seizure and impoundment of the quarantined animal by the (ACA). It shall be unlawful for any person to interrupt the observation period," the ordinance states.

The ordinance requires all animal bite reports to be investigated by the ACA.

Further conditions are also stipulated.

"Without permission of the Authority, it shall be unlawful for any person to kill or remove from the corporate limits of the City of Pampa any animal that has bitten a person or other animal, or that has been placed under quarantine, except when it is necessary to kill such animal to protect the life of any person or other animal," the ordinance states.

City Manager Mack Wofford noted this section does not give any person the right to shoot dogs who are crossing his property, even if attacking his animals.

"There must be obvious evidence" that the dog is attacking a person or other animal in such a manner that it cannot be restrained by normal, reasonable methods before the dog can be killed, he said. This usually would not occur except "in an extreme case," he added.

The intent of this section is to preserve the animal for observation, the city manager explained.

The carcass of any dead animal exposed to rabies or suspected of having been rabid shall be surrendered to the ACA upon demand, according to ordinance provisions.

The ordinance also requires confinement for any animal which is bitten by another animal. The owner is required to notify the ACA of such confinement and the reasons therefor.

If it is known the animal has been exposed to rabies, then the animal must be handled in one of the following manners: (1) humane destruction, with notification to or under the supervision of the ACA; (2) quarantine in a veterinary hospital, if the animal is not vaccinated, for at least six months at the expense of the owner; or (3) immediate revaccination, if vaccinated, and quarantine for at least 30 days at the owner's expense.

No person may fail or refuse to surrender an animal for supervised quarantine or humane destruction when demanded by the ACA for rabies control, the ordinance stipulates.

The ACA also should be notified if a quarantined animal

Iran and Iraq trading attacks

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - The 3 1/2-year-old war between Iran and Iraq has taken a new twist, with the two countries intensifying shelling of civilian areas but providing advance warning so residents of the target zones can flee.

Iran shelled seven Iraqi cities and towns on Sunday, and Iraq retaliated by firing on four Iranian cities. Iraqi officials said the Iranians killed 14 people and injured 89, and Iran claimed the Iraqis killed at least 15 people and wounded more than 120.

Animals on commissioners' agenda

Pampa city commissioners will have the second reading of a new animal control ordinance, discuss a request by Pampa Fine Arts Association to obtain city property for a cultural center and hear a report on proposed improvements for Kentucky Street at their regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

The animal control ordinance, if adopted, will place stricter restraint requirements on dogs and cats, establish permits for animal establishments and detail rabies control and impoundment procedures. The PFAA has sent a letter to the commission concerning the possibility of obtaining city property located at Hobart and Montague Streets. The association wants to construct a cultural center.

Commissioners will hear a report on progress of a project to pave Kentucky Street from Price Road to Plum Street. The project was requested in November by property owners in the area.

In other matters, the commission will hear a recommendation from staff on awarding a bid for renewal of property and liability insurance coverages and consider approval of fire protection contracts with Gray and Carson Counties and the City of Lefors.

The commission also will discuss the possibility of sharing a portion of the cost of improvement of Harvester Street with developers and property owners. The action has been requested by John R. Davis.

Other business items include authorizing payments to Ivan Dement, Inc., and Merriman and Barber Consulting Engineers for Duncan Street improvements, adopting a resolution calling the election of city officers for April 7, approving salary changes for January and okaying accounts payable.

Former Pampa officer wasn't assaulted

GUYMON, Okla. - An Oklahoma oilfield worker is innocent of a charge that he assaulted Guymon police lieutenant Greg Dunham, a former Pampa police officer, during a brawl last year at a Guymon bar, a Guymon jury decided last week.

Tony Lee Byers was charged with the aggravated assault of Dunham during a knockdown - dragout fight at Mom's Place on Aug. 3, 1983.

Byers claimed he was only defending himself against Guymon police officers in the fracas at the tavern. The oil worker stood trial last week on charges that he assaulted Dunham and fellow Guymon officers Lt. Jerry Wadley, Allan Cummings and Chris Turner.

After more than eight hours of deliberations Thursday, jurors decided Byers is innocent of the charge of aggravated assault against Lt. Dunham, innocent of a charge of simple assault against Lt. Wadley, guilty of two counts of simple assault against officer Cummings and guilty of a charge of simple assault against officer Turner.

Jurors sentenced Byers to six months in jail and fined him a total of $1,000.

Byers testified he was forced to defend himself after police tried to arrest him at the bar. The Guymon man previously filed a $100,000 damage claim against the city, which the city council rejected.

Dunham left the Pampa Police Department in 1981 to take the lieutenant's job in Guymon.

Wedding anniversary turned into tragedy

By JULIA CLARK Staff Writer

A planned celebration of their wedding anniversary turned into tragedy for a young Pampa couple over the weekend.

Kim and Mark Hutchison, who lived south of town, Friday were making plans to celebrate their third wedding anniversary; then they learned a fire had destroyed their mobile home, all their belongings and even their pets.

Kim returned to the trailer Saturday morning.

"I almost expected to hear him barking the way he always did..." She said as she stopped at the door of her burned out home. She brushed back the tears that spilled down her cheeks, remembering the way Whiskers, her five-year-old toy poodle always greeted her.

"I hurried home, hoping they had saved him, but it was too late. Now, they are all gone, the cat, even the fish in the tanks," she said as she surveyed the charred remains of the 14-year-old trailer she and her husband had remodeled.

Everything was destroyed in the fire, including new furniture Mark's parents had given them for Christmas.

Sam Shackleford, a neighbor stopped by. He offered the young couple some furniture he had planned on selling in a garage sale.

"I don't need it and if they can use it to get started again, it sure will make me feel good," he said.

Twenty-one-year-old Kim and Mark, 22, will stay with his parents, at 1228 S. Faulkner, until they find another home.

Kim wears a petit size five and shoe size six. Mark wears size 10 shoes, ex-large shirt and 32-36 size jeans.

Kim works at the Hollywood in the Pampa Mall and Mark works for S & M Oilfield Service.

escapes, dies or shows sign of disease.

The ordinance gives the ACA authority to impound any dog or cat not exhibiting any evidence of being currently vaccinated, any dog, cat or wild animal at large (not under restraint), or any animal that has bitten a human being or needs to be placed under observation for rabies determination.

If a dog or cat is impounded, the ACA is expected to make a reasonable effort to notify the owner and inform him of conditions for regaining custody of the animal.

Dogs and cats without a current vaccination tag not claimed by their owners within three full working days will become city property. If the animal has a current tag, the period will be six working days. If held for rabies observation, the animal shall not be released until the quarantine period is completed.

If a dog or cat is found running at large and its ownership is verified by the ACA, the Authority may exercise the option of serving the owner with a citation in lieu of impounding the animal, the ordinance specifies.

This citation "is similar to a ticket or any other type of citation from the city for a violation," Wofford explained.

The ordinance also makes it a misdemeanor for any person to "interfere with, hinder, or molest any agent of the (ACA) in the performance of any duty" specified in the provisions.

The ordinance also details procedures for the adoption of any impounded animal, specifying that the adopted animal must be neutered. The neutering clause does not apply to an impounded animal claimed by its owner.

A major addition to the ordinance is the provision requiring animal establishments to have city permits.

An animal establishment is defined as "any pet shop, grooming shop, animal auction, performing animal exhibit, kennel, or animal shelter." The definition specifically excludes veterinary hospitals, licensed research facilities, government operated facilities or animal dealers regulated by the USDA.

"No person shall operate an animal establishment without first obtaining a permit in compliance" with the terms of the ordinance.

The permit period begins on the first day of the fiscal year (Oct. 1) and runs for one year. Renewal applications can be made within 60 days prior to the expiration date. Applications for new establishments can be made at any time.

The ordinance provides that a person who maintains a kennel of six or more dogs or cats, or six or more dogs and cats for breeding purposes may elect to pay an annual permit fee or to register the individual animals under rabies vaccination procedures.

Under terms for the issuance of a permit, the ACA will be permitted to inspect any and all animals and the premises of the establishment at any reasonable time during normal business hours. The inspection will be to determine if the animals are being kept in a humane manner.

If the establishment is found to be violating any terms of the ordinance or any laws of the state, it will be notified of the violations. If such violations are not corrected within 10 days of the notice, then the city may revoke the permit.

A person denied a permit may not reapply for 30 days. If the permit is revoked, he may not reapply for 60 days.

The ordinance also provides fees for permits, impoundment and adoption.

The annual permit fee for an animal establishment is $10. Any reapplication, including one after the revocation of a permit, is $10.

Impoundment fees will be $5 for dogs or cats for first impoundment during the preceding 12 months. A second impoundment will cost $7 to regain custody of the animal. Any additional impoundment during the preceding 12 months will be $10. In addition, a daily handling fee of $3 will be charged the owner.

Adoption fees will be $10 for a puppy or kitten or $20 for an adult dog or cat.

Commissioners will consider the proposed ordinance on second reading at its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

WEST COVINA, Calif. (AP) - A woman thought she was in pretty good health, until she read in the newspaper that she had died.

The obituary in the San Gabriel

Valley Tribune, listing survivors and a memorial service today for Donna Carrillo of Azusa, was printed at the request of a man who walked into the newspaper office and paid for it.

Her family speculated that someone connected with a family business might have placed the ad, which resulted in a deluge of calls to the Carrillo home from shocked friends.

Season's first tornadoes dance across Texas along with storms

By The Associated Press

Residents of two East Texas cities cleaned up damage left behind from the season's first tornadoes, while American Airlines was forced to cancel scores of flights because of hail damage to 28 jets at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Lowell Duncan, American's vice president for communications, said 103 flights were canceled Sunday and another 73 flights were scrubbed today after a Saturday night airmail storm battered the planes.

Most of the damage was to the skin of the aircraft, said company spokesman Al Becker.

"It's a laborious process to get them repaired," Becker said. The hail was part of a system of violent weather that moved through the state late Saturday and early Sunday. Besides damaging tornadoes that hit the East Texas towns of Palestine and Normangee, thunderstorms triggered twisters that lanced around San Antonio and skirted along the upper Gulf Coast.

At least five tornadoes were spotted in and around San Antonio early Sunday, according to the National Weather Service.

Police confirmed that two of the twisters touched down — one on the south side of the city and the other in the southeastern sector. Some damage was reported to southside businesses and utility service was interrupted, but no injuries were reported, authorities said.

Another twister hit the East Texas town of Normangee Saturday evening, flattening a lumber yard, causing extensive damage to a downtown area and injuring at least three people, the Leon County sheriff's department reported.

A second twister Saturday evening near Palestine caused heavy damage to 10 houses and a school, police chief Hunter Williams said. Two people went to the emergency room at Anderson County Memorial Hospital with minor injuries.

Other twisters were spotted in the Houston and Galveston areas Sunday morning.

A funnel cloud was reported touching the ground about 7 a.m. by police in Hitchcock, north of Galveston. And at 6:30 a.m. a pilot reported a funnel cloud near Tomball, east of Houston, as thunderstorms rolled through Fort Bend County.

A third tornado, packing 95 mph winds, touched down east of Houston near the USS Chemical plant in LaPorte. Windows were blown out, but nearby residential areas were damaged only slightly, LaPorte police said.

High winds later slammed into Port Neches, south of Beaumont, about 8 a.m. The winds ripped a roof off a house and destroyed a car wash, authorities said.

The Normangee twister touched down at 5:25 p.m. Saturday, knocking over power lines and uprooting gas meters, but skipping residential areas.

In Palestine, Bradley Hampshire, whose house was slightly damaged, said he and his family was sitting down to dinner with friends when a dining room window shattered.

After the twister passed, neighbors conducted a house-to-house search to account for everyone, he said.

Heaviest rainfall amounts were between 5 and 8 inches in East Central Texas near the Sam Rayburn Reservoir.

Private boys' home investigated

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas Department of Human Resources official says that more than one of the 10 boys in an unlicensed, private Dallas County boys' home may have been injured during their stay at the facility.

Authorities are investigating the home, after a 15-year-old Mesquite boy was treated for six hours at Parkland Memorial Hospital Saturday for injuries he said he received in a beating here.

DHR workers then removed the other nine boys, aged 8 to 15, from the home and started an inquiry.

"We are still looking at that (other possible injuries)," Bill Betzen, a DHR supervisor, said Sunday. "I can't say much more than that."

"These boys have been through a lot," Betzen said.

He said the boys spent Saturday night at the Dallas County Emergency Shelter.

The boys were taken from the Morning Star Boys Home on Saturday, after one of the boys told a police officer he had been beaten.

The name of the 15-year-old has not been released by authorities. He ran to police outside the home when an ambulance arrived to check on an adult at the home who was suffering from chest pains.

The boy had a swollen nose and severe bruises on his back, hips and ribs, Dallas County Sheriff's deputies said.

Betzen said workers in his department contacted the boys' parents on Sunday and arranged for the children to return to their homes.

He said the boys' parents were shocked when they heard about the injured boy's treatment and all agreed to have their children returned.

Only two of the boys were from the Dallas area and about half of them came from other states, Betzen said.

More medical testimony in Jones trial

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — The Genee Jones murder trial enters its fifth week today, and it might be the week in which jurors hear from the nurse accused of killing a little girl.

Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire says he'll wrap up his case this week. He'll continue to call medical experts who'll say 15-month-old Chelsea McClellan died of natural causes, not a fatal injection from Ms. Jones.

The biggest decision to be made concerns whether the defendant will take the stand. Defense sources say Ms. Jones wants to testify. Her attorneys, however, are wary of a courtroom confrontation between the nurse and Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton.

The last time the two met in a courtroom — during a June bond hearing — the prosecutor accused Ms. Jones of plotting to have him killed.

Ms. Jones faces a possible life sentence if convicted here in Chelsea's death. The little girl died on Sept. 17, 1982, after getting two injections from Ms. Jones, who worked at a Kerrville pediatrician's office.

The indictment says the needles carried succinylcholine, or another drug, that paralyzed and killed Chelsea.

Prosecution witnesses told a story, based on circumstantial evidence, that points to Ms. Jones as an ambitious nurse who killed Chelsea and injured five other children in Kerrville to prove a point.

A Kerrville nurse testified that Ms. Jones told her of plans for a pediatric intensive care unit in the Central Texas city. Ms. Jones said she planned to "find" enough sick children to convince hospital officials that the special care unit was needed, according to nurse Mary Morris.

The defense is trying to show that Chelsea was a sick child throughout her brief life. A nursing professor hired by the defense to study medical records detailed the breathing and heart difficulties Chelsea faced.

Defense to lay cards on table in hearing

DALLAS (AP) — Defense attorneys move into the awkward position today of trying to prove the innocence of engineer Lenell Geter in order to avoid a second trial of his controversial armed robbery charge.

State District Judge John Ovard was scheduled to hear pre-trial arguments in the widely reported case. Defense attorneys have issued subpoenas for 55 witnesses to testify at the hearing, which could last several days.

Defense attorney Edwin Sigel says he will lay all his cards on the table and try to prove prosecutors don't have enough evidence to merit another trial — a contention refuted by Gerald Banks and Norman Kinne, two Dallas County assistant district attorneys.

Geter, 26, who has returned to his $24,000-a-year job at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, claims he was arrested only because he was a black in a small, predominantly white Texas town.

He was convicted in October 1982 of armed robbery charges for a $615 holdup of a Balch Springs chicken restaurant 44 miles from E-Systems. His colleagues say he was at work on the day of the robbery, although they have not been able to place him at his desk at the exact hour of the Aug. 23, 1982 holdup.

Five eyewitnesses picked Geter out of police lineups, and he was sentenced to life in prison even though he had no prior police record.

He was released in December after nearly 16 months behind bars when Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade, admitting that news accounts of the case had raised doubts about the validity of the conviction, agreed to a new trial. The trial is scheduled to begin April 9.

During the trial of Geter's roommate Anthony Williams, who was acquitted of similar charges after the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People joined the case, a Greenville police lieutenant admitted he distributed pictures of six E-Systems engineers, labeled as robbery suspects, because they were black and were from South Carolina.

Geter and the NAACP claim the case resulted only from racism, shoddy police work and inaccurate eyewitness identification.

Sigel, Banks and Kinne were not available for comment Friday, their secretaries told The Associated Press.

Banks said earlier in the week that he is confident the identifications will stand up to scrutiny.

"I'm getting pretty damned tired of people saying there's no evidence," Banks told the Dallas Times Herald on Wednesday. "There's not any

Nuclear plant hearing angers group

DALLAS (AP) — A citizens' group opposing an operating license for the Comanche Peak nuclear power station near Glen Rose says it is angry over a federal agency's decision allowing Texas Utilities Co. to submit additional evidence defending its quality assurance program for the plant's design.

A spokesman for the Citizens Association for Sound Energy says the federal decision was unfair and would strain the limited resources it has to fight construction of the plant.

The three-member Atomic Safety and Licensing Board admitted, in a memorandum released Wednesday, that its decision would tax the financial and volunteer manpower resources of the Dallas-based citizen's association.

The panel said, however, it would permit the new evidence because the current record might not reflect the actual state of the quality assurance program at the nuclear plant in Somervell County.

"What they (the ASLB panel members) are saying is that we have won based on the record right now," said CASE president Juanita Ellis on Saturday. "But because it's a multi-billion dollar plant, they're going to go in and let them start all over again after months and months of hearings and a lot of money being wasted."

A memorandum issued by the ASLB panel on Dec. 28 said it doubted the ability of plant designers to correct design errors.

The panel will make a recommendation on licensing to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission later this year. Board members said they would allow Texas Utilities to come up with a program to allay the ASLB doubts.

But CASE objected to the addition of utility evidence to the licensing hearing records, noting that it has been denied the opportunity to reopen the records in several previous instances.

The ASLB, in Wednesday's memo, acknowledged that Texas Utilities "had an abundance of opportunities to present its case and did not avail itself of them."

But the board said it would be improper to deny an operating license for the plant because the utility neglected to submit existing proof that its design procedures were safe.

"While there would be some 'justice' to such a proposition, there would be no sense in it," said the panel.

Texas Utilities spokesman Dick Ramsey said the ASLB panel was "making every effort to make the record complete. It's in everybody's best interest to have the record complete."

Investigation of pastor's slaying continuing

DUBLIN, Texas (AP) — About 250 mourners gathered at a memorial service to eulogize the Rev. John Howard Basham as investigators continued trying to piece together details of the pastor's killing.

Parishioners at Sunday's memorial service at the First United Methodist Church were close-mouthed about reports of Basham's double life.

"We don't want to say any more right now," said Bill Crouch, Erath County Deputy Sheriff and a member of the church.

Unknown to his congregation, Basham, who disappeared Monday on his way to receive a church award in Dallas, had been arrested and convicted in Dallas on sex- and drug-related charges in the 1970s, according to court records.

The Rev. Bob F. Weathers, district superintendent for the Central Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, told mourners "there are no easy answers" to the questions raised by the death.

"Something meaningful and purposeful will come out of this tragedy if we open ourselves to God," Weathers said.

Meanwhile, investigators said they were studying Basham's past for clues that might lead them to his killer.

"The preliminary indications are that he led a double life" that he kept secret from his employers and friends, a Palo Pinto County investigator, who asked not to be identified, told The Dallas Morning News.

"It's an odd situation."

The 55-year-old pastor's body was found Thursday night in the back of his Volkswagen van, parked alongside Interstate Highway 20, about 40 miles north of Dublin.

According to Dallas County court records, Basham was convicted in 1976 on drug possession charges, fined $100 and served six months probation. Two years later, he was arrested on a prostitution charge, pleaded guilty and was fined $400.

One minister who knew the family told The News that Basham's wife and children were aware of the legal problems.

The minister, who did not wish to be identified, said Basham told his family that he was innocent of the 1978 prostitution charge against him but that he quietly pleaded guilty to keep the case from being publicized.

"He was witnessing in this part of town (in Dallas), asked a prostitute for directions and was arrested by an undercover cop," the pastor said.

He said he did not know how Basham explained the drug conviction.

In Dublin, a community of 2,770 people 100 miles southwest of Dallas, residents say they were unaware of Basham's past and had nothing but respect for him.

"The only way I would believe this is that it would have to be proven beyond a shadow of a doubt, and I don't think they're going to do that," said Jay Watson, 68, who had known Basham for 27 years.

Basham was traveling Monday to Dallas to meet other Methodist ministers for their annual meeting at Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology.

Basham, who had served as the pastor of churches in 13 Texas cities before moving to Dublin 18 months ago, was to have received an award the next day from the Texas Methodist College Association.

Grenada press ban: A lesson for all

A disturbing number of people seem to believe that the new media got what they deserved by being banned from covering the invasion of Grenada as it was happening. Journalists asked for it, it is said, with their biased, hypocritical reporting of U.S. operations during the Vietnam war.

Whether or not Vietnam coverage was what it should have been is not the issue.

The simple fact all Americans should ponder is that during the crucial early days of the Grenada invasion, when public concern and interest were most intense, the public was denied an independent source of information.

That quote is taken from a statement by a committee representing most of the nation's major press and broadcast organizations.

Since the Revolutionary War, the statement notes, American journalists traditionally been allowed to accompany military operations.

Mission security and troop safety have been protected, when essential, by limiting the number of journalists, by voluntary restraints in reporting, by limited censorship of information that might aid the enemy or by delay of dispatches—but not by the exclusion of all journalists.

What has happened in recent years in journalism is a movement away from objective reporting to personal or subjective reporting. Many reporters have put down their objectivity in favor of tub thumping. They neglect to remain on the sidelines and describe what is going on, but throw themselves into battle on one side or the other. That's not objectivity. That's taking sides. And it is that element of the press in recent years that the public has turned thumbs down on. Somehow the profession has to clean up this aspect of reporting if it wants to regain its lost credibility.

Unless one believes, however, that the county has been doing it all wrong for two centuries, no American should take comfort in the fact that reporters were completely blacked out for more than two days during the Grenada operation. The same elementary precautions used in the past would have prevented any leaks of sensitive information.

Whatever one's view of how well the press does its job, it is an essential ingredient in the preservation of a free society, in peace or in war—and perhaps especially in war.

Its fettering in Grenada was an unhealthy precedent that must not be repeated. In the meantime, however, the press has some of homework of its own to do.

How the safety net is working

Given the chorus of complaints about the Reagan administration's "brutal cuts" in welfare, it might come as a shock to know that the total cost of the five largest public assistance programs has risen 37 percent since Reagan took office.

In 1980, the federal government spend $42.8 billion on the five so-called "safety net" programs: aid for families with dependent children (AFDC), food stamps, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), housing subsidies, and Medicaid. In 1983, that figure soared to $58.6 billion. Even after subtracting inflation, that amounts to a real increase in public assistance programs of about 13 percent in three years.

While AFDC has been cut, in real terms, by about 9 percent, every other major public assistance program has increased by from 9 percent (Medicaid) to as much as 42 percent (housing assistance) in constant 1980 dollars. So why all the uproar? Mainly it is about the way the Reagan administration completely reversed the nation's slide toward a broad-scale "guaranteed annual income" approach to welfare.

In effect, the Reagan Revolution destroyed the notion that welfare should ever go to those who can work—and established the premise, however faintly applied, of the "social safety net," that the government should help only the helpless.

It accomplished this "revolution" by two simple devices. First, it said that no one could be eligible for welfare whose family income was more than 150 percent of the state's "standard of need," a figure loosely related to the poverty line.

Second, it effectively abolished the system that allowed welfare recipients to work and still receive some welfare benefits. It did this by abolishing the so-called "work disregard" system which allowed AFDC recipients to "disregard" or "discount" initial increments of pay as well as "work-related" expenses, under which states were trying to create incentives to gradually move AFDC recipients into the labor force.

Instead, the Reagan plan simply made all working families effectively ineligible for income assistance—a process that guaranteed a reduction in the total welfare rolls of about 350-to-400,000 families or slightly more than 10 percent of AFDC. They also put heavy pressure on states to adopt various forms of work and training programs such as "workfare." The effects of the Reagan reforms, especially in high-welfare states, were immediate and unambiguous.

For example, up through 1981, Gov. Edward King's administration in Massachusetts has struggled almost in vain to curb one of the highest-in-the-nation welfare caseloads per capita. But, between 1981 and the spring of 1983, primarily due to the Reagan initiatives in the 1981 Omnibus Reconciliation Act (ABRA), that caseload was slashed 28 percent from 122,000 to just over 88,000, the state's lowest level in more than 10 years.

Across the country, even in the face of a faltering recessionary economy, welfare rolls were cut from August 1981 to August 1982 by about 11 percent—and even with the recession, there are now about 5 percent fewer families on welfare than in 1980.

As political economist Edward Berkowitz of George Washington University put it as a recent American Enterprise Institute Conference: "Reagan's (California) plan relied on trimming people not eligible from the welfare rolls, forcing fathers and other responsible relatives to assume responsibility for dependent children, and making the able-bodied work for their grants."

"Low paying jobs were a fact of life and the millions of Americans who accepted this fact resented those Americans who chose to live at the subsistence level by doing nothing."

This philosophy, which led to a substantial reduction in California's welfare rolls under Reagan even as benefits for those who would could not work rose by almost 40 percent, was transferred directly to the 1981 Reagan administration initiatives.

"Instead of using economics to design costly negative income tax schemes (the administration) believed that welfare administrators at the state level should concentrate on maintaining strict eligibility standards and on requiring able-bodied welfare recipients to work."

At the same time, the Reagan administration made no efforts to touch programs such as SSI which, by definition, deal with the people who are least able to support themselves.

"A poor blind person receives benefits without submitting to workfare; so does an elderly or disabled person... (But) a welfare mother, with children over the age of six, faces different treatment."

At the outset, the Reagan plan was intensely criticized by both the Left and the Right because it was thought that removing the income disregards would give the working poor and incentive to go back on full-time welfare.

But, it didn't work out that way. In state after state, less than 10 percent of those cut from the program returned—and although the concept of "workfare" has not taken widespread hold, over half of the states now have some form of "Community Work Experience Program" and some are doing well with them. Michigan, for example, has placed 11 percent of its entire caseload in jobs, even in that depressed state economy.

Perhaps the best effect of the Reagan "safety net" policy is that, contrary to popular perceptions, it has targeted more federal aid to the lowest income group. I will discuss that in my next column.

Takeovers have now become the corporate equivalent of war.

The people involved even have their own sexy language.

An investment banker explained to me how the system works.

"The Bicarb Steel Company is selling at a very low price because it isn't making any steel. Sodium Oil decides to become an unwelcome suitor and tender an offer to acquire her stock. Sodium is known as 'Raider,' and Bicarb the 'Target.'"

"Bicarb doesn't want to marry Sodium, so she seeks out a 'White Knight' to save her. A White Knight is a company that Bicarb could go to bed with, without feeling she had been raped."

"How does Bicarb find a White Knight?"

"Hopefully through an investment banker or a hired gun. You see the Raider plots his strategy for taking Bicarb by force with his hired gun, and then we're hired to defend the Target's virtue. Both sides have unlimited numbers of lawyers."

"It sounds expensive."

"You better believe it. Now if you can't find a White Knight, you look for a 'Gray Knight.' A Gray Knight is someone the Target isn't in love with, but could sleep with if she had no other choice."

"What about the 'Black Knight?'"

"The Black Knight is a third party that comes into the bedroom uninvited at the last moment to spoil the wedding night by tendering a higher offer."

"And those are the major players in the takeover war?"

"Not necessarily. There is the 'Godfather.' The Godfather is a friend of the Target, and he might acquire just enough stock to scare off the Raider, not because he loves the victim, but because he stands to make a sizable profit on his stock which the Raider has driven up in the takeover bid. Suppose Bicarb is selling for $7 a share; Sodium has bid $10 for her body. The fact Sodium has made the offer drives the stock up $4 a share, because the market is betting the takeover battle will be bitter and Sodium will have to come in with a higher price. Besides the Godfather, there is also the 'Grizzly.' He buys up just enough Bicarb stock, say 15 to 20 percent, so he can go to the Target and say 'Be nice to me, baby, and I won't hurt you.' That's known in the business as a 'Bear Hug.' The guy who gives the Bear Hug may do it either to make a lot of money, or he may secretly want the Target for himself."

"Now what the Target is always looking for in an unfriendly takeover battle is a 'Showstopper.' A Showstopper is a legal reason to stop the Raider from molesting the Target. For example, if the Justice Department of the Federal Trade Commission decides the takeover violates the antitrust laws, Bicarb can throw the Raider out of her house. But since the Reagan administration doesn't have any objections to one company raping another, it's harder and harder for lawyers to come up with a Showstopper. The most they can hope for is a 'Smoking Gun,' which is short of a Showstopper by might delay the takeover bid so long that the Target begins to look unattractive to the Raider and he starts wondering what he ever saw in her in the first place."

"I think I understand it now. But let's say for argument's sake Sodium is able to take over Bicarb. What happens to Bicarb's management?"

"This is the beauty of takeover battles and why no one gets hurt. If the Bicarb management senses they're being kicked out of bed, the immediately vote themselves lucrative long-term contracts which are known as 'Golden Parachutes.' Then when the Raider carries his new bride over the threshold, the Bicarb management bails out of the 49th floor, and floats gently to the ground."

"Okay, so everyone involved in a merger from the investment bankers to the lawyers to management makes a bundle out of the takeover battle. How does that help Bicarb sell more steel?"

"Beats the hell out of me."

Better way of fighting deficit

One of the more cynical jokes going around Washington today is the heightened "concern" over projected federal deficits currently being expressed by several presidential candidates and some of the biggest spenders in Congress.

These folks, such as House Speaker Thomas O'Neill (D. - Mass.) and presidential candidate Senator Ernest Hollings (D. - S.C.), more often than not come from the ranks of the shock troops of the Great Society. They brought you the $11.8 - billion food stamp program, federal funding for Lesbian poetry collectives, and Amtrak, a socialist anachronism that offers a means of traveling between Los Angeles and Phoenix seven times slower and at roughly five times the cost it would take to fly there.

Some government forecasts are now projecting a deficit in the $200 - billion range next fiscal year. Like all good conservatives, we consider that bad news. But here is where we part company with the congressional deficit Cassandras. We don't think a $200 - billion deficit is an excuse to raise taxes. And they do.

The big - spending worrywarts suggest that a $200 - billion deficit could endanger economic recovery by crowding private borrowers out of the capital markets. What this means, in lay terms, is that if the government is chewing up $200 billion in available credit, there won't be very much left for business to borrow to finance job-creating expansion. The worrywarts don't propose to cut the fat out of domestic welfare programs, which currently make up the lion's share of the federal budget. Instead they suggest solutions like a 25 - percent cut in defense spending (former Senator cum presidential candidate George McGovern) or a 10 - percent across - the - board tax surcharge (Senator and presidential candidate John Glenn).

Frankly, this is really "the wrong stuff."

Defense spending isn't the cause of the deficit. Indeed, the whole question of how seriously the projected deficits threaten economic recovery seems overblown, if you take time to consider some relevant but little - publicized facts.

First, government forecasts of projected deficits have a record of accuracy somewhat below that of the ancient seers of Delphi, who forecast the future by reading goat entrails. In the last twelve years, these forecasts have been off an average of 254 percent. So a projected deficit of $200 billion doesn't mean a real deficit of $200 billion.

Secondly, newly released figures show that corporate profits are expected to increase 2.5 percent this year - meaning businesses will have plenty of money their own for reinvestment. And last year's stock market rally brought corporations a record $97.3 billion from the sale of stock, all during a year touted for record deficits. So clearly, the deficit is NOT crowding private borrowers out of capital markets. And the higher profits will mean more tax revenues for Washington without raising taxes - certainly a more meaningful way to fight the deficit.

Dear Abby
Notch-year problem: will Congress act?
 By Abigail Van Buren
© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Many retirees have written to urge me to continue to fight for their rights concerning their Social Security benefits (the "notch-year botch").

Susan Noon, legislative assistant of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, wrote in the November issue of Retirement Life, "Dear Abby Off Base on Notch-Year Babies."

I responded, "If, as Social Security officials and some members of Congress claim, there is no inequity, why then are there now numerous bills in Congress to correct that inequity?"

Susan has the last word in the January issue of Retirement Life:

DEAR ABBY: You have taught me a lot about life over the years through your column. Perhaps I can share a little something with you from my experience. I call it "Political Lesson No. 1":

It's easy to introduce a bill. Doing so can appease a lot of people back home and make them think something is being done on a given problem. But getting serious congressional action on a bill is something else.

That is why the following bills and resolutions have been introduced regarding the "notch problem":

- H.R. 1483—Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y.
- H.R. 1964—Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.
- H.R. 1965—Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.
- H.R. 3013—Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I.
- H.R. 3859—Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va.
- H.R. 3893—Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn.
- H.R. 3925—Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky.
- H.R. 3947—Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla.
- H.R. 4093—Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif.
- S. Con. Res. 62—Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga.
- H. Con. Res. 105—Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y.
- H. Con. Res. 152—Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass.
- H. Con. Res. 185—Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind.
- H.J. Res. 385—Rep. Christopher Smith, R-N.J.

It is interesting to note that none of these bill sponsors is a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over Social Security issues. Also, there has been no indication from Ways and Means that action on this issue will be forthcoming.

In fact, it has been estimated that applying the pre-1979 formula for computing Social Security benefits to those beneficiaries born after 1916 would cost $9 billion the first year, $20 billion the second year and more thereafter, adding up to nearly $169 billion over the next seven years. This is approximately the amount Congress grappled with when it passed the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

Some difficult and often unpalatable choices were made last spring to come up with the $168 billion in increased Social Security revenue over the next seven years. What further choices would have to be made to correct the so-called notch "problem"? Increased taxes, benefit cuts, Social Security coverage for all federal workers, windfall benefits, tampering with cost-of-living, etc. These are the areas that would be revisited once more if Congress wants to come up with the funds to reinstate the old benefit formula.

After all, Congress changed the benefit formula, in part, because the old formula overadjusted for inflation, and potentially many future beneficiaries were going to receive benefits greater than their pre-retirement earnings.

As you pointed out, Abby, there are areas of injustice, all right. You can argue that those born after 1916 are unjustly penalized. You can argue that those born before 1917 are unjustly compensated. But realistically—the main question is: Will Congress do anything about it?

SUSAN NOON

DEAR SUSAN: Costly? Yes. But a society is judged on the way it treats its children, disabled and elderly.

Brownies explore transportation modes

What a way to go! Pampa Brownie Troop No. 62 learned about lots of ways to go on recent field trips discovering the various means of transportation available in this area.

The young girl first visited the bus station where they were each weighed by Mary William on the package scale, then transported on a cart that carries boxes to alphabetized areas before they are shipped. Highlight of this tour was a real bus ride to a local drive-in restaurant for a soft drink.

Next the troop traveled to Perry - Lefors Airport to study about hot air balloons and airplanes. With the help of Dick Hegeman, the Brownies pushed a propane lever to fire the jets which make the hot air balloon expand lifting it into the sky. They were told that the wicker basket "gondola" carries four passengers on a two hour flight per tank of propane. Brownies also learned that unpredictable Texas winds make it impossible for balloonists to schedule flights ahead of time. They have to wait until the winds are no more than seven miles per hour before they can fly the balloon.

Carl Krause taught the Brownies how the flaps on the wings of an airplane work. The youngsters were also fascinated by the complicated control panel of an Ingersol - Rand plane, a smaller example of a commercial airplane.

Finally, Troop 62 visited the Santa Fe Railroad Station where Gary Denning and Red Day of Amarillo escorted them through a train engine. The girls studied the controls used by an engineer, then they walked through the train to the caboose to see where the men ride when they switch the tracks going from town to town. Denning reminded them that railroad tracks are no place to play at any time.

Discipline for the "terrible twos"

During the second year of life, children are beginning to develop some independence, and this can be a trial for parents, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.

Many, many children this age have strong wills, and know quite a few ways to manipulate parents. Some of these are being very negative, refusing to eat or sit on the toilet, go to sleep or cooperate generally.

But punishing a child this age is a tricky situation. A two- and a half-year-old will probably be angry with you over the punishment, and the anger he feels may frighten him. Instead of physical punishment, some parents use the words — "I won't love you anymore," "You'll be the death of me," "You make me sick." These can be equally destructive.

The child grasps the parent's anger from the intonation and voice if not from the actual words. He doesn't know that anger is temporary and that angry feelings are normal for him as well as for his parents. He learns to imitate aggression, which often takes the form of tantrums. Thus parent and child feed the flames of each others' passions, precipitating a vicious cycle.

If there's another way of obtaining a child's cooperation, why not use it? We know that a child intuitively wants to be good and please his parents. By reflecting his thoughts back to him, he can save face: "I know you're angry and I know how you feel. You don't want to put away the toys. You want to play. Come, let's put them away together.

Remember, not every cause must be resolved or every moral drawn. It's important to make allowances for individual differences and feelings.

NEW YORK (AP) — "The traditional role of the secretary as one who types and gets coffee is being challenged every day by the potential of the automated office," says a Yale University sociologist.

"Secretaries are looking to increase communication with their bosses and enhance their positions because of their new-found know-how," adds Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter.

"Bosses, however, are reluctant to perceive automation as an upward step for their office workers, and some bosses prefer that secretaries simply follow directions and work priorities that they set," notes Ms. Kanter in reporting on a Honeywell survey of managers and secretaries.

"That is the essence of the 'coming office coffee clash' — a possible mismatch between the desires and abilities of secretaries and the preferences and perspectives of managers," according to Ms. Kanter, author of "The Change Masters: Innovation Through Productivity in the American Corporation."

"Secretaries want to change their role — to become part of the team — and take on more challenging and responsible assignments," she says. "Managers want to maintain current roles and, in some cases, even increase the distance by using automation to eliminate rather than increase communication with office workers."

The birthstone for February, the amethyst, derives its name from a Greek word meaning "not intoxicated." The amethyst is said to preserve this condition. The most valuable crystal of the quartz family, it ranges in color from pale lilac to deep purple. Deep, evenly colored hues are particularly desirable in an amethyst. As a birthstone the amethyst signifies sincerity and has been reputed to quicken the intelligence. To women it bestows lofty thoughts and religious love. To men the amethyst gives sober judgment and industry. Because many monarchs admired the amethyst, the expressions "royal purple" and "born to the purple" arose. The gem also appears in the coronation regalia of England.

Razorbacks topple No. 1 team

North Carolina last major college team to fall

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Now, there are none.

North Carolina, the only unbeaten major college team in the country, went down 65-64 Sunday when Arkansas' Charles Balentine netted a five-foot jumper with four seconds remaining.

"I didn't think we felt pressure from being unbeaten," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. Last week, the only other unbeaten team, DePaul, lost to St. Joseph's. "I don't believe losses on the road to Top 20 teams are upsets. College basketball is just too balanced."

Arkansas, 19-4, dropped out of the Top 20 a couple of weeks ago after back-to-back losses to Rice and Villanova. North Carolina's 21-game winning streak was its longest since a national championship season in 1957.

Only 24 hours before the victory over North Carolina, Arkansas beat Southern Methodist University 80-71 to reach 9-1 in the Southwest Conference. In fact, bad weather kept the Razorbacks from flying out of Dallas Saturday night and the team didn't reach Pine Bluff until two hours before the game.

"This ranks with the best of my basketball thrills," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "I don't know how it ranks with Arkansas' all-time victories. Our victory over UCLA in 1978 was a big one because it gave our program credibility. But, no Arkansas team has beaten a No. 1-ranked team, so this was a big one."

Sutton said the coaching staff looked at about 15 hours of film on North Carolina, but that the team saw only about 30 minutes of film. "The SMU game was too important for us to look at North Carolina before Saturday," he said.

Arkansas led by four at the half and by as much as 10 points, 46-36, three minutes deep in the second half. North Carolina grabbed its first lead of the second half, 64-63, on two straight field goals by Michael Jordan, the game's top scorer with 21 points. Jordan's 17-footer came with 1:48 left and a 10-footer 35 seconds later followed a steal by Steve Hale. With 29 seconds remaining, Arkansas called time. The Razorbacks worked the ball to Alvin Robertson who started to drive but ran into traffic. He managed to dish the ball to Balentine.

"When I went up with the shot at the end, Matt Doherty and I floated toward the baseline," Balentine said. "When I got the ball, I was surprised for a moment but everybody should be looking for the ball when Alvin has it because he's such a great passer. When I put it up, I just hoped and prayed it would go in."

Sutton said he told his players "to get the ball to Alvin and let him go one-on-one or pass it inside to Joe (Kleine). Then, we told everybody to crash the boards if we missed the shot."

"I was going to drive and shoot when the ball got tipped out of my hands," Robertson said. "Fortunately, I got it to Charles. They are undoubtedly the best team in the nation. And, since they are No. 1, there was no real pressure on us."

After Balentine's shot, North Carolina called time, threw the ball to half-court and called time again with two seconds left. The first option was Jordan, but Arkansas stopped that and the Tar Heels inbounded to Hale in the corner. His shot bounced off the rim.

Hawaiian win wipes out bad memory for Renner

HONOLULU (AP) — For a full year Jack Renner lived with the memory — and the constant reminder — of a dramatic golf shot that deprived him of a victory in the Hawaiian Open.

"By the time I got on the plane going back to the Mainland (last year), it was behind me," Renner said. "But nobody would let me forget it."

"I kept seeing tapes of the shot on TV. Everytime I looked up, they were rerunning it."

On that day a year ago at the Waialae Country Club, Renner had finished his round and held a one-shot lead over Isoo Aoki as he sat in the scorer's tent, the victory apparently his.

But Aoki pitched in from the rough 128 yards out, scored an eagle and turned the stunned Renner from a winner to a loser.

"It's hard to live something like that down," Renner said Sunday. "Particularly so, when I felt I didn't have anything to live down."

"But they kept rerunning the tapes on TV. That's all anybody wanted to talk to me about."

"Now," he said Sunday, and smiled, "I hope they'll ask me about this year."

A year after the title was snatched from his grasp, Renner returned to Waialae and reversed his fortunes, winning the Hawaiian Open on the second hole of a sudden death playoff with Wayne Levi.

But it very nearly turned out the same.

Levi, from the rough, came within an inch or so of pitching in for an eagle on the 18th.

"I thought, 'if that ball goes in, I'm never coming here again,'" Renner said. "But it just missed the cup, and Levi — a frontrunner most of the bright, sunny day — failed on the little birdie putt that would have won it."

High school ratings

Skating pair captures first medal for U.S.

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — It figured.

With the United States thirsting for its first medal at the 1984 Winter Olympics, the drought finally was broken by the talent-laden U.S. figure skating team.

Kitty and Peter Carruthers, the adoptive brother and sister from Wilmington, Del., won the silver medal Sunday in the pairs competition, finishing behind Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev, world champions from the Soviet Union.

"I'm in shock," Kitty said. "I've never been happier in my whole life. I knew it right before the start. I looked at Pete, and I knew it was going to be magic. This is the best we've ever skated."

There was hope for further U.S. figure skating success in Judy Blumberg and Michael Seibert, who were third two-thirds of the way through the ice-dancing competition. The medals will be decided in Tuesday's free dance.

And Scott Hamilton of Denver, three-time world figure-skating champion, was a solid favorite for the gold as the men's singles competition began today with the compulsory figures.

Medals were awarded in seven events on Sunday with East Germany winning golds in two of them — the 70-meter ski jump and women's luge. East Germany and the Soviet Union each had 12 total medals, but the East Germans had five gold to three for the Soviets. Norway, Sweden, Italy and West Germany had one gold each.

Cross-country skier Marja-Liisa Hamalainen became the Games' only double gold medalist Sunday, accounting for both of Finland's gold.

Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean continued to improve on perfection in ice dancing, which they led after Sunday's original set pattern for which they received four perfect 6.0 scores. They are heavy favorites to give Britain its first gold medal.

Boston goes down

Dr. J. heals crippled 76ers

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics were licking their chops in anticipation of manhandling the crippled Philadelphia 76ers. Instead, it was the Celtics' who were licked.

With Julius Erving scoring 30 points and Andrew Toney adding 21, the 76ers rolled to a 109-91 victory over the Celtics in a showdown of National Basketball Association powers. Although again playing without Moses Malone and Bobby Jones, the 76ers manhandled the cold-shooting Celtics, owners of the best record in the NBA, for only their third victory in the last nine games.

"Today was our day," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "It was the best game we had all month. Boston's the best team in basketball right now, but we came into this game with a great attitude to overcome obstacles. Everything went well for us — rebounding, loose balls, everything. It could have happened the other way, though. The Celtics did the same thing to us in Philly once when they were without (Larry) Bird and (Tiny) Archibald."

Boston's Cedric Maxwell, who was 2-for-8 from the floor and 1-for-7 from the foul line, summed up the Celtics' afternoon. "We really played stink, stink, stink today," he said.

Elsewhere, the Los Angeles Lakers trounced the Atlanta Hawks 108-87, the Utah Jazz shaded the Portland Trail Blazers 114-112, the Milwaukee Bucks turned back the San Diego Clippers 107-100 in overtime and the New Jersey Nets downed the Houston Rockets 107-103.

Jazz 114, Trail Blazers 112

John Drew's jump shot with three seconds left gave Utah the victory. Drew, who scored 21 of his 23 points in the second half, led a 38-point third-quarter Utah charge that overcame a nine-point Portland halftime lead. Drew had 14 points in the third period as the Jazz broke Portland's five-game winning streak and handed the Blazers only their third loss in 27 home games. Jim Paxson, the game's leading scorer with 26 points, hit a 16-footer to tie the score 112-112. Adrian Dantley, who leads the NBA with a 31.0 average, was held to 21 points, 19 in the first half. Wayne Cooper had 21 for Portland.

Lakers 106, Hawks 87

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 23 along with 15 assists and 10 rebounds as Los Angeles won its ninth game in the last 10 and sixth in a row at home. Abdul-Jabbar and Johnson each had 15 points in the first half when the Lakers opened a 57-41 lead. Dan Roundfield had 24 points for Atlanta, which lost its third game in a row and dropped out of a first-place tie in the Central Division.

"I blackmailed them before the game," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "I told them they would get a day-and-a-half off if they played well. These guys never pass on a chance to get some time off during the season."

The Lakers had a 55-35 advantage over Atlanta in that department.

Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others. Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness of pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals...call for in-Depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Rescuing failed satellites possible

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA could use the shuttle in an attempt to salvage the two $75 million communications satellites now drifting in useless orbits about the Earth, but the difficulty and expense might outweigh the benefits, experts say.

The Westar VI and Palapa-B satellites — owned respectively by Western Union and the government of Indonesia — failed to reach their designated 22,300-mile-high orbits after they were launched from the shuttle Challenger on the flight that ended Saturday.

Officials at Hughes Aircraft Co., which made the satellites, said in both cases rocket boosters snuffed out early, stranding the satellites in lopsided orbits that bring them as close as 165 miles to Earth at times, and as far as 650 miles at others.

Data from the craft indicate they are healthy and could function normally if they were in the high orbit. But neither has enough remaining rocket power to be nudged to the proper elevation, although NASA did just that with a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite that went astray after launch last year.

At a post-landing briefing Saturday, shuttle director Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson called the idea of using the orbiter to rescue the satellites "an exciting prospect to think about."

"If they (the owners or insurers) ask us to look into it, then we'll begin to do more serious planning," he said.

The shuttle is already planning to rescue a satellite in April, but that assignment poses far less difficult problems.

On that mission, Challenger will rendezvous in low orbit with the Solar Maximum, a science satellite that stopped working because of an electrical problem. Astronauts using a jet-pack and a robot arm will bring the Solar Max into the cargo bay for repairs and then release it back into orbit. Such a rescue is possible on Solar Max because — unlike the communications satellites — it is in a low orbit and was designed to be snared by the shuttle if necessary.

Before salvage of the communications satellites could start, scientists would have to bring them to a lower orbit within the shuttle's range, by firing rocket thrusters on board the craft.

The shuttle, by special thrusting at launch, can reach an orbit of about 260 miles — as it will on the April flight.

"If the satellite was brought down to an orbit of 260 miles or so, it would be theoretically possible," said Dick Young, chief of the flight planning branch at the Johnson Space Center.

But even if the satellites were within rendezvous range of the shuttle, there would be significant hardware problems.

Both satellites are spinning at about 50 rpm, a twisting motion that keeps them stable but is far too fast for safe approach. There are rockets on board designed to stop the spin, but these might be expended in lowering the orbit, according to Bill Ziegler, a Westar expert with Western Union.

Terry Neal, a Johnson flight crew equipment expert who helped plan the April mission, said that even if the spin could be stopped, there would still be the problem of grabbing and holding the satellites.

"It would take some modifications to the orbiter (shuttle spacecraft)," said Neal. "And there would have to be some sort of grapple device attached to the satellites."

Once such a device is attached to the satellite, the shuttle robot arm could grasp the craft and bring it into the cargo bay.

Workout treats paralyzed patient

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A paralyzed teen-ager says that his workout schedule, including 12-hour days and seven-day weeks, is not designed for building endurance and strength.

Kevin Curnutt, 16, of Arlington said he hopes the strenuous routine, during which volunteers force his arms and legs through crawling motions, will enable him to walk again.

"It reminds me of a football workout, except this is a lot harder," Curnutt told The Dallas Morning News.

Curnutt and a friend were shot three years ago while riding their motorcycles on a dirt path in south Arlington. Curnutt's friend, Trey Shelton, died. Kevin, who was shot in the head, was in a coma for three weeks.

Arlington police said the boys were "ambushed" by 32-year-old Richard Tiedemann. Police said the man was apparently irritated by the sound of their motorcycles.

Officers said Tiedemann, an aerospace engineer whose home was near the dirt path, was later killed in a shootout with police.

A large shotgun pellet virtually destroyed the motor area of Kevin's brain, leaving him paralyzed from the neck down, said doctors.

They told Kevin he would never move again, his parents, Jerry and Gail Curnutt, said. Doctors said he could not hold his head up without the aid of a neck brace or move his arms, hands or legs.

The Curnutts, however, have been using a controversial program called patterning, developed in the 1950s by the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Curnutt said the patterning theory is that repetitive movement can train healthy parts of the brain to assume the functions of an injured portion.

"We had no idea of the time and effort it would require," she said. "It was an avenue open to us and we didn't have any other choices."

But no studies have been done to confirm the patterning theory, said Dr. William Parker, medical director of the rehabilitation center at Baylor University Medical Center.

"I'm not saying it isn't good," said Parker. "If patients want to try it, it won't hurt them. If it helps the patient, then that's fine."

The entire family, including Kevin's 18-year-old brother Kelly, went to Philadelphia in March 1982 to learn the program. When they returned, they started recruiting the 105 volunteers they needed to help with the patterning.

Without the volunteers, the patterning would be impossible, Mrs. Curnutt said.

She said that three times a day, five volunteers come to the Curnutts' home. During a session that lasts nearly two hours, they move Kevin's arms and legs through the crawling and creeping positions.

Volunteers then hoist the 6-foot, 150-pound teen-ager onto a board that tilts him into a vertical position, allowing his feet to support his weight.

Kevin's family either works with him or he practices crawling by himself for six more hours daily. Curnutt said he resigned from his job at the U.S. Department of Energy about a year ago so he could help with Kevin, and now works as a consultant.

Mrs. Curnutt, a third-grade schoolteacher, said she quit her job a few months after Kevin was shot.

She said Kevin's progress has been "amazing."

Mrs. Curnutt said her son no longer needs a neck brace, can grasp objects with his hands and can crawl 1,000 feet.

"The institute believes the brain develops in stages, so you must learn to crawl before he can creep and to creep before you can walk," said Mrs. Curnutt. "We've got him crawling and we're optimistic. Eventually, we want to get him on his feet."

So do volunteers, she said.

"When you realize that he couldn't hold up his head alone or move an inch along the floor, then you realize how much progress he's made," said Dolly Wadlington, a family friend who recruits volunteers and helps with the workouts. "There aren't many kids who would have the strength and courage that he has."

Tar Heels likely to remain on top

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Nobody's perfect.

North Carolina's top-ranked Tar Heels could've been. They were the nation's only unbeaten major-college team. But they ran up against Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton's aroused Razorbacks — and their equally aroused crowd — on Sunday and absorbed a 65-64 loss that ended their hopes of their first perfect season since they went 32-0 back in 1957, when they won the national championship.

Not that they won't necessarily remain No. 1 Tuesday in The Associated Press poll. After all, they're still 21-1 and the No. 2-ranked team, DePaul, is 18-1. The Blue Demons, routed 58-45 by St. Joseph's earlier in the week, rebounded Saturday with a 62-54 victory over Notre Dame.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith didn't treat the defeat at the hands of the Razorbacks as all that surprising. "They outthusted us," he said. "I don't believe losses on the road to Top 20 teams are upsets. College basketball is just too balanced."

Arkansas, ranked as high as No. 16 as recently as three weeks ago, no longer is in the AP Top 20.

Two other AP Top Ten teams fared better on Sunday, fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas defeating San Jose State 86-76 and No. 8 Illinois pounding Iowa 73-53.

North Carolina trailed 38-34 at the half and fell behind by as many as 10 points, 46-36, before Michael Jordan, the game's scoring leader with 21 points, sparked a comeback capped by his 10-foot jumper that put the Tar Heels on top 64-63 with 73 seconds remaining.

The Razorbacks ran the clock down to 29 seconds and, after a timeout, worked the ball to Alvin Robertson for what they hoped would be the winning shot. He was too closely guarded, though, and as he went up, he spotted Charles Balentine open just to the left of the basket.

Robertson dumped off the ball and Balentine dumped it in for the winning basket with four seconds left.

"When I put it up, I just hoped and prayed it would go in," Balentine said.

The Blue Demons seemed to be apologizing to Coach Ray Meyer for their shellacking by St. Joseph's as they took the court for his last visit to Notre Dame, his alma mater. Several players turned to him and said, "This one's for you."

The gesture brought tears to his eyes, but he was all smiles after Kevin Holmes scored 14 points to help DePaul make good on its promise. The Fighting Irish led 29-27 at halftime. But they went scoreless in a six-minute span in the second half. DePaul went ahead 52-41 with 3:47 to go and Notre Dame never got closer than three points after that.

Elsewhere in the Top Ten during the weekend, No. 3 Georgetown beat Brigham Young 67-51, No. 5 Houston defeated Texas 74-63, No. 6 Kentucky ripped No. 16 Auburn 84-64, seventh-ranked Texas-El Paso downed Hawaii 77-58, No. 9 Memphis State shaded Florida State 73-69 and 10th-rated Oklahoma defeated Kansas State 80-74.

In the Second Ten, 11th-ranked Purdue topped Northwestern 66-56, No. 12 Tulsa beat Southern Illinois 86-76, No. 13 Maryland was nosed out 89-84 by Duke, No. 14 Wake Forest ripped North Carolina-Wilmington 64-50; No. 15 Louisville was turned aside by Virginia 50-45, No. 17 Washington beat Arizona 56-51, No. 18 Georgia Tech was nipped 68-67 by North Carolina State, No. 19 Syracuse blasted C.W. Post 103-86 and No. 20 Louisiana State topped Mississippi 65-61.

Raiders finally climb a notch

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

It's been a long, laborious climb but the Texas Tech Red Raiders have finally worked their way into third place in the Southwest Conference basketball standings.

Staying there won't be easy.

The idle Red Raiders of Coach Gerald Myers watched on television Saturday as Arkansas ripped Southern Methodist 80-71 to drop the Mustangs into fourth place.

Tech is 7-3 and SMU is 7-4 in a battle for a coveted bye into the SWC post-season tournament in March at Hofheinz Pavilion.

Now comes the hard part.

Tech has to go to Houston Thursday night.

The Raiders will meet league-leading Houston in a 7:10 p.m. regionally televised game.

The Cougars haven't lost an SWC game in 35 tries and are 10-0 this year.

Houston built a 21-point lead then defeated Texas 74-63 Saturday night at Austin.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said he was worried "until their was one second left on the clock. It's a great big W."

Arkansas whipped previously unbeaten and top-ranked North Carolina 65-64 Sunday when the Razorbacks' Charles Balentine netted a five-foot jumper with four seconds remaining.

Arkansas shot 68 per cent from the field, best of the year, to beat SMU for the eighth consecutive time.

Arkansas is now 9-1 behind the Houston Cougars who are a perfect 11-0.

The two teams will meet on Sunday, Feb. 26 at Hofheinz Pavilion instead of the originally scheduled Feb. 25 so most of the nation can see them on national television (NBC-TV).

On the following Sunday, March 4, Houston will travel to Fayetteville to meet the Razorbacks with CBS to carry the game on national television.

"We did a great job of keeping the pressure on them," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "Our shot selection was excellent. We showed very good patience on offense."

Sutton added, "SMU is better than it was when we played at Barnhill Arena."

Sampson hurt in Rockets' loss

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It didn't get any easier for New Jersey Nets center Darryl Dawkins when 7-foot-4 rookie Ralph Sampson of the Houston Rockets left the game in the first half with a sprained foot, only to be replaced by Caldwell Jones.

"Caldwell was much harder for me than Sampson. We played together for years (at Philadelphia) and he knows all my moves," said Dawkins.

Jones, however, was unable to prevent Dawkins from scoring 25 points, including three free throws in the final minute, to lead the Nets to a 107-103 victory over the Rockets in the National Basketball Association Sunday.

The Nets, who got their last field goal with 6:08 to play, scored their final 10 points from the foul line — eight of them in the final minute as they snapped a two-game losing streak and boosted their record to 26-25.

Houston, 20-31, has lost five games in a row.

"We needed to win this one badly," Dawkins said. "We have to win right now to prove to everyone we're serious about the playoffs."

Buck Williams broke a 99-99 deadlock when he hit one of two foul shots to put the Nets ahead for good with one minute to play. Dawkins made a free throw with 35 seconds left to make it 101-99, and the 6-foot-11 center added two more points from the line with 12 seconds to go as New Jersey took a four-point lead.

"This team needs someone badly to take charge down the stretch," Dawkins said. "I tried to do it. I'm not talking about trying to do it all — just doing what you do best."

Allen Leavell scored a driving layup for Houston with five seconds to play, but Clarence "Foots" Walker and Micheal Ray Richardson each hit a pair of free throws to wrap up the victory.

"For the first time, we made some big defensive stops down the stretch," New Jersey Coach Stan Albeck said. "We got down in the trenches and battled them."

New Jersey scored 16 of the first 20 points in the game as the Nets moved out to an early 12-point advantage. But Houston battled back with 12 first-period points from Sampson to take a 33-30 lead at the end of the quarter.

Sampson, who sprained his right arch after playing just 13 minutes, was expected to have X-rays taken in Houston. But team officials said they did not believe his injury was serious.

"We played well without Ralph," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch, "but I don't believe in a positive loss."

Williams and Albert King each added 19 points for the Nets, while Lewis Lloyd had 21 for the Rockets.

Rangers' Ward gets a new pact

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers General Manager Joe Klein says he is pleased about the $450,000, one-year contract awarded to outfielder Gary Ward in an arbitration judgment.

Klein said he learned on Sunday that an arbitrator had opted for a bid submitted by the Rangers, rather than Ward's bid for a $595,000, one-year contract.

Arbitrator Tom Roberts of Chicago announced his decision on Sunday after studying the case for some 36 hours. But despite his defeat, Ward will about double his 1983 salary.

Roberts heard arguments from both sides Friday morning. In handing down a judgment, the arbitrator must choose either the player's figure or the club's offer, whichever he deems the fairest.

Last season, Ward made just over $200,000 while playing for Minnesota. The right-handed hitting outfielder was acquired from the Twins during the winter meetings in December in exchange for pitchers Mike Smithson and John Butcher.

Ward hit 278 with 19 home runs and 88 RBI last season while leading American League outfielders with 24 assists.

"We're just glad to get this out of the way before spring training begins," said Klein Sunday afternoon. "We thought both sides presented their cases well. Naturally we're happy we won."

Last season, the Rangers also won in arbitration when Billy Sample challenged them. No Rangers went to arbitration the previous season, and the team had beaten Bump Wills the previous season.
